AFter that it pleased the Lord my God to call me vnto ẏ holy state of honorable Matrymony, & to blesse me wᵭ the encrease of you, not of you onelye, but also of two mo your brethren, named Theodore and Christophile Which now rest in glory wᵭ our head Chryst: I thought no charge more straightly to be laied vpō me of ẏ Lord our God, thā wᵭ al diligence to prouyde & aforesee, that you my most dere & swete chyldren may be brought vp euē frō your very cradels (as they vse to say) in ẏ knowledge & doctrine of ẏ one alone true & euerlastyng God, and of his son Chryst Iesus our most mightie lord and alone sufficiente Sauioure: whiche knowledge learned oute of the holy Scryptures bryngeth to the faythfull beleuers euerlastynge lyfe. And as I iudged this to be my duty and office committed vnto me of God, if I would in any poynt answere his good wyll and pleasure, and satisfie my vocacion or callyng: so lykewyse to the vttermost of my power I haue euer trauailed, godly and vertuously fō bryng you vp in the knowledge of God and of hys holy worde euen from your tender yeares, ẏ at ẏ last you being now younge childrē, may ware auncient in Chryst and through him obtain euerlasting life. For in mine opiniō, how soeuer ẏ wicked world iudgeth in this behalfe, those fathers, which only study to enrich their children wᵭ worldly possessiōs, & neglect their duty in ẏ vertuous educaciō and Godly bringing vp of their youth are rather to be coūted fathers of ẏ body thā of ẏ mind of the flesh than of ẏ soule, & may right wel be resembled, likened & cōpared to vnreasonable & brute beastes, which are also led wᵭ this care, and so affected towarde their younglinges, that wᵭ all diligēce they trauaile & labour for the fosturyng and kedyng of them, by this meanes prouiding, ẏ they lacke nothinge concerninge the safe state & harmles cōseruaciō of ẏ body. These parētes are beastly parentes: these fathers & mothers are vngodly fathers & mothers, & altogether vnworthy of this great blessing of God, I meane the gift of children, whō God hath geuen vnto thē for this purpose & end, ẏ they in this world should be godly & vertuously brought vp in ẏ doctrine & knowledge of his holy worde; leade a good lyfe, call on his holy name, be thankeful for his benefites, study to profit ẏ cōmon weale, & to do good to al mē, that whē they shalbe called out frō this vale of misery, they may be made Citizenses of ẏ heauenly kingdom, & there for euer reigne & remayn wᵭ their head Chryst in ẏ glory of his father. And would God we had not to to many of these vngodly parentes in this our age. Verely vnto such corruption of maners & leude dispocion of life are we come now a dayes, that al parentes almost seke rather how to auaunce their children in worldly than in godly thinges: how to beautify them rather wᵭ ẏ vaine & flitting goods of ẏ corruptible body, than wᵭ ẏ true constant & immortal goods of the vncorruptible mind: how to get them rather ẏ fauoure of mē, than ẏ good wil of God: how they may encrease rather in worldly studies, thā in the knowledge of god: & in fine, how they mai rather becom in this world mē of great renome & of innumerable possessions, then after this lyfe glorious and well accepted Citizenses of ẏ most glorious & heauēly kingdom. Certes ẏ greatest multitude of our parentes at this day, although they profes Chryst, & glory to be called Chrystians

Wicked Parentes.

To what ende god geueth childrē.

Christians, are much inferiour to ỳ heathē, which knew not God, nor any point of godlines rightly, if we shold respect ỳ good & vertuous bringing vp of youth. To whō is this vnknowen, ỳ the very gentiles spared nether coste nor labor, ỳ their children might be brought vp learnedly & vertuously, & at ỳ last become worthye Citizenses of ỳ common weale? Rede we not, that when it was obiected vnto Lycurgus that noble Prince of the Lacedemonians. that he gaue to muche a liberall stipende to the teacher and bringer vp of his children, he answered on this maner? If any man wil take vpon hym to bryng vp my children, and to render them vnto me better then he receaued them, I will not onely geue hym large summes of money, but also the half of al my goods. Rede we not, that Philip king of ỳ Macedonians, when his sonne Alexander was borne, wrote letters vnto Aristotle the Philosopher, in the whiche he gaue thankes vnto god, not only because he had geuen hym a sōne, which shuld succede him in his kingdō, but also, that it chaūsed him to be borne in the tyme of so noble a Philosopher, which should bryng hym vp in vertue, learnyng & knowledge, and make him a Prynce worthy of such a father and of so florishing a kingdome? Rede we not, that a certayne noble woman of Rome called Cornelia, whē a straūge Lady, which lodged in her house, shewed vnto her her ornamentes & iewels, yea and those so precious and goodly, as none could be founde more precious nor more goodly, prolonged the talke wyth her, vntill her childre came home frō schole, and then brast out into these words: Et hec ornamenta mea sunt. That is in Englishe: And these, sayeth she, are my ornamentes and iewels: signifying by this her answere, that nothing is so precious and goodly a iewel to a discrete, wyse and sober matrone, as children vertuously and learnedly brought vp. Rede we not, that when Alphonsus kyng of the Aragones was demaūded, how it came to passe that he had so florysshing a realme, whether it was, that he was so excellently learned, or of so good succesſe in martial affaires, wherof he also had singulare knowledge he answered on this maner? Of bokes I learned both armoures and the law of armoures. hereby confessing, that learnyng was the alone occasyon of all hys good succesſe & of so florysshyng a commō weale: so truly is it sayd of Plato, that blessed, fortunat and happy is that common weale, wherin ether Philosophers do bere rule, or els kynges, that be studious of Philosophy and of good letters, do reygne. But wher fore do I tary so long in rehersyng these prophane and heathenysh historyes concernyng the good and vertuous bryngyng vp of youth, seyng that in the holy Bible whiche contayneth the wordes of euerlastyng lyfe, ensamples do abounde? As I maye passe ouer wyth sylence those holy, graue and auncient Patriarches, Adam, Seth, Enos, Henoch, Noha, Thare, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph. &c. which liued before Moses, of whose industry and diligence in the godly and vertuous bryngyng vp of their yongelynges to doubt, I thynke it more then double wyckednes: who is able to expresse, what study and care that moste excellente and Princelike Prophete Dauid the most worthy and most noble graunde father of our Lord and alone Sauioure Jesu Chryst, toke for the godly and honest educatiō of hys children, specially of Salomon, that for hys godlynes, learnyng and wysedome he myght be counted of al men worthy to enioy the imperial crowne after hym: he was so diligent in exhortyng hys sonne Salomon vnto vertue & true religion, that lighing vpon his deathbed, he ceased not continuallye to put hym in remembraunce of hys duty towarde the Lord hys God. Amonge other were not these his wordes: I go the way of al the world: be strong therfore, and shewe thy selfe a mā. Kepe thou the watch of the lord thy god, & se that thou walke in hys wayes, & kepe hys statutes and hys preceptes, his iudgementes and hys testimonies, euen as it is wrytten in the law of Moses, that thou mayest prospere in al that thou doest, and in euery thing that thou medlest withal: that the Lord also may make good his worde, which he spake vnto me, saying: If thy children take hede to their way, that they walke before me in trueth wythal their hartes and withal their soules, then shalt thou not be without a man on the seate of Israel. &c.

Tobias also that auncient father and faithfull seruaunt of God taught his yong sonne Tobias euen from hys tender age to feare God, and to refrayne frō al sinne His admonicions, which he gaue to his sōne, are so godly & profytable, so auaunting vertue and repressing vice, that they may iustly seme worthy to be wrytten in Dani. xiii. The parēts of Susanna.

The noble Parentes likewise of that most noble Lady Susanna, beautifull in body, but more beautifull in mynde, goodly in the liniamentes of the bodye, but more goodly in ỳ vertues of the soule, brought vp their aforesayed doughter Susanna from her very ỳounge age in all godlynes and honestly according to the law of God geuen by Moyses: whyche godly, vertuous and honeste bryngyng vp so greatly preuailed in her, that she rather chosed to suffer any kind of cruel tormentes, yea most cruel death, than she woulde once turne aside frō those godly lessons and vertuous instructions, whiche she had learned of her Godly and vertuous parentes in hir ponge and tender yeares: so profitable a thing is it euen from the very cradels, as they vse to saye, to bryncke in godlynes and honestly.

Actes. xxi. Philip the Euangelist.

But what shal I speake of Philip the Euangelyst, which hauing foure daughters, brought them vp so godly and lernedly, that they were able to prophecy, that is to say, to vnderstande the holy Scriptures according to the meanyng of the holy gost, and to render a perfecte accompt of their fayth in Chryst Jesu oure Lorde. I passe ouer the godly bringing vp of bishop Timothe, which from his verye infancy and childehode learned and vnderstode, as S. Paule wryghteth ỳ, holy Scriptures: which alone are able sufficiently and euen to the vttermost to enstructe the man of God vnto saluacion through fayth in Chryst Jesu.

Timothe. ii. Tim. iii.

Many and diuerse other historyes are contayned in the holy Scriptures, whych aboundauntly remember, what studious dyligence and diligent study, what painful laboure and labourous payne the holy fathers in tymes past dyd take to bring vp their children godlye & honestly according to the doctrine and commaundemēt of the Lord our God, that they myght truly be counted fathers not only of the body, but also of the minde, and by this meanes satisfye the good pleasure of God, whiche requireth nothing more earnestly of fathers and mothers, than that they should godly and holily bring vp their children, which he hath geuen them, ỳ not only in thys world, but in the world to come they may celebrate, praise and magnifie his holy and glorious name.

Deu. iiii. xi. Eccle. vii. x. xxx. lxii. Ephe. vi Colloss. iii. Titus. ii.

Prouoked with these and such lyke examples (my most deare and swete childrē) I haue done mine endeuoure to the vttermost of my power from time to time, as your age requireth, to sow in your tender brestes the wholesome sede of gods most holy worde, that from your very cradels ye may learne to know your Lorde God, which made you, and gaue you vnto me: which also conserueth and nourisheth you by me, and to beleue in him the alone true God: to call on hys holy name, frō whō alone commeth all goodnes: to feare and reuerence him as your moste beneficiall Lord: to loue him as your most gentle and kynde father: to be thankful vnto him for his benefites as your most bounteous and mercyful Sauioure: and to reuerēce and honoure the Magistrates and al that be in authoritie: agayne to shewe youre selues humble, lowly and obedient to the faythful ministers of gods holy woorde: Item, to be gentle, louyng and helping to al men, and in fine, so to trayne youre liues according to the rule of gods holy commaundement, that in thys world being good and profitable members of the Chrysten common weale, in the world to come ye may be made citezenses of that glorious and heauenly kindedom. And according to this my doctrine, yea rather gods doctryne, ye for your little strengthes daily do your endeuoure to bring forth the frutes of this good seede, which by the helpe of Gods spirite I haue sowen in your ponge and tender brestes: which thing delighteth me so greatly, that I can none otherwise, than daily offer vnto god the sacrifice of praise and thankes geuing, which by hys holy spirite hath wroughte so good thinges in you, yea and that in so ponge and tender age: most humbly beseechinge him to continue his fatherly fauoure towarde you, that he may bryng vnto a fortunate and blessed ende, that which he most mercifully hath begun in you vnto the glory and praise of his holy name.

Only I shall most humbly desier you to consider my yonge age, and the smal continuaunce, which by the reason of my fewe and tender yeares I haue had in the studies both of godlines and letters. Father. Thys thyng is not vnknowen vnto me. Thy age is yonge, thy yeares are fewe, thy continuaunce in study is smal, for as yet art thou not sixe yeares olde. Therfore my minde is onely at this present, to talke wyth thee, not of thynges which far excede both thy age and capacitie, but of such matters as be mete for children to know, wherin also thou hast heretofore (as thy age hath suffered) ben exercised both by me thy father, and also by ỳ Precher & by thy Scholemaster. Sonne. Do you meane such matters, as be cõtained in my Catechisme? Father. The very same. Sonne. If it shalbe your good pleasure to exampyne me in them, I trust by the helpe of God and by the assistence of his holy spirite to make suche answeres, as shal not onely not displease you, but also moste highly please you, contente your mynde, and satisfye youre expectacion, so that you shal thynke both your laboure and cost to haue bene not vnfrutefullye employed and bestowed vpon me. Sonne. As I remember, I heard our Scholemaster saye, that it is a Greke worde, and signifieth a doctryne taught of ỳ wyse and learned to the ponglynges of Chrystes religion, in the which after a briefe and goodly order is comprehended, what soeuer is necessarily required vnto the ryght institucion of a Chrysten man, so that whosoeuer hath & vnderstandeth this doctryne, hath and vnderstandeth the whole sum of all thinges necessary vnto saluacion contayned in the olde or newe testament. Father. Is not this kynde of teaching youngelynges newe and lately inuented? Sonne. No verely. It is rather olde, and of longe tyme vsed in the churche of Chryst, as the monumẽtes of the auncient wryghters testifie. For in the primitiue churche ther wer not only Bishops and Pastoures that preached the gospell of Chryst to the people which were already grafted by baptisme and the holy goste in Chryste Jesu, but also certayne teaches, called Catechiste, which taught not only the ponge children, that were already baptised, but also suche as beyng in age came and were contented to forsake Gentilite and to take

Repentāce. AND is Repentaūce the fyrſt part of that doctrine, which is taught in the Catechiſme? Sonne. So haue I learned. For oure Catechiſte declared vnto vs, that whan John Baptiſt, Chryſte and hys Apoſtles began to teache, they preached fyrſt of al Repentaunce. Father. Where readeſt thou that John Baptiſte began his doctryne of Repentaunce? Sonne. In the thirde Chapter of S. Mathewes goſpel where the doctrine of Repentaunce vnto the remission of synnes. The verye same thing reade we in the gospel of Luke. Father. Began Chryst also his preachyng of Repentaunce? Sonne. So wryght the Euangelistes. Mathewe hath in his gospel thus: Jesus began to preache and to say: Repente, for the kyngdome of heauen is at hande. Marke hath these wordes: Jesus came into Galile, preachyng the gospel of the kyngdome of God, and saying: The tyme is fulfylled, and the kyngdom of God is at hande: Repent, and beleue the gospell. Hereof learne we that both John Baptist and Chryst began their preachyng of Repentaunce. And in the gospel of Luke we reade, that Chryst gaue in commaundement to his disciples, that they should preache repentaunce and forgeuenes of synnes vnto al nacyons. And accordyng to the commaundement of Chryst, the Apostles taught. For in the Actes of the Apostles we rede, that when Peter layd theyr synnes before the Jewes, they wer greatly dismayde, and stryken wyth an inwarde sorowe, so that they braste out into these wordes: ye men and brethren what shal we dooe? Peter sayed vnto them: Repent ye of youre synnes, and be baptised euery one of you in the name of Jesus Chryst for the remission of synnes, and ye shal receaue the gyft of the holy gost. Agayne. Repente, and turne that your synnes may be put away. In a nother place of the same booke we reade, that S. Paule maketh mencyon of hys doctryne whyche he taught to the Jewes and to the Gentiles, which is, that they shoulde repent, turne vnto God, and do workes worthy such as do repent. All these testimonies of the holy Scripture do aboundauntly declare that the doctryne of Repentaunce ought to haue the fyrst place in the institucion of a Chrysten man, if we will obserue that order, whiche John Baptist, Chryst with his apostles, and S. Paule vsed. Father. What is repentaunce? Sonne. Repentaunce is an inwarde and true sorowe of the harte, vnfaynedly conceaued in the mynde by earnest consyderacion of our synnes and wyckednesses, which heretofore most vnkyndely we haue committed agaynst the Lorde oure God, of whom we haue frely receaued so many, so great, and so noble benefytes, wyth a perfect detestation and vtter abhorryng of our former wycked lyfe: wherunto is also added a feruent and inwarde desyre from hencefoorth to liue godly and vertuously, and to frame our lyfe in al pointes accordyng to the holy wil of God expressed in the diuine Scriptures. Of this repentãce speaketh S. Paule in hys seconde epistle to the Corinthians on thys maner. A godly sorowe causeth repentaunce vnto saluacion, not to bee repented of: when the worldly sorowe causeth death. For beholde this thyng, what diligence this godly sorowe that ye toke hath wroughte in you: yea it causeth you to cleare your selues. It caused indignacion, it caused feare, it caused desyre, it caused a feruent mynde, it caused punyshmente. Father. Thou confessest than the doctryne of Repentaunce to be necessarye for the ryght institucion of a Chrysten mã? Sonne. Yea so necessarye, that wythoute it the other partes of Chrysten doctryne

I came not, sayth Chryst, to cal the ryghteousse, but sinners vnto repētaūce. For such as ar whole nede no Phisiciō, but they that ar sick. what brought ỳ people of Israel, Dauid, Manasses, Mary Magdalene &c. vnto the knowledge of them selues &, of their sinnes and enforced them to run vnto God for mercy, but the doctryne of repentaunce? The doctryne of repentaunce setteth before the synner the greatnes and weight of hys synnes, the heauy anger of God agaynste the synner for hys sin, euerlastyng damnacion for committing ỳ synne, and so combreth the conscyence of the synner wt the terroures of Gods iudgement, that in hym selfe he can fynde no rest, no ease, no consolacion, no remedy, but is compelled with all humilitie and submyssyon of mynde to confesse hys synne, to graunt hymselfe a most damnable synner, and to seke comfort not of hym selfe, nor of hys own good workes, but of God and of his greate mercyes. Moreouer the doctryne of repentaunce enarmeth a man agaynst the assaultes of Satan, agaynste the entysementes of the flesche, agaynste the pleasures of the worlde, agaynst the stynge of synne, agaynst the darte of desperacion, and admonysheth hym afterwarde so warely and circumspectly to lyue, that he fal nomore into the same synnes, nor be snarled agayne wyth the lyke snares, but rather from hence forth so frame hys lyfe, that he shall not nede to be combred wyth the lyke shame and sorowe for commyttynge the lyke wickednes, whyle he endeuoureth hym selfe to ỳ vttermost of hys power to garnysshe hys conuersacion wyth all kynde of spirytuall vertues and godly workes, as S. John Baptist sayeth, bringe foorth frutes worthy of repentaunce. For euen nowe is the axe layed at the rote of the tree. Euery tree that bryngeth not forth good frute, is hewē vp and caste into the fyer. Father. They than that truelye and with a faythful hart receaue thys doctryne of repentaunce, wherof thou hast hetherto spoken, are not excluded from the grace, fauoure and mercye of God, but maye well perswade themselues to receaue remyssyon of synnes and to be made enheritoures of euerlastyng glory. Sonne. Yea verely. For thus sayeth God hym selfe by the Prophete, as surely as I lyue, I desyre not the death of a synner, but rather that he should turne and lyue. And the Prophet Esay sayeth, Let the vngodly man forsake hys own wayes and the vnryghteous hys owne imaginacions, and turne agayne vnto the Lord, so shal he be mercyfull vnto hym. For he is such a God as is ready to forgeue. If the vngodly, sayeth God by ỳ Prophete Ezechiell, wil turne away from all hys synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my commaundementes, and do the thyng that is equall and ryght, doubtles he shal lyue and not die. As for al hys sinnes that he did before, they shal not be thought vpon, but in hys ryghteousnes that he hath done, he shal lyue. For haue I any pleasure in ỳ death of a sinner, sayeth the Lorde God, and not rather that he should conuert and lyue? Be conuerted, and turne you from al your wyckednes, so shal there no synne do you harme. Cast away from you al your vngodlines that ye haue done. Make you newe hartes and a newe spirite. Wherefore wil ye dye (O ye house of Israel, seeing I haue no pleasure in the death of hym that dyeth, sayeth the Lord God? Turne ye then, and ye shall lyue. Doeth not Christe in the gospel call louingly vnto him al such as be diseased and laden wyth the burden of synne, and promise that he wil ease and comfort them? Sayeth he not, that he came to saue suche as were loste? what other thyng do we learne of the parables of the lost shepe and of the prodigall sonne, then that synners repenting be receaued vnto mercy and fauoure? And are not these Christes wordes? I say vnto you that there shalbe ioye in heauen before the Aungels of God ouer one synner, more than ouer nyntye and nine righteous, that nede no repentaunce. There is no synne, that geueth not place to repentaunce. Father. And is this repentaunce the gift of nature or of grace? Sonne. It is the gift of God, and commeth not of our selues. For what good thyng either haue we, or can we doe, except we fyrst receaue it of God? This testifieth S. Paule, saying: what hast thou that thou hast not receaued? If thou hast receiued it? why doest thou glory, as though thou haddest not receaued it? Hereto pertayneth the saying of S. Iames: Euery good gyfte and euerye perfecte gifte is from aboue, and commeth downe from the father of lyghtes. Forasmuche therefore as repentaunce is a good gyfte, therefore commeth it from God. Father. Came the repentaunce of Caim, Esau, Saule, Judas, and suche lyke from God also? Sonne. It came from themselues and from the Deuil authoure of all synne and wyckednesse. For thys repentaunce leadeth vnto desperacyon and finally vnto damnacio, and is that worldly sorowe, whyche, as S. Paule writeth, causeth death. But that repentaunce, whiche is wroughte by the spirite of God in the hartes of men, doeth not onely containe in it an harty sorowe for the synne commytted, with an earnest entente and full purpose to lyue from hence forth accordyng to the will of God, but also an assured faith and vndoubted perswasion that God for oure mediatoure Jesu Christes sake wil bee mercyful vnto vs, forgeue vs our synnes, and make vs enheritoures of euerlasting glory. And thys repentaunce, I say, commeth not of our selues, but it is the gift of God. Father. Proue that by the word of god. Sonne. By the Prophete Ezechiel God speaketh on thys manner. I wil poure cleane water vpon you, and ye shalbe cleane: yea frō al your vnclennesses and from al your Idols shal I clense you. A newe harte also wyl I geue you, and a newe spirite wil I put into you. As for that stony hart, I wil take it out of your body, and geue you a fleshly harte I wyll geue you my spirite among you, and cause you to walke in my commaundementes, to kepe my lawes, and to fulfyll them. Jeremy. xxxi. prayeth on thys maner: Conuerte thou me, O Lorde, and I shall bee conuerted. For thou art my Lorde God. Assone as thou turnedst me, I repented, and assone as thou shewedst me my synnes, I smote my thyghe: yea I was confounded, and ryght greatly ashamed. Agayne, Lamen. v. O Lord, turne thou vs vnto thee, and so shall we be turned. S. Paule in hys Epistle vnto Timothe, by moste manyfeste and expresse wordes

ii. Tim. ii. sheweth repentaunce to be the gifte of God. The seruaunt of GOD, sayeth he, muste informe them that resist, if that God at any tyme wyll geue them Repentaunce for to knowe the trueth, and that they may com to themselues agayne out of the snare of the deuyll, whiche are holden captiue of hym at hys wyll. Father. That therefore is the alone true repentaunce, whyche beeyng the gyfte of God, and wroughte in the harres of menne by the holy ghoste, doeth not onely contayne in it an inwarde sorowe of the mynde for the synnes tofore commytted against God, wyth a full determyned purpose from hence forth to amend, and to leade a newe lyfe, but also a perfecte faith to be forgeuē for Christes sake. Sonne. Repentaunce not accompanyed wyth Fayth dryueth rather vnto desperacyon than vnto saluacyon, as we maye see in Caim, Esau, Saule, Judas, and in suche lyke. But repentaunce combyned wyth fayth, lyfteth vp the wearyed and caste downe soule, comforteth the troubled harte, reioyseth the sorowefull mynde, and quyeteth the reastlesse conscience, as we haue for examples in the holy Scripture Dauid, Manasses, Mary Magdalene, Peter. &c. And therefore in a moste goodly and semely order foloweth the seconde part of the doctrin of the Catechisme, whiche entreateth of fayth. For after the doctrine of repentaunce, the doctryne of fayth necessarily is to be sette forth vnto suche, as wyll be ryghtely and truelye instructed in the rules of Christianytye.

FATHER.

Marke. i. Luke. xxiiii. Obserued Christ and his Apostles that order of teaching also? Sonne. So teache the Euangelicall history. For Christ began hys preachyng on thys maner: Repent and beleue the gospell. First he taughte repentaunce, and afterwarde fayth. And after hys resurreccion whan he sent forth hys Apostles to preache, he commaunded them to preache in his name repentaunce and remission of synnes to all nacyons. What other thyng is it to preache remission of synnes, than to publyshe and set forth the doctryne of fayth, which fayth alone obtaineth ỳ fauor of God & forgeuenes of syn: where fayth in the sonne of God is, there there is euerlasting life: but where this faith is not, there is eternall death & dãnation, as the Scripture sayeth: he that beleueth on the sõne (of god) hath euerlasting life. But he that beleueth not on the sonne (of god) shall not see life, but the wrath of god abideth vpon hym. And according to this commaundemente oft heir master Chryst, the Apostles obserued and kept this order of teaching in their Sermons. First they taughte repentaunce, and afterwarde faith, as we maye see in the chronicle of the Apostles actes, where we reade that S. Peter answered to this demaunde of the Jewes. What shal we do ye men and brethren, on this maner: Repent ye of your sinnes, and let euery one of you be baptised in the name of Jesu Chryste. &c. What is it to be baptised in the name of Jesus Chryst, but first stedfastly to beleue, and vndoubtedly to be perswaded that through the myght and power of Chryste oure sinnes be forgeuen, and we receaued and takẽ into the nomber of gods sonnes, and afterwarde in token of this grace and fauoure whiche we throughe fayth haue obtained of god, to receaue the Sacramente of Baptysme, whereby we do professe that we pertayne nomore vnto the kyngdome of Satan, but vnto the kyngedome of Chryst, and wil from hence forth serue hym and seke his glory al the dayes of our lyfe? Again in the same boke, Repent and turne, that your synnes may be put awai. Is it any other thyng to turne, than to forsake incredulitie and to beleue, than to cast away the seruice of Idols, and to serue the liuing god in suche holynesse and righteousnes, as are accepted before him? In a nother place of the same boke we reade that. S. Paule taughte repentaunce towarde god, and faith towarde our Lord Jesus Chryst. And in his Epistle to the Hebrues, where he maketh mencyon of the Principles of Christen religion, he first of al nameth repentaunce and afterwarde fayth. Hys wordes are these. Let vs leaue the doctrine pertaining to the beginning of a Chrysten man, and let vs go vnto perfection, and nowe no more laye the foundacion of repentaunce from deade woorkes, and of fayth towarde God, of Baptisme, of doctrine, and of laying on of handes, and of resurrection from death, and of eternall iudgement.

What it is to preach remyssion of synnes.

ked for of the faythfull at gods hande, are delyuerance frō the tyranny of Satan from the curse of the law, and from euerlastyng damnacion: remission of synnes, the gift of the holy goste, hearyng and graūting of our prayers, regeneracion vnto a new byrth, iustificacion, resurrection of the deade, euerlastyng lyfe, and what soeuer good, godly, pray-ous, heauenly, comfortable and glorious thynges are promysed vs of
i. Cor. ii. God in the holy Scriptures. These thynges the naturall and vnregenerate man vnderstandeth not, nether can he comprehende them, but fayth wrought in our hartes by the holy goste, without any doubtynge beleueth, hopeth and loketh for the very same thynges, nothing despa-ryng but that God, which in his holy worde hath mercifully promised and blessed S. Paule writing to the Philippians, sayeth, It is geuen to you, not onely to beleue in Christe, but also to suffer for hym. And in a nother place, he confesseth fayth to be geuen vnto menne, of God throughe the holy goste. These testimonies of the holye Scripture declare sufficiently, that fayth commeth not of our selues, but is the gifte of God, onely geuen to them, which are the vesselles of mercye, and to fore ordained vnto euerlastinge lyfe. For as the Apostles sayeth, all haue not fayth: to obtayne therefore thys moste precious and noble gyfte of fayth, we haue nede to praye wyth the father of the diseased childe: Lorde helpe myne vnbeliefe. And wyth the Apostles, Lorde encreace our fayth. Father. Is fayth so necessarye a thing vnto saluacion? Sonne. Wyth oute fayth it is not possible to please God. For he that commeth to God, muste beleue that God is, and that he is a rewarder to them that seke hym. He that beleueth not on the sonne of God) shall not see lyfe, but the wrath of God abydeth on hym. The godles and heathenishe people wroughte in tymes past many notable and worthy actes and outwardly glistered wyth goodly vertues, so ỹ in outward apperaunce they mighte seme not vniustly to cõpare with the Christyans, not withstandyng forasmuche as they wanted thys fayth, whereof we nowe speake, all that euer they dyd, was nothyng but hipocrisye and abhominacion before God. For whatsoeuer is not grounded on faith, the same is synne. And that whych is worthy greter commendacyon before men, is abhominable before God. Father. Why, what commodities bryngeth fayth to man? Sonne. By fayth we be made the Sonnes of God. Father. Howe proouest thou that? Sonne. In the Gospell of S. John it is wrytten, As many as receaued hym, to them he gaue power to bee the sonnes of God: euen to them that beleue on hys name: whiche were borne not of bloud, nor of the wyll of the flesshe, nor of the will of man, but of God. And S. Paule also wryteth, all ye are the sonnes of God, because ye haue beleued in Christe Jesu. Father. What more? Sonne. By fayth we whiche afore were synners and vnryghteous, are iustyfied and counted ryghteous before God for Christes sake. Father. Where is that proued? Sonne. S Paule sayeth, we playnly affirme, that a manne is iustified by fayth, wythoute the woorkes of the lawe. Agayne, we beeyng iustyfyed by fayth, haue peace towarde God through our Lord Jesus Christe. Also in a nother place he sayeth. We know we, that a man is not iustified by the dedes of ỹ law, but by the fayth of Jesu Christ. And we haue beleued on Jesu Christ, that we myght be iustifyed by ỹ fayth of Christ, and not by the dedes of the law, forasmuch as by the dedes of the lawe no flesshe shalbe iustyfyed, Father. Haue we any other profyte by fayth? Sonne. Yea many and dyuerse. Father. What are they? Sonne. By fayth are we espoused and maryed vnto Christe, as Christe hym selfe testifieth by the Prophet Ose, I wil mary the vnto my selfe in faith, saieth he, eth he, and thou shalt know the Lord. Faith is that wedding garmēte also, wherewith we be married vnto Christ accordynge to the parable, which we reade in the gospell. Furthermore by faith Christes fulfilling of the law is counted our fulfilling, as S. Paule witnesseth, sayinge, Christ is the fulfilling of the law to iustify al that beleue. Again, Christ hath deliuered vs (he speaketh of the faythfull) from the curse of the law, inasmuch as he was made accursed for our sake. And in the Actes of the Apostles we reade thus, Be it knowen vnto you ye men & brethren, that through thys man (Christ) is preached vnto you the forgeuenes of synnes, and that by him al that beleue, are iustified frō al things from the which ye could not be iustifyed by the law of Moses. The wise man also sayeth, In all thy workes beleue faithfully with al thy soule. For that is the keppng of the commaundementes. He that beleueth on God, geueth attendaunce to the commaundementes, and he that trusteth in hym, shal not be confounded. Moreouer by fayth oure prayers are accepted and heard of God, as Christ hymselfe sayeth, All thynges what soeuer ye aske in praier (if ye beleue) ye shal receaue them. Herevnto pertaineth the saying of S. James, Lette him that praye, aske in fayth, and doubt not. For he that doubteth, is like a waue of the Sea, which is tost of the windes, and caried with violence. Nether let that man thinke, that he shal receaue any thing of the Lord. Item, by faithe our workes are alowed before God as righteous for Christes sake: as we reade of Abel whose Sacrifice was approued of God, beecause it was done in fayth. And so likewise were all the Sacrifices, which the holy Patriarkes and other godly mē offered in ỹ old lawe. Thyne eies O Lord, loke vpō faith, saieth the Preacher Hieremy. Finally, by faith we obtaine euerlastyng life, as Christ witnesseth, saying: as Moises lifted vp the serpent in the wildernes, so must the son of man be lyfted vp, that euery one that beleueth on him, may not perish, but haue euer lastyng lyfe. Againe, this is the wil of him that sent me, that euery one which seeth the sonne, and beleueth on him, haue euerlastyng life. Also in a nother place, I am the resurrection and life. He that beleueth in me, although he be dead, yet shal he liue. And euery one that liueth and beleueth in me, he shal neuer die. Father. I commende thee (my deare childe) that thou remembrest these things so wel. But where are those thinges contained, whiche we muste beleue, if we wil receaue the forsaid commodities, and profites, which thou hast rehearced? Sonne. In the holy Scriptures, but breuely and in a short Sum, they are contayned in the Apostles crede, as they cal it. For in that is comprehended in fewe wordes, what so euer is taught throughout the whole Byble in many, necessarily to be beleued vnto euerlastyng saluacyon. Father. Why is it called the Apostles crede? Sonne. Father. Why begynnest thou on thys maner, I beleue in God? Sonne. For he that commeth to God, must beleue that God is, and that he is a rewarder to them that seke hym. And wythout faith it is not possyble to please God. yea what soeuer is not grounded on fayth, the same is synne. Father. What meanest thou, whan thou sayest, I beleue in God? Sonne, I assuredly, vndoubtedly and most certenly am perswaded in my hart, that there is but one onely true, liuing immortall and euerlastyng God, in whom alone I repose and set al mine affiaunce, trust and confidence, and of whom onely and of none other I hope and loke for al good thynges pertayning vnto ỹ soule or vnto the body. Father. What is God? Sonne. To defyne God, whych is infinite, and whose maiestye is vnsearcheable, it lieth not in my power. But I wil make a certain description of God, as I haue learned. Father. Lette me heare. Sonne.

What God is. Iohn.iiii.

God is a spirite, euerlastyng, infinite, almightie, true, most wyse, righteous, gentle, mercyfull, kynde, liberall, the fountayne of all goodnes, an essence of hymselfe, wythout begynnyng or endyng, vnchangeable, abidyng alway in one state, fauouryng the good, punyshynge the euill, in whom we lyue, moue and haue our being: the father which from euerlastyng begate hys sonne lyke vnto himselfe: the sonne which is ẏ true and liuely image of the father beyng of ẏ same eternitie, might, power and maiesty: The holy gost, which proceedeth from the father and the sonne: thre persons, and one alone true God. Father. Why, are ther thre persons in the Godhead, and yet but one God? Sonne. Yea most certenly. Father. Proue that by the Scriptures. Sonne. When man should be made, God the father sayed to the sonne and to the holy gost. Lette vs make man lyke vnto our own similitude & image. In these two wordes vs and our is declared ẏ plurality of persons: and in these two wordes Similitude and Image is expressed the vnite or syngularite of the Godhead in the trinitie of Persons. The holy Scripture testifieth, ẏ Abraham saw three, and worshypped one: that is to say, three in the propriete of persons, and one in the vnite of the diuine substaunce. The Prophete Esay heard Seraphin crying: Holy, Holy, Holy, the Lord God of Hostes. By the thryse repetition of this worde Holy the three persons in the Trinity are expressed vnto vs: but by the one denominatyon of God, one deite, or one onely diuine substaunce of those three persons is declared vnto vs: likewise as by the one naming of the Lord of Hostes the Lordshyp, kyngdome, maiestie, power and authorytie of thys one God is vnderstanded to be all one and the same. The Psalmographe also wryteth on thys maner: By the worde of the Lorde were the heauens made sure, and wyth the spirite of hys mouth all the power of thē. Here lykewyse is set forth vnto vs, that there be iii. persons in the Godhead. The Father is called the Lord, the Sonne the worde, and the holy gost the Spirite. In the Euangelical history we reade, ẏ whan Chryste was baptysed, the father from heauen was heard, saying: Thys is my welbeloued sonne, in whom I haue a great delyght. We reade also, ẏ the holy gost came down from heauen in the lykenes of a doue, and rested vpon Chryst. Here is it most euident, that in that most blessed, glorious and euerlastyng Godhead there are three persons, the father, the sonne and the holy gost. And whan our Sauioure Chryste sente forth hys Apostles to preache, he commaunded them also to baptyse al natyons in the name of the father, and of the sone, and of the holy gost. The vnite of the diuine essence is set forth in thys that Chryst sayeth, In the name, and not in the names, as lykewyse by these three names, The father, the sonne, and the holy gost, is declared, that there are thre persons in the diuine substaunce. fewe wordes comprehende al this matter saying, They are they, which geue witnes in heauen, the father, the worde, and the holy goste, and these three are one. Father. Thou affirmest than, that in the diuine essence al though there be three distincte persons, yet is there but one God. i. Iohn. v.

Sonne. I do not only affirme and confesse it wyth my mouth, but I also most certaynly do beleue it wyth my hart. It is the Lord that made the heauens, whiche is the true and alone God, as for the gods of the heathen, they are Deuils, as the Psalmograph sayeth. And therfore in the confessyon of my fayth I say, I beleue in God, and not in Gods. For there is but one God, euen the father of our Lord Jesus Chryst, as god hymselfe testifieth, saying: Behold, I am alone, and there is none other God besydes me. Father. Wherfore doest thou call God, father in the cõfessyon of thy fayth, saying: I beleue in God the father? Sonne. For two causes. Fyrst to declare that in the Godhead there are three dystyncte persons, as we heard before, of the whych God the father is the fyrste which is the true and naturall father of hys sonne Jesus Chryste oure Lorde, begotten from euerlastyng, very God of very God, and of the same substaunce wyth the father. Secondly, to expresse, that as Jesus Chryst is the sonne of thys fyrst parson in the deite by naturall substãce so lykewyse through thys Chryst am I hys sonne also, not by nature, but by adopcion, so that God the father is now also become my father and hath made me by grace his sonne, and enheritoure of hys heauenly kingdome. And while I am in this worlde, he conserueth and kepeth me: he nourisheth and comforteth me: yea and as a most louynge and gentle father he blesseth me wyth all good thynges necessarye both for soule and body. Father. Proue me out of the holy Scriptures, that God is the father of the faythfull. Sonne. Moses sayeth, geue praise vnto our God. Is not he thy father, that hath made and created thee? The Prophete Esay sayeth Thou, O Lorde, art oure father and redemer. Thy name is from euerlastyng. God himselfe saieth by the Prophete Jeremy. Thou shalt cal me, dere father, and thou shalt turne nomore away from me. Our Sauioure Chryst sayeth, cal no man youre father vpon the earth. For one is your father, whiche is in heauen. S. Paule saieth, as many as are led by the spirite of god, they are ỹ sõnes of god. For ye haue not receaued the spirite of bondage to feare any more, but ye haue receiued the spirite of adopcion, wherby we cry, Abba, dere father. The same spirite certifieth our spirite, that we are the sonnes of god. If we be sonnes, we are also heyres, the heyres, I mene of god, and felowe heyres wyth Chryste. S. John cryeth oute on thys maner, O beholde, what a wonderful loue god hath geuen to vs, that we should be called the sonnes of god. In fine, god saith, I wil be a father vnto you, and ye shal be my sonnes and daughters. Father. But wherefore doest thou cal god not onely a father, but also Almyghtye? Sonne,

Why god is called almyghtye.

Sonne. He is called Almightie, because he is able to do, what soeuer his good pleasure is, and no man is of power to resist his godly wil and determinacion. And this worde Almightie is a great comforte vnto me. For hereof I learne, that as God beyng my louing father hath a good minde and wil graciously to helpe and succonre me, so likewise hath he power and habilitie to aide and comfort me in al my troubles and necessities, so that in him there is both wil and power. Father. Declare vnto me by the holy Scriptures, that God is almightye. Sonne. God said vnto Abraham, I am the almightie God. Walke before me, and be thou perfect. By the Prophete Jeremy he sayeth also, Behold I am the Lord God of al flesche. Is there any thyng to harde for me? Shall any thyng be vnpossyble in my syghte, sayeth the Lord of hostes? Our Sauioure Christ sayeth also, wyth God al thynges are possyble. And the Aungell Gabryell sayed to Mary the virgyn, w̄ God shal nothing be vnpossible. Father. Thou beleuest with thy hart, and confessest wyth thy mouth not only that God is a father and almyghtie, but also the creatore and maker both of heauen and of earth. Sonne. I both beleue and confesse. Father. Why callest thou God the father maker of heauē and of earth? Sonne. I cal God not onely a father but also almightie. And in that he is almightie, he made both heauen and earth, and all thynges contayned in them, both visible and inuisible, yea and that of nothyng. And as he at the beginning made them of nothyng, so lykewyse doth he now stil defende gouerne and kepe them, euen wyth the same myght and power, wherwyth he made them at the begynnynge. Father. Shewe vnto me by the woorde of God, that God created all thynges. Sonne. Moses sayeth, in the begynnyng God made heauen & earth. Jeremy sayth. It is thou, O Lorde God, that hast made heauen and earth wyth thy great power and outstretched arme. For there is nothyng to harde for thee. The Psalmograph sayeth, Thou, O Lorde, at the begynnyng madest the earth, and the heauens are the workes of thy handes. S. Paule sayeth, God made the world, and all thinges that are in it. Agayne, God made al thynges. Father. What comfort or doctryne doest thou gather of thys, that God is the maker of heauen & earth? Sonne. Great comfort and much doctryne. For in beleuing on thys God, which made both heauen and earth, I am ryghte well assured, that I am free from the nomber of them, which do beleue, honour and serue strauuge and false gods, yea rather Idols and Deuils, and that I am the seruaunt yea the sonne by adopcyon throughe Chryste Jesu our Lord of that one and alone true and euerlastyng God. Again by the consyderacion of gods creatures I am taughte to knowe God, hys omnipotency, goodnes and prouidence, whose maiestie otherwyse I could neuer comprehende, nor attayne vnto any part of the knowledge of the same. But in them as in a certayne cleare myrroure or pleasaunt glasse I see and beholde hym, and learne partely to knowe hym, hym, as the Apostle sayeth. That which maye be knowen of God, is manifest among them. For God dyd shewe it vnto them. So that hys invisible thynges, that is to say, his eternall power and Godheade, are vnderstande and seene by the workes from the creacion of the worlde. So that they are wythout excuse, inasmuche as when they knewe god they glorified hym not as God nether were thankefull, but waxed ful of vanities in theyr imaginacions, and their folyshe hartes were blinded. Hereto appertayneth the saying of the Psalmographe: the heauens declare the glory of God, and the very fyrmament sheweth hys handy worke. Moreouer hereof I learne that God created me and all hys other creatures both spirituall and corporall, both heauenly and earthly of nothyng by hys myghtye power, and that I haue my beyng, body, soule, witte, reason, discrecion, wisedome, knowledge, health, welth riches, wife, children, and all that euer I haue of the bounteous liberalitie of this creator and maker of heauen and earth: which as he by his power hath made me, so likewise by hys wisedome, and prouydence doeth preserue, kepe, gouerne and defende me, and al that I haue. And here am I taught that what soeuer good thyng I haue, it is the gyfte of God, the author of all goodnes, and that therfore I ought not tobe proude, nor to stande in myne own conceate which haue nothynge of my self that good is, no not so much as once to thynke a good thought muche les to do any good worke, but rather to humble my selfe before the presence of gods maieste, and to magnifie and exalte hys glorious name for the benefytes, which he most graciously hath bestowed vpon me wythout my desertes, and to laboure vnto the vttermost of my power to vse his giftes vnto the glory of hys holy name, the profyt of my neyghboure, and the saluacion of my soule. Fynally, thys comfort haue I also, that forasmuch as I beleue in that god ỹ father, which through hys omnipotencye and almyghtye power hath made all thynges contayned in heauen and in earth, I shal lacke no good thynge necessarye eyther for my body or for my soule: but while I liue in thys worlde, my body shall haue sufficient fode and rayment for the conseruacyon and mayntenaunce of the same, and after thys lyfe my soule beyng deliuered from the preson of the body shall enioy the blessed enheritaunce of gods glorious and heauenly kyngdome. For my wealth and comfort for my ioye and solace hath God my father created heauen and earth, and what soeuer is contayned in them. Father. Thou sayest well. But come of, tel me, why doest thou rather say, I beleue in God, than I beeleue that God is. Sonne. To beleue that God is, is cõmon not onely to the faythfull, but also to the vnfaythful, yea to the very deuils, as S. James saieth, Thou doest beleue that there is but one god Thou doest well. But the deuils beleue that also and tremble. But to beleue in god is to put our whole trust and confydence, not in any creature in heauen or in earth, not in any worke or ceremonye, but onely and alone in thys one true and euerlastyng God, whych is the father of our Lorde

Jesus Christ by nature, and the father of the faithful by grace, of suche omnipotency and almightie power, that at the begynnyng he made of nothing both heauen and earth, and what soeuer is contayned in the: to loke for assuredly all good thinges at his handes, meate, drinke, cloth wife, children, house, health, &c. remission of sinnes, quietnes of conscyence, the gift of the holy goste, euerlastyng lyfe &c. to depende onely on him in al necessities and troubles to flee vnto him, as vnto the onely, & alone hauen of health: to yelde our selues to him both bodye and soule: to cleaue to him and to his promises both in prosperitie and aduersite: and in fine, so wholly to repose, settle and quiet our mindes in him, that we honoure him as our alone God, loue hym as oure moste gentle father, and obey hym as our most gracious Lorde, which both can and also wil helpe, aide, succoure, preserue and defende vs, sufferyng vs to want no good thing either for the body or for the soule, but geuing vs largely al good thyngs, himselfe being the hiest good, and the fountain or wel spryng of al goodnes. This faith, this perswasion, this trust, this confidence of gods goodnes and mercye, haue neither the vnfaythfull nor the deuils: and therfore they beleue and tremble. The faithful haue only this faith and confidence, and therfore they do beleue and reioise as S. Paule saieth, we being iustified by fayth, are at peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ. By whom we haue a way in through faith, vnto this grace, wherin we stande and reioice in the hope of the glory of God. &c. Father. Let this suffise at this present for the fyrst part of the Christen fayth concernyng God the father. Let vs nowe goe in hande with the seconde part. What foloweth, Sonne. And in Iesus Christ his onely sonne our Lorde. Father. What meanest thou by that Sonne. I saied vnto you before, that there are three distincte and seuetal persons in the godhead, the father, the sonne, and the holy gost, and yet one only God. Of the first person in the deite, which is God the father, you haue heard the confession of my fayth. Now in moste goodlye order foloweth the seconde parte of the Christen fayth, concerning the seconde person in the Godhead, which is here called Jesus Christ, the onely sonne of God, and our Lord. Father. What beleuest thou of thys seconde person in the deite Jesus Christ? Sonne. As with my hart I do beleue, and with my mouth confesse the first person in the Godhead, ỹ is to say, the father almightie, which made heauen and earth to be very God. so like wise with my harte do I beleue, and with my mouthe confesse, that the seconde person in the deite, that is to say, Christ Jesus is very God, begotten after an vnoutspeakeable maner of God the father from euerlasting without any diminucion of hys diuine substance beyng of the same perfection, omnipotency, maiestie, wisedome, eternite, glory. &c. And therfore as I beleue and put my whole trust and confidence in God the father, and most certenly loke for all good thynges at his hande, so in like maner do I beleue and set al myne affyaunce & trust in God the sonne, hoping to receaue al prosperous thinges also of hym, him,beeing the sonne of God,and of the same mighte and powet with God his father. Father. Proue by ỹ holy Scriptures,that Jesus Christ is God. Sonne. Nothing is more easy. And although there be manyand almost innumerable both sentences and historyes in the holye Scriptures,which do most euidently proue and declare, that Chryste Jesus is very God,yet may it seme for this presente sufficient,out of so great a multitude to selecte and chose out these fewe that folowe Father. Agreed. Sonne. The Prophete Esay sayeth, vnto vs a childe is borne, and vnto vs a sonne is geuen vpon hys shoulder doeth the kyngdome, lye and he is called with his own name, wonderful,the geuer of councell, The mightie God, The euerlastyng father, The Prynce of peace. &c. Agayne he sayeth In that daye it shalbe sayed: Lo. Thys is oure God, we haue waited for hym,and he shall saue vs. Thys is the Lorde, in whom we haue hoped. We shalbe mery and reioyce in the saluacyon ỹ commeth of hym. Also in a nother place he sayeth. They shall see the glory of the Lord,and the maiestye of our God. &c. Beholde that God commeth to take vengeaunce,and you shall see the rewarde that God geueth. God commeth hys own selfe,and wil deliuer you. Then shall the eyes of the blynde be lyghtened,and the eares of the deafe opened. Then shal the lame man leape as an harte, and the dumme manns tongue shalbe loosoned. Baruche also sayeth,thys is our God, and there shall none other be compared vnto him. It is he that hath founde oute all wysedome,and hath geuen her vnto Jacob hys seruaunte, and to Israell hys beloued. Afterwarde dyd he shewe hymselfe vpon earthe, and dwelte amonge men. The Psalmograph also sayeth. Thy seate (O God) endureth forever, the scepter of thy kyngdome is a right scepter. Father. Lette these testimonies of Chrystes diuinite suffice concerning the olde testamente. Recyte me some oute of the new testament. Sonne. All the bookes of the newe testamente doe largelye beare wytnesse of the deite of Chryste. Sayncte Mathewe speakyuge of Chryste hath these wordes, his name shalbe called Emanuell, that is to saye, God wyth vs, or God and manne, Sayncte John wryteth that whan Thomas the Apostle sawe Chryste rysen from death, he cryed oute and sayed, My Lorde, and my God. And in the begynnynge of hys gospell he setteth foorth the diuinity of Chryste plenteously. In the begynnyng, sayeth he, was the worde, and the worde was wyth God, and God was the woorde. He was at the beginninge with God, all thinges were made by hym, and without him nothyng was made that is made. &c. Christ speaking of himselfe saieth, verely I saye vnto you, beefore Abraham was, I am. Agayne, I am that lyuyng bread, which came downe from heauen. If any manne eate of thys breade, he shall lyue for euer. Item, Excepte ye beleue that I am (GOD) ye shall die in youre sinnes. I and my father are one. Also in a nother place. true God, and whom thou haſt ſent Jeſus Chryſt. S. Paule ſayeth, ꝑ Chryſt came of the fathers as concernyng the fleſhe, whyche (Chryſte) is God, in al thinges worthe to be prayſed for euer. Amen. Agayne, in Chriſt dwelleth al the fulnes of the Godhead corporally, that is to ſaye, naturally, truly, and effectually. Itē, we loke for that bleſſed hope and glorious appearyng of the great God and our Sauioure Ieſu Chryſt. In other places S. Paule calleth Chryſt the Image of the inuiſible God, firſt begotten before al creatures, the bryttnes of hys glory, and the very image of his ſubſtance. And S. John ſpeaking of Chryſte ſayeth. The ſame is very God and euerlaſtyng lyfe. Furthermore the reſtoryng of ꝑ blynde to theyr ſyghte, the raiſyng vp of the dead vnto life, the clenſing of the lepers, the healyng of them that were dyſeaſed with the palſeye, the reſtoryng of men poſſeſſed wyth deuilles and vncleane ſpirites to theyr whole mynde, the makyng of the deafe to heare, and the dumme to ſpeake, with the other miracles that Chryſt wroughte do euidently proue that Chryſt is very God. Father. Theſe thynges are more open than they maye be denied. Nowe than ſeeing it is manifeſtly declared and proued by the holy Scriptures, ꝑ Chryſt Jeſus the ſeconde perſon in the Godhead is equall God wyth God the father, doeſt thou alſo beleue in him, repoſe thine affiaunce, put all thy truſt and confidence in him, and loke for al good thynges at hys hande? Sonne. Yea verelye And therefore as I ſayed before, I beleue in God the father, ſo likewiſe ſay I now. And I beleue in Ieſus Chryſt hys onely ſonne our Lorde: declaringe my fayth to be al one both in God the father and in God the ſonne, which although they be two diſtinct and ſeuerall perſons in the deite, yet are they not two gods, but one God. Our Lorde and Sauioure Chryſt ſayeth, ye beleue in God, (the father) beeleue ye alſo in me. For I and my father are one. He that ſeeth me, ſeeth the father alſo. I am in my father, and he is in me. And S. John ſayeth, thys is the commaundement of God, that we beleue in the name of hys ſonne Jeſus Chryſt. For he that beleueth on the ſonne hath euerlaſtyng life. But he that beleueth not on the ſonne, ſhal not ſe lyfe, but the wrath of God abideth on hym. Father. And oute of this fayth mayeſt thou boldly crye vnto this ſeconde perſon in the deite and craue al good thynges at hys hande? Sonne. No leſſe than vnto the father. For it is written, all that beleue on him, (Chriſt) ſhal not be aſhamed for there is one Lord of al, tych ynough for al that cal on him, ſo that euery one that calleth on the name of the Lorde ſhalbe ſaued. And that we may be certayne and not doubte, but that ſaluacion commeth alſo vnto vs from thys ſeconde perſon in the Godhead, he is called Jeſus. For ſo ſoundeth the Article. And in Ieſus Chryſte hys onely ſonne oure Lorde. Father. What ſygnyfyeth thys name Jeſus? Sonne. Jeſus is an Hebrue worde, and ſignifieth a Sauior. Father. Who gaue ꝑ ſōne of god this name? Beholde, the Aungell of the Lorde appeared vnto Joseph in a dreame saying: Joseph the sonne of Dauid, feare not to take vnto the Marye thy wyfe. For that which is conceaued in her, is of the holy goste. She shal bryng forth a sonne, and thou shalt cal his name Jesus. For he shal saue hys people from their synnes. And the Aungell sayd vnto Mary, Lo, thou shalt conceaue in thy wombe, and shalt beare a sonne, & shalte call hys name Jesus. Father. Why was thys name Jesus appropryated and geuen to Chryste of God the father? Sonne. To declare vnto vs, that he alone is our Sauyoure, and that we oughte to seke saluacion onely at hys hande, as S. Peter sayeth. There is saluacion in none other but in the Lorde Jesus. Neyther is there any other name vnder heauen geuen vnto men, wherin we must be saued, but onely the name of Jesu. And here is a nother noble and notable testimonye of Chrystes diuinite. For in thys that he is a Sauyoure, and saueth his people from theyr synnes, it is euydente, that he is true and natural God. For none saueth, deliuereth from synne, and geueth euerlastyng lyfe, but God alone. But all these thynges doeth Chryste. Therefore is Chryste verye God. Father. Is Chryste Jesus alone a Sauioure? Sonne. Yea verely. So teache the holy Scryptures. And Chryste hymselfe sayeth by the Prophete J, J am the Lorde, and beſydes me there is no Sauioure. Agayne. Thy destruccion O Israell, commeth of thy selfe, but thy saluacion commeth onely of me. Neyther Aungell in heauen, nor man in earth, nor any worke that we doe, semeth it neuer so holy, perfecte and righteous, can saue vs, but this Lord Christe alone, whiche is called Jesus. Who soeuer therefore seaketh saluacion at the hande of any other, deceaueth himselfe, and asmuche as in him is, robbeth Christ both of his name and glory. And whosoeuer presumeth to saue other by hys own holynes, vertue or righteousnes, he denieth Chryste to bee Jesus and is led with the spirite of Antichryst. Christ calleth al them that are greued and heauy loden with the burden of sinne vnto him, and promiseth to ease them. He sendeth them not to other for to be eased. He came to seke that was loste, and to geue his lyfe a raunsome for many. This is a true sayinge, saieth S. Paule and by all meanes worthy to be receaued, that Chryst Jesus came into the worlde to saue synners. And S. John sayeth, to this ende hath the sonne of God appeared, that he shoulde destroye the workes of the deuill. Againe, in this appeared the loue of God towarde vs, that he sent hys only begotten sonne into the worlde, that we mighte liue through hym. In thys is loue, not that we loued God, but that he fyrste loued vs, and sente hys sonne to make agremente for our synnes. Chryste is so alone Jesus, that he onely saueth, delyuereth from synne, and geueth euerlastyng lyfe. Whosoeuer falleth awaye from thys Sauyoure, and hunteth after other, he dooeth nothyng elles than throwe hymselfe headlong into euerlastynge damnacyon. Agaynst such backeslyders this sonne of God, this Jesus, this alone Sauioure of the worlde eryeth out by ỹ Prophete on this maner: be astonied (O ye heauens) be afraied, & be abashed at suche a thing, saith ỳ lord. For my people hath done two euils. They haue for sake me the wel of the water of life, and digged thē pittes, yea vile and broken pittes ỳ holde no water. Cursed is he, saieth Jeremye ỳ putteth his trust in mā, & taketh flesh for hys arme: & he whose harte departeth frō the Lord. He shalbe like the heath ỳ groweth in the wildernes. As for the good thyng ỳ is to come, he shal not se it, but d wel in a dry place of the wildernes, in a salt & an vnoccupied lande. But O blessed is the man, ỳ putteth his trust in the Lord, & whose hope the Lord himself is. For he shalbe as a tre, ỳs planted by the water syde, whiche spreadeth out the rote vnto moystenes, whō the heate cannot harme, when it cōmeth, but hys leaues are grene. &c. Father. But thys seconde person in the godhead is not only called Jesus, but also Chryst. Sonne So is it. Father. What is Chryst to say? Sonne. Chryst in the Grcke tounge soūdeth in our English spech, Annointed. Father. Why is he called Chryst or Annointed? Sonne. As God the father wold declare vnto vs by thys name Jesus, ỳ hys son is our alone Sauior, & therefore true & natural god, so ỳ we shold seke our saluactiō of none, but of hym alone: so lykewyse by this name Chryst he teacheth vs, ỳ his son is our alone kynge, priest & prophete. Father. Why, was Jesus annointed also w oile after the maner of kinges, priestes, & prophetes in ỳ olde lawe? Sonne. The oyle wherw̄ they wer anointed, was corruptible, as they them selues wer corruptible & mortal, but the oile wherw̄ Chryste was annoynted, was vncorruptible, immortal, heauēly & spiritual. Father. Of what oile speakest thou? Sonne. Of ỳ oyle, whych the Psalmograph calleth ỳ oile of gladnes, saying, thou hast loued righteousnes, & hated wyckednes, therfore hath God euē thy God anointed the w̄ the oile of gladnes more than al thy felowes. Father. What is this oyle of gladnes? Sonne. The holy gost with this oile. I meane, ỳ holy gost, Christ is most aboundātly anointed of god ỳ father, wheras ỳ other faythful are anointed with this oile accordyng to ỳ measure, which god hath geuē thē, as S. John Baptist saith, god geueth not ỳ spirite by measure vnto hym. ỳ is to say, Chryst. But of hys fulnes and of ỳ ouer flowyng aboundaunce of hys spirite haue we all receaued. Father. Hath god anointed Chryst to bee our kyng? Sonne. yea verely. But as his anointing is spiritual, so lykewise is he a spiritual king, & his kingdom also is spiritual, as he said to Pilate, my kingdom is not of this world. He ruleth not w̄ the swerd of the flesh, but w̄ the swerd of ỳ spirite, which is ỳ word of god. Therfore saith ỳ Prophet. Behold thy king cōmeth vnto the meke, pore, humble or louly, sitting vpō an asse. &c He ruleth in ỳ hartes of ỳ faithful w̄ his sprite & word, defending thē frō the tirāny of the deuil frō the captiuite of synne, frō the curse of ỳ law, frō the styng of death frō the tormētes of hel, & from euerlastyng damnacyon. For thys cause he is called the Prince of peace Neither is his kingdome temporal, but perpetuall, as the Angel saieth, he shalbe great, and shalbe called the sonne of the hiest

Father. What profite haue we by thys kyngdome of Chryst? Sonne. Greate and muche. You heard before that Chryste beyng annointed of God his father to be our kyng, preserueth & gouerneth vs by his worde and spirite, and leadeth vs in the way of holines and ryghteousnes. Againe he defendeth vs from the crueltie of Satan, from the ragyng lustes of the flesshe, from the vayne pleasures of the world, from the thraldome of synne, from the curse of the law, from the styng of death, from the paines of hell, and from eternal damnacion, and hath gotten for vs an heauenly and euerlastyng kingdome. And through this his kyngdō he hath also made vs kynges and conqueroures of al our enemyes, so þ we may tryumphantly and with reioysing hartes say: Death, where is thy styng? Hell, where is thy victory? The styng of death is synne: and þ strength of synne is the law. But thankes be vnto God, which hath geuen vs the victory through our Lord Jesus Chryst. Hereto pertayneth the saying of S. Paule. Chryst through death did put hym down, that had Lordship ouer death, that is to say, the deuil, that he might deliuer them, which through feare of death were al their lyfe tyme in daunger of bondage. The profite of Chrystes kyngdome. i. Cor. xv. Ose. xiii. Heb. i.

Father. Is Chryst also our Priest? Sonne. Yea the one and alone Pryest of the newe testament, whose Pryesthode as it is moste hie and most excellent, so is it euerlastyng and perpetuall, as the Psalmograph saith, thou art a Priest for euer after the order of Melchisedech? Father. Why is Chryst called a Priest? Sonne. First because he beyng the true pascal lambe without spot offered himselfe on the altare of the crosse a swete smellyng Sacrifice vnto God þ father for þ synnes of the whole worlde, and by the vertue of that one and alone Sacrifice once offered for al he hath made perfect for euer them that are sanctified, so that now we haue no nede of any other oblacions or Sacrifices to be offred vnto God for our synnes. For this our Bishop with the one and alone Sacrifice of his blessed body hath fully and vnto the vttermost finished and brought to passe, whatsoeuer is necessary for our saluacion, as the Apostle sayeth. We are sanctified and made holy by the offeryng vp of the body of Jesu Chryst done once for all. Secondly, because he beyng our alone mediatoure, aduocate and intercessoure, and sitting on the right hande of God the father doth continually pray for vs and appeaseth the wrath of God daily kinled agaynst vs throughe synne, as S. John testifieth, if any man, sayeth he, synne, we haue an aduocate with the father Jesus Chryst the ryghteous. And he it is þ obtaineth mercy for our synnes, not for our sinnes only, but for þ whole worldes. Chryst alone is our priest. Psal. cix. Heb. vii. Exo. xx. Iohn. i. Ephe. v. Heb. ix. & Heb. x. i. Tim. ii. Rom. viii. Heb. x. i. Iohn. ii.

Father. What doth this Pryesthode of Christ profit vs? Sonne. Very much. For in thys that he is our alone hie and euerlastyng priest he hath offred Sacrifice, as ye haue heard, to God hys father, whyche sacrifice is he himself, & by this meanes hath he pacified þ fathers wrath satisfied for our sinnes, reconciled vs vnto God, made vs his sonnes, & felow heyres with him of euerlastyng glory. Againe, through this hys priesthode, he is made vnto God the father our mediatoure, aduocate and intercessoure, praieth for vs, pleadeth our cause, appeaseth Goddes wrath, and obtaineth for vs al good thinges necessary eyther for body or for soule. Moreouer by this his prypesthode he hath made vs Priests to offer spiritual Sacrifices acceptable to God through hym, that is to say, our selues, our soules and bodyes to be a liuely, holy and wel pleasing Sacrifice vnto God: againe, our praiers, prayses, thanks geuings and such other good workes, euen the frutes of our fayth, as S. Paul sayeth. By Christ offer we the Sacrifice of praise alwaye to God, that is to say, the frute of those lippes, which confesse hys name. To do good and to distribute forget not, for with such Sacrifices God is wel pleased. ye are an holy Priesthode, sayeth S. Peter, for to offer vp spiritual Sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Chryst. Agayne, ye are a chose generacion, a royal Priesthode, an holy nacion and a peculiare people, that ye should shewe the vertues of hym, that called you out of darkenes into hys maruelous light. Father. Is Christ also a Prophet? Sonne Yea verely, euen the very same Prophete, of whom it is thus wrytten: I wil raise them vp a Prophete from among their brethren like vnto ỹ and wil put my wordes in his mouth, and he shal speake vnto them al that I shal commaunde hym. And whosoeuer wil not harken vnto my wordes, which he shal speake in my name, I wilbe auenged of hym. That Chryst is thys very Prophete, the people also at hys commynge confessed, saying. Of a trueth thys is that Prophete that should come into the world. Father. What profyt haue we by thys, that Chryst is a Prophete? Sonne. In that he is that Prophete, which God so manye yeares before hys comming promysed to sende, we are well assured ỹ he is a Scholemaster sent from God vnto vs, and hath the wordes of God in hys mouth, and teacheth vs the trueth, whiche we ought both diligently to heare, and stedfastly to beleue, accordynge to thys saying this is my welbeloued Sonne, for whose sake I am wel pleased with man, heare hym. Of hys Prophecy, doctryne or preaching Chryst hym selfe speaketh on this maner by the Prophete. The spirite of the Lorde is vpon me, because he hath annointed me, and sent me to preach good tidinges vnto the pore, that I might bind vp the wounded hartes, that I myght preache deliueraunce to the prysoners, and open the pryson to them that are bonde, that I might declare the acceptable yere of the Lorde, and the day of the auengeaunce of our God, that I might comfort al them that are in heauines, that I myghte geue vnto them that mourne in Sion, beautye in the steade of ashes, ioyfull oyntment for syghing, pleasaunt rayment for an heauy mynde: that they myghte be called excellente in ryghteousnes, a plantyng of the Lord for hym to reioyce in. Furthermore in that Chryst is a Prophete, he doeth also annoynte vs with the oyle of gladnes, which is the holy gost, and geueth vs also the gifte of prophecy, that we both can vnderstande the holy Scriptures, and also teache them to other vnto the edifying of hys Churche, as he hymselfe sayeth by the Prophete, I wil poure out of my spirite vpon all flesh, and your sonnes and your daughters shal prophecy. Agayne, I wil put my lawes in their myndes, and in their hartes I wil wryte them, and I wyl be their God, and they shalbe my people. Father. Let these thynges suffyse concerning the names of Chryst and hys offyce. Why doest thou call hym the onely sonne of God? Sonne. I am taught by the worde of God, which is an infallyble verite, so to do. Father. Proue by the worde of God, that Chryste is the sonne of God. Sonne. God himselfe sayeth. Out of Egipt haue I called my sonne. Agayne, I wyll be his father, and he shalbe my sonne. Item, thou art my sonne, thys day haue I begotten thee. Peter wyth hys felow Apostles John Baptyst, Nathaniel, Martha, with al the faythful of the newe testamente (as I maye speake nothynge of the wycked and damnable spirites) confessed Chryst to be the Sonne of God. Chryste sayed to the blinde man, whom he had restored vnto hys sight. Doest thou beleue in the sonne of God? He answered and sayed, who is he Lord, that I may beleue in hym? Jesus sayd vnto hym, thou hast seen hym, and he it is that talketh wyth the. And he sayed, I beleue O Lord, and worshipped hym. And the Eunuche sayed vnto Philippe, I beleue that Jesus Chryst is the sonne of god. God the father hymself wt an open voyce frō heauen twyse pronounced Chryst to be hys sonne, saying. This is my welbeloued sonne, in whom I haue a singulare delight, heare hym. S. Paule also sayeth, Chryst was begotten of the seede of Dauyd as pertayning to the flesshe, and declared to be the sonne of God with power. &c. Agayne, God in tymes past diuersly and many wayes spake vn to the fathers by the Prophetes: but in these last dayes he hath spoken vnto vs by his sonne, whom he hath made heyer of al thynges, by whō also he made the world. which sonne also is the brytnes of hys glorye, and the very image of his substaunce. &c. Moreouer S. John sayeth, these thinges are written, that ye may beleue, that Jesus is Chryst the sonne of God, and that ye thus beleuyng might haue life throughe hys name. Why Chryst is called the onely sonne of God. *Ose, xi. What learnest thou of thys, that Chryst is the onely begotten sonne of God? Sonne. By thys I am fully and moste certenly perswaded, that Jesus Chryst the seconde person in the deite (in whom I doe beleue as in the father) is true, perfect, immortal, and euerlasting God, begotten of God the father before al worldes, of the same maiestye, nature, substance, myght and power with the father. For euen as of the substance of a true man there is none borne but a true man, so lykewise of the substance of the true God, there is none borne but true God. Euery thing begetteth the thyng that is lyke vnto it selfe in nature and substaunce. Father. What doeth it profyt thee, that Chryst is the sonne of God, yea God hymselfe? Sonne. Very much. For in that he is God, or the sonne of God he is able to forgeue me my synnes, to beget me of new by his holy spirite, to defende me from myne enemyes, to saue me, to geue me all good thynges necessary both for body and soule, to make me the sonne of God, and heyre of euerlastyng glory. Father. But wherefore calleste thou Chryst our Lord. Sonne. For he is the Lord of Lordes, and kynge of kynges I wyth my hart therfore beleue, and with my mouth confesse Chryste also to be our Lorde. For so am I in dede. S. Paule also sayeth, God is faythfull, by whom ye are called vnto the felowshyp of hys sonne Jesus Chryst our Lord. Agayne, grace be vnto you and peace frō God the father, and our Lord Iesus Chryst. Item. There is but one Lorde, euen Jesus Chryst, by whom are all thynges and we by hym. Father. What profyte haue we by thys, that Chryst is our Lord? Sonne. In that he is our Lorde, we are taught e fyrste of al, that we ought to serue, honoure, magnifye and prayse hym aboue all thynges, and to seke hys glory in al our lyfe and conuersation, and by no meanes to commytte any thyng, wherby the maieste of hys name should be obscured or hyndred, accordyng to thys commaundement, thou shalte honoure the Lord thy God and hym alone shalt thou serue. Secondly, he is called our Lorde, that is to say, the Lord of the faythful, because that he through hys almighty power doeth mightely defende vs, and delyuer vs from the tiranny of al our enmyes, synne, death, deuil, and hel, and careth and prouideth for vs, as a bounteous Lord and master doeth for hys true and faythfull seruauntes, so that no good thyng shal want vnto vs profitable either for body or for soule. Of the humanite of Christ. was conceaued by the holy goste, borne of the virgin Mary. Father. What doest thou beleue and confesse in this article? Sonne. That Christe Jesus the natural sonne of God, at the tyme appointed of hys heauenlye father from euerlastynge, became man, not after the common order of men, but after a supernaturall maner euen by the maruelous worcking of the holy goste, taking his perfecte humanite of the substaunce of the moste pure and vndefiled virgin Mary, and whan the tyme of her deliueraunce came, he was truely and naturally borne of her, and brought forth into thys world, so that as he is true God of the nature & substāce of his father before al worldes euen from euerlastyng: so likewise is he true man of the nature and substaunce of his mother Marye. Father.

Are there than two natures in the Lord Christ? Sonne. Yea verely the nature of God, & the nature of man. Father. And are both these natures in one person? Sonne. Yea, and that without any confusyon or separacion, so that whole Christ is very God and very man in one and vnsepa rable person. Father. Howe doest thou proue by the worde of God, that Christ was conceaued in the virgin Maryes wombe without the sede of man, onely by the supernatural and wonderfull operacion of the ho ly goste? Sonne. The holy Scriptures are euidente. For thus wryteth blessed Luke. The Aungel Gabriel was sent from God vnto a citie of Luke.i. Galile named Nazareth, to a virgin spoused to a manne, whose name was Joseph, of the house of Dauid, and the virgins name was Mary
And the angel went in vnto her, and sayde, hayle full of grace, the lord is with thee: blessed art thou among women. And whan she saw him, she was abashed at hys saying, and cast in her mynde, what manner of salutacion that shuld be. And the Angel said vnto her: feare not Mary for thou hast founde grace wyth God. Lo, thou shalt conceaue in thy wombe, and shalt beare a sonne, and shalt cal hys name Jesus. He shal be great, and shalbe called the sonne of the hiest. And the Lorde God shal geue vnto hym, the seate of hys father Dauid, and he shall raygne ouer the house of Jacob for euer, and of hys kyngdome shalbe none end
Then sayed Mary vnto the Angel: How shal thys be, seyng I knowe not a man? And the Angel answered and sayd. The holy goste shal come vpon thee, and the power of the hiest shal ouer shadowe thee. Therefore also that holy thyng, which shalbe borne, shalbe called the sonne of god.
Math.i. S. Mathewe also hath these wordes. Whan Mary Christes mother was betrowthed to Joseph (before they came together) she was found with childe of the holy goste. Then Joseph her husbande (beyng a iuste man,

man,and loth to defame her) was mynded to put her awaye secretlye. whyle he thus thoughte,beholde the Angell of the Lorde appeared vn to him in a dreame,saying: Joseph the sõne of Dauid, feare not to take vnto thee Mary thy wife. For that which is conceaued in her,is of the holy gost. She shal bryng forth a sonne,and thou shalt call his name Iesus for he shal saue hys people from theyr synnes. All this was done to fulfil that,which was spoken of the Lord by the Prophete,saying: Beholde a mayde shalbe with childe,and shal bring foorth a sonne, & they cal his name Emmanuel,which is by interpretacion, God wyth vs,or God and man. Father., What doeth it profit vs,that Chryste receaued his perfecte humanite and manhead of the virgin Mary without the company of man,only by the maruelous and aboue natural worckynge of the holy goste. Sonne. The commodite and profite hereof is greater, than it can be expressed. It is not vnknowen vnto you,that al we synned and iustly for our sinne were condemned vnto euerlastyng damnacion in Adam,so that both we and al our actes are altogether filthy,vn pure and vnclenne. Our generacion,oure concepcion,oure byrth,oure lyfe,our worckyng,our thinkyng our breathing, & what soeuer besydes we are, haue or do, it is altogether vnpure and vncleane. For that is borne of flesh is flesh. A corrupt tree cannot bryng forth good fruytes. By nature we al are the children of wrath. And therefore Dauid shamed not thus to wright of himselfe and of hys beyng: Beholde, my father begate me in wickednes,and my mother conceaued me in synne. Now to be deliuered from thys filthy vncleanues and vncleane filthynes,it was requisite,that one should be borne free and vtterly estraunged from this filthy generacion and concepcion,wherin al we the children of Adam are wrapped,which by his pure,cleane and holy concepcion and blessed natiuite and byrth should put a way and clense the filthines of our most filthy generacion,conception and byrth, which we receaued of olde sinful Adam. And because none among all creatures was founde eyther in heauen or in earth of suche purite and clennesse, that myght worke and bring this most noble and excellente benefyte of euerlasting saluacion vnto mankinde,therfore the heauenly father of his vnoutspeakable clemency,goodnes,mercye charite and loue sente hys onely begotten sonne into thys world to take vpõ hym the nature of man,but yet not after the common order of nature,but far otherwise without the helpe of man,euen by the wonderful vertue and power of the holy gost,by this meanes becomming man,and yet not of the sede of man(for so should hys cõcepcion and natiuite haue profited vs nothyng at all. For of the vncleane what can be clensed?)and like vntovs in al thinges,sin alone except. Father. It was necessarye than, that the sonne of God should be incarnate by the holy gost,and not by any worckman. Sonne. yea verely for this incarnaciõ of ỹ sonne of God wrought by the holy gost is after a certayne manner oure regeneracion, so that through it we which before were the cursed chyldren of adam,begotten

and conceaued of vncleane sede, are purified, and made in Chryste of carnal spiritual, of filthy cleane, of vnrighteousse righteousse, of the fier brandes of hel the sonnes of God, and heires of his euerlastyng glorye. Father. As Chryst was conceaued by the holy gost, so was he borne of the maide Mary. Sonne. So saieth the article of our faith. Father. But how is that proued by the Scriptures? Sonne. That the Lord Chryste shuld be borne of a maide it was prophecied many yeares before Chryst was borne. For thus sayeth the Prophete Esay, Beholde, a maide shall conceaue or be with childe, and shal bring forth a sonne, and they shal cal his name Emanuel. S. Mathew sayeth, Jacob begate Joseph the husbande of mary, of whom Jesus was borne, which is called Chryst. The Angel Gabriel said vnto Mary. Beholde thou shalte conceane in thy wombe and beare a sõne, and shalt cal hys name Jesus. S. Paule sayeth. When the tyme was ful come, God sent his sonne made of a woman, and made bonde vnto the law. Father. What is mente, whan we saye, Chryst was borne of the virgin Mary? Sonne. Nothynge els, than that Chryst is true, perfect and natural man, taking this his humanite or manhode of the pure and vndefiled virgin Mary, so that as he is true, perfecte and naturall God of the substaunce of God the father, so likewise is he true, perfect and naturall man of the substaunce of Marye his mother. And as Chryst from euerlasting was begotten very God of God his father without any mother: so lykewyse was he borne at the tyme appointed very man of the virgin Mary his mother without any father, onely by the vertue and power of the holye goste. Father. This is than a certayne and vndoubted veritye, that Chryste brought not his body with him from heauen, and so passed through the virgin Mary, as the water goeth through the condit, but receaued hys perfect humanite of the substaunce of Mary his mother, so ẏ as of god his father he is true and natural God, so likewise of Mary his mother he is true and naturall man. Sonne. Thys is so certayne, as nothynge is more certayne. For S. Paule saieth, speakyng of Chryste, He in no condicion taketh on him the Angels, but the sede of Abraham taketh he on him. Agayne, forasmuche as the childrẽ were partakers of flesh and bloud, he also hymselfe toke part wyth them. Item. Jesus Chryste the sonne of God was begotten of the sede of Dauid as pertaining to the flesh. Also in a nother place, Chryst as concerning the flesh came of the Israelites. For this cause in the holy Scriptures is Chryste called the sede of the woman, the sonne of Dauid, the fruite of Maryes wõbe the sonne of man. &c. Father. What profite haue we by this, that Chryst is true and perfect man, and like vnto vs in all thinges, synne alone except? Sonne. Very much. For in that he is not onely God, but also man yea and that pure and vndefiled man, conceaued, borne and liuing without al sinne, he is of sufficient dignite, worthines and perfeccion before God the father to be oure Mediatoure and peace maker, to be our hye Preyest and euerlasting Bishop, to be a swete smellynge Sacrifice for oure

I learne of thys Artycle two thynges. Fyste my to muche miserie and wretchednesse, into the whych I was caste both by mine owne sinne and Adams: whiche miserye and wretchednesse was so greate and vnrecompensable, that from it neyther I my selfe, nor no creature for me eyther in heauen or in earth coulde deliuer me, so that remedilesse I muste perishe and euerlastyngly be dãned. Secondly, the exceadyng greate and vnmeasurable mercye and loue, of my heauenly father toward me whiche without al my desertes euen of his owne mere goodnesse so greatlye tendered my saluacyon, that he hauing but one onely begotten sonne was content to geue him vnto the death for my sake, so that I beleuinge on him, and lokinge for healthe and euerlastyng life at my heauenly fathers hande through the passion and death of this his dearely beloued sonne, might be deliuered from this my wretchednesse, be made free from the tiranny of Satan, and become partaker of euerlastyng glory, as the Lord Christ himselfe witnesseth, saying, as Moises lifted vp the Serpent in the wildernes euen so must the sonne of man be lift vp, that none that beleueth on him perishe, but haue euerlasting life. Iohn. iii. For God loued the worlde so dearelye that he gaue his onely begotten sonne, that none [that beleue in hym, should perish, but haue euerlasting life. Hereto belongeth the saying of S. Paule. God doeth wonderfully set forth his loue that he hath to vs seing that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for vs. Rom. v. Muche more then now (seing we are iustified in his bloude) shall we bee saued from wrath through him. For if when we were yet enemies, we wer reconciled to God by the death of his sonne: much more seing we are reconciled, we shall be preserued by his life. Not onely so, but we also ioye in God by the meanes of oure Lorde Iesus Christ, by whom we haue now receaued the atonemente.

Father. What so euer therefore Christe suffered in hys body, did he suffer it for thee and for thy saluacion? Sonne. That is my belefe. All that euer CHRIST dyd or suffered in hys humanytye, was altogether done and suffered for my sake. He came downe from heauen for my sake. He was incarnate by the holy ghoste and borne of the Virgin Marye for my sake. He was circumcised and Baptysed for my sake. He fasted, prayed, preached, wroughte miracles for my sake. He suffered hys passion and death for my sake. He rose agayne for my sake He is ascended into the kingdome of his father for my sake. He at the laste daye shall come agayne vnto the iudgemente for my sake, and place me wyth him in the glory of hys father, where I shall most blessedly remayne worldes withoute ende. For Chryste is myne, howe than canne it be, but that what soeuer Chryste hath, the same is myne also, as Sayncte Paule sayeth, God spared not hys own sonne, Rom, viii, but gaue hym for vs all. Howe shall he not with him geue vs all thinges also? Father. Declare vnto me by the worde of GOD, that Chryste suffered vnder Ponce Pylate. Sonne. In the prayer, whyche Actes. iiii. the Apostles after Christes ascencion made vnto GOD the father these woordes are contayned. Of a trueth (O Lorde) agaynst thy holye chylde Jesus (whom thou haste annointed) both Herode and also Ponce Pylate, with the Gentiles, and the people of Israell, gathered ii. Tim. vi. themselues together in this citie, for to dooe whatsoeuer thy hande and thy councell determyned before to be done. Sayncte Paule vnto Byshoppe Timothe wrighteth on this manner, I geue thee charge in the sighte of God, whiche quickeneth all thynges, and before Jesu Christe (whiche vnder Ponce Pilate witnessed a good witnessing) that thou Psal, ii, kepe the commaundemente, and bee wythoute spotte. Father. What profyte haste thou by this, that Chryst suffered suche and so greate tormentes and paynes? Sonne. I am not able to expresse it. The paines, plagues and punyshmentes, which I both in body and soule oughte moste worthelye to haue suffered euen in hell fyer for my greate and innumerable synnes committed agaynste the mayestye of God, those dyd my Lorde and Sauyoure Chryste Jesus moste wyllyngly suffer in hys moste blessed, innocente, gyltlesse and pure bodye at the wyll of hys father to deliuer me from euerlastynge Paynes and tormentes, whiche moste iustely were due vnto me, so that it is truelye sayed of the Lord Chryst by the Psalmograph. The rebukes of them whych rebuked thee, fell on me. Agayne, I am fayne to pay the things whiche I neuer toke. Father. synne, neyther was there any gile founde in hys mouth. For hymselfe there was no nede to suffer. For vs therefore and for oure synnes he suffered, what soeuer he suffered. And that this is true, the holy Scriptures declare manyfestlye. Esaye the Prophete speaketh on thys manner, we reckened hym so symple and so vile, that we hyd oure face from him. Howe be it (of a trueth) he toke away oure infirmytyes, and beare oure sorowes & paynes. And yet we iudged hym, as though he had been plaged and caste downe of God (for hys synnes:) Wheras he not withstandyng was wounded for oure offences, and smytten for oure wyckednesse. For the payne of oure punyshemente was layed vpon hym, and wyth hys strypes are we made whole. As for vs, we all haue gone astraye like shepe, euery one hath turned hys owne waye. But throughe hym the Lorde hath pardoned all oure synnes. And a lyttel after, the Prophete speakynge in the person of God sayeth. The punishmente came vpon hym for the synnes of my people. Sayncte Peter also sayeth, Chryste hath once suffered for synnes, the iust for the vniuste, for to bryng vs to God. Againe, Christe hath suffered for vs in the flesh. These Scriptures with many mo dooe moste playnely declare, that those paynes, whiche the Lorde Christe suffered, he suffered them not for his owne (whiche were vtterly none) but for oure synnes, that we throughe the temporall paines of his moste innocente and pure bodye, myghte be deliuered from the eternall and euerlastyng paynes of hell fyre.

Father. Was Chryste compelled to suffer these paynes, eyther suffered he them gladly and wyllyngly? Sonne. It pleased the heauenlye father of hys mere mercye to warde mankynde, that hys onely begotten sonne shoulde become man, and suffer those paines which were due vnto man for hys synne, that by thys meanes the iustyce of God might be both pacyfied and satisfied, and manne deliuered from hys mooste miserable captiuite, and made free from the bytter torementes of hell. The sonne of God taking vppon him the nature of manne, and lyke to manne in all thinges, sinne alone excepte shewed himselfe in al thinges conformable to the will of his heauenly father, and moste willingly obeied him vnto the death, euen the death of the crosse, that by this meanes he suffering temporal paines in his innocent body, mighte deliuer mankinde from the euerlasting paines both of body and soule.

And by ỹ Psalmograph he saieth, I will offer Sacrifice vnto the willingly. He speaketh of the Sacrifice of his body. What profit haue we by this, ỹ Christ was crucified or fastned to ỹ crosse? Sonne. The profit is great & incõparable

What profyt we haue in this, that Chryste was fastened to the crosse.

Firste in that Chryste was crucified and nailed on the crosse and there suffered most intollerable paines, he by his bitter torementes and puny-shmentes toke away that damnacion, which we most righteouslye in Adam had deserued by eating of the forbidden frute, and whatsoeuer Rom.v.

For as by the sinne of one (Adam) condemnacion came on al men: euen so by the iustifying of one, commeth the righteousnes that bringeth life so by the obedience of one (Chryst) shal many be made righteous. Se-for oure sake, and by thys meanes deliuered vs from the curse of the

from the curse of the lawe, and was made accursed for vs. For it is Deut.xxi.
written, cursed is euery one that hangeth on tree. Thyrdely, the crucy-fying or fastenyng of Chryste vnto the crosse preacheth to vs, that as he was lifted vpon the crosse, so lykewise by the vertue of hys passyon shall he lyfte vs vp vnto the kingdome of hys father, as he hym selfe sayeth. Nowe is the iudgemente of this worlde: nowe shal the Prynce Iohn.xii.

Daniell prophecied of Chrystes death on this manner: After those lxii. weekes shal Christ be slaine, and they shal haue no pleasure in him. Dani.ix.

Christ himselfe long before he died many and diuerse times tolde hys disciples, that he should be slain and suffer death at Jerusalem. Bishop Caiphas also prophecied of Christes death, whan he said, it is more expedient for vs, that one dye for the people, then that al the people should perysshe. Thys spake he, sayeth the Euangelist, not of hym selfe, but forsomuch as he was hie Priest of the same yeare, he prophecyed. For Jesus must dye for the people, and not for the people onely, but ỳ he should gather together the children of God, which were scattered abrode. Jesus sayeth S. Mathewe, cried with a loude voice, and gaue vp ỳ goost. Blessed Luke writeth thus: Jesus crying wyth a loude voyce, saied, O father I commende my spirite into thy handes. And immediatlye he gaue vp the goost. S. John writeth thus. When Jesus knewe, that all was perfourmed, that the Scripture myght be fulfylled, he sayed: I am a thyrst. There stode a vessell full of vineger. They filled a sponge with vineger, and wounde it about with Isope, and helde it to hys mouth. Now whan Jesus had receaued the vineger, he said. It is fynyshed, and bowed his head, and gaue vp the ghoste. The Apostles of Christ in their Sermon spake on thys maner to the Jewes, ye men of Israel, heare these wordes: Jesus of Nazareth, the man approued of God among you with miracles, wonders and tokens, which God dyd by hym in the mids of you, as ye your selues know also, hym (after that he was deliuered by the determinate councell and foreknowledge of God) haue ye taken by the handes of vnryghteous persons, and crucyfied him, and slaine him. &c. Of Christes death S. Paule maketh mencyon almost in al hys Epistles. I wyl rehearse certayne sentences oute of his wrytinges. God, sayeth he, doeth wonderfully set forth his loue towarde vs, in that Christ dyed for vs, when we were yet synners. Agayne, I deliuered vnto you that, which I also receaued, whiche is, ỳ Christ dyed for our synnes. Also in a nother place, Let the same mynde be in you, that was in Christ Jesu, which beyng in the shape of GOD, thought it no robbery to be equal wyth God, but made hymselfe of no reputacion, and toke vpon hym the shape of a seruaunt, became lyke a nother man, and was founde in hys apparell as a man. He humbled hymselfe, and became obedient vnto the death, euē the death of ỳ crosse Hereto appertayneth the saying of S. Peter. Christ dyed once for our synnes, the righteous for ỳ vnrighteous. &c. Father. What profite haue we by the death of Christ? Sonne. Christe by his temporal death hath for our sake ouercome euerlasting death, whervnto through synne we were subiecte and thraull, as Christ himselfe sayeth by the Prophete, O death, I wil be thy death. Like vnto this is that whiche S. Paule writeth, death is swalowed vp into victory. Death, wher is thy sting? Hel where is thy victory? The sting of death is synne. The strength of sinne is the law. But thankes be vnto God, which hath geuen vs the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. Agayne. Christ by hys deathe hath ouercome him, which had the rule of death, as S. Paul testifieth saying.

saying: Christ through death destroied him that had the rule of deathe, that is to say, the deuil, and hath set them at liberte, which throughe the feare of death al their lyfe tyme were subiecte vnto bondage. Furthermore Christe by his death hath made a ful and perfect satisfaccion to God the father for al our sinnes, and hath offered vnto hym suche a Sacrifice for al our wickednesses and trespasses, that it sufficeth without eyther any repeticion of the same, or without any other Sacrifyce to be added therevnto for all the offences that haue ben or shal be committed vnto the worldes ende, as S. Paule sayeth, with one onely oblacion hath he (Chryst) made perfect for euer them that are Sanctified Agayne. We are made holy by the offeryng of the body of Jesus Christ done once for al. Moreouer by the death of Chryst we are not onely deliuered from al our synnes, but also reconciled vnto God, receaued into his fauoure, & made hys sones and enheritoures of euerlastyng glory, as S. Paule sayeth. If we were reconciled vnto God by the death of hys sonne, when we were yet enemyes: much more shal we be saued by him, now that we are reconciled. Againe. Oure Sauioure Jesus Chryste (by his death) hath taken away the power of death, and hath brought life and immortalitie. Father. Greate are the benefites, I confesse, whiche we haue obtained by the death of Chryste, so that it is not without a cause said of the holy Apostle S. Paule, God forbyd, that I should reioyce in any thyng, but in the crosse, that is to say, the passyon and death of our Lord Jesu Chryst. But what was done with the body of Christ, after that it was crucified and dead? Sonne. It was buried. For so is the article of our fayth. He suffered vnder Ponce Pylate, was crucified, dead, and buryed. Father. Declare vnto me by the worde of God, that Chryst was buryed. Sonne. The Prophete Esaye speaketh of Chrystes buriall on thys maner. His graue shalbe geuen hym with the condemned, and his crucifying with the theues. The foure Euangelistes write that whan Chryst was once dead, Joseph of Aramathia a good iust man, which was a disciple of Jesus, and one that consēted not vnto the wycked counsaile and dede of the Jewes, but wayted for the kyngdome of God, went vnto Pylate, and besought hym, that he might take downe the body of Jesus. And Pylate gaue hym lycence. Then toke he downe the body of Jesus. There came also Nicodemus (which afore came vnto Jesus by nyght) and brought of Myrre and Aloes mynged together about an hundreth pounde weyghte. They toke the body of Chryst, and wounde it in fyne lynnen clothes, and laied it in a newe sepulchre, wherein was neuer man layed afore, hewen out of a rocke, and they rolled a great stone to the dore of the sepulchre and went their way. S. Paule also sayeth, Chryst dyed for our synnes accordyng to the Scriptures, and was buryed. Father. What doeth it profyte vs that Christ was buried? Sonne. First, in that Chryst was buryed, it doeth euidently delare vnto vs, that his passion and death wer not fantasticall, but true, certayne and vnfayned. Agayne, that as hys

Thirdly, the buryng of Christe hath brought this to passe, that our graue which before was the dongeon of hel, shuld be translated and turned into a swete, quiet and holy dormitory or resting place, in the which the godly rest, abiding the ioyful daye of their resurrection. Finally, Christ was buried, ỹ we also being dead through repentaunce, and buried with him by baptisme, should throughe grace from hence forth rise out of sinne and walke in a new life. Father. What followeth in the Crede? Sonne. He went down vnto hel. Father. Howe proouest thou that Christ went down vnto hell? Sonne. Christe himselfe by the Prophete Dauid sayeth, Thou shalt not leaue my soule in hell, neither shalt thou suffer thy holy one to see corrupcyon. S. Peter also sayeth. Christ hath once suffered for our synnes, the iuste for the vniuste for to bryng vs vnto God, and was slaine after the flesshe, but quickned after the spirite, In the which spirite he also went, and preached vnto the sprites that were in prison. &c, Father. What profite haue we by Christes descension and going down vnto hel? Sonne. By thys meanes are we wel assured, ỹ Christ hath ouercome the deuil, broken the Serpentes head, destroyed the gates of hell, vanquished the infernall army and vtterly deliuered vs from euerlastyng damnacion, as Christ himselfe saieth by the Prophete. O death, I wil be thy death. O hell, I wil be thy destruction: so that now with ioyful hartes and tryumphaunte voices we maye wel say with the Apostle, death is swalowed vp into victorye. Death, where is thy stynge? Hel, where is thy victorye? The styng of death is synne. The strength of sinne is the law. But thankes be vnto God, whiche hath geuen vs the victory throughe oure Lorde Jesus Christ. Father. Suffered Christ paines also in hell? Sonne. No thyng les. For what soeuer paynes were to be suffered for oure synnes and wickednesses, he suffered them all in hys blessed body on the altar of the crosse. He went not down vnto hell as a gyltye person to suffer, but as a baleaunt Prynce to conquere, and as a moste puissaunte and glorious kynge to tryumphe ouer hys enemyes, and to make vs also Lordes and conqueroures of Satan and of all hys infernall armye. Father. When Christ by his passion and death had wrought this moste noble worke of our redempcion, payed our raunsome, satisfyed for oure synnes, appeased gods wrath, & reconciled vs vnto hys fauoure, what did he than? Sonne. The thirde day he rose agayne from death. Father. Howe proouest thou that by the worde of God? Sonne. Long beefore the commyng of Christ into the flesshe it was prophecied not onelye that Christ should suffer and dye (as we afore haue heard) but also that he should rise agayne vnto lyfe, yea and that on the thyrde daye. By the Prophete speaketh Christ hymselfe on thys maner, He shal make vs a lyue after two dayes, and on the thirde daye he shall rayse vs vp againe, and we shal lyue before hym. into the whales bealye, and the deliueraunce of him againe vnto the lande the thirde day, a very figure of Christes death and of his resurrection: Jonas, saieth the Scripture, was in the belly of the fishe three daies and three nightes. And the Lord spake vnto the fishe, and it caste out Jonas againe vpon the dry lande. Certes Christe applieth it vnto himselfe, saying, As Jonas was in the whales belly three daies & three nightes, so shal the sonne of man be in the hart of the earth three daies and three nightes. The Prophete Dauid speakinge in the person of Christ, saieth, I laied me down and sleapt, but I rose vp againe, for the Lord sustained me. Againe my flesh shal rest in hope. For thou shalte not leaue my soule in hel, neither shalt thou suffer thy holy one to se corrupcion. But thou shalt shew vnto me the way of life, and make me ful of ioy with thy countenaunce. Christe diuerse times before his passion declared vnto his disciples, that he should rise againe on the third daye from death vnto life. Christ himselfe many times before his passion and death declared vnto his disciples, that after he was slaine, he shoulde rise againe vnto life the thirde day folowing. The Euangelistes rehearse his wordes on this maner. From that time, saieth blessed Mathewe, began Jesus to declare vnto his disciples, that he must go vnto Jerusalem, and suffer many thinges of the Elders, and of the Scribes and of the head Priestes, and be slaine, and rise againe on the third day Againe, Jesus going vp vnto Jerusalem, toke his .xii. disciples with him secretly, and said vnto them. Beholde we go vp vnto Jerusalem, & the sonne of man shalbe betraied to the chiefe Priestes and Scribes, & they shal condemne him vnto the death, and they shal deliuer hym to ỹ heathen to mocke, scourge and crucify him, and on the thirde daye he shal rise againe. The like wordes rede we in Marke and Luke. Moreouer, (as I may let passe the history of Chrystes resurrection liuely and largely described of the foure Euangelistes) the Angel of God beareth witnes of Chrystes resurrection on this maner speaking to the womẽ, which came to Chrystes sepulchre for to annoynte hys body. I knowe that ye seke Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here, but is rysen againe, as he tolde you afore. Againe. Why seke ye the liuinge with the dead? He is not here, but is rysen. Remember howe he sayed vnto you, whan he was yet in Galile, that the sonne of man must be betrayde into the handes of synfull men, and be crucifyed, and on the thirde daye rise againe. Furthermore the Apostles testify of Chrystes resurrectyon on thys wyse, God hath reysed vp agayne Jesus, whereof all we are witnesses. S. Paule also maketh many tymes mencion of Chrystes resurrectyon. In a certayne sermon, as blessed Luke wryteth, he spake these wordes: God raysed vp Jesus from the dead on the thirde daye, which was sene many dayes of them, which wente vp with hym from Galile vnto Jerusalem &c. In his Epistles he hath these sentenses and many such lyke. Jesus Chryst dyed for our synnes, and rose agayne for our iustificacion. It is Chryst, which dyed, yea rather which is risen againe. I deliuered that vnto you, whiche I receaued that Chryst died for our sinnes accordyng to the Scriptures, and that he was buryed and rose againe on the thirde day accordyng to the Scriptures. Remember that Jesus Chryst, which came of the sede of Dauid rose again from the dead. Father. These testimonies of the holy Scripture concerning Chrystes resurreccion maye seme aboundauntly for this presente to suffice. But come of, tell me, What profit haue we by Chrystes resurreccion? Sonne. Such and so great, that without it al is in vain whatsoeuer Chryst hath done for vs. For first of al by his glorious resurreccion he hath shewed him selfe a moste noble and valeaunte conqueroure of death, deuil and hell, and by this his most victorious conquest hath he, deliuered vs from the crueltie and tiranny of our enemies, I meane Death, deuil and hel, so that now we be no more captiues and bondeslaues vnto them, but sonnes and heires of God, yea and felow heyres wyth the Lorde Jesu of hys fathers kyngdome: so that we maye tryumphantly say wyth S. Paule, death, where is thy victory? Deathe, where is thy sting? The styng of death is synne, and the power of synne is the lawe. But thankes be vnto God, whych hath geuen vs the victory through our Lord Jesus Chryste. Secondly by Chrystes resurrecci on we be iustifyed and made ryghteous before God, as S. Paule sayeth. Chryst Jesus dyed for our synnes, and rose agayne for our iustifycacyon or ryghteous makyng. Thyrdly, Chryst by hys resurrectyon hath made vs certayne and sure of the resurrecyon of oure bodyes and of euerlastyng lyfe, as Chryst hymselfe sayeth, I am the resurrecyon and lyfe. He that beleueth in me, although he be dead, yet shall he lyue. And euery one that lyueth and beleueth in me, he shal not dye euerlastyngly S. Paule also sayeth, as by adam al dye, so lykewyse by Chryst al shal be made alyue. Agayne. If we beleue, that Jesus Chryst dyed, and rose agayne, euen so shal God also bryng wyth hym agayne those which are fallen a slepe by Jesus. Item, our conuersacion is in heauen, frō whēce we loke for a Sauioure euen the Lorde Jesus Chryste, whiche shall transfigure and chaunge thys our vyle body, that he maye make it like to hys own glorysous body accordyng to the power, wherewyth he is able to make al thynges subiect vnto hym selfe. Fourthly and fynally, Chryst by his glorious resurreccion hath geuen vs power through the holy gost to shake of the miserable yoke of dead workes, and ỹ bōdage of wycked and vngodly conuersacion, and to garnish our selues with al kinde of godly vertues, so that from hence forth we should walke in a newe life, and passe ouer the time of this our pilgrimage in holinesse righteousnes and trueth, doing alway that which is acceptable before the maiestie of the Lord our God, as S. Paule sayeth, We are buryed together with Chryst through baptisme into death, that as Chryst was raised vp from the dead through the glory of his father, so likewise we should walke in a newe life. Againe. If ye be risen againe together wᵗ Chryst, seke for those thynges which are aboue, where Chryst is sitting on on the right hande of God. Be careful about heauenly and not earthlye thinges. For ye are dead, and your life is hid in Christ wyth God. Whansoeuer Christ your life shal appeare then shal ye also apeare with him in glory. Mortifye therfore your earthly members. &c. Once again he sayeth. If one died for all, then wer all dead, and he dyed for all, that they which liue, should nomore from henceforth liue to themselues, but to him, which died for them and rose agayne. Father. What did Christ after his resurreccion? Sonne. After that the Lord Christe had shewed himselfe aliue certayne dayes to his disciples, declaring by diuersemost certayne argumentes that he was vnfaynedly and truly rysen agayne from death, by thys meanes shewing hymselfe to be an almighty God, and Lorde ouer synne, deuill, death and hell, he by the power of hys Godhead leauing this world, ascended into heauen visibly and corporally, yea and that in the presence of his disciples, where he now remaineth and shal remaine vnto the day of iudgement, sytting on the righte hande of God his father. For so is ỳ article of our fayth, as it foloweth in order. He ascended into heauen, and sitteth on the ryght hande of god the father almightie. Father. Proue me by the worde of God, that Christ after his resurreccion ascended and went vp into heauen. Sonne. We haue many and diuerse testimonies in the holy Scriptures of Christes ascenſyon vnto the kyngdome of hys father. Father. Let me heare.

ii. Cor, v.

Of Christes ascension.

Marke, xvi, Luke, xxiiii, Actes, i.

Sonne. That Princelike Prophete Dauid writeth of Christes ascension yea rather prophecieth on thys manner. Thou art gone vp on hye, and hast led captiuite captiue, and hast receaued giftes for men. Agayne, God is gone vp with great reioysing, yea the Lord is ascended wyth the sounde of a trompet. Blessed S. Marke writeth of Chrystes ascenſyon on this maner, after the Lord had spoken these thynges, he was taken vp into heauen, and sate down on the ryghte hande of God. S. Luke hath these wordes, Jesus led out his disciples vnto Bethania, & lifting vp his handes, he blessed them. And it came to passe that whãhe had blessed them, he departed from them, and was caryed vp into heauen. In the Chronicle of the Apostles Actes we reade thus. And whẽ Jesus had spoken these thinges, while they beheldе, he was taken vp and a cloude receaued him vp out of their syght. And while they loked stedfastly vp to heauen, as he went, beholde two men stode by them in white apparel, which also said: ye men of Galile, why stande ye gasing vp into heauen? This same Jesus, which is taken vp from you into heauen, shal so come, euen as ye haue sene hym go into heauen.

Pſal, xlviii. Pſalm, xlviii, Marke, x, Luke, xxiiii, Actes, i.

Christ in his last Sermon maketh mencion diuerse times of his ascenſyon. I go my way, sayeth he, vnto him that sente me, and none of you axeth me. Whether goest thou? But because I haue sayed suche thynges to you, your heartes are ful of sorowe. Neuertheles I tell you the trueth, it is expedient for you that I go my way. For if I go not away, that comforte coure wyll not come vnto you. &c. Agayne, I went out from the father, and came into the world, and I leaue the world again

and

and go to the father. The blessed Apostle S. Paul writeth on this maner, God hath reised vp Christ from death, and sette him on his righte hande in heauenly thinges aboue al rule, power, might and dominion and aboue al names that are named, not in this worlde onely, but also in the worlde to come, and hath put al thinges vnder his fete, and hath made him aboue al thinges the head of the congregacion, which is hys body and fulnes of him that filleth al in al. Again. He is gone vp on hie and hath led captiuite captiue, and hath geuen giftes vnto men. That he ascended, what meaneth it, but that he also descended first of al into the lowest partes of the earth? He that descended, is euen the same also that ascended vp aboue all heauens to fulfil al thinges. Item, Christ is not entered into the holy places that are made with handes, which are but figures of true thinges, but he is entered into the very heauen for to appeare now in the sight of God for vs. Father. In the Article, which thou recitedst, there is not onely contained, that Chryste ascended into heauen, but also that he sitteth on the ryght hande of God hys father This latter part of the Article would I haue proued by the holy scriptures, I meane, that Christ sitteth on the ryght hande of God. Sonne. Lyke as the Psalmograph prophecyed of the ascention of Chryste, so likewise speaketh he of Christes sitting on the ryghte hande of God on this maner. The Lord sayd vnto my Lorde, syt on my ryghte hand, tyll I make thyne enemyes thy fotestole. Chryst hymselfe sayeth, ye shal see the sonne of man syttyng on the ryght hande of power. S. Paule hath these testimonies concernyng thys matter. It is Chryst that dyed, yea rather that rose agayne, whych also is on the ryght hande of God, and maketh intercessyon for vs. If ye be rysen wyth Chryst, seke after those thynges that are aboue, where Chryst is syttyng on the ryght hande of God. Chryst in hys owne person hath clensed our synnes, and is set on the ryghte hande of the Mayestye on hye. Thys man (Chryst) after he had offered one sacrifyce for synnes, sate hym downe for euer on the ryghte hande of God, and from henceforth tarieth tyl hys foes bemade hys fotestole. S. Peter also sayeth, Jesus Chryst is on the ryghte hand of God, and is gone into heauen, Angels, power and myghte subdued, vnto hym. Father. What profyte haue we by the ascensyon of Chryste. Sonne. Great and large. Father. What is it? Sonne. Fyrst of all, in that Chryst ascended into heauen, he hath not onely subdued oure enemyes, the deuyll, the worlde, the fleshe, synne, death, hell, damnacyon. &c. gloriously triumphing ouer them for our sake, but he hath also geuen vs many noble and pretious giftes, as the holy goste, fayth, loue, hope, ioye, quietnes of conscience, pacience, long suffervng, temperaunce, goodnes mekenes, continence. &c. whych thing Dauid expresseth very aptlye in thys verse. Thou art gone vpon hie, and hast led captiuite captiue, and geuen giftes vnto men. Secondly, in that Chryst is gone vp into heauen, we are well assured, that he is gone being our head to prepare a place for vs being hys members, as he hymselfe sayeth, ye beleue in god

Thirdlye, in that Chryste is ascended into heauen, he is become oure mediatoure, Aduocate and Intercessoure, pleadeth oure cause before GOD hys father, and obtayneth al good thynges of hym aboundauntlye for vs. Chryste, sayeth Saincte Paule, is on the right hande of GOD, and maketh intercessyon for vs. If any manne synneth, saieth Saincte John, we haue an aduocate wyth the Father Jesus Chryste that ryghteousse one. And he it is that obtayneth mercye for oure sinnes, not for oure synnes onely, but also for all the worldes. Rom. viii. i. Ihon. ii.

Fourthelye, by the ascension of Chryste we haue a moste certayne and sure testimonye of oure ascensyon into the kyngdome of heauen, and that we shall there remayne for euer both bodye and soule wyth oure heade Chryste, hauynge suche ioyes as eye neuer sawe the lyke eare neuer heard the lyke, no tounge is hable to expresse the lyke, nor harte able to conceaue and thynke the lyke. And thys is it, that Chryst hath in his prayer vnto his heauenly father, O father, whom thou hast geuen me, I wil that where I am, they also be wyth me, that they may see my glorye, whiche thou gauest me. Father. But what meaneth the Scripture to remember and affyrme, that Chryste sytteth on the right hande of God the father, whan God the father hath neyther ryght nor leafte hande? Sonne. Trueth it is, that God the father, the firste person in the Godheade hath neyther hande nor fote, neyther any other corporall member, as we haue (for as Chryste sayeth, God is a Spirite, and a Spirite hath neyther flesh nor bones) therefore the Scriptures in thys behalfe are to bee vnderstande, not as the bare letter sounde, but as it maye agree with the other Scriptures. Father. What is it than to sitte on the righte hande of God? Sonne. To sit on the ryghte hande of GOD, is nothinge elles, than Chryste God and manne to bee of the same mighte and power, of the same glorye and Mayestye with God the father, to bee kynge, Lorde, ruler and gouernoure ouer all thynges both in heauen and in earth, as he hym. selfe sayeth. All power is geuen vnto me in heauen and in earth, so that the same honoure and prayse is due to Chryste God and manne, whyche is due to God hys father. Father. What doeth it profyte vs, that Chryste syttethe on the ryghte hande of God the father? Sonne. Verye muche. It certifieth vs, that we haue a kynge and a Lorde in heauen whyche hath a care for vs, loueth and tendereth vs, and defendeth vs from oure enemyes, and geueth vs all good thynges, so that we nede not feare. Esay. lxiiii. *i. What it is, to sit on the ryght hande of God.

What profit we haue by Chrystes sittinge on the right hande of God.

Deuill, worlde, flesshe, sinne, death, hell, curse, lawe, damnacion, and what so euer is contrarye or ennemie to oure healthe, commoditie and saluacion moreouer it assureth vs, that we after this oure exyle and banishemente from oure native countreye, whiche is heauen, shall also be Citesenses of that blessed kingedome, enioye the glorye of heauen, and beholde the maiestie of GOD face to face sittinge with oure heade Christe in the gloryousse palace of his father worldes without ende, noble, tryumphaunte and victoryousse conqueroures ouer all oure ennemyes, as. Saynete Paule sayeth, GOD, whiche is ryche in mercye throughe hys greate loue, where wyth he hath loued vs, euen when we were deade by synne, hath quickened vs together in Christe (for by grace are ye saued) and hath rayſed vs vp togeather, and made vs sitte together with him in heauenlye thinges throughe Christ Jesus. &c.

Ephe. ii.

Father. Remayneth there any other thynge concernynge oure Lorde and Sauyoure Christe Jesus in the Articles of the Christen fayeth? Sonne. Christe Jesus, as we haue hearde, for oure saluacyon tooke flesshe and was borne of the vndefyled and pure mayde Marye throughe the wonderfull operacion of the holy Ghoste, suffered death, rose agayne from death vnto lyfe, ascended by the power of his Godheade into heauen, where he sytteth nowe at the ryghte hande of God hys father. As he hath done all these thynges aforesaied for vs and for oure saluacyon, so lykewyse at the ende of thys wretched and transitorye worlde shall he come agayne to geue iudgemente ouer all flesshe, and to render vnto euerye one accordynge to hys dedes, rewardynge the ryghteousse wyth euerlastynge glorye, and the vnrighteousse wyth euerlastynge punishmente. For thus soundeth the Artycle, whyche folowety. From thence shall he come to iudge boeth the quicke and the dead.

Of Christes commyngon to the iudgement.

Father. Lette me heare it proued, by the holye Scriptures, that Christe shall come from heauen to iudge the quycke and the dead. Sonne. As I maye lette passe the testimonies of the olde testamente, concernyng Christes commyng vnto the iudgemente, whiche in dede are very many, Christe hym selfe describeth hys manner of commynge vnto the iudgemente on thys wyse. As the lyghtning commeth oute of the easte, and shyneth vnto the weaste, so shall the commynge of the Sonne of manne bee. Then shall all the kinreds of the earth mourne, and they shall see the sonne of manne come in the cloudes of heauen wyth power and greate glorye. And he shall sende hys Aungelles wyth the greate voyce of a trompette, and they shall gather together hys chosen from the foure wyndes, and from the one ende of the whole worlde to the other. Agayne. When the sonne of manne commeth in hys glorye, and all the holye Aungelles wyth hym, then shall he sytte on the seate of hys glorye, and beefore hym shall be gathered all nacyons. And he shall separate them one from an other, as a shepeharde deuideth the shepe from the goates. And he shall sette the shepe on the rygbte hande, and the goates on the lefte. &c. Hereto appertayneth the sayinge of Sayncte Paule. The Lorde hym selfe shall come downe from heauen wyth a shoute and the voyce of the Archaungell, and trompette of GOD. And the dead in Chryste shall aryse &c. Agayne. The daye of the LORDE shall come, euen as a i. Thes. v. theefe in the nyghte. When they shall saye, Peace and no daunger, then commeth on them soden destruccyon, as the trauaylynge of a woman with childe, and they shall not escape. i. Thes. iiii.

Nowe haue we hearde the manner of Chrystes commynge vnto the iudgemente liuelye deserybed and sette foorth. I will also rehearse a fewe sentences oute of the newe Testamente concernynge Chrystes iudgemente. Chryste hymselfe sayeth, The sonne of manne shall come in the glorye of hys Father wyth hys Aungelles, and than shall he reward euerye man accordyng to their dedes. Math. xvi.

Agayne he sayeth. The father iudgeth no manne, but hath geuen all the iudgemente to the Sonne, that all shoulde honoure the Sōne, as they honoure the Father. Chryste, sayeth Sayncte Peter in a certayne Sermon, as blessed Luke wrygbteth, commaundeth vs, that we shoulde preache to the people and testifie, that it is he, whych was appointed of GOD to bee the iudge of the quycke and the deade. And in hys Epistle he wrygbteth on thys manner. All menne shall render an accomptes vnto hym, that is to saye, Chryste, whiche shall iudge both the quicke and the deade. Sayncte Paule also sayeth, we shall all appeare beefore the iudgynge place of Chryste. Agayne, we muste all appeare beefore the iudegynge seate of Chryste, that euerye manne maye receaue hys reward accordyng vnto that, whiche hee hath done in his bodye, whyther it bee good or euyll. Hytherto apper tayneth the sayinge of the holy Apostle Judas in hys Epystle. Behold, the LORDE shall come wyth thousandes of Saynctes to geue iudgemente ouer all men. Ioh. v. Actei. x. i. Peter. iiii. Rom. xiiii. ii. Cor. v.

Father. What meanest thou by the quycke and the dead? Sonne. By the quicke I vnderstande them, whyche shall be alyue in thys worlde, when Chryste shall come vnto the iudgemente: and by the deade, suche as haue slept in the harte of the earth from the beginnyng of the worlde vnto the laste daye. What is ment by the quicke and the dead.

Father. Why, shall any lyue in thys worlde, when Chryste shall come to the iudgemente? Sonne. Yea verely. For thus wrygbteth Sayncte Paule, Beholde I shewe you a mistery. We shal not al slepe but we shall all bee chaunged, and that in a momente, in the twynckelinge of an eye at the sounde of the laste trompe. For the trompe shall blowe, and the deade shall ryse agayne incorruptible, and we all i. Cor. xv.

shall be chaunged. For thys corruptyble muste putte on incorrupcyon, and this mortall muste putte on immortalytye.

Agayne he sayeth. This saye we vnto you in the woorde of the LORDE that we whiche liue and are remaynynge in the commynge of the LORDE, shall not come yer they, whiche sleape. For the LORDE hym selfe shall descende from heauen with a shoute, and the voyce of the Archangell, and trompe of GOD. And the dead in CHRISTE shall arise fyrste: then shall we, whiche liue and remayne bee caughte vp with them also in the cloudes to mete the LORDE in the aire. And so shall we euer bee with the Lorde.

1. Thes. iiii.

Father. What profite shall the comminge of Chryste vnto the iudgemente bring vnto vs? Sonne. Thys worlde, whiche is altogether sette on wyckednesse, shall than haue an ende. The wicked and bloudy Tyrauntes of thys worlde with al the vngodly of the same, shall come vnto confusyon, theyr tyrannye and wyckednesse beeynge made open to the whole worlde. Yea, these wycked them selues shall confesse: Oh these be they whom we sometyme had in derysyon and thoughte theyr wayes to be very folishnes. The faithful and godly: shal than be wholy deliuered and made free from the tyranny of the deuyll, the worlde & the flesshe, and receaue that, whiche longe tofore they hoped and loked for, I meane, euerlastynge saluacion. They shall see God face to face, euen as he is. They shall bee cladde with the whyghte vesture of immortalite. They shall receaue the crowne of glorye. Fynally, they shall haue suche ioyes, as ye neuer sawe the lyke, eare neuer hearde the lyke, no tonge is able to expresse the lyke, nor any hearte is able to conceaue or thynke the lyke.

Father. Hytherto thou haste not altogether vnaptlye declared the two fyrste partes of the Chrysten layth, concernyng God the father and GOD the Sonne. It remayneth, that we approche vnto the thyrde parte of the Chrysten belyefe, whyche concerneth the third person in the Godheade, I meane. The holy Ghoste. What sayeth the Artycle of oure layth in thys behalfe? Sonne. I beleue in the holye ghoste. Father.

The thyrde parte of the christe faith.

Why sayest thou, I beeleue in the holye Ghoste? Sonne. When I saye, I beleue in the holy Ghoste, it is thus muche in effecte, I beleue wyth my harte, and confesse wyth my mouthe, that the holye GHOST the thyrde personne in the deitye, is equal GOD with GOD the Father and GOD the Sonne in essence, power and mayestye, of whom also as of the Father and of the Sonne one true, lyuynge, immortall, and euerlastynge GOD, I looke for all good thynges appertaynynge vnto the bodye or vnto the soule. Father. Howe prouest thou, that the holy Ghoste is God. Sonne. Because I

Of the holye ghoste.

saye no lesse, I beleue in the holy Ghoste, then, I beleue in God the father, and in Iesus Christe his only Sonne. For we maye beleue in none but in God alone. That the holy gost is God.

But I beleue in the holy Ghoste, therfore the holy Ghoste is God. Father. I woulde heare gladly this thynge proued by the woorde of God Sonne. Nothinge is more easye. In the fyrste booke of Moyses we reade on thys manner, In the beginnynge GOD made heauen and earth. And the earth was voyde and emptye, and darkenes was vppon the depe. And the spirite of God moued vppon the water here see we, that the Spirit of GOD, whiche other wyse we call the holye Ghoste was in the beginnynge at the creacion of thinges; not a Spirite than made wyth other creatures, but a Spirite from euerlastinge, procedinge from the Father and the Sonne, maker of all thinges with the Father and the Sonne, beyng also of lyke maiestye and power, as Dauid witnesseth, sayinge: The heauens were made throughe the woorde of the LORDE, and all the hooste thereof throughe the spirit of his mouth. Gene.i.

Here are the .iii. parsons in the Godheade lyuely sette foorth in the woorke of the creacion, The Lorde, The VVorde, and the Spirite. Hereof doeth it folowe, that as the LORDE, whereby is signifyed the Father, is GOD, and as the woorde, whereby is vnderstande the Sonne, is God, so likewyse is the Spirit, whyche is the holy Ghoste, God. Therefore in the creation of manne it is not in vayne sayde thus God spake, Lette vs make manne. He sayeth not, I will make manne or, Lette me make manne, but he sayeth, Lette vs, vs, vs, namely the Father, the Sonne and the holy Goste, true God, one in diuine essence, and three in parsonnes. So likewise reade we of Abraham, whiche sawe .iii. parsonnes, but woorshypped one. Agayn in a certayne psalme we reade on this maner: Whyther shall I gooe from thy Spirite? or whyther shall I flye from thy presence? If I clyme vp into heauen, thou arte there: If I gooe downe to hell, thou arte there also. &c. This sentence of the Psalmograph proueth manifestly and truely, the holy Ghoste to bee God. For none can be in all places at one tyme, but God alone. Gene.i. Gene.xviii. Psa.cxxxix.

The holye Ghoste is in all places at one tyme, therefore is the holye Goste God. The Prophete Esaye also sayeth, who hath refourmed the Spiryte of the LORDE? Or who is of his counsayle to teache hym? At whom hath he asked counsayle, to make hym vnderstande, and to learne hym the waye of iudgemente? to teache hym science, and to instructe hym in the waye of vnderstandynge? Behold all people are in comparison of hym, as a droppe to a buckette full and are counted as the leste thynge that the balaunce weygheth. &c. Esay.lxviii.

These wordes of the Prophete testify also aboundauntly that the holy goste is very God, forasmuch as he is reckoned of noman, asketh counsaile of no man, craueth vnderstanding, doctrine, knowledge &c. of no man, but hath al these thinges in hymselfe and of hym selfe, yea all these thinges flowe out of hym vnto other, as out of a most ritch and plenteous fountayne or head spryng, so that what soeuer goodnes we haue, it commeth from this spirite and holy goste, the authoure, geuer, and worker of al good thynges.. Father. Are there any testimonies of the diuinite of the holy goste contained in the newe testament? Sonne. Very many yea and those both noble and notable. Father. Rehearse one or two.

Math, iii; Marke. i. Luke. iii. Sonne. In the Baptysme of Chryst, whan the father made hym selfe open by a voice from heauen, and the sonne by takyng mans nature vpon hym, the holy goste shewed hymselfe in the lykenes of a doue, to declare, that the holy goste is of al one maiestie with the father & the sonne and yet a distinct person from them both. Oure Sauioure Chryst commaunded hys disciples to teache al nacions, and to baptise them in the name of the father, and of the sone, and of the holy goste. math, xxviii, Except the holy goste were true God, truely geuing euerlastyng saluacion, he shouldnot be ioyned in the workes of our saluacion with the father and the sonne But forasmuch as we be baptysed in the name of the holy goste, so muste it nedes folow, that he is vndoubtedly very true God. Moreouer in ỳ chronicle of the Apostles Actes we reade that the holy ghoste fylled the whole house, and sate vpon eche one of the Apostles seuerallye, so that they were al fylled with the holy goste. Actes, ii. But this thing can no creature do, I meane, be in diuerse places at once, as we reade here of the holye goste, therfore foloweth it necessarily, that he is true God, of like mighte power and maiestie with the father and the sonne. S. Iohn also saith i, Iohn, v. There are thre which beare witnes in heauen, the father, the worde, & the holy goste, and these three are one. Who seeth not also by this testymony of S. Iohn that the holy goste is very god, and of ỳ same power, might and Maiestie with the father and the sonne? Father. These testymonies may suffice for this present concernyng the diuinite of the holye goste. But come of, tel me, what doeth it profyte thee, that the holy goste is God, and that thou doest beleue in hym? What profyt the deite of the holy goste bryngeth. Sonne. So greatly, that otherwyse I cannot be saued. First in that the holy goste is God, he maketh me, which beleue in hym of a wretched vncleane creature, an holy creature. For he is called the holy goste not onely because he is holy for hymselfe and in hymselfe or that there may be a difference betwene him and the wicked and vnholy spirites, but also because he sanctifyeth and maketh the electe people of God holy, pure, and clene. For as the father hath created me, and the sonne hath redemed me, so likewyse hath the holy goste sanctified me, without who I am nothyng els but a lompe of vnholines, and a very monsture of wyckednes, as S. Paule sayeth. Rom. viii. If any man hath not the spirite of Chryst, he is not of God. And Chryst him selfe saieth. That which is borne of flesshe, is flesh, and that, whych Ioan, iii,

is borne of the spirite, is spirite. Therfore prayeth the Prophete Dauid on this maner, make me a cleane hearte (O God) and renewe a ryghte spirite within me. Caste me not awaye from thy presence, and take not thy holy spirite from me. O geue me the comfort of thy helpe agayne, & stablysh me with thy free spirite. Psalm.li.

Secondly, this holy spirite is a comfortoure vnto vs, whan soeuer eyther Satan, or the law, or the wrath of God, or synne, or the feare of euerlasting damnacion troubleth and disquieteth vs and oure weake conscience. He also encourageth vs valeauntly to resist the assaultes of Satan, studiously to mortifie the lustes of the flesshe, stoutlye to cõtẽne and despyse both the tirãny and flattery of the world, and with a good courage through the strength of fayth and innocencye of lyfe to walke before the Lord our God. Iohn.xiiii.

Thirdly, forasmuche as we of our selfe are nothing but beastelike, rude, grosse, ignorannt, and vtterly withoute knowledge of God and of his holy misteries, this holy goste is a teacher and Scholemaster vnto vs, enfourming vs of al thinges appertaining vnto our saluacion, and leading vs into al trueth necessary for oure profession, as Christ saied to hys disciples. The comfortoure that holy sprite whom the father shal sende in my name, he shal teache you all thinges and bring to your remembraunce al that euer I haue said vnto you. Again. When he, which is the spirite of trueth, shal come, he shal lede you into all trueth. i.Cor.ii. Iohn.xiiii. Iohn.xvi.

Fourthly this holy gost altereth the whole man, making him of the bonde slaue of Satan the free seruaunte of God, of the chylde of wrath the dearely beloued sonne of God, of the fier bronde of hel, the enheritor of euerlastinge glorye, as S. Paule sayeth. They that are led with the spirite of God, they are the sonnes of God. Agayne, where the spirite of the Lord is, there is liberte. Rom.viii. Gala.v.

Fiftly, he garnisheth vs with many glorious and heauenlye gyftes, which we cannot haue of our selues, as faith, hope, loue, pacience, long suffering, peace, ioy, mekenes, temperaunce, purenes, innocency, gentlenes, goodnes, mercy, liberalite. &c.

Sixtly, if at any time throughe the contemplacyon of oure owne frayleneſſe, or the consideracion of Gods highe iustice we should feare to haue accesse to the merciful throne of Gods grace, this holye spirite helpeth, comforteth, assisteth vs, yea and prayeth for vs, not onely, that but he also through his most swete and comfortable mocions encourageth oure myndes that we oure selues also haue a certayne reuerente boldnes wyth our prayers to approche vnto the glorious throne of his diuine maiestie, euen as louing children vnto their moste louing and deare father, as the Apostle sayeth. Whosoeuer are led by the spirite of God, are the sonnes of God. For ye haue not receaued the spyryte of bondage to feare any more, but ye haue receaued the spirite of adopciõ wherby we cry Abba, deare father. The same sprite certifieth our sprite that we are the children of God. If we be children, then ar we heires Rom.viii.

also, I meane, the heyres of God, and felow heires with Christ. Again, The spirite helpeth our weakenes. For we know not, what we shuld desyre as we ought, neuertheless the spirite it selfe maketh intercessiō mightely for vs with vnout speakeable gronynges. Howbeit he that searcheth the hart, knoweth what the mynde of the spirite is: for he maketh intercession for the saynctes accordyng to the pleasure of God.

Ephe.i.

To ende, if any ende may be founde in so ouerflowyng, vnsearcheable and botomles sea of all good and heauenly thinges, thys holy gost is the earnest of our enheritaunce, wherby we are assured in our hart of Gods good will towarde vs, that he loueth vs, kepeth and defendeth vs, blesseth vs with all both gostly and bodely benefytes, & hath made vs hys sonnes and heires of his most glorious kingdom. Father. Hytherto hast thou declared vnto me thy faith concerninge that true, liuing, immortall and euerlasting God, one in diuine substāce, and yet in that diuine substaunce .iii. seuerall persons, God the father, whyche made thee: God the sonne whiche redemed thee: and God the holygost which sanctifieth thee. What now remayneth? Sonne. The forth parte of the Chrysten fayth which comprehendeth foure articles. Father. Rehearse the fyrst. Sonne. I beleue that there is an holy vniuersall churche, which is the felowship or company of Saynctes. Father. But wherefore sayest thou rather, I beleue that there is one holy vniuersall church, thā on thys manner. I beleue in the holy vniuersall churche? Sonne. My fayth and my beliefe must be set and reposed in God alone, forasmuche as saluation commeth from hym alone, and not in creatures bee they neuer so holy and perfecte. For vayne is the saluation that commeth from man, yea cursed be he, that putteth his truste and confydence in man, and maketh flesche his arme. If I shoulde saye. I beleue in the holy vniuersall churche, than must I also graunt that the churche is god, and by thys meanes make foure persons in the Godhead, whiche God forbid. My beliefe is not in the body, but in the head, whiche is Christ Jesus our Lord and alone Sauioure.

What thys word church signifieth.

What meanest thou by thys worde Churche? Sonne. Nothing els than a company of people gathered together, or a congregacyon. And thys worde churche in the holy Scriptures is taken not only for the felowshippe or compayne of the good and faythfull, but also of the wicked and vnfaythful S. Paule, besyde many other places, speaking of that churche, which is the company of Saynctes, hath these wordes, Chryste loued the churche, and gaue hymselfe for it to sanctifye it, and clensed it in the fountayne of water by the worde, to make it vnto him selfe a glorious churche hauing no spotte, nor wrynckle, nor any suche thyng, but that it should be holy and without blame. Of that churche, which is the company of the wicked vngodly and vnfaithful, speaketh that Prynce like Prophete Dauid on thys manner, I hate and vtterly abhorre the churche of the malignaunte and wycked: as for the vngodly, I wyll by no meanes kepe company wyth them. Father. Why doest

Psal.xxvi.

Why the Chrysten churche is called holy.

doest thou call the churche of Chryst holy? Sonne. To discerne it from other Churches, whiche are vnholy. The Ethnickes, the Jewes, the Mahometanes, the Anabaptistes, the Arryans wyth al the rable of Heretikes & Sectaries haue their churches also, but al those churches are the Synagoges of Satan, vnpure, filthy, stinking, vile, abhominable, ful of al synne and wyckednes. The churche of Chryst alone, alone is holy pure, without spot or wrincle, as it is written, thou art all faire (O my loue) and no spot is there in the. In this churche all goodnesse is to be founde, without this churche is nothing but synne, wrath, and damnacion. Againe, the churche of Christ is called holy, not for the holines of it selfe (For what member of that churche hath not also his infirmite in this life? as it is wrytten, If we say, we haue no sinne, we deceaue our selues, and the trueth is not in vs. Item. All we offende in many thyngs) but for the holynes of Chryst the sonne of God, whyche is the head of the churche, whiche also hath geuen to his churche hys holines, innocency, righteousnes, and what soeuer good thing he hath more, himselfe beeing the fountaine of al goodnes, and hath with all these thinges clothed, decked, adourned, garnyshed and trymmed the churche as his moste deare spouse, so that nowe beeyng clothed with Christes holynes, she may right wel be called holy and without spotte or wrincle. The churche of Christ is also called holy, because it is sanctified and made holy of the holy gost, whiche gouerneth, ruleth, defendeth, and saueth her, and moueth her continually with his heauenly inspiracion vnto the feruente studye, exercyse and encrease of all vertue and godlines. Father. Why is thys churche called Catholike or vniuersal? Sonne. Because it is not bounde to one certayne place, kyngedome or Empire, but is dispersed throughout the whole world, so that in al places God hath his elect and chosen people, whiche beleue in hym, cal on his holy name, and worshyp him accordyng to hys worde, euen in spirite and trueth, accordyng to this commaundement of Chryste. Goe throughout the whole world, and preache the gospel to euery creature. Agayne, ye shalbe wytnesses of me euen vnto the furthermoste part of the world. Item. The gospel of the kyngdome shalbe preached throughout the whole world for a wytnes vnto al nacyons. Father. Why doeste thou rather saye and confesse, that there is one holy Catholyke or vniuersal church, than many churches, seyng there are in the world so many compaynes, felowships or congregacyons of the faythfull, that cal on the name of the Lord? Sonne. As there is but one head of thys holye Catholyke or vniuersal church, which is the Lord Chryst Jesus alone, so lykewise is there but one holye church, as it is wrytten, One is my doue and my dearling. She is the only beloued of her mother, and dere vnto her that bare her. When the doughters sawe her, they sayed, she was blessed. And although this holy churche in her members be dispersed and scatered abroade throughout the world, so that there be in dyuers countryes diuerse companies, that professe and confesse Chryste and wel affirme and saye, the true church of Christ to be and the faythfull people of God. Father. But what doest thou meane, by callyng the holy vniuersal church the company or felowship of Sainctes? Sonne. These wordes. The company or felowship of Sainctes or holy men, do nothing els in a maner, than declare, what the holy vniuersal church is: verely a company of Sainctes or of holy and godly disposed persons knit together by one spirite in one fayth, in one hope, in one loue, in one baptisme in one doctryne, hauing one head, which is Christe Jesus, and seruing one God, which is the father of our Lord Jesus Christ in holines and righteousnes all the dayes of their lyfe. For thys felowshyp of saintes although they be dispersed neuer so farre abrode, yea in al quarters vnder the sonne, not only in Europa, but also in India, Persia. &c. be they Jewes or gentyles, Barbarous or Scythians, haue, holde, and maintayne one baptysme, one fayth, one God and Lorde, one doctryne, and are led wyth one spirite, and make one flocke, wherof Christe Jesus is the pastoure and shepehearde And in thys companye or felowshyppe of Sainctes al thinges appertaining vnto euerlastyng saluacion are cõmon, as the fauoure of God, remission of synnes, quietnes of cõscience, the gift of the holy gost and euerlastyng lyfe, yea in this holy felowship there is such a loue and harty good wyl one towarde a other (for they are members al of one body, and therfore like affected and mynded) & there is also, as I maye so speake, a certayne communite of temporall thinges among them, as we read in the Apostles Actes of Christes churche at the beginning, so that the ryche haue not to muche, nor the poore to lyttle, but a certayne equalite is among them, no mã wanting that is of that holy felowship, but hauyng sufficient to satysfye hys necessite, such and so great care one for a nother reigneth in them, prouoked thereunto by the holy gost, which ruleth and gouerneth that holye congregacion and felowship of Saynctes. Father. I cannot disalowe that thou speakest. But as concernyng thys worde Sainct, me thynke it oughte rather to be appropriated vnto the Sainctes departed and reigning in glory with Christ, than vnto vs, whych line in this worlde and are subiect to many infirmities. Sonne. The holye Scriptures both of the olde and new testamentes doe rather ascrybe thys woorde Sainct vnto vs in thys world, whiche beleue in Christe, than vnto the godly, which are now in glory with their head Christ. And we are termed Sainctes by the holy gost in the diuine Scriptures, first to putte vs in remembraunce, that we are made Sainctes, that is to say holye, pure and blameles by the free grace of God through fayth for Christes sake, and so reco ũted iust and ryghteous before God for the righteousnes not of our selues, but of our mediatoure Christ Jesus: secondlye, that we should endeuoure our selues vnto the vttermost of our power in al our manners, lyfe and conuersacion to answere to our name, that is to say, to be Sainctes, I meane, holy, pure, blameles, good, ryghteous, mercyfull, gentle, liberall, and altogether vertuous, puttynge on house of Israel. Oh, wherfore wyl ye dye? also in an other place, it is comonly sayd, if a man putteth awaye his wyfe, and she gooth from hym, and marieth wyth another, should he resorte any more vnto her after that? Is not this field then defyled and vnclene? But as for thee, thou hast playd the harlot wyth many louers, yet turne agayne vnto me, sayth the Lord. Item, thou shrynckyng Israel, turne agayn, saith the Lord, and I wyll not turne my face from you, for I am merciful, sayeth the Lorde, and I wyll not alwaye beare displeasure againste you, &c. O ye shrynckyng children, turne agayne, sayth the Lorde, and I wyll be maryed wyth you. As I may passe ouer almost innumerable testimonies of the old testament, whych do most manifestly declare, that there is plentye of mercy & abundance of remission of sinnes, layd vp in store wyth God for all synners that repent and vnfaynedlye turne vnto theyr Lord God, to whom is it vnknowen, howe louyngly & mercifully Christ Jesus the Lord calleth vnto hym al such as are greued & heaupe loden wyth the burden of synne, and promyseth, that he wyll ease them, & gyue them reast? How ofte doth he call them that thyrst, and promyseth to gyue them of the water of lyfe freely? How oft doth he confesse that he came to call synners vnto repentaunce, and to seke vp that which was lost? What other thing do the parables of the straye shepe, of the losse grote, and of the ryotous sonne preache vnto vs, than that there is mercye in store for all penitent synners? Are not these the wordes of Christ? Verely I say vnto you, there shal be ioye in heauen before the Aungels of God ouer one sinner that repenth, more than ouer nyntye and nyne whych nede no repentaunce. What other thyng also do the histories of Matthew the Publicã, of Mary Magdalene, of Simon Peter, of Zache the Publican, of the theefe, of the incestuous Corinthian, of Paul, of Onesimus, & of such like, thã preach vnto vs, that there is grace, fauour, mercy, & remission of sinnes layde vp in store in Gods treasurehouse for all synners that repent in faithe, beyng membres of this holy vniuersall church? Therfor I may right well saye, I beleue the forgiuenesse of synnes. Father. We than are al synners. Sonne. Yea verely. For in many thynges we all offende We are all vnprofitable seruaunts. There is no difference. Al haue synned & want the glory of God. There is no man so righteous on the earth, which synneth not. Who is able to say, my heart is clene, and I am fre from synne? All our righteousnesses are as a defyled clothe. If God shuld enter into iugement wyth vs, & deale wyth vs accordyng to our desertes, no man that lyueth should be found righteous in hys syght. Father. We may than although neuer so synnefull beleue, hope & loke for remission of our synnes boldly at the hande of God, if we vnfaynedly repent & turne vnto the Lord our God. Sonne. Nothing is more true. And therfore our saiyour Christ taught vs dayly to pray on this wise: And forgyue vs our trespasses as we forgyue them that trespasse against vs. Father. Who forgeueth synnes? Sonne? God alone, as it is wrytten, no man can forgyue synnes but God alone. And God hym

The Lord sayth the Psalmographe, is full of compassion & mercy, longsuffering, & of great goodnesse He will not alway be chydinge, neither wil he kepe his anger for euer. He dealeth not with vs after our sinnes, neyther rewardeth he vs accordinge to our wickednesse. For loke howe hygh the heauen is in comparison of the earth, so great is his mercy also toward them that feare him Loke how wide the East is from the West, so farre doth he set our sinnes from vs. Yea lyke as a father pytieth his owne children, euen so is the Lord mercyfull vnto thē that feare him. His own nature, which is al together good and gracious, and hateth nothinge of all those thinges that he hath made. He hath saued me, sayth Dauid, because it was his pleasure. Agayne, freely and for none of theyr desertes shalt thou saue them, O Lorde. It lighteth not sayeth S. Paule, in any mans will or runninge, but in the mercye of God, And God him selfe sayeth, I shewe mercye, to whom it pleaseth me to shew mercy, & haue cōpassion, on whō it is my pleasure to haue cōpassion. Againe, I am he, yea I am he in dede, which putteth away thy sinnes, yea and that for mine owne sake. Item, thy destruction commeth of thy selfe, O Israell, but thy saluacion commethe onlye of me. Father. But seynge that god is not onlye gracious, but also righteous, not only a rewarder but also a reuēger, not only a sauiour but also a condēner, how cometh it to passe, that his mercy excelleth his iustice, & his iugement geueth place to grace & fauour, so that we be not punished accordinge vnto iustice, but forgeuen according vnto mercy? Sonne. Christ Jesus is ẏ derely beloued sonne of god, for whose sake god the father is wel pleased with mā. He is our peace maker. He by his bloud hath pacifyed al thinges both in heauen & earth. He hath recōciled vs vnto god his father, & set vs at one. He is the perfect fulfylling of the law to iustify euery one that beleueth. He is that lābe of God which taketh away the sinne of the world. He is that mediatour betwene god & man whiche gaue him selfe a raunsome for all menne. He is that aduocate, whiche pleadeth oure cause before God the father, and easelye obtayneth pardon and forgiuenesse of oure synnes. Cor. i. Iere. ix.

Father. Howe or by what meanes doe we obtayne & come ye this exceading greate grace, fauour & mercy concerning the remission of our synnes at the hande of God for Christes sake? Sonne. By fayth, as S. Paule sayth, Of grace are ye saued thorow faith, and that not of your selues. For it is the gifte of God, and cometh not of workes, lest anye man should boast him selfe. S. Peter also sayth, of Christ al the Prophets beare witnes, that thorow his name althey that beleue in him, shall receaue forgyuenesse of sinnes. S. Paule agreeth with this, as blessed Luke testifyeth, sayinge. Be it knowen ye men and brethren, that thorowe this man (Christ) is preached vnto you the forgiuenesse of synnes, & from all the thinges whereby ye myght not be iustifyed by the lawe of Moses, by this man (Christ) euerye one that beleueth, is iustifyed. Item, there is no difference. All haue synned, and wante the glory of God, but freely are they made ryghteous euen by his grace thorow the redemption, that is done by Christ Iesu, whom God hath set for a mercy seate thorowe fayth in his bloude, to shewe the righteousnes, which auayleth before him, in that he forgeueth the synnes, which were done before vnder the sufferance of God, which he suffered, that at his tyme he might shewe the righteousnes, which auayleth before him, that he onlye might be righteous, and the righteous maker of him, which is of the fayth of Iesu. Father. What doth it profyte thee, that thou beleuest, the forgyuenes of sinnes? Sonne. By this I am certifyed & wel assured in my conscience, that I am a member of Christes church. For none doth rightly beleue, but suche as appertayne vnto the holy cōgregacion of the Christians. Agayn, that I am partaker of all the merites of Christes passion & death. Thirdlye, that by the bloud of Christ al my sinnes are washed away & vtterly forgeuen, so that they shal neuermore be imputed vnto me, nor layd vnto my charge: not only that, but also that as al euils be taken away from me by ỹ death & bloud of christ, so lykewyse by the same are al good things gyuen vnto me, as it is wrytten, ye are washed, ye are sanctifyed, ye are made righteous by the name of the Lord Iesu, & by the spirite of our God. Father. Let this suffice for this present concerning the article of the forgiuenes of synnes. What foloweth? Sonne. I beleue the resurrection of the body. Father. What meanest thou by this? Sonne. I beleue wyth my harte, and confesse wyth my mouth, that God by hys almyghtye power at the last daye shall rayse vp from death vnto lyfe the bodyes of all menne, women and children, that haue lyued and dyed frome the tyme of Adams creation vnto the daye of Judgemente, be they good or badde, faythefull or vnfaythefull, and by whatsoeuer death they pearyshed, whyther they were consumed vnto

Those very same bodies, wherin they liued somtyme here vpon earth, shalbe restored vnto them, so that body and soule knetted together they shal al stande before the iudginge place of Christ, and there receaue their rewarde accordinge to the workes, which they haue done, be they good or bad.

Father. Let me heare it proued by the worde of God, that the bodies of the dead shal ryse agayne & be restored to lyfe at the last day. Sonne.

Iob. xix

The scriptures are plentiful in this behalfe. The holy man Job speaketh on this maner, I know & am fullye perswaded, that my redemer doth lyue, & that at the last daye I shall ryse out of the earth, & be clothed againe with my skinne, and shal se God in my flesh, whom I my selfe shall se, and myne eyes shal beholde, and none other. This hope lyeth buryed vp in my brest. The Prophet Esay sayeth, thy dead shall lyue agayne, our bodies shal ryse agayne. Awake and reioyce ye that dwell in the dust. For thy dewe is the dewe of lyfe & light. The Prophete Ezechiel sayth, the hande of the lorde came vpon me, and caried me out in the spirite of the Lorde, and let me downe in a playne fielde that lay full of bones, and he ledde me rounde about by them: and beholde, the bones that lay vpon the fielde, were very manye, and maruelous dry also, then said he vnto me: thou sonne of mã, thinckest thou these bones may lyue agayne? I answered, O Lorde God, thou knowest. And he sayd vnto me: Prophecye thou vpõ these bones, & speake vnto them: ye dry bones, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto these bones: Beholde, I wil put breathe into you that ye may lyue: I will giue you synowes, and make flesh growe vpon you, and couer you with skinne, & so giue you both that ye maye lyue, and knowe that I am the Lorde. So I Prophecyed, as he had commaunded me. And as I was Prophecyinge, their came a noyse & a great motion, so that the bones ranne euery one to another. Now when I had loked beholde, they had synowes, and flesh grewe vppon them, and aboue they were couered with skinne, but there was no breth in them. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, Prophecye thou towarde the winde: Prophecy and speake to the winde: thus sayth the Lord God: Come (O thou ayer) from the foure winds, and blowe vpon these slayne, that they may be restored to lyfe. So I Prophecyed, as he had commaunded me: Then came the breathe vnto them, and they receaued lyfe, and stode vp vppon theyr fete, a maruelous greate sorte. And a litte l after thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, I wil open your gates (O my people) and take you out of your sepulchres, and bringe you into the land of Israel againe. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde, when I open your graues, & bring you out of them. My spirite also will I put in you, and ye shal lyue.

The Prophete Daniel sayeth also, many of them that sleape in the dust of the earth, shall awake: some to euerlastinge lyfe, some to perpetuall shame and reproufe.

As I may

As I maye at the last come to the testimonies of the newe testament, are not these the wordes of our sauiour Christ vnto the Saduces, which denyed the resurrection of the deade and the immortalite of the soule? As concerninge the resurrection of the dead, haue ye not redde, what is spoken vnto you of God, whiche sayeth: I am the God Abrahã, & the God of Isaac, & the God Jacob. Nowe is not God the God of the deade, but of the lyuinge. Christ sayd vnto Martha of her brother Lazarus that was dead, thy brother shal rise again. Martha aunswered: I know we, that he shall rise agayne in the resurrection at the last daye. In another place the Lorde Christ appointing, whome we should cal vnto our table, namely the poore, the halt, the lame, the blynd, &c. sayeth, that although they be not able to make vs amendes, yet shall we be recompensed in the resurrection of the righteous. And that we shoulde not be doubtefull of the resurrection of the deade, we rede that our sauiour Christ that most mightye conquerour of sinne, deuill, death and hell raysed vp certayne that were deade vnto lyfe, as the wydowes sonne of Naim, the daughter of Jairus, and Lazarus with diuers other. We rede also that after Christus resurrection, the graues dyd open, and the bodies of manye sainctes, which slepte, arose, and came out of the graues, and came into the holye Citie, and appered to many. Blessed Luke in the Cronicle of thapostles actes wryteth, that Saint Peter raysed vp from death vnto lyfe a certayne woman named Tabitha, otherwyse called, Dorcas, agayne, that S. Paule likewyse wrought the lyke miracle vpon a certayne yong man that was dead, named Eutichus. Father. Are there no testimonies of the resurrection of the dead in the Epistles of S. Paule? Sonne. S. Paule in all his Epistles wryteth of nothinge so ofte and so largelye as of the resurrection of the dead. In his Epistle vnto the Romans he wryteth on this manner: If we be dead with christ, we beleue also ẏ we shal lyue with him. Agayne, if we be engrafte in death like vnto him, then shal we also vndoubtedly be partakers with him of the resurrection, In his fyrst Epistle to the Corinthians he wryteth this: God hath raysed vp the Lorde (Jesus) and he shal rayse vp vs also by his power. Know ye not, that your bodies are the membres of Christ? If oure bodyes be the membres of Christ, than muste they also be glorifyed with their heade Christ. In the. xv. chapter of thefore sayd Epistle, the blessed apostle doth proue the resurrectiõ of the dead with so manifest reasons & inuincible argumtẽs, that it is wonder, that the very godles Epicures shuld doubt of it: which chapter I would wish that al true Christians should diligently cõmende to memory. I wil only giue you a tast of it, & of ẏ iudge you the residue. Father. It is wel said my son. Let me hear, Sonne. If there be no resurrectiõ of the dead thẽ is Christ not rysen. If Christ be not risen, thẽ is our preachinge in vaine, & your faith also is in vaine, yea & we are foũd false witnesses of god, because we haue testified against God, ẏ he hath raised vp christ whõ he hath not raysed vp, if ẏ dead rise not againe. For if ẏ dead ryse

then is Christ also not rysen agayne. But if Christ be not rysen again, then is your fayth in vayne and ye are yet in your synnes: they also that are fallen a slepe in Christ, are perysshed. If in this lyfe onely we haue hope in Christ, then are we of al men most miserable. But now is Christ rysen from the dead, and is become the fyrste frutes of them that sleape. For by one man cometh death, and by one man the resurrection of the dead. For as they all dye in Adam, so shall they all be made alyue in Chryste. &c.

Item to the Thessalonians, we wold not brethren that ye shuld be ignorãt concernyng them whych are fallen a slepe, that ye sorow not as other doe, whych haue no hope. For if we beleue, that Jesus dyed & rose agayne, euen so them also which sleape by Jesus, shall God bryng wyth hym. For this we say vnto you in ỹ worde of the Lord, that we which liue & are remaynyng in the coming of the Lorde, shal not come er they whiche slepe. For the Lord him selfe shal come downe from heauen with a shoute and voyce of the Archangell, & with the trompe of God, & the dead in Christ shal aryse fyrst, then shall we, which lyue & remayne, be caught vp with thẽ also in the cloudes to mete the Lorde in the ayer, and so shal we euer be wyth the Lord. Wherfore comfort your selues one another wyth these wordes. Father. We haue heard testimonies concerning the resurrecion of the dead out of the holy scriptures abũdantly. Math. xxvi. Gospell of S. Matthew, where Christ describeth and setteth forth the forme and maner of hys iudgemẽt, we rede that at the last day, when he shall come in his glory, and all the holy Angels wyth hym, he shall sytte vpon the seat of his glorye: and all people shall be gathered before him. And he shal separate them one from another, as a shepeherde deuideth the shepe from the goates. And he shal set the shepe on his right hand, and the goates on his left. Then shal he say vnto them that shal be on his ryghte hande: come hyther ye blessed of my Father, inheryt ye the kingdome, which was prepared for you from the beginning of the worlde, &c. Then shal he saye vnto them also that shall be one the lefte hande: depart from me ye cursed into the euerlasting fyre, which is prepared for the deuyll and his Angelles, &c. And these shal go into euerlasting payne, but the ryghteous into euerlastynge lyfe.

Here is it euident, that all men both good and bad, faythfull & vnfaythefull, righteous and vnryghteous shal ryse agayne at the day of iudgement, and come before the high Iudge Christ, there to receaue a rewarde accordynge vnto their dedes, as Christe hym selfe sayth, behold, I come out of hande, and my reward wyth me, that I may giue to euerye one accordyng vnto hys workes. Apo.xxii. Hereto agreeth the saying of S. Paule, we mnst all appere before the iudgement seat of Christ, that euerye one maye receaue in his bodye, accordyng to that he hath done, whither it be good or bad. ij.Cor.v. Father. with what bodies shal ỳ dead ryse agayne? Sonne. Euen wyth the very same bodies, wherein sometyme they lyued in thys worlde. Father. What, mortall, corruptible, beauye, weake, sycke, diseased, &c? Sonne. Nothing les: but immortall, vncorruptible, lyght or quycke, strong, healthfull, perfecte, &c. Father. How can it be the same bodye, when it is so altered? Sonne. The very same bodye, wherein we haue liued here, shalbe restored vnto vs thorowe the myghty power of God, with all the partes and membres of the same. The alteration of the bodye shall be not in substance, but in qualite. Our bodies are now mortal & corruptible, but at the resurrection they shall be immortall & vncorruptible. Father. Declare by the worde of God, that the very same bodies, which we haue now, shalbe restored vnto vs at the daye of iudgement. Sonne. The holy man Job sayeth, I knowe and am fully persuaded, that my redemer doth lyue, and that at the laste daye I shall ryse out of the earth, and be clothed wyth my skynne, and shall se God in my flesche, whom I my selfe shal se. and myne eyes shall beholde, and none other. This hope lyeth buryed vp in my brest. These wordes are so playne, that nothyng can be spoken more playnlye S. Paule also sayeth. Iob. xix. Thys corruptible must put on vncorruption, and this mortall must put on immortalite. But when this corruptible shall put on vncorruption, & thys mortall shall put on immortalite, then shall the woorde be fulfilled, that is written: Death is swalowed vp into victorye. Death, wher is thy stynge? Hell, where is thy victorye? The stynge of death is synne. The strength of synne is the lawe. But thanckes be vnto God, whych hath geuen vs the victorye through our Lord Iesus Christ. i.Cor.xv. Esa.xxv. Ose.xiij. Heb ij.

Moreoner werede, that in tymes paste in the Aquilian & Carthagian Church, menne did vse to pronounce this article on this maner: I beleue the resurreccion euen of this body. They added to the article these wordes, Euen of this, to the entēt, that it might be playnly & euidently expressed, that none other body lyke vnto this shal be raised vp or made, but euen this verye selfe same bodye, wherein we nowe lyue, stande, spt, heare, se, walke, sleape, wake, &c. yea & whiche vseth it selfe here with the soule in all maner of good workes. Father. What doth it profyte thee, that thou doest beleue the resurrection of this bodye? Sonne. First, it putteth me in remembraunce, that in this world I am nothing els but a straunger & a pylgrim, and must away from hence, and that therefore I ought not to set my mynde vpon the thinges of this world, but rather seke after those thyngs which are aboue, where Christ sytteth on the right hande of God. Secondly, so often as I say or remember this article of the Christen faith, it beateth into my hart a certeyne reuerent feare towarde the Lorde my God, wherewith I am prouoked to beware and circumspecte, that I commyt none vnclene thinge with this my body, which beynge dead shall ones ryse againe and stande before the iudgement seate of Christ, there to rendre an accomptes euen before the whole world of al thinges that it hath done, be it good or bad, but rather so order it in al my doynges, that in this world it may be the temple of the holye ghost, and after this lyfe raigne with our head Christ in the glory of his father worldes without ende. Thyrdly, it encourageth me greatly, to suffer in this my bodye, both patiently and thankefully whatsoeuer crosse is layde vpon me for the glory of my lorde God, and for the testimonye of his truth, yea although it were very death, beyng perfectly persuaded, that this my body thus afflicted for the lordes sake shal ones agayn be restored vnto me after a more perfecte and blessed state, than I euer had it in this world, euen in all pointes lyke to the glorious body of our Lorde and sauiour Jesus Christ. Fourthly, it occasioneth me patientlye to beare the departing of my frends and of such as I most tenderly loue seynge that I am well assured in my harte by the worde of God, that they shall lyue agayne, not only in soule, which is immortall & neuer dyeth, but in bodye, although taken away by death, and resolued into earth, dust and ashes. Fyftlye and finally, it prouoketh me to be studious of good workes, alwayes attempting some good and godly dede in this my body, seyng my labour shall not be vayne, but at the resurrection of the righteous whatsoeuer good dede I haue wrought, it shal abundantly be recõpensed me both in bodye and in soule. Father.

What euerlasting lyfe.

what remayneth of the articles of the Christen fayth? Sonne. One only article, which is this: And I beleue euerlasting life. Amen. Father, what meanest thou by that? Sonne. I beleue with my harte, and confesse with my mouthe, that after this transytorye and miserable lyfe, which is rather a shadowe of a lyfe, yf not a death, both my body and soule beynge lyncked agayne together thorowe the myghty power of God, shall lyue for euer in the kingedome of God without al trouble,

Father. Declare vnto me by the worde of God that there is an euerlasting lyfe after this transitorye, frayle and shorte lyfe, which we lede in this worlde. Sonne. The Prophet Daniell sayth, Many of them that sleape in the dust of the earth, Dan.xii. shall awake: some to euerlasting lyfe, some to perpetual shame and reproufe. The wyse, suche as haue taught other, shal glyster as the shyninge of heauen: and those that haue instructed the multidude vnto godlinesse, shalbe as the starres world without ende. Esdras also hath these wordes: I saye vnto you, O ye Heathen, that heare and vnderstand: Loke for your shepeharde, he shal giue you euerlasting rest, iiij. Esd. ij. For he is nye at hande, that shal come in the ende of the world. Be redye to the rewarde of the kingedome. For the euerlasting lyght shall shyne vpon you for euermore. O receaue the gifte that is gyuen you, and be glad, geuynge thanckes vnto him, that hath called you to the heauenly kingedome. The Lorde Christe sayeth also: The ryghteous shal go into euerlasting lyfe. Agayne, God Math.xxv hath so derely loued the world, that he gaue his onlye begoten sonne, Ioan.iij. to the ende that al that beleue in him, should not perysh, but haue euerlasting lyfe. Agayn in the same chapter, he that beleueth on the sonne, hath euerlastinge lyfe. Also in another place: my shepe heare my voyce Ioan.x. and I knowe them, and they folow me, and I gyue them euerlasting lyfe. and they shal neuer peryshe, neyther shall anye man plucke them out of my hande. My father, which gaue me them, is greater then all, and no man is able to plucke them out of my fathers hande. I and the father am one.

Itē, O father, my harty desyre is, that they, whō thou hast geuen me, Ioan.xvij. may be wt me where I am, that they may se my glory, which thou hast ij. Cor.v. geuen me. The blessed Apostle S. Paule sayeth, we know surely that if our earthy house of this dwelling were destroied, we haue a buildig ordayned of God, an house not made with handes, but euerlasting in heauen. Father. Is this euerlastinge lyfe the free gyfte of God, or is it deserued by our owne good dedes? Sonne. Deserued? What deserue we of our selues or by our owne workes, but the wrath of God & euerlasting damnation, if God shoulde deale with vs according to our de- Rom.vi sertes? Euerlasting lyfe, as Paule sayeth, is the gyfte of God thorowe Luc.xij Jesus Christ our Lord. And Christ him selfe sayeth, feare not ye lyttel flocke, for it is your fathers good pleasure to gyue you a kyngedome. Ioan.x, Agayne, my shepe heare my voyce, and I knowe them, and thy folow Apoc,ij. me, and I gyue them euerlastinge lyfe. Agayne, We knowe that the ſonne of God is come, and hath geuen vs a mynde to knowe the true God, and we are in him which is true, euen in his ſonne Jeſus Chriſt. This is the true God, and euerlaſting lyfe. Father. Is this euerlaſtinge lyfe giuen of God to all men indifferentlye? I meane, ſo well to the badde as to the good, and to the vnfaythfull as to the faythfull? Sonne. Euerlaſtinge lyfe is onlye geuen to the faythfull. as for the vnfaythfull, they haue theyr porcion in that lake, whiche brenneth with fyre and brimſtone, where is wepinge gnaſhing of teth, & were the worme that gnaweth the conſciences of the dammed, ſhall neuer dye. Our Sauiour Chriſt ſayeth, as Moſes lyfted vp the ſerpent in the wildernes, ſo muſt the ſonne of man be lyfted vp, that euery one that beleueth in him, maye not periſhe, but haue euerlaſting lyfe. Agayne, verely, verelye I ſaye vnto you, whoſoeuer heareth my word, and beleueth on him that ſent me, he hath euerlaſtinge life, and cometh not into iudgement, and is remoued from death vnto lyfe. Alſo in another place, verely, verely I ſaye vnto you, he that beleueth on me, hath euerlaſtinge lyfe. Item, he that beleueth on the ſonne, hath euerlaſting lyfe. He that beleueth not on the ſonne, ſhal not ſe lyfe, but the wrath of God abydeth vpon him. Theſe aforeſayd ſcriptures with many other, doe manifeſtly declare, that euerlaſtinge lyfe is onlye layde vp in Gods treaſurehouſe for the faythful and not for the vnfaythfull, ſo that as the one ſorte, that is to ſaye, the faythfull ſhall enioye euerlaſtinge lyfe, ſo lykewyſe the other parte, I meane, the vnfaythful, ſhalbe caſt hedlong into that lacke that brenneth with fyre and brimſtone, Father. And ſhall the bodies of the faythfull enioye this euerlaſtinge lyfe, no les then the ſoules? Sonne. Both ioyned together by the mighty power of God ſhalbe partakers alyke of this euerlaſting lyfe. Father. How can that be, when the holy Apoſtle ſayeth, fleſhe and blonde can not inheryte the kingedome of God? And the Lord Chriſt ſayeth, No man goeth vp into heauen, but he that came downe from heauen, euen the ſonne of man, which is in heauen. Sonne. Truthe it is, that our bodies, as we receaued them of Adam (for that is borne of fleſhe, is fleſhe, and by nature we are al the childzen of wrath) can not inheryt the kyngdome of God For ſo are they ſynfull, mortall and corruptible. But beynge regenerate & borne anewe by the ſpirite of God and holye baptiſme, and the qualities beynge chaunged at the reſurrection of the ryghteous, I meane, corruptiõ into vncorrupciõ, & mortality into immortalitye, the very ſame bodies, where in we haue lyued, without anye alteracion of the ſubſtance, ſhal enioy the kingedome of God as S. Paule declareth in diuers places of his Epiſtles, and as we haue abundantly heard hereto fore, Father. What is this euerlaſting lyfe? Sonne. The perfecte frucioũ ſyghte & knoweledge of Gods Maieſtye in his glorious kingdome. We nowe ſe God thorowe a glaſſe in a darke ſpeaking, but then ſhal we ſee hym face to face. Father. What doth it profyte thee to beleue euerlasting lyfe? Sonne. So great lye, that without this fayth, the beliefe of all the other articles profyte me nothing at all. So ofte as I consyder this blessed, glorious, immortal & euerlasting lyfe, it maketh me to fyght valeauntly agaynst the Deuill, the worlde and the flesshe, to seke the glorye of the Lorde my God vnfaynedly, to obey his holye worde, will and commaundement, to frame my lyfe accordinge to his pleasure, to doe good to al men, yea euen to my very enemies, to beare all kynde of aduersite not only paciently but also thanckefully, in fine, to wyshe for to be losened out of this miserable and wretched bodye & to be with my Lord and sauiour Christ in the kingdome of his father, where I shall see face to face the glorious Maiestye of the Lorde my God, the father, the sonne, and the holy ghoste, and vnderstande those heauenlye Misteries and secretes, whiche I beinge cladde with this grosse, mortall, corruptible and synnefull bodye can by no meanes attayne vnto: where also I shall haue the companye of the blessed Aungels and of al the elette and chosen people of God, whiche haue lyued from the beginninge vnto the ende of the worlde, and with them reioyce in the Lorde oure God worldes without ende. Father. Wherefore doest thou at the ende of the Articles of the Christen fayth saye. Amen, Sonne. To declare, that euen from the very harte I do beleue, all those articles of the Christen fayth to be true, which I haue now rehearsed, and that whatsoeuer is contayned in them, is a moste vndoubted verite, and hath or shall come to passe vnfaynedlye, as is in them contained. And thertunto I saye ones agayne. Amen. Father. We haue now handled the two fyrst partes of the Catechisme, wherin thou hast not only satisfyed, but also ouercome my expectacio. And I thancke my Lorde God for thee (my dere childe) that he hath throwe his holy spirite in this thy tender age so graciously endewed the with the knoweledge of his holye woorde. And I beseche him for hys mercies sake to continewe his fatherly fauour toward thee, and dayly more and more to encrease the knoweledge of his blessed will in thee, that thou mayst at the last become a perfecte man in Christ, and serue the Lorde thy God in holynesse and ryghteousnes all the dayes of thy lyfe. Sonne. God giue me grace so to doe.

Of the Lawe.

What the lawe is

Father. Nowe foloweth the thirde parte of the Catechisme, which thou saydest, as I remember, is the lawe Sonne. Trueth it is. Father. Of what lawe speakest thou? Sonne. Not of mans but of Gods lawe. Father. What is this lawe of God? Sonne. It is a doctrine containing the certayne, and vnchangeable will of God, teaching what thinges are holye and pleasaunt to God, and contrariwyse what thinges are vngodly and displeasaunt vnto him: againe cõmaunding what we ought to doe, and forbidding what we ought to leaue vndone. Father. Gyue me examples of this thinge. Sonne. Amonge the preceptes, which God will haue to be done of vs, these are comprehended: Thou shalt loue the Lord thy God with all thy hart, with all thy mynde, and with all thy strengthes. Agayne. Remember that thou kepe holy the Sabboth daye. The contrarye commaundementes, I speake of such as forbid vs those thinges which we ought not to doe, are these and suche like, thou shalt haue no straunges Gods in my syght. Thou shalte not take the name of the Lorde thy God in vayne. Thou shalt not steale. &c. Father. To whom dydde God gyue his lawe? Sonne. He fyrst of all gaue it generally to all men, wrytinge it in their hartes, whereby euery man dyd knowe, when he dyd well or otherwyse, his conscience eyther commending or condemning hym for his acte: afterwarde, the Lorde oure God gaue it to the people of Israel, whan he was determined to erecte and stablishe a newe common weale amonge the Israelites, that by this meanes they myghte knowe the certien and expresse will of God, and frame their lyues accordinge to the same. Father. By whom dyd God delyuer his lawe to the people of Israell? Sonne. By his seruaunt Moses. Father. Where? Sonne. In the mounte Sinai. Father. At what tyme? Sonne. The thyrd moneth after that the people of Israell were delyuered oute of Egypt: in the yeare. 430. after the promyse made to Abraham concernynge that blessed sede: And after the floude, in the yere. 797: And from the beginninge of the worlde, in the yere. 2454. Father. After what maner was this lawe of God geuen? Sonne. With great glory, wrytten with the finger of God in two tables of stone. For whan this lawe of God should be geuen and publyshed to the people of Israell, God him selfe that myghtye Lorde came downe into the mounte Sinai with fyre, and there was hearde great thondering & much lightninge sene in the ayer. And there was a thicke cloud vpon the mount and a noyse of a trompet exceading myghty, in so muche that the people, which were in the tentes, were wonderfull afrayed, for the smoke of the mounte wente vp as the smoke of a fornace, so that the whole mounte was exceadinge terrible, and the noyse of the trompet was wonderful mightye. Father. To what ende dyd God gyue his lawe to the people of Israel? Sonne. Not onlye to the Israelites in tymes past gaue god gaue God his law (I speake not of the ceremoniall or iudicial, but of the moiall lawe) but to vs also, and to so manye as profesſe godlynes, is that law geuen, and we owe now no les obedience to it, than therefore the Iewes dyd, so that we also, whiche are called Christians, ought diligently to do, whatsoeuer is there cõmanded, & leaue vndone whatsoeuer is there forbidden. Father. I graunt. But my question is, to what ende, or for what purpose God gaue this law? Sonne. First, þ it should be vnto vs a certeyn, sure & vndoubted doctrine, openinge & declaring the euerlasting & vnchangeable will of god, wherof we may learne both howe to frame our lyfe according to the good pleasure of God, & also what workes we ought to do, wherewyth we may please God, & ferue him according to his holy will, lest we folowing our owne folyshe fantys, corrupt iudgements, blind zeales, and fleshlye good ententes, should attempt & doe those thinges, which are displeasaunt and vnacceptable to the Lorde our God, seyng it is wrytten, ye shal not doe euerye man, what semeth him good in his owne eyes. Agayne, that I cõmaund thee, do thou only to the lord. Neyther put thou any thinge thereto, nor take ought there from. Item. ye shall put nothinge to the worde, which I cõmaund you, neyther doe ought there from, that ye may kepe the cõmandementes of the Lord thy God, which I cõmand you. The holy Apostle also sayth. We are the workemanshippe of God created in Christ Iesu vnto good workes, whiche God hath prepared that we should walke in them. And for this cause hath the law of God diuers names in the holy scriptures, which tende vnto this ende. The Prophet Esay and the Psalmographe also call the law of God a wytnesse, because it testifyeth, sheweth and declareth vnto vs the good will and pleasure of God. Esay wryteth thus: If any man want light, let him loke vpon the law & witnesse. &c. Dauid sayth, the witnesse of the lord is true, & geueth wysedom euen vnto babes. Moreouer Dauid, Salomon and our Sauiour Christ calleth the lawe of God a lyght. For as the light doeth shewe to him that walketh in darckenesse, the waye perfectlye, and how he may safely walke and without ieopardye: so lyke wyse the lawe of God sheweth a Christen man, howe he ought to direct his wayes and to walke according to the wil of God neither declining on the right hãd nor on the left. And as he that walketh in darkenes, knoweth not whether he goeth, yea for wãt of light he goeth out of his way, stombleth, falleth, hurteth him selfe, & manyfoldnes casteth him self into great daũger: so in lyke maner he that walketh in the blynde darkenes & darke blyndenes of carnall reason, not hauing the light of Gods law, wherunto he may direct his fote steps, falleth into most filthy errours & heresys, embraceth Idolatry & superstition in the stede of the true worshyppinge of God, & forsakinge the alone true god, honoreth Idols & false Gods, as we may se in the kingdom of the Pope, where for lacke of ỳ light of gods word, who is able to expresse, what false religiõ, what superstitiõ, what Idolatry, what hypocrisy, what heresy, what monstruous sectes, what errours, what ked opinions, what kyndes of all abhominacions do reigne? Contrariwyse, where the light of gods word reygneth, there is an whole sea of good & godly thinges: but where the darkenes of mens tradicions beare rule, there is a world of all euils. Without this light of gods law we vtterly know not, how we ought to direct our paythwayes accordyng to the wil of god. Loke what the pillare of fyre was to the chyldren of Israel, whē thei passed through the red sea, in the night time: the very same vnto vs, which are tossed with the troublous waues of this world, is the law & word of God. The Psalmographe saieth, thy word, O lord, is a lanterne to my fete, & a light to my pathwayes. Salomō also sayth, the cōmandemēt is a lanterne, & the law a light. Dauid ones agayn saieth, the cōmandemēt of the lord is bright, & geueth light to the eyes. Hyther pertayneth the saying of our sauiour Christ: This is condemnation, that light is come into the world, & men haue loued darkenes more then light. S. Peter also sayeth, we haue a sure word of prophecy, & ye do wel, ẏ ye take hede therunto as vnto a light that shineth in a darke place, vntil ẏ day dawneth, & ẏ daistar arise in your hartes. Furthermore S. James compareth the law of god to a glasse. For as in a glasse we se, what is fayre or foule in our face: so like wyse whan we loke in the lawe of God, we easly se & perceaue, what is well or euyll in our doyinges, so that thorow we the benefyte of thys glasse, I meane the law of god, we are prouoked to amend those thinges that are amysse, whych other wyse shoulde remayne & continewe in vs vnto our damnacion. Secondly forasmuch as man of hym selfe is nothing els thā a very lompe of pryde, & sone forgetteth his vilenes, nakednes, corrupt & sinful nature, bosting hym selfe euen before god to be somwhat, when he is nothing els then mere vanite, & worthy of prayse, whē he is most worthy of euerlasting damnacion, as we may se in the parable or historye of the proude Pharisey & sinful Publican, & in dyuers other of the holye scripture: God willing to paynte, shew & set forth mā to him self, as it were in his natiue coloures, gaue vnto him his law, that by the consideracion therof, he might learne to know him selfe, his misery, weakenes, impiette, sinne, & his vnablenes to fulfil the law of god, seyng the law is spiritual, & we are carnal, as S. Paule testifyeth. By the law, sayeth he, cometh the knowledge of synne. Agayn, I knowe not synne, but by ẏ law. For I had not knowē concupiscence or lust (to be synne) except the law had said: Thou shalt not coupt or lust. But sinne toke an occasion by the meanes of the cōmaundement, & wrought in me al maner of concupiscence. For verely without the lawe, synne was dead, I ones lyued without lawe. But whē the cōmaundement came, synne reuiued, & I was dead. And the very same cōmandement, which was ordayned vnto lyfe, was found to be vnto me an occasion of deathe. For synne toke occasyon by the meanes of the cōmandemēt, & so disceaued me, & by the selfe cōmandement slew me. Wherfore the law is holy, & the cōmandemēt holy, iust & good. Was ẏ then which is good, made death vnto me? God forbid. Nay, it was synne, ẏ it might appere, how that sinne by the meanes of ẏ which is good, had wrought death in me: that sinne by the meanes of ẏ cõmandement, myght be out of measure synfull. For we knowe, that the lawe is spirituall: but I am carnall, solde vnder sinne, because I allow not that which I do. For what I wold, that do I not: but what I hate, that do I. If I do nowe that, which I would not, I graunt to the lawe that it is good. So then now, it is not I that do it, but sinne that dwelleth in me. For I know that in me (that is to say, in my flesh) dwelleth no good thinge. &c. This ende of the lawe is necessary to be knowen. For without this knowledge, we esteme of our selues, of our strengthes, of our fre will, might & power, more thẽ becometh vs: yea we thincke our selues thorowe our owne good workes & merites worthy of the fauour of God, remission of synnes, the gift of the holye ghost & euerlasting lyfe, when we be lest of al worthy of those things. But the lawe vttereth & sheweth vs vnto our selues, & maketh euidẽt, playne & opẽ before our eyes, our own wickednes, misery & wretchednes, as we may se in Adã, Heua, Cain, Dauid, Saul, Mary Magdalene, Peter. &c. Yea the lawe accuseth condemneth, killeth, & casteth vs down hedlong into hel fyre with al our workes & merites, because we do not fulfyll the lawe wyth such purite of hart, as the lawe doeth require, according to this saying of our sauiour Christ: Dyd not Moses geue you a law, & yet none of you kepeth the law? Hereto belõgeth the saying of S. Peter: Why tempte ye God, that ye wold put a yoke on the disciples neckes, which neyther our fathers, nor we were able to beare? Neither differeth the saying of Moses frõ this purpose: Cursed be euery one, that abydeth not in al thinges, which are wrytten in the boke of the law, & fulfilleth them. In cõsideracion wherof the law is called, the killing letter, the ministerie of death and damnacion, the power of sinne, &c. Thirdly God hath geuen vs his law vnto this ende, that, after we haue perfectly learned of the lawe our corrupcion, our wicked nature, our impiete, our pronite vnto synne, our slackenes vnto all goodnes, & finally, our feblenes, yea our nothing in fulfilling the holy good & righteous lawe of god, (least we beholding our damnacion for not satisfying the wil of god should despayre, & be made by this meanes enheritours of hel fyre) it should be vnto vs a scholemayster to pointe & lede vs vnto christ, which is the ende & perfecte fulfylling of the law to make righteous so many as beleue on him, that we apprehending & laying hand thorow strong fayth on his perfection & fulfilling of the lawe, might be counted ryghteous before god, and so become heires of euerlastig glory. For by this means, namely thorow faith in christ, we obtain ẏ of god, which can not be obtained of ẏ law through workes, that is to say, the fauour of god, remission of sinnes, quietnes of conscience, the gifte of the holye ghost, and in fine, euerlasting lyfe, as these scriptures folowinge do abundantly testifye.

Our sauiour christ sayeth: Thincke not that I am come to breake the law or the prophetes. No, I am not come to breake, but to fulfill. All thinges writtẽ in the law or inẏ prophetes christ hath vntoẏ vttermost fulfilled, not for him selfe, but for vs, ẏ his fulfilling shuld be recoũted our fulfilling, if we beleue on him. This witnesseth S. Paule saying:

faythe, which is in Christ Jesus. Also in another place: The law made Galat.iiij. nothing perfecte: but was an introduction of a better hope, by which hope we drawe nye vnto God. Anes agayne he sayeth. When the tyme was full come, God sent his sonne borne of a woman, and made bonde vnto the Lawe: to redeme them, whyche were vnder the lawe: that we thorowe election, might receaue the inheritaunce that belongeth vnto the naturall sonnes. Hereto appertaineth Act.xiii. parte of S. Paules sermon, which blessed Luke reciteth in his Chronicle of thapostles actes: Be it knowen vnto you (ye menne and brethren) that thorowe this man (Christ) is preached vnto you the forgenenes of synnes, and that by him al that beleue, are iustifyed from all thinges, from which ye could not be iustifyed by the lawe of Moses.

Fourthly, God ordayned his law, that it should be a byt or a bridle to restrayne the euyll and disobedient parsons from theyr euill and disobedience, and by this meanes at the lest compel them to walke in an order, and do that, which is good and righteous, if not for the loue of god, yet for the feare of punishement, as the Poet sayeth:

Oderunt peccare boni, virtutis amore.
Oderunt peccare mali, formidine pœnæ.

1. Tim.i. Of this vse or ende of the law, speaketh S. Paule, saying: We know that the lawe is good, if a man vse it lawefully, vnderstanding this, howe that the lawe is not geuen vnto a ryghteous man, but vnto the Rom.xiii vnryghteous and disobedient, to the vngodly & to synners, &c. Again, Rulers are not to be feared for good workes, but for euyl. Wilte thou be without feare of the power? Do well then: and so shalt thou be pray sed of the same. For he is the Minister of god for thy wealth. But yf thou doe euyll, then feare. for he beareth not the sword for nought, but is the minister of god to take vengeaunce on them that doe euill.
These are the principall and chiefe causes, which I haue nowe reher-sed, wherefore god hath geuen vs his lawe, as I haue learned of the holye scriptures, Faher. Howe manye commaundementes doth this lawe of god contayne? Sonne. Ten: whereof foure appertayne vnto god, teaching, what our duety is toward the lorde our god, howe we ought to serue, honour & worship him: againe, howe we oughte to call vpon, praise & glorify his holye name, & behaue our selfe in al thinges, that cõcerne the glorious maiesty of god. The other sir teach vs what our duety is toward our neighbour, & howe we ought to behaue our Exo. selues toward him both in thought, worde & dede. And for this cause god gaue this his law wryten in two tables of stone: the one contay-
The first cõ maundemẽt ning, as ye haue heard, our duety toward god: the other, toward our neyghbour, Father. Rehearse the fyrst commandement. Sonne. I am the lord thy God, which haue brought thee out of the lande of Egipt, euen out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt haue no straunge Goddes in my sight. Father. Wherfore doth god vse so solemne a no die preface in the beginning of his comandementes? Why calleth he him selfe the lorde? Why god is called the Lorde.

Sonne. The Lord is a name of great maiestye and wonderfull hyghe excellencye, which name is properly due vnto our God alone, as he sayeth by the prophete: I am the Lord, this is my name. I will giue my glorye to none other, nor my honour to grauen Images. And he calleth him selfe by this name, the Lorde, to declare and set forth vnto vs his myght, power, and authorite, which he of right hath to comaunde all creatures, of whome he alone is the creatore, that by this meanes we may diligently addresse our selues vnto the perfect accomplishement of his holy and blessed will. Father. Why doth he call him selfe, our God? Why god calleth hym self our god.

Sonne. In callinge him selfe Our God, he geueth vs to vnderstād, that he alone is a will be our hygh goodnes, cōforte, helpe, defence, health, treasure, abundance of al good thinges, heade of plenty & botomles fountayne, out of the which we may abundantly drawe, whatsoeuer is necessary either for the soule, or the body, both in this world and in the world to come, as he sayd to Abraham: I am the almightye God (or as some reade, El Shadai, that is, a God mighty in power, abundant in riches, sufficient to reward plentifully and lacking of nothing) walke before me, and be without spot. I will make my couenaunt betwene me and thee, and thy sede after thee, throughout their posteritie, that it may be an euerlasting couenaunt, so that I will be the God of thee, & of thy sede after thee. Agayne, feare not: I am thy shield, & thy exceding great reward. Gen.xvii. xv.

Father. For what cause is mention made here of the deliueraunce out of Egipte, seynge not we, which are called Christians, but the Iewes were deliuered out of Egipte that house of bondage, euen from the tyranny of that most wycked king Pharao? Of the delyuraunce out of Egipt.

Sonne. Their corporall deliueraunce was a figure of our spiritual deliuerance, manumission & fredom. For as the Israelites were deliuered frō the captiuite of the cruell Egiptians by the outstreched arme & mighty hand of that most mighty god: Euen so likewise are we, which are of the housholde of fayth, deliuered & made free from the power of the deuill & from the bondage of the world, and frō the yoke of sinne, death & damnatiō by the passion & death of ours Lord & sauiour Jesus christ, yea & that of gods mere mercy & vndeserued liberalite, which hath chosen vs a peculiare & seuerall people vnto him selfe, & geuen vs the libertie of his most dere sonnes & the felowe-shippe of euerlasting lyfe. In the preface therfore of his law, god maketh mention of the Israelites deliueraunce out of Egipt to this end, that we thereby shoulde be put in remembraunce of our delyueraunce out of the spirituall Egipt, that is to say, the tyranny of Satan & hell fyre, & by this meanes be prouoked the more earnestly to embrace the lawe of god & to frame our lyues according to the same. Exo. xiiij

Father. What doth god require of vs in this fyrst commaundement? Thou shalt haue no straunge Gods in my sight. What God requireth of vs in the first commaundement.

Sonne. Fyrst in that we are forbidden to haue anye straunge Goddes in his syght, he sygnifyeth playnlye vnto vs, that he is the one and alone true God, and that there is none other God but he alone neyther in heauen nor in earth, nor vnder the earth. Father. Howe prouest thou that by the holye scripture? Sonne. Moses sayeth, take hede, and imprynte it well in your harte, that the Lorde is God both aboue in heauen, and beneth vpon the earth, and that there is none other God. Agayn, the lord is god, & there is none other god, but he only. Itẽ, heare O Israel, the Lord our God is one lord onlye, god him selfe sayth: Se now that I, I am, & there is none other God but I. Agayne, heare, O my people, for I assure thee O Israell, if thou wilt harkẽ vnto me: There shalbe no straũge god in thee, neyther shal thou worshyp any other God, I am the lord thy God, which brought thee out of the lande of Egypt. By the Prophet Esay he sayeth also: I am, I am the Lorde, and there is none other sauiour. I am the Lorde and beſydes me there is none other God. Consider, that I am he, before whom, there was neuer any God, neyther shall there be any after me, I am only the Lorde. Agayne, I am the Lorde, and beſydes me there is no God. Hereto agreeth the sayng of S. Paule: We knowe, that there is none other God, but one. For although there be that are called Gods (as there be Goddes manye, and Lordes many) yet haue we but one God, euen that father, of whome are all thinges, and we in him, and one Lorde Jesus Christ, by whom are all thinges, and we by him. Father. Of this matter we hearde abundantly afore in the declaracion of the articles of the Christen faith. Go forth to expresse the will of God concerning the fyrst commandement, as thou begannest. Sonne. Secondly as I am commaunded here to beleue, confesse and graunte, that there is but one onlye true and euerlastinge God, so lykewyse is it required of me, that I put my fayth, hope, truste and confidence in no creature either in heauẽ or in earth, but in this one God alone, lokinge for all good thinges at his hande, be they worldlye or heauenlye, and thanckinge him for all the benefytes that I receaue whyther they appertayne vnto the bodye or vnto the soule, wyth this confessyon, that whatsoeuer I haue beynge good and godlye, I haue it altogether of his mere mercy and vndeserued liberality. For as S. Paule sayeth: What haste thou, that thou haste not receaued? If thou hast receaued it, why doest thou glory, as though thou haddest not receaued it? S. James also sayeth: Euery good gyfte and euery perfect gyfte is from aboue, and cometh downe from the father of lyghtes. Father. How prouest thou, that thy whole fayth, trust and confidence ought to depende on this God alone? Sonne. Salomon sayeth. Haue thy faythe, or put thy truste and confydence in the Lorde with all thy harte, and leane not to thyne owne wysedom. The Prophet Jeremy pronounceth that man accursed, which trusteth in man, maketh flesh his strength, and suffreth his harte to depart from the Lorde. But he calleth that man blessed, which setteth his faythe and putteth his confidence in the Lorde, dependinge wholye on him, and lokinge for all good thinges at his hande. S. Paule also sayeth, without fayth it is not not possible to please God. For he that cometh vnto God, must beleue that God is, and that he is a rewarder of them that seke him. To be shorte, oure sauiour Christ sayeth: haue your fayth and confidence in God, Father. Requireth God in this commaundement nothing elles but fayth in him? Sonne. Not onlye fayth, but also loue, whiche issueth and procedeth oute of fayth, as fruyte oute of the tree, yea and that from a pure harte, and a good conscience, and a faythe vnfayned, as S. Paule sayeth, doeth God require in this commaundement. Father. Declare that by the scriptures. Sonne. Moses sayeth: Heare O Israell, the Lorde our God is one Lorde onlye. And thou shalt loue the Lorde thy God with all thy harte, wyth all thy soule, & with all thy mygh. In the Gospel we reade, that a certayne Scribe demaunded of Christ, whiche is the chiefest commaundement of all. To whom he aunswered on this maner: Heare O Israell, the Lorde our God is one God, and thou shalt loue the Lorde thy God with all thy harte, with all thy Soule, with all thy mynde, and with all thy strengthe. And the Scribe sayd vnto him: Maister, verelye thou hast sayde rygh. For there is but one God, & there is none other besydes him. And to loue him with all thy harte, wyth all thy mynde, wyth all thy soule, and with all thy strength, is more then brent offeringes and sacrifyces. Father. What requireth God in this commaundemente besydes fayth & lone? Sonne. Feare: yea and that not seruile or thraul, but childishe and reuerent. For God is to be beleued as God: loued as a father: feared as a Lord. Father. Let me heare that proued by the scriptures. Sonne. Moses sayeth: Nowe Israell, what requireth the Lord thy God of thee, but that thou feare the Lorde thy God, & that thou walke in al his wayes, & loue him, and serue the Lorde thy God wyth all thy harte and with all thy soule, and that thou kepe the commaundementes of the Lord and his ordinances, which I commaund thee this daye, that thou mayst prosper. Salomon also sayeth: Feare the Lorde, and depart from euill: so shall thy nauell be whole, and thy bones stronge. God him selfe sayeth by the Prophete: A sonne honoureth his father, and a seruaunte his Maister. If I nowe be a father, where is my honoure? If I be the Lorde, where is my feare? Father. Requireth God in this precepte anye other thinge, besydes fayth, loue and feare? Sonne. yea. Father. What is that? Sonne. Honoure and seruice. Father. Where is that proued? Sonne. Moses sayeth: Thou shalt honour the Lorde thy God, and serue him alone. Father. What is the true honoure and seruice of God? Sonne. To honoure and serue hym according to his woorde, and to doe those workes, not which carnall reason and blynde zeale fansyeth, but which God him selfe commandeth. Of this honoure and seruice speaketh the Lorde Christ in the Gospell on this maner: The true worshyppers shall worshippe the father in spirite and trueth. For the father will haue suche to worshyppe him. God is a spirite, and they that worshippe him, must worshippe him in spyrite and trueth. Zacharye the Priest also sayeth,

haue heretofore thorowe ignorannce reputed and taken for Goddes, whan in dede they are nothinge but Idolles, yea deuils, as the Psalmograph sayeth: The Gods of the Heathen are deuils: it is the Lord, that made the heauens. We are forbidden also to vse the arte of Magyke, wytchecraft, sorcerye, charmes, incantations, conjurations. &c. To set our affiaunce and trust in any creature: to glory in our selues, blood, kinred, wysedom, strength, ryches, beautye, cunning, learning, eloquence, &c. to seke health eyther of body or soule as the geuer thereof at any creature in heauen or in earth, but only at the mighty hande of God: from whom alone cometh euery good & perfect gyfte: agayne, to receaue or set forth anye doctrine that fyghteth with the worde of God: In fine, to doe anye thing, whereby the glory of god may be obscured, or his holye religion euill reported. Father. In forbiddinge vs to haue straunge gods, why doeth God vse these wordes, In my sight? Sonne. There is nothinge hydden from the face of God, which searcheth the hartes & raynes, to whose eyes also all thinges are open & naked, therefore doth God require of vs in this precept not onlye an outwarde reuerence of the bodye, but also the inwarde honour of the mynde, yea and that a pure and faythfull mynde, vtterly estraunged from al Idolatry, superstition, hypocrisye, &c. Father. Rehearse the second commaundement. Sonne. Thou shalt make thee no grauen or kerued Image, nor lykenes at all; of anye thinge that is in heauen aboue, or in earth beneath, or in the waters vnder the earth. Thou shalt not bowe before them, nor worshyppe them. For I the Lord thy God am a strong and gelous God, punishing the wickednes of the parentes in the childre vntyll the thyrd and fourth generation of them that hate me: and shew mercye vntyll thousandes, vnto those that loue me, and kepe my commaundementes. Father. There are some writers, yea & those of no obscure fame (as I maye speake nothing of the long customed vsed in the church, which hath vtterlye lefte out this commaundement, & to supplye the nomber, hath deuyded the tenth commaundement into two, that is, into the nynt and tent, contrary to the mynd of the lawgeuer, whose wordes and the order also of the same ought by no meanes eyther to be corrupted, altered or chaunged) which thrust out of the decaloge or ten commaundementes this second commaundement, as a ceremoniall lawe seruinge for the tyme, but nowe of none effect concerninge vs Christians, to whom it is, saye they, lawefull to haue the Images of christ & of sayntes in churches priuate houses, or els where without any offence or breache of Gods commandement: and therefore to supply the number of the ten commaundementes they also deuide, as I sayde before, the tent commaondement into the nynte and tente, makinge of one, two, accordinge to the custome vsed in the Popes church. Sonne. As touchinge the custome of reciting the ten commaundementes accordinge to the appoyntement of the Byshoppe of Rome, in the which is vtterly omitted this seconde commaundement concerning the forbiddinge eyther of makinge or worshyppinge of Images, images it can not be denyed, but it is wicked & vngodly, & left out of ꝯ Pope & of his adherẽtes of a set purpose for ꝯ mayntenãs of Images in Churches brought in by the Deuill and Antechrist contrary to the worde of God: and therfore ought this custome vtterly to be broken & euery commaundement to be restored to his proper place, and so to be recited of the Christians, as it is now vsed in the beste reformed churches. And as for the suggementes, or rather opinions and fansis of certayne learned menne in this our age, whiche in this behalfe remaine still infected with the dreggs of that whore of Babilõ, I can by no meanes approue and allow them. For where as they say, that the seconde commaundement concerninge Images, is ceremoniall, and onlye serued for the people of Israell, and not for vs, so that it is lawfull for vs, to haue Images in our temples, chappels, houses, &c notwithstanding this commandement: I vtterly denye this their doctryne, and affirme it to be most wicked & vtterly estraunged from the truthe of Gods worde. For if this lawe be ceremoniall, and we set without the limites therof, then folowyth it, that as it is lawfull for vs to haue Images in our churches, so is it lawful also to reuerence, worshippe or honour them: whiche is so greate an absurdite, that I thincke, they thẽselues will not allowe it, except they be sworne chaplens to Pope Gregory the thirde, which made a lawe, that Images should not only be had in churches, as lay mens bokes, accordinge to the doctrine of Pope Gregory the first, but that they also shoulde be worshypped, and had in greater reuerence then euer they were before: and that whosoeuer were of a contrary opinion, he shoulde be excommunicate and condemned for an heretyke. For thorowe out the whole course of Gods lawe, there is not one commaundement so fortressed and confirmed with the testimonies of the holye scripture, & so urged to be obserued and kept of Gods people, as this is, concerning the not hauing or worshyppyng of Images. Therefore as the first, so lykewyse the second commaundement abydeth morall, and requireth like obediẽce. And whereas they exclude it from the nomber of the tenne commaundementes, and rathe that one tenth commaundement into two for to supply the nomber, they do most vniustly, and contrarye to the doctrine of the auncient Fathers and olde catholyke Doctors of Christes churche. For as our Catechisme declared vnto vs, Athanasius, Origenes, Chrisostomus, Gregorius Nazianzenus, Hieronimus, Ambrosius with diuers other, both of the auncient and late wryters, nomber this precept amonge the ten commaundementes, and holde, that it is a morall lawe, no les appertaynynge vnto vs Christians nowe, than it dyd in tymes past vnto the Iewes. He sayde moreouer vnto vs, that in the church of God among the Iewes in the old law, there was no Image suffered neyther of God, nor of any Saynct although who knoweth not, what a greate nomber of godlye persons there lyued before the coming of Christ, both Patriarches, Iudges, Kinges, Priestes, Leuites, Prophetes, Matrones, Virgins. &c.

Images not lawfull in the tẽples of the christiãs

He added

He added furthermore, that almost fyue hundred yeares after Christes ascention, Images could not be suffered to haue any place in the temples of the christians. He told vs also an history of a certayne holy Bysshoppe, named Epiphanius, which comminge into a churche to pray, sawe a vayle there hanging, wherin was painted the Image of Christ, or of some Saincte. So sone as he sawe it, beinge greatly offended therat, he cut the Image away, and sayde, that it is contrarye to the authorite of the holy scriptures to haue the Image of anye man in the churche of Christ. He tolde vs moreouer of one Serenus Bishop of Massilia, whiche dyd not only take away Images out of the churches thorowe out all his dioceſſe, but he also brake them on peces, and brent them. He broughte forth also vnto vs certayne lawes & decrees of moſte noble and vertuous Emperours, agayne, certayne councels, in the which it was decreed and enacted, that all Images ſhould be taken out of the churches, and burnt openly: and that frombence forth no man ſhoulde preſume to make an Image eyther of Christ or of any Sainct, nor cauſe it to be paynted on the walles of the church, where Christen men come together for to pray. He alledged vnto vs the ſentence of the great and auncient clarke Lactantius, which sayeth, that God can not be truely worſhipped in that place, where an Image is. Agayne, If your Saincte (sayeth he) if the holye mother of Christ be in heauen, why doe ye not lyft vp your eyes vnto heauen? why do ye rather loke vnto walles & vnto ſtockes, then vnto that place, where ye beleue that they are? what meane the temples, the Tabernacles, yea and to be ſhort, what meane thoſe Images? In fine. He sayd, that the vſe of Images came from the Heathen vnto vs, and alleged Euſebius with certayne other for his authors, and that therfore they ought by no meanes to be placed in the tẽples, chappels, Oratories or houſes of the Christians. Father. I can none other wyſe but prayſe thee for thy good remembrance concerninge the doctrine of your catechiſte a man both godly and learned. But the Imagemongers obiecte and ſay, that they are layemennes calenders, and are the very ſame to the lewde, ſimple and ignorant people, that bokes are to the wyſe, diſcrete and learned men. Sonne what wyſedome, knoweledge or learning can a man get of that thinge, which is a verye blocke or ſtone, & vtterly without ſenſe? Can the dumme teache to ſpeake? the blynde to ſe? the deaf to heare? the lame to goe? the dead to lyue? Can that, whiche hath no vnderſtanding, no wyſdom no learning, teache vs to vnderſtand, to be wyſe and learned? O vnprofytable ſcholemayſters. O rude teachers. O tomuch beaſtelyke enſtructours. They haue mouthes, as the Pſalmograph sayeth, and ſpeake not: eyes haue they, but they ſe not. They haue eares, and heare not: noſes haue they, but they ſmell not. They haue handes, and handle not: fete haue they, but they can not go: neyther can they ſpeake thorowe theyr throte. They are not able to wipe away the duſt from theyr faces. They haue ſcepters and ſwordes in theyr handes, but they are not able to defende them ſelues, selues. They haue candles brennyng before them, but they se none of them, neyther take they any pleasure of the light. If the house brenne ouer their heades, they are not able to flee that they maye escape the daunger of brennyng. If they fal downe to the grounde, they can not ryse vp againe. If any man slyeth them, they can not reuenge their quarell. If the wormes eate them, they fele it not. If the owles, sparowes, doues, or any other fowles or beastes fyle vpon their heades, they perceaue it not, neyther are they angrye at the matter. In fine, they be vtterly vnprofytable both to them selfe & to all other, so farre is it of, that suche ydle ydols & mummyng Mawmettes can teach vs any good thing. By the leastest earthe that euer God made, maye we learn better to know god, than by these dumme ymages, seme they neuer so glorious in the eyes of the foly she. The heauens, sayth Dauid, shewe forth the glory of God, and the very firmamente declareth hys handy worke. Hereto appertaineth the saieng of S. Paule, that which may be knowen of God, is made open to men. For God hath shewed vnto them, that the inuisible thinges of God (that is, hys euerlastynge power and Godheade) myghte be sene, while they are considered by the workes from the creation of the worlde: so that they are without excuse, inasmuch as they knewe, that there is a god, and haue not prai-sed hym as God, nor thanked hym, but became vayne in their imaginacions, and their foolish hart was blynded. Whan they counted them selues wise, they became fooles, and turned the glorye of the incorruptible God into the similitude of ỹ Image of a corruptible mã. &c. How semeth a scholemaister a dumme Idoll, a dumme Mawmet, a popish Popet, a dead Image is to teache vs any good thinge, these woordes of the Prophet declare manifestly: What profyteth a grauen Image which the workeman hath fashioned: a vayne cast Idoll, a false lyeng Image: Because the workeman hath put his trust in it, therfore maketh he dumme Images. But wo be vnto him, whiche sayeth to a blocke, Awake: and to a dumme stone, Aryse. Can suche one teach, or geue any good instructions? Beholde it is layde ouer with golde and syluer, and there is no breath in it. But the Lord in his holy temple is he, whom al the worlde shoulde feare. The Prophet Esay also sayeth, that Images are profytable for nothinge, and addeth moreouer, that the labour in makinge them is vtterly lost. Howe than can they be profytable to teache? Howe can they than be the bokes of the lewde people? the seking out of Images, sayeth the wyse man, is the beginning of whoredom, and the bringinge vp of them is the destruction of lyfe. But they were not from the beginning, neyther shall they continewe for euer. The welthy idlenes of men hath found them out vpon earth, therfore shall they come shortly to an ende. If the seking out of Images be the beginninge of whoredom, that is to saye, Idolatrye, which in the scripture is called whoredom, howe can we be taught & brought vnto God by them? If the bringing vp of thē be the destruction of lyfe, howe can they than bryng vs vnto euerlastyng saluacio? and how

And how can they edifye vs, & teache vs the waye of trueth? Dayne and vnprofytable scholemaisters are these blynde & dumme Images. Wherfore when God determined to erecte and set vp the common weale of the Israelites, he gaue them not his Image to loke vpō, that by the sight therof they might learne to knowe him and to do his will (no, he only spake to them, any similitude of him they saw not, lest by this meanes they shoulde haue gone about to make his Image and haue committed Idolatry or spiritual whoredom with the same) but he gaue them his holy worde, charging and commaunding them to heare and reade that diligently, & to wryte it vpon the gates & postes of theyr houses, that it might be alwayes before their eyes, that they might the better frame their lyues according to the same, & do that, which is pleasaunt in the syght of God. The Prophet Esay sendeth not them, that want the knowledge of God & of his holy worde vnto Idols, Images and Mawmettes, but he cōmaundeth them to make haste vnto the holye scriptures, saying: To the law and witnesse, if they speake not according vnto this, they shall not haue the morninge light. The Psalmographe calleth not them blessed, which stande all the whole day gasing and loking on Images, to se what they can pycke out & learne of thē, but he calleth them blessed & happy, whiche delight in the lawe of the Lord and exercyse them selues in the studying, reading & hearinge of that day & night. Agayne, he calleth not them blessed, which hunte & seake after Images, but thē, which searche the testimonies of the lord and seke him with their whole harte. Furthermore Christ our Lorde and Sauiour commaundeth all those, that wyll come vnto the true knowelege of him, not to beholde Images, but to searche the scriptures: saying: Searche the scriptures, for they are those, that testifye of me. He sayeth also, My shepe heare my voyce. He sayeth not: My shepe loke vppon my Image. Agayne, He that is of God, heareth the worde of God. He sayeth not, he that is of God, beholdeth the ymage of the Trinite, or of the Crucifixe. Moreouer whan the wysedom of God was determined to call al nacions of the earth vnto the knowelege of the waye of saluacion, Christ commanded not paynters and keruers to be set a worke in making Images thorowe out the world, that the people by beholdinge them maye turne from theyr Idolatry vnto the worshipping of the true God, but he sent foorth his Apostles to preache the Gospell to euerye creature, that they beleuinge might be Baptized in the name of the Father, and of the Sonne, and of the holye Ghost, and so obtayne euerlastinge saluacion. For as Sauncte Paule sayeth, fayth cometh by hearyng, but hearyng commeth by the worde of God. We are made faythfull by hearyng and beleuinge the worde of God, & not by loking and tooting vpon Images: which rather drawe menne from the true fayth of God, than allure them vnto it: so farre is it of, that they be mete Scholemaysters to leade vs vnto God. If the blessed Apostle S. John had thought Images to be profytable bokes to bringe menne vnto the knowledge eyther of God

or of them selues, he would neuer haue commaunded vs to beware & to kepe our selues from ymages. But he knewe ryght well, that nothing doeth so much plucke away the myndes of menne from the honour of the true and lyuinge God (as dayly experience teacheth, & as we haue manifestly sene vnder the kingdome of the Pope in the tyme of darkenesse, when the people went on pylgrymage vnto ymages, sought theyr saluacion of them, gilded them, costly arayed them, gaue giftes vnto them, set vp brennynge candles before them, kneled before them, made vowes vnto them, prayde vnto the, asked all good thinges of them necessary either for the body or for the soule, gaue thankes vnto them, sensed them, imputed worckinge of myracles vnto them, yea & honoured them as Gods, rather goynge for helpe vnto them with the fete of the bodye, than repayringe vnto thee alone true helpinge God with the fete of the mynde,) as these dumme and deaf Idols, & therefore he chargeth vs aboue all thinges to auoyde ymages, and by no meanes to haue any thinge to doe with them, but to flie from them as from the plague & pestilence, yea as from the deuil & from euerlasting damnacion. Let them al therfore, as the Psalmograph sayeth, be confounded, & be brought vnto vtter confusion and shame, that worship serued Idols, and glorye in theyr ymages. And let vs that feare god, cast away al suche fonde fansys and doting dreames, & gyue diligent attendaunce to the hearing, reading and preaching of Gods worde, & of that learne to know the way of saluacion: so shall we be blessed, and come to the true knowledge of that alone true God & of his sonne Iesus Christe: whiche thinge bringeth vnto vs euerlastinge lyfe, as the Lorde him selfe sayeth: This is euerlasting lyfe, euen to knowe thee thalone true God, & whom thou hast sent Iesus Christ. Father. Thou hast ryght well aunswered to the fyrst and principal obiection, which the Imagemongers make for the defense of theyr vayne Images, which doctrine they learned of Pope Gregorye the fyrst, as we haue before hearde. But they say moreouer, that Images are not only profytable bokes for the lewde people, but that they also moue the beholders of them marueilously vnto deuocion and true godlynes. Sonne. This is so vayne, as nothinge is more vayne, so false, as that, whiche is most false: so folishe, as it may worthely be counted the selfe folishenes. Can that moue vnto deuocion, whiche it selfe is without all mocion and deuocion? Can the dead corps of a captayne encourage the souldiours vnto battell? Can a fetherles Egle teache other byrdes to flye? Can a waterles whale teache other fishes to swymme vppon the dry land? Nomore cā these blockish Idols, which are vtterly without al senses, affectes & mocions, moue vs vnto deuocion, & vnto the true worshipping of God, they thē selues also being vtterly godles, & most estrāged frō al that is godly. The holy Apostle sayth, Neither he that plāteth, nor yet he that watereth, is any thing worth, but the lord god is altogether, which geueth the encrease. If neither ỳ plāter nor ỳ wateter (whereby are vnderstād ỳ preachers of gods word) profyt nothing except excepte God geueth thee encrease, that is to say, worketh wyth their preaching thorow the influence of his holy spirite (whiche thing to be true, diuers places of the holy scripture declare manifestlye) what are ymages than able to doe, which haue mouthes, and speake not: eyes, and se not: noses, and smell not: handes, and fele not: fete, and go not? Father. But God is able, saye they, to worke no les with the beholding of ymages in the hartes of men, then wyth the preachinge of his worde. Sonne. What God is able to doe, we will not dispute nowe, although I know this to be an old refuge of the papistes, & a sanctuary, vnto the which they fle in all their streightes. But let them shewe by the worde of God, that the beholding of ymages is no les an ordinarye way appointed of God to bryng men vnto the knowledge of god and vnto euerlastinge saluacion, than the preachyng of the worde is, wherof S. Paule speaketh on this maner: Fayth cometh by hearing, but hearing cometh by the worde of God. The Prophet Dauid sayeth also: I will teach the wicked thy wayes, and the vngodlye shall turne vnto thee. Agayne, The people, whom I knewe not, haue serued me: thorowe the hearynge of the eare they were obedient vnto me. And God him selfe sayeth by the Prophete: Lyke as the rayne and snowe cometh downe from heauen, and returneth not thyther agayne, but watereth the earth, maketh it fruteful and grene, that it maye gyue corne and bread vnto the sower: So the worde also that cometh out of my mouth, shall not turne agayne voyde vnto me, but shall accomplish my will, and prosper in the thinge whereto I sende it. Agayne, I wil watch diligently vpon my worde, to performe it. Moreouer S. Paule calleth the Gospel of Christ the power of God vnto saluacion for all that beleue it. And S. James sayeth, that the worde of God is of suche efficacy, strengthe, vertue, might and power, that it is able to saue the soules of so many as receaue it with meknes. Sayth not also the Lorde Jesus on this maner? Nowe are ye clene, because of the worde, which I haue spoken vnto you. Let the ymagemongers proue by the holy scriptures, that the beholding of ymages worketh this conuersion this repentaunce, this fayth, this newnes of lyfe, this saluacion, &c. in the gazers of them, that the worde of God doth in the faithfull beleuers, and we will admitte them, their doctrine and ymages, and suffer them to haue place in our churches. But this can they not do, therefore vayne are they, vayne is their doctryne, and vayne are their ymages, yea stombling blockes are they, thornes and prickes in the eyes of the simple, prouoking rather vnto abhominacion, than vnto deuocion, vnto wickednes than vnto Godlynes, vnto supersticion than vnto true Relygion, vnto hypocrisye and Idolatrye than vnto pure worshippinge and seruynge of God, as experience hath hereto-fore taughte vs. Agayne oure Sauiour Christe sayeth, I am the waye, the truthe, and the lyfe. No man cometh vnto the Father, but by me. If no manne cometh vnto the Father, but by Christe? what healpe than Images in thys behalfe? what make they vnto the further aunce of true Godlynes and true religion: Howe moue they vnto deuotion? Agayne he sayeth: No manne can come vnto me, excepte my Father drawe him. If no man can come vnto Chriſte, excepte the heauenly father draweth hym by his holy spirite what profyteth than in this behalfe the beholding of ymages? Are they of suche inwarde worckinge in the hartes of men, that they are able to conuert them vnto God, and to bring them vnto Chriſt? Yea they leade away men from Chriſt vnto vayne spectacles, from the lyuinge God vnto dumme Idols, from true religion vnto wicked superstition: so farre is it of, that they moue any man vnto godly deuocion, or deuout godlynes. It is the office of the holy Ghost to bringe vs vnto Chriſt, and not the parte of dumme Idols. The holye ghost is appointed of God to be our Scholemayster, for to leade vs into all trueth, and not vile ymages and monstruous Mawmettes. To place ymages therefore in the temples of the Chriſtians to this ende, that they shoulde be the bokes of the lewde people, or that they shuld moue vs vnto deuocion, is nothing els than to make the holy ghost, as they vse to saye, Iacke out of office, and to place a rablement of vile and abhominable ydols in the stede of Gods spirite to be the teachers and Scholemaysters of the faythfull. Pearlshe mought all those vayne Mawmettes from the face of the earth, with all suche as glorye and reioyce in them, that all the honour maye be geuen to our Lorde that lyuinge God alone, whose name be prayſed for euer. Farber. Amen But these ymagemongers haue yet another defense for their ydols, and saye, that ymages are to be placed in churches, if for nothing els, yet for the adourning, deckynge, trymmynge, beautifyenge and garnishynge of the Temples: whiche Temples otherwyse, saye they, are more lyke barnes than Churches.

Images garnish not the churches of the christiās.

Sonne I answere wyth Saincte Paule: Howe agreeth the temple of God with ymages? what concorde is there betweene Gods seruice and ydolseruyce? Can God be worthelye called vpon in that place, where so many Mawmettes stande contrarye to the commaundement of God? Can God be worshypped there in spirite and trueth, where so manye ydolles are sene, whiche haue neyther spirite nor trueth? what garnyshinge of the Churche is this, to se a sorte of Popettes standing in euerye corner of the Church, some holdinge in theyr handes a Swoorde, some a Scepter, some a spete, some a Bothers knyfe, some a gridyorne, some a payre of Pynsons, some a Speare, some an Ancker of a shyppe, some a shomakers cuttynge knyfe, some a Shepeherders Hooke, some a Crosse, some a cuppe, some a boote, some a boke, some a keye, some a Lambe, some an Ore, some a Pygge, some a Dogge some a Basket of floures, some a crossestaffe, some a triple crosse, some an arowe, some an horne, some an hauke. &c. some Bearded some vnbearded, some capped, some vncapped: some weppynge: some laughynge: some gilded, some paynted som houſed, some vnhouſed: some rotten, some woꝛme eaten: some co-ted, some cloked: some gowned, some naked: some ſenſed, some perfumed some with holy water ſpꝛinckled, some with flowꝛes & garlonds garniſhed, &c. But why doe I tary in reciting theſe vayne trifles, and tryfling vanities, wherwith the churches of the Papiſtes are ſtuffed?

I thincke verely that in the temples of the olde Paganes there was neuer founde ſo much vanitie, and ſo many childiſhe ſightes, as there be at this preſent day in thoſe churches, whiche are vnder the yoke & tyranny of that bloudy Biſhop of Rome. Theſe vayne Idols therfoꝛe do not adourne, but deformē, not polite, but pollute, not decke, but in-fecte the Temples of the Chriſtians, and make them of the churches of God, the ſynagoges of Satan: of houſes of prayer, the vyle cages of all filthye and vnclene byrdes. Foꝛ as we heard before, Lactantius that auncient and noble clarke affirmeth playnly, that God can not be truely woꝛſhypped in that place, where an Image is. The primatiue churche knewe no ſuche kynde of beautifyinge and garniſhinge theyꝛ temples: all thinges were then ſymple, playne and homelye, and altogether without ſuche vayne ſyghtes, whiche rather plucke awaye mens myndes from God, than allure them vnto the true woꝛſhipping of him. Foꝛ as God is a ſpirite, ſo will he be woꝛſhipped in ſpirite and Io. iiii trueth. The moꝛe ſimply all thinges are done in the churche of Chriſt, the better is God ſerued. Foꝛ that which before menne ſemeth to be Luc. xvi.
of great eſtimation, is before God great abhominacion. The temples of the Chriſtians are then beſt garniſhed, when the people, that are in them, be gathered together in the vnite of the holy Ghoſt with ſtrong fayth toward God & with feruent loue one towarde another to heare
the woꝛde of God, to call on the name of the Loꝛd, to thancke hym foꝛ his benefytes, to eate the ſupper of the Loꝛde, to make collections foꝛ
the pooꝛe, and to exerciſe them ſelues in ſuch woꝛkes, as are pleaſaunt to God, & profytable to the bꝛethꝛen. All other ſuperfluous deckinges and trymminges, as they be the daughters of folyſhe fanſye; ſo lykewyſe ſerue they rather the fonde deſyꝛes of carnall and ſuperſticious people, than make anye thinge at al vnto the true honoure of the Loꝛd our God: to whom alone be al gloꝛye foꝛeuer. Father. Amen. Let theſe thynges ſuffice foꝛ thys preſent concernynge the obiections of the Imagemongers foꝛ the mayntenaunce of theyꝛ Idolles in churches, and to declare that this pꝛecepte of not makinge noꝛ woꝛſhyppinge Images appertayneth no les nowe vnto vs Chriſtians, than it dyd in tymes paſte vnto the Jewes. But come of, tel me, what is the good pleaſure of God in the Seconde commaundement? Sonne God, whyche is the ſearcher of the harte, and knoweth the coꝛrupte, fꝛoward and wycked nature of man, & howe euen from his cradle he is holy ordinaunce and appointment, which willeth none otherwyse to be serued, honoured and worshypped, than he him selfe hath prescribed in his blessed law, to bridle this euil and corrupt affection of mã, and to kepe him within the limites of his godly commaundementes, that he runne not a whorehunting after straunge Idolles, but worshippe him according to his owne appointment and none otherwyse, fyrst of all in this his second commaundement, forasmuch as nothing doeth so alienate, estraunge and plucke awaye the harte of man from God and from all Godlynes, as Idolles, Mawmettes, Images and Popettes, which be made and setforth before the eyes of the simple & vnlearned people, to preache and represent vnto them the Maiesty of God, which by no meanes, can be counterfayte, seynge it selfe is both infinite and incomprehensible, and can not be fayned nor set forth, no, not so much as shadowed by the arte of man, althoughe neuer so conning either of grauing or paynting, in any corporal substãce, chargeth & streyghtlye commaundeth his people, euen so many as take him for theyr Lorde & God, that they make no grauen or kerued Image, nor the lykenes of any thing that is in heauen aboue, as the sunne, Mone, Starres, &c: or in earth beneth, as men, beastes, byrdes, worms, &c: or in the waters vnder the earth, as fishes, and whatsoeuer liueth in the waters, lest by the makinge of such thinges they should goe about after the maner of the Heathen to counterfaycte the maiestye of God, & so by beholding the same, at the last cõceaue an opinio, on godheades diuine power to be in those Images, and so fall to the worshipping of them, as we read of diuers nacions both in Gods and mans histories and by this meanes prouoke God vnto anger, which is both a gelous God, and a consuming fyre. Father. Is it not than lawfull to make an Image of God? Sonne. By no meanes. For it is playnlye forbidden of God in this second commaundement. Father. Are there no mo scriptures in the holy Bible, whiche beare witnesse of this thinge? Sonne. Yes forsoth, very manye. Father. Recite parte of them. Sonne. Moses that moste excellent Prophete of God sayeth: The Lorde spake vnto you out of the middes of the fyre. The voyce of his wordes ye hearde, neuertheles ye sawe no Image, but hearde the voyce onlye, And he declared vnto you his couenaunt, which he commaunded you to do, namely, the ten verses, and wrote them vpõ two tables of stone. And the Lord commaunded me at the same tyme, to teache you his ordinaunces and lawes, that ye might doe therafter in the lande, into the which ye goe to possesse it. Kepe well your soules therfore, for ye sawe no maner of Image in the day, when the Lorde spake vnto you out of the fyre, vpon mount Horeb, that ye destroy not your selues, and make you anye Image, that is lyke a man, or woman, or beast vpon earth, or fethered foule vnder the heauen, or worme vppon the grounde, or fyshe in the water vnder the earth, that thou lyfte not vp thyne eyes toward heauen, and se the Sunne and the Moone, and the Starres, and the whole hoost of heauen, and be deceaued, and worshyp & serue them, them, which the Lorde thy God hath created to serue all nacions vnder the whole heauen. Agayne: Take hede vnto your selues, that ye forget not the conuenaunt of the Lorde your God, and that ye make no Images of any maner of fashion, as the Lorde thy God hath commaunded. For the Lorde thy God is a consuming fyre and a gelous God. If whan ye haue begoten children, and childers children, & haue dwelt in the lande, ye marre your selues, and make you Images of any maner of fashion, and doe euill in the syght of the Lord your God to prouoke him, I call heauen and earth to recorde ouer you this day, that ye shal shortly pearysh from the land, into the whiche ye goe ouer Jordane to possesse it. Ye shal not dwell longe therin, but shall vtterly be destroyed. Also in another place: Ye shall not turne your selues vnto Images, and ye shall make you no Goddes of metall: For I am the Lorde your God. Leuit.xix. Item: Thus shall ye doe with those nacions, vnto whom the Lord your God shal sende you: ye shal ouerthrowe their altares, breake downe theyr pyllers, cut downe theyr groues, & burne theyr Images with fyre. For thou arte an holy people vnto the Lorde thy God. The hathe the Lorde thy God chosen, that thou shouldest be his owne peculiare people, from amonge all nacions that are vppon earth. Deut.vii. Agayne: These are the ordinaunces and lawes, whiche ye shall kepe, that ye doe theyr after in the lande, which the Lord God of thy fathers hath geuen thee to possesse, as long as ye lyue vpon earth. Destroy all the places, wherin the Heathen (whō ye shall conquere) haue serued theyr Gods, whether it be vpon hye Mountaynes, vpon hilles, or among grene trees. And ouerthrowe their altars, & breake downe theyr pyllers, and burne theyr groues with fyre, and hewe downe the Images of theyr Gods, and bryng the names of them to naught out of the same place. Deut.xii Ones agayne he sayeth: Cursed be he that maketh any carued Image, or molten Idolle (an abhominaciō vnto the lord, a worke of the handes of the craftes mā) & putteth it in a secret place. And all the people shall answere & say. Amen. Deut.xxvii The prophet Esay also sayeth: To whom wil ye lyken God? or what similitude will ye set vp vnto him? Shall the caruer make him a carued Image? and shall the goldesmith couer him with golde, or cast him into a fourme of syluer plates? &c. Knowe ye not this? hearde ye neuer of it? hath it not bene preached vnto you sence the beginnig? haue ye not bene enfourmed of this, sence the foundacion of the earth was layde? that he (God) sytteth vpon the circle of the world, and al the inhabitours of the worlde are in comparison of him, but as grashoppers &c. God him selfe sayth by thafore sayd Prophet: To whom nowe wil ye lyken me? And whō shall I be lyke, sayeth the holye one? Agayne, whom will ye make me lyke in fashion or Image, that I may be lyke him? which take out syluer and gold out of your purses, and weye it, and hyre a goldsmith to make a God of it, that men may knele downe and worshyppe it. Yet must he be taken on mens shoulders and borne, and set in his place, that he maye stande & not moue. Alas, that men should crye vnto him, Esa.xl. Esa.xlvi.

whiche geueth no aunſwere, and delyuereth not the man, that calleth vpon him, from his trouble. Conſyder this well, and be aſhamed. Goe into your owne ſelues (O ye runnagates) remember the thinges, whiche are paſt, ſence the beginning of the worlde, that I am God, & that there is els no God, yea and that there is nothing lyke vnto me. The Prophete Eſaye ſayeth ones agayne: All caruers of Images are but vayne, and theyr labour loſte. They muſte beare recorde them ſelues, that ſeyng they can neyther ſe nor vnderſtande, they ſhall be confounded. Who ſhould nowe make a God, or faſhion an Idoll, that is profytable for nothing? Beholde, al the felowſhip of them muſt be brought to confuſion. Let all the workemaynſters come and ſtande together from amonge men: they muſt be abaſhed, and confounded one wyth another. The ſmyth taketh yron, and tempereth it with whote coles, and faſhioneth it with hammers, and maketh it with all the ſtrength of his armes: yea, ſometyme he is faynte for verye honger, and ſo thirſtye, that he hath no more power. The carpenter (or Image caruer) taketh the timber, and ſtretcheth forth his lyne: he maketh it with ſome coloure: he plaineth it: he ruleth it, and ſquareth it, and maketh it after the Image of a man, and accordinge to the beautye of a man, that it may ſtande in a temple. Moreouer, he goeth out to hew downe Cedre trees: he bringeth home Elmes and Okes, and other tymbre of the woode: or els the fyrre trees, whiche he planted him ſelfe, and ſuche as the rayne hath ſwelled, whiche woode ſerueth for men to burne. Of this he taketh, and warmeth him ſelfe with all: he maketh a fyre of it to bake bread: and afterward maketh a God therof to honoure it, and an Idoll to knele before it. One pece he burneth in the fyre: wyth an other he rosteth fleſhe, that he maye eate roſte his bellye full: with the thyrd he warmeth him ſelfe, and ſayeth: A, ha: I am well warmed: I haue bene at the fyre. And of the reſidue, he maketh him a God, and an Idol for him ſelfe. He kneleth before it, he worſhippeth it, he prayth vnto it, and ſayeth: Delyuer me: for thou arte my God. Yet men neyther conſider nor vnderſtand, becauſe theyr eyes are ſtopped, that they can not ſe, and their hartes, that they can not perceaue. They ponder not in theyr myndes (for they haue neither knowledge nor vnderſtanding) to thincke thus: I haue brent one pece in the fyre: I haue baked bread with the coles thereof: I haue rosted fleſhe with all, and eaten it: Shal I now of ỳ reſidue make an abhominable Idol, & fall downe before a rotten pece of wood? This he doeth but loſe his labour, & his hert, which is deceaued, doeth turne him aſide: ſo ỳ none of thẽ cã haue a free cõſcience to thinck: May not I erre? Conſyder this (O Jacob & Iſrael) for ỳ art my ſeruaunt I haue made thee, ỳthou mightest ſerue me. O Iſrael, forget me not. As for thyne offences I dryue thẽ away lyke the cloudes, and thy ſynnes as the myſt. Turne the agayne vnto me, and I will delyuer thee. The Prophete Jeremy ſayeth alſo: They hewe downe a tree in the woode with the handes of the workeman, & faſhion it with the axe: they couer it ouer with golde or ſyluer: they faſten faſten it with nayles and hammers, than it moue not. It ſtandeth as ſtyffe as the palme tree: it cānot neyther ſpeake nor goe, but muſt be borne. Be not ye afrayde of ſuche: for they can doe neyther good nor euill. But there is none lyke vnto thee (O Lorde) thou arte great: and great is the name of thy power. God him ſayth by the Prophet Oſee: Of theyr ſiluer they make them molten Images, like the Idols of the heathen, and yet all is nothing, but the worke of the craftes man. &c. Therfore they ſhall be as the morninge cloude, and as the dewe that early paſſeth awaye: and lyke as duſt, that the wynde taketh awaye from the floore, and as ſmoke that goeth out of the chimney. I am the Lord thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, that thou ſhouldeſt know no God, but me only, and that thou ſhouldeſt haue no ſauior, but only me. As I maye at the laſt ceaſe to gather the teſtimonies of the olde Teſtament, which both forbid and condemne the making of ſuch Images, as plucke the myndes of men from the lyuinge God vnto dumme Mawmettes, I would wyſhe all men diligentlye to reade and remember the xiii, xiiii. xv, and. xvi. chapters of the boke of wyſdom, and the fyrſt chapter of the Prophet Baruch which lyuely paynte and ſetfoorth in their true colours theſe Images, Idols and Mawmettes, which many haue in ſo greate admiracion, with all the vanities and abhominacions of them. Father. Doth not alſo the new Teſtament iudge of Images, euen as the olde? Sonne. Yes verelye. The holye Ghoſt varieth not in his doctrine. Paule and Barnabas ſayde vnto the people: we preach vnto you, that ye ſhould turne from theſe vanities (they ſpeake of Images and of ymage ſeruice) vnto the liuinge God, which made heauen & earth, and the ſea, and al thinges that are therin. S. Peter lykewyſe ſayde to the congregacion of god: My iudgement is, that we trouble not them, whiche from among the gentiles are turned to God, but that we wrytte vnto them, that they abſtayne them ſelues from the filthynes of Images. S. John ſayth: Babes, kepe your ſelues from Images. Father. But come of, my dere childe, tell me: Is it not lawefull for the Chriſtians in no condicion to haue Images? Sonne. There be ſome, that ſo thincke, of whoſe iudgement I am not. All ſuche may worthely be reſembled to the Turkes, which, as they ſaye, take this commaundement of God ſo ſtreightlye, that they can by no meanes ſuffer anye ymage to be made, no, not in prophane and ciuile thinges. Father. Is it than lawfull in politike, ciuile, & worldly matters to haue Images? Sonne. It is not forbidden, which thing we may right wel be lerned in ỹ goſpel, where we read, that certayne men came vnto Chriſt, demaunding of him, whyther it were lawfull to paye tribute vnto Ceſar, or not. Chriſt willing them to ſhewe him a peece of the money, aſked, whoſe ymage and ſuperſcription that was, which was grauen on the coyne? And whan they ſaid, the Emperours: he aunſwered, Gyue vnto the Emperour, that which is the Emperours: and gyue vnto God, that which is Gods. We read not here, that Chriſt dydde condemne the ymage, that was grauen in the coyne, the coyne, neyther that he sayde, Cast away this money for the ymage sake: for it is vnlawfull euen in ciuile and prophane thinges to haue ymages. But to declare that the vse of ymages in prophane & worldly matters is not vnlawful, he approued the mony, not withstanding the ymage: and it is not to be doubted, but that money also, whych he commaunded Peter to take out of the fishes mouth, and to gyue it for tribute vnto the Emperours officers, was also suche money, as was than customably payde to the Emperour for tribute, hauing the Emperours ymage vppon it. Agayne, the money, whiche the disciples of Christ carped about with them for theyr releefe and for the comfort of the poore, which followed Christ, was also without all doubt of that money, which was coyned with the ymage and superscription of the Emperour. All these thinges declare manifestlys, that in politike, ciuile, prophane and worldly thinges the vse of ymages is not vnlawfull. Father. If in politike and worldlye matters, why not also in diuine and holye thinges? Sonne. In the one, is no perill, in the other, great daunger, as we haue learned to much by experience. Father. Dyd not God commaunde Moses, after that he had geuen this lawe concerning ymages, to make the brasen serpent, and to set it vp in the wildernes for the people of Israell to beholde? Sonne I graunt. Not withstanding, that was but a figuratiue ymage, seruing for the time prefiguring Christ, as we may se in the Gospell, and therfore is nowe vtterly abolished: as all figures, cloudes and shadowes of the olde testament vanished, whan Christ, whiche is the verye trueth and light, came. yea long before the coming of Christ, that noble & godly kinge Ezechias, whan he sawe the people abuse this ymage, knele vnto it, honoure it; and burne incense vnto it, he threwe it downe and vtterly destroyed it, although set vp at the commaundement of God: whiche thing he woulde neuer haue done, if he had knowen that commaundement of settinge vp the brasen serpent, to be morall (for euery moral lawe is the certeyn, vndoubted, vnchangeable and euerlastinge will of God) but beynge well assured, that it was but a ceremoniall lawe seruing for the tyme, & a figure or shadowe of a better thing to come, whā he sawe it abused, so ỳ by that meanes the glory of God was obscured, yea and that honour geuen to an ymage whiche alone is due to the liuing God, he plucked it downe, burnt it and vtterly destroyed it. For this is diligently to be noted, that no particulare commaundement taketh away the vertue of a generall or vniuersall lawe, as this lawe of ymages is in the boke of God. Father. Thou holdest than, that although it be tollerable yea and lawful in politique and worldlye thinges to haue ymages, yet in matters appertayninge vnto godlynes and relegion it is neyther tollerable nor lawfull. Sonne. Not only I, but the holy fathers also of the primatiue churche were of that opinion as we haue to fore heard. God is a spirite, and they that worshippe him must worshyp him in spirite and truth. Nowe sayeth Lactantius, God is neuer truely worshypped in that place, where an ymage is:

mage is: which thing made that holy Bishop S. Epiphanius, whan he sawe an Image in the church, to take it away, & to cut it in peces, affirming, that it is contrary to the authority of Gods worde to haue Images in the church of Christ: which thinge also made manye noble Princes & holy Bishoppes to gyue commandement, that all Images of God, of Christ of Aungels, and of sayntes shoulde be taken out of churches, and burnt openlye, and from henceforth that no Images shoulde be made and brought into suche places, as Christen men vse to resorte vnto for to pray vnto their Lorde God: if anye dyd presume to doe the contrary, he shoulde suffer such punishementes, as was appointed by the lawe for such and so grevous offendours. Father. If it be not lawful to make Images for religion sake, than is it not lawefull for vs to honour and worship them, as the custome was, & yet is, in the Popes church. Sonne No verely. For as God in this commandement sayeth, Thou shalt make thee no grauen Image. &c. so lyke wise sayeth he, Neyther shalte thou bowe downe before them, nor worshyp them. Father. Here then are we forbidden in the way of religion not only to make Images, but also to worship them. Sonne. Truth it is. Father. Declare vnto me by other scriptures also, that it is not lawful to worship Images. Sonne. God sayth by his seruaunt Moses: I am the Lorde your God: Ye shal make you no Idols, nor ymage in your land to bowe your selues therto. For I am the Lord your God. Moses also sayeth: Beware, that thou make no couenant with ỳ indwellers of the land, that thou comest into, lest thei be the cause of thy ruine in the middest of it, but their altars shalt thou ouerthrow, and breake downe theyr Gods, and roote out ther groues: For thou shalt haue none other God. For the lorde is called gelous, because he is a gelous God, lest, if thou make any agreiemẽt with the indwellers of the land, whan they goe a whoring after theyr Goddes, and do sacrifyce vnto theyr Goddes, they call thee, and thou eate of theyr sacrifyce, and lest thou take theyr daughters vnto thy sonnes to wiues, and the same go a whoringe after their Gods, and make thy sonnes to go a whoringe after their gods also. Agayne: Beware, that your harte be not deceaued, that ye goe aside, and serue other Gods, and worshyp them, and then the wrath of the Lord waxe whote vpon you, and he shutte vppe the heauen, that there come no rayne, and the earth geue not her encrease: and ye perishe shortly from the good land, which the lord hath geuen you. Item. If there vyse vp a Prophet or dreamer among you, and geue thee a token or wonder, and that token or wonder, which he spake of, come to passe, & then say: Let vs go after other gods (whome thou knowest not) & let vs serue them: Thou shalt not hearken vnto the wordes of suche a Prophet or dreamer. For the Lorde your God proueth you, to wete whether ye loue him wyth all your hart & with all your soule. For ye shal walke after the lord your God, & feare him and kepe his commaundementes, and hearken vnto his voyce, & serue him, & cleaue vnto him. As for that Prophet or dreamer he shal dye, because

Apoca.xxi. the kingedome of God: yea as S. John sayeth: they shall haue theyr parte in that lake, that burneth wyth fyre and brymstone, whiche is the second death. Besydes these sentences of the holy scripture, which vtterly condemne the honouringe and worshyppinge of Images, we haue manifest examples in the worde of God of certeyn holy menne, which dyd rather chose to suffer death, then they would serue, honour or worshyp Images. What a nomber of Prophetes and godlye men dyd that moste wicked woman Quene Iesebell kill and murder, because they would not bowe theyr knee to that foule Idoll Baal? Read Dan.iij. we not also in the boke of Daniel the Prophete, that thre young men dyd rather chose to be be put into a fyrye fornace, & there to be burnte vnto asches, than they woulde ones fall downe before the golden Image at the commaundement of kinge Nabuchodonosor? was not this theyr answere to the king? O Nabuchodonosor we ought not to consent vnto thee in this matter. For why: oure God whom we serue, is able to kepe vs from the hote burninge ouen (O kinge) and can right well delyuer vs out of thy handes. And though he will not, yet Dan.xiiij. shalt thou knowe (O king) that we will not serue thy gods nor do re-uerence to the Image, which thou hast set vp. Read we not agayne, that Daniel was commaunded of the king to worshyp a certayne Image at Babilon called Bel? But Daniel answered and sayd: I may not worshyp thinges that are made with handes, but the lyuing god, which made heauen and earth, and hath power vpon all flesche. What shall I speake of all the holy Martyrs, whiche were in the primatyue churth and many yeres after, that suffered most bitter tormentes yea and very death, because they would not bowe downe before ymages and honour them? Image seruyce is suche and so great abhominacio not only before God, but also in the sight of al good men, that we read of certeyne noble Princes, whiche coulde by no meanes abyde suche wickednes to be be vsed in their kingdomes, and therefore vtterly destroyed al those Idols, Images, popettes & Mawemettes, that plu-iiii.Re.xviii ked awaye the peoples hartes from the honour of the lyuing God vnto Imageseruice. Reade we not, that kynge Ezechias put awaye the hye places, and brake downe the pillers, and rooted oute the gro-ues, and brake the brasen serpent, whiche Moses had made? For vnto iiii.Reg.xxiii that tyme had the children of Israell burnt incence vnto it. Reade we not also that kynge Josias destroyed and vtterlye take awaye the Images and Idols, and all the abhominacions, whiche were sene in the lande of Juda and at Jerusalem: and that he commaunded al the vessels

vessels to be taken out of the temple which were made for Baal, & for the groue, & for al the hoost of heauen, & that he burnt thē without Jerusalē in the valley of Cedron, & caused the dust of thē to be caried vnto Bethel: againe, that he dyd breke down the altars, which Manasses had made in ỹ two coutts of the house of the lord, & caused the dust of thē to be cast into the broke of Cedron: & the altare at Bethel, & the hye place that Jeroboam made, whiche both he destroyed & made thē vnto dust, & burnt vp the groue, &c? Reade we not moreouer, that the wicked king Manasses, because that he walked after the abhominacions of the Heathen, builded ỹ hye places, which his father Ezechias had broken down, set vp altars, made greuous, worshipped al ỹ hoost of heauen, caused carued Images & ydols to be made & sette vp in the house of the lorde, shed much innocent bloud, & dyd that, which was euil in the sight of the lord, was takē of the hoost of the king of the Assirians, bound with chenes, & so led away preſoner vnto Babilon? wherche Manasses beyng in trouble, after that he had humbled him selfe & prayde vnto ỹ lord his god, his prayer was heard, & the lord brought him agayn to Jerusalē, euen to his kingdom, so that Manasses knew that the lord is god. Afterward put he away the straūge gods & ydols out of the house of the lord, & all the altars, which he had builded vpon the moūt of the house of the lord, & in Jerusalē, & cast thē out of the citie, &c. What shal I speake of Constantine the great, of Leo the third, of Vallens & Theodosius, of Philip, of Constantine &c. most noble, & worthy Emperours, and of Sabanus kinge of the Bulgarians, with diuers other godly princes, which al banished ydols, ymages or mawmettes out of their dominions, & would by no meanes suffer thē to be remayning in those places, where Christen mē resort & come together to pray, least the people should fall from the honour of the one & alone true liuing god, & be allured vnto the vaine worshipping of most vaine images, & so heape the wrath & vengeaunce of god vpon thē, which as all sinnes, so likewyse the sinne & abhominacion of ymageseruice most highly doth detest & abhorre? What shal I here reherse the most godly & vertuous actes of the reuerent & holy Bishops Epiphanius Bishop of Cyprus, & Sirenius Bishop of Massilia, & suche lyke, whiche by no meanes cold abyde eyther ymages or ymageseruice in theyr dioceſſe? I passe ouer the most holy & Christen councels, Agathense, Tolitane Elibertine, &c. which decreed, that al pictures or ymages shuld be had out of the churches, & that nothinge that is honoured or worshipped shuld be paynted on the church walles. All these things heretofore rehearsed do euidentlye declare, what is to be thought both of ymages made for religion sake, and also of the worshippinge and honouringe of the same. Father. Nowe my good childe, forasmuche, as in this seconde commaundemente of God, we are not onlye forbidden to make Images, but also to bowe downe to them, and to worshyppe them: tell me, what is mente or vnderstande by the bowynge downe vnto an Image? which in greke is προσκυνεῖν, & in the latin Adorare, is reuerently with the body to fall downe before it, to knele vnto it, to sette it in a place where we vse to worship God, to garnish it with costly aray and precious iewels, to kisse it, to put of our cap vnto it, and to shewe any gesture of reuerence outwardly vnto it. All these things doth God forbid to be geuen to ymages in this his second cõmaundement. Father. Yet all these thinges are done to ymages in the Popes churches. Sonne. Trueth it is. For in diuers Popish bokes we read on this maner: To al them that say this prayer folowing before the image of the Crucifixe, pitefully beholdinge the same, and deuoutly knelinge vpon their knees, are graunted as many dayes of pardon by diuers Popes of Rome, as be grauel stones in the sea, or grasses on the earth. Moreouer who knoweth not, this to be a custome in the synagoges of the Pope both on good Frydaye, as they call it, and on Easter daye in the morninge, to crepe vnto the Crosse, to knele vnto it, to kisse it, to offer giftes vnto it, &c. whyle the Priestes and the Clerkes singe on this maner: Crucem tuam adoramus domine. &c. We worshippe thy crosse O lord: which is playne and manifest ydolatry, and a worke directly against the cõmaundement of God. S. Ambrose wryteth on this maner: Helene found a title or superscription, but she worshipped the king, & not the tree: for this is an Hethenish errour, and the vanite of the vngodly but she worshypped hym, that dyd hange on the tree, wrytten in the title. &c. With what conscience than can the Papistes compel, as they do, the simple Christians to worshippe the crosse, contrarye to the doctrine both of the holy scriptures & of the auncient godly wryters? This kynde of worshippinge required the deuill at Christes hande: but he answered: Auoyde Sathan. For it is wryten: Thou shalt worshipp the lord thy God, & him alone shalt thou serue. This worship refused Simon Peter to be geuen vnto him of Cornelius the Centurion. Stand vp, sayeth he, I am a man also. This worship also refused the Angell, when John fell downe at his fete, & sayde vnto John: See that thou do it not. For I am thy felowe seruaunt, & one of thy brethren, and of them that haue the testimony of Jesus. Worship thou God. If thapostel of Christ, & the Angell of God refused to be worshipped with falling downe before them, & with knelinge vnto them: is it reason, that this worship, I meane, kneling & bowing of the body, shuld be geuẽ to dũme idols & vaine ymages? Cõfoũded & put to vtter cõfusiõ & shame, mought al they be, sayth the Psalmograph, which worship, that is to say, knele downe before grauen ymages, or do any outward reuerẽce vnto them. Father. We are not only cõmaunded of God in this his second cõmandement, that we shuld not bowe down before any ymage but also that we shuld not worship nor honour thẽ What is ment by worshipping or honouring of ymages? Sonne. As by bowing downe before an ymage is vnderstãd all outward reuerence, which with our body we giue vnto it, whyther it be by settinge it in ỳ place, where we come together to honor god, as in churches, chappels, oratories, &c. or by knelig vnto it, or puttig of our cap vnto it, or garnishig it, or kissing it. &c. so likewise by worshipping an ymage, is ment, to pray vnto it, to thinges also are done at this present day in the kingdom of the Pope.

Sonne. It is the more to be lamented. All good and godly men ought to study vnto the vttermost of their power to banishe these so great & greuous pestilences from the bounds of Christendom, that al the wortes of the Apostles we reade, that whan the men of Listra with Ju- Act. xiiij

fyce to Paul & Barnabas, because of the miracle that Paul wrought among them, in healing a man, whiche was impotent of his fete, and a creple euen from his mothers wombe, and cryed out with a loude voyce, saying: The gods are become lyke vnto men, & are come down vnto vs: callinge Barnabas Jupiter, and Paule Mercurius, because he was the preacher: the apostles rent their clothes, and ranne in amõg
the people, crying and saying: Ye men, why doe ye this? we are mortall men also lyke vnto you, and preache vnto you the Gospell, that ye should turne from these vayne thinges vnto the lyuinge God, whiche made heauen and earth, and the sea, and all that therein is. If the apostels of Christ refused to be honoured, to haue gyftes & sacrifices offered vnto them. &c: is it then semely, that such honour should be geuen to dumme ymages, ydols and maumettes. Neyther outwarde worship nor inward honour ought to be geuen vnto such vanities.
Blessed is that man, sayeth the Psalmographe, whose hope, affiaunce psal. xl

these vanities and folish fonde fantasies. These Image mongers may iustly be resembled to the Priestes of Baal, which called on the name iii. Reg. xviii of Baal from the morning vnto the noone day, & yet were not heard.
So lykewyse these new Baalites & ydolaters, though they cry neuer haue we heard, what the good will and pleasure of God is in this his second cõmaundemente, concerninge Images. Go forthnowe, & declare vnto me that, which foloweth in this precept. Sonne. The words that folowe are these: For I the Lord thy God am a strong and a gelous God, punishing the wickednes of the Parentes in the children vnty ll the thyrd and fourth generacion of them that hate me: and shewe mercy vnreache & compasse of mans wytte or reason, that it can by no meanes be expressed or set forth by any similitude, lykenes or ymage, that man can deuyse. For seyng that heauen & earth, and all that euer is conteyned in thē, can not represent God, much les are vile & vayne ymages able to doe this, which are made with mans hand, & haue neither life nor mouing, nor any thing at all, that is like our most strong & mighty God, as both Esay & Baruch do right wel testifie. He is also called a strong God, to declare that he is of sufficiēt might & power to helpe and to defend all those, that put theyr trust in him, wyth whatsoeuer kynde of aduersite they be assayled: & that as he is able, so likewyse he wil al way be present with his sauinge healthy vnto al suche as vnfaynedly cleaue vnto him, refusing vtterly all false Gods, ydols, ymages, mawmettes, popettes, &c. and seking theyr health & saluation both of body & of soule at his mercifull hande only & alone. Father. But why doth he call him selfe a gelous God? Sonne. To declare, that he by no meanes can abyde, that that glory, which is due from vs to him alone should be geuen to any creature although neuer so excellent, eyther in heauen or in earth, muche les to vayne ymages, dumme ydols, monstruous mawmettes & popish popettes: no, nor any part of that glory, as he sayeth by the Prophet: I am the Lord, this is my name. I wyll gyue my glory to none other, nor my honour to grauen ymages. As of God we receaue all good thinges appertayninge eyther vnto the body or vnto the soule: so lykewise owe we vnto God alone al our faith, loue, feare, seruice, honour, glorye, prayse, &c. as Moses sayeth. Thou shalt honour the lord thy God, & serue him alone. And as a true wedded husband, that loueth his wyfe derely, tendereth her aboue al creatures, resteth in her loue onlye, reioyseth and delighteth in her alone, cherisheth her, & maketh sufficiēt prouision for her in all things, so that at his hande she hath abundantly al good thinges, yea and that without any lacke, can not abyde, that his wyfe should gyue her loue, or any part of her loue to anye other man, but to him alone: so in lyke maner can not God suffer, which hath taken vs to his spouse, and maryed vs vnto him in fayth, that we should set our loue vpon any other, but vpō hym alone, of whom we receaue all good thinges necessarye both for body & soule: or that we should giue the glory and prayse of our saluation to any but to him alone. Therfore to declare how impacient he is of any Riuale or Paramoure, and how vehement his loue is toward vs, and howe feruentlye agayne he requireth of vs to be loued, he cōpareth hym selfe to a gelous louer or husbande, and vs to a wyfe: signifyinge by this comparison howe pure, chaste, and vnspotted, yea & vtterlye estraunged from all other creatures oure loue toward God ought to be. This perceaued the Psalmograph right well, whan he sayd: Thou destroyest all thē, that runne a whorehunting from thee. But it is good for me to cleaue harde to God, & to put my trust in the lord God. Father. What is it to run a whorehūting frō god. Sonne. To forsake ỳ lord our god & to folow creatures: to plucke our fayth & loue from from god, & to gyue it vnto straunge Gods, to seke health & saluacion, remission of sinnes & euerlasting lyfe at the hande of any eyther in heauen or in earth, sauing only at the hande of the lord our God, which alone is the author, beginner & finisher of our saluacion. And to plucke vs away from this whorehunting & spiritual whordom, which is nothinge els, than Idolatry or ymage seruice, he doeth not only call him selfe a gelous God, but he also addeth, that he will punish the wickednes of the parentes in the children vntil the third & fourth generacion of them that hate him. Father. What wickednes is that, whiche God will so extremly punishe? Sonne. Euery sinne is wirkednes. God will by no meanes suffer the transgression & breaking of his holy cõmaundements vnpunished: as ie is wrytten Woo be vnto them that sinne, & kepe not my cõmandementes, sayth the lorde: for I wil not spare thē. Agayn, Cursed is euery one, whiche abyderh not in al things that are writen in the boke of the law, that he may do thē. And albeit al kynde of sinnes do greatly offende the maiestye of God; so that he will leaue none of thē vnpunished: yet this sinne of Idolatry or ymage seruice do most highly displease him, neyther wil he by any meanes suffer ỹ trãsgression & breaking of this second cõmaundement, which forbiddeth Idolatrye & ymage seruice, to escape without punishment, as dyuers histories of the holy scripture do manifestly declare. And therfore it is here to be noted by the waye, that God calleth the Idolaters, ymage-seruauntes or worshippers of straunge Gods his enemies & suche as hate him. Is it to be thought, that suche can escape vnpunished? It is not therfore without a cause, that God tenderinge our health & saluacion, in this his second cõmaundement forbiddeth both the making & worshipping of Images. If we will auoide the worshipping of Images, let vs cease to make them, & place them in our temples, chappels, oratories, &c. & so shall we easly escape from the daūger of Idolatry or ymage seruice, which is so greuous an offence, & so wicked & abhominable sinne before the lord our God, that he threateneth to punish it in the children of the Idolatrous fathers vntill the third & fourth generacion. Father. This semeth to me very lamentable, that God shoulde punish the wickednes of the parents in their childerns childrē. Sonne This on this wyse is to be vnderstand. If the children of the parēts, whyche were wicked Idolaters, committe that same Idolatrye, which their fathers haue cõmitted, & continew in the same wickednes wherin their forefathers haue lyued, then wil god not only punish the parentes which haue so offended, but also their children, yea and their childrēs children, whiche cõmitte the lyke offence, yea & that so much the more greuously, because they be the Idolatrous children of Idolatrous fathers, & haue more pleasure to walke in the wicked steps of their most wicked fathers, than to gyue eare to the righteous lawes of the most righteous god. Father. But what if the parētes be wicked, and the children Godlye, as it somtyme chaunceth, and as we also fynde in the holye scriptures, shall the children notwithstandinge be plaged and punished for their Fathers offences? Sonne. God forbid.

For it is wrytten: The soule that sinneth, shall dye. If a manne be Godlye, and doe the thinge that is equall and ryghte, (he eateth not vppon the hylles: he lifteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defyleth not his neighbours wyfe: he medleth with no menstruous woman: he greueth no body: he geueth his debter his pledge agayne: he taketh none other mans good by vyolence: he parteth his meate with the hungry: he clotheth the naked: he lendeth nothing vpon vsurye: he taketh nothing ouer: he withed with his hande from doynge wrong: he handleth faithfully betwixt man & man: he walketh in my cõmandements and kepeth my lawes, & perfourmeth thē faithfully:) This is a righteous man: he shal surely lyue, sayeth the Lord God. If he nowe beget a sonne, that is a murtherar and a sheder of bloud: if he do one of these thinges, (though he do not all) he eateth vpon the hils: he defyleth his neyghbours wyfe: he greueth the poore and nedye: he robbeth and spoyleth: he geueth not the debter hys pledge agayne: he lifteth vp his eyes vnto Idols, & medleth with abhominable things: he lendeth vpon vsurye, and taketh moreouer: Shall this man lyue? he shal not lyue. Seyng he hath done al these abhominacions, he shal dye: his bloud shal be vpon him. Nowe if this man beget a sonne also, that seeth all his fathers synnes which he hath done: and feareth, neyther doth suche lyke: namelye he eateth not vpon the mountaynes: he lifteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israel: he defileth not his neighbours wyfe: he vexeth no man: he kepeth no mans pledge: he neyther spoyleth nor robbeth any man: he dealeth his meate with the hungry: he clotheth the naked: he oppresseth not the poore: he receaueth no vsurye, nor any thing ouer: he kepeth my lawes, and walketh in my commaundementes: this man shal not dye in his fathers synne, but shall lyue without fayle. As for his father: because he oppressed and spoiled his brother, and dyd wickedlye amonge his people, he is dead in his owne synne. And yet saye ye: Wherefore then shoulde not this sonne beare his fathers sinne? Therfore, because the sonne hath done equitie and right, hath kept all my commaundements and done thē: therfore shall he lyue in dede. The soule that synneth, shall dye. The sonne shall not beare the fathers offences, neither shal the father beare the sonnes offence. The ryghteousnes of the righteous shall be vppon him selfe, & the wickednes of the wicked shal be vpon him selfe also.

Of these wordes, which I haue borowed out of the Prophete Ezechiel, is it plaine & euident, that although the parentes be wicked and Idolatrous, yet if theyr children be not polluted and defyled with the same wickednes and Idolatry, but louers of God, studious of his holye worde, & diligent walkers in his lawes and commaundementes: they shal be free from those plagues and punishementes, which theyr wicked and vngodly fathers haue most iustlye deserued, & be no partakers of gods displeasure, indignacion and vengeaunce in this behalfe. Therfore where it is sayde, that god wil punish the wickednes of parentes in the children vntyll the thyrde & fourth generacion: it is to be vnderstande of those children, whiche hauinge wicked fathers, folowe the steppes of their Fathers, comitting the same wickednes, which they tofore haue committed, without repentaunce or amendement of lyfe. The other, whiche are free from the wickednes of their parentes, are also free from the rutses and plagues of God, and be in the nomber of those, whiche are mencioned in the ende of this seconde commaundement. Father. What is that? Sonne And shewe mercy vnto thousandes vnto those that loue me, & kepe my commaundements. Father. What learnest thou of these woordes? Sonne. Verelye that as God is righteous and seuere in punishing the wicked doers, whiche transgresse his commaundementes: so likewyse is he mercifull, gentle and liberal to al suche as loue him, and studye to frame their liues according to his holy woorde, as thapostle sayeth: vnto them that are contencious, and not obedient to the truth, but obey vnrighteousnes, shal come indignacion and wrath, trouble and anguish vpon all the soules of men that doe euill, of the Iewe first, and also of the Greke. But vnto all them that doe good (shall come) prayse and honour and peace, vnto the Iewe fyrste, and also the Greke. For there is no respecte of persons before God. Father. What is ment by this, that God in plaging the wickednes of the parentes in the children, will only extende his punishment vntill the third and fourth generation, yea and that none otherwyse, excepte they folowe the wickednes of their fathers, as we hearde tofore: but in shewinge mercy vnto those that loue him and kepe his commaundementes, he sayeth, that he will extende and stretch forth his mercyfull kyndnes & kynde mercy vntill thousandes, that is to say, infinite generacions? Sonne. This declareth vnto vs, that the mercy of God is greater than his anger, and that he is more bent to louinge kyndnes than to seuere iustice. And with this agreeth the saying of that blessed virgine Marye: his mercye, sayeth she, endureth thorowe out all generacions vpon them that feare him. The Psalmograph also sayeth: The Lorde is full of compassion and mercye, longe suffering and of great goodnes. He will not alwaye be chydinge, neyther will he kepe his anger for euer. He will not deale with vs after our sinnes, nor reward vs according to our wickednes. For loke how hyghe the heauen is in comparison of the earth: so great is his mercye also towarde them that feare him. Loke howe wyde the East is from the West: so farre wil he set our synnes from vs. Yea lyke as a father pitieth hys owne children: euen so is the Lorde mercyfull vnto them that feare him &c. The mercifull goodnes of the Lorde endureth for euer and euer vpon them that feare him, and his righteousnes vppon theyr childers children: euen suche as kepe his couenaunt, and thincke vpon his commandementes to doe them. Father. We haue largely talked of al things concerning this second cõmandement of God: wherof we haue learned, that we ought to make no Image of God, nor of any other thing for religion sake, nor yet giue any adoracion or worshyp to them, but serue the Lord our God in spirite and truthe, fore as

Father. What is the will of God in this lawe? What requireth he of vs? Sonne. Fyrst, he forbiddeth vs to abuse his holye name thorowe false light or vayne swearing, or to cal his name vnto wytnesse in any matter, except it be godly, charitable, true, graue, weyghty and necessarye: Agayne, he chargeth vs streightlye, that we do not vsurpe his glorious name in anye kynde of superstition, sorcerye, enchaunment, witchcraft, coniuracion, inuocation of deuils & wicked spirites: Itē, that we do not dishonour the name of the Lord our God thorowe our euill behauour. Secondly, he requireth of vs that in matters of faith, or in graue and weighty causes of controuersies, where an othe is necessarily required, and ministred vnto vs by them, whiche are in authoritye, we sweare not by the name of any creature, that is in heauē or in earth, but only by his blessed and glorious name: agayne, that in all oure necessitie, sickenes, sorowe and care, we flie vnto the name of no creature, neyther in heauen nor in earth, but onlye vnto his holye name for aide, helpe and socoure, which is a stronge towre for al them that resorte vnto it, seynge that there is no name geuen vnto men vnder the cope of heauen, wherin they maye receaue saluacion eyther of body or of soule, but this one onlye name of that most mightye Lorde our God: Also, that in our prosperite, when all thinges goe well with vs, we shewe our selues thanckefull vnto him, laude, prayse, magnifye and extoll his holye, blessed and glorious name: Item, that we set forth preach and declare his holye worde, and auauns his pure & true religion without the intermission or mingling of any mans doctrine: fynallye, that we to the vttermoste of all oure power, euen wyth our whole strength both of bodye and soule seke continually the auaunce-ment, glory and honour of Gods most glorious and honorable name, neuer attempting eyther in worde, dede or thought, that maye in any poynt before men obscure or deface the maiestye of the Lord our God.

Father. Howe prouest thou by the worde of God, that we are forbiddē in this third commaundement falsye, lightly or vaynely to sweare by the name of God? Sonne. God sayeth by his seruaunt Moses: Ye shall not sweare falsye by myne name, neyther shalte thou vnhalowe the name of thy God: for I am the Lorde. By the Prophet Zacharye he also sayth: The thinges that ye shall doe, are these: Speake euerye mā the trueth vnto his neyghbour, execute iudgement truelye and peaceablye within your gates: let none of you ymagene euill in his hart agaynst his neyghbour, & loue no false othes, for all these are the things that I hate, sayeth the Lorde. sinner, he shalbe taken in his owne vanitie: he that is proude and cursed, shal fal therin. Let not thy mouth be accustomed with swearing, for in it there are manye falles. Let not the naminge of God be continually in thy mouth: for lyke as a seruaunt, which is ofte punished, cā not be without some sore: euē so whatsoeuer he be that sweareth, and nameth god, shal not be clene purged frō sinne. A man that vseth much swearing, shall be fylled with wickednes, and the plague shall neuer goe from his house. If he begyle his brother, his fault shalbe vpon hym: yf he knowledgeth not his synne, he maketh a double offence. And if he sweare in vayne, he shal not be found righteous: for his house shall be full of plagues. The woordes of the swearer bryngeth death, (God graunt, that it be not founde in the house of Jacob) but they that feare God, eschewe all such thinges, and lye not wel tryenge in synne. Our Sauiour Christ also forbiddeth all maner of vayne and lyghte sweatinge in these woordes: Ye haue hearde, howe it was sayde to them of olde time: Thou shalt not forsweare thy selfe, but shalt perfourme thy othe to God. But I say vnto you: sweare not at al, neither by heauen, for is Gods seate: nor yet by the earth, for it is his fote stole: neyther by Jerusalē, for it is the citye of the great king: neyther shalt thou sweare by thy head, because thou canste not make one heere whyte or blacke. But your cōmunication shalbe, yea, yea: nay, naye. For whatsoeuer is more thā that, cometh of euil. S. James also sayth: Aboue al thinges, my brethren, sweare not, neyther by heauen, neyther by earth, neither by other othe. Let your yea be yea, and your nay naye: least ye fall into dissimulation. Father. Where are we forbidden in the holy scripture to vsurpe the name of the Lorde of God in anye kinde of superstition, sorcery, enchauntement, &c? Sonne. God sayeth, ye shal not turne your selues to the sothsayers, neyther shal ye axe any thinge at the expounders of tokens, that ye be not defyled by thē: for I am the Lord your God. Agayne, yf anye soule turne him to the Sothesayers & expounders of tokens, so that he goeth a whorynge after them: I will set my face agaynst that soule, and will roote him out from amonge his people. Sanctifye your selues therfore, and be holye: for I am holye, euen your God. And kepe ye my statutes, and doe them: for I am the Lord that sanctifyed you. Moses also sayeth: When thou comest into the lande, which the Lorde thy God shall gyue thee, thou shalt not learne to do the abhominacions of these nacions, that there be not found amonge you that maketh his sonne or daughter go thorowe the fyre, or a Prophesyer, or a chuser out of dayes, or that regardeth the byrdes cryeng, or a wytche, or a conjurer, or sothsayer, or an expounder of tokens, or that axeth any thing of the deade. For whosoeuer doth suche, is abhomination vnto the Lorde. The Prophet Esay also sayeth: If they saye vnto you: aske councell at the Sothesayers, wytches, charmers and conjurers, then make them this answere. Is there a people any where, that axeth not councell at his God, whether it be concerning the dead or the lyuing? If anye man want light, let hym loke

For God him selfe complayneth in the holy scripture, that his name is greatly dishonoured and euill spoken of amonge the Heathen because of the corrupte manners and vngodly conuersacion of suche as professe his name. Therefore the holye Apostle S. Peter exhorteth vs, that we leade an honest conuersatiō among the Heathen, that where as they backebyte vs as euyl doers, they iudging vs of our good workes, may glorifye God in the daye of visitacion. And our sauiour Christe commaundeth vs, that our lyght shoulde so shyne before men, that they may se our good workes, & glorify our father, which is in heauen. For as nothing in this world doth more dishonour the name of God than the wicked lyfe of such, as with theyr mouth professe God, and with theyr dedes denye him: so lykewyse nothing in this lyfe doeth more auaunce and set by the glorious maiestye of the name of the Lord our God, then when such as professe his holy name, lyue godly, vertuously and honestly. Father. Is it lawfull for a Christen man in anye case to sweare? Sonne. yea in al suche cases, as I tofore rehearsed. Father. Howe is that proued? Sonne. S. Paule sayeth: An ende is the ende of all controuersye or stryfe. And God him selfe sayeth: O Israel, if thou wilt turne thee, then turne vnto me sayeth the Lord. And if thou wilt put awaye thyne abhominacions out of my syght, thou shalt not be moued: and shalt sweare, The Lord lyueth in truth, in equitie and in righteousnes. Agayne, If they (that trouble my people) wyll learne the wayes of them to sweare by my name: The Lord lyueth: lyke as they haue learned my people to sweare by Baal, then shall they be reken̄ed among my people. But if they wil not obey, then will I roote out the same folke, and destroye them, sayeth the Lorde. Moses also sayeth, thou shalt feare the Lorde thy God, and him onlye shalt thou serue, & sweare by his name. The Psalmograph also sayeth: All they that sweare by him (that is to saye, God) shall be commended. Agayne, he shall dwell in the tabernacle of God, and reste vpon his holye hill, that sweareth vnto his neighbour, and disapointeth him not. It is so farre of from synne to sweare in a true and necessary cause, that we reade, that god him selfe dyd sweare. The Psalmograph hath these wordes: The Lorde sweare, and wyll not repent: thou art a Priest for euer after the order of Melchisedech. In the bokes of the Prophetes we read, that the maner of swearinge, whithe God vsed, was this: As truely as I lyue. The Euangelicall history declareth, that Christes othe was this: verely, verely I say vnto you. S. Paule also dyd sweare, as we may se in his epistles. What shall I speake of Abraham and Abimelech: of Joseph: of the Princes of Israel: of Josue: of Dauid: and such lyke? All these histories do euidentlye declare, that it is not forbidden by Gods lawe for a Christen man to sweare by the name of the Lorde his God, and to call God for a wytnesse in a true and iust cause, and specially whan it is required of the

of the magistrates and headrulers for the auoyding of controuerlies, that peace and quietnes may be hadde among their subiectes. Father. Maye Magistrates than lawfully require an othe of their subiectes? Sonne. Yea most lawfully. Father. Where is that declared in the word of God? Sonne. We reade, that Abraham required an othe of his seruaunt, and the seruaunt sware at his maisters cõmaundement. King Abimelech required an othe of Abraham, whiche was a straunger in his lande, and Abraham dyd sweare. Abimelech also king of the Philistines required an oothe of Isaac, that he shoulde doe him and his people no harme, and Isaac agreed to hys request and sware. Jacob sware vnto Laban, whan he was required. Jacob otherwyse called Israel required of his sonne Joseph an othe, that he should not burye him in Egipte, but among his Fathers, and Joseph sware. Dyuers such lyke examples are to be founde in the holye scriptures, whiche do playnly declare, that Christen men may lawfully take an othe, whã it is required of them by suche as are in authorite. Are not these the wordes of the lawe of God? If a man deliuer his neighbour money or vessels to kepe, and it be stolen from him out of his house: if the theffe be found, he shall restore double. But if the theffe be not founde, then shall the good man of the house be brought before the Gods (that is to say, before the Magistrates or headrulers) & shall sweare, that he hath not put his hande vnto his neyghbours good. Father. Doth this third commaundement of God require of vs also, that in al our aduersite and trouble we fle vnto the name of God as vnto a stronge towet for helpe and succour, and diligently with stronge fayth call vpon it? Sonne. Yea verely. For this is the commaundement of God: Call on me in the daye of thy trouble, and I will delyuer thee, and thou shalte honour me. And as we are commaunded to call on the name of God in our trouble, so lykewyse are we moste gractously prompted to be hearde, as it is writen: Euery one that calleth on the name of the lord, shall be saued. And God him selfe sayeth by the Psalmograph: Because he hath put his truste in me, I will deliuer him: I will defende him because he hath knowen my name. When he calleth vppon me, I will heare him: yea I am with him in his trouble, and I will delyuer him, and bring him to honour. Wyth long lyfe will I satisfye him, and shewe him my saluacion. Father. Is it also required of vs in this cõmaundement, that we be thankeful to the name of the lorde our God for his benefites? Sonne. Is it not reason, that we be thankeful to him and prayse his name, of whome we receaue all that we haue appertayning eyther vnto the body or vnto the soule, that good is or godly? Father. It is in dede reason & right. Sonne. This is the commaundement of God by the Psalmographe: Offer vnto God the sacrifyce of prayse or thankesgeuinge. And God him selfe sayeth: who so offereth vnto me thankes and prayse, he honoureth me: and this is the waye, whereby I shall shewe him the saluacion of God. The Psalmograph him selfe also sayeth: I will prayse the name of God with a songe, and magnifye it with thankesgeuing: and it shall please God better, then a bullocke bullocke, that hath hornes and hoffes. Father. Are we commaunded also in this law to confesse and setforth the true religion and doctrine of God to other, whan soeuer the glorye of God doeth require, and the saluacion of the brethren, although the crosse yea death it selfe shoulde folowe? Sonne. Yea, that is our duety: and whosoeuer doth it not, he transgresseth this commaundement of God, and hath no portion in the enheritaunce of Gods kingdom, as our sauiour Christ testifyeth, sayinge: Whosoeuer confesseth me before men, him will I confesse also before my father, whiche is in heauen. But whosoeuer denyeth me before men, hym will I also denye before my father, whiche is in heauen. Agayne: Whosoeuer is ashamed of me and of my sayinges before this whorysshe and sinnefull generacion, of hym shall the sonne of man also be ashamed, when he cometh in the glorye of his father wyth the holy Angels. Not to confesse the truth of God, when the glory of God and the saluacion of our neighbour require, is none other thinge then to denye the trueth and to blaspheme the name of God, and to envye God his glorye and prayse. And what doeth it profyt a man to winne the whole worlde, and at the last to lose his owne soule? Or what can a man geue to redeme hys soule withall? In Gods cause, and in the matter of trueth, they are not to be feared that slea the bodye, and that done, they can do no more: but that lord is to be feared, which is able to destroy both body and soule in hell fyre. For the trueth stryue thou vnto the death, sayth the wyse man, & God shall fyght for thee against thyne enemies. Father. Besydes these thinges heretofore reherſed, are we bounde by this commaundement to seke the glorye of Gods most holye name aboue all thinges, and not to attempte any thinge eyther in thoughte, worde or dede, that maye in anye poynte obscure the honour of it? Sonne, Who doubteth of that? For this thinge onlye ought to be the alone studye of a true Christian, euen to the vttermost of hys power to auaunce the glorye of Gods most glorious name. Therefore thus storeth vp the Psalmograph hym selfe, and sayeth: Magnifye the Lorde (O my soule) and all that is within me, prayse his holye name. Prayse the Lorde (O my soule) & forget not all his benefytes: whiche forgeueth all thy sinnes, and healeth all thyne infirmities: whiche sauyeth thy lyfe from destruction, and crowneth thee wyth mercy and louinge kyndnes, &c. Father. But what meane these wordes that folow in the commaundement? For the Lorde wil not holde him giltles, that taketh his name in vayne. Sonne. In these wordes the Lord our God, which is a mightie and gelous God, yea and a consuming fyre, declareth howe greatlye he is angrye wyth them, that doe abuse his holye name, and honour it not on suche sorte, as is aboue specifyed. And although God gaue ten commaundementes, which he wyll diligentlye to be obserued of all menne, yet to none of them all specially doeth he adde any threatnynges, but only to the seconde and thyrd commãdementes: by this signifiyng vnto vs, that although his godly maiestie detesteth, abhorreth and hateth all synnes, yet the synne of Idolatrie latrye and the abusing of his holy name most chefely: and that who so euer transgresseth these two commandementes, he will most extremlye plague and punishe them: in this worlde tempozallye, and in the worlde to come eternally, except they repent & amend. Father. Are there anye sentences in the holye scripture, whiche also declare the anger, wrath and vengeaunce of God agaynste all suche as transgresse this commaundement, and abuse his holye name? Sonne. Manye and diuerse. Father. Rehearse some of them. Sonne. God him selfe sayeth by the Prophet Moses: Whosoeuer blasphemeth his God shall beare his sinne: & he that blasphemeth the name of the Lord, shal dye the death. The whole congregation shall stone him. As the straunger, so shall he of the housholde be also. If he blaspheme the name (of God) he shall dye. And in the Prophet Zacharye we rede on this maner: I turned me, lifting vp myne eyes, loked, and behold a flying boke. And he sayd vnto me: what seest thou? I aunswered: I se a flying boke of twenty cubites long, and tenne cubites broade. Then saide he vnto me: This is the curse that goeth foorth ouer the whole earth. For all theues shall be iudged after this boke, and all swearers shalbe iudged accordinge to the same. I will bringe it forth, sayeth the Lord of hoostes, so that it shal come to the house of the theefe, and to the house of him that falsly sweareth by my name: and shall remayne in his house, and consume it with the timber and stones thereof. The wyse man also sayeth: Lette not thy mouth be accustomed with swearing: for in it there are many falles. Let not the naminge of God be continuallye in thy mouth: for lyke as a seruaunt, whiche is ofte punished, can not be without some sore: euen so whatsoeuer he be that sweareth & nameth God, shall not be clene purged from synne. A man that vseth muche swearinge, shall be filled with wickednes: and the plague shall neuer go frō his house, &c. The wordes of the swearer bring death. Father. These authorities of the holye scripture declare euidently, howe greatly God abhorreth the abuse of his holye name eyther thorowe false, vaine or light swearinge, or otherwyse: so that it is not without a cause sayde in this precept, that the Lorde will not holde him giltles, that taketh his name in vayne. But let vs go forth and heare the fourth commaundement.

The fourth commandement. Exo. xx. Deut. v.

Sonne. The fourth comaundement of God is this. Remember that thou kepe holye the Sabbath daye. Syxe dayes shalt thou labour, and doe all thy worke. But the seuenth daye is the Sabbath of the Lorde thy God. In it shalte thou doe no maner of worke, neyther thou, nor thy sonne, nor thy seruaunt, nor thy mayde, nor thy cattell, nor thy straunger that is within thy gates. For in syxe dayes the Lorde made heauen and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is, and reasted on the seuenth daye. Therfore the Lorde blessed the seuenth daye, and halowed it.

What God requireth of vs in the fourth commandement

Father. What is the will of God in this commaundemente?

Sonne. God in this hys Lawe requesteth of vs two thynges. Fyrste that we kepe holye the Sabbath daye. Secondly, that on the seuenth daye we reast from all worldlye and bodelye busynes, labours and workes, that we maye the more freelye serue the Lorde our God and consider the thinges, whiche appertayne vnto the saluacion of our soules. Father. What signifyeth this worde Sabbath? Sonne. Reast and ceasynge from serutle labour and outwarde workes. Father. What is it to sanctifye the Sabbath daye? Sonne. Not to passe ouer that day ydlely in lewde pastymes, in bancketting, in dysing and cardynge in daunsynge and Beardayting, in bowlinge and shotinge, in laughyng and whoryng, and in suche lyke beastly and filthy pleasures of the flesshe: nor yet in bargaynynge, byinge and sellynge, as they doe, whych runne to fayers and marketes on the Sabbath daye and on other holye and feastfull dayes, (for this is not to sanctifye, but to prophanate, not to halowe, but to defyle the Sabbath daye) but all suche madnesses and wyckednesses layde aslyde, and the mynde vtterlye sequestred from all worldlye thinges and the bodye free from al seruile workes, to addresse our selues, and to applye oure whole mynde and bodye vnto godlye and spiritual exercyses: as vnto the consyderacion of the myghtye power of God in creating all thinges both in heauen and in earth, yea & that of nothing thorowe his worde for the wealth and commoditie of manne: Agayne, vnto the consyderacion of Gods vnoutspeakeable goodnes in preseruing and mayntaynynge those his creatures, for the vse and profyte of man: Item, vnto the humble and reuerent hearinge or reading of Gods holye worde: vnto the faythfull and diligent callinge on the name of God by feruent prayer: vnto the vnfayned and hartye thankes geuynge to God for his benefytes no les diuersly then plenteoullye declared vnto vs: vnto the worthye receauing of the holye misteries of the bodye and bloud of our Lord and Sauiour Christ Jesu: vnto the visiting, counselling, comfortinge and helpinge of the poore and miserablye afflicted persons: vnto the vtter geuinge ouer of all the studyes, deuises and workes of the olde man: vnto the earnest embracinge of the fruites of the Spirite: and in fine, vnto the whole geuinge ouer of our selues vnto the good will of God, to worke in vs by his holye Spirite, whatsoeuer his blessed pleasure shalbe, that he alone maye lyue, rule, raigne & triumphe in vs. Father. Are there anye sentences in the holye scripture, whiche confirme this lawe of the Sabbath daye? Sonne. Yea manye and diuerse. Father, Rehearse parte of them. Sonne. God sayd to Moses: Speake vnto the childzen of Israell, and saye: Kepe my Sabbath, for it is a token betwene me and you, and your posterities, that ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde, whiche haloweth you: therefore kepe my Sabbath: for it shalbe holye vnto you. Who so vnhaloweth it, shall dye the death. For who so doeth anye worke therein, shall be rooted out from amonge his people. Syxe dayes shall menne worke, but vpon the seuenth daye is the Sabbath, that is to saye, the holye reast of the Lord. Who so doeth any worke vpon the Sabbath daye, shall dye the death.

death. Therefore shall the children of Israell kepe the Sabbath, that they maye kepe it also amonge theyr posterities for an euerlasting couenaunt. An euerlastinge token is it betwene me and the children of Israel. For in syx dayes made the Lorde heauen and earth, but vpon the seuenth daye he rested, and was refreshed. Agayne he sayeth vnto Moses: Speake vnto the children of Israel, and saye vnto the: These are the feastes of the Lorde, whiche ye shall call holye dayes. Syx dayes shalt thou worke, but the seuenth daye is the feast of the Sabbath, and shall be called holye. Ye shall doe no worke therein: for it is the Sabbath of the Lorde, where so euer ye dwell. By the Prophete Esaye God also sayeth: kepe equite and doe righte, &c. Blessed is the man that doth this, and the mans childe, which kepeth the same: euen he that taketh hede that he vnhalowe not the Sabbath (that is) he that kepeth him selfe that he doe no euill, &c. vnto them that kepe my Sabbath and holde greatly of the thinge that pleaseth me, and kepe my couenaunt, will I gyue in my housholde and within my walles a better heritage and name, then if they hadde bene called sonnes and daughters. I will give them an euerlastinge name that shal not perishe, &c. All they which kepe them selues, that they vnhalowe not the Sabbath, namelye, that they fulfil my couenaunt: them will I bring vnto my holye mountayne, & make them ioyful in my house of prayer. Agayne, God by the same Prophete sayeth: If thou on the Sabboth daye turnest thy foote awaye from doying thyne owne will and pleasure in my holy daye: then shalt thou be called vnto the pleasaunt, holye and glorious Sabbath of the Lorde, where thou shalte be in honour: so that thou do not after thyne owne Imagination, neither seke thyne own wil, nor speake thyne owne wordes. Then shalt thou haue thy pleasure in the Lorde, which shall carye thee hye aboue the earth, & fede thee with the heretage of Jacob thy father: for the Lordes owne mouth hath so promysed. By the Prophet Jeremy God speaketh also on this maner: Take hede for your lyues, that ye cary no burthen vpō you in the Sabbath daye, to bring it thorow the gates of Jerusalem: ye shal beare no burthen also out of your houses in the Sabbath. Ye shall do no labour therin, but halowe the Sabbath, as I commaunded your fathers. Howbe it, they obeyed me not, neyther herkened they vnto me: but were obstinate and stubburne, and neyther obeyed me, nor receaued my correction. Neuertheles if ye wil heare me (sayth the Lorde) and beare no burden into the citye thorowe this gate vpon the Sabbath: if ye wil halowe the Sabbath, so that ye doe no worke therin: then shall there go thorowe the gates of this citye Kinges and Princes, ẏ shal syt vpō the seate of Dauid, &c. But if ye will not be obedient vnto me, to halow the Sabath, so that ye will beare your burthēs thorow the gates of Jerusalē vpon the Sabbath: then shall I set fyre vpon the gates of Jerusalem, and it shal burne vp the houses of Jerusalē, & no mā shal be able to quēche it. he sayth: Walke not in the statutes of your forefathers: kepe not their ordinaunces, and defyle not your selues with their Idolles: for I am the Lorde your God. But walke in my statutes: kepe my lawes and do thē: halow my Sabbathes: for they are a token betwixt me & you, ỏ ye may knowe, how that I am the Lord. Father. Are the Christians also no les bound vnto the obseruaciō & keping of the Sabath day the ỏ Jewes were in tymes past. Sonne. As cōcerning the .vii. day, which was the Jewes Sabbath, wherein they were commaunded to rest & cease from all outward labour, we be fre frō that lawe, & are no more bound to the reastfull keping therof, than of any other day. In consideracion whereof the Godlye Fathers of Christes churche turned the Jewes Sabath day into the Sonday, which is now called the Sabath of the Christias to declare, that we Christians are free frō the keping of thaforesayde Jewish Sabath, and that it is in the libertye of the Christen Magistrates to appointe what daye they will, to be the Sabbath of the Christians. and therefore we shall note, that the lawe concerning the Sabbath day is partlye ceremoniall, and partly morall. It is ceremoniall, as touchinge the externall reaste, and the selfe seuenth daye, which nowe is abrogated with all the other Mosaicall ceremonies thorow the comming of Christ: so that in this behalfe we be fre from that lawe. Notwithstandinge as touchinge the keping of the publique ministerye, I meane, the Christians to repare together vnto their temples on some certeyne daye in the weke at the appointment of the godly Christen rulers, to pray vnto God, to gyue thankes to God for his benefites, to heare Gods woorde, to receaue the holye misteries of the bodye and bloude of our Sauiour Christ. &c. and that they maye doe these thinges the more conuenientlye, to sequester both their bodies and myndes from all worldlye thinges & seruile workes &c. in this behalfe this lawe conserninge the Sabbath abydeth morall, and is to be obserued also of the Christians, not only spiritually, but also corporally, excepte some graue, weightye, vrgent and necessarye cause persuadeth to the contrarye, that by this meanes they may learne the better to exercyse them selfes in matters of God and Godlynes, and seke by that temporall reast, howe they maye attayne vnto the perpetuall reast of the worlde tocome. Father. Declare to me by the woorde of God, that the Christians are free from the Sabbath of the Jewes. Sonne. Our Sauyour Christ sayde vnto the Phareses. (whan they founde faulte with hys Disciples, because that they beynge hungrye plucked of the eares of the corne and dyd eate on the Sabbath daye, sayinge vnto hym: Beholde, thy Disciples doe that, whiche is not lawefull to doe vpon the Sabbath) Haue ye not reade, what Dauid dydde, whan he was hungrye, and they also that were wyth hym? Howe he entred into the house of God, and dydde eate the shewebreades, whyche were not lawefull for hym to eate: neyther for thē that were wyth hym, but onlye for the Prieste? Or haue ye not ye not rede in the lawe how that the Prieſtes in the temple brake the Sabbath, & yet are blameleſſe? But I ſaye vnto you: that there is one here greater then the tẽple. But yf ye knew, what this were (I haue pleasure in mercy and not in ſacrifyce) ye would not haue condemned innocentes. For the ſonne of man is lord euen ouer the Sabbath. In another place he alſo ſayeth: The Sabbath was made for man, & not man for the Sabbath. Therefore is the ſonne of man Lord euen ouer the Sabbath. S. Paule alſo ſayeth, Seyng ye now know God (yea rather are knowen of God) howe is it, that ye turne you backe againe vnto the weake and beggerly tradicions whereunto ye deſyre againe a freſh to be in bõdage. Ye obſerue daies & monethes, & tymes & yeres. I am in feare of you, leſt I haue beſtowed labour on you in vayne. Agayn, Let no mã trouble your cõſciences about meate or drinke, or for a pece of an holy day, as the holy daye of the new mone, or of the Sabath dayes, which are the ſhadowe of the thinges that were to come. Item, Bodely exercyſe profiteth litle, but godlyneſſe is profitable vnto all thinges, as a thing, whiche hath promiſes of the lyfe that nowe is, and of the lyfe to come. Father. It appereth by the wordes of thapoſtel in his Epiſtle to the Hebreus, that we Chriſtians haue alſo a Sabath. Sonne. What are thoſe wordes? Father. Thus ſayeth he: There remayneth yet a Sabbath or reſt vnto the people of God. For he that is entred into the reſt of God, ceaſeth from his workes, as God doeth from his. Let vs make haſt therefore to enter into that reſt, leaſt that any man fal after the ſame example of vnbeleſe. Sonne. This Sabath or reſt, wherof thapoſtel here ſpeaketh, is not corporall but ſpirituall, not worldly but ghoſtly, not outwarde but inward, conſiſting rather in the quietnes or reſt of the mynde than of the bodye, beinge a verye figure of that godly and euerlaſting quietnes & reſt, whiche thorowe Chriſt we ſhall haue after this lyfe in the kingdom of God the father. For a Chriſten man beyng at quiet with God in his cõſcience by ceaſing from doying euill workes, and by conforminge of hym ſelfe vnto the will of God, euen in this worlde hath heauen in his breaſt, as I maye ſo ſpeake: euen as the faythfull man, whiche beleueth in Chriſt, hath euerlaſting lyfe euen in this world, as it is wrytten: He that beleueth on the Sonne, hath euerlaſting lyfe. The Sabbath therfore of the Chriſtians is ſpirituall and euerlaſtinge, not to be obſerued one daye in the weke onlye after the maner of the Iewes, but euerye day ſo longe as we lyue, by ceaſinge to doe euill, and by ſtudyinge to doe good, as it is wrytten: There ſhall be a new moone for the other, and a newe Sabbath for the other: and al fleſhe ſhal come to worſhyp before me, ſayeth the Lorde. Father. Notwithſtandinge theſe thinges, whyche thou haſte ſpoken of the ſpirituall, inwarde and euerlaſtynge Sabbath of the Chriſtians, thou doeſt not take away the Sabathes & feaſtful dayes, which are appointed of the rulers of Chriſtes church to be obſerued of theyr Subiectes, that they maye the more quietlye gyue them ſelues to ſpirituall & Godlye exercyſes. For so should I synne both against fayth and charite. Agaynst fayth: because I should directlye stryue against Gods worde, whiche commaundeth not to resist but humblye to obey the godlye and righteous ordinaūces of the high powers, forasmuch as there is no power but of God: & he that resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinaunce of God, and purchaseth to him selfe euerlasting damnacion. Agaynst charite: because I should transgresse and breake that good and godlye order, which is both confirmed by publyque authorite & also receaued with the comon consent of all faithfull congregacions, auaunceing greatlye both the glory of God, and making not a lyttel to thee encrease of our knowledge in the misteryes of oure saluacion thorowe the bloude of Christ. Father. And is it lawefull for vs vpon our Sabbathes & feastfull dayes in any case to labour? Sonne. It is lawfull, as our sauioure Christ saith, to do good euen on the Sabbath day. We reade ẏ on the Saboth day, Christ healed diuers persons ẏ were diseased, & restored thē to theyr health, to geue vs an example to do the lyke, when eyther faith, charite or necessite requireth. For to the true godly, euery day is ẏ Sabbath day, forasmuch as they spend euery daye in holy workes, and haue nothing to doe with suche dedes, as be vncomlye to be done of true Christians: forasmuche also as euerye daye they lifte vp theyr myndes vnto God, call on his holy name by feruent prayer, prayse his glorious maiestye, and haue their meditacion in the law of the Lord, yea and that in the myddes of theyr godlye trauayls & labours. Notwithstanding except great necessite or vrgent causes do requyre, that we should worke on the Sabbath day or on other feastfull dayes appointed by publyque authorite vnto holye exercyses, we ought not to breake that godly quietnes on such holy dayes, but diligently applye our myndes (all worldly busynes set aparte) vnto suche heauenly and godly studies and accions, as the solemnite of those feastes requireth.

If anye man without necessarye cause attempteth the contrarye, he greatly offendeth as I haue heretofore sayde. Father. But wherefore doth God in this lawe make mencion of labour, commaunding vs to worke syxe dayes in the weke, and to rest on the seuenth? Sonne. God at the beginning, so sone as man had transgressed and broken his holye cōmaundement in Paradyse, & had eaten of the forbidden fruyte enioyned Adam, and in him all his posterite, this penaūce, that in the sweate of his browes and in the labour of his handes he shoulde eate his breade, and get his lyuinge, vntyll he returned into the earth. For earth he was, and vnto earth he should returne. Therefore where as the Lorde our God had from the beginning layde this yoke of labour vpon all mens necke, commaundinge them to worke and to trauayle for theyr lyuing so longe as they remayned in this vale of misery, no day excepted, and is nowe determined to erecte and set vp a comelye order in the publyque weale of the Israelites, wherein he will haue his wonderfull workes consydered, his worde preached, his glorious name called vppon and praysed, his people brought vnto the knowe-ledge of his holy wil, matters of theyr soule health regarded, spiritual exercyses practised. &c: he reneweth here his former penaunce of labour layd vpō man for his disobedience, cōmaunding him not to lyue ydlely, dissolutely and slouthfully, but diligently to trauaile by al lawfull meanes to get his lyuinge with the labour of his handes and the sweate of his browes, yea and that syxe dayes in the weke: notwithstanding that such godly exercyses, wherof I haue to fore spoken, may the more conueniently be brought to passe, he exempteth man from labour and seruile occupacions on the Sabboth daye, commaundinge him on that day to rest and to giue him selfe to corporal quietnes, that he may the more frely gyue his mynde to spiritual and godly thinges, and on that daye no les to seke after thinges pertayning vnto the saluacion of his soule, than he ẏ syxe dayes past laboured for the thinges, which concerne the health & preseruacion of his body. And to prouoke mā the more earnestly both vnto labour & also vnto the halowing of ẏ Sabboth day, God setteth forth him selfe an example vnto vs of them both, that is to say, of labour on ẏ syxe dayes & of rest on the Sabboth, which is the seuenth day: affirming that in syxe dayes he made heauē & earth, & the sea, and al that in them is, & rested on the seuenth day, so that he blessed the seuenth daye, and halowed it. Father. We are then commaunded of God in this precept two thinges: fyrst, syxe dayes to labour: secondly, to rest from labour on the seuenth daye, yea and that vnto this ende, that we maye passe ouer that daye in godly and spirituall exercyses. Sonne. So is it. Father. Are there anye other places of the holy scriptnre, which commaunde vs to labour with our handes & to get our lyuinge wyth the sweate of our browes? Sonne. We haue plentye both of sentences and of examples. God sayde vnto Adam immediatlye after his fall: In the sweate of thy face shalte thou eate thy bread, vntill thou doest returne vnto the earth, out of the whiche thou art taken. For earth thou art, and to earth shalte thou returne. The Psalmographe sayeth: Thou shalt eate the labores of thy handes: so shalt thou be blessed, and it shall go well with thee. That Mirrour of patience sayeth: A man is borne to labour, and a byrde to flye. The wyse man sayeth: Goe to the emmet (thou slouggarde) consyder her wayes, and learne to be wyse. She hath no guyde nor ouerseare, nor rulare, yet in the sommer she prouideth her meate, and gathereth her fode together in the haruest. Howe long wilt thou slepe, thou sluggish man? when wilt thou aryse out of thy sleape? yea sleape on still a litle: slomber a lyttel: folde thyne handes together yet a litle, that thou maist slepe: so shall pouertye come vnto thee, as one that trauayleth by the waye, and necessite lyke a weaponed man. But yf thou be not slouthfull, thy haruest shall come as a sprynge well, and pouerte shal flee farre from teee. Agayne, who so gathereth in sommer, is wyse: but he that is sluggish in haruest, bringeth him selfe to confusion. An idle hād maketh poore, but a quicke labouring hande maketh ryche. Also in an other place: Who so is slouthful and slacke in his labour, is the brother of hym that is a waster. Item, Delyghte not thou in sleape, least thou come vnto pouerteie: but open thyne eyes, that thou mayst haue breade ynough. A slouthfull body will not go to plowe foze cold of the winter: therfoze shall he go a begging in sommer, and haue nothinge. Wayucte Paule also sayeth: Lette him that stole, steale no moze, but let him rather labour with his handes the thinge which is good, that he maye gyue vnto him that nedeth. Agayn, We beseche your brethzē, that ye encrease moze and moze, and that ye studye to be quiet, and to medle with your owne busyneste, & to wozke with your owne handes, as we commaunded you, that ye may behaue your selues honestly toward them that are without, and that nothing be lackinge vnto you. Item, when we were with you, this we warned you of, that yf anye would not wozke, the same should not eate. Foz we haue heard say, that there are some, which walke among you in ozdinat lye wozkinge not at all, but beyng busye bodies. Them that are such we commaūd and exhozte by our Lozd Jesus Christ, that they wozke with quietnes and eate theyz owne bread. Fáther. Rehearse some examples of labour out of the holy scripture. Sonne. Adam euen in paradyse was cōmanded of God to kepe & to tyll the garden. Cain was a ploweman. Abell was a shepeherde. Thuball erercyted musyke. Thubalcain was a wozker in brasse and yron. Nohe was an husbande man, and planted a bynearde. Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and manye of thauncient Patriarches were keperg of shepe. Joseph was a Magistrate and rulare in the comen weale. Moses was a shepeherde, and afterwarde a gouernour in the publike weale of Israel. The childzen of Israel laboured payuefull in the land of Egipt. Dauid kepte shepe, and afterward was kinge ouer Israel. The Prophet Elizeus was a ploweman and tylled the earthe. The Prophete Amos was a shepeharde and kepte shepe. Joseph the husbande of Marye the Virgin was a carpenter. Christe lykewyse was a carpenter, and laboured foz his lyuinge, tyll he came to the office of preachynge. Manye of Christes Disciples were fishermen. Matthewe the Euangelist was a customegatherer. Luke the Euangelistе was a Physicion. Tabitha otherwyse called Dozcas made cootes and garmentes wyth her owne handes foz the poore people. A certayne godlye and religious woman called Lidia was a seller of purple. Aquila & Priscilla his wyfe were makers of tentes: of the whiche occupation S. Paule also was, whiche lyued not ydelye, noz yet of the sweate of other mens browes, but gote hys lyuinge with the laboures of his owne handes, because he woulde be chargeable to no man, as these his woozdes doe manifestlye declare: We laboure & wozke with our owne handes. Agayne: Ye your selues knowe, howe ye ought to folowe vs. Foz we behaued not oure selues inozdinatly amōg you: neyther tobe we bread of any man foz nought: but wzought with labour and sweate night & day, because we would not be chargeable to any of you: not but that we had authozite, but to make our selues an ensample vnto you, to folowe vs. Foz when we were

were with you, this we warned you of, that if anye wold not worke, the same shoulde not eate. Also in another place he sayeth: I haue desyred no mans syluer, golde, or vesture: yea ye your selues know, that these handes haue ministred vnto my necessities, & to them that were wyth me. Father. Is it not lawefull then for Christen menne to cease from worke on those syxe dayes: seynge that God sayeth, Syxe dayes shalt thou labour, and doe all thy worke? Sonne. Euen as on the Sabbath day, wherein we are commaunded to cease from bodely labour, it is lawful, whā charitie or necessite requireth, to worke, as we haue tofore hearde: so lyke wyse is it lawefull on the other syxe dayes to abstayne also from labour, when the glorye of God, or anye other necessarye cause doth require. Father. As God setteth foorth him selfe vnto vs an example of labour for syxe dayes: so doeth he of reaste for the seuenth daye. For in syxe dayes the Lord made heauen and earth, and the sea, and all that in them is, and reasted on the seuenth day. Sonne. Truth it is. Father. Of the Sabbath daye and of the sanctyfying thereof, we haue tofore sufficiently hearde. Rehearse therfore the next commaundement. Sonne. Honour thy father and thy mother, that thy dayes maye be long in the lande, whiche the Lorde thy God geueth thee. The fifte cōmandement

Father. This commaundemente pertayneth not vnto the parson of God, as the other foure, whiche we haue tofore hearde. Sonne. No verelye. For the lawe of God was wrytten with the fynger of God in two tables of stone. Exo. xxxi. The first table contayneth foure commaundementes, and those partayne vnto the worshypping and honouring of God. The other table comprehendeth syxe, & those concerne our duety toward our neighbour. Of the which syxe this is ỹ first, which I haue nowe rehearsed. Father. Why is the commandement concerninge our duety toward our parentes set nexte in order to the preceptes, whiche concerne our office and duety to warde God? Sonne. To declare, that nexte vnto God, we owe the chefe honoure, worshipp and reuerence to our father and mother. Father. What is it to honoure thy father & thy mother? Sonne. Not only to giue them outward reuerence, to ryse vp vnto them, to geue them place, to put of our caps, to knele vnto them, to aske them blessinge, &c. but also honourably to esteme them, godlye to thincke of them, hartely to loue them, humblye to obeye them, dilygently to pray for them, charitably to conceale and hyde theyr faultes, in al honest thinges to gratifye them, in their nede to helpe and succour them, and in fine, at all tymes to do al good thinges for them, what so euer lyeth in our power. What it is to honoure our father & mother.

Father. Are there other testimonies contayned in the holy scripture, which also require this duety of vs toward our parentes? Sonne. Yea verye many. Leuit. xix. Eccle. iii. Father. Rehearse some of them Sonne. Moses sayeth: Let euery one reuerence his father and mother. Jesus the sonne of Syrach writeth on this maner. Heare me your father (O my dere childzen) and doe there after, that ye may be safe. For the Lorde will haue the father honoured of the childzen: & lobe what a mother commandeth her childzen to do, he wil haue it kept. Who so hono-honoureth his father, his sinnes shal be forgeuen him: and he that honoreth his mother, is like one that gathereth treasure together. Who so honoureth his father, shall haue ioye of his owne children: and whē he maketh his prayer, he shal be heard. He that honoureth his father, shall haue longe lyfe, and he that is obedient for the Lordes sake, his mother shall haue ioye of him. He that feareth the Lorde, honoureth his father and mother, and doeth them seruice, as it were to the Lord him selfe. Honour thy father in dede, in worde, and in al pacience, that thou mayst haue Gods blessing, and his blessing shall abyde with thee for euer. The blessinge of the father buildeth vp the houses of the children, but the mothers curse rooteth out the foundations. Reioce not whē thy father is reproued: for it is not honour vnto thee, but a shame. For the worshyp of a mans father is his own worshyp, and where the father is without honour, it is the dishonestye of the sonne. Wy sonne make much of thy father in his age, and greue him not as longe as he lyueth. And if his vnderstonding fayle, haue pacience with him, and despyse him not in thy strength. For the good dede, that thou shewest to thy father, shall not be forgotten, and when thou thy selfe wantest, it shall be rewarded thee (and for thy mothers offences thou shalte be recompensed with good, yea it shal be found for thee in righteousnes) and in the day of trouble thou shalt be remēbred. Thy sinnes also shall meite away, lyke as the yse in the fayre warme weather. But he that forsaketh his father, shal come to shame, and he that despyseth his mother, is cursed of God. Agayne he sayeth: Honour thy father from thy whole harte: and forget not the sorowefull trauayle that thy mother had with thee. Remember that thou was borne thorow them, & how canst thou recompence them the thinges, that they haue done for thee?

Eccle. vii.

Tob. iiij

Olde Tobye sayde to his sonne: holde thy mother in honoure all the dayes of thy lyfe. For thou oughtest to remember, what & how great perels she suffered for thee in her wombe.

Math. xv.

Our Sauiour Christ also hath these wordes in the Gospel: God commaundeth, saying: Honour father and mother: and he that curseth father and mother, let him dye the death.

Ephe. vi

S. Paule lykewyse sayeth: Ye children, obey your fathers and mothers in the Lord, for that is right. Honor thy father and mother: (the same is the firste commaundement in the promes) that thou maist prosper, and lyue long on earth.

Col. iii.

Agayne, Ye children obey your fathers and mothers in all thinges: for that is well pleasing vnto the Lord. Father. Are there any ensamples contayned in the holye scriptures of suche as practised this obedience towarde theyr parentes?

Exāples of obedience vnto the parentes.

Sonne. Yea verely. Father. Recite parte of them. Sonne. Isaac shewed suche obedience to his father Abraham, that whan he at the commandement of God should haue bene offered for a sacrifice vnto the Lord, he dyd not ones resist his father, but willingly suffered him selfe to be bounde, and to be layde on the altare aboue vppon the woode, beinge redy also to be slayne of his father, if God had not otherwise prouided.

Gen, xxii

Lyke-

Lykewyse reade we of younge Tobias, whiche when his father sent hym vnto a farre contrey about certayne busynesses of his, refused not to take so great a iourney vpon him, but mekelye aunswered his Father, and sayde: Father, all that thou hast commaunded me, wil I do, and that diligently. As I maye let passe the other examples: haue we not Christ Jesus our Lorde and sauiour a perfect example in this behalfe? First, in as much as he is the onlye begoten sonne of God, he so obeyed the good will and pleasure of his heauenlye father, that when he was God and equall with God, he made him selfe of no reputaciō, taking on him the shape of a seruaunt, and became like vnto men, and was founde in his apparell as a man. He humbled him selfe and became obedient vnto the death, euen the death of the crosse. Agayne, in that he is man, and the sonne of Marye the virgin: reade we not, that he beynge a childe was obedient to Marye his mother and to Joseph her husbande? Are not these the wordes of blessed Luke? Jesus went downe with them, and came to Nazareth, & was obedient vnto them. Tob. v. Phil. ij. Luc. ii.

Father. Owe we suche honour and obedience to our fathers and mothers, that we are bounde by the commandement of God to obey thē in all thinges, and to do, whatsoeuer they commaund vs? Sonne. The honour and obedience is great, I confesse, whiche the children owe to their parentes: not withstanding if they commaunde any thinge contrarye to the worde of God, in this behalfe they are not to be obeyed. The honoure due vnto parentes is so farre to be executed, as it maye stande with the honour of God. If it doeth in any pointe obscure that, than is it vtterlye to be reiected and cast awaye. And we maye right well and with a good conscience saye: we must obey God more then men. Therefore thapostle sayth very aptly: Ye children obey your fathers and mothers in the Lord: For that is right. Fathers & mothers are none otherwyse to be obeyed, than in the Lorde: that is to saye, thē theyr obedience maye stande with the Lordes pleasure and with hys holy worde. If they cōmaūde contrary to this, they are by no meanes to be obeyed. The father of the spirite and of the newe man is more to be honoured and obeyed, than the Father of the flesshe and of the olde man. The honour and obedience toward God, which the lawe of the first table requireth of vs, is more to be regarded, then the honoure & obedience toward man, which the lawe of the second table requireth of vs. Father. Giue me an ensample of such thinges, as wherin we may not obey our parentes. Sonne. Lette it so be, that our parentes were so wicked and vngodly, that they woulde commaunde vs to forsake the true lyuing God and his pure religion, and to folowe straunge Gods and the tryflinge tradicions of men: in this behalfe they are not to be obeyed, but we must rather obey God, which sayeth by Moses his seruaunt: Thou shalt honor the Lord thy God, and him alone shalt thou serue. Agayne, That I commaund thee, do that only to the Lord: loke thou neyther putte ought thereunto, nor plucke anye thinge from it. Howe farre parentes are to be obeyed Act. v. Ephe. vi. Deut. vi. Deut. xij.

Moreouer lette this be the case, that some euill disposed Father and Mother woulde entyse their daughter for Lucres sake to playe the whore, and to make her bodye common to other: in this behalfe she maye by no meanes obey the commaundement of her parentes, but she must rather obey God, which sayeth: Thou shalt not play the whore. Deut.xxiii There shalbe no whoremonger amonge the sonnes of Israell, nor no whore amonge the daughters of Israell. Father. Proue by the worde of God, that the wicked commaundementes of vngodly parentes are not to be obeyed. Sonne. God sayeth by the Prophete. Walke not in Ezech.xx. the commaundementes of your fathers: kepe not their ordinaunces, and defyle not your selues with their idols: for I am the Lorde your God. But walke in my statutes, kepe my lawes, and do them. Again he sayeth by another Prophet. Be ye not lyke your fathers, vnto whō zacha.i. the Prophetes cryed afore tyme, saying: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of hoostes: Turne you from your euill wayes and from your wicked ymaginactons. But they would not heare, nor regarde me, sayeth the Lorde. Hereto pertayneth the saying of that most noble and vertuous kinge Ezechias: Be not ye lyke your fathers & your brethren, whiche ii.para.xxx trespassed agaynst the Lorde God of their fathers, which gaue them vp to be destroyed, as ye se. And nowe be not ye styfenecked lyke as were your fathers, but yelde your selues vnto the Lord, and enter into his holye place, which he hath sanctifyed for euer: and serue the lord your God, and the fearsenesse of his wrath shal turne away from you. Matth.x. Our sauiour Christ sayeth also: Thincke not that I am come to sende peace into the earth. I came not to sende peace, but a sworde. For I am come to set a man at variaunce against his father, and the daughter, agaynst her mother, and the daughter in law against her mother in lawe. And a mans foes shalbe they, that are of his owne household. He that loueth Father or mother more then me, is not worthy of me. Father. Hytherto hast thou right well declared, what it is to honour father and mother, and how farre honour and obedience is to be shewed vnto them. Nowe declare vnto me, what is ment by the wordes that folowe: That thy dayes may be longe in the lande, whych the Lord thy God geueth thee. Sonne. That we, whiche of our selues and of our owne nature are to muche ingrate, vnthankefull, vngentle, vnkynde, yea churlishe and very vnmyndfull of benefites, those specially, which come from our parentes, whom we thinke to doe to little for vs, whē they be moste benefyciall towarde vs, maye be prouoked, moued and stryred the more diligently to satisfie this commaundement, I meane, to honour our Father and mother, God addeth to this his precepte a pleasaunt bountyous and liberall promes: which is this, that such as honour their parentes from the bottome of their harte, & seke to pleasure them to the vttermost of their power, shal haue in this world manye good and cherefull dayes, long, yea and that quiet and ioyfull lyfe, good successe in all their affayres, abundaunce of worldly substaūce, health, health peace, rest, comfort, ioye glorye, honour, &c. and se their childrē childrē vnto the thirde and fourth generacion, as it is wrytten: Beholde, thus shal the man be blessed, that feareth the Lorde. The Lord from out of Syon shall so blesse thee, that thou shalt see Jerusalem in prosperitye all thy lyfe longe. Ya & that thou shalt see thy childers childrē, and peace vpon Israell. Father. And shall all these good thinges chaunce to those children also, that vnreuerentlye behave them selues towarde their parentes? Sonne. Nothinge les. For of such children speaketh the holy scripture on this maner. First God the father sayth: If anye man hath a sonne that is stubburne and disobedient, that he will not harken vnto the voyce of his father, and the voyce of his mother, and they have chastened him, and he would not harken vnto thē: then shall his father and his mother take him, and bringe him out to the Elders of that citye, and vnto the gate of the same place, and saye vnto the Elders of the citye: This our sonne is stubburne and disobedient, & will not hearken vnto our voyce, he is a riotours & dronkard. And al the menne of that citie shal stone him with stones vnto death. And thou shalt putte euill awaye from thee, and all Israel shall heare and feare. Agayne, Whosoeuer he be, that curseth his Father or hys mother, let him dye: for he that curseth his father & mother: his blond be vpon him. And agayne, He that smyteth his father or mother, lette him be slayne for it. Also in another place: Cursed be he that curseth his father and his mother, and all the people shal saye, AMEN. The wyse man also sayeth: He that hurteth his Father, and shutteth out his mother, is a shamefull and an vnworthye sonne. Who so curseth his father and mother, his light shall be put out in the middest of darkenes. Who so laugheth his father to scorne, and setteth his Mothers commaundement at naughte: the Rauens picke out his eyes in the valleye, and deuoured be he of the younge Aegles. What myserable ende abydeth those children, whiche dishonour and disobeye their parentes, the hystorye of Heli the Priestes children and of Absolom Dauids sonne doe sufficientlye declare, Father. It is good therefore my dere childe, that all children gyue eare to this admonicion of the wise man: Be obedient to thy father that begote thee, and despyse not thy mother, when she is olde. Doe so that thy father and mother may be gladde of thee: and that she that bare thee, maye reioyce.

But come of, tell me, doth this fyrst commaundement of God bynd vs onlye vnto the honour, reuerence, seruice and obedience of our parentes? Sonne. Our Scholemaister and also our Catechist taught vs that this commaundement of God doeth not onlye requyre of vs honour and obedience toward our fathers & mothers, but also towarde the temporall magistrates & the Ministers of Gods word, and toward our elders and all suche as be our Superiours and gouernours. Feare God: honoure the kinge. Father. Haue we any exāples in the ho-lye scripture of this honoure and obedience toward the hyer powers?
Sonne. Verye many both in the olde and newe Testament. The Israelites, specially suche as were the faythfull people of God, were obedient alwayes to Moses they magistrate, and to the other rulers ap-poynted by him, not onlye menne of the tempozalte, but also of the spi-ritualte, as they saye, I meane, the Priestes and the Leuites. When Josua in Moses stede was appoynted rulare by God ouer the Israelites, & comanded them to doe certayne thinges at the appointment of God: they answered al with one voyce & sayd: All that thou hast cō-

Euen as we obeyed Moses in all thinges, so will we obeye thee: only the Lord thy God be with thee, as he was with Moses. And whosoeuer he be, that doeth disobey thy mouth & will not harken vnto thy wordes in all that thou cōmaundest him, let him dye. Onlye be strong and of a good courage. And as the Israelites obeyed Moses & Iosua, so lykewyse dyd they obey the Iudges & kinges that succeded the according to the lawe of God. And this obedience toward the hyer powers, as I sayde before, was not only practised of the tēporalte, but also of the spiritualte: to declare that all degrees of estates owe obedience to the tēporall power: For Aaron the hygh Priest was obedient to Moses, who God appoynted ruler ouer his people, and dyd what soeuer he commanded him. Achimelech the high Priest & al the other Priestes of the Lord were obedient to king Saul, & called thē selues his seruauntes, & him their Lorde, not ones resistinge the furye of the most furious king, but rather chosing to suffer death patiently vnder so great a tyrannie, than ones to resist him disobediently. What shall I speake of Dauid, Salomon, Ezechias, Iosaphat, Iosias, &c. which had the bishops, Priestes and Leuites & other spirituall ministers alwayes humble subiectes & obedient vnto them without any resistence? As I may at the last come to the newe testament: dyd not Marye the mother of Christ & Ioseph her husband obey the commaundement of Augustus the Emperour, when the whole worlde should be taxed, & went into their citie Bethlehem: Dyd not Christ teach obedience toward the high powers? Dyd he not pay tribute? was not he content to dye vnder the tēporal rulers, and confesse that their power was geuen them from aboue? Dyd not thapostles of Christ do in lyke maner both teach & do? Dyd not Paule willingly euer obey the publyque magistrates, Festus and Felix, wyth such lyke? These histories do sufficiently declare, what honour, reuerence, and obedience we owe to the tēporall rulers. Neyther lacke we in the holye scriptures histories also, which do manifestlye declare, what a great sinne disobedience is, and how greuously God hath punished it. To whom are the histories of Dathan & Abyron, of Zambri & Baala vnknowne? of the which two first for their sedicion, conspiracye & disobedience against the hyer powers ware swalowed vp alyue of the earth with all that euer they hadde, so that they went downe quicke vnto hell: the other two most miserablye pearyshed. I passe ouer the histories of Miriam Aarons syster, of Theudas and of Iudas Galileus and suche like, whom God for their disobedience toward the hyer powers suffered not to escape vnpunished. It is good to folow the example of Dauid, which shewed such honour & reuerence to kynge Saul beyng both a wicked ruler, & also hys mortall enemy, that he would not ones hurt him, nor yet suffer any other to do it, although he had sufficiēt opportunite & occasion at diuerse tymes to haue slayne him, if he had bene mynded. The lord forbid, saith he, that I shuld lay my hand on him. Agayn, bid him not,

For who, sayeth he, shall laye handes on the Lordes annoynted, and be not giltye? The Lorde lyueth, he dyeth not, except the Lorde smyte him, or that his daye become to dye, or els go to battel, and there perishe. Father. What if the Princes be wycked, and commaunde vs to do wicked thinges? Shall we then also obey them? Sonne. In this behalfe we owe them no honour, no reuerence, no obedience. So longe as they are the ministers of God, that is to saye, seke the glory of God, thauauncement of his holy religion, the encrease of vertue, & the suppression of vice, we are bounde by the commandement of God to obey them, not only for feare of punishment, but also for conscience sake: but if they cease to be the ministers of God, the promotours of his true religion, the auaunters of vertue, and the suppressours of vyce, we owe them no honoure, no reuerence, no obedience in this behalfe, but with a good conscience we maye say vnto them with thapostles: we muste obeye God more then men. Father. Howe prouest thou by the woorde of God, that Magistrates commaunding wicked thinges are not to be obeyed. Sonne. God is the hyest Magistrate, and his will is to be tendered before the fansye of anye inferiour Magistrate. Therefore if the inferiour magistrate commaundeth anye thing that is contrarye to the commaundement of the hyest Magistrate, I meane, God, it is not to be obeyed, but vtterlye to be reiected & cast awaye, as these examples of the holye scripture do manifestly proue. That wicked king Pharao gaue out this most wicked commandement to midwyues of Egipt, that they should kill all the men childzen of the Israelites, & by no meanes suffer them to liue. But the midwyues fearing God wold not in any condicion obey this commaundement of the king, but suffered the men childzen to lyue. When king Saule commanded his fotemen that stode about him to kill the Priestes of the Lord: the kinges seruaunts wold not ones moue theyr handes to fall vpon the priestes of the Lord, neyther would they ones touche them. Kinge Nabuchodonozor caused a golden ymage to be made, & commanded that al his subiectes should fall downe before it & worship it. Notwithstandinge the seruauntes of God Sidrach, Misach and Abednago would by no meanes worship that Idol, but rather chosed to be cast into an whote brenning ouen & so to be consumed vnto ashes, than they would ones obey the most wicked cõmandement of so wicked a kinge. King Darius made a lawe, that whosoeuer dyd aske any petition either of any God or man within .xxx. dayes, excepte it were onlye of him, the same personne should be cast into the Lyons denne, But Daniel the seruãt of God would by no meanes obey this commaundement of the king, but chosed rather to be cast into the Lions denne & so be deuoured, the he wold cease so lõg tyme to pray vnto the lord his God. Mathathias, when he was cõmaunded of king Antiochus cõmissioners to do sacrifice, & to burne incense vnto ydols, & to forsake the law of God, as many of Juda & Jerusalem had done according to the kings commaundement, vtterly refused it, & stoutly brast out into the woordes, saying:

Thoughe all nacions obey the Kinge Antiochus, and fall awaye euerye man from kepinge of the lawe of theyr fathers, thoughe they consent to his commaundementes, yet wyll I and my sonnes and my brethren not fall from the lawe of our Fathers. God forbid we shoulde: that were not good for vs, that we should forsake the lawe and ordinaunces of God, & to agree vnto the commaundementes of king Antiochus. Therefore we will do no suche sacrifyce, neyther breake the statutes of our lawe, to go another waye. And when he had spoken these wordes, there came one of the Jewes, which openly in the syghte of all dyd sacrifyce vnto the Idols vpon the altare in the citye of Modin according to the kinges commaundement. When Mathathias sawe this, it greued him at the harte, so that his raynes shoke with al, and his wrath kyndled for verye zele of the lawe. Wyth that he starte vp, and killed the Jewe beside the altare, and slewe the kings commissioner, that compelled him to do sacrifyce, and destroyed the altare at the same tyme: such a zele hadde he vnto the lawe of God, lyke as Phinehes dyd vnto Zambri the sonne of Salom. D

What shall I speake of that most noble woman and of her seuen sonnes, whiche all dyd rather chose not onlye to suffer moste greuous tormentes, but also most cruel and bitter death, then they wolde ones obey the kynges commaundement in eatinge swynes flesshe agaynste the lawe of God? I passe ouer the most notable history of that moste worthy and auncient father Eleazarus, which rufusinge also to obey the kinges commaundement in eatinge swynes flesshe, desyred rather to dye gloriouslye, then to lyue wyth shame, & so offered him selfe willyngly to the martirdome, yea to the verye death. The noble enterpryse of thapostles is more knowen, then it needeth her to be recyted: which, when they were commanded, that they should no more preache in the name of Christ, would not obey the headrulers in this behalfe but continued still in preaching the Gospell of Christ diligently. And when they were conuented before the magistrates, and demaunded, why they shewed them selues so disobedient to their commaundemēt, they stoutely and boldlye answered: Whyther it be right in the sighte of God to heare you rather then God, iudge ye. We can none otherwyse then speake those thinges, which we haue sene & heard. Agayn, we must obey God more then men. O couragious hartes. And as I may enterlase one history although not mencioned in the sacred bible, yet worthy to be remembred: our Catechist entreating on a certayne time of obedience due vnto Princes, told vs this history. The Roman Emperour Diocletian, sayd he, cōmaunded one of his capitaynes called Maurice beinge a Christen man to prepare an armye against the Christians, & vtterly to destroy them, except they wold giue ouer the faith of Christ, & worship the Gods of the Romanes, and do sacrifyce vnto them. But Maurice valeaunte not onlye in bodye but also in mynde, stronge in armes, but stronger in faythe, couragious in martyall affayres, but more courageous in matters of God, stoutelye and boldelye aunswered on thys maner: O Emperoure, I am redye

to serue thee in all thy righteous and honeste affaires, neyther haue I at any tyme refused to doe thee seruice. Notwithstandinge in this behalfe knowe thou, O Emperour, I neyther maye nor will obey thy commandement, beyng both wicked and vngodly. For I my selfe also am a Christen man and must obey God on whom I beleue, and of whom I loke for the croune of euerlasting glory, more then thee O Emperour, of whom I haue onlye mortall and transitorye rewardes. Therefore be it knowen vnto thee, O Emperoure, that I will rather suffer my bloude to be shed, than ones according to thy commaundement attempt to hurt anye that professe Christ, beyng lyncked & ioyned with me in one fayth, baptisme and doctryne. Father. Of the temporall magistrates and of the honour & obedience due to them, we haue sufficiently heard. But come of, tell me: doth this fift commaundement of God require of vs also, that we honour, reuerence and obey the ministers of Gods woorde? Sonne. Yea no les then the temporal ministers. For as the one conserueth the body, so doth the other the soule: yea both of thē watch for the safegarde of the bodye and of the soule. Father. Declare by the worde of God, that we owe no les honoure, reuerence and obedience to the ministers of gods woorde, then we do to the temporall rulers or to our corporall parentes. Sonne. The names, whiche be appropriated to the ministers of Gods woorde, do abundantlye declare in what great honour and reuerence we ought to haue them. Father. Which are they? Sonne. They be called in the holy scriptures, shepeherdes, watchmen, ouerseats, seders of the Lordes flocke, Angels of the Lord, Embassadours of God, salte of the earth, light of the world, fishers of men, seruauntes of God, Apostles of Christ, Gods labourers, Christes ministers, stewardes of the secretes of God, Elders, Prophetes, teachers ensamples to the flocke, &c. Who hearing the ministers of gods word to be called with suche honorable names is not streight wayes moued to gyue honour & reuerence vnto them, and to esteme thē as precious iewels and noble treasures? Father. But let me heare, what the holye scripture speaketh in this behalfe. Sonne. The wyse man sayeth: Feare the Lorde with all thy soule, and honour his ministers. Loue thy maker with all thy strength, and forsake not his seruauntes. Feare the Lord with al thy soule, and honour his priestes. God the father sayth: Beware that thou forsake not the Leuite (he meaneth the minister of his worde, as long as thou lyuest vpon the earth. Our sauiour Christ sayth: He that receaueth you, receaueth me: and he that receaueth me, receaueth him that sente me. He that heareth you, heareth me: and he that despyseth you, despyseth me: but he that despyseth me, despyseth hym that sent me. S. Paule sayth: He that despyseth despyseth not mā (he meaneth the preacher of Gods woorde) but God, whyche hath geuen hys holye Spirite into you. We beseche you brethren, that ye knowe them, whiche laboure amonge you, and haue the ouersyght of you in the Lorde and geue you exhortacion: that ye haue them in hye reputacion thorowe loue for theyr workes sake, and be at peace with them

them Agayne, the elders that rule well, are worthy of double honor: but most specially they, which labour in the worde and teaching. For the scripture sayeth: Thou shalt not mosell the mouth of the oxe, that treadeth out the corne. And the labourer, is worthy of his rewarde. Against an elder receaue none accusacion, but vnder two or three witnesses. Also in another place he sayeth: Obey them that haue the ouersight of you, and submit your selues vnto thē: for they watch for your soules, euen as they that must giue accomptes: that they maye doe it with ioy, and not with griefe. Father. If anye man sheweth disobedience to the ministers of Gods worde, and will not honour nor reuerence them according to the commaundement of God, shall they escape vnpunished? Sonne. Heardest not before, what Christ sayeth? He that despyseth you, despyseth me: & he y despyseth me, despiseth him that sent me. Can there be any greater dishonour be done to a prince, thē whē his Embassadour is euil entreated? Can that king take in good part the disobediēce of those subiectes which disobey and resist his commission published for their wealth by his officers? No more can God abyde, that his Embassadours & commissioners, I meane the preachers of his holy word, shuld be contemned, despysed & not regarded, or theyr sermons, whiche are the infallible oracles of God, neglected and nothing set by: Yea suche despysers of Gods preachers & of their doctrine dyd neuer, nor neuer shal, escape vnpunished. What drone Adam and Heua out of Paradyse into this vale of misery, making them of immortal, mortall: of vncorruptible, corruptible: of Gods frendes, Gods enemies: of the enheritours of euerlasting glorye, fyre brondes of hell, &c, but disobedience to God and to his holy word? What caused the whole world ones to be drowned eyght persons only excepted, but disobedience to the preachers and to theyr doctrine? Agayne, what prouoked God to consume Sodome & Gomorre and certayne other Cities with fyre & brimstone from heauen, but that they contemned the preacher of Gods worde, & his heauenly doctrine? What was the occasyon, that God dyd so oftentymes plague with hunger, swearde, fyre and pestilence the Israelites, but that they despysed the Prophetes of God and theyr preachings? how came it to passe, that whole Jewry came to hauocke & finally both destruction and desolacion certayne yeares after Christes ascension, but that they dyd nothing regarde the doctrine of Christ and of his Apostels, but vtterlye sought the decay and vtter confusion of them both? Howe doth our sauiour Christ crye out agaynst certayne cities, which despised the preachers and the doctrine that they taught? Are not these his wordes? Wo vnto the chorazin, wo vnto the Bethsaida: for yf the myracles, whiche were shewed in you, had bene done in the Citie of Tyre or Sidon, they had repented of theyr sinnes long agone in sackclothe & ashes. Neuertheles I saye vnto you, it shalbe easyer for Tire and Sidon at the daye of iudgement, then for you. And thou Capernaum, which arte lifte vp vnto heauen, shalbe brought downe to hell. Luc. x. Gen. viii Gen. xix. Matth. xi Luc x. Disobedience punished. Gen. iii.

For if the miracles, which haue bene done in thee, had bene shewed in Sodom, they had remayned vntill this daye. Neuertheles I say vnto you, it shalbe easyer for the lande of Sodom at the daye of iudgement, then for thee. Father. What if they whiche take vpon them to be the Ministers of Christe and the preachers of his worde, teache false doctrine, & the traditions of men, corrupting rather than correctinge our myndes with theyr wicked doctrine, and labouring to bryng vs rather vnto the perdicion then saluacion of our soules, shall we also in this behalfe honoure, reuerence and obey them? Sonne. Nothinge les. For they are nowe no more the ministers of Christ, but the seruaunts of Antichriste, no more the Aungels of lyghte, but the messengers of darkenes, no more the sonnes of God, but the bonde slaues of the deuill. Therefore haue we nothinge to do with them. For they sit not in the chaier of Moses, but in the chayer of pestylence, so that yf they require anye obedience of vs because they occupye the place, and yet not the office, of Christes ministers, we maye with a good conscience refuse so to do, & say with thapostles, we must obey God more thē men. Christ sent foorth his disciples to preache, not theyr owne fansys, nor the traditions of theyr forefathers, but the Gospell. Goe and preache the Gospell, sayeth he, to euery creature. Wo be vnto me, sayeth S. Paule, if I preache not the Gospell. The aforesayde Apostle in a certayne Epistle writeth on this maner: Thoughe we oure selues or an Aungell from heauen preache anye other Gospell vnto you, then that which we haue preached vnto you, holde it accursed. As we sayde before, so saye I nowe agayne: If any man preache vnto you any other Gospel then that ye haue receaued, hold it accursed. Saint John also sayeth: If there come anye vnto you, and bryngе not this learninge, him receaue not to house, neyther bid him god spede. For he that biddeth him God spede, is partaker of his euill dedes. Such therefore as will be counted true Ministers of Christ and zelous preachers of hys holye worde, must obserue this rule of S. Peter. If any man speake, let him so speake, that it be agreable to Gods woorde: and so are they worthy to be honoured, reuerenced & obeyed, as spirituall fathers accordinge to the commaundement of God: otherwyse there is neyther honoure, reuerence nor obedience due vnto them, as our Sauyoure Christ sayeth: Ye are the salte of the earth. But if the salte haue loste his saltenes, what shalbe seasoned therewith? It is thencefoorth good for nothing, but to cast out, and to be troden downe of menne. Father. As I remember thou saydest, that your Scholemayster and also your Catechist taught you, that not only corporall fathers & mothers, Magistrates and preachers are commaunded to be honoured, reuerenced and obeyed, but also our Elders, and all suche as be our Superiours and gouernours. Sonne. Trueth it is. Father. What meanest thou by elders? Sonne. Suche as doe excell vs in age, wysedome, discretion, knoweledge, learninge, experience, &c. Father. Howe prouest thou by the holy scripture, that we ought to reuerence our elders? Sonne. God sayeth

seruaunts ought to honour, and obey their bodelye maysters, appere

1. Pet. ij. good faythfulnes, that they maye doe worship to the doctrine of God our Sauiour in all thinges. S. Peter also sayeth: Be seruantes, obey your maysters with feare, not onlye if they be good and curteous, but also though they be froward. For it is thanke worthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure griefe, and suffer wrong vndeserued. Father, If the scholemaysters, teachers, tutors, patrones, maisters of occupacions, or any other of our superiours and gouernours shoulde commaunde vs that, which stryueth with the glorye, honour & worde of God, is it to be obeyed? Sonne. You heard before what I sayd concerning honour, reuerence, seruice and obedience due vnto menne, of whatsoeuer degree or estate they be. If it may not stande with the honour, reuerence, seruice and obedience, whiche we owe vnto God, it is vtterlye to be reiected and cast away. For the honoure of God is to be considered before the honour of mā. Therfore in this behalfe, if they require of vs anye honoure, reuerence, seruice and obedience, that can not stande with our duety toward God, we maye with a good conscience answere with the Apostles and saye: whither it be right in the sight of God to heare you rather then God, iudge ye. We muste obey God more then men. Father. Thou hast satisfyed me right well in this fifte commandement. Come of, rehearse vnto me the nexte precept, as it foloweth in order. Sonne. Thou shalt not kyll. Father. What doth God require of vs in this his commaundement? Sonne. Fyrste of all, that no priuate person shall kill another, although iniuried & wronged. Father. Proue that by the worde of God. Sonne. God sayeth: Thou shalt not auenge thy selfe, nor be myndfull of wronge agaynste the children of my people but shalt loue thy neighbour euē as thy selfe. The wyse man also sayth: Say not thou, I will recompense euill: but put thy trust in the Lord, and he shall defend thee. Hereto agreeth the saying of thapostle: Recompense to no mā euill for euill. Prouide afore hande thinges honest, not onlye before God, but also in the sight of all men. If it be possible (so much as is in you) lyue peaceablye with all men. Derelye beloued, auenge not your selues, but rather gyue place vnto wrath. For it is wrytten: vengeaunce is myne, I will rewarde, sayeth the Lord. Therfore if thyne enemy honger, fede him: if he thirst giue him drinke. For in so doynge thou shalt heape coles of fyre on hys heade. Be not ouercome of euill, but ouercome euil with goodnes. Father. What if anye man ouercome with yre & madnes for the auengement of his own priuate cause killeth his neighbour? Shall he be pardonned, and not rather suffer death? Sonne. Whosoeuer committeth wilfull and pretensed murder, ought not to be pardonned, but rather to be killed, as he hath killed. Father. Howe proueste thou that by the worde of God? Sonne. God sayeth. Who so sheddeth mans bloude, his bloud shalbe shedde agayne. For in the Image of God, did God make man. Agayne, he that killeth any man, let him dye the death. mayned a man, so shall he be mayned agayne. Also in another place: He that smyteth a man, that he dye, shall be slayne for it. Our saviour Christe sayde vnto Peter: Put vp thy swoorde into his sheath: For all they that take the swoorde, shall perishe with the swoorde. Father. Is it not lawefull by any meanes to kill? Sonne. For a priuate man it is not lawfull: for a temporall magistrate it is lawful. Father. Where provest thou that in the woorde of God? Sonne. God speakinge to the temporall ruler sayeth: Thou shalte haue no pitye on him (the murtherar) but thou shalt require soule for soule, eye for eye, tothe for tothe, foote for foote, hande for hande. Dauid that moste noble king sayth in a certayne psalme: I shall sone destroy all the vngodlye that are in the lande, that I maye roote out all wicked doers from the Citye of the Lorde. The Apostle also sayeth: Rulers are not to be feared of the that doe well, but of them that doe euill. Wilt thou be without feare of the power? Do well than and so shalt thou be praysed of the same. For he is the minister of God for thy wealth. But if thou doe that which is euill, then feare: for he beareth not the swoorde for nought. For he is the minister of God to take vengeaunce on him that doeth euill. S. Peter also sayeth, that the rulers are ordayned of God for the punishmēt of the euill doers, but for the prayse of them that do wel. Father. What doth God require more of vs in this his precept? Sonne. Secondly he requireth of vs not onlye that we shoulde not kyll, but also that we should beare no hatrede, anger nor malyce in our hartes agaynst our neyghbour. Father. For this cause then is the lawe called of S. Paule spiritual, because it requireth not of vs only outwarde & ciuile righteousnes, but also inwarde and spirituall iustice, euen pure and vncorrupte mocions of the mynde, so that the law must be fulfilled both with the inwarde and outwarde man, both with bodye and soule. Sonne. Yea verelye: and so doth our Sauiour Christ interprete and expound the whole lawe of God contrarye to the doctrine of the Scribes and Phariles. Father. Lette me beare it proued by the woorde of God, that we are forbidden to beare anye hatrede, anger, malice, enuye, displeasure, &c. in our hartes agaynste our neyghbours. Sonne. God sayeth: Thou shalt not stande agaynst the blonde of thy neyghbour: I am the Lorde. Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thy harte: but shalte in anye wise rebuke thy neighbour, that thou beare not sinne for his sake. The wyse man sayeth. There are syx thinges, which the Lord doth hate, & the seuenth he vtterly abhorreth. A proude looke: a lying tonge: hands that shedde innocent blood: an harte that goeth about wyth wicked Imaginacions: fete that be swift in running to do mischiefe: a false witnesse that bringeth vp lyes: and suche one as soweth discorde amonge brethren. Our saviour Christe sayeth: Ye haue heard, that it was sayde to them of the olde tyme: Thou shalt not kyll; for whosoeuer killeth, shalbe in daunger of iudgement. But I say vnto you, that whosoeuer is angrye wyth his brother, shall be in daunger of iudgemente. And whosoeuer whosoeuer sayth vnto his brother Racha, shalbe in daunger of a counsell. But whosoeuer sayeth, thou foole, shalbe in daunger of hell fyre. Therfore if thou offerest thy gifte at the altare, and there remembrest, that thy brother hath ought agaynst thee: leaue there thyne offeringe before the altare, and go thy waye fyrst, and be reconciled to thy brother, & then come & offer thy gyft. Agre with thyne aduersary quickly whiles thou art in the way with him, lest at any tyme thy aduersarye delyuer thee to the Judge, and the iudge delyuer thee to the minister, and then thou be cast into prisonne. Uerelye I saye vnto thee: Thou shalt not come out thence, till thou hast payde the vttermost farthing.

Ephe.iiii. S. Paule sayth: Let all bitternes, and fearcenes, and wrath, and roringe, and cursed speakinge be put away from you with all maliciousnes. Be ye courteous one to another, mercifull, forgeuinge one another, euen as God for Christes sake hath forgeuen you. Hereto appertayneth the sayinge of S. John: 1. Ioan. iij. He that loueth not his brother, abydeth in death. Whosoeuer hateth his brother, is a manslayer. And ye knowe that no manslayer hath eternall lyfe abydinge in him. Father. I perceaue nowe ryght well, that we maye not only not kill, hurte or nope our neyghboure in anye condicion eyther with hande, weapon, tonge, &c, but also that we may not so much as ones hate him, or beare malice or anger in our hartes towarde him, although it should neuer braste out eyther into worde or dede: if we doe, we are transgressours of the law of God and before the maiestye of God playne murtherars and manslayers. Sonne, So is it. Father. Who can so warelye and circumspectly walke in the pathwayes of Christen charitye, or so contynewe in brotherlye loue, but ỳ sometyme he falleth into anger & displeasure with his neyghbour. Sonne. We are all frayle in dede, & redy at euerye houre to fall. Therfore if at anye time we passe the boundes of charite, and flyppe into the rage of anger, it is good to folowe this most wholesome councell of thapostle: Be angry and synne not. Lette not the Sunne go downe vpon your wrath, neyther gyue place vnto the backebyter. Father. We maye not than continewe in anger, nor seke to be reuenged. Sonne. No verely, but seke rather to be reconciled as our Sauiour commaundeth vs in the Gospell. For the wyse man psal, iiii Ephe. iiii Math. v, Eccle, xxviii. sayeth: He that seketh vengeaunce, shall fynde vengeaūce at the lordes hande, which shal surely kepe him his synnes. Forgyue thy neighbour the hurte that he hath done the, and so shall thy sinnes be forgeuē the also when thou prayest. A man that beareth hatred agaynst another, howe dare he desyre forgeuenes of God? He that sheweth no mercy to a man, whiche is lyke himselfe, howe dare he aske forgeuenesse of his sinnes? If he that is but doshe, beareth hatred and kepeth it, who will entreate for his sinnes? Remember the ende, & let enmite passe, whych seketh death and destruction: & abyde thou in the commandementes. Remember the commaundementes, so shalt thou not be rigorous ouer thy neyghbour. Thinke vpon the couenaunt of the hyest, and forgyue thy neyghbours ignorauunce. Beware of stryfe, and thou shalt make thy sinnes fewer. For an angry man kyndleth variaunce, and the vngodlye godly disquieth frendes, and putteth discorde among them that be at peace. Father. What is required of vs more in this precept? Sonne. Thirdly god requireth of vs not only ỹ we shuld not hit, hurt, mope, or beare secretlye in our hartes anye anger or displeasure agaynst our neighbour, but also ỹ we shuld paciētly suffer, whatsoeuer is vntruly done against vs, & for euil, recōpence goodnes: whē we are euill spoken of, speake well: when we are cursed, blesse: when we are rayled vpon, gyue good wordes: whē we are iniuried, forgyue: when we haue displeasure done vnto vs, doe good. &c. Father. Where are these thinges taught in the holy scripture? Sonne. That we ought paciētly to suffer, whatsoeuer is vntruly done agaynst vs, we haue our maister Christ, whose disciples we professe our selues to be, for a most manifest exāple of whom S. Peter writeth on this maner: Christ suffered for vs, leauing vs an ensample, that ye shuld folowe his steppes: whiche did no sinne, neyther was there gyle fonde in his mouth, which whē he was reuiled, reuiled not agayne: when he suffered, he threatened not, but cōmit the vengeaunce to him that iudgeth righteously. S. Paule also exhorteth vs, that with all lowlynesse & mekenes & with all humblenes of mynde we shuld forbeare one another thorow love, and be diligent to kepe the vnitie of the spirite thorow the bonde of peace: agayn, that we should forgyue one another, if anye man haue a quarell against an other, euen as Christ hath forgeuen vs. Father. Where are we taught to recompence euill with good? Sonne. S. Paule sayth: See that none recōpence euill for euill vnto any man: but euer folowe that which is good both among your selues & to al men. Agayne, Recompence to no man euil for euil, &c. Auenge not your selues, but rather gyue place vnto wrath. For it is written: vengeaūce is myne, I will reward, saith the lord. Therfore if thine enemy hōger, fede him: if he thirst, gyue him drinke. For in so doyng thou shalt heape coales of fyre on his head. Be not ouercome of euil, but ouercome euil with goodnes. Father. Where redest thou, that when we are euill spoken of, we should speke wel, &c. Sonne. Our sauiour Christ that most perfecte scholemayster of all perfect righteousnes, sayth: Ye haue heard, that is sayd: An eye for an eye & a toth for a toth. But I say vnto you, that ye resist not euil. But who so euer geueth thee a blowe on the right cheke, turne to him the other also. And if any mā will sue thee at the lawe, & take away thy coate, let him haue thy cloke also. And whosoeuer will cōpell thee to go a myle, go with him twayne. Geue to him that asketh thee, & frō him ỹ wolde borow turne not thou away. Ye haue heard, that is said: Thou shalt loue thy neighbour, & hate thine enemy. But I say vnto you: loue your enemies. Blesse them that curse you. Do good to them that hate you. Pray for them, which hurt you & persecute you, that ye may be childrē of your father whiche is in heauen. For he maketh his sonne to arise on the euill and on the good, and sendeth rayne on the ryghteous and on the vnrighteous. For if ye loue them, whyche loue you, what reward haue ye? Do not the Publicanes also euen the same? And if ye

Let him eschewe euill, and do good: let him seke peace, & ensue it. Father. Declare nowe in few wordes, what God forbiddeth, & what he requireth in this his fyrste commaundement, that we may procede with the residue. Sonne. God forbiddeth vs, that we outwardly we should kill, hurt, noye, binder, stryke, or smyte our neighbour, or yet speake & report euill of him, or hinder his good name, or vngently entreate eyther him, or any that do belong vnto him. That same God forbiddeth vs, that inwardlye we should maligne, enuy, or hate our neighbour. And the same Lorde oure God requireth of vs, that patientlye suffer whatsoeuer is vniustly done agaynst vs: that we speake well of our neighbour: that we mayntayne his good name: that we furder his commoditie & profyte: and seke al meanes possible, as to loue him with our harte vnfaynedly, so moste redelye to do for him & his to the vttermoste of his power, that we may satisfye the will of God, whiche sayeth: Thou shalt loue thy

An harlot wil make a mãto begge his bread but an honeſt maried wyfe will hunte for the precious lyfe. Maye a man carie fyre in his boſome, and his clothes not be brent? Or can one go vpon hote coales, & his feete not be hurt? Euen ſo whoſoeuer goeth into his neighbours wyfe, and toucheth her, can not be vnguiltie. Men do not vtterlye deſpyſe a theefe that ſtealeth to ſatiſfye his ſoule, when he is hungry: but if he may be goten, he reſtoreth agayne ſeuen tymes aſmuch, or els he maketh recompence with al the goodes of his houſe. But who ſo committeth adulterye with a woman, he is a foole, and hurteth his lyfe to deſtruction. He getteth him ſelfe alſo ſhame & diſhonour, ſuch as ſhall neuer be put out. For the gelouſye and wrath of the man will not be entreated, no, thoughe thou wouldeſt offer hym great giftes to make amendes, he will not receaue them. The auncient father Tobie ſayd to his ſonne: My ſonne kepe thee well from whoredom: and beſyde thy wyfe ſe that no faute be knowen of thee. Job alſo ſayth: I made a couenaunt with myne eyes, that I would not looke vpon a damſell. For how great a portion ſhall I haue of God, & what enheritaunce from the almightie on hye? As for the vngodlye, and he that ioyneth him ſelfe to the companye of wicked doers, ſhall not deſtruction and miſery come vpon him? &c. If my harte hath luſted after my neighbours wyfe, or if I haue layde wayte at his doze. O then let my wife grinde vnto another man, and let other men lye with her. For this is a wickednes and ſinne, that is worthy to be puniſhed; yea a fyre that ſhuld vtterly conſume and roote out all my ſubſtaunce. Ieſus the ſonne of Syrach ſayeth: Be aſhamed of whoredom, before father and mother. Be aſhamed of lyeng, before the Prince and men of authorite: Of ſinne before the iudge & ruler: Of offence, before the congregation & people: Of vnrighteouſnes, before a companion & frend: Of theft, before thy neighbours. As for the trueth of God & his couenaunt, be not aſhamed therof. Be aſhamed to lye with thyne elbowes vpon the bread: be aſhamed to loke vpõ harlottes: be aſhamed to turne away thy face from thy frende. Be aſhamed to take and not to gyue: be aſhamed alſo to loke vpon another mans wyfe, & to make many tryfling wordes with her mayden, or to ſtand by her bed ſyde. Be aſhamed to vpbrayde thy frende: when thou geneſt anye thing, caſt him not in the teethe with all. Father, Are ſuche only as are maryed, forbidden to lede an incontinent lyfe? Sonne, Both the maried & vnmaried are forbidden in this precept to exerciſe any corporal vncleanes in their lyfe & cõuerſaciõ: Whither they be linked with the chene of matrimony, or free frõ it, this cõmandement forbiddeth thẽ to practiſe any kynde of incõtinency in their maners. not commit adultery e, forbiddeth all vnlawfull knowledge of mans woman, be they maried or vnmaryed. Father. Proue by the worde of God, that not only adultery, but fornication also and al other vnclenes is forbidden. Sonne. God sayeth: There shall be no whore of the daughters of Israel, nor whorekeper of the sonnes of Israel. Agayn, thou shalt not make thy daughter comō that ꝓ wouldest cause her to be an whore, lest the lande also fall to whoredom, & be full of wickednes. The wyse man sayeth, when wisdom entereth into thyne harte, & thy soule delyghteth in knowledge, then shall counsel preserue thee, & vnderstanding shal kepe thee, ꝓ thou mayst be delyuered frō the straunge woman, and from her that is not thyne owne, whiche geueth swete wordes, forsaketh the husbande of her youth, and forgetteth the couenaunt of her God. For her house is enclined vnto death, & her pathes vnto hell. All they that got in vnto her, come not againe, neyther take they hold of the wordes of lyfe. Therfore walke thou in the way of iuste as be vertuous & kepe the pathes of the righteous. For the iust shall dwel in the land, & they that be perfect, shal remayne in it: but the vngodlye shall be rooted out of the lande: and the wicked doers shall be rooted out of it. Agayne, Applye not thy selfe to the disceitfulnesse of a woman. For the lippes of an harlot are a droppinge honye combe, and her throte is more glisteringe then oyle. But at the laste she is as bitter as wormwoode, and her tounge as sharpe as a twoedged swerde. Her fete go downe vnto death, and her steppes pearse thorow vnto hel, &c. Kepe thy way farre from her, and come not nye the doores of her house: that thou geue not thy strength vnto other, & thy yeres to the cruell: that other men be not filled with thy goodes, & that thy labours come not in a straunge house: yea that thou mourne not at the last, when thou hast spent thy body and lusty grene youth, & then sayest: Alas, why hated I norture? why dyd my harte despyse correction? wherfore was I not obedient vnto the voyce of my teachers, & enclined not vnto them that enfourmed me? I am come almost into al mischefe in the middest of the multitude and congregatiō. &c. Be glad with the wyfe of thy youth. Louing is the hynde, and frendlye is the roe: Let her breastes alwayes satisfye thee, & holde thee euer content with her loue. Why sonne, why wilt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, & embrace the bosome of another woman? For euerye mans wayes are open in the sight of the Lord, and he pondereth al theyr goinges. The wickednes of the vngodlye shall catche him selfe, & with the snares of his owne sinnes shal he be trapped. &c. Heare me nowe therfore O my childeren, & marke the wordes of my mouth. Let not thyne hart wander in the wayes of an whore, and be not thou deceaued in her pathes. For many one hath she wounded and cast downe: yea many a stronge man hath bene slayne by the meanes of her. Her houses are the waye vnto hell, and bring men downe into the chambers of death. The holye Apostle Sainct Paule sayeth: If any that is called a brother (that is to saye, a Christian) be an whoremonger, or a couetous person, or a worshipper of Images, eyther a rayler, eyther a dronkarde, or an extorcioner deceaue you with vayne wordes. For because of such thinges cometh the wrath of god vpon the childrē of beliefe. Be not ye therefore cōpanions of thē. Father. Are we only forbidden in this precept the vnclennes of the body? Sonne. Not only. For God forbiddeth vs here also the impurite & vnclenes of the mynde. The lawe of God, as you know, is spirituall, & must be fulfilled not only outwardly but also inwardlye, euē with pure affectes & clene mocions of the harte. For euen as he is verye murtherar & mānsleyer before god, which beareth hatred & malice in his harte agaynst his neighbour, although he neuer laye hande on him, nor hurte him outwardlye: so like wyse is he a verye adulterer and whoremonger before God, which nourisheth fleshly lustes in his hart although he neuer commit the outwarde vnclennes. For as God is a spirit, so iudgeth he all thinges of the spirite. If our hartes be ones polluted and defyled with the euill lust and filthye concupiscence of anye woman, we are streightwayes no les adulterers & fornicatours before God, then we are before men, when we haue outwardlye cōmitted the very acte. And as I am guilty and worthy before men, when I haue ī wickedly behaued my selfe of punishement, yea of very death: so lyke wyse am I before God guilye and worthy of euerlasting damnacion, so long as the euill concupiscence entreth into my harte, and I with delighte consent to the same. Father. Howe prouest thou this? Sonne. By the wordes of Christ, which sayeth: Ye haue heard, that it was saide to them of olde tyme: Thou shalt not commit adultery. But I saye vnto you, that whosoeuer loketh on another mans wyfe to lust after her, hath cōmitted adultery with her all redy in his hart. Therfore if thy right eye hinder thee, plucke him out, and cast him frō thee. For better is it vnto thee, that one mēber perish, then that thy whole body shuld be cast into hell. And if thy right hande hinder thee, cut him of, & cast him from thee. For better it is vnto thee, that one of thy members perish, then that all thy body shuld be cast into hell. Again, those thinges, which procede out of the mouth, come from the harte, & they defyle the man. For out of the harte procede euil thoughtes, murders, breakinge of wedlocke, whoredoms, theftes, false witnesse, blasphemies. These are the thinges, whiche defyle a man. S. Paule also sayeth: Mortifye your earthy members, fornications, vnclennes, vnnaturall lust, euill concupiscence, &c. Hereto agreeth the saying of S. Peter: Derelye beloued, I beseche you as straungers and pilgrymes, abstayne from fleshly lustes, which fight against the soule, and se that ye haue honest conuersation amonge the Gentils, that where as they backbyte you as yll doers, they maye se your good workes, and prayse God in the daye of visitacion. Father. Hath God at any tyme plaged this sinne of adultery, whoredom, &c. Sonne. Yea verye ofte, and that most grevously. Father. Shewe me that out of the holye scripture. Sonne. Were there not slayne in the wildernesse.xxiii. thousand men for whoredom? was not the whole tribe of Benamin afterward almost vtterly destroyed for abusing a Leuites wife: Dauid rished not the tonges of men the Priestes as battell because of their so much vnhamefaced wickednesse committed with Bersabe: who knoweth not, into what great miseryes Dauid fell and his kingdom also for the aduultery, whiche he committed with Vrias wyfe? How was Salomon plaged for his vnmach vncertenes lyuing with women? Was not his most excellent wisedom turned into most extreme folishe nes, when at the entysement of women he fel from honouring the true God vnto ỹ worshipping of Idols? So true is it, which the Prophet hath: Whoredom, wyne and dronkennes take away the harte. Many other and diuers histories are founde in the holy Byble, which dayly sufficiently declare, howe greuously God hath plaged aduultery, whoredom and all vncleanes in euery age: as I maye speake nothing of the most greuous plage, whiche is euerlastinge damnation. Seyng that God doth so greatly detest & abhorre this abhominacion of vncleanes: come of, tel me, howe it maye be expedient for vs to prouoke not God vnto anger, and procure vnto vs [illegible] seruage, as thapostle sayth, it is a dredeful thing to fall into the handes of the lyuing God. Sonne. To leue an honest life is the gifte of God, and can not be obteyned [illegible] as the wyse man sayeth: I know, that I can not be chaste, except God geueth the grace: and as our Sauiour Christ sayeth, all men can not receyue this sayinge (he meaneth, to liue chaste) but they to whom it is geuen. Father. Many wholesome remedies maye be deuysed agaynste these [illegible] of aduultery and whoredom, which ye practyse [illegible] lye not vnprofytable. Father. Howe? Sonne. First, when Sathan thrist of the abhominacion, which as S. Peter sayeth, goeth about lyke a roryng Lyon seekinge whom he maye deuoure, goeth about to attempte vs with his assautes, aduultery, whoredom, incest, or vnto any other vncleanes, which fighteth with the worde of God: it shalbe necessaryy to set before our eyes, not ỹ beyte of the flesh, not the filthy & short pleasure of ỹ body, wherof followeth euerlasting damnacion, but the cõmandemẽt of God, which sayeth: Thou shalt not commit aduultery: & agayne, Fle whoredome: ones agayn, There shalbe no whore among the daughters of Israel, nor no whorekeper among the sonnes of Israel: and cleaue with tothe and nayle, as they vse to saye, to these commaundementes of God, whiche be both most streightlye commaunded to be obserued and kepte. nioure Christ for an ensample. Thy wordes haue I hydden within my harte, sayth the Psalmographe, that I should not sinne agaynst thee. Agayne, wherwithall shall a young man clense his waye: euen by rulyng him selfe after thy worde. It shall not be vnprofytable also to set before our eyes the greuous plages, which God in euery age poureth out vpon the adulterers, fornicatours & all vncleane persons: againe, euerlasting damnacion both of body and soule after this lyfe, if repentaunce ioyned with fayth cometh not. Secondly, forasmuch as we of our selues are able to doe no good thinge, no, not so muche as ones to thincke a good thought (it is God that worketh in vs both the wyll and the dede) it shalbe necessarye, that so sone as we begin to fele that the Deuill and the flesshe beginne to assayle, & to prouoke vs vnto the breache of gods cõmandement, & by this meanes to fal into whordõ adulterye, incest, &c. we streight wayes giue our selues vnto prayer, according to this commaundement of Christ: Watche and pray, that ye fal not into temptacion. The spirite is redy, but the flesshe is weake. For there is not a better armour agaynst Sathan and his lutle suggestions, than faythfull and continuall prayer. The feruent prayer of a righteous man, sayth S. James, auayleth muche. Call on me, sayeth God, in the tyme of thy trouble, & I will delyuer thee, & thou shalt honour me. It shalbe good to praye with the wyse man and to saye: O Lord, thou father and God of my lyfe, let me not haue a proude looke, but turne away all voluptuousnes fro me. Take fro me the lustes of the bodye: let not the desires of vnclenes take holde vpon me, & gyue me not ouer into an vnshamefast & obstinate mynde. Praye also with the Psalmographe on this maner: O turne away myne eyes, lest they beholde vanite: and quicken thou me in thy way. O stablish thy word in thy seruaunt, that I may feare thee. Agayn, make me a cleane hart (O God) and renue a right spirite within me. Cast me not away frõ thy presence, and take not thy holy spirite from me. O geue me the cõforte of thy helpe agayne: and stablyshe me with thy fre spirite.

Idlenesis to be eschewed

Thyrdly, idlenes aboue all thinges is to be eschewed, and some vertuous and honest labour is continually to be practysed, that our enemye fynde vs not idle. For idlenes, is the chefe mastresse, of vices all, as a certayne ballade hath. Nothing doth so open both wyndowes & doores to the tẽpter, as sluggish idlenes. It is truely sayd of the Poet:

Ocia si tollas, periere Cupidinis arcus.

If thou takest away idlenes, sayth he, Cupide the God of loue shotteth his arowes in dayne. Agayne that same Poet sayth:

Queritur Egistus, quare sit factus adulter,
In promptu causa est, desidiosus erat.

If any man will knowe, sayeth he, howe it came to passe that Egistus fell into adultery: It maye sone be knowen, he was idle. Rede we not that Dina Jacobs daughter thorowe idlenes, when she went out to se the daughters of the lande, was rauished and defloured of Sichem

These are the wordes of the Prophet: Behold, the sinnes of thy sister these thinges dyd she and her daughters. Beside that, they reached not their hand to the poore & nedy, but were proude, & dyd abhomina-

The cõpany of ỹ wicked is to be eschewed.

Fourthlye, as idlenes aboue all thinges is to be eschewed, so lykewise the company and communication of wanton and vnhoneste persons is vtterly to be abhorred, if we purpose to lede a godly, pure and honest lyfe. For euill wordes corrupte good maners. Wyth the holye i. Cor. xv.

Notable is this sayinge of Sara younge Tobias wyfe: Thou knowest, O Lord, that I neuer had delyte vnto man, and that I haue kept my soule cleane from all vncleanlye lust. I haue not kept company with those that passe their tyme in sporte, neither haue I made my selfe partaker with them that walke in lyghte behauour. Olde Tobias wolde kepe companye with none, but with such as feared God: and he cõmaunded his sonne yonge Tobias, that he shuld kepe no company, neyther eate nor drinke with the sinners. S. Paule also chargeth vs, that we shuld not eate, nor kepe company with such as are whoremongers and of a leude disposicion. Therefore we entende to haue pure myndes and chast bodies, wherin as in a most sacred temple the holye ghost doth delight to dwell, let vs diligently auoyde the wicked company of wicked doers.

Fyrst ly, to auoyde vncleanes both of body and mynde, it shall not a litle helpe, if we be temperate and sober in our diet, consydering with our selues, that we lyue not to eate, but we eate to lyue: and nature is content with a littel. It was wyttely sayde of the Poet: Sine Cerere & Baccho friget Venus. That is to say, temperancye in eatinge & drinkinge coleth and abateth the couragious luste of the flesshe. The wyse man sayth: Loke not thou vpon the wyne, howe red it is, and what a colour it geueth in the glasse. It goeth downe softly, but at the laste it it byteth lyke a serpent, and stingeth as an adder. So shall thyne eyes loke vnto straunge women, and thyne hart shall muse vpon froward thinges. What a great prouocation vnto vncleanes intemperancie of diet is, the history of Loth the Patriarche doth playnly declare, which not ones geuing place to the filthy Sodomites in any poynte of their abhominacions al the tyme of his beyng among them, at the last throwe dronkenes fell into such horrible wickednes, that he defloured & defiled his owne daughters. Was not the excesse of eatinge and drinkinge one of the causes, that the worlde was ones drowned, and that Sodom and Gomorre with certayne other cities were cõsumed with fyre and brymstone from heauen? It shalbe good therfore, if we entẽd to leade an honest and godly lyfe vtterlye estranged from the filthye sinne of most filthy whoredom & adultery, to folowe the most godly counsell of our sauiour Christ and of his Apostles. Christ sayth: Take hede to your selues, least at anye tyme your hartes be ouercome wyth surfeting and dronkenes. S. Paule sayeth: Let vs walke honestly, as it were in the day light: not in eating and drinkinge, neyther in chambering and wantonnesse, but put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ: & make not prouision for the flesshe to fulfill the lustes of it. Agayne, Be not dronke with wyne, wherein is excesse, but be ye filled with the spirite. S. Peter also sayeth: Forasmuch as Christ hath suffered for vs in the flesh, arme ye your selues lykewise with the same mynde. For he, whiche suffereth in the flesshe, ceaseth from sinne, that he hence forwarde shoulde lyue (as muche tyme as remayneth in the fleshe) not after the lustes of men, but after the will of God. For it is sufficient for vs, that we haue spent the tyme that is past of the lyfe after the will of the gentiles, walking in wantonnes, lustes, in excesse of drinking, in dronkenes, and in abhominable ydolatrye.

Syrthly, forasmuch as matrimony is an honorable state of lyuing, ordayned of God, sanctifyed by the holye ghost, & beautifyed wyth the first frutes of Christes miracles: to the ende that we maye auoyde all vnclennes in our lyfe and conuersacion and leade an honest and vertuous lyfe before God and man, it shalbe verye mete and conuenient for al such as haue not receaued of God the gifte of continencye to take vpon them the holy state of honorable wedlocke, & to ioyne vnto them a wyfe in the feare of God, and so to lyue Christenly and quietly together, as S. Paule sayth: To auoyde whoredom let euerye man haue his owne wyfe, and euery woman her owne husbande. Let the husbande gyue vnto the wyfe due beneuolence. Lykewyse also the wyfe vnto the husbande. The wyfe hath not power of her owne bodye, but the husbande. And lykewyse the husbande hath no power of his owne body, but the wife. Withdraw not your selues one from another, except it be with consent for a tyme, for to gyue your selues to fastinge & prayer. And afterward come together agayne, lest Satan tempt you for your incontinencye. Agayn, If any can not abstayne, let them marye. For it is better to marye thē to burne. Also in another place: This is the wil of God, euen your holynes, that ye should abstayne from fornication, & that euery one of you shuld knowe how to kepe his vessell in holynes and honour, and not in the lust of concupiscence, as do the Heathen, which know not god. Item, wedlocke is honourable amōg all men, and the bed vndefyled. But adulterers and whoremongers God shal iudge, that is to saye, punishe, plage and condemne. To embrace therfore holy matrimony in the feare of God, if the gifte of continencye be not geuen, is the most sure waye to auoyde all vnclennes both of the mynde and bodye. And hereunto ought all kynde of persons the more diligently to applye them selues, because it is the holye ordinaunce of God appoynted vnto that ende. Father. Hytherto haue we hearde, what God forbiddeth in this his seuenth commandemēt: Declare vnto me nowe, what he also requireth in the same. Sonne. That will I doe, yea and that in fewe wordes. Fyrst, where as God sayth: Thou shalt not commit adultrye. He declareth euidentlye, that he approueth and alloweth the holy state of honorable wedlocke, and the godly lyfe of the same, so that the very acte of matrimony betwene the man and the wife done in the feare of God, and vnto that ende for the which God dyd ordayne it, is also pure and cleane in the sighte of God, as S. Paule witnesseth: Wedlocke is honourable amonge all persons, and the bed vndefyled. And forasmuch as matrimonye is an holy state of lyfe, God in thaforesayd precept requireth of all maryed persons, that they lede a pure, clene & blamles lyfe, that they be fayth-

full & louing one to the other, that they breake not the mariage bowe, that they knowe not the company of any straunge flesh, that they defyle not themselues in mynde with euill lustes, and in the body with vnclenes, but that they be pure both in body & spirite vtterly estraunged from all adultery, incest, whordom, and whatsoeuer is vncleane in the sight of God, ioyning together in al godlynes and honestie. And that the maried folke maye the better this doe, God requireth also of them in this precept, that they suffer no fleshlye thoughtes to ryse and rule in theyr hartes, but that they suppresse thē streightwayes thorowe earnest and hartye prayer, and thorowe the diligent consyderacion of Gods holy will, & thorowe the feruent meditacion of the sacred scripture: agayne, that they frequent the company of no leude and euill disposed persons, whereby they maye be the rather prouoked vnto the brech of this commaundement and vnto dissolucion of lyfe: Item, that they auoyde all wanton pastymes, all filthye communication, all vncomely gestures, all ryot and lasciuious apparell, all redinge of wanton bokes, all beholding of vnpure images or pictures, al banketting and excesse of eating and drinking, and beside what so euer may entyse or moue vnto the filthy pleasure of the flesh: and finally that in al theyr woordes and dedes there appere nothing in them but gravitye, modestye and honest behauoure vnto the good ensample of such as be theyr youngers and inferiours.

The duetye of vnmaried persons.

Moreouer God also requireth in this his precept of all single & vnmaryed persons, that they flye the lasciuious lustes of frayle youthe, eschewe al vayne and folyshe pastymes, abhorre al wanton talke, despyse all wicked councels, refrayne all vngodlye company, contemne the reding or singing of baudye balades, refuse ryot & all excesse both in diet and apparell, and in fine, so vtterly reiecte and cast away what so euer is contrarye to the purite of the mynde or to cleanes of the bodye, that they in theyr single lyfe beyng free from all corrupcion of maners, maye bring with them vnto the holy state of honourable matrimony (if God afterwarde call them vnto it) both pure myndes & chast bodies and so continually be made the tēples of the holy ghost, which delighteth to dwell in suche bodies and hartes, as be pure, holye, vertuous, and geuen to the studye of godlynes and honestie. Father. God make vs suche. Sonne. Amen. Father. Let me nowe heare the eight cōmaundement. Sonne. It is this: Thou shalt not steale. Father. Tell me nowe (my dere child) what God forbiddeth, and what he requireth in this his precept. Sonne. Fyrste, God forbiddeth here, that we by no meanes take awaye vniustlye our neighbours goodes, whyther it be openly by force & violence, or secretly by craft or suttiltie. For all this is termed theste in this cōmaundement of God. Father. Let me heare some authorities of the holy scripture, which forbid theste, and the vniust takinge awaye of our neighbours goods. Sonne. God sayeth: Ye shal not steale, neyther lye, neyther deale falsly one with another. The wyse man sayeth. Who so kepeth companye with a thefe, hateth his owne awne soule: he beareth blasphemies, and telleth it not forth. The holye Apostle sayeth also: Let him that stole, steale no more, but let him rather labour with his handes the thing which is good, that he may geue vnto hym that needeth. But we shall note that there be diuerse kyndes of theues, and therfore diuerse kyndes also of theaft. Father. Why, are not they theues onlye, which eyther violentlye take, or craftelye steale awaye other mennes goodes? Sonne. No verelye. There be manye theaues beyides these, whyche steale, robbe, poll, pill, and spoyle no les than the other, although before the worlde they be more glorious theues and not of so greate infamye. Father. Whyche are they? Sonne. Suche as in biynge and sellinge begyle and circumuent theyr neighboure with craste and sutteltye, and vse false weightes and false measures: these also are theues and transgresse this commaundement of God, Thou shalt not steale. Father, where is that forbidde? Sonne. God sayeth: Thou shalt not doe thy neighboure wronge, neyther robbe hym violentlye. If thou sellest ought to thy neyghboure, or byest of thy neighboures hande, ye shall not deceaue one another. Thapostle sayeth: This is the will of God, euen your holynesse, that no man oppresse and defraude his brother in bargayninge, because that the Lorde is the auenger of all suche things. And as concerning false weyghtes and false measures God sayeth: Ye shall doe no vnrighteousnes in Judgement, in metyarde, in weyghte or in measure. True balaunces, true weighbes, a true Epha, and a true Hin shall ye haue. I am the Lorde your God. Agayne, Thou shalt not haue in thy bagge two maner of weighbes, a great and a small: neither shalt thou haue in thy house diuerse measures, a greate and a small. But thou shalte haue a ryghte and iust weighte, and a perfecte and a iust measure shalt thou haue, that thy dayes maye be lengthened in the lande, which the Lorde thy God geueth thee. For all that doe suche thinges, and all that doe vnryghte, are abhominacion vnto the Lord thy God. God sayeth also by the Prophete: Shoulde I not be displeased for the vnryghteous good, that is in the houses of the wicked, & because the measure is minished? Or shoulde I iustifye the false balaunces, and the bagge of deceatefull weyghtes, amonge those that bee full of vyolence vnryghteousnye gotten: where the Cytesens deale with falsehode, speake lyes, and haue deceytefull tounges in theyr mouthes? Therefore I will take in hande to punyshe thee, and to make thee desolate because of thy synnes. The wyse man also sayeth: A false balaunce is an abhominacion vnto the Lorde, but a true weyghte pleaseth hym. Agayne, A true measure and a true balaunce are the Lordes Judgement: he maketh all weighbes. Item, To vse two maner of weighrier of weightes, or two maner of measures, bothe these are abhominable vnto the Lorde. Agayne, The Lorde abhorreth two maner of weightes, and a false balaunce is an euill thing. Father. Ought satisfaction to be made vnto all such, as are thus deceaued and wronged? Sonne. Yea verelye. For whatsoeuer is gotten with craft and suttilye, with vnrighteous bargayning, with false weightes and vniuste measures, is before God playne theafte, and therefore it ought to be restored. Father. Howe prouest thou that by the woorde of God. Sonne. Is not this ỳ cõmandement of God, that yf any man steale an ore or a shepe, & kil it, or sell it, he shal restore for one ore fyue oxen, & for one shepe foure shepe? Are not these also the wordes of god? A theefe shal make restitution. If he haue not wherewith, he shall be solde for his theafte. So lykewyse sayeth Salomon: A theafe, if he may be gotten, restoreth agayne seuen tymes aboue, or elles he maketh recompence with al the good of his house. Were not these the wordes of Zacheus vnto Christe? Beholde Lorde, the halfe of my goodes I gyue to the poore, and if I haue done my man wronge, I restore him fourefolde. Father. What other are they, whiche transgressynge this commaundement, are also theaues before God? Sonne. Suche as vniustlye retayne in theyr handes the reward or wages, that is due to workemen or seruauntes for their labour, payne and trauayle. Father. Are these theues also? Sonne. Yea verelye. For they breake the commaundement of God. Father. Why, what sayth God in this behalfe. Sonne. Thus sayeth he: Thou shalte not doe thy neighbour wronge, neyther robbe him violently: neyther shal the workemans labour abyde with thee vntill the morning. Agayn, thou shalt not defraude an hyred seruaunt that is nedy and poore, whether he be of thy brethren or of the straunger that are in the lande within thy gates: but thou shalte giue him his hyre the same daye, and lette not the Sunne go downe there on. For he is nedye and therewith sustayneth his lyfe: least he crye agaynst thee vnto the Lorde, and it be synne vnto thee. Saint James also sayeth: Goe to nowe ye riche menne: wepe and houle on youre wretchednes that shall come vppon you. Your ryches is corrupte, your garmentes are mothe eaten: your golde and syluer is cankered, and the rust of them shall be a wytnesse vnto you, and shall eate your flesh as it were fyre. Ye haue heaped treasure together euen wrathe to your selues in youre laste dayes. Beholde, the hyer of the labourers, whiche haue reaped downe youre fieldes (whiche hyer is of you kepte backe by fraude) cryeth, and the cryes of them, whyche haue reaped, are entred into the eares of the Lorde of hoostes.

Father. Where is it forbidden in the worde of God, that we may not commit vsurye, that is to saye, receaue suche vnreasonable gayne for the lone of our money, corne, cattell, &c. as we can gette, although it be to the great domage, losse, yea and almoste vtter vndoyinge of oure debtours? Sonne. God sayeth by his seruaunt Moses: If thy brother be waxen poore, and fallen in decay with thee, thou shalte releue hym, both the straunger and sojourner, that he may lyue with thee. And thou shalt take none vsurye of hym, or vauntage. But thou shalt feare thy God, that thy brother may liue with thee. Of these authorities aforesayde, which thou haste alledged me thincke, I may right well gather two thinges: one is, that if I lende vnto my neighbour such thinges, as God hath blessed me with, to doe him pleasure & profyt thereby for any gayne or auauntage, as it shall be couenaunted and agreed vppon betwene him and me, I maye not so lette him out my thinges, that I shall greue or oppresse him by takinge anye commoditye for the lone thereof, but suffer hym soo to haue the vse thereof for a resonable gayne, that I maye not dispropyte but propyte him, not hynder but promote hym, not dryue hym vnto pouertye, but rather helpe that he maye be able to lyue. Sonne. You saye trueth. Father. The other is, that if my neighboure be fallen into pouertye, I ought to lende him parte of such goods, as God hath lent vnto me, freely and without any auauntage, lookinge for no gayne at his hande, that by this meanes he maye be delyuered from the heauye yoke of pouertye, and be able to lyue. Sonne. To suche as be poore we are not only bound by the commaundement of God freely and without anye auauntage to lende, but also to gyue. For thus are we taught of our Sauioure Christ in the Gospell. Geue to euery man that areth of thee. (He speaketh of the poore and nedye, whiche haue not of theyr owne, wherof to lyue) And as ye wouldbe, that menne shoulde do to you, do ye also to them lyke wyse. Magistrates Moreouer what shall I speake of those Magistrates, Prynces, rulers, comen officers and gouernours of the publique weale, whyche without iust cause doe ouercharge their Subiectes with rentes, seruices, Tributes, Coustomes, Toll, subsidies, Pensions, &c. and exact of them more then is nedefull to the mayntenance of the comon charges, and so empouerysshe and oppresse them, whome they ought from all iniurye and wronge to saue and defende? Agayne, whiche doe not bestowe the goodes, which they receaue for the mayntenaunce of the comon weale, as they ought to do, but spende them away in ryot and vnlawefull pleasures, or in thinges of vanitye? These also are theues before God, and shall greuously be punyshed of God for theyr misbehauour: and they be of that companye, of the which the Prophet speaketh on this maner: Thy Prynces are wicked & companions of theues. They lone gyftes altogether, and gape for rewardes. As for the fatherles they helpe him not to his right, neyther will they let the wydowes causes come before thē. Therfore sayth ỳ lord God of hooſtes, the mighty gouernour of Israel: Out vpon ye. I wil ease me of myne enemies, & I wil auēge me of mine aduersaries. The prophet Ezechel sayth also: Thy rulers in ỳ are like rauenig wolues to shed blond, & to destroy soules for their own couetous lucre. Hereto belōgeth ỳ saying

of the Prophet Micheas. Heare O ye Princes, sayth he: Should not ye knowe what were Lawefull and ryghte? But ye hate the good, and loue the euyll. Ye plucke of mennes skynnes, and the flesshe from their bones. Ye eate the flesshe of my people and flaye of their skynne, Ye breake their bones. Ye choppe them in peces as it were into a caudron, and as flesh into a pot. The Prophet Sophonie sayeth also: Wo to that abhominable, filthy and cruell citie, which wil not heare, nor be reformed. Her trust is not in the Lorde, neyther will she hold her to her God. Her rulers within her are as roarynge Lyons: her Iudges are as wolues in the euening, which leaue nothing behinde them till the morowe. Sophon.iij

Agayne, what shal I speake of those subiectes, which contrarye to the lawe of God and good conscience eyther grudge to paye, or elles vniustlye withholde suche taxes, tributes, customes, subsidies, rentes, pensions, &c. as are due to the Magistrates or comon officers for the conseruation of the publique weale, that they maye be the more able to sustaine and beare the charges of the comon administration? These also are theues, and greuouslye offende God, whiche by his Apostle geueth this commaundement: Geue to euerye man his duety: tribute to whom tribute belõgeth: custome to whom custome is due: feare to whom feare belongeth: honour to whom honour partayneth. Subiectes. Rom.xiii

Furthermore, what shall I speake of Byshoppes, Pastors, Curates, Preachers, and such other spirituall Ministers, which contrary to theyr profession and calling steale away from the people of God the nourishment both of their soules and bodies, whyle they neyther fede them with the true and sincere word of God, which is the fode of the soule, nor yet with corporall sustenaunce for the comfort of theyr bodyes, but lyke belyed Hypocrites and voluptuous Epicures giue thẽselues to the pleasures of the flesshe, to eating and drinking, to dyssinge and carding, to hunting and haukinge. &c. beyng ledde with no care toward the flocke of Christ, whom he hath so derelye purchased, euen with his owne dere and precious bloude, but so framing their lyfe, as though there were no lyfe after this, or as though they shoulde neuer render accomptes of theyr pastorall office to the hygh pastore & shepeherde Christ. These are also theues, and deserue at the hande of God most greuous punishement. Agaynst these sluggysh, vnmercifull and theuishe pastores God cryeth out by his Prophet, saying: Wo be vnto the shepeharides of Israel, that fede them selues. Should not the shepeharides fede the flocke? ye haue eaten vp the fatte: ye haue clothed you with the wolle: the best fedde haue ye slayne, but the flocke haue ye not nourished. The weake haue ye not holden vppe: the sicke haue ye not healed: the broken haue ye not bound together: the outcastes haue ye not brought agayne: the lost haue ye not sought, but churlysshly and cruellye haue ye ruled them. &c. Yea these are those hyrelynges, theaues, Robbers and Murtherars, whiche enter not into the shepefolde by the doore, but clymme vppe some other waye: whiche, whan Byshops. Pastors. Curates. Act.xx. i.Pet.i. Ioan.x. Ezech.xxxiiij Ioan.x.

they se the wolfe comming, leaue the shepes flye away. For they came only into the shepefolde to steale, to kyl, and to destroy, and not to teache, to comfort and to edifye: which is the very proper and true office of a faythfull and godlye pastore. Wo be vnto me, sayeth S. Paule, i.Cor.ix. if I preache not the Gospell.

Parisheners

Those Parisheners also, whiche do detayne and withholde suche dueties and paymentes, as by order of lawe are due to the ministers of Gods woorde for their laboure, trauayle, and payne in the ministerye, are theues before God and transgressoures of his holye lawe. i.cor.ix. For the Lorde hath ordayned, that they whiche preache the Gospell, Math.x. i.Tim.v. shoulde lyue of the Gospell. The workeman is worthy his rewarde. Deu.xxv. The Priestes that rule well, are worthy of double honoure, but most specially they, whyche laboure in the woorde and doctryne. For the scripture sayeth: Thou shalt not mosel the mouth of the ore, that treadeth out the corne. And S. Paule sayth: Let him that is taught in the Galat.vi woorde of God, minister vnto him that teacheth him all good thinges. Be not deceaued. God is not mocked.

Lawers. Aduocates Attornies. Proctors.

Agayne, what shall I speake of those Lawers, Aduocates, Attorneies, Proctors, &c, whiche for their owne gaynes do councell a man to wage the Lawe, makinge him to beleue, that his matter is good, whã in dede they thincke it nought: which also for money do so craftily handle or pleade a matter, that they with their shyftes & colours will purposely hide the trueth, and make a good cause to seme badde, and a bad cause to appere good? Of those Judges, which for bribes or anye corrupcion do wittingly and willinglye giue wronge iudgement? Of those Marchaunt men, Brokers, Chapmen, Marchauntes factors, whiche require vnreasonable gaynes in sellinge of their marchaundyse: vtter corrupt and naughty wares for good: deceaue their neighbour with false weight and measure, &c? Of husbandmen in the contry, which for worldly lucre sell their corne, cattell, or any other vitaile at vnreasonable prices, and seke to make a dearth of thinges, where no nede is? Of those Gentlemen, which eyther take of their tenauntes suche Fines and Incomes, or els so stretch out the prices and annuall rentes of their fermes, that their fermers must eyther go on begging, or els sell their corne, haye, cattell, butter, cheese, &c. at such vnreasonable prices, as shal turne vnto the vtter empouerishment of the byers? money, which they haue borowed? Of such, as do not rendre the thinges which they haue found, so farre as they can come to knowledge of ye trewe owners? Of them that doe not gyue agayne such thinges as be committed to their custodye for a tyme? Of Gamesters, as Pilers and Carders, &c, which direct their playe only to this ende, by vnlawfull pastymes, yea by craft and suttiltie to deceaue their neighboure, and to winne away their substaunce? beggarye, beggarye, and from beggarye many tymes vnto theauerye, and from theauery come to the pillarie, yea to the halter? Of valeaunt and stu- dye beggars, which beyng able to labour and to get their lyuing with the sweate of their browes and with the labour of their handes, walke vp and down idelly from doze to doze, and without al shame throwe their importune begging get that vnto them, which is due vnto suche as be in dedepoze and are not able to worke for the infirmitie and weke- nes of their bodye? To conclude, what shall I speake of all them, that do hauke & hunte for other mens goods against the will of the owners or do hurte them in any parte of the same, &c? All these aforesayde are theues before God, although the world doth not so iudge them, nor pu- nishe them for the same. Father. There is a great number of theues by thy reckening. Sonne. The world is full of prettye theues. For there is almost no state or kynde of lyfe, frō the hyest to the lowest, of the which there be not many that haue broken this commaundement. Who so euer dealeth with his neighbour vniustly or vntruelye, & otherwyse then he would that his neighbour should deale with him, he is before God a verye theefe and a robber. For this is the commaundement of Christ: Whatsoeuer ye woulde, that men should do vnto you, doe ye the very same vnto the. For loke with what measure ye mete vnto other, with the same shall it be metten agayne to you. Father. Why, will God punishe them also, that transgresse this commandement? Sonne. Why should they escape vnpunished? Father. Lette me heare it proued by the woordes of God, that the transgressours of this commaundement shall not escape free from punishment. Sonne. God commaunded in the law of Moses, that if any person among the Israelites dyd steale a man, and sell him, the same should suffer death. Agayne, if any dyd steale an Oxe or a shepe, that he should restore fyue oxen for an oxe, & four shepe for a shepe. Item, that it should be lawfull for a man takinge a theefe in his house before day light, to kill him. The wyse man sayth, he that is partaker with a theefe, hateth his owne soule. S. Paule wryteth, that theues, extorcioners, robbers, pollers, &c. shall not inherite the kingedō of God. He addeth moreouer, that if any man oppresse or defraude his brother in bargaynynge, the Lorde will be auenged of him. Jesus the sonne of Syrach sayth: Shame and sorow goeth ouer the theefe. The Prophete Esaye cryeth out agaynst the theefe on this maner: Wo be to thee, that spoylest: for thou shalt be spoyled agayne. So lyke wyse doth the Prophet Micheas, sayinge: O wo be vnto them that ymagine to do harme, and deuyse vngraciousnes vpon their beddes to perfourme it in the clere daye: for their power is against God. Whē they come to haue lande, they take it by violence: they robbe men of their houses. Thus they oppresse a man for his house, and euerye man for his heri- tage. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde agaynst this household I haue deuysed a plague, where out ye shall not plucke your neckes. Ye shal no more go so proudly: for it will be a perillous tyme. Agayne: Should I not be displeased for the vnrighteous good in the houses of the wicked, and because the measure is minished? Or should I iustifye the false balaunces and the bagge of the disceatfull weyghtes among those that be full of rychesse vnrighteoullye goten: where the citizens deale with falshode, speake lyes, and haue deceitfull tounges in theyr mouthes? Therefore I will take in hande to punish thee, and to make the desolate, because of thy sinnes. The Prophete Habacuc cryeth out in lyke maner, saying: Woo be vnto him that heapeth vp other mennes goods. Howe longe will he lode him selfe with thicke claye? O howe sodenly shall they stande vp that shal byte, and awake that shall trace thee in peces? yea thou shalt be theyr pray. Seing that thou hast spoyled many nations, therfore shal the remnaunt of the people spoile thee: because of mens bloud, and for the wrong done in the lande, in the citye, and vnto al them that dwell therin. Woo be vnto him, that coueteously gathereth together euil goten goods into his house, that he may set his nest on hye, to escape from the power of misfortune. Thou hast deuised the shame of thyne owne house: for thou hast slayne to muche people, and hast wilfully offended, so that the very stones of thy walle shall cry out of it, and the tymber that lyeth betwixt the ioyntes of the buildinge shall aunswere. Woo be vnto hym that buildeth the towne with bloud, & maintayneth the citie with vnrighteousnes. Rede we not, that ỳ Prophet Zachary saw a flying boke of xx. cubites long, & x. cubites brode, in the which was wryten the curse, that shal fall vpō al theues? I will bringe it forth, sayeth the Lorde of hoostes, so that it shall come to the house of the thefe, and shal remayne in his house, and consume it with the tymber & stones therof. The wyse man also saith: Who so hordeth vp rychesse with the deceitfulnes of hys tounge, he is vayne and a foole, and lyke vnto thē that seke their owne death. The robberyes of the vngodly shalbe their owne destruction: for they will not doe the thing that is right.

Moreouer in the boke of Iosua we rede, that Achan the Sonne of Zereth stolle and conueyed away a goodly Babilonishe garment, & two hondred sycles of siluer, and a tonge of gold of fifty sicles weight, and that therfore at the commandement of God he was stoned vnto death: & his stollen good with all that euer he had beside, his sonnes and his daughters, his Oxen and his asses, his shepe and his tent, &c. were brent with fyre. Was not Gehezi the seruant of Elisa the prophet stryken with leprosy euen vnto his dyenge daye both he & his sede for euer, because with craft and subtilnye in his maisters name he toke of Naaman the Syrian two talentes of siluer, and two chaunge of garmentes? I passe ouer with silence kinge Antiochus, which, whan he with his armye entred into the temple purposing to haue spoyled it, & to take out of it greate summes of money, was slayne both he and hys company, and hewen in peces. What shall I here rehearse, howe that king Seleucus vnderstāding that there were great summes of gold and syluer in the temple of Ierusalem sent Heliodorus his stewarde thyther to take away the money and to bring it vnto him? But whan thafozesaid Heliodozus with his men of warre brafte into the temple and were about the treasure: the spirite of God shewed him selfe openly, so that all they whiche presumed to obeye Heliodozus, fell thozowe the power of God into great fearefulnes and dzede. Foz there appered vnto them an hozse with a terrible man syttinge vppon him decke in goodlye araye, and the hozse smote at Heliodozus with his fozefete. Howe he that sate vpon the hozse: hadde harneste of golde vpon him. Mozeouer there appered two fayze and beautiful yong men in goodly araye, which stode by him, scourged him of both the sydes, and gaue him many strypes without ceasing. With that fell Heliodozus sodenlye vnto the grounde. So they toke him vp (beinge compassed about with great darkenes) & bare him out vpon a bere. Thus he that came with so many runners and men of warre into the sayd treasure, was borne out, where as no man might helpe him, and so the power of god was manifest and knowen. He laye still domme also by the power of God, destitute of all hope and lyfe.

These and such lyke ensamples contayned in the holy scripture declare euidently, how greatly God detesteth and abhozreth robbinge, stealing, spoyling, polling, picking and all vnrighteous dealinge, and that he wil by no meanes suffer it to escape vnpunished. Father. Thou sayest trueth my child. Here learne we also mozeouer, that all thinges that we doe possesse are not comon, and at libertie to take them foz all other, also, & to doe with them what they lust without checke, but that there is a propziete & ownership of thinges among the people of God. Sonne. If it were otherwyse, this commandement of God, Thou shalt not steale, were geuen in vayne: and it were no theste noz robberye to take frō my neighbour, what I lusted, & to do withall what I wold, seing all thinges be comon amonge the Chzistians, and nothinge proper. But the wozde of God teacheth vs, that a Chzisten mā may with a good conscience haue richesse, enioye and possesse them, and vse them as his owne. Foz richesse is the good gift of God, as Salomon sayth: The blessing of the Lozde maketh men riche. And Sirach sayth, that both rychesse and pouertye cometh from God, S. Paule wzote not vnto Bishoppe Timothe, that he should commaund the ryche men of this wozld, that they should not be ryche, noz haue any rychesse & possessions, but rather cast awaye theyz goods from them as thinges vnlawefull to be possessed, but he chargeth him to commaunde the ryche men, that they be not hye mynded, noz trust in vncertaine richesse, but in the lyuing God (which geueth vs abundantly al thinges to enioye them) that they do good: that they be ryche in good wozkes, that they be redy to geue, and gladly to distribute, layenge vp in stoze foz them selues a good foundacion agaynste the tyme to come, that they maye obtayne euerlastinge lyfe. It is not forbidden the Chzistians to haue rychesse, but to set theyz whole hart vpon the rychesse, as the Psalmographer sayth: If ye haue abundaunce of rychesse, set not your hart vpō them. Blessed is the ryche, sayeth Syrach, whiche is founde without blemish,

Math.xix, Doeth not our Saviour Christ saye, that it is more easye for a gable rope to go thorowe the eye of a nedle, than for a riche man to enter into the kingdom of heauen? Sonne, I graunt. What shall I speake of the noble kinges, Dauid, Salomon, Ezechias, Josias, &c. and of the vertuous women Judith, Hester, &c. and such lyke, whiche all had greate possessions and very many goods and rychesse: and yet were they the derely beloued seruaunts of God, and are now enheritours of euerlastinge glorye. Christ sayeth not simply, that the poore are blessed, and remayneth, that thou declarest vnto me, what God requireth of vs to be done in this lawe. Sonne. In this lawe God requireth of vs, that we shuld not only not steale or vniustly conuey away our neighbours goods by anye meanes from him and turne them vnto our owne vse and commoditye, but also that we should seeke all meanes possible to saue, kepe & defende his goods: to helpe him, to studye howe we may eyther in woorde or in deede pleasure him, that his goodes thorowe vs may not be diminished, but encreased. Wherbye so great care ought we to haue for our neighbour & for all thigs ꝑ appertayne vnto him, as we haue for our selues & for owers. Father. Howe ꝓuest thou this? Sonne. It is sone ꝓued. God saith, Thou shalt loue thy neighbour euē as thy selfe. Agayne he sayeth: Whatsoeuer ye wolde, that men shoulde do to you, do yeso euen to them also. For this is the lawe and the ꝓphets. And in the lawe of Moses God gaue this commaundement sayinge: Thou shalt not se thy brothers oxe or shepe go astray, and withdrawe thy selfe from them: but shalt bring them agayn vnto thy brother. And if thy brother be not nye vnto thee or if thou know him not, thē bring it to thyne owne house, and it shall remayne with thee, vntyll thy brother aske for them, and then delyuer him them agayne. In lyke maner shalt thou do with his asse, and so shalt thou do with his rayment and with all the lost thinges of thy brother, whiche he had lost & thou hast founde, shalt thou do lykewyse, for thou mayst not hyde it. Thou shalt not se thy brothers asse or oxe fall down by the way, & withdrawe thy selfe frō thē, but shalt helpe him to heane thē vp agayn. Agayn he sayth, If thou mete thyne enemies oxe or asse goying astray, thou shalt bring them to him agayne. If thou se thyne enemies asse lycke vnder his burthen, thou shalt not passe by and let him alone, but shalt healpe him to lift him vp agayne.

Here are we cōmaunded of God to do good to our neighbour, to helpe saue and defende our neighbours goods, that nothing of them perish: yea and that not only if he be our frende, but also if he be our enemye, that we maye be the children of our father, which is in heauen (for he maketh his Sunne to aryse on the euill and on the good, and sendeth rayne on the righteous and on the vnrighteous,) so farre is it of, that we ought vniustlye to take awaye his goods, or in anye poynt to hinder him. What we ought to be to our neighboure, the parable of the wounded man and of the Samaritane doe manifestlye set forth vnto vs in the Gospell of S. Luke: whiche I wold wishe all menne at all tymes to haue before their eyes. Father. What is that parable? Rehearse it vnto me, Sonne. S. Luke describeth it on this maner: A certayne man (sayeth he) descended from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among theues, which robbed him of his rayment, and wounded him & departed, leauing him halfe dead. And it chaunced, that there came downe a certayne ꝓyest that same waye, and when he sawe him he passeth passed by. And lykewise a Leuite, when he went nye to the place, came and loked on him, and passed by. But a certayne Samaritane, as he iourneyed, came vnto him, and when he sawe him, he had compassion on him, and went to him, and bounde vp his woundes, and poured in oyle and wyne, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to a comon inne, and made prouision for him. And on the morowe when he departed, he toke out two pence and gaue them to the hoost, and sayd vnto him: Take cure of him, and whatsoeuer thou spendest more, when I come agayne, I will recompense thee. Father. This parable setteth forth our duety right well to our neighboure. Sonne. It teacheth vs, that we shoulde be redye at all tymes both with oure harte, body and goods to helpe and succour our neighbour: so farre is it of, that we oughte to enuye him, the good successe of thinges, or the felicitie of worldly goods, or vniustly by any maner of meanes to conuey his goods vnto vs and vnto our vse, but rather reioyce, when all thinges go prosperously with our neighbour, and to the vttermost of our power labour that he and whatsoeuer pertayneth vnto him maye be safely preserued without all peril and daunger. For charitie is true neighbourly loue seketh not her owne, but the commoditie and profyt of other. Father. What requireth God of vs more in this lawe?

The duety of of the ryche.

Sonne. That suche as be ryche shoulde deale mercifully and lyberalye with the poore, helping their necessitie and releuing their pouertye. For vnto this ende hath God blessed them with worldly substaunce, that they should be mercifull and bounteous to the poore, and gladlye and willingly minister vnto them all good thinges, as faythfull and true stye Stewardes of the Lordes treasures. Father. Lette me heare it proued by the worde of God, that the Lorde our God requireth of the ryche men this mercye and liberalitie to the poore. Sonne. The holye scripture is large in this behalfe. God sayeth: There shall be no nedye person nor beggare among you, that the Lorde thy God maye bielle thee. Agayne. If any of thy brethren among you, be poore within any of thy gates in the lande, whiche the lord God geueth thee, thou shalt not hearden thyne harte, nor shutte thyne hande from thy poore brother: but open thyne hande vnto him, and lende him sufficient for his nede, whiche he hath. Beware, that there be not a wicked poynt in thyne harte, that thou woldest sayer: The seuenth yeare the yere of fredome is at hande: and therfore it greueth thee to loke on thy poore brother, and geuest him naught, and he then crye vnto the Lorde against thee, & it be sinne vnto thee: but geue him, & let it not greue thine harte to giue vnto him, because that for this thing the Lorde thy God shall bielle thee in all thy workes, and in all that thou puttest thyne hande to. The lande shall neuer be without poore. And therfore I cõmaunde thee sayinge: Thou shalt open thyne hande vnto thy brother that is nedye and poore in the lande. The wyse man sayeth: Withdrawe no

Despyse not an hungry soule, and defye not the pore in his necessitye. Greue not the harte of him that is helpeles, and withdrawe not thy gifte from the needfull. Refuse not the prayer of one that is in trouble: turne not away thy face from the nedy: cast not thyne eyes aside frō the poore for any euill will, that thou giue him none occasiō to speake euill of thee. For if he complayne of thee in the bitternes of his soule, his prayer shall be harde, euen he that made him shall heare him. Be courteous vnto the company of the pore. Let it not greue thee to bowe downe thyne eare vnto the poore, but paye the debte, and gene him a frendlye aunswere, and that with mekenes. Let not thyne hande be stretched out to receaue, and shutte when thou shouldest giue. Againe he sayth: The bread of the needy is the life of the poore: he that defraudeth him therof, is a man sleare. Geue almes of thy goodes, and turne neuer thy face from the poore: and so shall it come to passe, that the face of the Lorde shall not be turned awaye from thee. Be mercyfull after thy power. If thou haste much, geue plenteously: if thou hast lytle doe thy diligence gladlye to gene of that lyttel. For so gathereste thou thy selfe a good rewarde in the daye of necessitye. Sonne.

Sonne. God requireth also of vs in this his lawe, that we shoulde be content with that we haue, and not falsely and vniustlye goe about to be ryche with the incommoditie and hinderaunce of our neighboure but be well pleased with our owne, whether it be muche or lytell, auoydinge couetousnesse, whiche is the roote of all euils, in all our lyfe & conuersacion. Father. Where are we taughte to be content with our owne? Sonne. The blessed Apostle sayth: Godlynesse is great richesse, yf a man be content with that he hath. For we brought nothinge into the worlde, neyther maye we carye any thing out. But when we haue foode and rayment, we must therewith be content. They that will be ryche, fall into temptacion and snares of the deuill, and into many foolishe and noysome lustes, whiche drowne men into perdicion and destruction. For couetousnesse of money is the roote of all euill: whyche whyle some lusted after, they erred from the faythe, and tangled themselues with many sorowes. But thou man of God, flye suche thinges. Folowe ryghteousnes, godlynes, fayth, loue, pacience, mekenes, &c. Also in another place he sayeth: Let your conuersacion be without couetousnes, and be content with suche thynges as ye haue all redye. For he hath sayde: I will not fayle thee, neyther forsake thee: so that we maye boldely say: The Lorde is my helper, and I will not feare, what man may doe vnto me. Hereto agreeth the sayinge of Syrach: Be it litle or much that thou hast, holde the content with all: and thou shalt not be blamed as a bagabounde: for a miserable lyfe is it to goe from house to house. Father. What requireth God more of vs in this precept? Sonne. He requireth that euery man in his vocation & calling shall so lyue, that he shall not onlye not hurte his neyghbour eyther in thought, worde or dede, but also do good to all men, so much as lyeth in him. The Magistrate ought not to take to much of his Subiectes, nor to ouercharge them with intollerable paymentes, but only to lay suche burthens vpon them, as they may wel and conuenientlye beare, yea and that for the mayntenaunce of the comon weale: euer settinge before theyr eyes, that they are the Mynisters of God appoynted to beare rule not for their owne profyt & commoditye, but for the wealth and profyt of Gods people: as S. Paule sayeth: The Magistrate is the minister of God for thy wealth. Hereto agreeth the sayeng of Jesus the Sonne of Syrach: If thou be made a ruler, pryde not thy selfe therein, but be thou as one of the people. Take diligent care for them, and loke well thereto: and when thou hast done all thy duety, syt thee downe, that thou mayst be merye with them, and receaue the crowne of honoure.

Marchants, Husbandmē Artisycers

They that exercyse them selues in marchandyse, in byenge and selling, in husbandry, in manuall artes & handye occupacions, ar ought so to trauayle in their misteries, that all craft & suttilte, all falsehode and dissimulacion set aparte, they maye deale treuelye and faythfullye with all men, hauing euer an eye not so muche vnto their owne priuate profyt, as to the commoditye of the contrey wherin they dwell: remembring also, that we be not borne for our selues, but to do good to other and to serue other.

Gentlemen, Landlordes

The Gentlemen and Landlordes ought so to let out their fermes, landes, tenementes, Lordships, &c. for a reasonable pryce, that their Tenauntes may be able to lyue vnder them, to nourish their familye, to bring vp their children in good artes, to mayntayne hospitalitye, to helpe to beare the charges of the cōmon weale, to sell their corne, cattell and all other victuals for a meane & indifferent pryce, and to doe good vnto suche as haue nede of their helpe.

vs. For we behaued not our selues inordinatly amonge you: neyther toke we bread of anye man for naught: but wrought with labour and sweate night and daye, because we would not be chargeable to anye of you: not but that we had authoritie: but to make our selues an ensample vnto you to folowe vs. For when we were with you, this we warned you of, that if any wold not worke, the same should not eate. For we haue hearde saye, that there are some, whiche walke amonge you inordinatly, working nothing at all but being busye bodies. The that are suche we commaunde & exhorte by our Lorde Jesus Christ, that they worke with quietnes, and eate their owne bread.

They also that are called beggars, and get their lyuing by aringe almes from dore to dore, if they haue theyr limmes & be able to worke ought not to ronne vp and downe ydelye, but to labour with their handes for their lyuinge, and with the sweate of their faces to eate their owne bread, and to be able also to geue somewhat vnto the nedye. For let them knowe this to be a most certayne trueth, that if they be able to labour and will not, they are theues before God, and euery morsell of breade or meate that they eate by this their begginge, turneth to their owne damnation, forasmuche as they eate away the lyuinge of the poore nedye man, whiche is feble, syeke, lame. &c. Seruauntes, workemen, daye labourers, and such other lyke, ought diligentlye to labour and to serue their bodelye Maisters, whiche haue hyered them, and of whom they take wages, not with eyeseruice onlye as men pleasers, but as the seruauntes of Christ, doyng the will of God from the harte with a good will, seruinge the Lorde and not men, knowinge this that whatsoeuer goodthinge a man doeth, the same shall he receaue agayne of God, whether he be bonde or free.

This is it. Thou shalt not beare false witnesse agaynste thy neyghboure. Father. What is the will of God in this lawe? Sonne. In the foure last commaundementes, whiche concerne oure duetye towarde oure neyghbour;

bour: Fyrst we haue learned, howe we ought to behaue our selues toward our parentes, Superiours and Elders: Secondlye, what our duety is toward our neighbour concerning his bodye: Thirdly, howe we ought to behaue our selues toward our neighbour concerning his wyfe: Fourtly, what our duety is toward our neighbour concerning his goods. Nowe foloweth the fyfte commaundement of the seconde table, which is the ninte precept in order, wherin we are taught, how we should behaue our selues toward our neighbour concerninge his good name and fame. For he doth no les offend, which oppresseth his innocent neighboure with false witnesse, than he whiche killeth him with weapon. Neyther is that theefe more worthy of punishement, which with open violence or with sutle and crafty meanes spoyleth a man of his goods, than that person, which with lyeng and false witnesse bearing robbeth a man of his good name and fame: which good name doth so farre excell all the rychesse of this worlde, as the Sunne in quantitie and brightenes surmounteth and passeth the leaste starre in the firmament. The wyse man sayeth: Lyke as the clerenes of the eyes reioyceth the harte: so doth a good name fede the bones. Agayne he sayeth: A good name is more worth than greate rychesse, and louinge fauour is better then syluer and golde. Item, A good name is more worth then precious oyntement. Jesus the Sonne of Syrach sayth: Labour to get thee a good name: for that shall continewe surer by thee, then a thousande greate treasurs of golde. A good lyfe hath a nomber of dayes, but a good name endureth euer. Therefore forasmuche as the tonge, as S. James sayth, although a litle member boasteth great thynges, is a fyre and a worlde of wickednes: defyleth the whole bodye, and setteth a fyre all that we haue of nature, & is it selfe set a fyre euen of hell, beynge an vnruelye euill and full of deadly poyson: God in this his law declareth vnto vs, how we shuld behaue our selues toward our neighbour in tonge and speache, as he hath taught vs in his lawes aforesayd, how we should behaue our selues toward him in body and in bodily actes. And as we are forbidden in the foure commaundementes aboue rehearsed to hurt our neighbour with our bodye or with the dedes therof: so likewyse in this precept are we forbidden to hurt our neighbour with our tounge, or with anye woorde that proceedeth from the same. And in this behalfe God comandeth vs here expressely, that we beare not false witnes against our neighbour.

A good name passeth all worldly rychesse.

scripture? Sonne. Yea verely. God sayeth by his seruant Moses: Thou shalt not accepte a vayne tale, neyther shalt thou put thy hande with the wicked, to be an vnrighteous witnes (agaynste thy neyghbour.) Exo. xxiii. Thou shalt not folowe a multitude to do euill, neither aunswere in a matter of plea, that thou wouldest (to folowe manye) turne away frō the trueth. &c. Agayne, Thou shalt not goe vp and downe as a priuye accuser amonge thy people, neyther shalte thou stande agaynste the bloude of thy neighbour: I am the Lorde. Also in another place: Cursed be he that hindreth the right of the straunger, fatherles & widowe, and all the people shall saye, Amen. Cursed be he that taketh a reward to slaye the soule of innocent bloude: and the people shall saye, Amen. The wise mā sayth, Be not a false wytnesse agaynst thy neighbour, and speake no falshode with thy lyppes. Agayne, whoso beareth false witnesse agaynste his neighbour, he is a very clubbe, a sworde and a sharpe arowe. Our sauiour Christ sayth: Thou shalt not speake false witnesse. Agayne, Out of the harte come false witnesses and euill speakinges: these defyle a man. Father. Is God angry with such as beare false witnesse against their neighbour? Sonne, who doubteth of that? Gaue he not this commaundement by his seruaunt Moses to the people of Israel? If any vnrighteous witnesse rise vppe agaynst a man to accuse him of trespasse, then both the men, whiche stryue together, shall stande before the Lorde, before the Priestes & the Iudges, which shall be in those dayes: and the Iudges shall make diligent inquisicion. And if the witnesse be found false, and that he hath geuen false wytnesse agaynst his brother, then shal ye do vnto him, as he had thought to do vnto his brother: and thou shalt put euil away from thee. And other shall heare and feare, and shall henceforth commit no more any such wickednes among you. And thyne eye shall haue no compassion, but soule for soule, eye for eye, toth for tothe, hande for hand, fote for fote. This thing rede we practysed in the two Elders, which gaue false witnesse agayn̄st the vertuous & chaste Lady Susanna: also in those Princes and Lordes, which sought the distruction of Daniel the Prophet. Further more the wyse man sayeth: The Lorde hateth a false witnes that bringeth vppe lyes. Agayne, A false witnes shall not remayne vnpunished: and he that speaketh lyes, shall not escape. Also in another place he sayeth: A false wytnesse shall perishe, but he that is a true man, boldly speaketh that he hath heard. Father. Is false witnesse bearing only forbidde̅ in this precept? Sonne. Not only that but also all other vices and abuses of the tonge. Father. Where is lyeng forbidden in the worde of God? Sonne. God sayth by his seruaunt Moses: Ye shall not lye. The wyse man sayeth: God hateth a lyeng tonge. Jesus the sonne of Syrach hath these wordes: In no wyse speake against the word of trueth, but be ashamed of the lyes of thyne owne ignorāunce. Fourthly, God requireth of vs, that we shoulde at all tymes so vse our tonge, that it maye profyt, not dispropfyt our neighbour, quiet, not disquiet him, further, not hinder his good name and estimacion: and in fine, so to vse our tonge, that it may be the organ of the holy Ghoste, redy at all tymes to set forth the glory of God, and the commoditye of our neighbour. And that we maye the more conuenientlye this doe, it shall not be vnprofytable att all tymes to set before our eyes these say-

Father. Thou hast satisfyed myne expectacion cōcerning the fyrste commaūdement. Rehearse me nowe the tenth commaundement as it followeth in order. Sonne. It is this. Math. xii.

Thou shalt not couet thy neyghbours house. Thou shalt not couet thy neyghbours wyfe, his seruaunte, his mayde, his oxe, his asse, nor anye thing that is thy neyghbours. Father. What is the good pleasure of God in this commaundement? Sonne. Forasmuch as the woordes of the aforesayde commaundementes seme by outwarde appearaunce to require nothinge of vs, but politike, ciuile and externall iustice or righteousnes: least that anye man should thincke to haue fulfilled the lawe by bringing forth after a certayne maner the outwarde workes of the lawe, and so thincke him selfe to be somewhat, whan in dede he is nothing, and by this meanes glorye of his owne perfection & righteousnes, where as all his glorye ought to be only in the Lord our God, as it is written, he that glorieth, let him glorye in the Lord: God willinge to shewe man vnto him selfe, what he is, with all the strengthes of his fre will, with all his perfection and righteousnes, with all hys good workes and merites, in this his lawe requireth of vs not only politike, ciuile and outward iustice, but also spiritual and inward iustice with the full and perfecte consent of the mynde, with the vnspotted cleanes of the hart, with the pure thoughtes, godly desyres, and holy affectes of the spirite, yea and that without anye grudginge or contrariete to the contrarye: which thinge is impossible for any naturall man to do, which vnderstandeth not the thinges that belonge vnto God: whyche of hym selfe is not able so muche as to thincke a good thought: whose hart (as of him which by nature is the child of wrath, begotten, conceaued and borne in sinne) is leude and vnsearcheable: whose imaginacions of the thoughtes of his hart are euill continually euen from his youth: whose righteousnes and best workes are as a cloth defyled with menstrue, forasmuche as the lawe is spirituall, & he carnal, solde vnder synne, yea and the verye bonde slaue of Satan, not able of him selfe eyther to thinke, breath, speake or do, that is praise worthy before God. And here must all flesh with all humilitie and reuerence fall downe before the Maiestye of God, and confesse the selues most greuous synners and worthy of euerlastinge damnation, forasmuche as they are iustlye proued transgressours of the lawe of God: seynge it is written, Cursed be euerye one that continueth not in all thinges, which are written in the booke of the lawe to fulfyll them. For no man lyueth, whiche fulfilleth the lawe of God with suche puritye of mynde, with suche obedience of harte, with suche fre will of the spirite, and with suche pure & vncorrupt mocions of the inward man, as the lawe requireth, according to this sayinge of our sauiour Christ: God

God therfore in this his tente and last commaundement requireth of vs not only outward iustice, but also inward righteousnes, so that we may not ones lust or couet against the law of God.

What God requireth of vs in his lawe,

Sonne. Not only in this last commaundement, but in all the other also God requireth, that we shall not onlye after a certayne maner fulfyll them outwardly, but also inwardly, with a full and perfect consent of a pure and vncorrupt harte, without any grudginge or concupiscence to the contrary. Father. Proue by the worde of God, that we may not so muche as ones lust or couet agaynst the will of God: and that concupiscence is sinne before God. Sonne. That concupiscence is sinne, it is manifest by these wordes of the Apostle: I had not knowen, sayeth he, what luste had ment, except the lawe had sayd, Thou shalt not lust. But sinne toke an occasion by the meanes of the commaundement, & wrought in me all maner of concupiscence. Nowe that we are forbidden to lust or couet contrary to the commaundemēt of God, and that if we do otherwyse (I meane) nourysh any euill concupiscence or lust in our hart, although it neuer brast out into outwarde worke, we are transgressours of the lawe of God, and worthy of euerlasting damnacion, it appereth manifestly by these woordes of Christ: Whosoeuer loketh on another mans wyfe to lust after her, hath committed adulterye with her al redye in his harte. Here is it euident, that God requireth not only an outward clennes of the body, but also an inward purite of the mynde, so that we must be vnsported both in body and in mynde. For as he is an adulterer before man, whiche is apprehended in the very acte of grosse adulterye: so lyke wyse is he an adulterer before God, whiche only in his harte lusteth after another mans wyfe, although he neuer commit the acte, no, nor ones make mencion of it so much as by worde. God is a spirite, and he iudgeth all things of the spirite. If the spirite and inwarde man be ones polluted with filthye lustes and fleshlye concupiscences, we are streight wayes before God transgressours and breakers of his lawe, & worthye to be condemned vnto euerlasting fyre, although we appere neuer so holy, pure & honest before the blynde world, which only seeth & consydereth the outward dedes, and can not beholde the secretes of our harte, whiche only are knowen vnto God. Therefore Christ the wysedome of the father, & the true interpretour of the law, in thafore sayde sentence pronounceth him not only an adulterer, which committeth the grosse act of adulterye, but also whiche onlye in his harte nourisheth fleshely and vncleane phetes: as for an example, let vs take this cõmaundemẽt, Thou shalt Exo. xx

ter, the minde of the Lawgeuer, which is the lord our God, is that we shall not only not kill our neighbour, but also beare no malice nor en-uy against him in our harte, but rather loue him & seke to preserue him to the vttermost of our power. For Moses wryteth on this maner: Leu. xix Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine hart. Thou shalt not auenge thy selfe, nor be myndeful of wrõg against the childrẽ of my people, but thou shalt loue thy neighbour euen as thy selfe. S. John also saith: He i. Ioan. iii that loueth not his brother, abydeth in death. Whosoeuer hateth his brother, is a manslear. And ye know we that no manslear hath euer lasting lyfe abyding in him. Of these autorities of the holye scripture do we learne, that this commaundement of God, Thou shalt not kill, for-bideth vs not onlye to abstayne from grosse manslaughter, but also frõ al malice, enuy, hatrede, & all maner of displeasure bearing against our neighbour: so that before God, he is not onlye a manslear, whiche with weapon killeth his brother, but he also, whiche in his harte hath conceaued malice, hatrede and displeasure against his neighbour, although it neuer brasteth into outwarde & grosse manslaughter, as the history of Caim doth euidently declare: in the which we rede, that be- Gen. iiij looke neyther vnto Caim nor vnto his giftes. Why so? Because of the malyce & hatrede, which he had all redy conceaued in his hart against his brother Abel. He was now before God a bloudy murtherar, and had transgressed this commaundement of God, Thou shalt not kill, & therfore worthy of euerlasting damnation. The wyse man also sayth: Eccle. xxxiiii

The bread of the nedy is the lyfe of the poore: he that defraudeth hym of it, is a playne murtherar. Here the vnmercifull man is called a murtherar, not that he hath with anye weapon slayne the poore man, but because he hath withdrawen that from the pore and nedy thorow the couetous affection, which is in his harte, that should sustayne the miserable lyfe of the poore. The blynde worlde recounteth the vnmerciffull man no murtherar, but before God such one is both a murtherar and the heyre of euerlastinge damnation, as S. James sayeth, The Iac. ij.

Then when lust is cõceaued, she bryngeth forth sinne, and sinne, when it is finished, bryngeth forth death. S. John also sayth. He that ye loue not the world, neyther the things that are in the world. If any man loue the world, the loue of the father is not in him. For all that is in the world (as the lust of the flesh, and the lust of the eyes, & the pryde of lyfe) is not of the father, but of the world. And the world passeth away and the lust thereof: but he that dooth the will of God abydeth for euer. Father. Dooth euill concupiscence or lust also so displease God, that he will punishe it? Sonne. We heard afore out of the mouth of Salomon, that God hateth & vtterly abhorreth that harte, whiche goeth about with wicked imaginacions: & that God will punishe the wickednes of an vngodly mynde. The lyke thinge heard we of the Prophet Zachary. Saint Paule also sayth, that if we lyue after the flesh, we shall dye, that is to say, be damned for euer. And in the fyrst boke of Moses we rede, that Caim was found a murtherar before God, before he slew his brother because of the malyce & hatrede that he had conceaued in his harte agaynst his brother, so that God wold neyther looke vpon him nor vpõ his offeringes. Therfore was he cursed, and al his lyfetyme was he a fugityue & a vagabound: and is nowe a damned soule in hell fyre. In thafore sayd boke also rede we, that God smote Pharao and his house with great plages, because in his hart he brenned with euill concupiscence & fleshly lust toward Sara Abrahams wyfe: whom notwithstanding he had not touched, neyther knew he, that she was Abrahãs wyfe. The lyke thinge rede we of kinge Abimelech. Father. What requireth God than of vs in this his last commaundement? Sonne. That we hauing contented myndes with suche thinges, as wherwith God hath blessed vs, should not desyre vnlawfully anye thinge that appertayneth vnto our neighbour, but rather do our diligence, that whatsoeuer is his, may remayne his vnto his owen commoditie and profyt: yea and if we be able further to pleasure him or his, to doo it vnto the vttermost of our power, beyng no les godly & profytably affected toward him, then we are toward our selues, yea & that from the verye hart. In fine, God requireth of vs both in this last precept & in al other that we bring vnto the fulfilling of his law, not only outward, but also inward righteousnes, not only the innocẽcy of the body, but also the purity of the mynde, so that both our bodies & soules, hartes, myndes, desyres & thoughtes be pure, cleane & without spotte, according to this saying of S. Paule: ye are derelye bought. Therfore glorifye God in your bodies & in your spirites, which belong vnto god. Father. Reherse me the summe briefely of all the cõmaundemẽtes of God, that we may know in few woordes, what is our duety to do both toward God and our neighbour. Sonne. Christ saith: Heare O Israel: The lord our god is lord only. And thou shalt loue the lord thy God with al thy harte, & with all thy soule, & with all thy mynde, & with all thy strength. This is the fyrst commaundement. And the second is lyke vnto this: Thou shalt loue thy neighbour as thy selfe. In these two commaundemẽts hange all the lawe and the Prophetes. Whatsoeuer ye would, that men shoulde do to you, do ye euen so to them also. For this is the lawe and the Prophetes. S. Paule sayth: Owe nothing to anye man, but this, that ye loue one another. For he that loueth another, hath fulfilled the lawe. For these commaundements, Thou shalt not commit adultery: Thou shalt not kill: Thou shalt not steale: Thou shalte not beare false witnesse: Thou shalt not lust, and so forth, if there be anye other commaundement, it is al comprehended in this saying namely, Loue thy neighbour as thy selfe. Loue hurteth not his neighbour. Therefore is loue the fulfylling of the lawe. Agayne he sayth: All the lawe is fulfilled in one word, which is this: Thou shalt loue thy neighbour as thy selfe. Also in another place: The ende of the commaundement is loue out of a pure harte, and of a good conscience and of faythe vnfayned. S. John sayeth: This is Gods commaundement, that we beleue on the name of his Sonne Jesus Christ, and that we loue one another. For this commaundemẽt haue we of him: that he which loueth God, should loue his brother also. Father. Well, nowe haue we hearde (my dere Sonne) what the lawe is: to what ende the lawe was geuen: & howe manye commaundementes of the lawe there are: and what is required of vs that we should do concerning the fulfyllinge of them. This lawe of God semeth vnto me a verye heauy yoke and a burthen almost intollerable, if the righteousnes of Christe in this behalfe dyd not helpe vs, which (as S. Paule saith) is the perfect fulfylling of the law to iustify al that beleue. Now forasmuch as a new lyfe requireth newe maners, and our fayth & loue towarde God is to be declared in the obedience of his lawe, & in the framing of our life according to his holy cõmandement, which thing of our selues & of our own strẽgthes we by no meanes are able to perfourme, seing we be not able so much as to thincke a good thought, much les to accomplishe the wil of God with suche puritye and innocency of harte, as is required of vs: come of, tell me, what is nowe to be done, that we maye obtayne some both wil & strength, wherby we may be able to shew our selues not altogether negligent in conforming our selues to the blessed will of god, but ỳ our light may so shyne before men, that they may se our good workes & glorify our father which is in heauen. Sonne. This question (O my dere father) is asked in due tyme. To obtayne wil & strẽgth to walke in the law of God, there is none other way but only to flye vnto faithful & harty prayer, & to craue of the Lorde our God by humble supplication the helpe of his holy spirite, which may renewe our hartes, and engraffe in vs new affectes & newe motions, that by this meanes we may become newe creatures vnto the glory, prayse and honour of his holye name. And the order of the doctryne of the Catechisme requyreth nowe, that wee speake of prayer, whyche is the fourthe parte of the Catechisme, as you hearde. Father. Well sayde my Sonne.

For we haue passed ouer the fyrste three partes: that is to saye, repentaunce, faith and Lawe. Nowe remayneth the fourth part to be entreated of, whiche thou sayest is prayer. Sonne. Yea verelye. Father. What order wilte thou take in this treatyse of prayer? Sonne. I wyll first by the grace of God and thorowe the helpe of his holye spirite declare, what prayer is. Secondly, howe we ought to addresse our selues vnto prayer. Thyrdlye, I will declare and expounde the Lordes prayer, forasmuche as that of all prayers is the best and most excellēt: both because of the maker of it, whyche is the Lorde Jesus, and also because in fewe woordes it contayneth abundantly, whatsoeuer is necessary to be desyred eyther for the body or for the soule.

Father. I allowe thy order well. Tell me therfore (my sonne) what prayer is.

The fourth parte of the Catechisme.
¶ Of Prayer.

SOnne. Our preacher & also our Catechist hath declared vnto vs dyuerse diffinicions of prayer. Father. Let me heare one or two of them. Sonne. Prayer is a lyftinge vp of a pure mynde vnto God, in the whiche we aske somewhat of him accordyng to his will. Or thus: Prayer is an earnest talke with God proceding from a verye inwarde, depe and brennyng or feruent affection of the harte, crauing somwhat at the hande of God. Or els thus: Prayer is a mournyng or a longing and a desyre of the spirite to God, ward for that which she lacketh: as the sicke mourneth and sorroweth in his hart, longing for health. Father. Of these diffinicions of prayer I learne three thinges. Fyrste, that prayer is the worke and exercyse of the mynde, harte, or spirite: I meane, the inwarde man. Secondlye, that in our prayer we must aske and craue somewhat. Thirdlye, that that thing whiche we desyre to haue, we must require it at the hande of God. Sonne. Trueth. Father. Howe prouest thou, that prayer is the worke of the spirite? Sonne. I am so taught by the worde of God. Our Sauiour Christ sayeth: The houre cometh, and now it is, when the true worshippers shall worshippe the father in spirite and trueth. For the father seeketh suche that should worship him. God is a spirite, and they that worship him, must worshippe him in spirite and trueth. S. Paule also sayeth: God is my witnes, whom I worship in my spirite. Lykewyse sayth the Psalmograph: O my soule prayse thou the Lord, and all that is within me, prayse his holye name. O my soule prayse thou the Lorde, and forget not all his benefytes. Agayne, My harte is fyxed, O God, my harte is fyxed: I will synge & geue prayse. The hystorye of Moses, when he led the people of Israel out of Egipt, declareth manifestly, that prayer is the worke & exercyse of the spirite. For when he by reason sawe no waye howe to escape eyther from the bloudy hāds of that most bloudy tyran Pharao, or els frō drowning, he onlye groned and lamented in his harte vnto God, desyringe his helpe for their sake deliueraunce, and God sayd vnto him, what cryest thou vnto me? His cryeng was not the voyce of the mouth, but the affection of the harte. He cryeth with a sorowful mynde vnto God, and he was heard, although the mouth kepte silence, and obtayned that he desyred. Lyke wyse Anna the wyfe of Helcana, when she had bene longe barrayne, prayde vnto God for to geue her children. But what sayth the scripture of her prayer? She spake in her harte. Her lips only moued, but her voyce was heard nothing at all. Who seeth not now, that prayer is the worke of the mynde, harte, spirite and inward man?

1.Reg.i.

Not without a cause therefore, sayeth the blessed Apostle S. Paule: Speake among your selues in Psalmes, Hymnes & spirituall songs, singing and makinge melodye in your hartes to the Lorde. Father. What sayest thou then of those prayers, which are only vttered with the lippes and tonge, yea and that without the affection of the spirite? Sonne. Euen that, which Christ speaketh in the Gospell, alledginge it out of the Prophet Esay: This people, saith he, draweth nye vnto me, and honoureth me with their lips, howe be it their harte is farre from me: but in vayne do they honour me. Father. Doest thou then vtterly contemne and condemne prayers that come from the mouth, tonge & lips? Sonne. If they procede from the harte, and rise of the affection of the mynde, they are not to be discommended, but rather commended, in asmuche as the tonge dooth nothing but vtter the feruent desyre of the mynde, the prayer still remayning the worke of the inward man. The outwarde speaking or syngynge of prayers: the kneling or prostratyng of our selues: the liftinge vp of handes & eyes: the knockinge of the breast, and suche other lyke gestures in prayinge are not discommendable, so long as they spring of the feruent affection of the mynde. For all these thinges haue many godly men vsed in their prayers heretofore, and yet doo. Let vs, sayeth the Prophet Hieremy, lyfte vp our hartes with our handes to the Lord euen vnto the heauēs. S. Paule also sayth: I will that men pray in euery place, lyfting vp pure handes without wrath and contencion. The Psalmograph saith: I wil magnifye the Lorde at all tymes: his prayse shalbe alwayes in my mouth. Moses and the Prophetes, Christ and his Apostles prayed with premeditate wordes, as the scripture dooth declare. Moreouer we rede, that Christ fell flat vpon the grounde, when he prayed. Paule and so many as were with him kneled at a certayne tyme whē they prayed. The Publican knocked his breast, when he prayed. Father. The seconde thinge, which I noted in the diffinicions of prayer, is, that whosoeuer entendeth to pray with fruyte, he muste in his prayer aske somewhat. Sonne. It is truth. For vnto what ende should we pray, if in our prayer we aske nothinge? Is not the office of prayer to aske that, which we lacke? Which of the godly euer prayed, not settynge before the eyes of their mynde the cause of their prayer? Otherwyse to pray, is nothing els then to mocke and scorne God. Father. Yet many there are, which perſuade them ſelues to pray, yea and to merite greatly for their prayinge: when they not withſtanding neither know what, nor wherfore they pray. Sonne. The ignorauncye and blyndenes of ſuche is greatly to be lamented. And if at the daye of iudgement, as Chriſt affirmeth, we ſhall rendre an accomptes of euery idle worde that we haue ſpoken, what is than to be thought of thoſe wordes, whiche be not onlye vayne and idely, but alſo ſuperſticiouſly and diſſemblingly vttered in prayer: to pretend to pray, & not to pray, is double wickednes, & deſerueth the greater damnacion. Father. I gather alſo of the diffinictions of prayer, that whenſoeuer we aſke any thing, we muſt aſke it of god onlye. Sonne. Is it not mete and right ſo to doo? whether ſhoulde the ſicke man goe for councell, but vnto the Phiſicion? Whether ſhall the thirſty hart repaire to ſlake her thirſt, but vnto the water brokes? So lykewyſe, whether ſhall we go to obtayne any good thing by prayer, but vnto God, which is the fountayne and well ſpring of all goodnes? Euery good gifte and euerye perfect gifte, ſayeth S. James, is from aboue, and cometh downe from the Father of lightes. Vnto whome prayed all the holy Patriarches and the godly men, which lyued vnder the olde Teſtament, but vnto God? as Dauid ſayth: Our fathers truſted in thee: they truſted in thee, & thou delyuereddſt the. They cryed vnto thee, and they were ſaued: they truſted in thee, and thei were not confounded. And as all the godly of the olde teſtament directed theyr prayers only vnto God: ſo lykewyſe dyd all the holy men of ỹ newe teſtament. We alſo in euery age ought to make our prayers vnto God alone according to their example: yea according to the doctryne of the holye ſcripture. Call vpon me, ſayeth God, in the daye of thy trouble, and I will delyuer thee, and thou ſhalt honoure me. When I was in trouble ſayth Dauid, I cryed vnto the Lord, and he graciouſly heard me. Agayne. Myne eyes are continuallye vnto the Lorde: for he ſhall pluche my fete out of the ſnare. Item, The eyes of the Lorde are vpon the righteous, and his eares are bent vnto their prayers. Father. Notwithſtading ſome there are, which offer their prayers vnto creatures, and crabe of them all good thinges neceſſary both for the bodye & for the ſoule. Sonne. Theſe walke a wronge waye, and may right well be reſembled, lykened & compared to the Prieſtes of Baal, which cryed continuallye vnto their Idoll, O Baal, heare vs: O Baal, heare vs: & yet notwithſtanding they were not heard. Take hede, ſayth the Pſalmographe, ye vnwyſe amonge the people: O ye fooles, when will ye vnderſtande? He that planted the eare, ſhall he not heare? Or he that made the eye, ſhall he not ſee? The Lorde knoweth the thoughtes of man. He that flyeth vnto any creature eyther in heauen or in earth for ſuccour, or aſketh remiſſion of his ſinnes and euerlaſting lyfe, or what kynde good thinge it be beſydes, except of God alone, he is a theefe, & robbeth God of his honour, and greuouſly offendeth agaynſt the firſt commaundement of God, and is of the nomber of thoſe, agaynſt whō God complayneth by the Prophet on this maner: Be aſtonyed, O ye heauens, be afrayed and abashed at suche a thinge, sayeth the Lorde. For my people haue done two euils. They haue forsaken me the fountayne of the water of lyfe, and digged them pyttes: yea byle and broken pittes, that can holde no water. Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God (sayth Moses) and him alone shalt thou serue. Can there be anye greater seruice done, or more honoure shewed vnto God, than in the tyme of aduersitie to flye vnto his holye name for succour by faythfull and earnest prayer as vnto a stronge tower? Agayne, in the tyme of prosperitie to prayse and to magnifye his glorious name for the benefytes receaued: as the Psalmographe sayeth: What rewarde shall I geue vnto the Lorde for all the benefytes that he hath done vnto me? I will receaue the cup of saluacion, & call vpon the name of the lord. I will paye my vowes in the presence of all his people Father. Thou holdest then, that whatsoeuer good thinge we haue nede of appartayning vnto the bodye or vnto the soule, we ought to aske it only of God, the alone fountayne of all goodnes. Sonne. Yea verelye, and that in the name only of his moste dere Sonne Jesus Christ our alone Mediatour, Aduocate & Intercessour. For there is one Lord of all, which is plentifully ryche vnto all, that call vpon him. For whosoeuer doth call on the name of the Lorde, he shalbe safe. God is able, sayth Saint Paule to do excedinge abundantly aboue all that we aske or thincke accordinge to the power that worketh in vs. The hande of the Lorde is not so shortened, that it can not helpe: neither is his eare so stopped, that it can not heare: nor yet are his eyes so dymme, that they can no more see. Blessed is the man, that putteth his trust in the name of the Lorde, and regardeth not vanities and false ymaginacions. Thou (O God) arte our father, sayth the Prophet Esay. Abraham knoweth vs not: neyther is Israel acquaynted with vs. But thou Lorde arte our father, and redeiner, and thy name is euerlastinge. Father. We haue talked sufficiently for this present cõcerning the diffinicion of prayer. Let me heare nowe, howe we ought to addresse & prepare our selues vnto the exercyse of prayer, that we maye pray with fruite: seeing it is writen: Before thou prayest, prepare thy soule, and be not as one that temptethGod: least, if we pray vnworthely, we be founde in the nomber of those, to whom God speaketh on this maner by the Prophete: When ye holde out your handes, I will turne myne eyes from you: when ye make manye prayers, I will not heare you: for your handes are full of bloude. Sonne. Prayer is a precious treasure in the sighte of God, and easly obtayneth, whatsoeuer it asketh, so that it be made accordinge to the will of God. But if it be framed contrary to the good pleasure of God, it bringeth not saluacion, but destruction, not pleasure, but displeasure, not commoditie, but incõmoditie, not fauour, but wrath, not lyfe, but death, yea and finally euerlastinge damnacion. If God coulde not abyde that the Jewes should presume to receaue the lawe, which notwithstanding is the ministracion of death, which also accuseth, iudgeth, condemneth, woundeth, killeth, yea and casteth downe downe hedlong into the dongeon of hell fyre all men without exception for their imperfectiō & wickednes, if they were not delyuered frō that dānation by faith in ỹ bloud of Christ, before they were sanctifyed & clensed. Is it to be thought, that God wil heare our praier, although proceding from a corrupt, filthy and vnpure harte? Can that prayer be accepted of God, and obtayne good thyngs at the hande of God, whiche cometh from an hart voyde of fayth, charitie, mercy, &c. and ouerwhelmed with all beastlye and carnall affectes? The Psalmographe sayeth: If I encline vnto wickednes with my harte: the Lord wil not heare me. We be sure, sayeth the blynde man, that God heareth not sinners. (He speaketh of the vnpenitent sinners and of suche as glorye in their sinne, and delight, when they haue done euil.) But if any man be a worshipper of God, and obedient to his will, him heareth he. S. Paule also streightly chargeth vs, that we lyfte vp pure handes vnto God. And our Sauiour Christ sayeth that they, whiche will worship God the father, must worship him in spirite and trueth. Hereunto appertayneth the saying of the Psalmograph: The Lord is nye vnto all that call on him, yea vnto all that call on him in trueth. Father. Seynge then that wickednes must be caste out of our harte: seynge pure handes must be lyfted vp vnto God: seinge God heareth not sinners, but suche as labour to be obedient vnto his holye wil: seyng God must be worshypped in spirite & trueth, in fine, seyng that God is not otherwyse to be called vppon, but as he hath prescrybed in his holy worde: come of, tell me, what is to be done, that we may not come altogether vnworthely vnto the throne of Gods maiesty, but rather offer vp such prayers vnto his glorious name, as he shall be well content to accept them for his mercyes sake in the bloud of Christ. Sonne. That we may not altogether vnworthely come with our prayers vnto the gracious and mercifull throne of Gods Maiesty: it shal not be vnprofytable to marke these fewe thinges, which I shall nowe rehearse.

How we shall prepare our selues to pray.

First of all (if we will praye with fruite) we must diligentlye and earnestly consyder, weighe and ponder the cause, which moueth vs to pray. For whosoeuer addresseth him selfe vnto prayer, not hauinge an vrgent, graue, weighty and necessary cause to pray, dooth none other thing, than after ỹ maner of the popinjay recite a multitude of wordes without the affection of the mynde and the desyre of the harte: and so is his prayer a very derision and mockinge of God: yea it is nothinge els than hypocrysye and fayned holynes: & therefore also double wickednes. Father. Fewe obserue this order. Sonne. Fewe therfore pray before God. Father. Wanye thincke, that they doo God good seruice, when they pray after this maner, although they know not what, nor wherefore they pray. Sonne. Suche doo nothinge les then praye.

The cause whiche moueth vs to pray, is diligently to be considered.

The Godly both of the olde and new testament neuer addressed themselues vnto prayer, before some graue and weyghty matter prouoked them to praye, as diuerse examples in the holye scripture euidentlye declare, Father. Rehearse me some of them. Sonne. Abraham the father righteous & honest, yea & in all pointes suche, as shall not be thought our neighbour not endomaged. Nowe as concerning the causes, whiche oughte to moue vs for to praye: they be infinite and innumerable, whether we respect the bodye or the mynde. If we consyder also oure state, vocation or calling, causes manye shall abundantlye offer them selues vnto vs, which iustly and necessaryly ought to prouoke vs vnto prayer. If we weighe the great company of our aduersaries, whiche daylye and hourely go about lyke rauening wolues to deuoure vs: if wee

we ponder our infirmitye and weakenes, and howe vnable we be to stande agaynste theyr power &c. we shall fynde abundance of causes, wherfore we ought to praye: so that we nede not to come slackely and dissolutly, but rather diligently & earnestly vnto prayer. Father. This than is thy counsell, that before we attempte to praye, we fyrst of all diligently consyder with our selues, wherfore we will pray, and vnto what ende we wil direct our praier, that we seme not rather to mocke God than to pray God: Agayne, that the cause, whiche moueth vs to pray, be godly, iuste, honest, & not vnworthy the eares of God. Sonne, So is it. Father. What is requisite more vnto the worthy preparatiō vnto prayer? Sonne. Secondly, after that we haue diligently considered our necessitie, and pondered the cause that moueth vs to praye, and haue founde it good, godly, iust, honest, necessary and not vnworthye the hearinge of God, so that we fynde in our selues (whether we respecte the body or the mynde) plenty of causes, which iustly ought to prouoke vs to flye vnto God, and by faythfull and earnest prayer to craue helpe and succour at his hand, that we may eyther be delyuered from so great euils, or els endewed with such benefytes from God, as we greatly desyre, longer and thirste after: it shall be expedient, that we streightwayes set before the eyes of our mynde the commaundement of God, which willeth and commaundeth vs to pray, to cal vpō his glorious Maiesty, and to flye vnto his holy name, as vnto a strōg towre and mighty fortresse in al our necessities, troubles, aduersities, and miseries. This commaundement of God to praye, is earnestly to be weighed, pondered and consydered. For although we haue neuer so many and necessarye causes, yea and those godlye, good, righteous, honest, &c. yet yf we had not a cōmaundement from God to pray: who durst so much as once be bold to open his lips for to praye vnto God, which is a consuming fyre, whiche hateth both the wicked & his wyckednes, whiche hath prepared hell fyre to be a reward vnto suche as transgresse his holy lawe: of the which nomber we all are without exception, beyng worthy for our disobedience not only not to be hearde, but also to haue our miseries encreased, & finally to be rewarded with the tormentes of that lake, which brenneth with fyre and brymstone? Come of, tell me, what traytour is so without all shame, that he dare appere in the presence of that Prince, & to craue pardon of him, whō he hath most trayterously offended, and whose honour he hath sought vtterly to defate and obscure? Yea rather fleeth not that traytour frō the face of that Prince so farre as his legges are able to beare him, & wisheth that that Prince were dead, that by this meanes he might be free from that punishment, which he most righteously hath deserued for his wicked & abhominable treason? Nowe was there neuer traytour, that hath at anye tyme so greuously offended his Prince, as we (all mewthes that we are) thorow our infidelitie and wicked conuersacion haue offended the Lord our God that Prince of glorie, yea that Kynge of Kinges, & Lord of Lordes. Howe than dare we be bolde to geuen vs a commaundement to pray vnto him, we wolde soner haue put our heades in a bushe with Adam, or taken vs vnto oure legges with Caim, or haue hanged vp our selues with that traytour Judas, than we would ones haue opened our lippes to praye vnto him. And who therefore seeth not here the exceding greate maruelous and vnspeakeable kyndnes of the Lord our God toward vs vyle & wretched sinners, whiche being hedged rounde about with the thornes both of so many miseries and wickednesses, and not knowing howe to be deliuered from them, are notwithstandinge commaunded of this oure most gentle God boldely to come vnto him, frankelye to lament our miseries vnto him, largely to poure out the sygbinges and groninges of our heauy hartes before him, & frankely and with a good courage to aske all good thinges of him. O the depe & botomles seas of Gods wonderfull mercies toward mankynde.

All the commaundementes therfore of God, wherwith we are prouoked vnto prayer, are to be embraced as most precious Jewels, and to be reposed in the lowest parte of our memory as incōparable treasures, that we neuer forget thē: of the which sort these are that folow.

and that out of the mouth of God, which is faythful in all his wordes and holy in all his workes: whiche is not onlye true, but also the selfe trueth. Let no man obiecte his indignitye or vnworthynes to praye. Our vnworthynes ought to be no let vnto vs, that we shoulde not be bolde to call vpon God, so that we repent and turne vnto God, with full purpose from henceforth to trayne our lyfe accordyng to the rule of Gods worde. For God neither for our worthynes nor for our vnworthynes heareth vs: but for his commaundemēt and promyse sake. He ☞ hath commaunded vs to praye: therefore ought we to pray. For if we shoulde neuer praye, tyll we were worthy of our selues before God to pray: so should we neuer pray: but we therfore pray, because God hath commaunded vs so to do. Our worthynes is the humble confession of

oure vnworthynes: and our obedience vnto the commaundemente of God to praye, maketh vs moste worthye. He that will not praye, because he thinketh him selfe vnworthy to praye, might with the same reason be a thefe or an adulterer all his lyfe tyme, and excuse him selfe by sayinge on this maner: I am not worthy to kepe these commaundemēts of God: Thou shalt not steale. Thou shalt not commit adultery. But all men are bounde to keepe all the tenne commaundementes of God, so lykewyse are they bounde to obserue and kepe this commaundement of praying: Aske: Seke: Knocke: &c. For as he falleth into the daunger of euerlastinge damnacion, whiche violateth and breaketh this commaundement: Thou shalt haue no straunge Gods in my sight: so lykewyse doeth he make him selfe the Sonne of Sathan and the enheritour of hell fyre, which neglecteth and transgresseth this commaūdemente of God: Watche and Praye. For he that sayde, Thou shalt not steale: the same sayeth also: Thou shalt praye: and we owe lyke obedience to both commaundementes: and the transgression or breaking of any of these commaundementes deserueth like payne. He that kylleth a man, or he that defyleth his neighbours wyfe, sinneth not more before God, than he which prayeth not. For as this commaundemēt, Thou shalt not kyll, is a precept negatiue: so lykewyse is this cōmaundement, Thou shalt praye, a precept affyrmatyue: and God requireth the same and lyke obedience to all his commaundementes. Lette vs therefore when we entend to praye, not be discouraged from prayer, although we fele in our selues an vnworthynes to praye, but rather consyder the commaundement of God, which willeth vs to pray, and accordinge to his will fall to prayer, and aske all good thinges of him, whych is both the onlye fountayne of all goodnes, and also the alone horne of plentye. Father. What is more to be done? Sonne. Thirdlye, we muste consyder the louinge gentlenes of the Lorde oure God toward vs, which hath not onlye commaunded vs to pray, but hath also promyfed moste graciouslye to heare vs. And this maketh vnto oure greate consolacion and comforte, that we are not onlye commaunded to praye, but also promyfed to be hearde. Therefore when we entend to praye, as we set before our eyes the cōmaundement of God, wherin we are willed to praye, that by this meanes we may with the better courage come vnto the throne of Gods Maiestye with our prayers: so lykewyse must we cal to remembraunce the most louing, swete and comfortable promises of God, which he hath annexed and toyned to his commaundement, hauinge euer this consyderacion in oure selues, that we are both commaunded to praye, and also promyfed to be hearde.

And here agayne appereth the fyngulare & exceading great goodnes of God towarde vs. For what should it haue profyted vs to pray, if we had not bene hearde? The promyses therefore, whiche God hath made vnto vs, ỳ he wil heare vs are most earnestly to be cōsidered, off

For whosoeuer asketh, receaueth, and whosoeuer seeketh, syndeth: & to him that knocketh, it shalbe opened. Here haue we to euery commaundement a promyse annered. We are commaunded to aske: and we are promysed to haue. We are commaunded to seke: and we are promysed to synde. We are cōmaunded to knocke: and we are promysed to be let in. It foloweth: Is there a-

These and suche other comfortable promyses are diligentlye to be retayned in memory, both agaynst the assaultes of Satan, & agaynst the infirmities of our flesh. For whansoeuer we entend earnestlye to praye (I speake of experience: God comforte me) Sathan on the one side, and the flesh on the other syde, sayth vnto vs: Tushe man, what wilte thou doo? Wilte thou pray vnto God? Thou laboureste in vaine. Thou comest, or thou be wel come. Knowest thou not these wordes of the scripture? God heareth not synners. Again, Saluacion is farre Ioan. ix. psal. cxiix from sinners. Hast thou not synned? If thou denyest it: thy conscience shall beare witnes against thee: Thy conscience shal accuse thee, proue thee giltye, and condemne thee. If thou confessest that thou art a sinner, thā mayst thou be well assured that God will not heare thee. For the scripture sayth: God heareth not sinners. If thou then, seing thou arte a sinner, lookest for helpe at the hande of God, thou arte vtterlye deceaued. For the scripture, which is the worde of trueth, and can not lye, sayth: Saluacion is farre from sinners. O suttle Satan. O fraile
C flesh. In deede it is most true, that God heareth not sinners, but those sinners are vnpenitent, vnfaythfull and obstinate or stubburne synners. Saluacion also without doubte is farre from synners: but yet from suche synners, as haue caste awaye both God and the studye of all godlynes. If synners repent, beleue, and amend, although they be neuer so notable and greuous synners, yet God receaueth them into fauoure for Christes sake. If they praye, God heareth them. If they seke saluacion at the hande of God, they shall surelye fynde it. For to suche synners are all the comfortable promyses of God made,

whiche are founde in the holye scripture. Are not these the woordes of Christe oure Sauioure? I came not to call the righteous, but sinners vnto repentaunce. Agayne, The sonne of man is come to seke & to saue that was lost. Whom calleth Christ vnto him in these woords but synners? Come vnto me all ye that labour and are heauy loden, & I shall refresh you. S. Paule also sayth: This is a true saying, & worthye of all men to be receaued, that Jesus Christ came into the woorld to saue synners. Agaynst these assaultes therfore of Satan, & agaynst the weakenes of the flesshe, it shall not a littell profyte alwayes to set before the eyes of our mynde the most swete and comfortable promises of God in hearing vs although neuer so great synners, when in fayth we repent, and pray vnto him: and to consyder that God heareth not vs for our dignitie & innocency, but for his promyse sake, for his faithe and truethes sake, that he maye be founde faithfull in all his woordes, and suche a God, as neyther will nor can lye. Yea: let God be true, and all men lyars. All the Saintes in tyme past both of the olde and newe testament, whensoeuer they dyd praye, dyd not set before theyr eyes & consyder theyr owne dignitie and worthynes, their owne workes and merites, but the commaundement and promyse of God, whiche both commanded thē to pray, & also promysed to heare them, and to graunt them their peticions. They depended wholy on the most louinge and mercyfull promyses of God, & being comforted and encouraged with them, they feared not to haue accesse with theyr prayers vnto the glorious throne of Gods most glorious Maiestye. Heare what Daniel sayeth, both in his owne name, & in the name of all the godly: Not in our owne righteousnesses, sayeth he, lay we foorth our prayers before thy face, but in thy great and manifolde mercies. Dauid also prayeth on this maner: Healpe vs, O God our Sauiour, and for the glorye of thy name, O Lorde, delyuer vs, and forgeue oure sinnes for thy holye names sake. Agayne, for thy names sake, O Lorde, be mercifull vnto my synne, for it is greate. Jacob in his prayer vnto God for his delyueraunce from the hande of his brother Esau, confesseth that he is vnworthy of all the mercies, which God had shewed vnto him, notwithstandinge setting before his eyes the promyses, which God had made him, he feareth nothinge, euen to aske greater thinges of him; whiche he also obtayned. A Christian, although he neuer so vnworthye in his owne sight, may be bolde to aske, whatsoeuer God hath cōmaunded & promysed. For God geueth not vs any thinge for our worthynes, but for his promes, name, mercy & truthes sake, that this sentēce of Dauid may for euer & euer abyde true & constant: All the wayes of the Lorde are mercy and trueth. It is the greate & infinite mercye of the Lorde, that he frely and without our merites & desertes promiseth vnto vs so many and so great good thinges. It is the trueth of the Lorde, in that he performeth truely & faythfullye those thinges, which he mercifullye hath promysed. Lette vs therefore, whensoeuer we entend to praye, diligentlye consyder the promyses of God, and embrace them as most precious treasures & heauenly Jewels, & depend wholly vpō them, and not vpon our worthynes and innocency, not vpon our merites and good workes, not vpon oure satisfactions and workes of supererogacion, nor vpon the mediacions and intercessions of sayncte̅s in heauen. For whosoeuer in asking any thing of God dependeth vpō any creature eyther in heauen or in earth, but vpon the mercifull promes of God alone, he shall obtayne nothing of God, although he prayeth so earnestly, that he sweateth droppes of bloud. Father. Blessed be God for his swete and comfortable promyses that he hath made vs: & God geue vs grace to enioy them. Sonne. Amen. Father. Is there none other thing to be consydered whā we entend to pray, but only the cō maundement and promyse of God? Sonne. Fourthly, it is required of vs, if we wil praye with fruite, that we geue an earnest and vndoubted fayth to the promes of God, beleuing stedfastly, that we shal abūdantlye receaue of God whatsoeuer he hath mercifully promysed for without this fayth nothinge is obtayned of God. The commaundement of the Lorde to pray, and the promes of God to heare & to graūt those thinges for the whiche we praye, profyte nothinge at all, if fayth be absent: yea whatsoeuer good thinge God promyseth, he promyseth it onlye to the faythfull: so that whosoeuer presumeth to praye without fayth, that is to saye, without a full and certein persuasion of the mynde to obtaine the thing which he asketh, he doth none other thing than deride and mocke God, yea and recompteth God a lyare, forasmuch as he doubteth of the trueth, fayth, constancye & power of God, and by this meanes is his prayer become synne and abhominacion to the Lorde, and to him selfe, sinne and damnacion. For whatsoeuer is not of fayth, is sinne, sayeth S. Paule. Agayne, without faith it is vnpossible to please God. For he that cometh vnto god, must beleue that God is, & that he is a rewarder of suche as seke him. Now he ỹ doubteth, whether God be a rewarder to thē that seke him, cometh not to God aright: but this do they, which doo not beleue that they shall obtayne the thing which they aske of God: therfore come they not rightlye vnto God: & so consequently they obtayne nothing of God. No verely for where faith wanteh in prayer: no good thing is obtayned, although they pray so feruently, that they sweate both water & bloud.

Fayth in prayer.

Hebr, ij

That fayth is necessarilye required in prayer, very many both sentenses and histories of the holy scripture doo most manifestly declare. S. James sayth: If any of you lacke wisdō, let him aske of him, that geueth it: euen God, whiche geueth to all men indifferentlye, and casteth no man in the teeth, and it shalbe geuen him. But let hym aske in faythe and wauer not, For he that doubteth is lyke a waue of the sea, whiche is tost of the wyndes, & caryed with violence. Neyther let that man thinke, that he shall receaue anye thinge of the Lorde. A waueringe mynded man is vnstable in all his wayes. Our Sauyoure Christe sayeth also: What so euer ye desyre when ye praye: beleue that ye shall haue it, and it shall be done to you. Faythe obtayneth easely easely all thinge of God. For all thinges are possible to him that beleueth. And without faith nothing is obtained of God, but wrath, vengeaunce, the curse of God, & euerlasting damnacion. Therefore in the hystories of the Gospell we rede, that when anye benefyte was asked of Christ: Christ made inquisicion of theyr fayth, demaundinge of the askers, whether they dyd beleue, that he was able to graunt thē their requestes, & to satisfye their desyres. In the Gospell of Mathewe we rede, & whē two blynde men desyred Christ, that he wold restore vnto thē their sight: Christ sayd vnto thē: Do ye beleue, that I am able to do this thing? they answered, we beleue lord. Thē sayd Christ, according to your fayth be it vnto you. Lykewyse rede we, that when the father of that childe, which was possessed of a domme spirite, desyred Christe to haue pitye on his sonne and to heale him: Jesus sayde vnto him: If thou canst beleue, all things are possible to him that beleueth. The father of the childe euen with teares cryed out & sayde: I beleue: O lord helpe my incredulitye. And streight waies his sonne was made whole. Agayne, to whom is this vnknowen, that the woman of Canane making intercession for her daughter, which was possessed of a deuil, receaued of Christ many harde, & (as I may so speake) vnfrendely answeres: notwithstading she with a strōg & vnshaken fayth continued still prayinge, neuer ceasing frō prayer, till at the last Christ being ouercome with the faythfull prayer of her, sayde: O woman, great is thy fayth: be it vnto thee, euen as thou desyrest. How often rede we in the scripture. Thy fayth hath saued thee. Fayth is so mightye a thinge before God, that it manye tymes obtayneth a benefyte of God, before it be asked. Rede we not, that certayne men brought a man diseased of the palsey vnto Christ? we rede not, that they made any petition vnto Christ for his health: not withstanding Christ healed him, & sayde vnto him: Sonne, be on a good cōfort. Thy sinnes are forgeuē thee. Rise, take vp thy bed, & go thy way into thy house. How came this to passe? Verely, through the faith both of the man diseased of the palsey, and of them also, which brought the man. For thus writeth S. Mathewe: when Jesus sawe their fayth, he sayd to the mā diseased of the palsay: Be on a good comfort sonne: thy sinnes are forgeuen thee. They beleued in their hartes, that Christ both was able & also wold heale the sicke man, of the which thinge the sicke man him selfe was also fully persuaded: & this their faith was so acceptable vnto Christ, that without any asking, yea before they opened their mouth to speake, he graunted them their desyre. And here see we that true, which God speaketh by the Prophet: It shal be, that or euer they call, I shal aunswere thē. whyle they are yet but thinking howe to speake, I shal heare them. This we se also proued true in Dauid, which writeth on this maner: I sayd, I wil confesse my sinnes vnto the Lord, & so thou forgauest the wickednes of my sinne. For this shall euery one that is Godlye, make his prayer vnto thee, in a tyme whē thou maiest be found. It is truely also sayd of Moses: what other nation is so great, y gods come so nye

vnto, as the lord our God is nye vnto vs in al things, as oft as we cal vnto him. Forasmuch therfore as we haue so gentle, so louinge, and so liberall a father, which hath not only commaunded vs, that we shuld pray vnto him, but also hath promysed, that he will heare vs & graunt vs our peticions: let vs bring with vs, whensoeuer we entend to pray a sure, constant & vnshaken fayth, nothing doubting of the promyses of God: but beinge surelye persuaded, that whatsoeuer he moste graciously hath promysed vs, the same will he also most bounteously performe and gyue vnto vs. Father. God gyue vs this fayth. Sonne. Let vs craue it of God, & pray with thapostles, sayinge: O Lorde encrease our fayth. Father. Is there any other thinge behynde, concerning the due preparation vnto praier? Sonne. Yea verely. Fyrst ly, after we haue diligently cõsydered the cause, wherfore we will pray, & haue earnestlye pondered the commaundement of God, which willeth vs to pray, and haue also most depely weyed the promes of God, that he wil both heare vs & graunt vs our peticions: agayn, that to the promes of God we must annexe and adioyne a sure and stedfast fayth, being thorowly persuaded, that whatsoeuer God hath promysed, he wil abundantlye performe: this foloweth next in order to be considered, that whatsoeuer we aske of god, it must be asked of him in the name of his moste dere and only begoten sonne Christ Jesus. For albeit our cause be neuer so good and Godlye: and although our consyderacion about both the commaundement and promes of God, be neuer so earnest: and albeit we bring neuer so great fayth by beleuinge the promyses of God: yet if the prayers, which we do make: if the peticions, whiche we doo aske, be not made & asked in the name of Christ, al thafore sayde things profyt nothing at all. ¶ Whosoeuer therefore entendeth to pray aright, let him fullye determine with him selfe before he pray, to aske nothing of God, but only in the name of Christ: otherwise he shal not only pray in vayne, but also with his prayers prouoke and kyndle the wrath & vengeaunce of God against him selfe. For whatsoeuer we obtayne of God, we obtayne it not for our worthynes, nor for the holynes of any creature eyther in heauen or in earthe, but onlye for Christes sake, for Christes innocencye, dignitye and holynes: in whom, & for whose sake God the father is well pleased with vs. For as S. Paule sayeth, All the promyses of God by Christ are yea, and by him Amen: That is to saye, In Christ and for Christes sake God most certaynlye fulfilleth, whatsoeuer he hath most graciously promised. For Christ is that derelye beloued sonne, for whose sake God the father is well pleased with man. Christ is that dore, by the whiche we haue free accesse vnto God the father. Christ is that waye, by the whiche, whosoeuer doeth not walke, he can not come vnto the Father, as he him selfe testifyeth: I am the way, the trueth, and the lyfe. No man cometh vnto the father, but by me. Christ is that hygh & euerlastinge Bysshop, by whõ we must offer our prayers, prayses & thanckesgeuings vnto God the father, as thapostle sayth: By him (Christ) do we offer sacrifyce of prayse alway to God to God, that is to say, the frute of those lips, which confesse his name, Whosoeuer stryueth to approche vnto God with his prayers by anye other meane, than by Christ alone: he is a theefe, a robber, and a spoyler of the glorye of Christ. And agaynst suche Christ robbers this sayinge of Christ shall stande for euer as an inuincible bulwarke and mightye fortresse. I am the way, the trueth and life. No man cometh vnto the father, but by me. Whosoeuer therfore will addresse him selfe vnto prayer aryght: he muste directe his prayers vnto God the Father not in his owne name, nor in the name of any other creature either in heauen or in earth, but only in the name of Jesus Christ our alone Mediatour, Aduocate and intercessour. Father. What is it to pray in the name of Christ? Sonne. To pray in the name of Christ, is to beleue & acknowledge Christ alone to be our Mediatour, Aduocate and Intercessour vnto God the father, and in the dignitie, vertue and power of his mediacion and intercession to offer vp our prayers & prayses vnto God, and to aske of him all good thinges necessarye for the bodye or for the soule only for the excellencye, maiesty & honour of this our alone Mediatour Christ Jesu. Whosoeuer prayeth on this maner, I meane, in the name of Christ, he maye be well assured, that he shall suffer no repulse at the hande of God, but shall abundantly obtayne, whatsoeuer he asketh, as our Sauiour Christ sayeth: Whatsoeuer ye shall aske in my name, ỳ wil I do, that the father may be glorifyed by the sonne. If ye shall aske any thing in my name, that will I doo. To make vs certeyne and sure, that whatsoeuer we aske of God in the name of Christ, we shall easely obtayne it: Christ in thafore sayde wordes promyseth twyse, that he will bring to passe, that we shal enioy the things, which we haue asked in his name. Agayne he sayeth: Uerelye, verely I saye vnto you, whatsoeuer thinges ye shall aske the father in my name, he shall geue you. As Christ afore promysed twyse that he will bringe to passe, that we shall obtayne of God the Father whatsoeuer we aske in his name: so lykewyse now, because we should not doubte of his trueth he addeth vnto his promyse an othe, and sweareth, that whatsoeuer we aske of the father in his name, he shall geue vs. Uerelye, verely I say vnto you, whatsoeuer ye shall aske the father in my name, he shall geue you. O vnoutspeakeable comfort. S. Paule also commaundeth vs, that whatsoeuer we do in worde or in dede, we should do all things in the name of the Lorde Jesu. For nothing is acceptable vnto God, that is not done in the name of Christ. Our prayings, our preachings: our watchinges, our fastinges: our almose dedes with all oure other good workes are vyle & filthy, yea they stynke before the face of god, if they be not done in the name of Christe, be they other wyse neuer so much seasoned and poudered eyther with the merites & intercessions of Saynctes, or with our owne righteousnes and good workes. For what other thinge are all oure righteousnesses, yea euen of the most perfecteſt, but as a polluted & defiled clothe, if Christes righteousnes be laide a side? almosededes, good workes, satisfactiõs, merites, and whatsoever besydes euen the most holy amonge vs haue, are none other thing before God without Christe, than dunghilles of abhominacions. It is not therefore without a cause required of him, whiche entendeth to praye aryght, that he offer his prayers vnto God in the name of Christe Jesus our Lord. It is truly sayd of S. Austen: The prayer, which is not made thorowe Christ (that is to saye, in the name of Christ) doeth not only not put away sinne, but the verye prayer it selfe is made sinne.

In psal. cviii.

Notable, golden and precious is this sentence of S. Ambrose, & worthy to be reposed in the lowest parte of our memorye: Christe alone is our mouth, wherby we speake to the father: our eye, whereby we see the father: our right hande, wherby we offer vnto the father: whiche Christ, excepte he maketh intercession for vs, neyther we, nor all the Saynctes haue any thinge to do with God.

Libr. de Isaac & anima.

And here fall downe flatte to the grounde, yea to the verye hell, all the prayers of the Jewes, of the Mahometistes, and of all other sectaries. For albeit that all these after a certayne maner call vpon God, & offer prayers and prayses vnto him: yet forasmuch as they pray not in the name of Christ, they rather with theyr prayers prouoke God vnto anger, than make him theyr good and gracious Lord. For as concerninge the Jewes, although at this present day they boast them selues alone to be the peculiare people of God, they praye, they fast, &c.

The Jewes

Yet because they doo not beleue in Christe, neyther acknoweledge Christ to be God and man, to be theyr Sauyoure, Mediatoure, Reconcyliatour and Attonement maker, &c. nor offer theyr prayers vnto God in hys name, God doeth vtterlye detest and abhorre bothe them and theyr prayers, as it is writen: He that beleueth on the sonne, hath euerlastinge lyfe. But he that beleueth not on the sonne, shall not see lyfe, but the wrath of God abydeth on him.

Ioan. iii.

Neyther is it sufficient, that the Jewes doo acknowledge God the father, pretẽd a certayne fayth toward him, pray vnto him & cal vpõ his holy name, except they also beleue and confesse that Christ is the sonne of God, yea God him selfe, equal with the father, of the same Maiesty, myght, vertue and power to the vttermost: for whose sake alone God is at one with them, forgeueth them their synnes, and accepteth theyr prayers: which thinge because they doo not, whatsoeuer they boast of the fauour & good wil of god toward thẽ: it is but a vayne ostentatiõ and bragge, seyng they cast away Christ, and the sauing health, which is layd vp in him for all the faythfull. For as S. John sayeth: Whosoeuer denyeth the Sonne, he hath not the father. Agayne, he that hath the sonne, hath lyfe: He that hath not the sonne of God, hath not lyfe.

Mahometistes.

The same is to be sayd of the Mahometistes, that we haue spoken of the Jewes. For neyther they call on God in the name of Christe: therfore are theyr prayers also synne, wickednes and playne abhomination before God. But what shall we speake of the Papistes? Doo they call vpon God in the name of Christe? yea rather in the merites, mediacions, intercessions, dignities, woundes, bloud, passion & death of Sayntes. Let the popish Portasses and Massebokes be searched, and it shal sone be perceaued, howe idolatrous the prayers of the Papistes are, fourmed and made in the names, merites and intercessions of Sainctes, as though there were so greate dignitie in the merites & intercessions of Sainctes, that God for theyr sake were bounde both to heare theyr prayers and to graunt theyr requestes. I coulde bringe forth ensampies to manye of this matter, if tyme dyd serue. But to whom are they vnknowen? whosoeuer therfore will prepare him selfe to praye aright, let him fullye determine with him selfe to offer & present his prayers to God only, only in the name of Christ, in the vertue and power of Christ, in the dignitie and excellēcy of Christ: and desyre to be hearde, and his prayers to be accepted of God for Christes sake our only Mediatour, as S. Paule sayth: By him (Christ) we offer sacrifyce of prayse alwaye to God, that is to saye, the frute of those lips, which confesse his name. If any man presume to praye otherwyse, he shall fynde at Gods hande all one rewarde with the Iewes, Mahometistes, Papistes, and such other Sectaries. Father. God geue vs all grace in the vnitie of his holy spirite truely to call vpon the Lorde our God, in the name of his most dere Sonne Iesus Christ our alone mediatour. But if there be yet remayning any thinge, that is necessarily required vnto the worthy preparacion vnto prayer, I wold gladlye heare it. Sonne. Syrtly, it is required of vs, if we wil pray aright, that we haue also this cōsideracion in vs, I meane, that in our prayer we aske nothing of God, but that, which is agreable to his holy will. For our will is wicked and nought, desyrous rather of vngodly than godly thinges, and for the most parte wishinge that, which should rather hurte vs than profyt vs. And here maye we se the corruption of our nature, which we haue sucked out of the breast of our old mother Heue, which hath so infected and poysoned vs, yea and euery parte of vs, that whether we respect the body or the soule, nothing can be foūd whole, nothing sounde, nothing perfect in vs: so truely is it sayd of the Prophet: The whole heade is sycke, and the harte is heauy. From the sole of the foote vnto the heade, there is no whole part in all your bodye: but all are woundes, botches, sores and strypes, &c. The harte of man is vnpure, filthy, leude, and so stuffed full of all kynde of wickednes, that it is vtterly vnsearcheable, except of him alone, whiche searcheth the hartes and the raynes. All the senses and thoughtes of man are not only prone vnto euill, but also euill in dede euen from the very cradles. The fre will of man is so woumded and made weake, that in thinges appertaining vnto the spirite of God and vnto our saluacion, it can of it selfe do nothing at all, as Christ sayeth, without me ye can do nothing. Also S. Paule: It is God, ỹ worketh in vs both the will & the dede. Agayne, we are not able of our selues so much as to thinke a good thought. Moreouer the strengthes of man are so weake, yea so none, that beinge ones throwen downe we are not able to ryse vp agayne.

Luc.x. Luc.xv. gayne. Suche myſers and wretches are we, that we ſuffer our ſelues as miſerable bondeſlaues to be led captyue of the Deuil, the worlde and the fleſhe, and to be handled as it pleaſeth them. We are ſo ſpoiled of our garmentes, that our myſerable nakednes is eaſye to be perceaued: neyther can we of our ſelues couer that euill fauored nakednesſe of ours. Beaſtly are we, not vnderſtanding the thinges, which belong vnto the ſpirite of God. Hypocrites are we, and a verye lumpe of wickednes, yea the wickednes it ſelfe. We can not ſo much as ones thinke well: ſo vnable are we eyther to aſke or to doo any good thing. What wolde ſuche a monſter of wickednes do in prayer, if it were ſuffered to aſke according to his owne will, and to enioy the requeſtes, which it woulde aſke? What woulde that monſter (I meane man) deſyre? What would he aſke? what would he wiſhe? Beyng a couetous man, he would wiſhe with king Midas, that whatſoeuer he touched, might ſtreight wayes be made golde. Being a carnall and voluptuous man, he would wiſhe with Iupiter, that Phebus wolde prolong the tyme of goynge foorth with his fyrye carte manye houres, that he beinge in darkenes mighte without all ſhame vſe his venerous paſtyme at his pleaſure. Beyng an ambicious man, he wolde wiſhe with kinge Nabuchodonoſor to haue all nacions vnder the heauens, ſubiecte vnto him, & him ſelf to be take for a god vpō the earth. Being an Idolatour, he wold wiſh with Ieſabel, ỳ no god might be worſhipped but Baal, & ỳ no miniſters ſhuld be had in honour, but only the prieſtes of Baal. Beig an hogge of Epicures flocke, he wold wiſh with Epicurus, none other thing, but worldly & fleſhly pleaſurs, eating & drinking, quietnes reſt, dyſing, carding, &c. Are not theſe mete & worthy thinges to be aſked of God? O miſerable blindnes of moſt miſerable mā. It is truely ſayd of S. Paule: We knowe not what to deſyre as we ought. It is not therefore without a cauſe required, that whoſoeuer entendeth to pray aright, ſhoulde determine with him ſelfe onlye to aſke that in his prayer, which is agreable to the will of God. For it is not lawfull for vs to aſke what we thincke good in our carnall iudgements, but that only, which we knowe to be acceptable in the ſighte of God, or els we pray in vayne & without fruite: or if we do obtayne at any tyme that, which we vngodlye require, we obtayne it vnto our deſtruction and damnacion: and better were it for vs neuer to haue obtayned it. The will of God aboue all thinges is to be conſydered in our prayers, and accordyng vnto that ought we to pray: Which thing if we do, we may be ſure to praye profytably, and to obtayne that we aſke, as S. John teſtifyeth, ſayinge: This is the truſt that we haue in God, that if we aſke anye thinge accordinge to his will, he heareth vs. And if we knowe that he heareth vs, whatſoeuer we aſke, we knowe that we haue the peticions that we deſyre of him. That thinges aſked contrary to the will of God, are vaynly aſked and without fruite it appereth by diuerſe hyſtories of the holye ſcripture. In the Goſpell of S. Marke we rede, that Iames and John the Sonnes of Zebedeus, came vnto Christ, and sayde: Master, we will, that whatsoeuer we shall aske, thou graunt vs. Christ sayde vnto them: what wil ye haue me to doe for you? They sayde: Graunt vs, that one maye syt on thy right hande, the other on the lefte hande in thy glory. But Jesus answered: ye knowe not what ye aske. James and John the derely beloued disciples of Christ persuaded them selues, that they should easly obtayne, whatsoeuer they asked of so louing and gentle maister without any respect or exception. They dreamed that Christ (as the blynde Jewes do at this present day) shoulde haue an earthly kingedome in this worlde, and reigne lyke a moste triumphãt and glorious Prince ouer all nations: therfore desyred they of Christ, that one of thẽ might syt on his right hande in his kyngedome, the other on his lifte hande: that is to saye, beare the chefe rule about him: and as I may so speake, one to be Lord Chauncelour, & the other to be Lorde Tresurar. These two disciples prayed, but not accordyng to the will of God. Therefore layde Christ vnto them: Ye know not, what ye aske. The wil of God was, not that they shoulde reigne in this worlde as earthly Princes, which thing they greatlye desyred, but that they should prepare them selues to the crosse, and be content to suffer for the Gospell of his sonne, and so to enter into glorye not of the worlde, but of heauen. S. Paule also prayed, that the vnquietnes thorow the flesh, euẽ the Messanger of Satan, wherwith he was continually bufeted, might depart frõ him, but he obtayned not his desyre, although he desyred it of the Lord thryse, that is to say, oftẽtymes. Why so? Because he prayed not accordinge to the will of God. Therfore was it answered him on this maner: My grace is sufficiẽt for thee. Many in tymes past haue prayed, & were not heard. Many also pray at this day, & are not heard. How cometh it to passe? Because they pray not accordyng to the wil of God. Plato in his prayer vnto Jupiter hath a notable sentence, whiche is this: O kinge Jupiter, geue vs good thinges both when we pray, and when we do not pray. As concerninge thinges whiche are euill, geue them by no meanes vnto vs, although we aske them. The noble Philosopher Socrates affirmed, that we should aske nothinge of the immortall Goddes, but onlye that they shoulde geue vs good thinges, forasmuch as they do best knowe, what is most profytable for euerye man: as for vs, we many tymes in our prayers aske that, which were better for vs not to haue it graũted. Here euen of the very Ethnykes may we learne, that nothing ought to be asked of God, but that onlye whiche is good: agayne, that in all our prayers we submit our will to the good will & pleasure of God accordyng to this our comon prayer:

ii. cor. xij.

Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heauen. Father. what is to be done, that we maye praye accordinge to the will of God? Sonne, God hath opened vnto vs his blessed wil in the holye scripture, wherin he hath declared, what we ought to aske. whatsoeuer we fynde in them to be the wil of God, that maye we be bold to aske and to craue. And whatsoeuer we aske so praying: we may be sure to obtaine it, forasmuche

asmuche as we pray accoꝛding to the will of God. As foꝛ an example: S. Paule wꝛyteth, this to be the will of God, that all men ſhould be ſaued, and come to the knowledge of the trueth. Whoſoeuer therefoꝛe prayeth, that he may be ſaued, & come to the knowledge of the trueth, he prayeth accoꝛding to the will of God. Jeremy the Pꝛophet prayed vnto God, that he might obtayne euerlaſting ſaluacion, ſaying: Heale thou me, O Loꝛd, and I ſhalbe healed: ſaue thou me and I ſhalbe ſaued. The theefe alſo prayde foꝛ the ſame on this maner: O Loꝛd remẽber me, when thou comeſt into thy kingdom. Alſo S. Paule: I wiſhe to be loſoned, & to be with Chꝛiſt. Foꝛ the knowledge of Gods trueth, Dauid prayed thus: Shewe me thy wayes, (O Loꝛd) and teache me thy pathes. Directe me in thy trueth, and teache me: foꝛ thou arte God my Sauiour. Agayne, he ſayeth, Gyue me vnderſtandinge (O Loꝛd) that I may knowe thy teſtimonies. All theſe prayed accoꝛding to the wil of God, & were heard. Moꝛeouer the holye ſcꝛipture declareth this to be the will of God, that no man ſhuld periſhe, but that all ſhoulde repent and lyue. Foꝛ ſo wꝛyteth S. Peter: The Loꝛde is patient toward vs, whyle he will none to periſhe, but to receaue all vnto repentaunce. God him ſelfe ſayth by the Pꝛophet: As ſurely as I liue ſayeth the Loꝛde, I will not the deathe of a ſinner, but rather that he turne and lyue. Chꝛiſt alſo ſayth: I ſay vnto you, that there ſhalbe ioy in heauen ouer one ſinner that repenteth, moꝛe then ouer nyntye and nyne righteous, that nede no repentaunce. Whoſoeuer therfoꝛe prayeth vnto God foꝛ repẽtaunce, he prayeth accoꝛding to the wil of God, and may be ſure to be hearde.

Lykewyſe as foꝛ repentaunce, ſo foꝛ faith alſo the good wil of God is, that we ſhoulde pꝛay: foꝛaſmuch as without fayth repentaunce befoꝛe God is of no valour: yea repentaunce without fayth dꝛyueth vnto deſperacion, and deſperacion vnto damnacion, as we maye ſee in Caim, Judas, and ſuche lyke. And foꝛaſmuch as both repentaunce & fayth is the gifte of God, therefoꝛe muſt they both be aſked of him. Foꝛ Chꝛiſt ſayde not onlye, Repent, but he added, And beleue the Goſpell. Repentaunce and fayth muſte go together as companions inſeparable, euen as the ſunne and light, fyꝛe and heate. Foꝛ the will of God is, not only that we ſhould repent, but alſo that we ſhoulde beleue, as our ſauiour Chꝛiſt ſayth: This is the will of him that ſent me, that all that ſe the Sonne and beleue on him, ſhould haue euerlaſtinge lyfe. Whoſoeuer therefoꝛe pꝛayeth foꝛ fayth, that he maye haue euerlaſtinge lyfe thoꝛow Chꝛiſt, he pꝛayeth accoꝛdinge to the will of God. So rede we of the Apoſtles, which pꝛayed vnto god foꝛ faith on this maner. O loꝛd encreaſe our faith. Furthermoꝛe this is ꝑ wil of god (ſayth S. Paule) euen your ſanctification, that ye abſtayne from whoꝛdom, & that euerye one of you know to poſſeſſe his owne veſſell with holynes and honoure, and not in the luſt of concupiſcence, as do the Heathen, whiche knowe not God. is the auenger of al suche thinges. Whosoeuer therefore prayeth, that he may be holy in al his cõuersation, that he may not pollute his vessel (that is to say) his body, with fornication, aduultery, or with any other kynde of vnclẽnes, but kepe it in holynes & honour: agayn, whosoeuer prayeth, that he may deale iustly & truly with all men, with whom he hath to do, either in bargaining, bying or selling, he prayeth accordyng to the will of God & may be sure to be hearde. To be short, looke what soeuer we fynd in the holy scripture to be the wil of God, that may we freely & with a good conscience aske, & so asking we pray according to the will of God, & we may be sure both to be heard, & also to enioy our requestes. Father. We maye then lawfully praye for the enlargynge of Christes kingdõ, for þ auaunc emẽt of his holy word, for the true vnderstanding of the sacred scripture, for cõstancye & stedfastnes in the religion of Christ, for remission of our sinnes, for the gifte of the holy ghost, for the encrease of fayth, for feruent loue toward our neighbour, yea euen toward our enemy, for peace & quietnes of conscience, for long sufferyng, for modesty, for patience in aduersitie, for humilitie in prosperitie, & for such other lyke spiritual giftes & frutes of the holy ghost. And as we pray for thẽ, so shall we enioy them. Sonne. Yea verely, Father. But what cõcerning bodely & worldly thinges: must we aske thẽ also of God? Do we pray according to the wil of God, whẽ we craue at his hand all thinges necessary for the sustentacion of this our poores nedy lyfe? Sonne. I am not altogether ignorant what some writers iudge in this behalfe. Notwithstanding this haue I learned, that we maye with a good conscience aske of God all thinges necessarye as well for the body as for the soule, as meate, drinke, clothe, healthy of body, longe lyfe, defence frõ miseries, deliueraces frõ tribulacions, prosperous successe in all our labours and trauayles, a quiet comon weale, publique peace, a good wyfe, obedient childrẽ, quiet subiectes, good Magistrates, & such lyke, as we haue dyuers exãples in the holy scripture. And our Sauioure Christ taught vs to aske of God the father our daylye bread, that we may know that all good things both for the body & for the soule come from God, and by this meanes learne to be thanckeful vnto God for all his benefytes. Math. vi. But this is to be noted, that as all spirituall things appertayning eyther vnto the glory of God or vnto the saluacion of our soules are to be asked of God without any condicion, so lykewyse are all corporal things to be desyred of God with a condicion, which knoweth better, what is expedient for vs, thẽ we our selues do. As for an exãple: when we pray for the forgeuenes of sinnes, we shal not pray on this maner: O heauẽly father forgeue vs our sinnes, if it be thy wil. No, but without any cõdicion we shall say. O heauẽlye father forgeue vs our sinnes for Christes sake. For God hath declared vnto vs in his holy worde, þ it is his good wil & pleasure, þ we should so pray. As surely as I liue (sayth he) I will not the death of a sinner, but rather that he turne and liue. But if we pray to be deliuered from anye corporall incommoditye or disease, as from an age we, from the plage, from banishment, from imprisonment, from pouerty, from sickenes, frõ death, &c. then ought we to submit our will to gods Note wel Ezech. Iere.

will, which best knoweth, what is most profytable for vs: as a certein man sayeth: what is most profytable for the sicke man, the Physicion knoweth better, then he that is diseased. As for an exãple, if we shuld pray to be delyuered from sickenes, we must praye after this maner: O God & heauenly father, which for our sinnes & wickednes hast worthely cast vpon vs this greuous crosse of sickenes, wherwith we be greatly enfebled, made weake & brought low: we most hũbly beseech thee, that thou wilt now eat the last after so many & so great troubles, paynes and aduersities take away mercifully frõ vs this our sickenes, & liberally restore vnto vs the benefyte of health, that we as in mynde, so lykewyse in body being made sounde & strong, may liue & glorifye thy holy name. Notwithstanding (O heauenly father) thy will and not ours be done in this thing. For concerning temporall and corporall matters we muste so pray, that all thinges be lefte vnto the councell, determination and will of God, to gene vnto vs, what he will, when he will, & how much he will. So teacheth vs Christ in our comon prayer: Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heauen. And as he taught vs thus to pray, so likewise dyd he him selfe practise this maner of praying. For whẽ the time of his passyon begã to draw nye, he praied vnto his father on this maner. O my father, if it be possible, let this cup depart frõ me. Notwithstanding not as I wil, but as thou wilt. Here Christ praied his father, that he might not drinke of the cup of his passion, notwithstãding he submitted his will to the will of his father. Likewyse prayed the Leper: Lorde, sayeth he, if thou wilt, thou art able to make me clene. The Leper wished to be clensed frõ his leprosy, notwithstanding he referred the matter to Christ, and to his holye will, to doo with him as he thought best. Agayn, those thre yong mẽ, which at Nabuchodonosors cõmaũdemẽt were cast into the whote brenning fornace, because they wold not worshyp ỹ golden image, said to the kig: we may not cõsent vnto thee in this matter. For beholde, our God, whõ we serue, is able to kepe vs from the hote burning ouen (O king) & can right well deliuer vs out of thy handes. And though he wil not, yet shalt thou know (O king) that we will not serue thy Gods, nor do reuerence vnto that image, whiche thou hast set vp. Furthermore Dauid desyred to be restored to his kingdom, whẽ he was put out of it by Absolon his sonne: yet he wished it none otherwyse, then it should seme good in the sight of God. His wordes are these: If I shall fynde fauour in the eyes of thẽ lord, he wil bring me again. But if the lord thus say: I haue no lust vnto thee, beholde, here am I, let him do with me, what semeth good in his eyes. Note here, how obedient Dauid shewed him selfe to ỹ wil of god. He wisheth to be restored to his kingdõ, not withstanding, if it shall otherwyse seme good vnto god, he is contẽt also to obey his holy will. All these examples teach vs, that in all corporal & tẽporall things we ought to submit our will to the good will and pleasure of God, & to be content to receaue of him, whatsoeuer his good wil shalbe, whether it be rychesse or pouertye, health or sycknes, lyfe or death, &c. He is our Father, and we are his sonnes. Let vs not doubt therfore, but that he will gene vs that, whiche he knoweth to be best and most profytable for vs. Onlye let vs do our endeuour to pray accordinge to his wil, and aske those thinges, which we are taught in the holy scripture to aske, that is to say, those thinges which belong vnto the glorye of God, the saluacion of our soules, and the commoditie of our neighbour, and let vs not doubt, but that we shalbe heard & obtaine our desyres, whether they pertayne vnto the soule or vnto the bodye. God without doubt will accomplishe our desyre, if we goe about to satisfye his godly pleasure & frame our prayers accordyng to his blessed will, as the Psalmograph wytnesseth, saying: He will accomplish the desyre of them that feare him, and heare theyr prayer, and saue them. psal.clxv.

Hereto belongeth the sayinge of S. John: Derely beloued, if our hart do not condemne vs, we haue truste to God warde: and whatsoeuer we aske, we receaue of him, because we kepe his commaundements, and doo those thinges, whiche are pleasinge in his syght. Father. God geue vs all grace both in our prayers and in all other exercyses eyther of the bodye or of the soule, onlye to do those thinges which are acceptable in his sighte. Sonne. Amen. Father. What remayneth there yet behinde concerning the worthy preparacion vnto prayer? Sonne. Seuenthly, although thaforesaide thinges, wherof we haue hytherto spoken, are so necessary to the worthy preparacion vnto prayer, that who soeuer cometh not so instructed vnto prayer, he prayeth vnprofytably & in vayne: yet this matter also, wherof we shall nowe entreate, is so necessarye vnto him that entendeth to pray with fruite, that without it, all the other profyt nothinge at all. Father. What is that my sonne? Sonne. It is the francke and fre forgeuing of them, which haue offended vs eyther in worde or in dede. Father. Is this thinge so necessary? Sonne. Yea verely, as you shall heare here after. Therfore whosoeuer entendeth to praye, if he will praye aright, let hym consyder with him selfe, howe he is affected toward his neighbour, although his enemy. Let him searche his conscience, and loke in the boke of his harte, whether all thinges in him be frendly, louinge and charitable toward not onlye his frendes, but also his enemies. For as oure Sauiour Christe sayth: If ye loue them, which loue you, what thãckes haue ye? For sinners also loue theyr louers. And if ye do good for them which do good for you, what thãcke haue ye? For sinners also do euẽ the same. Whosoeuer therefore entendeth to praye with fruite, let him see in him selfe, whether he hath a kanckred, malicious, hatefull, despytefull and enuious harte agaynst anye man, or not. If he haue, let him knowe, that he is a right birde of Cãins nest, & a verye image of Satã, although he speake with the tonges of angels, & vnderstode al ỹ misteries both of God & Gods worde: yea although he were so feruent in prayer, ỹ his knees were made lyke to the knees of Camels through kneling, as we rede of S. James the Bishop of Jerusalẽ. If any man therfore lyndeth in him selfe an hateful hart toward any mã, let him not presume ones to opẽ his mouth for to pray. If he doe, ỹ first worde of his praier turneth vnto his own dãnaciõ. And the more he prayeth being so affected the more doth he heape the hote wrath and fearse vengeaunce of God against him selfe. Neyther shall such a monster of wickednes obtayne anye grace or fauour at the hande of God, as the wyse man testifyeth, sayinge: He that seketh vengeaunce, shall fynde vengeaunce at the lordes hand, which shall sure kepe him his sinnes. Forgiue thy neighbour thy hurte, that he hath done thee, and so shall thy sinnes be forgeuen thee also when thou prayest. A mã that beareth hatred against another, howe dare he desyre forgeuenes of God? He that sheweth no mercy to a man, which is lyke him selfe, how dare he aske forgeueneg of his sinnes? If he that is but flesshe, beareth hatred and kepeth it, who wil entreate for his sinnes? Remember the ende, and let enemitie passe, which seketh death and destruction, and abyde thou in the commaundementes (of God.) Remember the cõmaundementes (of God) so shalt thou not be rigorous ouer thy neighbour, &c.

Eccle. xxviij

Here heare we, that except we forgeue them that haue offended vs, although we pray neuersomuch, yet shall not our prayers be heard of God, I meane, vnto our saluacion: our sinnes shall neuer be forgeuen vs, but God shall reserue and kepe them vnto our damnacion: and all beit heauen and earth, and all that euer are in them, with one voyce should pray for vs, yet should not theyr prayers for vs be heard, so vile myserg and damnable wretches are we in the sight of God, so long as we continue in this malicious mynde and dispytefull hatrede. For God loueth, allowethand regardeth nothing, that procedeth from an enuious, hateful and malicious harte. Let vs remẽber Caim. He offered sacrifyces vnto God, prayinge and prayſinge God outwardelye with no les holynes and deuocion, then his brother Abel dyd.

Gen, iiij

But what sayeth the scripture? God looked vnto Habel and vnto his giftes: but vnto Caim and vnto his giftes he loked not. Why so? Because his harte was voyde both of fayth toward God, and of loue toward his brother. His harte burned with enuye and hatrede agaynst his brother Abel. Therefore his prayers, prayses and sacrifyces were abhominacion vnto God. Oh, with what face dare we be bolde ones to open our mouth, and to say the Lordes prayer, calling the heauenlye father our father, when we hate one another, and speake euyll one of another? Is God the father, the Father of the malicious, of the enuyous, of the hatefull & of the vncharitable? Or is he rather the father of the frendely, of the louing, of the charitable, and of the welwilling? God is charitie, sayth Saint John, and he that dwelleth in charitye, dwelleth in God, and God in him. Nowe he that dwelleth in hatred, in whom dwelleth he? verelye in the Deuill, and the Deuyll in hym. Is suche a Monster of malyce a mete person to call vppon God the Father? A malicious and enuious person to call God, Father, is none other thinge then to Call God enuyous, malicious, hatefull, despytefull, and the father of all tyrauntes and bloudethirstye people. And howe greate an impietye that is, who knoweth not?

6. Ioan, iiij

Againe, with what forhead (except we haue tomuch rubbed our fore-heade: I meane, except we be past al shame) dare we say in the Lords prayer: Forgeue vs our trespalles, as we forgeue them that trespasse agaynst vs: if we do not forgeue them, whiche haue offended vs? So to pray, is it any other thinge, then to aske vengeaunce vpon our selues? If we retayne hatred in our myndes: if we seke to be reuenged: if we deuyse howe we may hurt them, that haue hurted vs: yea if we labour not to be reconciled euen to our very enemies: and if we can not be content to forgeue them, to loue and fauour thē, to speake well of thē, to pray for thē, & to do for them, whatsoeuer lyeth in our power, and no les to seke their commodite and profyt, then we do our owne: when we pray this prayer, we do none other thing, then beseche God, that he wil not forgeue vs our sinnes, but rather deale with vs accordyng to our deseruinges with all kynde of rigoure & seueritie. For except we forgeue other, it is vayne to loke for remission & forgeuenes of our sinnes at the hād of God, as our sauiour Christ witnesseth, saying: Forgeue & it shalbe forgeuē you. Again, if ye forgeue mē their faultes, your heauenly father will also forgeue you. But if ye wil not forgeue menne their faultes, neyther will your Father forgeue you youre sinnes. The demaunde, which Peter asked of Christ, how often he shuld forgeue his brother, is not vnknowē. S. Mathew wryteth, that Peter sayde vnto Christ on this maner: Lord, how often shal my brother sinne agaynste me and I shall forgeue him? Seuentymes? Christ answered: I say not vnto thee, seuētymes, but seuēty tymes seuē tymes: that is to say, so often as he sinneth forgeue him. The parable, whiche Christ immediatly after put forth, declareth euidently, that except we forgeue them that haue offended vs, yea and that from the very hart, we shall neuer obtayne remission of our sinnes at the hande of God. Are not these the wordes of blessed S. Paule? Forgeue ye one another. If anye man haue a quarell against another: euen as Christ forgaue you, euē so do ye. Can any better or more apte exāple be brought forth, wherby we maye be prouoked one to forgeue another, then the example of Christ? To whom is his fre forgeuinge of our sinnes vnknowen? When we were yet his enemies, he dyd not only forgeue vs our sinnes, but he also gaue him selfe euen vnto the death to be a raūsome for our sinnes, and to reconcyle vs vnto God his father, that thorowe his paynes we might be deliuered from the paynes of hell, and by his death be made fre from euerlastinge death, and be made enheritours of euerlastinge lyfe. Father. It is mete and conuenient, that if we will fynde fauour at the hand of God, we shew also fauour to our neighbour, & be the very same vnto him, that we wold wish god shuld be vnto vs. And forasmuch as we are but fraile vessels, & cā not so liue in this worlde, but sometyme displeasure shal chaūce amōg vs: it is our duety one of vs to forgeue another, to beare one with another: to take all thinges into the best part, not sone to be prouoked vnto anger, not streight wayes to beare any displeasure against any man, not to shew our selues harde to be entreated, but easye to be reconciled, & to seke all

Rom.xii. men. Sonne. This is the office and duety of a Christen man. For if any do behaue him selfe otherwyse, he is no mete man to praye vnto God. Father. Remayneth there anye more to be spoken of, concerninge the worthy preparacion vnto prayer? Sonne. Finallye, it is requisite, that whansoeuer we entend to pray, we appoint not God the tyme when he shall helpe vs, and perfourme our desyres, but cõmit this thing vnto his godly wisdom, as vnto him, which best knoweth, when our petitions ought to take place, and to be brought vnto effect. For as the way & the place to helpe vs are not to be assigned vnto God, no more is the tyme to be appointed vnto him, whan he shal helpe vs, & bryng our requestes vnto a fortunate ende: but in this behalfe we muste be contẽt to receaue the benefites of our desyres at the hande of God, not whan we will, but at what tyme it shall be his good pleasure to geue them vnto vs: which thing without all doubte shal then come to passe, when it shall be most vnto our great ioy and singulare comforte. And although we do not perceaue, ỹ God doth streightwayes graunte vs our peticions, yet let vs not faynte in our faythe, nor despayre of our hope, nor yet conceaue an euill opinion of God, as though he were angrye with vs, or vnfaythfull in his woordes, and not true in his promyses, but rather cleaue vnto him with a stronge fayth, and wholye depend vpon his promises, nothing doubtinge, but that in his tyme, he will liberally perfourme and abundantlye geue whatsoeuer we haue asked, yea more than we can, or dare be bolde to aske, as the Prophete Habacuc sayth. If the Lorde maketh tarriaunce, abyde thou his leasure: for he will vndoubtedly come, and will not tarye. The Prophet Esay sayth: In silence and hope shall your strengthe be. Jeremy also sayth: It is good with silence to tary for the sauing health of God. For God manye tymes differreth to geue vs our requestes, not because he is angrye or hateth vs, or because he is vnfaythful in his woordes and not constant in his promyses: but vnto this ende that he maye proue our fayth, & trye, whether we be faythful & constant in geuing credite to his promyses, or not: agayn, that we after long desyre enioyeng his benefytes should the more feruentlye be kindled to embrace them, & to make much of thẽ: agayne, ỹ we should the more earnestlye be prouoked hartely to prayse & magnify ỹ name of god for his fatherly benefites, so liberally & louingly bestowed vpõ vs. For thinges sone geuen, sone ware vyle: but things lõg desyred, & at ỹ last obtained, are highly esteemed & had in great price. Al the godly therfore in times past, although they did not streightwayes enioy their desyres, ceassed not stil to pray vnto God, neyther were they any thing at al dismayde, but pacientlye abode the Lordes leasure, being content to receaue, when it should be his good pleasure to geue, as David sayth: Beholde, euen as the eyes of seruauntes looke vnto the hande of theyr maisters: and as the eyes of a mayden vnto the hande of her mastresse: euen so our eyes wayte vpon the Lorde our God, vntill he haue mercye vpon vs. Here David appointed God no certein tyme, when he shal shew his mercy on him and

and graunt him his requestes, neyther ceaseth he from liftinge vp his eyes vnto the Lorde his God, because he doth not streight wayes obtayne his desyres: but he goeth forth in his prayers, & continueth callinge on the name of God euen so longe vntill the Lorde hath pitye on him, and graunt him his desyre. O blessed Dauid. O worthy ensample to be folowed of all them, which are ledde with the earnest loue of prayer, & harteye wishe to haue their petitions accepted of God. And this is it, that our Sauiour Christ sayeth in the Gospell: Men ought alway to pray, and not to be wearye. For God will tender the supplications of them, which night and daye crye vnto him, although for a tyme he deferre them. Suche patient abyder of the Lordes leysure was Job also, which sayeth. Although he killeth me, yet will I putte my trust in him. Lyke wyse sayde Moses vnto the children of Israel, when Pharao pursued them, and they sawe no way to escape, but eyther to perish with waters, or els to fal into the handes of the enemy. Feare not, sayeth he, stande still, and beholde the wonderfull worckes of God, which he will do this daye. Moses commaundeth the people of Israel not to feare, but to stande still, that is to say, not to prescribe vnto God eyther the waye or the place, or the tyme of their deliueraunce, but with stronge fayth to cleaue to the promyses of God, and paciently to abyde their deliueraunce, whē his good pleasure shalbe. The patient abydinge of the Lordes leasure doeth so greatlye please God, that nothinge can more hast or prouoke his benefytes: as on the contrary parte, nothing doth more displease and offend god, then the rowe impacience to prescribe vnto him the tyme, when he shall helpe vs, as we maye perceaue by the wordes, whiche the godlye Matrone Judith spake vnto the citisens of Bethulia: which, when Holofernes beseged their cytye, prescribed vnto God fyue dayes respyte to helpe thē. If no helpe came frō God by that tyme, they were full determined to yelde & geue ouer the citie to the enemye. But howe earnestly that stout stomacked and courageous Matrone Judith rebuked the for this their impacience, incredulitie and tempting of God: these her wordes do euidently declare: What thinge is this (sayth she) wherein Ozias hath consented, that if God helpe not within fyue dayes, he will geue ouer the Citye to the Assirians? What are ye, that ye tempte the Lorde? This deuise obtayneth no mercye of God, but prouoketh him to wrath and displeasure. Will ye set the mercy of the Lorde a tyme, & appoint him a day after your will? Neuertheles forasmuch as the lord is pacient, let vs rather repent, pouring out teares and beseching him of grace. For God threatneth not as a man, neyther will he be prouoked vnto wrath as the children of men. And therfore let vs hartely fal downe before him, and serue him with a mete spirite, and with weeping eyes say vnto the Lorde, that he deale with vs accordinge to his owne will and mercye. Therfore whensoeuer we entend to praye, let vs determine with our selues patiētlye to abyde the Lordes leasure, & by no meanes to prescribe vnto him eyther the time, or the place, or the

waye, or any other circumstance, cõcerning our requestes: but to submit all our desyres to his fatherly prouidence, being cõtent to receaue of him, what, whan, and howe, it shalbe his good pleasure to geue vs: and yet notwithstandinge still continewinge to crye vnto the Lorde with our prayers both day and night after the example of the widow, of whome we rede in the Gospell of Luke, with this sure persuasion, that God in his tyme will eyther geue vnto vs those thinges, whiche we presentlye aske, or els better thinges. Whosoeuer on this maner offereth his prayers vnto God, he may be sure to be welcome vnto the Maiestye of God, & to obtayne hys requestes vnto the saluacion both of his bodye and soule. And thus much haue I spoken concerning the due and worthy preparacion vnto prayer, as I haue heretofore learned of our Preacher and Catechist. Father. I greatly commend thee, my swete and dere Sonne, that thou doest so wel remember the good & godly doctryne which heretofore thou hast learned of thy teachers. Lette me heare nowe according to thy promyse, the declaracion of the Lordes prayer, that in this behalfe also I maye haue a taste of thy diligence. Sonne. The Lordes prayer beginneth on this maner: Our father, which art in heauen, halowed be thy name. Father. This is the fyrst petition contayned in the Lordes prayer? Sonne. Yea verely. Father. Howe many petitiõs are there in the Lords prayer? Sonne. They comõly nõber seuẽ. Father. Why is it called ỳ lords prayer? Sonne. Because the Lorde Christ him selfe made it, and taught it his disciples, & willed thẽ so to praye. Father. Where teacheth the holy scripture that? Sonne. In the Gospell of Luke we rede, that one of the disciples came vnto Christ, and sayd vnto him: Lord, teache vs to pray, euen as Iohn taught his disciples. And Christ sayde vnto them: When ye praye say: Our father, which art in heauen, halowed be thy name. &c. Father. Is this prayer of all other most excellẽt? Sonne. Yea forsoth: both because of the maker of it, as I sayd before, which is the Lorde Iesus: and also because in fe we wordes it contayneth abundantlye, whatsoeuer is necessarye to be desyred eyther for the glory of God or for the safegard of the bodye and soule of man. For the thre fyrst petitions concerne the glorye of God and the auauncement of his kingdom. The other foure petitions, whiche folowe in order entreate of our necessities, and pertayne vnto our commodite and profyte, whether we respect the body or the Soule, or both. Father. Why doest thou directe thy prayer vnto God, and not rather vnto men, or vnto the blessed Spirites in heauen? Sonne. Vayne is the saluaciõ that is loked for from man. To saue is the office of God alone, from whom cometh downe euery good and perfect gifte: therfore vnto God alone are our prayers to be directed, according to this commaundement: Call on me, sayth God, in the day of trouble, and I will deliuer thee. To inuocate & call vpon the saintes in heauen, as it is not commaunded in the woorde of God, so lykewyse is it iniurious to the maiestye of God, seing we geue that honor to creatures, whiche is due to God alone: neyther haue we anye promyse myſe in the holye ſcripture, that we ſhall be heard and enioy our petcions, if we praye vnto Sainctes departed. To pray vnto God, and to aſke all good thinges of him in the name of our alone Mediatoure Chriſt Jeſu, we are not only commaunded, but alſo promyſed, that we ſhall be heard. Therfore to leaue that, which is certein: & to embrace that which is vncertein, is mere foly, as I may ſpeake nothing more ſharpely. Father. But what, if we doe both? Sonne. What meane you? Father. Pray both vnto God and vnto the ſainctes in heauen. Sonne. Then is your fayth deuided: and therefore no true and perfect fayth. Then alſo do you ſteale away that honour and glorye from God and geue it vnto creatures, whiche alone is due vnto God. For there can be no greater glorye and honour geuen to God, then in our aduerſitie and trouble to flee vnto his holye name as vnto a ſtronge bulwarke: to call vpon it: & to aſke all good thinges of the Lorde our God, which is a gelous God & ſpeaketh by the Prophet on this maner: I am the Lorde, this is my name: my glory will I geue to none other. And his ſeruaunt Moſes ſayeth: Thou ſhalt honour the Lord thy God, & hym alone ſhalt thou ſerue. The ſainctes them ſelues alſo cry and ſay: Not to vs, O Lord, not to vs, but to thy name geue the glory for thy mercy and truthes ſake. Againſt all ſuch halfe worſhippers of God, the Prophet Elias thondereth on this maner: How long wil ye halte on both knees? If the Lorde be God, folowe him: if Baal be he, folowe him. And God him ſelfe ſayeth to ſuche halting Hipocrites and double diſſemblers: I know thy workes, that thou arte neyther colde nor hote: I wolde thou were colde or hote. But becauſe thou art betwene both and neyther colde nor hote, I will ſpewe thee out of my mouthe. As God alone geueth all good thinges: ſo is he alone to be called vpon in al our aduerſities and troubles. Father. What is to be thought of the, which, when they pray vnto the Saynctes in heauen, vſe to ſaye this prayer of the Lord: Our father which art in heauen: &c. and vſe to ſay it oftentymes in the honour of ſuche Saynctes as they moſte fauſye? Sonne. Their blyndnes is much to be lamented: and it is to be wiſhed that ſuche people were better taught. Is it a mete thinge to call anye ſaincte in heauen, Father: to deſyre that his name may be ſanctifyed: and that he will forgeue vs our ſynnes. &c. They, which thus pray, do rather diſhonour than honour the heauenlye Spirites: and in dede ſo praying, they do nothing els the blaſpheme God, & prouoke God vnto anger: ſo that by this meanes where they ſeme to ſeke ſaluacion, they fall into the daunger of euerlaſting damnacion. Father: Thou holdeſt then, that this prayer ought to be ſayde vnto God alone. Sonne. Yea verelye if we entend to pray it with frute. Father. Let vs then fall in hande with this prayer of the Lorde: and boult out euery parcel therof. Sonne. Content. Father. In the beginninge of this prayer thou calleſt God, Father. Sonne. So is it. Father. Why calleſt thou God, thy Father? Sonne. I haue learned ſo to do, out of the woorde of God. Father. Let me heare ſome teſtimonies of the holye ſcripture concerninge this

this matter. Sonne. Moses sayeth to euery saythfull man: Is not the Lord thy father, and thyne owner? Hath he not made thee and ordayned the? Father. But why doest thou rather saye, Our father, then my father? Sonne. To declare, that God is the commune father of all the saythfull, and not of one only. Father. How prouest that by the worde of God? Sonne. The Prophet Esay sayth: Thou (O God) arte our father. For Abrahã knoweth vs not, neyther is Israel acquainted with vs. But thou Lorde arte our father, and redemer: & thy name is euerlastinge. Agayne, thou, O Lorde, art our father: we are thy claye, and thou art our potter, and we al are the worke of thy handes. The Prophet Malache sayth: Haue we not all one father? Hath not God made vs? Why doeth euerye one of vs then despyse his owne brother? God him selfe sayth by the same Prophet: Shuld not the sonne honour his father, and a seruaunt feare his Maister? If I be now a father, where is my honour? If I be a Lorde, where is my feare? In another place he also sayeth: I will be a father vnto you, and ye shalbe my sonnes & daughters. Our Sauiour Christ sayeth: Call no man your father on the earth: for one is your Father, whiche is in heauen. S. Paule also sayth: As many as are ledde by the spirite of God, they are the sonnes of God. For ye haue not receaued the spirite of bondage to feare anye more, but ye haue receaued the Spirite of adoption, whereby we crye Abba, dere father. The same spirite certifyeth oure spirite, that we are the sonnes of god. If we be sonnes, thē are we also heyers: the heiers, (I meane of God) and felowe heyers with Christ. Agayne, Because ye are sonnes, God hath sent the spirite of his sonne into oure hartes, cryeng Abba, dere father. Wherefore nowe thou art not a seruaunt, but a sonne. If thou be a sonne, thou art also an heyer of God thorow Christ. S. John also sayth: Beholde, what exceding great loue the father hath shewed vnto vs, that we shuld be called (and be in dede) the sonnes of God. Father. Howe cometh it to passe, that God is our father, seyng that we are flesh and bloud, corrupcion and duste? Sonne. God is our father two maner of wayes. First in that he hath created and made vs, as we tofore heard: secondly, in that he hath begoten vs a newe, not of mortall, but of immortall sede, in that he hath geuen vs his spirite, and we beleue in his sonne Christ Jesu, as S. John sayth: As manye as receaued him (Christe) to them gaue he power to be the sonnes of God: euen thē, that beleued in his name, which were borne not of the bloude, nor of the will of the flesh, nor yet of the will of man, but of God. S. Paule also sayeth: Ye are all the children of God, because ye beleue in Christ Jesu. Agayne. As manye as are ledde by the Spirite of God, they are the sonnes, of God. Father. Then are not we the sonnes of God by nature. Sonne. No verelye, but by adoption. One only is the natural Sonne of God, euen Christ Jesus the Lord: the saythfull are the sonnes of God only by adopcion and grace, as we tofore abundantly heard in the declaracion of the second article of the Christen beliefe. fyte haste thou in this, that God is thy Father? Sonne. What profyte haue I not, whether I respect the bodye or the soule? In that God is my father, I am wel assured, that I shall wat no good thing necessary both for the bodye & for the soule. For as a good Father hath a speciall care to prouyde and aforesee, that his sonne lacke no good thing that is necessarye for him: so lyke wyse my heauenly father, whiche by adoption and grace hath chosen me to be his sonne, will suffer me to lacke no good thinge, but abundantly minister & geue vnto me, whatsoeuer is nedefull eyther for the body or for the soule, as God sayde vnto Abraham: Feare not: I am thy defence and mighty shielde: and thy reward shalbe exceding great. By the Psalmographe he also sayth: I am the Lord thy God, &c. open thy mouth wyde, and I shal fill it. And if at anye tyme I seme to lacke, in that God is my father, I maye be bolde to come vnto him, and to craue of him whatsoeuer thing I haue nede of, with this perfecte persuasion and assured hope, that he wyll graunt me my petitions, no les, yea muche more (for he is almightye, and an horne of plentye) then any naturall father will labour to satisfy ỳ desyres of his sonne, as our sauiour Christ saith: Is there any mã among you, which, if his sonne aske bread, will offer him a stone? Or if he aske fishe, will he profer him a serpent? If ye then (when ye are euil) can geue your children good giftes: how much more shall your father, which is in heauen, geue you good things, if ye aske of him? Therfore in ỳ I am taught by him, which is the selfe trueth, to call God, father, I may be bolde to come vnto him, to lament my miseries vnto him, to craue at his hande helpe, succour, defence, and whatsoeuer besydes I haue neede of, with this faythe, that I shall not be denyed of my requestes, forasmuch as he tendereth me no les, yea muche more, then a most louing father pitieth his most dere childe. Father. What learnest thou of this, that thou sayest not, my father, but our father? Sonne. In that I call God our Father: I am put in remembraunce, that God is the father of vs all: I meane the faythfull, and that we be his sonnes, and therfore brethren also. Now forasmuch as we al haue one father, and be all brethren and felowe heyers of one and the same kingedom, I am here taught to loue my brethren, and to doo them good vnto the vttermost of my power, to seeke no les their commoditie and profyte, then myne owne, as S. Paule sayth: Let no man seke his owne commoditie, but the profyte of other. Agayne. Charitye or loue seketh not her owne. He that hath not this loue toward his Christen brethren, he is not the sonne of God, neyther is God his father. In this thing, sayth Christ, shall all men know, that ye are my disciples, if ye loue one another. Father. Thou doest not only call God our father, but thou sayest moreouer that he is in heauen. Sonne. Yea verely. Father. Howe prouest thou that God is in heauen? Sonne. God him selfe sayeth by the Prophete: Heauen is my seate. The Psalmographe also sayeth: The Lorde hath prepared his seate in heauen. Agayne, our God is in heauen. Item, vnto thee lifte I vp myne eyes, which dwellest in the heauens.

uens. Lykewyse sayth our Sauiour Christ: Call no man father on the earth: for one is your father, which is in heauē. Father. How cāst thou truely & properly saye that God is in heauen, when he is in all places at ones, and filleth heauen and earth with his presence, forasmuche as he is infinite & incomprehensible: as the Psalmograph sayeth: Whether shall I goe from thy spirite? or whether shall I go from thy presence? If I clime vp into heauen, thou art there: if I go downe to hel, thou art there also. If I take the wings of the morning, and remayne in the vttermost partes of the sea: euen there also shal thy hande leade me: and thy ryght hande shall holde me. If I saye, peraduenture the darkenes shall couer me: then shall my nighte be turned to daye. Yea the darkenes is no darkenes with thee, but the night is as clere as the day: ꝓ darkenes & the light to thee are both a lyke. Salomō also in his prayer sayd vnto God: Behold the heauens & heauēs of all heauēs are not able to contayne thee. And God him selfe sayth by the Prophet: I fyll both heauen and earth. Sonne, I knowe & confesse, that the Maiestie of God is infinite, vnmesurable, incomprehensible, filleth heauen and earth, occupyeth al places at ones, and cā not be compassed within certayne limites (as all creatures are) forasmuch as he is the maker of all thinges, and not a thing made: notwithstanding the holy scripture most comonly termeth him to be and to dwel in heauen, yea and that for dyuers causes. Fyrst, to set forth vnto vs his Maiestye, hyghnes, might & power: while we cōsider, that his dwelling is not in this world, which is a vale of myseries and a synche of all euils, but in the most hyghe and glorious palace of heauen, where all ioye and euerlasting felicity is, where all goodnes and vertue do abounde, where nothinge is, that is not most delectable, most swete, most pleasaunt: and that he hath there placed him selfe not only that it should be his mansion, but ours also, forasmuch as he is our father, and we are his children: so that whatsoeuer glorye ioye and felicitie our father hath & enioyeth, the very same shall we his children after this our banishement lykewyse haue and enioye, as our enheritaunce freely geuen vs of our most louing, gentle and bounteous father. Secondly, to declare, that our heauenly father being in so hygh a place doth louingly beholde vs and all ours, consyder our necessities, heare our prayers, graunte our requestes, defend vs, saue vs from our enemies, and geue vs all good thinges, as the Psalmograph sayth: The Lorde is hye aboue all Heathen, and his glorye aboue the heauens. Who is lyke vnto the Lorde our God, that hath his dwelling so hye, and yet humbleth him selfe to beholde the thinges that are in heauen and earth? He taketh vp the simple out of the dust, and lifteth the poze out of the myre: that he may set him with the princes, euē with ꝓ princes of his people. He maketh the barren woman to kepe house, & to be a ioyfull mother of children. Thirdly, to teache vs, that as the heauen by vnmeasurable wydenesse of compasse contayneth all places, the earth and the sea: and no place is there, that may be hydde from the large reache of heauen, syth it is at eue-

of euerye instant of tyme, to euerye thinge present: so lyke wyse God is present to eche thing in eche place. He seeth, heareth, vnderstandeth, & perceaueth all thinges: he beinge him selfe a Spirite, and most farre from all earthye and mortall state. This witnesseth God him selfe by the Prophet, saying: Am not I a God nere vnto you? and am not I a God farre off? Whai any man be able to hyde him selfe in such a corner, that I can not espye him? Fourthye, to signifye vnto vs, that if we will haue any thing to do with this our heauēly father, we must haue our myndes free and vtterly estraunged from vicious affectes, sinnefull lustes, and worldely desyres, and fixed only vpon God and vpon heauenly and euerlastinge thinges, as thapostle sayeth: If ye be rysen agayne with Christ, seke those things, which are aboue, where Christ sitteth on the right hande of God. Set your affection on heauenlye thinges, and not on earthy thinges. Fiftlye and finallye, we call God our heauenly father, to discern him from our fathers, whiche be vpon earthe. For our fathers, whiche we haue in earth, are but miserable, poore, needy and mortall men, and of them selues neyther able to saue them selues nor vs. But our father, which we haue in heauen, is omnipotent, almightye, ryche, sufficientlye able of him selfe to helpe vs in all our necessities, immortall & euer lyuing, at all tymes redye in this worlde to geue vs what is needful for bodye & soule, and after our departure from this worlde, to place vs in his heauenly kingedom, there to remayne with him for euer in eternall felicitie and ioye. Father. God make vs all partakers of that heauenly glorye. Nowe that thou hast declared, why we call God our father: and what is mente, whan the scripture saith, He is in heauen: come of, rehearse vnto me the first petition of the Lordes prayer. Sonne. The first petition is this: Halowed be thy name. Father. What desyre we of God in this petition? Sonne. Forasmuch as the name, that is to saye, the Maiesty, glory, honour, fame, wisedom, power, goodnes, mercye, iustice, trueth, knowledge, &c, of God, is diuerse wayes prophanated, polluted and defyled in this worlde by many and sundry sectes, by diuers heresys and wicked opinions, by manifolde superstition and Idolatrye, by the dronish dreames and trifling traditions of men: we most humbly beseche our heauenly father, that he will take awaye out of the earth all these abhominations and filthy vncleannesses, wherewith not only the glorye of his most glorious name amonge men is greatlye obscured and defaced, but the soules of manye are brought also into greate errours, & in fine, vnto euerlasting damnacion. And as we desyre of our heauenlye father in this first petition, that all thinges maye be taken away, wherewith eyther the glory of his holy name is diminished, or the saluacion of mēs soules is hindered: so likewyse we praye, ỳ he alone may be knowen, not only amōg the Christiās, but also amōg al the nacions of the earth, to be the only true God, the alone Sauiour of the worlde,

What we desyre in the first petition

the mightye defender of his people, the plentiful rewarder of all them that trust in him, the mercifull confortour of the faythful penitent sinners, the ioyfull receauer of suche as turne vnto him, and the stronge auenger and punisher of all those that runne from hym a whorehuntinge after straunge goddes and the wicked imaginacions and inuencions of theyr owne hartes: agayne, that all nations of the worlde without exception may feare, reuerence, honour, worshipe, glorifye, call vpon, and prayse the glorious name of our heauenly father, and in all thinges seke the auauncement and honour therof, preferring the glorye of it before all creatures eyther in heauen or in earth, yea more thē our owne goodes and life, as it is wryten. For thy sake, that is to saye, for the glorye and halowing of thy name, we are killed all daye longe, and are counted as shepe appointed to be slayne. Daniel cryeth out on this maner and sayeth: O Lorde, to vs, to oure Kinges and Princes, to our forefathers, yea euē to vs all that haue offended thee, belongeth nothing but open shame. But vnto thee O Lorde our God pertayneth righteousnes, mercy and forgeuenes. All the Saynctes of God crye out on this wyse: Not to vs, O Lorde, not to vs, but to thy name geue the glory for thy mercy & truthes sake. Father. We thincke the wordes of this fyrst petition doo so sounde, as though the name of God might yet be made more holy and more glorious, then it is now, as it is wryten, He that is righteous, let him be more righteous: & he that is holy, let him be more holye. Sonne. God forbid, that anye man should so thincke, that the name of God may be made more holy, glorious, and honourable then it is all redy, whiche is in all pointes in it selfe and of it selfe so holye, that no holynes can be put vnto it: so glorious, that no glory can be added: so honorable, that more honorable it can not be made, being of it selfe full of all holynes, glory and honour: neither do we pray, that the name of our heauenly father may be sanctifyed & halowed vnto this ende, that in it selfe it maye be made more holy whiche is all redy most holye, but that it maye be halowed of all men in this world, and that the holynes of his name may be knowen among all nacions, that they with one consent may beleue and repose their whole affiaunce, trust and confidence in it, call vppon it and flye vnto it as vnto a stronge and mightye bulwarke in theyr aduersitye, prayse and magnifye it in their prosperitye, and at all tymes haue it in great honour and reuerence, so that in all theyr thoughtes, wordes & dedes the glory of Gods most glorious name may be setforth by them, as thapostle sayeth: whatsoeuer ye do, do all to the glorye and prayse of God. Agayn, whatsoeuer ye do in worde or dede, do all in the name of the Lorde Iesu, geuing thankes to God the father by him.

Moreouer we do not only pray, that the name of God may be sanctified, halowed, called vpō, praysed, magnified & perfectly knowē amōg all nationes, yea amōg the verye Heathē, which as yet haue no perfect & true knowledge of God & of his holy name, but also ỳ his name may be halowed & magnified of vs, which are his people, which haue dedicated ourselues to his holy religiō, which are baptised in ỳ name of his Sōne Christ, & of him are called Christians, which profesle godlynes, & which are dead vnto ỳ worlde, & lyue vnto Christ, lest thorow our corrupt maners wicked life & vngodly cōuersatiō, ỳ name of ỳ Lord God be euel spokē of, slaūdered, railed vpō & blasphemed amōg the enemies of ỳ truth: & his holy law cōdēned for heresy, as God himselfe cōplaineth by ỳ Prophet. And S. Paule saith: The name of God is euill spoken of amōg the gentils thorow you. For as there cā be no greater dishonour done vnto God in this worlde, nor no greater ignominye vnto his holy name, then when such as profesle godlines, practyse vngodlynes vnto the greate slaunder of our profession & vnto the vtter condemnacion of ourselues: so lykewyse can there be no greater honour and glorye shewed vnto the Lorde our God & vnto his blessed name, then when we, whiche profesle godlynes in worde, practyse the same in dede, that we be not of the nomber of them, whyche profesle, that they know God, but with theyr dedes denye him, seyng they are abhominable and disobedient and vnapt vnto euery good worke: nor lyke vnto the fyue foolishe virgins, which had lampes and no oyle, and therfore were shut out of the bridgroms chāber, and whē they knocked, and would haue bene let in, aunswere was made: I knowe you not. Departe from me ye workers of iniquitye: nor lyke to that sōne, which promysed his father, that he woulde worke in his vineyarde, & yet dyd not: nor yet lyke vntō that figge tree, which had leaues but no fruite, and therfore was accursed of Christ, so that it wythered away, and neuer brought forth fruite after. In consideracion wherof our sauiour Christ exhorteth vs vnto good workes, sayinge: Let your light so shyne before menne, that they may see your good workes and glorifye your father, which is in heauen. S. Peter also sayth: Derely beloued I beseche you as straungers and pilgrims, abstayne from fleshlye lustes which fight agaynst the soule, and haue your conuersacion honest, that where as they backbyte you as euill doers, they iudgeing you of your good workes may glorifye God in the daye of visitacion. Agayne, this is the wil of God, that with wel dooing ye may stop the mouthes of foolishe and ignorant men: as free, and not as hauing the libertye for a cloke of maliciousnes, but euen as the seruaunts of god. *Esa.liii. Tit.ii, phil.i. phil.ii

Likewyse S Paule in diuers places of his epistles exhorteth vs, that by well doyng we should garnyshe the doctrine of God our Sauiour, walke worthy of the Gospell of Christ, & so lyue, that we may be such, as no man can complayne on, and vnfayned sonnes of God without rebuke in the middes of a croked and peruerse nation, among whom we ought so to shine as the lightes of the world, holding fast the word of lyfe. Father. In this fyrst petition therfore we aske of our heauenly father, that his name (that is to say) his Maiesty, glory, honour, fame, wisdom, power, goodnes, mercy, iustice, trueth, knowledge, &c. might be knowen, reuerenced, honoured & magnifyed thorow out the world: and that all thinges, which in any part may seme to hinder the glorye of Gods moste glorious name, or let the saluacion of mens soules, although there be neuer so great shyne and outward apparaunce of holynesse, may vtterly be extirped & rooted out of the earth, that the lord our God may be knowen amonge all the nacions of the worlde, to be the alone true and euerlasting God, the alone Sauiour of them that trust in him, and the plentifull fountayne of all goodnes, in aduersitie to be called on, in prosperite to be thanked & praysed, and at all times to be most humbly reuerenced, worshipped & honoured: agayne, that suche as professe his holy name, maye so frame theyr lyues accordinge to his blessed worde, that God may be glorifyed, euen amonge the berye Heathen, thorow their godlye conuersacion and honest lyfe: & his most glorious name praysed amonge all the nacions of the worlde.

The seconde petition, Of Satan, What we desire in the second petition

i. Pet. v. Ioan. xiiii. ii. cor. iiii Ephe. vi Luc. xi. Apo. xii Gen. iij

Sonne. So is it. Father. Let me now heare the second petition. Sonne. This is it, Thy kingedom come. Father. What do we require of God in this second petition? Sonne. It is not vnknowen, howe great, how mightye, and of what puissaunce the kingedom of Satan is, whiche, as S. Peter sayeth, goeth about lyke a roring lyon seeking whom he maye deuoure, whiche Sathan in the holye scriptures is termed the Prince and God of this worlde, the ruler of darkenes, the strong armed man, and the accuser of the brethren, and such one in dede, as feared not euen in the state of theyr innocencye and sinneles lyfe to assaulte our graue parentes Adam and Heua, and with his sugred eloquence to allure them from the obedience of Gods most blessed word vnto the wicked transgression of his holye commaundement and perfect will: not only that, but he also feared not (suche is his impudencye and vnshamefastnes) to attempt the Lorde Iesus that innocent labe of God, in whom was neuer sinne, & in whose mouth no gyle at anye tyme was founde, that he shoulde despayre of his heauenlye fathers good will to warde him, and obey to his suttle persuasions and wicked temptacions. There is no raueninge Wolfe, that so earnestly seeketh gredelye to deuoure his praye, as this enemye of mankynde that olde serpent hunteth and studyeth euery moment of an houre, howe he maye destroye bringe to euerlasting damnacion mortall menne, that they maye fall from the fauour of God, and haue theyr portion with him in that lake that burneth with fyre and brymstone. As this God of the worlde, I meane Satan, is a great king and mighty Prince, & stronglye ruleth in the childrē of vnbeliefe and in the vessels of wrath: so is his kingdom ample and large: whiche kingedom this Prince of darkenes ceaseth not daylye more and more to amplifye, to enlarge, & to make very populous, that he might be the chefe ruler of this worlde, and his kingdome thalone monarchye on the earth. Esa.lxvi Apo.xxi

And as Satan and his kingedome is mightye, large and great, so lykewyse is the worlde a mightye prince and ruleth strongly & stoutly in very many: whose kingdom also is most ample and populous, stuffed in euerye parte with infinite nombers of people, compased about with all wickednes. The garde of this prince is so great, that in this earth no potētate, no ruler, no gouernour is able to cōpare withit. For frō the hyest to the lowest, frō the magistrate to the subiecte, from the priest to Prophet, frō the bishop to ỳ Deacon, al in a maner are worldlinges, and vnder the kingdom of this mighty Prince the worlde. The worlde at this present hath so blynded the eyes of all men, that without any consideracion they folow the worlde and the vanities thereof being snarled with them, euen as the fishe is with the lyne and hooke. They from the least to the greatest are miserable Ammonistes and wretched monyslaues, seruinge theyr goodes, and not theyr goodes, them, which is the greatest slauerye & the most detestable bōdage, that can be found on the earth. And in seruinge suche a vyle Idoll, they are vtterly fallen away from the faythfull seruyce, whiche they owe vnto the one & alone true God, whom aboue al thinges they ought to feare, reuerence, serue, honoure, worshyp, prayse, magnifye & obey, yea & that with al theyr harte, with al theyr soule, with al their mynde, & with al the powers both of theyr soule and body, that the Lord our God may reigne kinge, ruler and gouernour alone, and that his kingdom may be enlarged from the ryssinge of the Sunne vnto the goinge downe of the same: againe, that his holye name may be knowen and praysed amonge all the nacions of the worlde. Ephe.ij. of the worlde Ier.liii phili.ij psal.cxiii

The worlde so ruleth in ỳ harts almost of all mē, that they vtterly forget them selues to be straungers and pilgrims in this lyfe: neyther do they consider, that they brought nothing into this worlde, neyther shal they cary any thing out of it, so farre is it of, that at any tyme they call to remēbrance these sayings of the holy scripture: ye adulterers & adulteresses, know ye not, that ỳ frēdshyp of the worlde is enemytie with god: wholsoeuer therfore will be a frend of the worlde, is made the enemy of God. Agayn, see that ye loue not the worlde, neither the things ỳ are in the worlde. If any mā loue the worlde, the loue of ỳ father is not in him. For all ỳ is in the worlde (as the lust of the flesh, & the lust of the eyes, & the pryde of lyfe) is not of the father, but of the worlde. And the worlde passeth away, & the lust thereof: but he that fulfilleth the will of God, abideth for euer. Also in another place: we know, that we are of god, & ỳ worlde is altogether set on wickednes. Itē, the time is short: it remaineth, ỳ ther which bie, be as though thei possessed not, & theyr vse Gen.xlvii. psal.xxxix i.Pet.ii i.Tim.vi. Iac.iiij i.Ioan.ij. i.Ioan.v.

this worlde, be as though they vsed it not. Ones againe, Let your conuersacion be without couetousnes, and be content with such thinges as ye haue all ready. For he hath sayde: I will not fayle thee, neyther forsake thee, so that we may boldely say: The Lorde is my helper, and I will not feare what man may do vnto me. Here haue we no continuing Citye, but we seke one to come.

Of the flesh

Agayn, what shall I speake of the flesh? Is her kingdome small & litle? Ruleth she in few, or rather in many? This flesh also seketh and deuyseth all meanes possible to enlarge her kingdom and empire, and studieth with all her wittes howe she may allure and entyse the people of this worlde from the workes of Gods spirite vnto her filthy lustes and fleshely pleasures, as the Apostle sayth: Walke in the spirite, and fulfull not the lustes of the flesh. For the flesh lusteth contrarye to the spirite, and the spirite contrary to the flesh. These are contrary one to the other. They that are carnal, are carnally mynded. But they that are spirituall, are Ghostlye mynded. To be carnally mynded is death: but to be spiritually mynded, is life and peace, because the fleshlye mynde is enemye agaynste God: for it is not obedient to the lawe of God, neyther can be: so ỹ they which are in the flesh, can not please God. The kingedom of this flesh, as it hath bene in all ages, so lykewyse nowe, in these our dayes wherin men are rather louers of pleasure then of God, is very large and ample, and comprehendeth infinite nombers of people, which willingly offer thē selues subiectes, seruauntes and slaues to this vyle strompet the flesh: and the flesh again as a most mighty Empresse ruleth in them, and carieth them as bond slaues whyther she willeth, and enforseth them as miserable captiues to folowe her lust and pleasure in all poyntes: so that the flesh also is a mighty ruler & gouernour of the people of this worlde, and her kingdome is wyde, large and populous. Nowe at the last cometh also Antechryste and his kingedom: which Antechryst with his false beliefe, superstition, Hypocrisy, false worshipping of God, mēs traditions, wicked counsels, deuelishe constitucions, vngodly doctrynes &c. stoutly & strongly ruleth in the hartes of the childzen of vnbeliefe, deceauinge them thorowe the superstitious vsare of fayned holynesse, and throwinge them into euerlastinge damnacion forasmuch as they refuse & cast awaye, despyse and condemne the true faythe, Religion and doctrine of our Sauiour Christ, and embrace, mayntayne, & defende the tryfling tradicions of this most abhominable Antechryst, that aduersarye of God and of all godlynes. The kingedome also of this Antechryst is very ample, large, mighty and stronge, and contayneth in it infinite multitudes of people, euen so many as are fallen awaye from the fayth and doctryne of Christ, and are not ledde with the Spirite of God. For they only are the sonnes and childzen of God, whiche are ledde with the Spirite of God.

Of Antechryst.

plante theyr kyngdoms and to rule in the hartes of menne, that God and his holye spirite thorowe vnbeliefe and wickednes of lyfe chased out of theyr myndes, they only may reygne and possesse them as theire slaues, impelling and mouing them vnto what leudnes they lust. And this theyr labour they do not only employe about the wicked (whom they haue all redy in theyr nettes) but also, yea muche more, about vs, which are the children of light, which professe godlynes & in our baptisme haue vtterly forsaken and geuen ouer the Deuill, the world and the flesshe with all theyr vayne pompes beastly pleasures and wicked workes: and haue wholly renounced and cast away Antechrist wyth all his Antechristian traditions, and dedicated oure selues to God, to Gods doctrine & to his holy religion. Who seeth not now then, howe necessary this second petition is, wherein we pray, that the kingedom of our heauenly father may come & rule in vs? Father. What meanest thou? For I doo not perfectly vnderstande thee. Sonne. Forasmuch as we are enuironed, besieged, compassed and sette round about with so many aduersaries, as we haue tofore hearde, which studiously and diligently labour to possesse our hartes, to rule in vs, & to make vs their subiectes, seruauntes, bõdmenne, captyues and slaues in this present worlde, and after this lyfe to make vs fyre brondes of hell and enheritours of euerlasting damnacion: our Lorde and Maister Christ Iesus, thalone teacher of trueth and thalone wisedome also of the father tendering our healthy and saluacion of body & soule both in this worlde and in the worlde to come, knowing also howe vnable we be of our selues to resist and withstande so great multitudes of aduersaries (whiche beyng strong and valeaunt) strongly and valeauntly seke our destruction: cõmaundeth vs to flee vnto our heauenly father with faithfull and earnest prayer, and to craue of him succour and ayde agaynst so fearse and cruell enemies, least we fal into theyr handes, & so become theyr prayes, and at the last be swalowed vp of hell mouth, and made heyers of euerlastinge damnacion.

And in this behalfe we fyrst of all desyre of our heauenly father, that the kingedom of the deuil that sworne enemy of mankynde, that olde serpent, that wylye fore, that rauenynge wolfe, whiche at all houres seeketh our destruction, maye vtterly be subdued, destroyed & brought to nought, with all his wycked temptacions & poysonfull persuasions, that we neuer geue place vnto them, nor yet be ouercome of them, but with strong fayth manfully resist them, that Satan maye not rule in vs, nor we become his kingedome. We also desyre of our heauenlye father, that the kingdom of the wicked worlde with all his vayne pleasures lustes, põpes and vanities may be dispersed and brought vnto confusion, that we, whiche profesle godlynes, be by no meanes snared or seduced by them, but that we consydering howe vayne, transitory, flytting and sone passing away they be, may embrace those pleasures, which are immortall, those goodes, which are constant, those ryches, which neuer fayle, and by this meanes byd adue both to the worlde & to his

we are dead to the world, and our lyfe is hydde with Christ in God.
Agayne, we desyre of our heauenly father, that the kingdom of the wicked flesh with all her carnall concupiscences & filthy lustes, which fight against the soule, may be so extyrped & plucked vp by the rootes, that we beinge made free from all the vncleannesses thereof, maye no of no force and strength, redy at all times to be cast down (euen of the

Agayne, forasmuch as we of our selues, of our owne nature and naturall strengthes, although otherwyse neuer so prudent and worldly wyse, are not able to perceaue and vnderstande those thinges whiche belong vnto the spirite of God and vnto our saluacion, but are miserable, poore and blynde, and without anye true knowledge of God: we desyre our heauenly father, that all our ignorannce and blindnes wyped away, and all the darke dreames and dreaming darkenes of Antechrist vtterly dispelled, remoued and put a syde, the glorious lyght of Christes Gospell, which is the mighty power of God to saue so many as beleue, which is the foode of the soule, which is the vndefiled word of the Lord, which turneth soules, which is pure and geueth wisdome vnto the simple, whiche reioyseth the hartes, which geueth light vnto the eyes, whiche is an armour or weapon, not carnall, but mightye in God to cast downe strong holdes and to ouerthrowe councels & euerye hye thinge that exalteth it selfe agaynste the knowledge of God, & bringeth into captiuite al imagination to the obedience of Christ, whiche is the sworde of the spirite, &c. may shyne amonge vs, lighten our darke hartes, illumine our sences, polyshe our wittes, fyue our vnderstanding, and bryng vs vnto the true knowledge, fayth and doctrine of him (I meane God the Father) whiche hath delyuered vs from the power of darkenes, and hath translated vs into the kingedome of his dere Sonne, by whom we haue redemption thorow his bloude, euen the forgeues of sinnes. For where this Gospel of Christ is truely preached, and thorowe the worckinge of the holye Ghoste receaued into the hartes of the hearers, there is fayth, ioye, peace, quietnes of conscience, new godly affectes, spirituall motions, heauenly desyres, correction of maners, newnes of lyfe, continual study of innocency, with all the fruites of the holy ghost, as S. Paule sayth: If anye man be in Christ, he is a newe creature. Agayne, they that appertayne vnto Christe, haue crucifyed the flesche with the affectes and lustes thereof. Contrarywyse, where the Gospell of Christ is not preached nor receaued, there remayneth vnbeliefe, griefe of mynde, trouble of harte, disquietnes of conscience, olde corrupt affectes, carnall motions, worldlye desyres, continuaunce in sinne, wickednes of life, disposicion vnto all euill, with all the workes of the flesh (as Salomon sayeth) When the preachinge of Gods woorde fayleth, the people pearisshe, Agayne, Where the knowledge of Gods worde is not, there is no goodnes for the soule. Item, vayne are all they, which haue no knowledge of god. Therfore in this peticion also we aske of our heauenly father, that his holy Gospell maye raygne among vs, all mans doctrines vtterlye set a parte, and that it may bring forth such fruites in vs, that we may be the kingdome of God, his holye spirite continually ruling and gouer- Math.xi. i.cor.ii Rom.i. Math.iiij psalm.xix ij.Cor.vi Ephe.vi Col.i. ii.cor.v. Galat.v. prou.xxix prouer.xix Sapi.xiij. Ioan.xvi.

Moreouer forasmuche as there be yet dyuerse nacions and kingedoms, whiche knowe not the true and hym the one and alone God, but walke after the vanities of their owne mynde or els after the tryfling traditions of men, we beseche our heauenlye father, that he wyll haue mercy on all people, & shew vnto them also the light of his countenaunce, that all nacions on the earth maye knowe his wayes & his sauing health thorow out the worlde, that as we altogether haue one creatoure and maker, so lyke wyse we maye haue one fayth, one hope, one baptisme, one doctryne, and one lyfe euerlastinge, there worldes without ende to magnifye and prayse our heauenly father. For by this meanes shal it come to passe, that the kingdō of Satan, of the world, of the flesshe, of sinne and of Antechrist shall greatly be diminished and soone brought to nought, and the glorious kingdō of God shall moste tryumphantly prosper, growe, encrease, ware stronge, and florishe, so that with one voice, all nations of ỳ earth shall praise ỳ blessed name of the Lord our God, and be made his kingdome and possession, knowing him and his sauing health euen from the least to the greatest, insomuche that it shall not be needfull one to say vnto another. Finally, in this our petition we doo not only ask and desire of our heauenly Father, that the kingdome of Satan, of the world, of the flesshe, and of antichriste, may be destroyd and brought to nought, so that from henceforth we neither serue them: neither they rule in vs. Again, ỳ God thorow his holy ghost & blessed word should only haue dominion and power ouer vs, yea and rule in our hartes, so that all sinne & wickednes set aparte we shall be plentifull of all good workes, and abunde in all godlynes and honestie: Item, that the kingedom of our heauenly father may be so enlarged, that al nacions of the world may knowe him to be thalone true God, and embrace his blessed Gospell, and so beleuing, become with vs the people and seruaunts of God: but also that after this lyfe we may come to that kingdom, where all true ioy and immortall felititie is, whiche is the end of our faith, & the consūmacion and perfect fulfilling of our hope: I meane the glorious palace of that most hye God, where we shal see the blessed trinitie, not in a darke speche or in a glasse, or with the eyes of our faythe, as we doe nowe, but we shall se him face to face, & knowe him, as we are knowē, according to this saying of S. Iohn: Derely beloued, now are we the sonnes of God, and yet it doeth not appere, what we shalbe. But we knowe, that when it shall appeere, we shallbeelyke hym: for we shall see hym, as he is. And euery one that hath thys hope in hym, puryfyeth him selfe, euen as he is also pure. Hereto belongeth the sayinge of S. Paul: Nowe we see in a glasse, euen in a darke spekinge: but then shall we se face to face. Nowe I knowe vnperfectly, but then shall I know, euen as I am knowen. Father. our selues in this worlde, that after this mortall and transytorye lyfe, we may come vnto his heauenly kingdom and enioy the immortall & euerlastinge lyfe. Sonne. Amen. Father. Rehearse the thyrde peticion contayned in the Lordes prayer. Sonne. Thy will be done in earth, euen as it is in heauen. Father. What is that? Sonne. Forasmuchas our will is alwaye euill, or at the least prone vnto euill, euen from our cradles hyworde, fleshely and disobedient to the moste holye and perfect will of God, seking her owne and not that, whiche is christes, coueting euermore worldly and not godlye thinges, wholly bente vnto thinges whiche lede not vnto saluacion but vnto damnacion: in this third peticion we desyre our heauenlye father, that he will mortifye this oure carnall, worldly & deuilysh will, and make it obedient and conformable to his moste godlye and blessed will, that we in no thinge resist his holy pleasure, but shew our selues redy to folow and to accomplish vnto the vttermost of our power without any resistaunce that, which in the holy scripture we haue learned vnfaynedly to be his good and fatherly will. Father. Are not we able of our selues without crauinge this at the hande of God, to frame our will to the will of God, and to perfourme whatsoeuer the good pleasure of God is? Sonne. Our will of it selfe is a captiue, bond and thrall will, subiect vnto sinne, estraunged from all goodnes, and altogether vnapte eyther to consent vnto the wil of God or to perfourme the same, so litle, or rather none are the strengthes of our will, whose liberty or fredō was not only greuously wounded, but in a maner wholly lost and perysshed in the fall of Adā, in somuch that the best and most perfectest among the childzen of men may right well saye with S. Paule: The lawe, that is to saye, the wil of God, is spirituall, but I am carnall, solde vnder sinne. Agayne, the fleshely mynde is enemy agaynst God, for it is not obediēt to the law of God, neither can it be: so that they, whiche are in the fleshe, can not please God. For that whiche is borne of fleshe, is fleshe: and a naturall man perceaueth not the thinges, that belōg to the spirite of God. For they are but folishenes vnto him & neyther can he perceaue them, because they are spiritually examined. We be not able of our selues to thinke any (good) thinge, as of our selues: but if we be able vnto anye (good) thing, the same cometh of God. For euery good gifte and euery perfect gifte is from aboue, & cometh downe from the father of lights. Without me, sayth Christ, ye can do nothing. It is God that worketh in vs both the will and the dede, euen of good wil. Who seeth not now therefore what greate neede we haue to crye vnto God, that it maye please him to refourme our will, which is altogether nought & geuen to wickednes, and to make it obedient and conformable to his will, which is most holy, iuste and perfect? This considered the Lorde Iesu, which is the wisdom of his father, when he taught vs in this most perfect prayer to say: Thy will be done in earth, euen as it is in heauen. This thing also was not vnknowen to the Psalmographe, when he prayed on this maner: Teache me (O Lorde) to doo thy will: for thou arte harte from generacion to generacion. Agayn he sayth: Our God is in psal. cxv, heauen: he hath done whatsoeuer pleased him. We pray not therfore, that Gods will may be done here in earth as it is in heauen vnto this ende, as though it had neede of our prayer, that it may haue good successe, whiche in and of it selfe is almightye: but we praye, that Gods good will, which he hath reueled & shewed vnto vs in his holy worde, may effectually be done in vs thorow the working of the holye ghost, and obediently fulfilled by vs both priuatly and openly, both in worde and in dede vnto the glorye of his holy name: which otherwise can neuer be brought to passe of vs nor in vs, so great is our infirmitie, so cor-

ij. Cor. iii rupte is our nature, so malicious and disposed to all euill is our harte, so carnall, wicked & vngodly is our owne will, & so slender, yea rather so none are al the strengthes of our free will, which, as thapostle sayth, of our selues are not able to thinke a good thought. Father. But what meaneth this, when we praye, that the will of God maye be done in earth as it is in heauen? why is mention made here of the fulfillinge of Gods will in heauen? Sonne. Our Sauiour Christ in teachinge vs so to praye, setteth before our eyes a goodlye exemplare or patrone to folowe. Who knoweth not, that the glorious Angels and blessed spi-rites in heauen do most obediently and redelye accomplishe and fulfil the holy will of God, and by no meanes resiste his godlye pleasure? as psal. ciii it is writen, O praise the Lorde ye Aungels of his, ye that excell in elites with pestilence, & he plagued them streyghtwayes, so that there dyed in thre dayes seuenty thousande men. And when the Lorde bad night an hondred foure score & fyue thousand of the Assirians. Raphael the Angel at the Lordes cõmaundement accompanied yong Tobias in all his iourney. Againe Gabriel the Angel at the commaundement of God came frõ heauen vnto the virgine Marie, to declare vnto her the good pleasure of God concerninge his sonnes incarnacion, whiche thorowe the power of the holy ghost should be brought to passe in her. Many other histories haue we in the holy scripture, which do euidẽtly declare, how obediently & diligẽtly the Angels accomplish the wil of God: so that not without a cause they are called of S. Paule ministring spirites, that are sent to minister, for theyr sakes, whiche shalbe heyers of saluacion. After the example of these holye Angels & blessed spirites ought we here in earth with all diligence to endeuour our selues to accomplishe the good pleasure of God. Father. Haue we any examples in the holy scriptures, that men liuing here in this world haue in this behalfe followed the Angels by practyling & executing the wil of God? Sonne. Many are found in the worde of God: but let this one example of our Lord and sauiour Christ suffice for this present: of whõ we rede, ẏ it was his meate & greatest desyre to fulfill ẏ will of his heauẽly father, in so much that to obey his blessed pleasure & determinate counsel, he was content to suffer death, yea euẽ the death of the crosse. He prayed vnto his heauẽly father, that if it were possible ẏ cup of his passion and death might passe away from him yet he added: Not as I will, but as thou wilt O father. In al thinges he gladly obeyed the wil of his father, and perfourmed the same, to geue vs an example, which of Christ are called Christians, that we also shoulde labour to practyse the lyke obedience to the will of God in our lyfe and conuersacion, as S. John sayth, He whiche sayeth, that he dwelleth in Christ, ought to walke, euen as he hath walked. And the Lord Jesus him selfe sayeth: I haue geuen you an example, that euen as I haue done, so ye lykewyse should do. Father. Seing we praye in this thirde peticion, that we maye haue so feruent a desyre to accomplishe the will of God in all thinges here on earth, as the holy Angels and blessed sainctes haue in heauen: come of, tell me, what the will of God is. Sonne. Although we haue partlye touched this matter before, when we entreated of the worthy preparacion vnto prayer: yet forasmuch as your pleasure is to aske me this question: I answere, that the wil of God is, whatsoeuer in his holy worde he commaundeth vs to do. Father. What willeth he vs to doo? What commaundeth he? Sonne. Forasmuche as by nature we are the children of wrath and bonde vnto euerlasting damnation, God tendering our health & saluacion hath cõmaunded vs to repent, and to better our lyfe, that by this meanes we might be receaued into fauoure. Father. Where hath he expressed this his will? Sonne. In diuers places of the holye scripture. By the Prophete he sayth: I haue no pleasure in the deathe of a sinner, but rather that he shoulde turne and lyue. Saincte Paule also sayeth: God will all menne to be saued and to come vnto the knoweledge of the trueth. Sayncte John the Baptiste, Christe, and his Apostles call vs all vnto repentaunce

Saint Paule, God offereth him selfe vnto you as vnto sonnes. What sonne is he, whō the father chasteneth not? If ye be not vnder correction (wherof all are partakers) then ye are bastardes & not sonnes, &c. No maner chastysinge for the present tyme semeth to be ioyous, but greuous: neuertheles afterward it bringeth the quiet fruite of righteousnes vnto thē, which are exercised therby. Blessed is the man, sayth S. Iames, that endureth tentacion: for when he is tryed, he shall receaue the crowne of lyfe, which the Lord hath promysed to them that loue him. Hereto belōgeth the saying of the Psalmograph: It is highly for my profyt, that thou hast chastened me, that I may learne thyne ordinaūces. For those, which God knew afore, he also ordayned afore that they shuld be lyke fashioned vnto the shape of his sonne. The disciple is not aboue his mayster, nor the seruaunt aboue his Lord. Our elder brother Christ first suffered, & afterward entred into glorye. By many tribulacions must we enter into the kingdom of God. All that will lyue godlye in Christ Jesu, shall suffer persecution. If we be dead with Christ, we shall also liue with Christ: if we suffer with Christ, we shall also raigne with Christ. And our sauiour Christ him selfe sayth: Whosoeuer wil folow me, let him forsake him self, & take vp his crosse & folowe me. For whosoeuer will saue his lyfe, shall lose it. But whosoeuer shall loose his lyfe for my sake & the Gospels, the same shall saue it. Forasmuch therfore as it is Gods good pleasure to kepe his childrē vnder the crosse, whō he hath appointed to be enheritours of his euerlastinge glorye, it shal become as manye as wishe to be glorifyed with Christ, to beare also the crosse with Christe, & to shewe thē selues in all kinde of aduersitie & trouble cōformable to the wil of God, & both obediently, paciētly, gladly & thankefully to beare, whatsoeuer God laieth vpon theyr shulders, euen vnto the very death. Father. Haue we anye exāples in the holy scripture, which declare, that certein in times past haue bene so obedient to the wil of God in this behalfe, that they haue paciētly & without any murmuring or grutching (against God) borne and suffered, whatsoeuer kynde of aduersitie hath bene cast vpon thē? Sonne. Thou heardest before the example of the Lord Jesu. But besides this we haue diuerse other. To whom is it vnknowen, with howe manye great and greuous kyndes of aduersitie that Mirrour of perfect pacience (I meane) Job was afflicted? Notwithstanding howe conformable he shewed him selfe to the will of God, how pacientlye he suffered ỳ heauy crosse, these his wordes do most manifestly declare. Naked came I out of my mothers wōbe, & naked shal I turne thither againe. The Lord gaue, & the Lord hath taken away. Euen as it hath pleased ỳ Lord, so is it come to passe. Blessed be the name of the lorde. Again, shal we receaue prosperitie at the hād of God, and not receaue aduersitie? In all these thinges, sayth the historiograph, Job dyd not offend, nor murmured foolishly against God. To whō also is the hystoryfold Tobias vnknowē? whō god deprined of his sight, ỳ he might trye his pacīēce & cōformitie to his godly wil. He grudged not (saith ỳ scripture, against god, because ỳ plague of blindnes had chaūced vnto him, but remayneth still stedefast in the feare of God, and prayinge God al the dayes of his lyfe. What shal I speake of king Dauid, which being greuously & mortally pursued of his vngodly & disobediēt sonne Absolon, cōmitted him selfe wholly vnto the hands of God, redy to receaue, whatsoeuer the good pleasure of God shuld be, whether it were restitucion vnto his kingdō, or an vtter losse of the same? I passe ouer Moses & the Prophetes, Paule & ỳ Apostles, which pacientlỳ, ioyfully & thankefully bare whatsoeuer crosse God layed vpon their backe, neuer grudging against the wil of God. The history of Lazarus is more knowen, then it nedeth here to be recited, which suffering quietly the great paynes of many mortal diseases besides ỳ extreme famine, with whose dart he was most miserably pearsed, & neuer grudging against the good wil of god, was at the last of the glorious Angels caried vp into the bosom of Abrahā. I passe ouer the history of the Leper, which although he desyred to be clensed from his leprosye, yet he referred the matter to Christ, to do with him, whatsoeuer his good pleasure should be, either to be made clene, or to remayne still in his leprosy. Thus all good men frō time to tyme in euery age haue pacientlỳ & thankefully borne the crosse, that God hath layd vpon thē, & submitted their wil to to the good wil of God, being fully persuaded, ỳ all thinges worke for the best vnto thē that loue God, seing that nothinge chaunceth to the godlye without the good will & the determinate councell, & singulare prouidence of God. Father. Doth God send such afflictions & troubles as chaunce vnto men in this world? Sonne. To the godly & to such as feare God, nothing cometh by fortune or by chaunce, but by the determinacion & wil of God, be it neuer so greuous & troublous crosse. God sayth by the Prophet: I am the Lord, & there is els none. It is I that created light & darkenes. I make peace & trouble: yea euen I the lord do all these thinges. Jeremy also sayth: What is he that sayeth: There shuld some thing be done without the Lords cōmaundement? Out of the mouth of the most hyest goeth not euil & good? By euil, he meaneth aduersitie: by good, he vnderstandeth prosperitie. Lykewise sayth our sauiour Christ: Are not two litle sparowes solde for a farthing? & one of thē shal not light on the ground without your father: that is to say, without the consent & good will, without the councel & determinacio of your father. The Lord kepeth al the bones of the righteous, so that not one of them shalbe broken. For he geueth his angels charge of thē to kepe them in all theyr wayes, which shall pitche their tentes round about the godly, & shal delyuer thē. By the prouidēce of God al things are gouerned, & at his appointment all thinges chaunce to the godly: neither can any thing happen to suche as feare God without both the determinacion & permission of God. Esau burneth with an immortal hatrede against his brother Jacob, purposing in his harte to kill him. But God so mollifyed his harte, that when he met with his brother Jacob, he louingly embraced him, frendly kissed him, and for very ioye wept vpon him. Saul persecuted Dauid cruellye, purposinge to kill him, but his labour was in vayne. Jesabel threatened and sware, that Seing then, that nothing chaunceth to the godly without the singulare prouidence & determinat councell of the Lord our God: again, whatsoeuer chanceth vnto them, is for the best, and for theyr greate commoditie & profyt: it is our duety in prosperitie not to waxe proude against God, nor in aduersitie to murmurre or grudge agaynste hym, but lyke obedient children to surrendre and geue vp vnto him our selues, our willes, our affections, our lustes, and whatsoeuer we haue beside, humbly desyring him, that not our owne will, nor the will of Satan or of the worlde but his most godlye and blessed will maye be done in vs, yea and that with no les feruent desyre and gredy affectiō then it is accomplished and fulfilled of the glorious Angels and blessed spirites in the kingedom of heauen: so that frō henceforth euen vnto our lyues ende there maye no mocion of lust be felte in vs, but suche only as shall wholly consent with his will, nor that we will any thing of our selfe, but as the holy ghost will in vs, by whose secret instructiō we may learne to loue & to do those thinges that be pleasaunt to him, and to hate and abhorre, whatsoeuer displeaseth hum. Father. God for his mercyes sake mought vouchsafe to bring to passe this thing in vs vnto the glorye of his holy name. Sonne. Amen. Father. Let me nowe, my sonne, heare the fourth peticion. Sonne. Gyue vs this day our dayly bread. Faher. To what ende doo we directe this prayer vnto God? Sonne. You hearde afore, that the Lordes prayer contayneth in it seuen seuerall peticions, whereof the three first peticions concerne the glory of God and the auauncement of his kingedome: the other foure, which folow in order, entreate of our necessities, and appertayne vnto our commoditye and profyte: of the which this is the fyrst: Gyue vs this day our dayly bread. After that we haue most humblye desyred of our heauenly father, that his holy name may be sanctifyed in vs: that the glorious kingedom of his holy spirite and Gospel maye come vnto vs: and that his most blessed will may be done and fulfilled of vs here in earth with no les desyre then it is done and accomplished of the holy Angels in heauen: forasmuche as we can not lyue in this worlde to enioye these most precious and inestimable benefytes, for the whiche we haue tofore prayed, without bodely foode (for man beyng made of two partes must haue a double nourishmente. care vpon the Lorde, sayth Dauid, and he shall nourishe thee. Father. It is then God alone, whiche geueth vs all good thinges, when we call vpon him. Sonne. Yea verely. This considered Jacob right wel, when he sayed on this maner: If God will be with me, and will kepe me in this iournay, which I go, and will geue me bread to eate, and clothes to put on, so that I come again vnto my fathers house in safetye: then shall the Lorde be my God. Neyther was this thinge vnknowen to Salomon, when he thus prayed: Two thinges haue I required of thee (O Lorde) that thou wilte not denye me before I dye. Remoue from me vanitie and lyes: Geue me neyther pouertye nor rychelle: only graunt me a necessarye lyuing. least if I be to full, I denye thee, and saye: Who is the Lorde? and least I beinge constrayned thorow pouertye, fall vnto stealing, and take the name of my God in vayne. Father. But wherfore in this peticion do I rather say, praying by my selfe alone, Geue vs, then geue me? Sonne. This prayer, whiche the Lorde Christ both taught and commaunded vs to saye, is a comõ and general prayer, seruing for the vse of the whole church or congregacion of God, in the which we praye one for another, the Prince for the Subiect, and the Subiect for the Prince: the Lorde for the Seruaunt, the Seruaunt for the Lorde: the ryche for the poore, & the pore for the ryche, &c, and not euery man for him selfe onlye, yea & that both in spirituall and corporal thinges. Therefore in the beginning of this prayer, we saye not: My father whiche art in heauen: but our father, which art in heauen. So lykewyse in this peticion we saye not: Geue me this day my daylye bread: but geue vs this daye our dayly bread: wyshing not only from our heauenly father good thinges euery man to him selfe priuatly and only, but generally & vniuersallye to all men indifferently: declaringe hereby, that as we be membres all of one body and children of one heauenly father, so are we carefull one for another, gentle and louing one to another, and pray generally one for another, wishing indifferentlye all good thinges to all men without exceptiõ, and without any respect had to pryuate profyte and singulare commoditye. And this is it that S. Paule sayth: Be of lyke affection one toward another. Agayne: If there be anye consolacion in Christ: if there be any cõfort of loue: if there be any felowshyp of the spirite: if there be any compassion and mercye, fulfyll ye my ioye, that ye be lyke mynded, hauing one loue, beynge of one accorde, & of one mynde, that nothing be done throughe stryfe, or of vayne glorye, but in mekenes of mynde, let euery man esteme another better then hym selfe. Loke not ye euery man on his owne thinges, but euery man on the thinges that are other mens. Let the same mynde be in you, that was also in Christ Jesu, &c. Also in another place: Membres (all Christians are mẽbres one of anothers bodye) should indifferently care one for another. And if one member suffer, all suffer with him. If one member be had in honour, all membres be glad also. Ye are the bodye of Christ, and members one of another. Of this Christen and brotherly affection toward

Who is weake, and I am not weake? who is offended, and I burne not? Father. It is thē the duety of so many as profesle Christ, one to be carefull for another: one to pray and prouide for another, accoding to t his commaundement of God: Thou shalt loue thy neyghbour as thy selfe. Sonne. Yea verely. For loue is gentle & courteous, and seeketh not her owne. Father. They then, which are ledde with no careful and frendly affection toward other, neyther haue any regard, whether theyr neyghbour syncke or swimme, but only are studious of them selues & of theyr owne gayne, saye not this prayer aright. Sonne. They doo nothinge els then mocke God, and theyr prayer is to them selues sinne and damnacion, so farre is it of, ỳ it please God, or obtayne anything at the hande of God, which requireth a louing and charitable harte in all them that pray. Father. But tell me, my sonne, is it not lawfull for a Christen man to pray for him selfe only and for his owne necessities vnto God? Sonne. Yes verely, so that the affectiō of neighbourly loue be not quenched in vs. For whether we respect ghostly or bodely things, we finde sufficiēt examples in the holy scripture, which playnly shewe, that diuerse men haue lamented theyr priuate and singulare state vnto God, crauing at his hand ayde and succour against theyr owne miseries, and haue obtayned theyr requestes. Jacob and Salomon, as we hearde, desyred of God corporall sustenaunce. Dauid, Manasses, Mary Magdalene, Peter, the Theefe, the Publicā. &c. craued of God remission of theyr synnes: & euery one of these seuerallye obtayned theyr requestes at the hande of God. It is therfore lawfull for euery man to lament his priuate cause vnto God, as his necessitye shall require. Father. Why do we vse this worde in our peticion, This day? Geue vs this day our dayly breade. Sonne. Forasmuch as in this worlde we are straungers and pilgrims, as our forefathers were before vs, and haue here none abydinge Citye, but seeke one to come: forasmuch also as nothing is more certen then death, & nothinge more vncerteyn then the houre of death, to the whiche death oure lyfe at all houres yea at euery moment of an houre is subiect and redye to geue place: our Sauiour Christ willing to geue vs an occasion not to forget, but to haue those things continually in our remēbrance, teacheth vs to aske of our heauenly father foode and sustenaunce of the bodye, not for many daies, monethes or yeres to come, being vncerten, whether we shall lyue so longe or not, but for that one present day, wherin we lyue, that we maye learne, not to be careful after the maner of the worldlinges in makinge prouision afore hande for this vncerten lyfe, but to be content with the meate of the present tyme, so that leaninge to the prouidence of God, we care not for the morow we, seeing that the morow day shal care for it selfe: and agayne, sufficient vnto the day is the trauayle therof. For what is our lyfe, that we should make prouision for it so many dayes, monethes or yeres afore hande? Verely this

our lyfe as S. Iames sayeth, is euen a vapour, that appeareth for a litle tyme, and then vanisheth awaye. A man that is borne of a woman hath but a shorte tyme to lyue, and is full of misery. He cometh vp and is cut downe lyke a floure. He flyeth as it were a shadow, and neuer continueth in one state. His dayes are more swifte then a runner: they passe awaye as the shippes that be good vnder sayle, and as the Egle that flyeth to the pray. Father. Fewe consider this thing, but many flattering them selues with hope of long life, make prouision aforehande for a great nomber of yeres to come. Sonne. These maye iustlye be resembled to that ryche man, of whome we rede in the Gospell of Luke, which hauing great abundaunce of goods, and not knowing where to bestowe them, sayde: This will I do. I wil destroy my barnes and builde greater, and therin wil I gather al my goods that are growen vnto me, & I will say vnto my soule: Soule, thou hast muche goods layed vp in store for many yeres: Take thyne ease, eate, drincke and be mery. But God said vnto him: Thou foole, this night wil they fetche away thy soule agayne frō thee. Then whose shall those things be, which thou hast prouided? Father. The lyke thing chaunceth to manye in these our dayes: but fewe regarde it. Sonne. No maruell. For the worlde and the loue of worldly things hath so blynded theyr eyes that they can not consyder the thinges that belonge vnto theyr saluacion. They forget them selues to be straūgers and pilgrims on earth. They consyder not, howe in this worlde they haue none abyding citie, and that therfore they ought to seeke one to come. They call not vnto remembraunce, that they brought nothinge into this worlde, neyther shall they carye any thing out of it: and that therefore hauing meate, drinke and clothe, they ought to be content: forasmuche as naked they came out of theyr mothers wombe, & naked they shall depart agayne.

That we ought not to be so careful in making prouision aforehand for longe tyme to come, not only the shortenes and vncertentye of our lyfe teacheth vs, but also the maner of feeding the Israelites, whiche God fed in the wildernes. For when God sente the people of Israel meate from heauen, which in the boke of Moses is called Manna or heauenly bread, and in the boke of Psalmes, the bread of Angels, and in the boke of wisdom, Angels foode & bread from heauen very pleasaunt and of good taste: He commaunded them, that they shuld gather no more of it euery day, then shoulde serue and suffise then for that one present day, and so euery day gather newe, except on the sixte day: thē was it lawfull to gather by the commaundement of God so muche as should serue them that day, and the day folowing, which was the Sabath of the Lorde and a day of rest. If any presumed of a gredy, carefull & couetous mynde to gather more, then shulde suffise for that present day, it waxed full of wormes and stancke: whereby we may euidentlye learne, that as God will not forsake them, that depend on his fatherly prouidence and put theyr trust in him, but daylye giue them all thinges necessarye for theyr vse, yea and that abundantlye: so lykewyse he vtterly abhorreth, condemneth & curseth the sorowefull carefulnes of the flesshe, which mistrusting the prouidence & helpe of God, leaneth only vnto her owne wisdom, forcast and prouision. Couetousnes is the roote of all euils, and it causeth manye to wander from the faythe, and to snarle them selues with manye sorowes: and yet the couetouse man heaping treasure vpon treasure, can not tel, for whom he gathereth his treasure. Father. Trueth it is. But lette vs goe forwarde. Wherfore doo we vse this worde, Our, sayinge: Gyue vs this day Our dayly bread: and not rather, my daily bread? Sonne. For two causes. First to declare our good will towarde our neighbours, while we wishe no les abundaunce of good thinges to them, then to our selues, and be led with no les carefull affection towarde them and theyr profyt, then we are toward our selues and our own commoditye. For this mynde ought to rule in all that profesſe God, haue one heauenly father, and be called by one name, I meane Christians, that they shuld be carefull one for another, prouide one for another, one seeke anothers commoditie and profyt, and in all pointes be the same to other, that they are to them selues accordinge to this commaundemente of God: Thou shalt loue thy neighbour, euen as thy selfe.

Leuit. xix. Math. vij.

Again, whatsoeuer ye wold, that other men shuld do to you, do ye the same vnto them. But of this thing we spake afore, whē we entreated of this worde, Vs. Father. Thou sayest trueth. Let me now heare the second cause. Sonne. The second cause, why we say our bread, is, to put vs in remembraūce that we lyue not ydely, nor of the labour of other mens handes, nor of the sweate of other mens browes, nor yet that we eate our bread and get our lyuinge vniustlye or by any vnlawfull meanes, but that we eate our owne bread iustly and truly, labouring euery man some good thinge according to his vocation and callinge: auoyding ydlenes as an extreme pestilence both of our selues & of the comon weale, wherin we dwell. For God shortly after the transgression of his holy cōmaūdemēt in paradyse, gaue this charge not only to Adam, but to al his posteritie, that they by no meanes shuld lyue idely as vnprofytable burdens of the earth, or as Monsters onlye borne to consume the good fruites of the earth, but that they should exercyse some good arte, some profitable occupacion, wherby they may be able to eate theyr owne bread, and not to be anye burden without cause to other. In the sweate of thy face (sayth God) shalt thou eate thy bread, tyll thou be turned agayn into the grounde: for out of it wast thou taken, inasmuch as thou art duste, and into dust shalte thou be turned agayne. As the byrde is borne to flye, so is man to labour, sayeth Job. The Psalmograph also sayeth: Thou shalt eate the labours of thyne owen handes, & so shall it go wel with thee. Likewise sayth the blessed Apostle S. Paule: We beseche you brethren, that ye encrease more & more, & that ye study to be quiet, & to medle with your owne busynes, and to worke with your owne handes as we commaunded you: that ye may behaue your selues honestly towarde them that be without, & that that nothing be lacking vnto you. Agayn, we require you brethren by the name of our Lord Jesu Christ, that ye withdraw your selues from euery brother that behaueth him selfe inordinatly, & not after the institucion, whiche he receaued of vs. For ye your selues knowe, howe ye ought to folow vs. For we behaued not our selues inordinatly amōg you: neither toke we bread of any man for nought, but wrought with labour and sweat night and day, because we wold not be chargeable to anye of you: not but that we had auoritie. But to make vs an ensample vnto you to folowe vs. For when we were with you, this we warned you of, that if any wold not worcke, the same should not eate. For we haue heard say, that there are some, which walke among you inordinatly worcking not at all, but being busy bodies. Them that are such we commaunde and exhort by our Lorde Jesus Christ, that they worke with quietnes, and eate their owne breade. And accordinge to this commaundement of God all the holy menne both of the olde and newe testament behaued them selues, practysinge alwayes some honest and godlye exercyse, that by this meanes they might bothe auoyd idlenes and also eate theyr owne bread, as we tofore heard in the declaration of the fourth commaundement. Faher. What thinckest thou then of such as lyue by vnlawfull gaming, as dysinge, cardinge, &c. or by vsurye? Sonne. I counte them nothinge els then theues, robbers & spoylers of the comon weale, forasmuche as they eate not theyr owne bread, but by fraude and suttiltie, by craft and oppression they vnlawfully gette from other, wherewith they mayntayne them selues. And of such speaketh S. Paule on this maner: Let him that stole, steale no more, but let him rather labour with his hāds ỹ thing which is good, that he may geue vnto him that nedeth. Father. What is thy iudgemēt of those riche men, whiche eyther defraude the poore men of theyr almose, or kepe backe the wages from the labourers? Sonne. These also are theues & murtherars. Agaynst the one sorte of these vngodly rych men speaketh the wyse man on this maner: The breade of the nedye is the lyfe of the poore: he that defraudeth him of it, is a man sleare. Agaynst the other speaketh S. James thus: Go to now ye rych men: wepe and houle on your wretchednes, that shal come vpon you. Your rychesse is corrupte: your garmentes are moth eaten: your golde and siluer is canckered, and the rust of thē shall be a witnes vnto you, and shall eate your flesh, as it were fyre. Ye haue heaped treasure together euen wrath to your selues in your last dayes. Beholde, the hyer of the labourers, which haue reaped downe your fieldes) whiche hyer is of you kepte backe by fraude) cryeth, and the crye of them whiche haue reaped, are entred into the eares of the Lorde of Hoostes. Agaynst thē botherycth out the word of God on this maner: Wo to thee that spoilest or robbest: for thou also shalt be spoyled and robbed. Wo vnto him that heapeth vp other mens goods. Howe longe will he lode him selfe with thicke claye? O howe sodenly will they stande vp that shal byte & awake that shall teare thee in peces? yea thou shalt be theyr pray. Setinge their affectes and dedes are contrary to their wordes. Of suche it may right wel be verified that our Sauiour Christ hath in the Gospel, borowing it out of the Prophet: This people draweth nye vnto me with their mouth, & honoureth me with their lippes: howe be it their harte is farre from me. In vayne verely do they serue me. For they despise of God our bread, that is to say, thinges necessarye not only for them selues, but also for other: and they them selues contrarye to their prayer go about with all diligence to depriue the poore of that, which is their lyuing, being in deede before God theues, robbers, murtherars, manslears and bloudsoupers. Therefore whatsoeuer they pray in this behalfe, it is nothing els then a mocking of God, and to thē selues sinne and euerlasting damnacion. Father. These and diuers histories do aboundantly declare, that the lorde our god is plētifully rich to so many as cal on him in truth: so that if Rom. 10.

we daily ask of him our daily bread, we may be sure daily to be hard & daily to be fed, so that we shal lack no good thing, as Dauid saith: Fear the lord al ye his saintes: for that they feare him, shall haue no scarsnes. Again: The riche haue wanted & suffred honger: but they Psal. 34.
that seeke after the Lorde, shall want no good thinge. Father. God geue vs al grace to seeke the Lorde vnfainedly, that our mindes sequestred from the vnrighteous and vnnecessary cares of this world we may wholy depend on the mercyfull prouidence of god, liue according to our vocation, and doo that, whyche is ryghteous in the syghte of god. Sonne. Amen.

Father. This petition beginneth to hast vnto an end. Tel me therfore, what thou vnderstādest by this word, Bread? For thus pray we Geue vs this day our daily Bread. Sonne. By bread I vnderstande not only that, which we commonly cal bread, but also al other things necessary for the body and for this present life, as meat, drincke, aparel, health, peace, tranquility, strength to labor, wisdome to gouern our things, a quiet household, a louing wife, obedient children, faithful seruaunts, a florishing common weale, wholsomnes of air, seasonable weather, rain in due time, a fruteful yere, aboundaunce of al thinges, sauegard from enemies, long life, joyful daies, house, land, cattel, good maiestrates, righteous officers, painful teachers diligent tutors, and whatsoeuer is necessarye to the maintenance & conseruation of our life. As bread after the Hebrewe phrases manner of speaking signifieth al these things aforsaid, so are we taught of our sauior Christ in this petition to ask al these things of God alone, frō whom cometh euery good & perfect gift: which also is rich inough euen vnto the ful to healpe so many as in spirite and truthe cal vpon him: Again, whose eie is vpon them that feare him, and vpon them that put their trust in his mercy, to deliuer their liues from death, and to feede them in the time of dearth. Father. I haue heard that this word Bread in this petition, signifieth not only the norishment of the bodye, but also the fode of the soule, so that as manne is made of two parts, that is to say, of bodye and soule, so likewise we aske here of God daily sustenaunce for them both. Sonne. By an allegory it may be vsed vnto this end: but after the doctrin of our Catechist the more simple, sincere and righteseuce is, that bread in this place should only signify the fode of the bodye, for the whiche we also here pray. Notwithstanding both our preacher and Catechist haue not so cōcealed this exposition also from vs, but that they also haue declared vnto vs the mindes of certain wryters in this behalfe.

Father. What haue they said? Sonne. This haue they said: that some expositoures vnderstand by this word Bread in this place, Christe Jesus our Lord and alone sauiour, which vndoubtedlye is the fode of our soule, and the bread of euerlasting life, as he testifieth of himself, saying: I am the bread of life. He that commeth to me, shall not honger: and he that beleueth on me, shal neuer thirst. Againe, I am that liuing bread, whiche came downe from heauen. If anye man eat of thys bread, he shall liue for euer. Saint Paule also calleth the Lord Christ a spirituall meat, whych the fathers of the olde Testamente thorowe faythe did eate, whyle they thorowe the woorde of Godds promise, and thorow the outward fygures and ceremonies which painted forth Christ, beleued, saw and laid hande on Christe, beleuing him to be their alone sauioure, and therfore the alone fode and meat also of their soules. Our fathers saith he, wer al vnder the cloud, and al passed thorow the sea, and wer al baptised vnder Moses in the cloud, & in the sea: & did al eat of one spiritual meat, & drink al one manner of spirituall drinke. &c. For loke what corporal sustenāce is to the hōgry body: ý same is christ Jesus the lord to ý hōgry soul. And

And as the eating of materiall bread comforteth and maketh bothe strong and mery the bodye that was hongrye: so likewise dothe the Lord Christ thorow his holy spirit, and thorow true faith in him, in his passion and death, in his merits and deserts, comfort and make ioyful that soule, which cometh vnto him, hongringe and thirstinge after righteousnes, as it is wrytten: He hath filled the hongry with good thinges, but the rich he hath sent empty away. Again, blessed are they, which honger and thirst after righteousnes: for they shalbe filled. Some vnderstand by bread in this petitiō, the word of god, that is to say, the law & the gospel, affirming that this word of god is as necessary for the consolation and conseruation of the soule, as the material bread is for the comfort and preseruation of the body, alledging this text of the holy scripture: Man shal not liue by bread alone, but by euery word that commeth oute of the mouthe of God. Some say, that bread in this place signifieth the mistical bread and cup of Christes body and bloud, which S. Paule calleth the Lordes supper. Thus this word Bread is of diuers diuersly expounded. I will striue with no man, so that his exposition dissent not from the analogy and true proportion of the christen faithe and doctrine, that this rule of s. Peter may be obserued: If any man speake, let him so speake that it be agreable to the words of God: again, that this commaundement of the heauenly father maye be obeyed, Ipsum audite, heare him, that is to say, my sonne Christ and his doctrine: in whose mouth I haue put my wordes, that ye may heare and harken vnto them, least if any presume to do the contrarye, I take vengaunce on him, plage, punish & condemne him. For as it is godly and our bouden ducty, to desire of God, meat, drinke, and al other necessaries for the conseruation and maintainans of this our frail and nedy life: so likewise is it most godly and our most bounden duty, to craue at the hand of our Lord God, that he wil geue vs his sonne Christ, which is the true fode of the soule, to fede vpon by strong faith, being perfectly perswaded, that he alone is our redemer, mediator, aduocate, intercessor, peacemaker, lawfulfiller, sauioure, wisdome, righteousnes, sactification, &c. For except the heuēly father geue vs this faith and knowledge, whereby, we may spiritually feede vpon his sonne Christ, we shall still in spirite and minde remaine and continue miserablye famished, and neuer be fedde with that heauenlye meate, and so at the last day the deathe euerlasting, as Christe him selfe testifieth, sayinge: No man can come to me, excepte the father, whiche sente me, drawe him: and I wil raise him vp at the laste day. It is wrytten in the Prophettes: They shall all be taughte of God. Euerye one therefore that hathe heard and hath learned of the Father, commeth vnto me: not that anye manne hathe seene the father, saue he whiche is of God, the same hath sene the father. Verely, verely I say vnto you: He that putteth his truste in me, hath euerlasting life. I am that bread of life. Verely, verely I saye vnto you: Excepte ye eat the flesh of the son of mā, & drink his blud: ye haue no life in you.

Deut.8. Math.4. Luke.4. Again, for as much as man doth not consist of body only, but also of soule: and God hath appoynted his holy word to be the nourysh-ment and fode of the soule: and this fode of his blessed worde can we not come by, but only thorow the benefite of oure heauenly father: Therfore is it mete and conuenient, that we craue at his hande this spiritual and heauenly norishment of the soule, which is the word of God, that it may be truely preached vnto vs, & that we again maye earnestly heare it, and faithfully beleue it, yea and plentifully bring Luke.8. forth the frutes of the same in pacience vnto the glorye of hys holye name. For litle doth the sound of the outward letter profit, whether it be by reading or hearing, as we may se in Iewes and Turkes, ex-cept God inwardly teach vs by his holy spirit, as thapostle saith: Ne-1.Corinth.3. ther he that planteth, nor he that watereth, is anye thing, but God, which geueth the encrease: otherwise our hearte shall still contynue hardened, stony, and vncircumcised: and we hearing shal not heare, Act.16. neither vnderstande. when Lydia a seller of Purple harde Paule preach, the scripture saith, that the Lord opened her hearte, that she Heb.8. attended vnto the thinges which Paule spake. And God hym selfe saith: I wil put my lawes in their mindes, & in their heartes I wyll wryte them: and I wil be their god, and they shalbe my people.

The supper of the Lorde is a spiritual norishment. Now as touching the supper of the Lord, which is also a certain kinde of spirituall nourishment for the soule, if it be receiued in faith, and with a good conscience toward God: and this of our selues we can not do, except God geue vs the gifte, (for of oure selues we are not able to thinke a good thought: it is God, that worketh in vs both 2.Cor.3. the wil and the dede) and otherwise receiuing it, we do none other thing then eat and drinke our owne damnation: it is not vnsytting, Phil.2. but conuenient and necessary that we desyre of God his spirite and grace, that whansoeuer we come vnto that heuenly banket, we may worthely eat that mistical bread, and drinke of that misticall cuppe, 1.Cor.11. and so be made worthy partakers of Christes blessed body and pre-tious bloud, and of al the merites of his death and passion, wher by he hathe purchased to all synners that repente in faithe, remissyon of Ephe.1. synnes, the fauoure of God, quietnesse of conscience, the gifte of the holy ghost, and finally euerlasting life. They therfore whiche teache Colloss.1.2. that in this petition we asking of our heauenly father, Bread, desyre of him the foode of his sonne Christe, the nourishmente of hys holye woord, and the worthy participation of the holye misteries of Chri-stes body and bloud, which all thre are the meat of the soule: teache nothing contrary to the worde of God: so that this their exposityon may wel be receiued of the faithful, although it seme to some enfor-ced, and not agreable to the minde of Christ in that place. Father. I can not disalow any thing that thou hast spoken, but commēd it as

godly and good. And for as much as we may seme aboundantly to haue spoken of this petition: Let me heare what followeth. Sonne. The nexte that followeth in order, is the fifthe petition, and soundeth on this manner. And forgeue vs oure tresspasses, as we forgeue them, that tresspasse against vs. Father. What craue we of our heauenly father in this petitiō? Sonne. In the former petition we desired of our heauenly father, meat, drinke, clothe, and whatsoeuer besydes is necessary vnto the conseruation and maintenance of thys our presente life, without the whiche we can not liue, neither be able to doo those thinges either vnto God, or vnto our neighbour, which the lawe of God requireth of vs. In this present petition we pray oure heauenly father to geue vs that, which is the consolation and cōseruation of our soules, yea of both our bodies and souls vnto euerlasting life. Father. What is that? Sonne. Forgeuenesse of our synnes. Father. Is it so great a cōfort to the soule. Son? Yea verely: For wher remission and forgeuenes of synnes is, there is the fauour of God, the gyfte of the holy ghost, quietnes of conscience, reast of spirit, ioy of hart, and assurance of euerlasting life. They that obtain this great and singuler benefit at the hand of God, are called in the holy scripture blessed and happy. For so is it wrytten by that Princelike prophet: Blessed are they, whose vnrighteousnesses are forgeuen, and whose synnes are couered. Blessed is that man, to whome the Lorde wyll not impute synne. Father. May we be so bold to aske of our heauenly father forgeuenes of our synnes? Sonne. Dauid saithe: I will knowledge my sinne vnto thee, and mine vnrighteousnes haue I not hid. I said I will confesse my sinnes vnto the Lorde: and so thou forgauest the wickednes of my synne. For this (that is to say, for the forgeuenes of synnes) shall euery one that is godlye make his prayer vnto the in a time, when thou maist be found. Likewise saith S. Jhon: If we cōfesse our synnes, God is faithful and iust to forgeue vs our sinnes, & to cleanse vs from all vnrighteousnesse. And in this petition are we taught of our sauiour Christ to aske of our heauenly father forgeuenes of our synnes. Father. Thys is greate comfort to a penitent synner. Sonne. Nothing can be greater. For if we haue oure synnes forgeuen: we haue also an assurance both of Gods fauor, and also of euerlasting life. But manye thinges offer them selues to be spoken of in this petition. Father. What are they? Sonne. Fyrste of all, that so many of vs as are clad with this mortal flesh, and breath vpon the earth, are wythout exception, sinners and offendours. Father. Howe prouest thou that? Sonne, It is sone proued. For who knoweth not, that we al are begotten, conceyued, borne, norished, and liue in sinne? We are al the children of wrath by nature, saith S. Paule. Christe Jesus only excepted, that blessed sede of the woman, which was the lambe of God, innocent, faultles and without spotte: whiche neuer committed synne, and in whose mouth no guyle or deceit was found: all other that haue lyued, do lyue, or shall lyue vnto the ende of the worlde, maye iustly be counted in the nomber of synners. Exod.1.

Let me heare some testimonies of the holy scripture, concerninge this matter Sonne. The Psalmographe sayth: they are corrupt, & become abhominable in their doynges: there is not one that dooth good, no not one. The Lorde loked downe from heauen vpon the chyldren of men, to see if there were any that would vnderstande & seke after God. But they are all gone out of the waye: they are all together become abhominable: there is none that doth good, no not one. The wyse man sayth: there is not one iust vpon the earth that doeth good and synneth not. The Prophet saith: we haue gone all astraye (lyke shepe) euery one hath turned his owne waye. Salomon sayth: who is able to saye: my heart is cleane, and I am fre frō synne. S. Paule sayeth: there is no difference, all haue synned, and want the glory of God. S. James saith: In many thynges we offende all. S. John saieth: If we saye we haue no synne, we deceiue our selues, and the truthe is not in vs. But if we cōfesse our sinnes, God is faythfull and iust to forgeue vs our synnes, and to clense vs from all vnrighteousnes. If we saye, we haue no synne, there is no truthe in vs. Father. These sentences of the holy scripture do manifestly declare, that all menne are synners. Are there also any histories contayned in the holy Bible, whiche make this thing euident? Sonne. Very many both in the old and newe Testament. Father. Rehearse me parte of them. Sonne. Adam and Eue, of whome we hadd our beginning, synned against God in Paradise, by eatyng the forbidden frute: and in them haue all we synned, and worthely deserued euerlasting dampnation. Noah that noble and auncient Patriarche was dronken, so that he lay sleapyng, his priuities vncouered. Lot was not only drōken, but he also lay with his owne daughters, and committed the vile synne of incest. Abraham, which in the scripture is called the father of the faythfull, denied his wyfe twyse, and put her in daunger of defiling. Diuerse of the Patriarches, besydes other synnes, conspiried to putt Joseph their brother vnto death. Moses committed manslaughter. Dauid was both an adulterer and a murtherer. Salomon his sonne was an Idolatour. Mathewe the Euangelist, was a tolgatherer. Peter both denied, and forswore Christe. The Apostles of Christ were ambitious, and contended, whiche among them should be greatest. They were folyshe in harte, and slowe to beleue. They forsoke their maister Christe in his chief trouble. Mary Magdalene was a famous synner. The thiefe that was saued hanging on the crosse with Christe, was a seditious persone, and a murtherer. Paule persecuted the congregation of God, consented to the death of the blessed Martyr S. Steuen, blasphemed Christ and his glorious gospell &c.

Agayn, when ye haue done al the things that are commaunded you, saye: we are vnprofitable seruauntes.

Luc. 17

It is

It is not without a cause saide of Job: Behold, God found no truth in his seruantes, and in his Aungels there was folye: How muche more in them, that dwell in houses of claye, and whose foundation is but dust? &c. Again, if I will iustifie my selfe, myne owne mouth shall condempne me. If I wyll put forth my selfe for a perfect man, God shall proue me a wicked doer. If I washe my selfe with snowe water, & make my hãds neuer so cleane at the wel, yet shalt thou (O God) dippe me in the myre, and myne owne clothes shall defile me. Also in an other place: What is man, that he should be cleane? What hath he that is borne of a woman, whereby he might be righteous? Beholde, he doth not truste his sainctes: yea the very heauens are not cleane in his sight. How much more then an abhominable & vile man, whiche drinketh wickednes lyke water? Item: howe can he be cleane, that is borne of a woman? Beholde, the moone shyneth no thyng in comparison to him, & the starres are vncleane in his sight. Howe muche more then man, that is but corruption? and the sonne of man, which is but a worme? All our righteousnesses, sayth the prophet, are as a cloth defyled with mens true. S. Paule like wyse saith I knowe, that in me, that is to saye, in my flesshe, there dwelleth no good thyng. Againe, God hath comprehended all vnder synne, that he might haue mercy of all. The perfectest amongest the children of men may praye on this maner: Enter not into iudgement with thy seruaunt, (O Lorde) for none that lyueth, shall be ryghteous in thy syght. Againe, if thou (O Lorde) shouldest narrowly loke vpon our iniquities (O Lorde) who were able to abyde it? But there is mercy with thee in store: yea with thee Lorde there is mercy, and plenteous redemption with hym. The glorious virgin Mary, although of all creatures moste holy, more pure, moste innocent (Christe Iesus her sonne only excepted) in her songe, consydering certaine imperfections to remaine and abyde in her, whiche she receyued of old Adam from her father and mother, confesseth and graunteth, God, and not her selfe, to be her Sauiour. My soule sayth she, magnifieth the Lorde: and my spirite hath reioyced in God my Sauiour. She calleth God her Sauiour, to declare that there was somewhat in her, from the whiche she must be saued by the mercy and goodnes of God. Now if so pure, godly and vertuous a virgyn, would not iustifie her selfe before God, but humbly confessed God to be her Sauiour, and magnified him: who is so farre estraunged from the knowledge both of God and of hym selfe, that he will not humble hym self before the maiestie of God, and graunte hym selfe to be (as he is in dede) a sinner, but rather iustifie him selfe before God, in whose sight the very aungels in heauen are not pure & cleane? Father. Seyng we be all sinners, and greuously offende the Lorde our God, in so muche that thorowe our dissolution of lyfe, we deserue the losse of euerlasting lyfe: tell me, if there be any hope of the remission of our synnes at the hande of God. For there lacke not at this present daye, whiche affirme that a man sinning after baptisme, shal neuer be forgeuen.

The wicked opinion of the Anabaptistes.

geueth. Sonne. This is an olde hereſie, lately renewed by the wicked Anabaptiſtes. If thoſe ſinnes were vnpardonable, whiche be committ after baptiſme: than had Chriſt taught vs inuaine, daily to pray for the daily remiſſion of our daily ſynnes. But Chriſt teacheth nothing in vaine: Therfore our ſinnes alſo committed after baptiſme forgeuen. If God coulde not aſwell forgeue ſinnes after baptiſme, as afore, ſo were he not almighty: than is this article of our faythe falſe, I beleue in God the father almighty. But God is almighty: Therfore is he able at all times to forgeue and to remit ſynne. And that he doth at all tymes forgeue ſinne to ſuche as repent in faithe, & call vnto him for mercy: innumerable places of the holy ſcripture both in the olde and newe Teſtamen, doo euidently ſhowe and declare. Howe oftentimes doth God call ſynners vnto hym, and wyll them to conuerte and turne vnto him, and promiſe that he will receaue them, take them againe into his fauour, & forgeue them their ſynnes? Howe oftentimes doth he proteſt by the Prophetes, that at what ſo euer hower a ſinner turneth vnto him, repenteth him of his former life, and entendeth to become a newe man, he ſhalbe ſafe: his ſinnes ſhalbe forgeuen and forgotten, yea ſo forgeuen and forgotten, that they ſhall neuer more be remembred, nor layde to his charge? God is called the God of ſauing health: and is his hande ſo ſhortened, and his power ſo abated, that he can only ſaue and forgeue ſinnes before baptiſme, and not after baptiſme alſo? Is he not a God of ſauing health at all tymes and at all howres? The merties of God are lyke and one at all ſeaſons without exception. So often as a ſinner with all his harte repenteth and turneth vnto God: ſo often is he forgeuen and pardoned of all his offences. Turne you vnto the Lorde your God ſayeth the Prophet: for he is gracious and mercyfull, long ſuffering, and of great compaſſion, and ready to pardone wickednesse. Our Sauiour Chriſte cõmaunded vs in the Goſpell to forgeue our neighbours that haue offended vs, ſo often as they come vnto vs & graunt their offence, offend thei neuer ſo often: & promiſed again, that we ſhal finde the like kindnes at our heauenly fathers hand: How dare then the wicked Anabaptiſts teach, that the ſinnes cõmitted after baptiſme are not pardonable? who doubteth, but that the Apoſtles of Chriſt were baptiſed? And yet who knoweth not, that after baptiſme they both offended & were forgeuen? Did not Peter ſo offend his maiſter Chriſt, ỳ he called him Satan? Did not Peter afterward forſake his maiſter & ronne away frõ him, yea vtterly deny & forſweare him? Did not Peter after that alſo ſo halt in matters of the goſpel, ỳ Paule opẽly reproued him? Were not all thoſe ſinnes forgeuen Peter? James & John ỳ ſonnes of zebedeus were ſo ambitious ỳ they wold haue ben in autoritie aboue all their felow apoſtles, inſomueh ỳ chriſt reproued thẽ ſharpely for this their ambition. The very ſame Apoſtles alſo were ſo repleniſhed w anger againſt ỳ Samaritans, becauſe thei wold not receaue their maiſter Chriſt, ỳ thei wiſhed fire to come down frõ heauẽ vpõ thẽ, & vterly to cõſume thẽ, ỳ other apoſtles of chriſt had alſo their infirmities & imperfections, ons, and yet were they all forgeuen, and are nowe mooste glorious sainctes in the kyngdome of God. Sinnes therfore are forgeuen after baptisme. The incestuous Corinthian was baptised, and in profession a Christian, yet fell he afterwarde so greuously from the rule of Christen doctrine, that by the Apostles commaundement he was excommunicate: And yet notwithstanding afterwarde he was forgeuen, whan he repented, and was receaued into the felowship of Gods sainctes. Synners then after baptisme are forgeuen. To whō wrote S. John those wordes: If we saye we haue no synne, we deceaue our selues, and the truthe is not in vs. But if we confesse our synnes, he is faythfull and iust to forgeue vs our synnes, & to clense vs from all vnrighteousnes. If we saye, we haue not synned, we make him a lyar, and his worde is not in vs. My litle babes these thinges wryte I vnto you, that ye sinne not. But if any man synne, we haue an Aduocate with the father, Iesus Christ that righteous one. He it is that obtaineth mercie for our sinnes, not for our sinnes only, but also for the sinnes of all the worlde. Wrote not S. John these wordes to the Christians, that were baptised? Se we not then here, that though the Christians do synne after baptisme, if they confesse their sinnes, God for his faithfulnes and righteousnes sake, will forgeue them: yea and that so muche the more, because Iesus Christe is our Aduocate, whiche for his dignitie and worthines, for his perfection and righteousnes easely obtaineth of God the father for vs, not only remission and forgeuenes of our sinnes, but also all other good thynges both bodely and ghostly? Our Sauiour Christe calleth vnto him all that are greued and laden with the burden of sinne, and promiseth, that he will refresh and ease them. He appointed no tyme, no age, before baptisme or after baptisme. Only he biddeth them come, and whansoeuer they come, he promiseth to ease thē of their burdens, be they neuer so greuous and many. Christ is that lambe of God whiche taketh awaye the sinne of the worlde. Note that he saieth, taketh awaye, and not haue taken awaye: to declare, that the vertue of Christes passion and death, abydeth still before God of suche dignitie and price, that it continually sufficeth at all tymes, and in all ages, to put awaye the synnes of the worlde, whether they be committed before or after baptisme. For as the Apostle sayeth, the bloude of Christ speaketh better then the bloude of Abell. Christ in the holy scripture is called our Mediatour and Aduocate, and is reported to lyue with God to this ende, that he may at all times make intercessiō for vs vnto the father. And is it to be thought that this his intercession serueth only for the sinnes committed before baptisme, and not rather generally for all sinnes, whensoeuer they be done? The Apostle wryteth, that Christ Iesus that most high and euerlasting byshop is able at the full, and euen vnto the vttermoste to saue them that come vnto God thorowe hym. But this could he not do, if he saued vs only from the synnes cōmitted before baptisme. Who seeth not nowe the fonde and foolysh, the vayne and wycked wicked doctrine of the Anabaptistes to be directly cõtrary to Gods moste holy and blessed worde, whyle they teache, that sinnes committed after baptisme are vnpardonable: whan the truthe of the holy scriptures plainly teacheth, that thorowe faith in Christe, synnes not only before, but also after baptisme committed, are forgeuen to the penitent sinner at all tymes. Father. As the doctrine of the Anabaptistes is vtterly vnconfortable, and leadeth vnto desperation: so likewyse is the doctrine of the holy scripture moste comfortable to a penitent sinner, and openeth the waye vnto euerlasting saluatiõ. But tell me my sonne: seyng we be al sinners, and notwithstanding there is hope of the forgeuenes of our sinnes: Who forgeueth these sinnes? Sonne. God our heauenly father. For thus pray we. And forgeue vs our trespasses. Father. But doth God alone, and none but God only forgeue sinne? Sonne. Onely God, for God alone forgeueth sinne. Father. Let me heare it proued by the worde of God. Sonne. God him selfe by the Prophet Esaye speaketh on this mauner: I am, I am he, whiche putteth away thy synnes, yea for that for myne owne sake, and I will remember them no more. God in this aforesayde sentence, because he would not haue vs to doubt, but to be moste certenly persuaded, that he alone forgeueth sinne, doubleth, and sayeth twyse, I am, I am he, whiche putteth away thy synnes. By the same Prophet he sayeth also: O Israel forget me not: As for thyne offences, I haue dryuen them away like the cloudes, and thy sinnes as the myst: turne the agayne vnto me. By the Prophet Jeremy God also sayth: from all misdedes, wherein they haue offended against me, I will clense them: and all their blasphemies, whiche they haue done against me, when they regarded me not, I will forgeue them. By the prophet Osee God also sayeth: thy destruction, O Israell, cometh of thy selfe: only of me cometh thy saluation. The prophet Micheas speaketh vnto God on this maner: where is there suche a God as thou: that pardonest wickednes and forgeuest the offences of the remnaunt of thyne heritage: He kepeth not his wrath for euer: and why? His delight is to haue compassion: he shall turne againe, and be mercifull to vs: he shall put downe our wickednesses, and cast al our synnes into the botom of the sea. The Psalmographe also saith: Prayse the Lorde O my soule, and all that is within me, prayse his holy name. Prayse the Lorde, O my soule, and forget not all his benefites. Whiche forgeueth all thy sinnes, and healeth all thyne infirmities: whiche saueth thy lyfe from destruction, and crowneth the with mercy and louing kyndnes. &c. The Lorde is full of compassion and mercy, long suffering and of great goodnes. He wil not alwaye be chiding, neither kepeth he his anger for euer. He hathe not dealt with vs after our sinnes, nor rewarded vs according to our wyckednes. For looke howe hie the heauen is in comparison of the earth: so great is his mercy also toward them that feare him. Looke howe wyde also the East is from the Weast, so farre hath he set our sinnes from vs. Yea lykeas a father pitieth his owne children: euẽ so is the

so is the Lorde merciful vnto them that feare him. For he knoweth, whereof we be made: he remembreth, that we are but dust. As I may at the last come vnto the new Testament: we rede in the Gospell, ỹ our sauiour Christe sayde to a certaine man sycke of the Palsey: Sonne, be of good chere: thy sinnes are forgeuen thee. And behold, certayne of the Scribes said within them selues. This man blasphemeth. Who can forgeue sinnes, but God alone? The Scribes iudged Christ to be only man, and not God. Nowe if he had been man only, and not God also: so had he spoken blasphemies, forasmuche as he chalenged that to him, whiche is alone due to God, that is to say, forgeuenes of sinnes. But forasmuche as Christ is not only man, but also very God: therfore not Christ, but the Iewes blasphemed. Here is it euident, euen by the testimony of Christes enemies, that God alone forgeueth synne. Neyther reade we in any parte either of the old or new testamẽt, that any other forgeueth sinne, but God alone. For who can be made cleane of him, that is vncleane? who cã make him cleane, whiche is conceaued of vncleane seede, but God alone? All the saintes of the olde and newe law did alwayes flie vnto God for the remission of sinnes as it is written: For this, that is to say, for the remission of sinnes shall euery sainete praye vnto thee in time conuenient. He therfore doth nothing els, what soeuer he bee, than blaspheme God, whiche taketh vpon him to forgeue synne: seing that he only must forgeue the sinne, against whome the sinne is committed. Now is the sinne committed against God, whose commaundement is transgressed and broke: God therfore must forgeue the sinne, and none other. Father. The Bysshop of Rome hathe taken vpon him by his bulles and pardons to forgeue sinne. Sonne. Vniustly hath he this done. For not only the holy scriptures, but also the auncient fathers of Christes church affirme plainly, that God alone forgeueth synne. The Lorde alone, saieth S. Cipriane, may shewe mercy, and forgeue the sinnes, whiche are committed against hym: he alone can graunt pardon, which bare our sinnes, which sorowed for vs, whom God deliuered vnto the death for vs. Man can not be greater than God, neither can he forgeue or pardon the seruaunts of that, which thorowe greuous sinne is cõmitted against ỹ Lord. S. Ambrose saith: To forgeue sinne, & to geue ỹ holy ghost, is only in ỹ power of God. Again, He alone forgeueth ỹ sinnes, which alone died for our sinnes. S. Iustin saith: No man taketh away the sinnes of the world, but Christ alone, which is the lãbe, ỹ taketh the sinnes of the world. He taketh away both in forgeuing those sinnes ỹ ar done, & in helping that they may be no more done, & in bringing vnto yse, whẽ they can by no meanes be any more done. Cyrill the Greke doctor saith: Inwardly to quicken a sinner, it is the gifte of him alone, which saith by the Prophet: I am he, which putteth away thine iniquities. Chrisostome saith: To deliuer frõ the filthines of sinne, it is without doubt the mightie power of Christ. Again: The bondage of sinne is moste greuous: frõ the whiche God alone is able to deliuer.

No man hath power to forgeue synne but God. Theophilacte saith: It belongeth to God alone to forgeue synne. Therfore he saith, euery one that doth synne, is the seruaunt of synne, and ye therfore are seruauntes, because ye are sinners. Moreouer forasmuch as it was lyke that they would saye: although we be bounde to such thraldō, yet haue we sacrifices, we haue also priestes, whiche shal purge and make vs clene from synne: he saith, that they also are sinners. For al haue synned and want the glory of God. And your priestes, for asmuche as they are also seruauntes, haue no power to forgeue other men their sinnes: whiche thyng S. Paule declareth manifestly, saying: The priest hath asmuche nede to offer for him self, as for the people, seing that he also is cōpassed about with infirmities & diseases. Againe he saith: Christe could not otherwise haue bene knowen to be God, except he had forgeuen the people their sinnes. For it belongeth to God to forgeue sinnes. The byshop of Rome in taking vpon him to forgeue synne, sheweth him selfe, to be that sinfull man, that sonne of perdition, that aduersary, whiche exalteth him selfe aboue all that is called God, or that is worshipped: so ỹ he doth sitte in the temple of God, boasting hym selfe to be God. Father. Priestes also in their priuate absolutions chalenged to them selues authoritie and power to forgeue synne. Sonne. Saint Ambrose sayeth: the worde of God forgeueth the synnes: the priest is the iudge, that is to saye, declareth and sheweth, that synnes are forgeuen to suche as repent, by the mighty power of God: and contrariwyse, that their sinnes ar retained and not forgeuen, whiche do not repent. S. Augustine also saith, that the priestes do not forgeue synne, but the holy ghoste throwe them, as it is saide: ye are not they that speake, but the holye ghost, whiche is in you. Theophilacte likewyse sayd: your priestes, forasmuche as they are seruauntes, haue no power to forgeue synnes. The priest executeth his commissiō, that is to saye, he preacheth the worde of God, and declareth, that what so euer synner repenteth him of his sinne, and beleueth the promes of God made to all penitent synners in Christes bloud, the same hath all his synnes forgeuē hym: but who so euer wyll not receaue the worde, nor beleue it, neyther repent hym of his former lyfe: as the priest declareth to the other that is penitent and faythfull, remission of his synnes: so lykewyse doth he pronounce to hym that is impenitent and vnfaythfull, that his synnes are not forgeuen hym, but that the wrath and vengeaunce of God abydeth vpon hym. God alone forgeueth the synne. Father. Doth God forgeue all the synnes together, or but parte of them, and reserue the residue styll vnforgeuen? Sonne. God is no botcher. He either forgeueth al or none, according to this old saying.

Father. Dothe God also forgeue the payne with the faulte? Sonne. Why aske you that question? Father. I haue hearde some saye, that God forgeuing the faulte, reserueth the payne, and punysheth it afterwarde, some tyme in this worlde, and some tyme in the worlde to come. Sonne. That is a wycked doctrine, and vnworthy the maiestie of God. To remit the synne, and to retayne the payne or punyshement due for the synne, is nothyng els then to make God of a moste mercifull father, a marcyles tyraunte. The teathers of this doctrine make God inferiour to the Pope in goodnes and mercie. For the Pope in his pardons maketh menne cleane, and graunteth them remission of all their synnes A pœna & culpa, toties quoties. The Pope for a lytle money delyuereth men from all their sinnes, both from the faulte, and from the payne due for the faulte, yea and that so often as they bie his pardons: and shall not God, that father of mercie, and God of all consolation and comforte, for the moste dere and precious bloud of his Sonne Christe, shewe the like fauour to his creatures, whan they repent, beleue and amende? God sayth by the Prophet, that he wil so forgeue vs oure synnes ẏ he wil neuer remẽber thẽ more: when thẽ will he punish thẽ? He saith also, ẏ he wil cast al our syns into the botom of the sea: how shal thẽ the remembraunce of them so come before the presence of Goddes maiestie, ẏ he wyll punishe thẽ? The theefe that did hãge on Christes right hande, was forgeuen both the faulte and the paine: and shall God deale lesse mercyfully with vs? The shepe that went astray, & the wastfull childe, being forgeuen and receaued into fauour, were not afterwarde punished, as we reade: except this be to punische, namely, to bryng the wandring shepe home vpon shulders moste tenderly, and to haue compassion of the lost childe, to kisse him, to cloth him with the best garment, to put a ring on his hande and shoes on his feete, to make a banket for ẏ ioye of his returne, to cal the neighbours together, to be mery, to haue minstrelsy and dauncing, &c.

well pleased with man. Saint Paule sayeth, that Christe is oure peace, because he hath made an atonement betwene God and vs, for as muche as it pleased the father, that in hym shoulde all fulnes dwell, and by hym to reconcile all thyng to hym selfe, and to sette at peace by hym thorowe the blonde of his crosse, bothe thynges in heauen, and thinges in earth. Againe, by Christe we haue redemption thorowe his bloud, euen the forgeuenes of sinnes according to the riches of grace. For by Christ hath he set vp al thinges perfectly, both the thinges whiche are in heauen, and the thinges whiche are in earth: yea by Christ are we made heires of euerlasting life according to the purpose of his owen will. Ones againe: God setteth out his loue toward vs, seing that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for vs. Muche more then now, we that are iustified by his bloud, shalbe saued from wrath through him. For if whē we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of his sonne: muche more, seyng we are reconciled, we shall be preserued by his lyfe. Father. What is the meane, whereby we obtayne of God for Christes sake this benefite of the remissiō and forgeuenes of synnes? Sonne. Faith only, whereby alone we be iustified and saued. For so sayeth our Sauiour Christe: God so loued the worlde, that he gaue his only begotten sonne, that whosoeuer beleueth in hym, should not perysshe, but haue euerlasting lyfe. For God sent not his sonne into the worlde to condempne the worlde, but that the worlde thorowe him might be saued. Again: He that beleueth on the sonne, hath euerlasting lyfe: but he that beleueth not on the sonne, shal not se life, but ꝑ wrath of God abideth on him. S. Paul saith: We being iustified by faith, are at peace with God through our Lorde Jesus Christ: by whome also it chaunced vnto vs to be brought in thorowe fayth vnto this grace, wherin we stand, & reioyse in the hope of ꝑ glory of God. Also in another place he saith: By grace are ye made safe thorowe faithe, & that not of your selfes. It is the gift of God, & cometh not of workes, least any man should boast him selfe. And in the actes of the Apostles we reade these wordes. To Christ geue all the Prophetes witnes, that through his name, whosoeuer beleueth in him, shall receaue remissiō of synnes. Againe, be it knowen vnto you, that through this manne (Christe) is preached vnto you the forgeuenes of sinnes, and that by hym, all that beleue, are iustified from all thinges, from the whiche ye could not be iustified by the lawe of Moses.

Dauid beīng with so feruent loue toward his people, that he badd rather dye him selfe, and all that were his kinsfolke, than his subiects should so miserably be slaine with plage.

What shall I speake of the holy Apostle S. Paul, which did not only continually pray vnto God for the forgeuenes of the sinnes of the Israelites, but he also euen frō the very hart wished to be accursed and vtterly banished from Christ, so that they might be saued. Roma. 9 Paule.

Of these histories & of such like we may easly learne howe one of vs ought to be affected toward another both in bodely and ghostly things: and that we ought to pray one for another, that not only abundance of all worldly things may be geuen vs, but also that we may haue remission of sinnes, the fauour of God, quietnes of conscience, and in fine euerlasting life, as S. James saith: Pray one for another, that ye may be saued. Iam. 5. In consideration wherof, our sauiour Christe taughte vs to say: Forgeue vs our trespasses, and not, forgeue me my trespasses. Father. Is it not therfore lawful for a man priuately to lament his miserable state vnto God and to desyre a redres of the same? Sonne, It is most lawful, as we haue diuers examples in the holy scripture. Dauid praied for the remission of his own sinnes only, whan he said: Haue mercy on me (O Lorde) accordinge to thy great mercy. And according to the multitude of thy tender compassions, put away my wickednes. Oh, wash me yet more (O Lord) frō mine iniquity: and clense me from my sinne. So likewise reade we of king Manasses and of diuers other. In the newe Testament we haue manifest examples likewise. Mary Magdalē secretly in her hart lamented her most miserable state, her most wicked and sinnful life, yea and that not without teares braking out frō the fourme of the heart, and she heard at the mouth of Christ these most comfortable wordes: Thy sinnes are forgeuen thee. Thy faith hathe saued thee: Go in peace. The lost sonne cōming home again to his father, praide on this manner for a redresse of his most miserable state: Father I haue sinned against heauē, and before thee, and am no more worthy to be called thy sonne: make me as one of thy hired seruāts. What shal I here recite the theefe, which did hang on the crose with Christ: Praide not he for him self on this wise, speaking to the Lord Christ: O lord remember me, when thou comest into thy kingdome. Christ answered him: This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise. I passe ouer the Apostles of our sauiour, and many other godly persons, which praid vnto God for their owne priuate causes, and were most graciously hard. Call on me, saith God, in the time of thy trouble, and I wil deliuer thee, and thou shalt honour me. Father, what be these trespasses or rather debtes, which we desire to be forgeuen of our heauenly father in this petition? Sonne. God in his holy lawe Luc. 7. Luc. 15 Luc. 23 psal. 50 Debtes.

hath geuen vs ten commaundements, which we are bounde to obserue and kepe. Now for as much as none of vs al fulfileth them al, no, not one of them al with such perfection as the law requireth, being in dede spiritual, and we carnal as our sauiour Christ said vnto the Iewes: Did not Moses geue you a law, and yet none of you kepeth the lawe? Therfore are we al debters vnto God: so that in this petition we desire him to forgeue vs these debtes, yea the paine and punishment also, which is due to vs for not paying our debtes, and not to lay vnto our charge those our sinnes, which we daily commit in thought, word & dede, but rather most graciously both to forgeue & to forget them. Fac. We therfore are all debters vnto God? Sonne. Euery one of vs is that endebted seruãt, of whõ we rede in the gospel, which, when his master called him vnto accõpts, was found to owe him x. M. talents. Nether was he able to pay so greate a debte, though both wife, children, houshold, & al that euer he had, should be sold. After this sort are we al. We owe vnto God a most certen and sure debt, euen the fulfilling of his x. cõmaũdements. But this debt are we not able to pay: therfore owe we also vnto our Lorde & master ten thousand talentes, neither are we able to paye them: no, not the most riches, the most holiest, the most perfectest of vs all: Albeit there wante not, whiche so pryde them selues by the reason of their good workes and merits, that they shame not to boste, that they haue good workes inough, not only to saue thẽ selues, but other also. And these workes they cal Opera supererogationis: they might more iustly cal them Opera superarogantiæ. For to much & to great pryde is this vile, corruptible, and stinking flesh so to lift vp his hornes in the presence of Gods maiestye, that by his owne righteousnesses and good workes, which before God are more vnpure, vncleane & filthy, then a cloth polluted with menstrue, he wil take vpon him both to iustifye him self and other also. Is not this to sit in the temple of god, and to boast him self as God? Is not this to say with that most arrogant & proud kinge of Babilon: I will clime vp into heauen, and exalte my throne aboue, besides the starres of God. I will clime vp aboue the cloudes, and wil be like the highest of al. But, o thou vile, stinking & vnrighteous flesh, thou shalt be brought downe to the deepe of hell. God is an enemy to the proud, but to the humble & lowly spirited, he is a most dere and louing frend. He putteth downe the mighty from their seat, but he exalteth the humble and meke. The holiest & perfectest company of Gods sainctes, that euer liued in this world, maye iustly saye, as it is wrytten: We haue sinned with oure forefathers, we haue dealte vnrighteously, and committed wickednesse. Therfore to the Lord our God be righteousnes: but to vs confusion & shame. If thou, O Lord, shuldest narowly loke vpon our wickednesses: o Lord, who wer able to abide it? sayth the Psalmograph. Euery one of vs, when we be most holy & perfect, may right wel praye on this manner: Enter not into iudgemente with thy seruaunte (O Lord): for no man that liueth, is righteous in thy syghte.

If we say, we haue no sinne, saith S. Jhon, we deceiue oure selues, and the truth is not in vs. For as S. James saith, all sorte of vs offend in many thinges. Who seeth not now, that we al be debters vnto God, and haue greuously offended him? Father. What is then to be done, that we may be deliuered from this debt? Sonne. As our sauiour Christ, whiche is the wisdome of the father, teacheth vs here. Father. What is that? Sonne. Humbly to knowledge oure selues gods debters, transgressors and breakers of Gods moost holy lawe, and therfore worthy, if we shuld be handled according to our merits and deserts, not only of temporal punishment, but also of euerlasting damnation. Again, for as muche as we of oure selues withal oure good workes, merites, and righteousnesses are not able to pay so greate a debt: to desire our heauenly father for his sonne Christe Jesus sake, (in whome he is wel pleased with man, and for whose sake he gladly geueth and graunteth, whatsoeuer is asked in his name, as it is wrytten: What so euer ye shall aske the father in my name, he shall geue it you: Aske, and ye shall haue) to remit and forgeue vs, whatsoeuer we owe him, and to deliuer vs out of that seruitude and bondage, wherunto we are most miserably cast thorowe sinne, that we being set at liberty from that debt, may frankly and freely, and with a good courage serue him in holines and righteousnes al the dais of our life. Sonne. Yea moost certenly. For he deliteth not in the death of a sinner, but is at all times moste redy to pardon and forgeue, whatsoeuer is done against him, if with humble harts we flie vnto the throne of his maiesty, and desire mercy and fauor, as we haue an example in that seruaunt, which ought his Lord, and master ten thousand talentes. So sone as that seruaunt humbled him self before his master, and desired fauoure at his hand: his master forgaue him all the debte, so clerely as though he had neuer ought him one farthing, as it appeareth by the wordes of the master: I forgaue thee all that debt, when thou desiredst me. So like wise wil our heauenly father do with vs, if we confesse the debt, and desire forgeuenesse of the same. Father. Well said, my sonne. God graunt vs of his grace. And blessed be the Lord our God for his clemency and goodnes toward vs his miserable and sinneful creatures. But what is ment by this that foloweth in our petition. As we forgeue them that trespasse against vs: or as we forgeue our debters? Sonne. Whosoeuer wil obtain at the hand of god grace, fauour, and remission of his sinnes: he must also forgeue them that haue offended him. And verely of this nature are the sonnes of God, which are regenerate and borne a new by the holy ghost, not of mortal sede, but of immortal, by the worde of God, which liueth & lasteth for euer, that they with in al thinges to resemble the mäners of their heauenly father, and to be the same vnto other, that God is vnto vnto them, accoꝛding to this commaundement of our sauioꝛ Chꝛist: Be ye merciful, as youꝛ heauenly father is merciful. S. Paule also saith: Be ye the folowers of God, and walke in loue, as Chꝛist hath loued vs. Of this affection and minde were diuers godlye persons, which are mentioned in the holye scripture. Kinge Dauid vniustlye was persecuted of Saule, and his life verye narowly sought: yet the spirit of God was so stronge in Dauid, that he did not only not seke to be reuenged, but he also foꝛgaue his enemy Saule, and neuer eyther did, oꝛ pꝛocured any euil against him, in so muche that whan he might haue slaine him, he would not ones touch him: yea when Abisai said to Dauid: God hath deliuered thine enemy into thine hande this day: Now therfoꝛe let me smite him ones with my speare to the earth, and I wil not smite him the seconde time: Dauid answeared: Destroy him not. Foꝛ who can lay his hand on the Loꝛdes annoynted, and be giltlesse? S. Stephen in like maner did so litle malign his enemies, that he did not only frely foꝛgeue thē, but he also pꝛayed vnto God foꝛ them, saying: Loꝛde, laye not this sinne vnto theyꝛ charge. But wherfoꝛe doo I cease to rehearse him and his vnoutespeakeable loue, which is the mirrour of all goodnes, and of whome we are named: I meane, Chꝛist? This pꝛecious pearle of perfect patience shewed so great charitie euen vnto his most cruel and bloudy enemies, that he him self did not only mooste frankye and frely foꝛgeue them, but he also hanging on the cros, and euen in the middest of his toꝛments, pꝛaid vnto his heauenly father, that he would foꝛgeue them. After this manner oughte all Chꝛistians to be affected, not to reuenge, but ready to foꝛgeue: not to curse, but to blesse: not to render euil foꝛ euil, but to ouercome euil with goodnes, leauinge all vengeaunce to God, which sayeth: Vengaunce is mine: I wil reward Whosoeuer is otherwise minded, let him loke foꝛ no fauoure at the hand of God. Father. Let me heare it pꝛoued by the wooꝛde of God, that I ought to foꝛgeue them that haue offēded me: and that doing otherwise I shal finde no fauour at the hand of God, but rather displeasure, wꝛath, vengaunce, plages and euerlastinge dampnation. Sonne, Jesus the sonne of Syꝛach wꝛyteth on this manner: He that seketh vengaunce, shall finde vengaunce at the Loꝛdes hand, which shall surelye kepe him his sinnes. Foꝛgeue thy neighboure the hurte that he hathe done to thee: and so shall thy sinnes be foꝛgeuen the also, when thou pꝛayest. A man that beareth hatred againste another, howe dare he desire foꝛgeuenes of God? He that sheweth no mercy to a man, which is like him selfe: howe dare ye aske foꝛgeuenes of hys synnes? If he that is but flesh, beareth hatred and kepe it: who wyll entreat foꝛ his sinnes? Remember the end, and lette enemitye passe, which seketh death and destruction, and abide thou in the commaundementes Remember the commaundements, so shalt þ not be rigoꝛous ouer thy neighbour. their treſpaſſes, the heauenly father ſhall forgeue you. But if ye will not forgeue men their treſpaſſes, no more ſhall your father forgeue you your treſpaſſes. Again, when ye ſtande and praye, forgeue if ye haue ought againſt any man, that your father alſo which is in heauen, may forgeue you your treſpaſſes. And vnto what other end did Chriſte put forthe the ſimilitude and parable of the ſeruaunte, that ought hys Lord ten thouſand talents, which were alforgeuen him and notwithſtanding afterward the whole debt required of him again, becauſe he ſo cruelly handled his felow ſeruaunt; ſo ꝙ he was caſt into priſon, till he ſhuld pay al that was due vnto his Lord: but only to ſhew, that as we handle our neighbors and ſuch as are debters vnto vs, euen ſo will God handle vs again. This euidently appeareth by the concluſion of the Parable, where Chriſt ſpeaketh on this wiſe: So like wiſe ſhall my heauenly father do alſo vnto you, if ye from your heartes forgeue not euery one his brother their treſpaſſes. Hereto belongeth the ſayinge of S. Paule: As the choſen of God, holy and beloued, put on tender mercy, kindnes, humbleneſſe of minde, meekenes, long ſuffering, forbearing one a nother, and forgeuing one another: if any man haue a quarell againſte another, as Chriſt forgaue you, euen ſo doo ye. Howe we ought to behaue oure ſelues toward them that haue offended vs, the examples of our ſauiour Chriſt and of the moſt bleſſed martir S. Steuen do plainlye declare. Father. What if anye man preſume to praye vnto God, or to do any other good worke, not being in loue and charity, but bearing malice againſt his Chriſten brother, ſo that he by no means wil forgeue him, but ſeeke all meanes poſſible to be reuenged: is that hys prayer, or any other good worke that he doth, acceptable to God?

Sonne. So acceptable, as though he offered ſwines bloud vnto him or committed manſlaughter. What pleaſure God hathe in the prayers, giftes, and ſacrifices of the wicked, the hiſtory of Cain ſheweth openly. Therfore our ſauiour Chriſt geueth this commaundemente to all his people: ſayinge. If thou offereſt thy gifte at the altare, and there remembreſt that thy brother hathe oughte againſte thee: leaue there thine offring before the altare, and go thy way firſt, and be reconciled to thy brother, and then come, and offer thy gifte: who ſo euer ſaith either the Lordes prayer or any other for the remiſſyon of his ſinnes, not being in loue and charitie, doth nothing els, then aſk hengaunce of himſelfe, and haſteth the wrathe of God to fall vpon him. For ſuche as we are to them that haue offended vs: euen ſuche ſhal we finde God to vs againe. If the merciful ſhal receiue mercy: then ſhall the vnmercifull receiue no mercye, as S. James ſayeth: The iudgement ſhalbe without mercy to him, that hathe ſhewed no mercy. The parable of the endebted ſeruaunt whereof we ſpake before, declareth openly, what they may looke for at the hande of God, whych are vnmercifull to their neighbours. His Lord and maſter had forgeuen that ſeruant all the debt. And he ſtraightwais going out, founde one of his felowes, which ought him an hundred pence:

And he wold not, but went, and cast him into prison, til he should pay the debt. His Lord vnderstanding this, called that malitious and cruell seruaunt vnto him, and said: O thou vngratious seruaunt, I forgaue thee al that debt, when thou desiredst me. Shuldest not thou also haue had compassion on thy felow, euen as I hadde pity on thee? And his Lorde was wroth, and deliuered him to the Jailers, til he shuld pay al that was due vnto him. S. Father. Seing it is so necessarilye required vnto the forgeuenes of oure sinnes at the hand of God: that we also must forgeue them that offende vs or els we shal neuer be forgeuen: it foloweth (as me thinketh) that ỳ cause why God forgeueth vs our sinnes, is because we haue fyrst forgeuẽ them that haue sinned against vs. Sonne. Nothing les, my deare father. For so shuld it folow, that the remission of our sinnes shuld not come of the fre fauour and mere mercy of God, but rather of our deserues. But that were contrary to the wholsome doctrine of the holy scripture, which teacheth, that we are saued by grace thorow fayth, and that it is the gift of God, and cometh not of workes, least anye man shuld boast him self. Not by the dedes of righteousnesse, which we wrought, saith S. Paule, but according to his mercy hath he saued vs by the fountain of the new birth, and renewing of the holye ghost which he shed on vs aboundantly thorough Jesus Christ oure sauiour, that we being iustified by his grace, should be made heires, according to the hope of euerlasting life. God him selfe sayeth by the Prophet. Thy destruction, O Jsrael, cometh of thy selfe: but thy saluation commeth of me onlye. Oure sauioure Christe sayeth: ye haue not chosen me, but I haue chosen you. And S. Jhon sayeth: Herein is loue, not that we loued God, but that he loued vs, and sent hys sonne to be the satisfaction for our synnes.

The forgeuing of our neighbor is not the cause why god forgeueth vs.

more then nowe, we that are iustified by his bloude, shall be saued from wrath thorowe him. For if when we were ennemies, we were reconciled to God by the deathe of his sonne: muche more, seinge we are reconciled, we shall be preserued by his life. All these and many such like sentences of the holy scripture shoulde be founde false and untrue: yea the order of Goddes doctrine shoulde not onlye be perverted, but also subuerted, if that your supposition mighte be founde true. For God forgeueth not vs our sinnes, because we forgeue the that haue offended vs, so that thorowe oure benefite fyrste shewed vnto oure neighboure, we shoulde prouoke hym to be beneficiall againe to vs, and forgeue vs oure debtes and Trespasses: but he forgeueth vs franckelye and freelye wythoute respect eyther of our former or latter good woorkes of his owne free fauoure, gratious goodnes and mere mercy for his sonne Christ Jesus sake, in whom. or for whose sake, he is wel pleased with manne, as he sayeth by the Prophette, I am, yea I am he, whiche putteth awaye thy synnes, yea and that for myne owne sake, and I wyll remember thy faultes no more. Tell me, if thou haue any thinge, wherewith thou mayest be made righteous &c. Note. Luce. 1. Esay. 43

In consideration where of Dauid prayeth for the forgeuenesse of hys synnes on this manner. For thy names sake, O Lorde, forgeue me my sinne, for it is muche. Againe, haue mercye on me (O God) accordynge to thy greate mercye. And accordinge to the multytude of thy tender Compassyons doo awaye my wyckednesse. Dauid desyreth not forgeuenesse of his synnes at the hande of god, because he hadde fyrste of all forgeuen suche as hadde offended him, but for goddes owne names sake, and for his greate mercye and tender compassyons sake, he craueth to be forgeuen. For what thyng canne we woorke, although neuer so good and godly, that mayes worthelye deserue the leaste of all goddes benefites: whan all oure ryghteousnesses are lyke to a polluted and defyled cloth: as Jacob sayd to god in his prayer: O Lord, I am not worthye of the leaste of all the mercyes and truthe, whyche thou haste shewed vnto thy seruaunt. The Prophette Daniell prayeth also on this manner: O my God, encline thine eare, and harken, at the leaste for thine owne sake open thine eyes: Behold how we be desolate: yea and the city also, which is called after thy name: for, we doo not caste oure Prayers before ther in oure owne righteousnesse, but onlye in thy great mercies. O Lord, heare. O Lord, forgeue. O Lord consider: tary not ouerlong, but for thine sake do it. Psal. 29 Psal. 50 Esay. 64 Gene. 32 Dan. 9.

That God doothe not forgeue vs oure synnes, because we haue fyrste forgeuen oure offenders, but rather that we oughte to forgeue suche as haue offended vs, because God hathe fyrste of all forgeuen vs oure offences: the order of the Parable of the endebted seruaunt shewe moste euidently.

For in that we reade, that when the seruaunt was not able withal, that he had to discharge the debt, and his Lorde and master moued with mercy, pity and compassion toward him, frankly and freely forgaue it him: is plainly declared, that God fyrst of al forgeueth oure sinnes, debts and trespasses. Again, whereas we read that the Lord was angrye with his seruaunt, whome he had forgeuen so greate a debt, because he so cruelly handled his felow seruant, for so litle and slender a debt, and shewed him no fauor at all, and therfore mooste worthely for his vnmercifulnesse he was cast into the pryson at hys Lordes commaundemẽt: it is plainly setforth vnto vs, that it is our duety, which haue receiued so great a benefite of God, euen remission of all oure sinnes, to be beneficiall again to our felow seruaunts, and according to our Lordes commaundement to forgeue them, as he hath al redy forgeuen vs, yea and that so much the more, because the debt, which we forgeue oure debters, is but litle & almoste of no valoure: where as the debt, which we owe vnto our Lorde and master is great and infinite. O thou vngratious seruant, sayd the lord, I forgaue thee all that debte, when thou desyredst me: shouldest not thou also haue had compassion on thy felow, euen as I had pity on thee? The obediente and loue, whiche we owe vnto God and vnto his holy law, oughte to moue vs to be the same to oure neighboure, that God is to vs. Hathe God dealte mercifullye with vs, and forgeuen vs oure debtes? Euen so oughte we louingly to deale wyth oure debters, and not to be cruel against them, yea and that so much the more, because God oure mooste mercifull, gentle, louing, bounteous and liberall father hathe in his holye woorde commaunded vs so to doo. When Simon Peter came vnto Christ, and sayde vnto him, Lorde, howe ofte shall I forgeue my brother, if he sinne agaynste me, tyll seuen times? Jesus saide vnto him: I saye not vnto thee, vntill seuen times, but seuentye times seuen times. Agayne he sayth: If thy brother trespas against the, rebuke him: & if he repent, forgeue him. And though he sinne against thee vii. times in a daye, and vii. times in a daye tourne againe to thee, sayinge: It repenteth me: Thou shalt forgeue him.

Thus se we, that we are bound by the commaundemente of God to forgeue them that sinne against vs, not to this end, that therowe our forgeuing we should deserue at the hand of God to be forgeuen (for that were nothing els then to disanull the free grace of God, and to make the merites of Christ vaine and of none effecte.) But to declare our obedient loue and louing obediẽce toward the blessed wyl and holy commaundement of our most merciful father, which hath commaunded vs to forgeue such as trespasse against vs, euen as he of his great goodnes hath all readye pardoned and forgeuen vs all our sinnes. Again, that it shuld be a sure certificat & an vndouted testimony vnto our consciences, that our sinnes are forgeuẽ vs of our heauẽlye father, that we are at peace with him, that he loueth vs, and in fine, that he hathe chosen vs to be hys Sonnes and heyres, yea yea and fellowe heires of his glorious kingdom, oyth hys Sonne Christe Jesus. Father. I perceiue nowe by thy woordes, that remission of oure sinnes commeth vnto vs from God freely, and wythout all merites and woorkes on oure behalfe for Christ Jesus sake thorow faith: and that our forgeuing of suche as offende vs, is not the cause, whye God forgeueth vs oure sinnes, but his owne meare mercye, gratious goodnesse, and free fauoure: Again, that we, whiche haue all ready receiued forgeuenes of all our debtes at the hand of oure heauenly father, should forgeue likewise our offenders their debtes and trespasses for two causes: the fyrst is because God hathe commaunded vs so to doo, whose commaundemente to disobey is more then double wickednesse: the seconde is, that we in forgeuynge oure neighboure, shoulde be perfectlye assured and certefied in oure conscience wythoute all doubtinge, that our heauenlye father hath also forgeuen vs all our debtes, sinnes, and wickednesses: whyche will alwayes be the same to vs, that we are to oure neighboure, so that if we gladlye and freelye forgeue them that trespasse agaynste vs, it is a mooste manifest argumente and vndoubted assuraunce, that we are forgeuen of God: but contrariwise, if we be vnmerciful, cruell and vengeaunce thirstye agaynste oure neighboure, so that we will not forgeue him, but seeke to be reuenged, and to rewarde euill for euill, by this meanes neglectinge and nothinge regarding the blessed will of God, whiche hathe commaunded vs to forgeue oure offenders: than it is a mooste sure signe, that oure sinnes are not forgeuen, but that the whotte wrathe and fearse vengaunce of God abideth still vpon vs, and that we remaine in a mooste dampnable state: seing that the propertye of suche as be in the fauoure of God, and haue obtained remission of their sinnes, is to be the verye same to their neighboure, that they feele in theyr conscience God is vnto them. Sonne. You saye truthe. For as Sainte Jhon saythe: Euerye one that loueth, is borne of God, and knoweth not. But he that loueth not, knoweth not God: for God is loue. If anye manne saye, I loue God, and hate his brother, he is a lier. For he that loueth not his brother, whome he hathe seene? how can he loue God, whome he hath sene? And this commaundemente haue we of hym, that he whyche loueth God, shoulde also loue his brother.

A short rehersall of the thinges entreted of in this petition.

1. Ihon. 4.

And verelye if we did consider the greate goodnesse of god in forgeuing vs our debtes, being in dede great, manye, yea and innumerable: we should easlye be moued to forgeue those small and slender debtes, whiche other owe vnto vs. For looke how muche ten thousande Talentes are in noumber and waight being compared with an hondred pence: euen so farre doo oure debtes, whyche we owe vnto God, surmounte and passe the debtes, whyche oure neyghbour owe vnto vs. And who wyll not gladlye forgeue an hondred pence, to be discharged of the debt of ten thousand talentes. Father. Well sayde my sonne. We haue sufficyentlye conferred of this petityon. Let me nowe heare what foloweth,

Note.

Sonne. The ne.. ition is the first in nomber: and this is it.

The vi. petition. And lead vs not into temptation. Father. Wherfore hath our sauior Christ taught vs thus to praye. Sonne. You remember, that in the last petition we heard, that we are all sinners and debters vnto the Lord our God, and owe his deuine Maiestie so much, that we neyther are, nor neuer shall be with al our good dedes and merites able to satisfy him, in so much that of necessity we are enforced to flie vnto Gods mercy for the release of this our so great debt, which he frely forgeueth vs for his dere sonne Christ Jesus sake thorow faithe. Now least we should lose so greate a benefite, I meane remission of our sinnes, and fall againe into the old captiuity and misery, where in we were most miserably detained of Satan, before we receyued and tasted so great kindnesse at the hand of God, & so become worse then we were afore: (For of whome a man is ouercome, saith sainte Peter, vnto the same he is broughte in bondage. For if they (after

For it hadde beene better for them, not to haue knowen the way of righteousnes, then after they haue known it, to turn from the holye cōmaundement that was geuen vnto thē. But the same is hapned to them, that is vsed to be spoken by the true prouerbe: The dogge is turned to his owne vomet againe: and the sow

We are taught in this petition, to pray vnto oure heauenlye father, that he wil most gratiously assist and aide vs with the power of his holy spirit against al our enemies, and preserue vs in that most blessed state, wherin he hath set vs by forgeuing vs our debtes, that frō hencefoorth we may liue with fre cōsciences, glad mindes and thereful heartes, and serue the Lord our God in holinesse and righteousnes all the daies of our life. Another of our ennemies is the flesshe, whiche is an aduersarye so muche the more to be feared, because she is domesticall, and one of houshold, yea nourished and broughte vp euen in our owne breaste. This ennemye ceaseth neither nighte nor daye to allure vs into her nettes, yea and that not tirantlike, but frendlike, while she with her honye like, yet hellike and poysonfull pleasures goo about to infecte vs, and to allure vs from godlinesse to beastlinesse, from vertue to synne, as Sainte Paule sayeth: The flesshe lusteth againste the spyrite: and the spirite againste the flesshe. These are alwaies contrarye one to the other. But they that belong vnto Christe, haue crucifyed the flesshe with the affectes and lustes there of. This greuous ennemye the flesshe hathe deceiued manye good and godlye men in times paste, as Sampson, Dauid, Salomon &c. and still doothe at thys present, so that she raigneth now not as a vice, but as a lady, Quene and Empresse.

The third ennemy is the worlde, which both with his pleasures and richesse doothe so entangle menne in thys oure age, that he seemeth to raygne alone lyke a God. All folowe the worlde, euen from the highest to the lowest, from the kynge to the subiecte: and from the Bishop to the Deacon. They are all Mammonistes and worldlinges. They all embrace the fraile and transitorye thinges of thys worlde, and vtterlye neglecte the constante and immortall treasures of the worlde to come. They all seke those thinges that appertaine vnto them selues, but not that belonge vnto Jesus Christe. They are louers rather of pleasure, then of God. I passe ouer all the other infernall armye, malitious deuils, wicked spirites, dampned soules, cruell Tiraunts, bloudye Antichristes &c. which dailye do nothing els then seke our destruction. These, these goo about to bring vs vnto vilany. These with their wicked and deceytful temptations labour vnto the vttermooste of all their powers to bring vs againe into the pestiferous puddle of synne, and to defyle our selues with those most vngodly abhominations, from the which God of his great mercy hath purged and cleansed vs by the bloude of his sonne thorowe faithe. Nowe for as much as we haue so manye and so greuous ennemies, whyche seknge oure destruction dailye tempte and moue vs vnto wickednesse, that by this meanes we maye fall from the fauoure of God into the dreadfull pytte of euerlasting dampnation, and lose that mooste gratious benefite, whyche was for Christes sake geuen vs of our heauenly father, I meane, remission of synnes: oure Sauioure Christ teacheth vs, in this petition to fle vnto our heauenly father, with feruent and faithfull prayer, and humbly to craue of him aid and healpe against these our moste greuous enemies, that we be not ouercome with their temptations and so become their miserable captiues and slaues: but rather that we ouercomminge them thorowe stronge faith in the power of our captaine Christe, maye become valeaunte, victorious and tryumphante conqueroures vnto the glorye and praise of Goddes mooste blessed name. Father. Doth not God also tempt vs? Sonne. I graūt: but yet farre otherwise, then satan tempteth vs. Father. What difference is there? Sonne, Very much and great. Satan tempteth vnto this end, that he may accuse, condemne and destroy: and therfore he is called the tempter, the calumniatoure or quarell piker, and the accuser of the brethren. He tempted Adam and Heua vnto disobedience, Caine vnto manne slaughter, the people of the olde worlde vnto oppression and leud liuing, the Sodomites vnto vnnatural lusts, the Israelites vnto Idolatry, Dauid vnto whordom & murder, Salomō vnto the worshipping of false gods, Manasses vnto ꝑ sheding of innocēt blud, Judas to ꝑ betraying of his master Christ, Symon Ma. vnto counterfet religiō, Ananias & Saphira vnto dissimulatiō, with innumerable thousandes more: so that the tentation of Satan tendeth only vnto euill, and the end therof, if it be obeyed and followed, is euerlasting damnation. But it is farre otherwyse with that tentation, wherewith God assaileth vs. For it tendeth not vnto euil but vnto good, not vnto desperation, but vnto consolation: not vnto damnation, but vnto saluation, as S. James saith: Let no man say when he is tempted (vnto euyll) that he is tempted of God. For as God can not be tempted with euill, so neither he hym selfe tempteth any man (vnto euill). But euery man is tempted, when he is drawē away, and entysed of his owne concupiscence. Then when lust hath conceaued, she bryngeth forth synne: and synne, whan it is fynished, bringeth forth death. 3. Reg. 11 4. Reg. 21. Math. 26. Act. 8. Act. 5. Iac. 1

And forasmuche as this temptacion of God bringeth rather good than euill, lyght then darkenes, lyfe then death: it may not vniustly be called a probation or triall of ỹ faithful, seing that by it the wheat is knowen from the tares, the sonnes of the kyngdome from the chil dren of that euill, the true Christians from the dissembling hypocrites, the vessels of mercy from the vessels of wrath. This temptation bryngeth to the faithfull rather gladnes then sadnes. Therfore saith S. James: Brethren, count it for an exceading ioye, when ye fall in to diuers temptacions, knowyng this, that the triall of your faith bryngeth forth pacience: but let pacience haue her perfecte worke, that ye may be perfecte and sounde, lackyng nothyng. Againe, blessed is he that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receaue the croune of lyfe, whiche the Lorde hathe promysed to them that loue hym. Of this temptacion speaketh Dauid also on this maner: Examine me (O Lorde) and proue me: trye out my reynes and my heart. For thy louing kindnes is before myne eyes, and I will walke in thy truthe. Againe, trie me O God, and seke the grounde of myne heart: proue me and examine my thoughtes. Ones againe, with fyre haste thou tried me, and yet was there none vnrighteousnes found in me. S. Peter also saith Derely beloued, maruell not, that ye are proued by fyre, whiche thing is to trie you, as thoughe some straunge thyng happened vnto you: but reioyce inasmuche as ye be partakers of Christes passions: ỹ when his glory appeareth, ye may be mery and glad. Whosoeuer determineth to professe Christe aryght, and to be a true Christiane, he must determine with himself to suffer temptation, and not to looke to lyue in wealth, ioye & pleasure, as the wyse man sayth: My sonne, if thou wilt come into the seruice of God, stande fast in righteousnes and feare, and prepare thy soule vnto temptation. For in this exercyse hath God from the beginning trayned vp his people, whome he hathe loued, that he myght proue and trie their fayth, loue, hope, cōstancie, obedience, &c. as the vertuous matrone Judith sayeth: Call to remēbraunce how our fathers in tymes past were tempted, that they myght be proued, if they worshipped their God aryght. They ought to remember, howe our father Abraham beyng tempted and tried thorowe many Math. 13 Iacob. 1 Psal. 26 Psal. 139 1. Pet. 4 Eccle. 2 Iudith. 8

tribulations, was founde a louer and frende of God. So was Isaac, so was Jacob, so was Moses, and all they that pleased God, beyng tried thorowe many troubles, were founde stedfast in faith. Againe, they that receiued not their temptations with the feare of God, but put them selues forth with vnpacience and murmurynge against God, perished of the destroyer, and were slayne of serpẽts.

Sap.3 The author of the booke of wysdome sayth: God proueth them, and findeth them mete for him selfe: yea as the gold in the fornace, doth he trie them, and receaueth them as a burnt offring, and when the Iob.23 tyme cometh, they shall be loked vpon. Job sayeth of hym self thus:

Psal.66. He tried me as the golde in the fornace. The Psalmographe lykewyse speakyng of hym selfe and of all the other faythful, sayth: thou, O God, hast proued vs: Thou also haste tried vs, lyke as syluer is tried. Thou broughtest vs into the snare, and layed trouble vpon our loynes. Thou suffredest menne to ryde ouer our heades: We went thorowe fyre and water, and thou broughtest vs out into a

Tobi.2 wealthy place. In the history of Tobie we reade, that God suffred the temptation of blyndnes to faull vpon hym, that he should be an example of pacience to his posteritie. Againe, in that same booke it is wrytten: Remember howe our fathers were tempted, that they

Eccle.34 myght be proued. For as the wyse man sayeth: what knoweth he,

Esay.26 that is not tempted. Vexation geueth vnderstandyng, sayeth the Prophet.

Thus see we, howe God in all ages euen from the beginnynge hath sent temptations to all good and godly menne, not to destroye them, as Satan goeth about with his temptations, but to proue, trie, and examine them, whether they be cõstant in faith, loue, hope, pacience, obedience &c. that by this meanes they myghte be founde

1.Pet.1 the more perfecte and glorious, as S. Peter sayeth: Ye are kept by the power of God thorowe fayth vnto saluation: which is prepared all ready to be shewed in the laste tyme, in the whiche ye reioyce, though nowe for a season (if neade requyre) ye are in heauynes, thorowe manifolde temptatiõs, that the trial of the fayth beyng much more precious then golde that perysheth (though it be tried with fyre) myght be founde vnto prayse, glorie and honoure at the appearyng of Jesus Christe. Father. Howe doth God tempte vs? Sonne. Sometyme by prosperitie, and sometyme by aduersitie. Father. Howe by prosperitie? Sonne. God many tymes blessed his people with the aboundance both of corporall & worldly thynges, to tempt proue, and trie them, whether they wyll continue styll in that humblenes of mynde, that becometh true Christians: knowledge the liberalitie of God, lyue worthy his kyndnes: vse these giftes vnto the glory of his name, and at all tymes be thankefull for his benefites. Father. Should we not thus do? Sonne. We should do it in deade,

Gene.8 but who doth it? So corrupt is our nature, so wycked is our disposition, so bent vnto euyl are al our senses euen from our very cradles, that as experience teacheth, the most parte of the worlde greatly a-buseth the benefite of God, insomuche that they forget God, so farre is it of, that they walke worthy of his great kyndnes & liberalitie: yea to saye the truthe, the temptation of prosperitie hathe plucked more from God, and allured them vnto wickednes, then the temptation of aduersitie, as both the wrightinges of God and menne, besydes daily experience, abundantly declare. Are not these the words of Moses concerning the people of Israell: He that should haue ben vpright, when he wared fatte spurned with his hele. Thou art well fedde: thou arte growen thicke: thou arte euen laden with fatnes. And he forsoke God his maker, and regarded not the God of his saluation. They prouoked him to anger with straunge Goddes: euen with abhominations prouoked they him. They offered vnto deuils, and not to God, euen to Goddes, whome they knewe not: to newe Gods that came newly vp, whome their fathers feared not. The Prophet Jeremie also saieth in the persone of God: I haue fed them to the full, and they haue fallen to whoryng, and playde the Ruffins in harlottes houses. In the desyre of vncleanly luste, they are become lyke the stoned horse: euery man neyeth at his neighbours wyfe. Should I not correct this, sayth the Lord? Should I not be auenged of euery people, that is lyke vnto this? Againe, they are waxen fatte and wealthy, and they haue vtterly set at naught my wordes. The histories of the holy Byble shewe plainly, that so longe as the people of Israell were assaulted with the temptation of aduersitie, & were kept lowe, and nourtured vnder the crosse: they called vppon God, and walked in the obedience of his holy worde: but when they had peace and quietnes, health and wealth, rychesse and aboundance of all thinges: then ranne they on whoryng after straunge Gods, fel to bancketing, to dauncing, to adulterie, to idlenes, to oppression of the poore, and moste wickedly lyued without the feare of God in all carnall securitie and fleshly quietnes: so great an aduersary vnto true godlines is the to muche abundaunce of worldly thynges, except it be thorowly tempered with the loue and feare of God: which thinge we reade also of other what was the destruction of the Sodomites, of the Gomorrians, and of other that dwelte about them, but wealth and plentie of all thinges, as the Prophet sayeth: Saul at the beginning when he was made kyng, was good, and pleased God, but after that he grewe to wealth, he waxed proude, and loste the spirite of god. Dauid so long as he was vnder the crosse, walked in the wayes of the Lorde: but whan he came once vnto prosperitie, and to lyue wealthely and idely and without care, he streyght ways forgate God, and became bothe an adulterer and a manslear. What brought Salomon vnto suche dissolution of lyfe, that he had vii. hundred Quenes, and three hundred Concubines, as I may speake nothyng of his idolatrie and worshippyng of false Goddes: was it not to muche prosperitie and aboundaunce of all thynges? Hieroboam, before he was exalted to be a kyng, was well commended and fauoured: but comming ones vnto the crowne of Israel, he streightwayes wrought abhomination in the sight of the Lorde. I let passe Roboam, Amasias, Ozias, Manasses, Nabuchodonozor, Aman, Ptolomeus, Antiochus, Herode, the rich gloton, with diuers other mencioned in the holy scripture, whiche throw the to much wealth and abundance of thinges, fell into intollerable pryde, & afterwarde into many great absurdities and incouueniences. It is truly sayde of S. Paul: they that haue a desire to be riche, fall into temptation and snares (of the deuill) and into many folysche and noysome lustes, whiche drowne men into perdition and destruction. For the desire of money is the roote of all euill: whiche whyle some lusted after, they erred from the faythe, and tangled them selues with many sorowes. But thou man of God flie suche thinges. Folow righteousnes, godlines, fayth, loue, pacience, mekenes. Godlines is great richesse: if a man be content with that he hath. For we brought nothing into the worlde, neither may we cary any thing out. But whē we haue fode and raiment, we must therwith be cōtent. King Salomon therfore wyshing to be ouercome neither with the temptation of prosperitie or aduersitie, prayed to God on this maner: Twoo thinges haue I required of thee, O Lord, that thou wilt not denie me, before I die. Remoue fro me vanitie & lies: geue me neither pouertie nor riches: only, graunt me a necessary liuing: lest if I be to full, I denie thee, & saye: who is the Lorde? And least I being cōstrained through pouertie, fall vnto stealing, and take the name of my God in vayne.

Father. What and howe great a lett wealth is vnto true godlines, the history of the young man, of whome we reade in the gospell, maketh plaine and euident. For whā Christ said vnto him: Go thy way sell all that thou haste, and geue to the poore, & thou shalt haue treasure in heauen: and come, folowe me, and take vp my crosse vpō thy shoulders: he was discomforted, saith the Euangelist, because of that saying, and went away mourning: for he had great possessions.

Sonne. It is not therfore without cause, that Christ cōpared richesse to thornes, and sayth that they smother vp the woorde of God: and that no man can serue both God and Mammon: but either he shall hate the one, and loue the other, or els leane to the one, & despyse the other. Father. But for as muche as health of bodye, rychesse, publique peace, tranquillitie, victorie ouer the ennemies, wealthe, abundance of all thynges, and suche lyke gyftes appertaynynge vnto thys mortall lyfe, are the benefytes of God, and hys good blessynges: Tell me howe we oughte to vse them, that we doo not abuse them, nor be ouercome of them.

Howe worldly thinges are to be vsed.

Sonne. Amonge all the bodelye, and worldlye gyftes, wherewyth God blesseth manye, I wil take rychesse for an example. Is any manne endewed with rychesse? Let hym consyder, that God hathe not onelye enryched hym wyth the goodes of thys worlde, that he shoulde bee the Lorde and owner of them, but also to tempte, trye, and proue him, whether he wyll vse them rightly & truly, according to his holy wil:

Of riches

or rather suffer hym selfe to be ouercome with the inordinate and vn lawfull desyre and detayning of them. Nowe if this man do so vse, yea rather abuse, his goodes, that he either spend them away wastfully, prodigally and riotously in bancketing, in superfluous buylding, in costly clothing, in dayne playing, in wycked companye kepyng, as we reade in the Gospel of the wastful sonne: or els in oppressing his poore and neady neyghbour: then is he ouercome of his ryches, and become a miserable moneyslaue, and shalbe damned. But contrariwyse, if he vse his substaunce and ryches aryght, and vnto that ende for the whiche God gaue them vnto him, that is to saye, vnto the nourishing of gods ministers, whiche preache and set forth his holy worde, & vnto the releefe and socour of the poore and neady Christians, whiche are of the housholde of faith, and vnto the doing of suche good, godlye and charitable actes, & in fyne, knowledgeth God to be the geuer of them, and therefore is thankefull to him for them, and in all poyntes studie to dispose them accordyng to his blessed pleasure and holy commaundement: then is he not ouercome of his riches, neyther are they to hym any temptation vnto euill, but rather an allurement vnto all goodnes and godlynes. And so lykewyse of all the other gyftes and benefites, wherewith God blesseth men in this worlde. But forasmuche as many are not only tempted, but also ouercome with the temptation of prosperitie, as we haue also at this present daye (alas for pitie) to many for an example, yea & that among them, whiche in the tyme of the crosse were so zelous for the Lordes cause, that their very lyfe was not dere vnto them, much les the pelff of this worlde, and nowe contrariwyse are so drowned with the pleasures & rychesse of this worlde, that they may iustlye seme to be very worldlinges and epicures: Therfore lest they shuld so go forth and perysshe: God assayeth them anotherway, and assayleth them with an other kynde of temptation. Father. What is that? Sonne. The temptation of aduersitie, as sycknes of body, pouertie, infamie, warre, pestilence, famyn, persecution, imprysonment, tormentes &c. Father. Why doth God sende these euyls vnto vs? Sonne. Not destroye vs, but either to admonysshe vs of our synne, or to trye our faithe, loue, obedience, pacience &c, or for certaine other causes, whereof we wyll speake hereafter. And with this kynde of temptation God doth ofter trie and proue his people, then with the temptation of prosperitie. For as our grand captain Christ in this world was tempted with many and dyuers kyndes of temptation, & yet not with the temptation of prosperitie, but of aduersitie, accordyng as it is written, the sonne of man must first suffer, and afterwarde enter into glory: so lykewyse is it conuenient, that his souldiours follow their maister Christe, take the crosse vpon them, and so stryue to enter into the glorie of their Lorde and maister. For as S. Paul sayeth, by many tribulations muste we enter into the kyngdome of God. And verely this kynde of temptation is more profitable to the that be of the housholde of fayth, then the temptation of prosperitie.

Shed he not innocent blonde exceadynge muche, tyll he replenyshed Hierusalem from corner to corner? He wrought exceadynge muche wyckednesse in the syghte of the Lozde: not only he hym selfe, but he leade the people also out of the waye, to doo more wyckedlye, then dyd the heathen people, whome the Lozde destroyed before the chyldren of Israell. The Lozde therefore 2. Par. 33 thought hym to greate myserye, so that he was taken prysoner, bounde with chaynes, and caried awaye to Babylon. Nowe dothe God proue and trye this dyng Manasses with the temptation of aduersitie: whyche worketh so frutefully in hym, that he falleth vnto repentaunce, humbleth hym selfe exceadyngly before the God of his fathers, besechath the Lozde his God, and maketh intercession vnto hym: in so muche that the Lozde was entreated of hym, and heard his prayer, and broughte hym agayne to Hierusalem into his kyngdome.

Father. This is a comfortable history, and a good hearynge.

Sonne. Yea of this history maye we learne not onely the greate goodnes and vnoutspeakeable mercies of the Lozde oure God towarde synners, but also what our dutie is agayne toward God, when he mooste iustlye assayleth vs for oure synnes wyth the temptation of aduersytie. Father. What is that? Sonne. Not to murmure or grudge agaynst God, not to thynke God vnryghteous, not impacientlye to beare the vysitation of God, not to goo forthe to fyght of malyce and obstinacie, not to defie God: but humblye and euen from the verye harte to submytte our selues to the blessed wyll of God, to graunte our synnes, to confesse that we haue not onelye deserued those afflictions and troubles, which God hathe layde vpon vs, but also innumerable mo, yea the very paynes of hell: and to desyre God for hys mercies sake to geue vs grace, patientlye, quyetlye and thankefullye to beare that hys Crosse, and whan his good pleasure is eyther to take it awaye, or elles to mytigate and ease it, that we may with pacient and thankefull heartes suffer it, and alwaye doo that thynge, that maye be pleasaunt and acceptable in his Godly syght. what we ought to do in aduersitie.

Father. God geue vs all grace so to doo. For suche as murmure and grudge agaynste God, shall not escape vnpunyshed. The pacient and thankefull sufferer, shall obtayne all good thynges at the hande of God, as God sayeth by the Prophete: If ye will returne and bee quiet: ye shall be safe. For in sylence and hope shall Esay. 30 that strengthe bee: Or as the common englyshe translation hath: In repentaunce and in reast shall ye bee saufe: In quyetnesse and sure confydence shall be youre strengthe. The Prophete Jere- Ieremy. 3
mie also sayeth: The Lozde is good to them that truste in hym, and to the soule that seaketh after hym.

Iob.13 It is good with sylence and pacience to tary for the sauyng healthe of the Lorde. Hereto agreeth the saying of Job: Beholde, thoughe God slaye me, yet will I put my trust in hym. Sonne. Thys can we not doo of our selues, except it be geuen vs from aboue. For of our selues in all our afflictions, we can none otherwyse doo, than with impacience, murmur, and grudge against the Lorde God yea and blaspheme his holy name. And this is nothyng els then to be ouercome with the temptation of aduersitie, from the whiche we desyre God in this our petition to be deliuered. But God is faithefull, whiche will not suffer vs to be tempted aboue our strēgth, but will in the myddes of the temptation, make a waye that he maye be able to kepe it. Father. Well sayde my sonne: But doth God assayle synners onely with this temptatiō of aduersitie? Sonne. Before God the holyest and moste perfect of all menne are synners, neither can any manne saye, my heart is cleane, and I am pure from sinne: and to saye the truthe, synne is the principall and chiefe cause of all the plagues and punishementes, that God layeth vppon vs, as the holy scryptures testifie in many places: notwithstandinge God many tymes assayleth his dere people and welbeloued seruauntes, (without any respect had to synne) with this kynde of temptation, vnto this ende, that he may proue and trie their faith, loue and obedience toward hym, and that they may be an example of pacience & of long sufferyng to other. Father. Whome dyd God so handle? Sonne. The worde of God remembryng diuerse. But as I may let passe Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, with many other, which wer all the true and faithfull seruauntes of God: let vs consyder Job that moste precious pearle of perfect pacience. The holy scripture describeth him to be a perfect and iust man, suche one as feared God, and eschewed euill. Nowe marke howe God dealte with hym, that he might proue his fayth and pacience. All that euer Job had both in goodes and cattell, was destroyed with fyre from heauen, or caried awaye by enemies. His chyldren also, as they were makyng merry together, were slayne, the house thorowe a myghty great wynde falling downe vpon them. Moreouer Job was smytten with marueylous sore byles, from the sole of his foote, vnto his crowne so that he sat vpon the grounde in the ashes & scraped of the fylthe of his sores with a potchard. Who beholding this most miserable state of Job, will not thinke him to be thus strikē of God for his sinnes? Notwithstanding euen by the reporte of gods owne mouthe, there was none like Job in the land. For he was a perfect & a iust mā, such a one as feared God, eschewed euil, & cōtinued stil in his godlines, yea & that not only in prosperitie, but also in aduersitie. Wherefore then did God thus plague hym? Verely, first of all, to proue and trie his faith and loue to God warde: whiche remayneth perfecte and constant, euen in the myddest of his plagues. Secondlye, to make hym an example of pacience to his posterytie.

why god laieth his crosse vpon the faithfull.

For Job in al his troubles offended not God neither in word nor in dede:

ledge no, he dyd not once murmure agaynst God, but quietly, and patiently yielded vnto theis and suche lyke wordes: Naked came I out of my mothers woombe, and naked shall I turne thither againe, The Lorde gaue, and the Lorde hath taken awaye, euen as it hath pleased the Lorde, so is it come to passe: blessed be the name of the Lorde. Againe, if we haue receaued prosperitie at the hande of God, ought we not also to receaue aduersitie? Thirdly, to beare downe euerie temptation, stoning, kinde, bountifull and liberall, God is to them, that patiently abide his good pleasure in temptation and troubles. For the scripture declareth, that when God had tried the faith and patience of Job, he afterward made him richer then euer he was before, both in goodes, cattell and children, and he lyued after his trouble an hundreth and xl. yeares, so that he sawe his children, and his childrens children into the fourth generation. Of this Job S. James speaketh thus: ye haue heard of the patience of Job, & haue knowen what end the Lorde made. For the Lorde is very pitifull & mercifull. And of the holy Prophets he speaketh on thys manner like wyse: Take the Prophetes for an ensample of sufferyng aduersitie, and of patience, which spake in the name of the lorde. Behold, we count them happy, whyche endure.

Thus se we, that God doth not only tempt the synners with aduersitie, to call them vnto repentaunce and amendement of lyfe: but he also with the same temptation prouoketh the godly and righteous, that by this meanes they being tried as golde in the fornace with many and diuerse temptations and troubles, may the more gloriously set forth their fayth and loue, whyche they haue to God: submit their wyll to Gods good wyll and pleasure: beare patiently, thankefully and obediently, what so euer crosse God layeth vppon them: confesse the name and truthe of God boldly and stoutly, come lyfe come death: not murmure or grudge against God: not thynke that that temptation, trouble or aduersitie chaunceth to them anye otherwyse then by the determinate counsell and singulare prouidence of God: not suffer their hartes to depart from God and from his holy worde for the losse of any worldly thyng, although neuer so precious and deare: but bothe in prosperitie and aduersitie at all tymes vnto the vttermoste of their power auaunce and set forthe the glorie of God and of his true Religion. Father. Come these promises to the faythfull to their profyt, or rather for their disprofit? Sonne. Farther no doubt great profit and singular auauntage, as the Psalmographe sayth: It is for my great commoditie, that thou hast brought me lowe, that by this meanes I maye learne thyne ordinances. For herof cometh it to passe, as we haue heard, that the faythe, loue, constancie, obedience &c. of the Godly is tryed, euen as golde is in the fornace, and maye much more glorious and excellent in the sight of God, but also before menne vnto the glorye and prayse of oure heauenlye Father. Father. Thys tryall then of the faythfull, whyche is here called, Temptation, although it be it be neuer so greuous to the old man & contrary to his fleshly lustes and filthy desires, is no token of Gods anger towarde suche, as be thus tempted. Sonne. It is rather a moste certen argument & sure token of Gods dere fauoure and singulare good will toward them. For whome the Lorde loueth, him he chasteneth: yea he scourgeth euery sonne that he receiueth, as God him selfe saieth: As many as I loue, I rebuke and chasten. By many tribulations must we enter in to the kyngdome of God. All that will liue godly in Christ Jesu, shal suffer persecution. Many are the troubles of the righteous: but the Lorde shall delyuer them from them all. For the Lorde kepeth all their bones, so that not one of them shall be broken. If ye endure chastenyng, sayeth S. Paule, God offereth hym selfe vnto you as vnto sonnes. What sonne is he, whome the father chasteneth not? If ye be not vnder correction, whereof all are partakers, then ye are bastardes and not sonnes &c. God norreth vs for our profyt to the intent that he may minister of his holynes vnto vs. No maner chastisyng for the present tyme, semeth to be ioyous but greuous: neuertheles afterwarde it bryngeth the quiet frute of ryghteousnes vnto them, whiche are exercysed thereby. Therefore sayeth the wyseman: My sonne despyse not the chastenynge of the Lorde, neyther fainte thou when thou arte rebuked of hym. Jesus the sonne of Syrach also sayeth: My sonne, if thou wylt come into the seruice of God, stande faste in ryghteousnes and feare, and arme thy soule to temptation. Father. Howe maye I perswade my selfe that this temptatiõ from God cometh of a loue and good will towarde me? Sonne. If you do consyder the ende thereof, you shall easely perswade youre selfe, that the temptation, wherewith God proueth you, proceadeth from Gods hartie good will towarde you. Father. Declare vnto me howe. Sonne. Fyrste forasmuche as the remnauntes of synne doo yet abyde in vs, and styll rage in our flesshe, continually labouryng to reygne and rule in vs as lordes and Emperours, and to ☞ subdue the spirite with all the godly motions thereof, and so at the laste vtterly to plucke vs from the fauour of God, and to throwe vs headlong into the whourle pytte of euerlasting dampnatiõ: God tenderyng our saluation, tempteth vs with some aduersitie, and layeth his crosse vpon vs, that by this meanes the olde man with all his affectes and lustes maye be mortified and slayne in vs: and contrariwyse, the newe man with his motions encrease, grow, prosper, flourishe, reigne and triumphe, as thapostle sayeth: though our outwarde man perish, yet the inward man is renewed day by day. For our tribulation, whiche is short & light, prepareth an exceadinge & euerlasting weight of glory vnto vs, while we loke not on thinges which are sene, but on the thinges which are not sene. For ẏ thinges which are sene are tẽporal: but thinges which ar not sene, ar eternal.

why god tẽpted vs

2. Cor. 4

Now he that is thus tempted of God, & beareth this temtatiõ obediẽtly, quietly, pacientlye & thankefully, without any murmuring or grudging against God, euer submitting his will to ẏ good pleasure of God, of God, & therof take an occasion to amend his mānners & to better his life, can nous other wyse do then cōfesse, that this temtatiō came vnto him from the singular good will of God, yea & that vnto his great cōmoditie and vnoutspeakeable profit, as the Psalmographe sayth: It is for my great cōmoditie, that thou hast brought me low, that by this meanes I may learne thine ordinaunces. Veration geueth vnderstanding saith the Prophet. And the wyse man saieth: what knowledge hath he, that is not tempted? Psal.119 Esay. 28 Eccle.34

Secondly, God tēpteth vs, that he may proue & trie by some outward aduersite, whether we be truly his or not: whether our fayth, loue, feare, obedience &c. toward him be constant & stedfast, or otherwyse. And with this temtation he hath proued all good men from ỳ beginning, as that noble matrone Judith said in her oration vnto ỳ citesins of Bethulia: call to your remēbraunce howe our fathers in times past were tempted, that they might be proued, if they worshiped their God aright. Cal to remēbrance how our father Abraham being tēpted & tried thorow many tribulations, was found a louer & friende of God. So was Isaac, so was Jacob, so was Moses, & all they ỳ pleased God, being tried thorow many troubles, were found stedfast in faith. Again, they that receiued not their tēptations with the feare of God, but put thē selues forth with vnpaciēce & murmuring against God, perished of ỳ destroier, & were slain with serpēts. He whiche in this temtation, is not driuen backe frō God & from his holy word, but abideth cōstāt & stedfast in his professiō, is greatly blessed, & this temtation hath chaunced to him for his great cōmoditie & profit. For by it he is now found the faithful seruant of God, & wel assured in his conscience, that he is enheritor of euerlastinge glory, as S. James sayth: Blessed is the man that endureth temptation: for when he is tried, he shall receaue the crown of life, which the Lorde hath promised to them that loue him. Iudith.8 Nu.11.21.6 2.Cor.10 Iaco.1.6

Thirdly, God tempteth vs, that we paciently & thankefully abyding his louing visitation, should be an example to other, how they ought to behaue them selues toward God, when ỳ like thing chaūce to them, as it is written of Tobias: this temptation did God suffer to chaunce vnto him, that they which came after, might haue an example of his pacience, lyke as of holy Job. For in so much as he euer feared God from his youthe vp, and kepte his commaundementes, he grudged not against God, that the plague of blyndnes chaunced vnto him, but remained stedfast in the feare of God, prayeng god all the daies of his life. So likewyse reade we of the Thessalonians, which although tempted and proued with many & diuerse afflictiōs for the wordes sake, yet remained cōstant & stedfast in the faith of ỳ Lorde with ioye of the holy ghost, so that they became an ensample to all ỳ beleued in Macedonia & Achaia. Hereto belōgeth ỳ saing of S. James: take (my brethren) the Prophetes for an ensample of suffryng aduersitie & of pacience, which spake in the name of the Lorde. Behold, we count them blessed that endure. Ye haue heard of the Tobi.2. 1 Thes.1. Iacob.5

pacience of Iob, and haue knowen what ende the Lorde made. For the Lorde is very pitefull and mercifull.

Fourthly, God tempteth vs, that we fealing the merciful hand of God and his present healpe in our temptatiō, may be made the more able thorow the healpe of the holy ghost to succoure, healpe & cōfort

Heb.2 suche as fall into temptatiō, as S. Paule wryteth of our Sauiour Christ: In that saith he, that it fortuned Christ him selfe to be tēpted, he is able to succour them also that ar tempted. Likewise saith S.

2.Cor.1. Paule him selfe: blessed be God the father of our Lord Iesus Christ, whiche is the father of mercy and the God of al comfort, whiche cōforteth vs in all our tribulation, in so much that we are able to comfort them, which are in any maner of trouble, with the same cōfort: wher with we our selues ar comforted of God. For as the afflictiōs of Christ are plenteous in vs: euen so is our consolation plenteous by Christe.

Fiftly & finally, God tempteth vs, that we may be made like vnto his owne sonne, which first suffred, before he entred into glory, with

Luc.24 this perfect persuasion & assured hope, that if we suffer with Christ,

2.Tim.2 we shall raigne with Christ: if we die with Christ, we shal liue with Christ: although ỳ afflictions of this lyfe are not worthy of the glory,

Roma.8 whiche shalbe shewed vpon vs.

Whosoeuer diligently cōsidereth these thinges, he shal easely perceiue, that the temptacions, wherewith God proueth and trieth vs, are moste certen argumentes and sure tokens of Gods good wil toward vs, so that we may well & iustly perswade our selues, that we are in the fauour of God, when we are thus tempted, & not in the hatred and displeasure of God, as the wicked world most wickedly iudgeth. Father. It pleaseth me right well, whatsoeuer thou haste said in this behalf. But it is to heauy a burden for vs to beare suche temptations, except God ayde vs with his holy spirite, & strengthē vs with power frō aboue. Sonne. It is truthe. But God is faithful

Although they be neuer so greuous and intollerable, yet God is both able and also will make them easy and lyghte, if we earnestly call vpon him for

Psal.50. healpe and socour, according to this his promise: Call on me in the

Psal.91 tyme of thy trouble, and I wyll delyuer thee. Agayne, forasmuche as he hath put his trust in me, I wil delyuer him: I wil defend him, because he hath knowen my name. He hathe cryed vnto me, and I wyll graciously heare hym: I am with hym in his trouble: I will ℣ delyuer hym, and glorifie hym. For vnto this ende hathe God commaunded vs to praye in thys peticion for ayde and socoure vnto hym agaynste oure aduersaries, that in oure conflycte wyth the deuyll, deuill, or with the worlde or with the flesh we shulde not doubt of the victory, nor despaire of the triumphe ouer oure ennemies, but wyth strong faith in Christ and with feruent prayer vnto our heauenly father buckle and striue with them manfully and stoutly, euer setting before the eies of our minde, that our graūd captain Christ hath subdued all oure ennemies, the deuill, the worlde, the flesh &c. and hathe most victoriously and gloriously triumphed ouer them: and his victory, glory and triumph is our victory, our glory and our triumphe.

Furthermore this thing ought also greatly to comfort vs, yea and to encourage vs to encounter with our enemies, I meane, to consyder, that these enemies, which are left only to try our faith, are of no puissance or strength, but miserable captiues and bonde slaues, and can do no more vnto vs, that be Gods electe and chosen people, then God doth both suffer and appoynt: but as a hunter hath hys Graye houndes in a lease, so that they cannot run, whan they wil, but whē the hunter lusteth: so likewise the deuill, the worlde, the flesh &c. can not rage so fearfully against vs, nor take their scope so farre abrode, as they would, but so much shal they do, and so farre shall they rage, as Gods good wil and pleasure shalbe, and no further. For God hathe them in lease. Yea God is their Lorde, and they are his slaues. The deuil could do no more to Job, then god bothe suffered and appoynted. The legion of deuils, which Christ cast out of a certain manne, had no power to enter into the heard of swine, til Christe gaue them licence. If so great company of deuils could do nothing to a sorte of filthy swine, til they had obtained licence of Christe: what shall they be able to do vnto vs, which are the elect and chosen people of God, enarmed with the spirite of god, with faith and with prayer. Onlye let vs be sober and watch: only let vs not geue place, but manfullye fight with faith, with prayer, and with the sword of the spirit, which is the word of God, and we shal surely obtaine a glorious victory, & put them to flight like miserable cowards, as S. James saith: Resist the deuil, and he wil fle from you. Therfore when so euer the enemy assaile vs, let vs not feare, but boldly in the name of our alone mediatour Jesus Christ crye vnto oure heauenlye father and saye: O thou father which art in heauen, lead vs not into temptation.

Father. Wel said, my sonne. Father. Thereis then hope of recouering Gods fauor, though sometime we be ouercome with the greuous temptations of oure ennemies. Sonne. Yea verely: so we returne, aske mercye for oure faulte, craue healpe from aboue, and continually afterward labour not only valeauntly to fight with our enemies, but also thorow the mighty power of God gloriouslye to triumphe ouer them. Father. Blessed be God for his inestimable goodnes towarde man. And God geue vs grace to walk worthy of this his kindnes. But let me now here the vii. petition. Sonne. This is it. But deliuer vs from the euyll. The vii. petition.

Father. What desire we of our heauenly father in this petition? Sonne. As in the laste petition we sued vnto God, that he will rule, gouern and strengthen vs by his holy spirit, that we may be able to fight against sinne, and to withstand all the perillous temptatyons of the deuil, the worlde and the flesh, and to ouercome them, that we may be found valeaunte souldiours in the campe of Christ: so lykewise in this vii. and last petition we desire of our heauenlye father, that he wil deliuer vs from that wicked euil, which is the original and only cause of al euils that chaunce vnto vs, whether we respect the body or the soule. Father. What is this euil? Sonne. Our archeenemy the deuil, author of al euil, which, as S. Peter sayeth, walketh about like a roring lion, seking whom he may deuour. Father. Where is he termed The euill, in any other place of the holye scripture? Son. S. Paule so calleth him in his Epistle to the Ephesians, where he hath these words. Aboue al things take to you ỹ sheld of faith, wher with ye may be able to quench the firye dartes of the euil, or wicked. And this satan may iustly be termed the euil: for as ther is nothing in him but euil, so likewise is he the only occasion of al euill that frō the fall of Adam (where of he also was the author) vnto thys daye haue raigned in this wicked worlde, or shall raigne vnto the ende of the same. For thorow the enuy of the deuil death, and with it al kind of euils, entred into the worlde. And as he fyrste of al soughte the destruction of man, which thorow his subtile perswasions he craftelye brought to passe, so likewise goeth he forth continually to bringe vs out of gods fauour, that we may lose the benefit of our redemption, which we obtained by Christ: therfore we desire our heauenlye father in this petition, that he wil deliuer vs from this euill, that is to say the deuil. Father. Why doo we rather desire to be deliuered from the deuil, then frō the world, or from the flesh? Are not they also grieuous enemies of mans soule? Sonne. I graūt. Notwithstanding, forasmuch as the deuil is our fierce enemy, and aboue al other seketh our destruction, and without him al our other enemies are able to do nothing, as receiuing al their power of him (for he is the God and prince of this world: the power of darknes: the ruler of the flesh &c.) Therefore in this petition we principally direct our prayers vnto God against him, as against the chefe captain of al euils, the most extreme foe of our health and saluation: whom once vanquished, al the other our enemies straight vnto flie away like cowardes and bastles mōsters. Father. Do we not also in this petition desire to be deliuered from the world and the flesh? Sonne. Not only from the world & the flesh, but also from al other euils both of body and soule, wherwith Sathan goeth about daily to molest, trouble, disquiet, hurt, greue, punish, plage and destroy vs. Father. Geue me examples of these euils. Name some of them vnto me. Sonne. The euilles of the soule, wherwith sathan laboreth cōtinually to plage vs, to the intent by this meanes he may wrest vs out of the fauor of God and make vs felow heritors with him of euerlasting dampnation, are incredulitye, misbeliefe, douting, desperation, Idolatry, superstition, false worshipping of God, inuocation of creatures, confidence in good workes, trust in other mennes merites, hipocrisy, straunge religion, counterfait holines, blinde zeales, good entents, ignorance, contempt of God, hate of Christes gospel, blindnes of hart, vnrepentance, reioysing in sin, glorying in wickednes, presumption, impacience, grudging against the wil of God, vnmercifulnes of harte, corruption of iudgement, error, hereSye, schismes, controuersies in religion, sectes, pride of the minde, obstinacy in wickednes, fleshlye lustes, and what so euer besydes can be reckened, that defyleth the soule of man. Now that we may be deliuered from these such and so great euils, plages and pestilences, whereby the saluation of our soule is greatly endaungered yea and also perisheth, if we perseuer in them without repentaunce and faith vnto the last end, we most humbly pray vnto our heauenly father in this petition, which alone is able to deliuer vs frō these euils: and as he is able, so likewise wil he do it for his mercies sake. Father. Which are the euils of the body, wherwith Sathan laboreth to plage vs, and from the which we desyre of our heauenly father to be deliuered? Sonne. Sodain death, plage, pestilence, vnholsome weather, to much aboundance of waters, famin, honger, bastel, dearth, beggery, lack of goodes, infamye, shame, confusion, madnes, insurrections, tumultes, commotions, tiranny of princes, disobediens of subiectes, dissolution of common wealthes, discorde betweene realmes, priuate lukes, singuler cōmodities, raising of rents, enhaunsement of farmes, ioyning of houses together, hauocke making of villages, townes, cities &c. destruction of hospitality, desolation of countries, and what so euer can be rehearsed besydes, that is hurtful to the body, or to the thinges that appertain vnto the body. From these euils also we desire our heauenly father that he wil deliuer vs, that we thorow his mighty defence beinge safe and sounde both in body and in soule, may liue in his feare, and glorify his holy name. Father. As we desire in this petition of our heauenlye father, that he will deliuer vs from the aforsaid euils both of the body and of the soul: are not we here also hūble suters vnto him for the good treasures, gifts & benefits both of the soul, & of the body? Son. Yes verely. For in y we pray our heuēly father to take frō vs al euils, we craue at his hād al good things, & that it wil please him to enrich vs with the treasures both of the soule & the body, that we being fre frō al euil, and furnished withal good, may be the more able to resist our enemies, and to serue the Lord our God in holinesse and righteousnes al the daies of oure life. Father. Whiche are the treasures of the mynde, that we desire of our heauenly father? Sonne. The frutes of the holy ghost, as faith, hope, charity, repentaunce, ioy, peace, longe suffering, gentlenes, goodnes, faithfulnes, mekenesse, temperancye, righteousnes, holines, truth, mercy, humility, kindnes, patience in aduersitye, thankfulnes in prosperity, knowledge of God, purenes of life, liberality to the poore, mortification of the old man, viuificatyon of the new man. &c. Father. Whiche are the giftes or benefites of the body, that we require here of our heauenly father. Sonne. Healthe, long life, prosperity, ioy, quietnes, seasonable weather, aboundance of all necessarye thinges, a quiet and prosperous common wealthe, righteous Magestrates, good officers, learned schole masters, studious scholers, louing parents, obediēt children, faithful seruāts &c. And finally we pray here our heauenly father, that he wil geue vs a ioyful and prosperous departure out of this miserable world at the houre of death, that we may with strong faith commend our soules into his mercifull handes, and so thorowe his grace come vnto that heauenly kingdome, where we shal not only be deliuered from al euil, but also enioy for euer al good things, yea the glorious syght of the moste glorious maiestye of God, and there remaine with him in ioy and glory worldes with end. Father. God graunte it vs. Sonne. Amen. Father. But what are those wordes, which folow the ende of these vii. petitions, and are the conclusion of the Lordes prayer? Sonne. The wordes are these. For thine is the kingdome, the power, and the glory for euer and euer. Amen. Father. Why are these words added to the petitions that go before? Sonne. To our great comfort, and to the confirmation of our faith. For in that we ascribe vnto our heauenly father the kingdome and the power we are wel ascertained, that as he is a moste mighty and mooste glorious king, so is he sufficiently able euen to the vttermost both to vāquish our enemies the deuil, the world and the flesh &c. And also to graūt vs al that we aske, yea and more then we dare be bold to aske, as S Paule sayeth: God is able to do exceading aboundantly aboue all that we aske or thinke. Father. eris Gods. Sonne. Thus is it wrytten in the holy Scripture: Blessed be thou Lord god of Israel our father for euer and euer: Thine (O lord is greatnes & power, glory, victorye and praise: for all that is in heauen and in earth is thine, and thine is the kingdome (o lord) and thou excellest aboue al, euen as the head of al. And riches and honor coms of thee, and thou raignest ouer al, and in thine hand is power and strength, and in thy hand it is to make great, & to gene strength vnto al. And now our God we thanke thee, and praise thy glorious name. The Psalmograph also saith: Thy kingdõe is an euerlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth thorow out al ages. Again. The kingdome is the Lords, and he is the gouernor among the people. Also in a nother place: The Lord hath prepared hys seat in heauen, and his kingdome ruleth ouer al. Father. Why do we not only ascribe vnto god the kingdome & the power, but also the glory? Son. As of our heauenly father we receiue al good things both for the body & for the soul, so likewise is the glory, praise & honor for those benefites due to him alone. Therfore as we graunte, that whatsoeuer good thing we haue, we receiue it al the most excellẽt, mighty and powerful hand of god, from whõ cometh euery good & perfect gift, which also geueth aboundantly to thẽ that aske of him in faith, and casteth no man in the tethe: so in like mãer we freely confesse that al the glory, al the praise, al the honor is due to none neither in heauen nor in earth, but to this our heauenly father alone, which as he is able, so likewise he wil, and as he will, so likewise he doth both mercifully & plentifully enrich vs daily with his both spiritual and corporal giftes. Father. How prouest thou, that all glory, praise and honor is due to God alone? Sonne. The Apostle sayeth: To the alone wyse God be honor & praise through Jesus Christ for euer & euer. Again, vnto God king euerlasting, immortal, inuisible, wise only, be honor and praise for euer and euer. In the Reuelation of S. Jhon we rede, ỹ the xxiiii. elders fel down before him that sate on the throne, & worshipped him that liueth for euer, & cast their crowns before ỹ throne, saying: Thou art worthy, o lord, to receiue, glory, & honor, & power: for thou hast created al things, & for thy wils sake they are, and were created. Again: Blessing, honor, glory, & power be vnto him that sitteth vpon the seat, & vnto the lambe for euermore. Item. Blessing & glory, & wisdom, & thãks, and honor, and power, and might be vnto our god for euermore. Father. Wherfore dost thou say, For euer and euer? Son. By these words I plainly declare & signify, that the kingdom & power of our heauenly father is not like the kingdom & power of earthly princes, which endureth a short time, but his kingdom & his power, his dominion & his might abideth for euer and euer: ỹ is to say, euerlastingly & worlds without end, as the Psalmograph saith: Thy kingdõ is an euerlasting kingdom, and thy dominion endureth thorow out al ages. Again, that the glorye, praise, honor and worship of our heauẽly father is not like the glory, praise, honor and worship of worldly kings & rulers, which sone vanish away withal

Wherfore dost thou cicle vp the Lordes prayer with this word. Amen, Son: By saying Amen, I plainly and manifestly declare, that I most certely do beleue & am most assuredly perswaded, that my heauenly father for Christes sake, in whose name I haue offered these my humble supplications vnto him, hath verily graciously heard me, accepted my prayers, & also as he is able, so likewise he will graunt me these my petitions and requests, yea that he hath alredy geuen and graunted me my desires, and at al times will do, whensoeuer I cal vpon him in þ name of his derely beloued sonne Christ Iesu our lord & alone saui- Ihon. 14

Father, God geue vs his holy spirit, that he may lighten our darke senses & teach vs so to pray, that we may at al times pray with fruite, euen vnto the glory of his holy name, and vnto the saluation of our soules. Son. Lord, let it so come to passe. Fa. Now haue we examyned (my dere sonne) the iiii. first partes of the Catechisme. It remaineth that we go in hand with the v. parte of the same. Wherof doth the entreat? Son. Of the sacraments. For so were we taught of our catechist. Fa. Let vs then now begin with that in the name of God. Sonne, Let it so be, my most louing father.

The v. part of the Catechisme.

Of the Sacramentes.

FAther. How many sacramentes are there? Sonne. I know, that in the churche of the Pope there are nombred seuen. Father. Whyche are they? Sonne. Baptisme, confirmation, other penaunce, eucharist, matrimony, and extreme vnction. Father. Confessest thou al these to be sacramentes? Sonne. Our preacher and our catechist taught vs, that there are but two only, which may properly and truely be called Sacraments. Father. Which are they? Sonne. Baptisme and the Lordes supper, otherwise called the Eucharist, or the Sacramente of the body and blood of christ. Father. What thinckest thou of the other fiue? Sonne. They said, that matrimony & the ministery concerning the preching of gods word & the administration of the Sacraments are holy orders of his instituted & ordained of God to be vsed in his church. As touching confirmation and extreme vnction, they are ceremonies, said they, brought into the churche by man, and not worthy, to be nombred among Sacraments. And as concernyng penaunce, which ought more iustly to be termed repentaunce, is a continuall exercise of a true Christian said they, so longe as he liueth and maye more iustly be reckened amonge the frutes of the holye ghost, then among sacramentes. Father. Why are baptisme and the Lordes supper properly called sacraments

Sacraments ii. only in nomber.

Sonne. Because they only haue those thinges, which are necessarely required in a sacramēt, yea & that of thinstitution of Chryst. Father. Which are they? Sonne. Thoutward sign & the promise of grace added to the signe. Father. Geue me an exāple hereof. Sonne. Baptisme hath his outward sign, which is water. It hath also his promise annexed to his outward sign, which is this: VVhosoeuer shall beleue and be baptised, he shalbe saued. Likewise the supper of the Lord hath his signes, that is to say, bread and wine. It hath also promises annexed to these signes, which are these: whiche shall be betrayed for you. which shalbe shed for you. Father. Tel me now, my child, what a sacrament is? Sonne. A sacrament is an holy action & exercise of Chrystes church, in the which the redemption & partaking of our lord Iesus Chryst is geuen to vs thorow the word & the signs instituted for this purpose of god. Or thus: A sacrament is an outward sign or visible token, cōprehending in it agrations, comfortable & helthful promes of god. Or on this wise: A sacrament is properly an outwarde sign, wherin God representeth & witnesseth his good will towarde vs, to sustain the weaknes of our faith. Or an other way more short & also more plain. A sacrament is a witnes of gods fauor, declared by an outward sign. Father. Wherfore are the sacramēts instituted & ordained? Sonne. First, that they should be vnto vs testimonies, pledges, signes or seales of Gods grace, fauor & mercy, to teach vs, that god is merciful vnto vs, & wil forgeue vs our sinnes, iustifye & saue vs for Chrystes sake, & that al the benefits of Chryst doth both belōg & are freely geuen vnto vs of God the father, if with faith we come & receiue those holye misteries. As for an ensample, baptisme beareth witnes vnto vs, that we are washed in the blud of chryst: that al our sinnes be put away & clensed by the death & passion of Chryst: & that chryst by his blud hath so purified vs, that he hath made vs vnto hi selfe a glorious congregation without spot or wrinckle, or any such thing, that we should be holy & withoute blame. Likewise the supper of the lord doth put vs in remembrans of the grace, mercy & fauour of God, and of the fre remission of al our sinnes, and testify vnto vs that al the benefits of the passion & death of Chryst apertain vnto vs & that we in the worthy receiuing of the lords supper, are made partakers of them al, if we beleue that Chrystes body was broken, and his bloud shed for our sinnes. Secondly, that they shuld be certain tokens & markes, wherby the church of Chryst may be discerned frō the sinagoge of antichryst, & from all other sects. For god will haue his church to be knowen, sene, and hard thorow out al mankind, as it is wrytten. The sonid of thē wēt out thorow al ỹ world. And therfore hath he ordained certen noble ceremonies, which should be euidēt signes of his church, & descern that frō other congregations. For wher baptisme & the lords supper is, there is the church of chryst, for as much as they are sacraments and tokēs of Chrystes church only & belong not vnto the congregations of the Ethnikes and infidels.

What is necessarily required in a sacramēt

Ephe. 5

Psal. 19.

Thirdly that they shuld be signes, tokens, & markes of our confession, sion, in the which we outwardly profes, what we inwardly think & beleue. As for an ensāple: when we come vnto baptisme or vnto the lordes supper, we openly confes and profesle that we vtterly reiect & cast away al straunge doctrin & al false religion, & that we only cleue to the true religion of thalone true & euerlasting god, & that we embrace euen frō the very hart the doctrin of the gospel of Christ, of the which doctrin baptisme & the lordes supper are most certen signes & seales: As they, which in thold law were circumcised and dyd eat of the Paschal lambe did openly declare by those outward sacramēts, that they vtterly refused al the wicked doctrins of the heathen, and only embraced the law and ordinaunces of the God of Israell.

Fourthly, that they shuld be as seno wes & bonds to tincke & knyt together the congregations of god publiquely & opēly, wherby they may be known to be of one company & of one spirit, of one faith & of one doctrin & profession. For god wil that his people shuld oftētimes resort & come together, yea & that not only priuatly but also publikely, to pray vnto him, to geue thanks vnto him, to hear his holy word, to confer of matters concerning religion, to edify & comfort one another, & to occupy thē selues in such godly & spiritual exercises. Therfore as the lord apoynted, ỳ his sacramēts shuld be seno wes & bōds opēly to knit together in holy actiōs his people, euē so many as profes his holy name: euē so ought those sacramēts publikely & openly to be administred, as we se in thadministration of baptisme there is a cōmon resort. First, there is the minister: Secōdly, the parsō that shalbe baptised: Thirdly, ỳ witnesses: Fourthly, diuers other of christes cōgregation. For baptisme ought thē to be administred, when ỳ faithful do most assēble & mete together. Likewise the lords supper ought to be admnistred in a multitude & cōpany of Gods people, & not priuatly or wher one alone is present to receiue it, as it is vsed in the popes church. Thus S. Paule sayeth: The cuppe of thankes ge- 1.Cor.x uing, for the which we geue thākes, is it not the partaking of ỳ blud of christ: the bread, which we breke, is it not the partaking of ỳ body of christ: because that we, although we be many, are yet one bread & one body, inasmuch as we al are partakers of one bred, & of one cup Again, whē ye come together to eat (ỳ lords supper) tary one for another. Fiftly, that they shuld be vnto vs memorials to put vs in remē- 1.Cor.xi brās, what mutual beneuolēce, what loue & harty frendship one to another ought to raign amōg vs. For seing we al are partakers of ỳ same misteries, baptised w̄ one baptisme, & eat together of one bread & drink together of one cup, by this menes protesting opēly, ỳ weare mēbers one of anothers body, wherof christ Iesus is the head, who seeth not, how far al enmity, debate, strife, malice, enuy & al displeasure ought to be from vs? Again, what fernēt charity, loue, concord, amitye, good wil, frēdship, peace, quietnesse, gentlenesse &c. ought to rule in oure heartes one to an other: as Saynte Paule sayeth: I Ephe.4 erhort you that ye walke worthye of the vocation, wherwith ye are called, wal lowlines & mekenes, with hūblenes of mind, forbearing one another thorow lone: & be diligēt to kepe ỳ vnity of ỳ spirit, thorow the bōd of peace, being one body & spirit, euē as ye are called in one hope of your calling. One lord, one faith, one baptisme, one god

& father of al, which is aboue al, and thorow al, and in you al.
Strictly, that they shuld be testimonials vnto vs, to testify & witnes, how nigh christ toyn him self vnto vs, that he geueth him self whole vnto vs, & that he wil dwel in vs, & endow vs withal his benefits & riches, so that whatsoeuer is christes, the same is ours. For in takig vpon vs baptisme, we take Christ vpon vs withall his holines and righteousnes, as S. Paul saith: All ye that are baptised, haue put on christ. Likewise in receiuing the sacramēt of the body & blud of christ we receiue not only the sacramēt, but also christ him selfe withal the frutes, benefits & merits of his glorious passion & healthfull death, as Christ him self sayeth: This is my body, which is betrayed or broken for you. This is my blud, which is shed for you vnto the remission of your sinnes. Seuerthly, that they shuld be vnto vs a singuler cōsolation & an exceding great cōfort in all our troubles, perils, dāgers & aduersities, whyle in receiuing thē we do behold & cōsider the merciful good will of god toward vs, with this perswasiō, that that god, which hath instituted these sacramēts, deliuered thē vnto vs as pledges of his most harty good wil toward vs, & hath also cōmaūded vs to vse thē for our comforte, will not leaue vs soucorles, but in his time deliuer vs frō all those miseries, and bring vs into ye hauen of quietnes, accordinge to this his promise: Call on me in the day of trouble, & I wil deliuer the, & thou shalt honor me. Againe, for as much as he put his trust in me, I wil deliuer him: I wil defende him, because he hath knowen my name. He cried vnto me, & I wyll hear him: I am with him in trouble, I wil deliuer him and glorify him. Yea w long life wil I satisfy him, & shew him my sauing helth. Many other causes might here be aledged, why did god institute & ordain his sacramēts, but these are the chiefe & principall, & for thys pr̄sēt they may seme aboundātly to suffice. Father. What nede haue we of sacramēts, seing we haue the holy gost & the sacred scriptures of god to lede vs into al necessary truth, which can aboundantly enform vs of the grace, fauor, mercy and good will of god toward vs? Sonne. Christ the wisdō of the father knowing our grosnes & dulnes in vndertādīg matters that belōg vnto our saluatiō, wishing our health & cōmodity, & minding to remedy & help this our great infyrmity, & to bring vs into some knowledge of gods misteries, that we may be saued, hath not only geuen vs his holy spirit to enforme, instruct & teach our inward mā, but to make vs perfect both in body & soul, he hath also geuen vs his word to serue our eares, & hys sacramēts to serue our eies. For what soeuer the holy gost saith inwardly onto vs, the very same doth ỹ word of god to our eares, & the sacramēts to serue our eies, preach, declare & setforth outwardly, that we may be taught bothe corporally & spiritually. Again, who knoweth not, that things sene with eies are more surely fixed in ỹ myndes of men, then those things, whith are only hard? And therfore a Sacrament may rightwell be called a visible woorde For whatsoeuer the word is to the eare, the very same thing is the sacrament to the eye.

The word of god saith to mine ear: the body of christ was broke for the. The blud of Christ was shed for the. The very same thing doth the sacrament preach vnto mine eie, while in the holy actiō of ỳ lords supper I se the bread broken & the wine shed. Therfore christ ỳ lord to enforme & instruct our outward senses, ordained these outward signes & sacramēts, that by the consideration & beholding of them, ỳ thing might ỳ more easly slide into our minds, which hath ben inculked & beaten into our eares thorow ỳ voice of the preacher. If we had ben without bodies, Christ wold haue geuē vnto vs those spirituall gifts, nakedly & simply, which are geuen to the faithful in the deliuerās of the sacramēts: but forasmuch as we haue bodies ioynd to our souls, therfore in sēsible things he doth cōmunicate vnto vs ỳ gifts of grace. And this hath ben the property of god not only in the new but also in thold testament. For as in thold law he gaue to ỳ Jewes circūcision & the passeouer: so likewise in the new law hath he geuen to vs christians baptisme & the lords supper. Father. What differēce is ther betwene the sacramēts of thold, & of the new testamēt? Son. The sacramēts of thold testamēt wer figures & shadowes of christ to come. But the sacraments of the new testamēt do signify, declare & setforth vnto vs ỳ Christ is come, & haue perfectly fulfilled in hys flesh, whatsoeuer was prefigured & afore shadowed of him in thold sacramēts & ceremonies. Father. Let vs then fal in hād with the sacramēts of the new testament: And firste of al with the sacramēt of baptisme. For of that we haue our beginning, whē we come vnto ỳ professiō of christ. Tel me therfore my dere childe, what baptisme is.

The difference betwene ỳ sacramētes of the old & new testamēt.

¶ Of baptisme.

What baptisme is. Tit.3. 1.Petr.3

Son. Baptisme, after the definition of S. Paul, is the fountain of the new birth, & renuing of the holy gost. Or thus: baptisme, as S. Peter doth define it, is not the putting away of the filthines of the flesh but a good cōsciens consenting to god by the resurrection of Jesus christ. Or on this māner: baptisme is an holy sacramēt instituted of the lord Jesu to this end, that so many as wil shake of the cruel yoke of satan, the world & the flesh, & become his faithful soldiors & trusty seruāts, shuld be washed with water in the name of the father, & of the son, & of the holy gost. Father. Of how many parts doth ỳ sacramēt of baptisme consist? Son. Of two. Fa. Of which two? Son. Of the word & of the water. Fa. Is not the water sufficiēt to make the sacrament of baptisme perfect wythout the word? Son: Nether the water without the word, nor the word without the water can make a perfect sacramēt. The word & the element must concur & go together, & so is it a sacramēt. In baptisme the word & the water must be ioynd & linked together. So likewise in the lords supper bread and wyne, which are the elements, & the words of institution must also go together: otherwise there is no perfect sacramēt. Take away the worde, and water remaineth water, and no Sacrament. Take awaye the word, and bread abideth breade, and wine continueth wine, and no Sacrament. But if the word be ioyned to the element, so is it made a sacrament. Father. How proouest thou that water alone without the word maketh not perfect baptisme.

Of how many partes Baptisme consisteth.

Ephe. 5 Sonne. S. Paule speaking of Baptisme ioyneth the word & the water together. His words are these: Christ loued the congregatyon & gaue him self for it, to sanctify it, & clensed it in the fountaine of water thorow the word, to make it vnto him self a glorious congregatyon without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that it should be holi & without blame. Father. Which callest thou the word? Sonne. The in

Of how many baptismes doth the holy scripture make mẽtion? Sonne. Of two. Father. Which are they? Sonne. The baptisme of water, and the baptisme of the spirite, that is to say, of the holy ghost. Father. Where is that found in the word of God? Sonne. Jhon Baptist sonne of Zacharye the priest sayde to

And Christe said vnto his Apostles after his resurrectiõ: Jhõ baptised with water, but ye shalbe baptised with the holy ghost after these fewe daies. Of both these two baptismes speaketh S. Paul on this manner: Not by the dedes of righteousnes, which we wrought, but accordinge to his mercy hath god saued vs by the fountain of the new birth, and re-

Father. Is this baptisme of the spirit necessarye vnto euerlasting saluation? Sonne. So necessary, that without it the baptisme of water profiteth nothing. As in thold testament the circumcisiõ of the flesh profited the Jewes nothing at al, without the circumcision of the spirit: so likewise in the new testament the baptisme of the water auaileth nothing without the baptisme of the spirite. He is not a and the faythfull haue both the Sacrament, and also the vertue & strengthe of the Sacrament, which is ỳ holy Ghost as Christ saith: Except a man be borne of water and of the spirit, he can not enter in to the kyngdome of God. For that whiche is borne of the flesshe, is flesshe: And that whiche is borne of the spirite, is spirite. Father. But my sonne, let vs now returne vnto the outward baptisme: and tell me, who did institute it. Sonne. God the father did first of all institute it, and commaunded Johan zacharie the priestes sonne to practise it among his people the Jewes, euen among so many as repented them of their sinnefull lyfe, and purposed henceforthe to lyue in the feare of God. Father. Where readest thou that? Sonne. In the Gospell of S. John, where we reade on this maner: John bare recorde of Christe, saying: I saw the spirite descende from heauen, lyke vnto a doue, and abode vpon hym, and I knewe hym not. But he that sent me to baptise in water, the same sayde vnto me: vpon whome ye shall see the spirite descende, and tary styll vpon hym, the same is he, whiche baptiseth with the holy ghoste. Moreouer God the sonne Christe Jesus are Lorde a litle before his ascention into the kingdom of his father, ordained this holy sacramẽt of baptisme, when he sayde on this maner to his Apostle: Go ye and teache al nations, baptising them in the name of the father and of the sonne, & of the holy Ghost. He that beleueth and is baptised, he shal be saued. But he that beleueth not, shall be condempned. And as the Lorde Christe commaunded, that all such shoulde be baptised with water, that beleue in hym and appertayne vnto his holye congregation: so lykewyse was he hym selfe baptised, as the Euangelicall history playnely declareth: whereof we maye learne what an holy and precious misterie baptisme is, & ỳ it ought not to be neglected nor despysed, but rather, as they saye, to be embraced with metyng armes, & to be had in great reuerence. I haue geuen you an ensample, sayth Christ, ỳ as I haue done so lykewyse ye shuld do. Fat. What is it, to be baptyzed in the name of the father, and of the sonne, and of the holy ghoste? Sonne. To be admitted and receaued into the familie and housholde of God the father, the sonne, and the holy ghost, and from henceforth to be reckened yea and also to be the sonne and heyre of God, seruyng him in holynes and righteousnes all the dayes of our lyfe. Father. To what ende art thou baptised? Sonne. First, that baptisme (whiche thing I haue partly touched before) shoulde be vnto my conscience a sure testimonie and wytnesse of Gods fauoure towarde me thorowe his sonne Christ, against the subtle assaultes of Satan, the worlde, and the flesshe, and against the curse of the law, the fynge of death, and the dreadfull darte of damnable desperatiõ: wherewith I may be bolde at all tymes to comfort my selfe against myne enemies euen in the middest of all my troubles & temptations. Father. Of what fauoure from God is baptisme a signe and testimonie vnto thee? Sonne. Baptisme declareth euidently vnto me, that God doth so derely loue and fauour me, that wher as before I was an Heathen, I am now become a Christian: where as before I was by nature the childe of wrath and a very firebrande of hell, I am nowe the sonne of God and heyer of euerlasting glory: where before I was a member of Satan, I am nowe a member of that holy congregation and body, whereof Christe is the head: where as before I was stuffed full of all synne, yea I was nothynge elles but a verye lompe of synne both body and soule, I am now clensed from al sinne delyuered from all wyckednes purged from all vnclennes, and adourned with moste beautifull and goodly vertues, as S. Paule sayeth: Christe loued the Congregation, and gaue hym selfe for it to sanctifie it, and clensed it in the fountayne of water thorowe the worde to make it vnto hym selfe a glorious congregation without spotte or wrincle, or any suche thyng: but that it should be holy and without blame. Agayne, after that the kyndnes and loue of oure Sauiour God toward man appeared, not by the dedes of ryghteousnes whiche we wrought, but accordoing to his mercie, he saued vs by the fountayne of the newe byrth and renewynge of the holye ghost, whiche he shed on vs aboundauntly thorowe Iesus Christe our Sauiour, that we iustified by his grace, should be made heyres according to the hope of euerlasting lyfe. Father. Camest thou then a synner vnto baptisme? Sonne. Yea and stuffed ful of synne, begotten, conceaued, brought forth, noury shed, and lyuing in synne, & the very childe of wrath by nature. Father. And arte thou delyuered from the whole lompe of vngodlynes at thy baptisme? Sonne. Yea verely. Father. Howe prouest thou that? Sonne. Christe our Sauiour sayeth: he that beleueth and is baptised, he shal be saued. The citesins of Hierusalem sayde vnto Peter, when he reproued them in his sermone for their wickednes against the Lorde Christe the alone authour of our saluation: What shall we do? Peter sayde vnto them: Repent of your sinnes, and be baptised euery one of you in the name of Iesus Christe for the remission of synnes, and ye shal receaue the gifte of the holy ghoste. And Ananias saide to Paule: why tariest thou? Aryse and be baptised, and washe away thy synnes in callyng on the name of the Lorde. And we heard before out of the mouthe of S Paule, that Christ hath sanctified and clensed his congregation in the fountaine of water thorowe the worde to make it vnto him selfe a glorious Congregation without spotte or wrynele or any suche thyng, that it should be holy and without blame. And agayne he sayeth: Suche were you some tyme (he meaneth, fornicatours, worshyppers of Images, aduouterers, weakelyngs, theues, couetous persones, dronkardes cursed speakers, pyllers, extorcioners, and polluted with al kynde of synne) but ye ar washed (from these your synnes by baptisme) but ye are sanctified, but ye are iustified by the name of the Lorde Iesus, and by the spirite of our God. Father. In baptisme then we receaue both remission of our synnes, and the holy goste. Sonne. Yea, & wyth the holy ghoste the frutes also of Gods spirite, whiche S. Paule remembreth in his epistle to the Gala-

the Galathians. And this is it, whiche Christ saide to his disciples: John baptised with water, but you shalbe baptised with the holye ghost. So lykewyse sayed John the Baptist: I baptise you with water vnto repentaunce, but he that shal come after me, is mightier then I. He shall baptise you with the holy ghoste & with fire. Father. If synne be remitted and forgeuen vs, yea and put awaye in baptisme: howe cometh it then to passe, that we fele in our selues suche cruell and raging lustes, which without ceasing moue and prouoke vs vnto the transgression of Gods moste holy will. Sonne. That cõcupiscence is left vnto vs, to be an exercise of our faithe, that we should dayly labour thorowe spirite of God to represse it, and by lytyll to quenche it, that at the last we may waxe perfect in Christe. Father. Doeth not that concupiscence condẽne vs? Sonne. No verely, except we willingly geue ouer the spirite of God, and gyue place to those fleshly lustes, and so fall away from the grace that was geuen vs in our baptisme. For not only the grosse sinnes, but also the concupiscence of the flesshe is forgeuen in baptisme: not that it shoulde not be, but that it should not be reckened to vs for sinne. For as S. Paule saith: There is nō damnation to them whiche are in Christe Jesu, whiche walke not after the flesche, but after the spirite. For the lawe of the spirite of lyfe thorowe Jesus Christ, hath made me free from the lawe of sinne and death. For what the lawe coulde not do, inasmuch as it was weake because of the flesh, that performed God and sent his sonne in the similitude of sinnefull flesche, and by sinne damned sinne in the flesshe, that the righteousnes of the lawe might be fulfilled in vs, whiche walke not after the flesche, but after the spirite. So long as we lyue in this mortall body, we shall fynde in our selues a continuall stryfe, yea a mortall warre betwene the flesshe & the spirite, as S. Paule saith, the flesche lusteth contrary to the spirite, and the spirite contrary to the flesche. These are contrary one to the other, so that ye can not do whatsoeuer ye woulde. Lykewyse sayth S. Peter: Derely beloued, I beseche you as straungers and pylgrimes, abstayne from fleshly lustes, whiche fyght agaynst the soule, and see that ye haue honest cõuersation among the Gentiles, that where as they backbyte you as euill doers, they maye see youre good workes, & prayse God in the day of visitation. And S. Paule commaundeth vs so to frame our lyues, that synne reigne not in our mortall bodies, that wee should thereunto obeye by the lustes of it: Agayne, that we should not make prouision for the flesshe to fulfil the lustes of it. Father. What other thyng doth baptisme preache vnto thee? Sonne. Baptisme doth not only declare vnto me, that I am in the fauour of God, haue obtayned remission of all my synnes, and that I am the sonne and heire of God, but also that I am dead vnto synne, that I haue crucified the olde man with his concupiscences & lustes, that I haue geuen ouer the deuill, the worlde and the flesshe with all their workes, pompes, vanities, pleasures &c. that I haue put of olde Adam with al his dedes, & that I am buried with Christ

Roma. 6 sayeth: knowe ye not, that all we whiche are baptised into Jesus Christe, are baptised to die with hym? We are buried then with him by baptisme for to die, that lykewyse as Christ was raysed vp from death by the glorie of the father: euen so we also shoulde walke in a newe lyfe. For if we begrafte in death lyke vnto hym: euē so shall we be partakers of the resurrection: knowyng this that our olde man is crucified with him also, that the body of synne might vtterlye be destroyed, that henceforth we should not be seruauntes vnto synne. For he that is dead, is iustified from sinne. Wherefore if we be dead with Christe, we beleue that we shall also lyue with hym, knowing that Christe beynge raysed from death, dyeth no more. Death hath no more power ouer hym. For as touchynge that he died, he died concernyng synne ones. And as touchyng that he lyueth, he liueth vnto God Lykewyse consyder ye also, that ye are dead as touchyng synne, but are alyue vnto God thorowe Jesus Christe oure Lorde.
1. Petr. 3 Lykewyse sayeth saint Peter: Baptisme now saueth vs, not the putynge awaye of the fylthynesse of the fleshe, but in that a good conscience consenteth to God by ỹ resurrection of Jesus Christ, which is on the ryght hande of God, and is gone into heauen, Aungels, powers, and myghte subdued vnto hym. Father. What learnest thou more of thy baptisme? Sonne. Baptisme preacheth vnto me not onely the mortification of the fleshe, but also the viuification of the spirite. Father. What meanest thou? Speake more playnely. Sonne. Baptisme teacheth me, that I shoulde not onely put of the olde man with all his lustes and workes, mortifie the fleshe with all her affectes and concupiscences, and vtterly dye and be buryed vnto synne: but also that I should put on the newe manne, whiche is

Father. So many therfore as are baptised, oughte to addresse them selues vnto a newe life, and to walke worthy this kindnes of God, which they haue receiued in their baptisme. Sonne. Yea verely. For they that are baptised in Christ Iesu, haue not only remission of all their synnes, but they receaue also of God the gifte of the holy ghost, whiche worketh in them newe affectes and newe motions, yea and those Godly and spirituall, out of the whiche issueth thorowe the power of Gods spirite a vertuous lyfe and a Christen conuersation, so that it is truly sayde of S. Paule: All ye that are baptised, haue put on Christ. Gal.3 Father. What is it to put on Christ? Sonne. Not onely to clothe our selues with his sauing healthe, but also to garnische our lyues with his Godly vertues, whiche he vsed in all his lyfe, when he was in this wretched world to gene vs an ensample that we shuld folowe his steppes, as he saith: I haue geuen you an ensample, that as I haue done, so lykewyse ye should do. He What is to put on Christ. 1. Pet.2 Ihon.13. 1.Iohn.2. ý sayeth, that he dwelleth in Christ, sayth S. John, ought to walke as Christe hath walked. Againe: If we saye, that we haue folowship with God, & walke in darkenes, we lie, and do not the truth. But if we walke in light, euen as he is in light, then haue we felowshippe with him, and the bloud of Iesus Christe his sonne, clenseth vs from all sinne. If any man be in Christ saieth saint Paule, he is a newe creature. They therefore, whiche haue taken on them holy baptisme, ought to aunswete and to lyue agreable to their baptisme: I meane, to dye vnto synne, & to lyue vnto righteousnes: and not only to clothe thẽ selues with the merites of Christ, embrasing him with strong faith as their true and alone Sauiour: but also to garnishe their life and conuersation with the vertues of Christ, that they may be Christes both in heart, worde and dede. 1.Iohn.1 2.Cor.5 Father. What sayst thou then to those christians whiche bragge muche of Christ and of Christes Gospel, and yet leade a lyfe spotted and defiled with all kynde of sinne and wickednes? Sonne. These are fallen from the grace, whiche they receaued in their baptisme and haue lost the holy ghoste, where with they were renewed in the fountayne of regeneratiõ: and although with their mouth they professe God, yet with their dedes they denye him, seyng they ar abhominable, and disobedient, and vnapte vnto euery good worke: neyther are suche the seruauntes of Christ, though they bragge neuer so muche of Christ and of Christes Gospell, but rather bondslaues of Satan, and myserable captiues of the worlde and of the flesh. Knowe ye not, sayth S. Paule, that to whome soeuer ye commit your selues as seruauntes to obeye, his seruauntes ye are, to whom ye obeye: whether it be of synne vnto death, or of obediẽce vnto righteousnes? Likewyse saith S. Peter: Of whome a man is ouercome, vnto the same is he brought in bondage. For if they (after they haue escaped from the fylthines of the worlde thorowe the knowledge of the Lord & the Sauiour Iesu Christ) are yet tangled againe therein, and ouercome, then is the latter ende worse with them then the beginning. knowen the waye of righteousnes, then after they haue knowen it, to turne from the holy commaundement that was geuen vnto the. But the same is happened vnto them, that is vsed to be spoken by the true prouerbe: the dogge is turned to his owne vomite agayne: and the sowe that was washed is turned againe to her walowing in the myre. These backsliding Christians may iustly be compared to Lotts wyfe, whiche after she was deliuered out of stynking Sodome, and commaunded no more to looke backe vnto it, but with all expedition to flie farre from it, looked backe againe vnto Sodome, contrarie to the commaundement of God, and for her disobedience, she was turned into a pyller of salte. They may also be truly resembled vnto that sonne, which promised his father to worke in his vineyarde, and yet wrought nothyng at all. They are those foolyshe virgins, whiche had lampes and no oyle: and therfore wer they shut out of the brydegromes chamber. Yea they may not without a cause be lykened to Judas Iscarioth the traytour and to Simon Magus, whiche bothe fell away from their profession, which they made at baptisme. No mã that putteth his hand to the plough and looketh backe is mete for the kyngdome of God. He that continueth vnto the ende, he shall be saued. God hath delyuered vs frõ the power of our enemies, that we should serue hym in holynes and ryghteousnes all the dayes of our lyfe. The bloude of Christe hath pourged our conscience from dead workes to serue the lyuing God. God hath not called vs vnto vnclennes, but vnto holines. Be faythfull vnto the death, sayth Christ, and I will geue thee the crowne of life. Father. God make vs all true Christians both in woorde and in worke. But come of my childe, what thinkest thou of those ceremonies, whiche are vsed in the Popes churche at the ministration of Baptisme, as salte, oyle, creame, spittle, candle, halowed fonte, holye water, crossyng of the childe, cryssume, conjuring the deuill out of the childe, laying the childe down vpon the ground before the hie altar, whyle the priest read the Gospell against the falling sickness, & such lyke? Doest thou thynke, that these thynges are necessarie vnto the administration of Baptisme? Sonne. I thinke them neyther necessary nor commendable. For they are but the idle inuentions of the moste idle Papistes, thruste into the churche without the authoritie of Gods worde, not garnishing but rather obscuring the dignitie of holy baptisme. S. Iohn the baptiste, Christe and his Apostles, and the auncient primatiue churche knewe no suche beggarly ceremonies: neyther doth the worde of God make any mention of them.

Of ceremonies vsed at baptisme in ỹ Popes churche.

☞ The more simply and the more agreable to the institution of Christ the Sacramẽtes are ministred, the more doth it please God. In the Actes of the Apostles we reade, that Philippe baptised the Eunuch chamberlayne to the Quene of Candace. This Eunuche did confesse Jesus Christe to be the sonne of God, whiche is the signe of our fayth, and desyred baptisme: and Philippe at the nexte water they came vnto, washed hym in the name of the father, and of the sonne, & of the holy Ghost. Here was neither halowed fonte, nor holy water, salte, oyle, creame, spitle, candle, or any other point of Papistrie: and yet I am sure, that no man wil denie, but that the manner of baptising, which Philippe vsed here, was both good and perfect. And to saye truthe, it were better that these poppishe ceremonies were rooted out of the churche, then that they shoulde be suffred to continue. For they haue bene & yet are the occasion of much superstition & false belief. Father. It is truly sayd. For many people at this present day die so superstitious & so farre from true belief, that they are fully perswaded, that if any of those ceremonies, whereof we spake tofore, do lacke in the ministratiō of baptisme, that the baptisme is not perfect, nor the childe fully & sufficiently christened. Sonne. Truthe it is. And verely it is greatly to be lamented, that suche blind popishe errours haue crept into the churche of Christ. These are those tares, whiche the enemie hath sowen in the Lordes field, whyle the mē slept. But euery plante that the heauenly father hath not planted, shalbe plucked vp by the rootes. Math. 13

Father. Forasmuche as now we entreate of baptisme, I would gladly heare thine opinion & learning concerning the baptisme of infantes. Math. 15

Of ỹ baptisme of infantes.

For there wanteth not a swarme of heretikes in this our age, which both denie & condemne the baptisme of infantes, and teache that suche as were baptised in their infancie, receaued no profit by their baptisme, and that therfore they must be baptised againe, when they come to age, and be able to confesse their fayth. Sonne. These are the Anabaptistes, whome the deuill that olde enemy of mankinde hath raysed vp nowe of late to trouble and to disquiet the churche of Christ with their moste pestilent and schismaticall errours and heresies. Father. Is it then lawfull to baptise yonnge childzen in their infansie, and before they be able openly to confesse their fayth? Sonne. Yea verely. Father. Howe proouest thou that? Sonne. When our Sauiour Christe sent forth his disciples to conuert the worlde from vayne superstition vnto true religion, frō false Goddes vnto the one and alone lyuing God, he commaunded them to baptyse all nations generally, excepting no state nor age. Under this generall commaundement are the infantes conteyned: therfore ought the chyldzen also to be baptysed. Father. But the chyldzen can not professe their fayth: therfore saye the aduersaries, they ought not to be baptysed. Sonne. As concernyng the profession of fayth, that dooth God require only of suche as are growen vp in age, and are all ready instructed in the misteries of Christes Religion: of the whiche sorte there were many about the begynning of Christes churche after Christes ascention, whiche after they were taught the Gospel, confessed their fayth, and so were baptised, as we reade in diuerse places of the holy scripture. But this toucheth not the Infantes, whiche as they lacke speache, so wante they the vse of reason, whereby (God assisting them with his grace) they should attayne vnto the knowledge of Gods doctrine and of Christen fayth, and yet notwithstandinge they are not excluded from baptysme. Anabaptistes.

but are comprehended vnder the generall commaundement of bap-tising all nations. For as the infantes of the Hebrues were not secluded and put away from circumcision, which was also a Sacrament or signe of Gods grace, mercie and fauour to the Iewes, euen as baptisme is nowe to the Christians, although they could not pro fesse their faith, but were commaunded of God notwithstanding to be circumcised, and by this outwarde signe to be receaued into the congregation of Gods people, & so to be counted for the promes sake the sonnes and heyers of God: euen so in lyke maner ought the In-fantes of the Christiãs to be admitted vnto the Sacrament & signe of grace, I meane baptisme, although they can not by the reason of their tender age professe their faith, forasmuche as God is nowe no les the God of the Christians and of their children, then he was in times past the God of the Iewes & of their children. For this grati ous promes of God (I will be thy God, and the God of thy seede.)
Gen. 17 appertaineth no les vnto vs Christians and vnto our children, then it belonged heretofore vnto the Iewes and vnto their children. For there is one God both of the beleuing Iewe and of the faithful Gen tile: neither is there any respect of persones before him. And is it to be thought, that the grace of God is now diminished toward the chil dren of the Christians, and not so plenteous in this time of the new testament, after that the Lorde Christe hath taken vpon him our na ture and clothed him selfe with our flesh, and all figures & clowdes be vtterly dispelled & put away, so that now the true light of Gods moste glorious truth shineth, as it was in the lawe of Moses? God blessed the chyldrẽ of the Iewes euen in their mothers wombe, and gaue them his holy spirite, yea and that before they were borne: and is it to be thought, that his hand is now so shortened, that he neither can nor will shewe the like mercifull kindnes to the children of the Christians, whome he hath taken vnto him to be his people, yea to be his sonnes & heires of euerlasting glorie? God enuied not the children of the Iewes his Sacrament and signe of grace, I meane circumcision, although they could neyther speake nor hadde the vse of reason: and shall we thinke, that he disdaineth, that our chyldren shoulde be ennabled with his Sacrament and sygne of grace, I meane baptisme, nowe in the newe Testament?

The chyldren of the olde testament were endewed with the holy Ghost euen from their cradles, yea before they were borne, as we Ierem. 1. reade of Ieremie the Prophet, and of S. John Baptiste: and shall Luc. 1 we be perswaded, that the lyke mercy is not shewed to our children in the newe testament, a tyme of all grace, fauoure, mercie and louyng kyndnes? The chyldren of the olde testament after they hadde receaued the holy Ghoste euen in their mothers wombe, were admitted vnto circumcision, yea and that by the commaundement of God: and shall the chyldren of the newe testament be barred & shut out from baptisme, whiche haue nowe receaued the holy Ghoste no lesse then they did in the olde lawe? The best & the chiefest baptisme

is geuen

is geuen to the infantes, and shall we denie then the inferioure and baser baptisme? God hath baptised them with the holy Ghoste, and shall we disdaine to baptise them with water? Saynt Peter sayeth: Can any man forbydde water, that these shoulde not be baptised, whiche, haue receaued the holye Ghoste, as well as we? They that are ledde with the spirite of God, sayth saint Paule, are the sonnes of God. The Infantes of the Christians are ledde with the spirite of God, as we heard before of the Prophet Jeremie and of saynt John Baptiste: and saynt Paule lykewyse calleth the chyldren of the Christians holy and pure: Therefore are they the Sonnes of God. Nowe if the infantes of the Christians be pure and holy and the sonnes of God, shall any man be so rygorous to take that from them, whiche God hath appointed and ordayned for his sonnes? God hath instituted baptisme as a moste certen pledge of his loue, mercy and fauoure towarde his people, and hathe commaunded it to be receaued of all that appertayne vnto hym: and shall we contrary to the commaundement and wyll of God, denie it to the infantes, whome Christe commaunded to be brought vnto hym? whome Christe moste louyngly embraced in his armes? whome Christe moste graciously blessed? whome Christe pronounced to bee longe vnto the kyngdome of God? Whose Aungels Christe affyrmeth to see the face of oure heauenly father? Who seeth not here therfore the madnes of those appsche Anabaptistes, whiche contrary to the commaundement and expresse wyl of God forbyd baptisme to be geuen vnto the Infantes? Oure Sauiour Christ sayeth: Except a man be borne of water and of the spirite, he can not enter in to the kyngdome of God. What other thyng then doo the Anabaptistes by forbyddinge the water of baptisme to be geuen vnto Infantes, then vtterly seclude and put awaye the younge chyldren, so muche as in them is, from the enheritaunce of Gods kyngdome, & so to become for euer heyers of euerlastyng damnation? O moste dampnable secte. O bloudy murtherers both of soules and bodies. As they are of the deuyll their father: So do these wicked Anabaptistes satisfie the desyres of the deuyll their father, whiche was a murtherer from the begynninge, and abode not in the truthe, because there is no truthe in hym. Moreouer doo we not reade, that the Apostles baptysed whole housholdes? And is it to bee thought, that there were no chyldren among them? If it were lawfull at that tyme to baptyse chyldren, is it vnlawfull nowe in these our dayes? If it were thē lawful to dedicate young chyldren to God and to receaue them into the church of Christ by baptisme, that they myght be one body with the elders and partakers of the same glorye, shall it be compted nowe vnlawfull? If the Apostles of Christ and the primatiue churche thoughte it an holy deede and acceptable before the presence of Gods Maiestie to offer theyr Infantes by humble prayers and by the admynistration of holy baptysme vnto God, obeynge the generall commaundement of Christe to baptyse

Verely he is so stoute in the defence of the Baptisme of infantes that he doeth not onely affirme the baptisme of younge chyldren to come from the Apostles vnto vs, and not to be enacted and stablyshed by any councell of menne, but also, that all Infantes ought of necessitie to be baptysed: and that otherwyse they are in great daunger of their saluation. I passe ouer the other auncient fathers and doctours bothe of the Greke and Latin churches, whiche in all their wrytynges alowe the Baptisme of Infantes, as a doctryne comyng from Christe and his Apostles vnto vs. But one thynge I may not passe ouer, howe a certayne Bysshoppe of Rome called Higinus, whiche lyued in the yeare of our Lorde a hundred and xi. as some wryghte, commaunded that Infantes, when they were brought to be baptysed, should haue at the least one Godfather and Godmother, whereby we may also learne, that the baptisme of chyldren is no newe inuention, but an auncient godlye custome commyng vnto vs from the Apostles, and so from their dayes vnto this tyme contynued in the churche of Christ. Austen. Aduersus Donatist. Libr. 4 cap. 4 Higinus.

Father. But the aduersaries obiecte and saye: That chyldren ought not to be baptysed, because they haue no faythe. For these are the wordes of Christe: He that beleueth and is baptysed, shall bee saued. Faythe, saye they, goeth before baptisme. If any man therefore putteth baptisme before fayth, he peruerteth the order of Christes wordes. For as muche therefore as Infantes and specheles chyldren haue not faythe, saye they, therfore ought they not to bee baptysed. Sonne. If the aduersaries doo so greatly reioyse in thys one sentence, whiche you haue alledged out of saynt Marke: what will they saye to thys sentence wrytten in the Gospell of saynte John, whiche also are the wordes of our Sauiour Christe? Marc. 16

Father. What wordes are those? Sonne. Verely, verely I saye vnto thee: Excepte a manne be borne of water and of the spyrite, he can not enter into the kyngdome of God. Here is mention made fyrste of water, and afterwarde of the spirite. Hereof then may we gather that chyldren may be baptysed before they haue faythe. For water is put here before the spirite, whiche spyrite, I meane the holy Ghoste, is the authour and geuer of faythe. Iohn. 3.

If baptisme may be ministred to the specheles chyldren before they beleue, then doo the Anabaptistes playne wronge to the infantes, when they denye them baptisme. And looke what authorite the wycked Anabaptistes may denie baptisme to the Infantes by the vertue of this texte: He that beleueth and is baptised, shalbe saued: Euen with the same authorite will we graunte baptisme to the infantes by the vertue of this text: Verely verely I saye vnto thee: Except a man be borne of water and of the spirite, he can not enter into the kyngdome of God. Marc. 16 Iohn. 3.

Father. How then is that text, which ỹ aduersaries alledge out of Marc. 16

Marc.16 saynt Marke to be vnderstande, whiche mencioneth faythe before baptisme, as though no man oughte to be baptised before he beleueth? ☞ Sonne. It may be aunswered twoo maner of wayes. Firste we shall consyder what goeth before. Thus wryteth the Euangelist, Go ye into all the worlde, and preache the Gospell to euerye creature. He that beleueth, and is baptysed, shall be saued. But he that beleueth not, shalbe dampned.

Here our Sauiour Christe gaue commaundement to his Apostles to preache the Gospell to all reasonable creatures. Nowe if any that heard the preachyng of the Gospell (I speake of thē, which thorowe their age had the vse of reason) beleued the doctrine of the Gospell preached vnto them: he commaunded, that they shouldē be baptised, in token that they were of the housholde of God & enheritours of euerlasting glory. For when thapostles begā firste to preach the Gospell, their hearers were for the moste part Heathen & ignoraunt both of God & of his godly misteries: & therfore so many as beleued the doctrine of the Apostles & desired to be recompted among the Christians, firste confessed their sinnes, afterward protested their faith, & so cōsequētly they were admitted vnto holy baptisme. Thus see we, that faith went before baptisme according to the saying of Christ: I meane in them that had the vse of reason, & were able to cōfesse their faith. Another way it may be aunswered thus: Infantes and speecheles childzen haue fayth: therfore they also oughte to bee

Marc.16 baptised, that they may be saued according vnto Christes saying: He that beleueth and is baptised, shalbe saued. So that this sentence of our Sauiour Christe, whiche the vngodly Anabaptistes wreaste and wrynge for the condempnation of the baptisme of Infantes,

Of the faith of infantes. make nothing for them, but rather stablysheth the baptisme of yoūg childzen against them and agaynst their moste deuelyshe doctrine.

Rom.10. Father. What, hath infantes fayth? S. Paule sayeth: Fayth commeth by hearing: and hearyng cometh by the worde of God. Howe can infantes haue fayth, when they vnderstande not the preachinge of gods worde? Sonne. Whether infants haue faith, or no (I speake of the infantes whiche are the childzen of the Christians) we shall afterwarde consider. But I wyll firste aunswere to the wordes of S. Paule. It is truthe, that faythe cometh by hearing. But this is to be vnderstande of suche as haue age and are endewed with reason, and can discerne good from euyll. The ordinarie waye, whiche God vseth to call suche vnto faythe, is the preachynge of his holye woorde, as we maye see thorowe out the holy Scripture. God saith by the Psalmographe: A people whome I knewe not, haue serued

Psal.18 me: thorowe the hearyng of the eare they obeyed me. And the Psal-

Psal.51. mographe hym selfe sayeth: I wyll teache the wycked thy wayes: and the vngodly shall turne vnto thee. So lykewyse reade we that

Act.14 when the Apostles preached the Gospel of Christ among ẏ Heathē: so many as were tofore appointed vnto euerlasting life, beleued, and with great ioye receaued the doctrine of the gospel: so ẏ faith cometh

by hearing

by hearing, and hearing cometh by the worde of God, as God sayeth by the prophet: Like as the rain & snow cõmeth down from heauen and returneth not thither again, but watereth the earth, maketh it fruteful and grene, that it may geue corn to the sower, and bread to him that eateth: so the worde also that cometh out of my mouth, shall not turn void again vnto me, but shal accomplish my wil, and prosper in the thing wherto I send it. For although God is able by hys holy spirit to turn the harts of al men, to plant faith in the minds of al men, and to bring al men vnto the knowledge of him, and of hys sonne Christ Iesu, which knowledge bringeth euerlasting life, as he is able to fede the whole worlde without meat, drincke or bread, as our sauiour Christ sayeth. Man shall not liue with breade alone, but with euery worde that commeth out of the mouth of God: yet as his ordinary way to feede his creatures, is to geue them corporall sustenance, so likewise to plant faith and true religion in the harts of mẽ his ordinary way is the preaching of his holy worde: so that it is not without a cause said of S. Paule: I am not ashamed of the Gospel of Christ. For it is the power of god vnto saluation to euery one that beleueth God was able to haue conuerted al, both Iewes and gentiles without the preaching of any man vnto the faith: not withstãding in thold law to turn the Iewes he sent his Prophets, Priestes and Leuites to preach vnto them: and in the new law to turn both the Iewes and gentiles he sente his Apostles, that by this meanes they might beleue and be saued. God was able to haue cõuerted the city of Corinthe without Paules preaching: notwithstanding he vsed his ordinary meane to cal them vnto the faith, and therfore saide vnto Paul: Feare not, but speake, and hold not thy peace: for I haue much people in this city. The like examples finde we in other places of the holye scripture, as of Philip & the chamberlain, of Saule and Ananias, of Peter and Cornelius &c.

Thordinary way to cal such, as are growen vp in age, and haue the vse of reason, vnto faith and vnto the true knowledge of God, is the preaching of Gods worde, as S. Paul sayth, faith commeth by hearing, and hearing commeth by the worde of God. And as the Psalmograph saith: The declaration of thy worde, O Lorde, geueth light, and openeth vnderstanding to the litle ones. Again: The law of the Lorde turneth soules, geueth wisdome to the humble, maketh merye the heartes, lightneth the eies: and is worthy more to be desired thẽ gold & precious stone: yea it is sweter then the honye and the honye combe. Father. But this ordinary way vseth not God toward the infantes, which haue neither speach nor vse of reason, to bringe them vnto the faith. Son. No verely. Father. Howe then doo they obtayne fayth? Sonne. By the holy ghost. For true and christen faithe, is the worke and frute of the holy ghost: without whose deuine inspiratiõ al the preaching in the worlde can not bring faith to a manne, as S. Paul saith: Neyther he that planteth, nor he that watereth is anye thing, but God, which geueth the encrease. And our Sauior Christ

Saint Mark also telleth in his Euangelical history, how Christ rebuked them that forbadd the children to come vnto him, and commaunded, that they shuld come vnto him: Again how he toke the children in his armes laid his hands vpon them, & blessed them. Are not al these things manifest signes and euident tokens of Christes dere loue toward children. If he commaunded the chyldren to come vnto him: if he enbraced them in his armes: if he blessed them, is it not a good argument, that they pleased him? If they pleased him: then doth it consequētly folow, that they wer not without faith. For without faith it is impossible to please god, sayeth

We reade that God loued Jacob, yea and that before he was borne. Genes. 25
But God loueth none, that hath not his spirite, as we heard before Roma. 9.
out of S. Paule. It therfore foloweth, that Jacob had the spirit of Mala. 1
God, yea and that before he was born. Of Jeremy the Prophet the Roma. 8
scripture saith, that before he was fashioned in his mothers wõbe, Iere. 1
God knew him, that is to say, fauored and loued him: Again, or that euer he was born, God sanctified him. Wherwith was Jeremy sãctified, but by the holy Ghost and faith? So doth it then follow, that Luc. 1.
Jeremy had both the holy ghost and faith. Of Jhõ Baptist we rede that he was filled with the holy Ghost euen frõ his mothers wõbe:
Again, that being in his mothers wombe he spronge for ioy, so sone as Mary the mother of Christ saluted his mother Elizabeth, reioy-sing without al doubt, ẏ the time of grace was come, wherin Christ the sauior of the world so oft promised and so long loked for should be born vnto the great comfort of all people. Thus se we, that infantes also haue the holy Ghost, as these aforesaid ensamples of Jacob, of Jeremye, of Jhon Baptist &c. doo manifestlye declare. Further- Ioel. 2 more God him self sayeth by the prophet Joel: I wil pour out of my Act. 2

spirit of God, as it is all ready proued by the holy scripture, then are they also the sonnes of God, as S. Paul sayeth: They that are led Roma. 8 with the spirit of God, are the sonnes of God. If they be sonnes, thẽ are they also heirs: the heirs, I meane, of God, and heires annexed

For God him self nombreth the yong infantes among his people. I Genes. 17.

Joel sayeth: Cal the congregation, and gather the people together, warn the congregation, gather thelders, bring the children & suckelinges together. &c. Father. But the aduersaries obiect and say: We se no frutes of faith in the infantes, neither in word or in work: therfore we may right well dout of their faith, yea we may conclude that they haue no faith, Son. That thinfants haue faith, we haue to fore hard. Now wheras thaduersaries say, that thinfantes shew no fru-tes of faith, & therfore they haue no faith: this is no good argument

Saint

S. Paul, who knoweth not? was a diligent preacher of the Lordes worde, and had a strong faith in Christ. Shall we notwithstanding say, that when S. Paul after his great & vnrestfull labors gaue him self to rest, & to the quietnes of swete slepe for the comfort of his wearied body, & for the recouery of his wasted strengthes, and ceased to preach, to pray, to make prouision for the poore &c. he had no fayth? Faith without al doubt remained in S. Paul being a slepe, although he brought not forth the workes & frutes of faith. Euen so likewyse dwelleth faith in children thorowe the secreat ministery of the holye Ghost, although they be not yet come vnto the time of declaryng of faith by their workes. And God, which kept the faith of S. Paule, when he was at reast, doth also kepe and norish the treasure of faith in ỹ ỹg ones by his holy spirit, vntil the time come of bringing forth the frutes of faith, and in the meane time they are counted faythful before God. Is there any man so fond or so folish, that wil cal a ỹg gryft of the first yeres gryfting fruteles and barren, when as it can not for lacke of time and age bring forth as yet any frute? If we can not cal a tree vnfrutefull vntill the time come of bringinge forthe of frute: so ought we not to cal a childe vnbeleuing and faithles, vntill he come vnto the time of declaring his faith. As a childe both is and also may be called a reasonable creature, although for lacke of tyme and age he can not vse reason: so likewise may a childe haue fayth & be called faithful, although for lack of time & age, it can shew as yet no good workes, which are the tokens and frutes of faith. The kingdom of God, sayth our sauiour Christ, is, euen as if a man should sow sede in the ground, & shuld slepe, and notwithstanding it riseth vp night and day and the sede springeth and groweth vp, while he is not a ware. What cã be more plainly spoken against the wisdome of mannes reason, then ỹ Christ saith here? Reason can not se howe infantes can haue faith & beleue. But of these wordes of Christ we learne, that faith, euen whẽ we knowe not, yea when we are a slepe, groweth and encreaseth in vs: so that euery faithful christian may say: I slepe, and yet my hart and take them for his sonnes & heirs, as S. peter saith: The promes was made to you and to your children. Father. Hitherto thou haste rightwell setforth the Baptisme of infantes, confirminge the same both by the holye scriptures, and by the testimonies of the auncient fathers of Christes church, as I may speak nothing of thy answers to the objections of the Anabaptistes, wherwith they goo about to impugne the baptisme of infantes. But nowe come of and tell me, what thou thinckest of those children of the christians, which preuented with death come not vnto baptisme, but depart vnbaptised. Iudgest thou them damned or saued? Let me heare thine opinion in this behalfe. Sonne. I know how hard and rigorous diuers fathers of Christes church are to such infants as die without baptisme, whose names I passe ouer with silence. And althoughe I reuerence bothe them and their writinges, yet their iudgement in this behalf I can by no meanes alow, forasmuche (so farre as I haue learned,) it is not only iniurious to the grace of God, but also it vtterly dissenteth from the verity of Gods word, which we all are bound to defend against al men and all mennes inuentions, that the victorye may be Gods and his sonne Christes: yea that God may be true, and al men liers. Father. How proouest thou, that the doctrine, which generallye condempneth al that die without baptism, is iniurious to the grace of God? Son. First I here protest, that, as you haue all ready hard, I vtterly abhorre and detest, I wholly contempne and condempne the wicked doctrine of the Anabaptistes, which denye the baptisme of infantes as a thing vnprofitably vsed in the church of Christ, and I beleue with my hart, and confesse with my mouth, that baptisme is an holy sacrament, and a most certen signe of Gods grace, fauor and mercy toward the faithfull, instituted of the Lorde Iesu to be frequented and vsed in his church, and reuerently to be receiued of al degrees and estates of what so euer age they are, so that who so euer may haue conuenient time to be baptised, and yet refuse to take that holy Sacrament, and willingly reiect and cast away baptisme as I beleue them not to be led with the spirite of God, but wyth the spirit of error, not with the spirit of Christ, but with the spirit of antichrist, so likewise I am fullye perswaded that they haue no portyon in the enheritaunce of Gods kingdome. And this also doo I speake of all such parents, as wil not suffer their children to be baptised being infected with the pestiferous plage of Anabaptisme. Notwythstanding this protestation, I plainly confesse, that I nether do, nor can allow the doctrin of them, which generally condempne al such, and seclude them from the kingdome of God, that die without the baptisme of water, whether they be infantes, or of a more ripe age. For, as I said before, this doctrine is not only iniurious to the grace of God, but also it vtterly dissenteth from the verite of Gods word. Father. Let me heare it proued, that this doctrin is iniurious to the grace of God. Sonne. The holy scripture in euery place attributeth our saluation to the free grace of God, and not either to oure owne

In the old testament it was not lawful to circūcise the male childzen of ẏ Hebzues befoze the viii. day: who douteth, but that many of their infants, died befoze that time, & so departed without circūcision? shal we now say, that al those childzen perished & wer damned? no her is thē thys

Galat.5 Again. In Chzist Jesu nether is circūcision any thing wzoth, nether yet vncircūcision, but faith, which wozketh by loue. Once again: circūcision is nothing, & vncircumcision is nothing but the keping of Gods cōmaundements. Foz this cause the holy scripture calleth the

against the soul, & to becom new mẽ in their life & cõuersatiõ, which is the true circũcision, & not the cutting away of the foreskin. We are the circũcision, saith S. Paul, which serue god in the spirit. Again, by Christ are ye circũcised with circũcision which is don without hands, forasmuch as ye haue put of the sinful body of the flesh thorow ỹ circũciliõ that is in christ, in that ye are buried w̃ him thorow baptisme in whõ ye are also risẽ again thorow faith, that is wrought by thope ration of god, which raised him frõ death. Hereof thẽ doth it folow, ỹ if god saued not the fathers of thold testament for circũcision, but for his gratious & merciful promes: again, if god receiued vnto his glory the childrẽ of the Hebrues, before they wer cõprehended in the couenãt, which god made with their fathers, although thei died vncircũcised: nether doth he saue vs for thoutward baptisme, which is the washing of ỹ body by water, but for his gratious promes: again that he wil receiue the children of the christiãs, because they be mẽbers of his church, vnto euerlasting life, though it so chaunce ỹ they die without baptisme. For it is not to be thought that god wil deale as mercifully with the christiãs, and with their children, thẽ he did with the fathers & with their infants in the time of thold testamẽt. The hand & mighty power of god is not so shortned, that it can not now also help. Nether is his ear so stopped, that it cãnot now hear. He is a sauing God at all times a like. And moreouer loke of what price & dignity baptisme is now with vs christians: euẽ of the same price & dignity was circumcision with the Iewes, into whose place baptisme hath succeded. And loke of what necessity baptisme is required now of vs Christians, euen of the very same necessitye was circumcision required of the fathers in the old testament. But God by his grace for his merciful promesse sake saued the infants of the Hebrues, although they departed before the viii. day & so wer vncircũcised: in like mãner god by his grace for his merciful promes sake saueth the yong children of the christiãs, although by the prouidẽce of God they are taken away frõ this life before they be baptised. S. Paul calleth circũcision not the self righteousnes or the righteous making, but a seale of righteousnes. And to declare ỹ righteousnes that is to say, forgeuenes of sinnes, saluation & euerlasting life cometh not of any outward sign, sacramẽt, ceremony or work, but of the fre grace of god thorow faith: ỹ blessed apostle S. Paul expresseth with manifest words, ỹ Abraham was iustified & accepted for righteous before god thorow faith, before he was circumcised. His words are these: we say, ỹ faith was reckned to Abrahã for righteousnes. How was it then reckned? whẽ he was in the circũciliõ, or when he was in the vncircũciliõ? Not in the time of circũcision, but whẽ he was yet vncircũcised. And he receiued the sign of circumcision, as a seal of the righteousnes of faith, which he had yet being vncircumcised, that he should be the father of al thẽ that beleue, though they be not circumcised, that righteousnesse might be imputed to them also: and that he might be the father of circumcision, not vnto thẽ only which came of the circumcised, but vnto thē also that walk in ẏ steps of the faith, ẏ was in our father Abrahā before the time of circūcisiō For the promes, that he should be ẏ heir of the world, hapned not to Abrahā or to his sede thorow the law, but thorow ẏ rightousnes of faith. For if they which are of the law, be heirs, thē is faith but vain & the promes of none effect. Forasmuch therfore as baptisme is vnto the christiās euen the veri same in effect, that circūcision was to the Jewes, I mean not the self rightousnes or rightous making, but only a seal of rightousnes & a sign or tokē of gods fauor toward vs (for thoutward baptisme doth nether geue vs the spirit of god, nether yet grace, ẏ is to say, the fauor of God, by any power or influence that it hath: otherwise should it com to pas, that whosoeuer wer baptised, although he wer an infidel & vtterly wout faith, should receiue this precious gift, that is, the spirit & grace of god, which is not so.) it followeth, ẏ not thoutward washing in water saueth vs, but the fre grace & mere mercy of god. And as thenioyning of this outward baptisme doth not saue: so likewise the wāting of it (if it be not contēned of any man ẏ is grown vp in age, but he wold gladli haue it, if he might obtain it, as many holy martirs in times past preuēted by death thorow the cruelty of tirāts died without baptisme of water, beinge in dede baptised inwardly with the holy gost, & outwardly wyth theyr own blud: or if an infant of the christian taken away by death, ether before the birth, or in the birth, or immediatly after the birth should depart before the baptisme of water cā be ministred vnto the child) doth not condemn. This cōsidered S. Peter right wel, whē he wrot on this manner: Baptisme now saueth vs, not the putting away of the filthines of the flesh, but in that a good conscience consenteth to god by the resurrection of Jesus Christ, which is on the right hand of god, & is gone into heauen, angels, power & might subdued vnto him. Hereof then may we truly conclude, that forasmuch as the outward baptisme, which is don by water, nether geueth the holy gost nor the grace of God, but only is a signe & token therof, if any of the christen infants preuēted by death, depart without baptisme (necessity so cōpelling) they are not dāned, but be saued by the fre grace of god, forasmuch as we to fore hard, they be contained in the couenāt of grace, they be mēbers of gods church, God promiseth to be theyr God, they haue faith, & be endued with the spirit of God, & so finally sonnes & heirs of god, and heirs annexed with Christ Jesu. who seeth not now, that the doctrin: which generally condēneth al such, be they yōg or old, that die without the baptisme of water, is iniurious to the grace of god, wherby alone we be saued? For if the baptisme of water saueth either in part or in whole, so resteth not al our saluatiō only & alone in the fre grace of god, nether is God a perfect & sufficient sauior. But as god in thold law saued many both yong and old, which wer neuer circūcised: so likewise it is not to be douted, but many also in this time of grace both yong and old god saueth, although preuented by death, & not of any contēpt, they die vnbaptised, seyng God

God is as merciful vnto vs, which are of the spiritual Israel, as he was vnto carnal Israel. For as S. Paul saith: They are not al Israelites, which are of Israel: nether are they all childrē straightwais, ꝑ are the sede of Abrahā. They which are the childrē of the flesh, are not the childrē of god: but they which be the childrē of promes, are counted the sede &c. Father. I haue hard some say, that ther is great difference betwene the sacraments of the old law, & the sacramēts of the new law. Sonne. It is truth. For the Jewes had circumcision: in whose place the christians haue baptisme. The Jewes had ꝑ Paschal lamb, in whose sted the christiās haue the lords supper. The Jewes sacramēts prefigured and tofore taught Christ to come. The sacraments of the christians do plainly declare & shew vnto vs that christ is come, & hath perfectly fulfilled whatsoeuer was wrytte of him in the law, in the psalmes & in the prophets. The Jews sacramēts had specially in outward apearāce promises of corporal benefits anexed vnto thē: the sacraments of the christians haue adioyned vnto them promises of spiritual & heuenly benefits, as the grace, fauor & mercy of god, remission of sinnes, the gift of the holy gost, quietnes of cōscience, & thassurance of euerlasting life. The sacramēts of thold testament only appertained vnto the nation of the Jewes: but the sacraments of the new testament belong both vnto the Jew and vnto ꝑ gentil, yea vnto the whole world, euen vnto so many as turn frō idolatry vnto the true worshipping of that one & alone liuing god, and with sure faith embrace the gospel of our sauior Jesus Christ. Father My meaning is this. The sacraments of thold law wer onli signes & tokens of gods grace & fauor to the Jewes: but the sacraments of the new testament (as I haue hard say) are not only signes & tokēs, notes & markes, testimonies and seales of gods grace, but they also geue grace to such as receiue thē. Son. This your hearsay hath sounded no truth in your ears. For this doctrin is cōtrary to the word of God, brought lately into the church by the papists, & is greatly iniurious both to the grace of god, & to the blud of christ, & also to the dignity of faith. If our sacramēts, which of thē selues are nothyng els then, as S. Paul termeth thē, the seales of rightousnes, or of our righteous makig by faith, and witnesses of gods fauor toward vs, wer of such vertue, ꝑ they could geue grace, that is ꝑ fauor of god, remission of sins, iustification, the holy gost euerlasting life &c. by ꝑ worke wrought, as they say, or by any power ꝑ remaineth in the outwarde signes: so should it folow, ꝑ our iustification depend not onlye of ꝑ free grace of god, but of workes: which is most false: If it be of grace, as S. Paul witnesseth, thē is it not now of workes For then grace is no more grace. Again. By grace are ye saued thorow faith, & that not of your selues. It is the gift of God, & cometh not of workes, least any man should bost him self. Also in another place: Not by the works of righteousnes, which we wrought, but according to his mercy he saued vs &c. that we iustified by his grace, should be made heirs, according to hope, of euerlasting life.

The difference betwene ꝑ sacramentes of the old & new law.

☞ to be sayd, that grace is contained in the Sacraments essētially, as water in a vessell, or Medicyne in a boxe: yea thus to thyncke, is erroneous. But the Sacramentes are saide to contayne grace, because they signifye it, and because, excepte there be a defaulte of the receyuers part, in them grace is alwayes geuen, yet so understa ding the matter, that grace is in the soul, & not in the visible sighes; In consideration wherof they are called the vessels of grace. They may also be called vessels in another respect. For as that which is in the vessel is not of it, nor of the substāce therof, but yet is drawn frō it: so likewise grace is not of the sacraments nor out of ỳ sacramēts, but it springeth frō the euerlasting fountain, and is drawn frō that of the very soul in the sacramentes. Another frier called Franciscus Maronis hath these words also. If the very sacramēts by their own vertue shuld cause grace, thē such ministers as minister ỳ sacramēts shuld geue ỳ holy goost. Who seeth not, ỳ the sacramēts by thē selues, & by their own power do not geue grace, nor ỳ spirit of god, nether iustifye they the receiuer? If righteousnes come by workes, thē died Christ in vain. By faith doth god purify our harts, & by the grace of the lord Jesu are we saued. Nether he that plāteth, nor yet he ỳ watereth is any thing worth, but God, which geueth the encrease. In Christ Jesu neither circumcision nor vncircumcision is anye thinge worth, but faith which worketh bi loue. In cōsideration wherof our sauior Christ, when he speaketh of baptisme, ioyneth the water & the spirit together, or baptisme & faith, which is the frute of the spirit, to declare that outward baptisme without the spirite & faith auaileth nothing. These are his words: Except a man be borne of the water & of the spirit, he can not enter into the kingdō of God. Again, he that beleueth & is baptised shalbe saued. So likewise do the Apostles of Christ, as the holy scriptures doo euidentlye declare. For when the Jewes hearing Peters sermon, wherin he rebuked thē for their cruel murdering of Christ, wer pricked in their harts, & said vnto him & vnto thother apostles. Ye men & brethren what shal we doo? Peter said vnto thē: Repent ye of your sinnes, & let euery one of you be baptised in the name of Jesu Christ vnto the remission of sins, & ye shal receiue the gift of the holy goost. When the Eunuche said vnto Philip: Behold water, what letteth, that I may not be baptised? Philip answered: If thou beleuest frō thy whole hart, it is lawful. And the eunuch said: I beleue that Jesus Christ is the son of God. Likewise S. Paul, whē he shuld baptise the keper of the prison, said vnto him: beleue thou in the lord Jesus, & thou shalt be saued. And in his Epistle vnto bishoppe Titus he writeth thus: God according to hys mercy hath saued vs by the fountaine of the new birth and renuing of the holy Ghost, which he shed on vs aboundantly thorow Jesus Christ our sauior, that we iustified by his grace shuld be made heirs, according to hope of euerlasting life. Father. Thou haste aboundantly satisfied me in this poynt. Lette me heare it nowe proued by the holye Scripture, that that doctrine, which teacheth that christen infants dying without the outward baptisme of water perish & are damned vtterly dissenteth from the verity of gods word, as thou hast al redy proued, that it is intutions to the grace of God. Sonne. First, as we haue to fore hearde, God hathe promised not onlye to be GOD of the auncient beleuers, but also of their children. Nowe what other thing is it to be the God of the faithfull peoples children, then to be their sauior and blessed maker? If God, which is faithfull in all hys

as to be present & to be geuen, when the sacraments are ministred, & otherwise not, so ỹ the spirit & grace of god must wait & attend vpō
those outward sings, as seruants do attend & wait vpon their lordes

Cornelius the Centurion doth euidently declare. For Cornelus & al Act.10 his houshold (as blessed Luke testifieth) receiued the holy ghost, before they wer baptised: insomuch ỹ Peter said: May any mā forbid, ỹ these shuld be baptised with water, which haue receiued the holye ghost, as well as we? And so he cōmaunded thē to be baptised in the name of the lord. Here may we se, that ỹ spirit of god lighteth wher he wil, nether is he bound to any thing. Hereof also may we learn, ỹ the sacraments are geuen to be an outward witnes vnto al the congregation of ỹ grace, which is geuen before priuately vnto euery mā so that thorow baptisme the congregation of god receiueth thinkant into ỹ churth of christ, which was receiued before of god thorow the grace of his promise: Who seeth not now, ỹ baptisme it self bringeth not grace, but doth testifi vnto ỹ cōgregation, ỹ he which is baptised hath alredy receiued grace & the spirit of god, & is acepted of god for his merciful promes sake a dere child and heir of euerlasting glory?
Again, who knoweth not, ỹ many euen amōg ỹ gentils, as Job and such like, vnder thold law, wer thelect & chosē people of god, yea and had ỹ spirit & grace of God, & were saued, although outwardly they wer not circūcised, being notwithstanding inwardly circūcised thois a Iew outward, nether is that circumcision, which is outward in the flesh: but he is a Iew, whiche is hid wyth in, and the circumcision of the heart is the true circumcision, which consisteth in the spirit & not in the letter, whose praise is not of men, but of God? And it is not to be douted, but ỹ euen among the turkes & the other heathen, there are many spiritually baptised, & so are saued, although theyr bodies want the water of baptisme. For he is not a Christian only, which is washed with water, nether is that baptisme only, which is outward in ỹ flesh, but ỹ is the very baptisme, which God alloweth:

euen to

to be baptised in harte thorow the spirite of God, As S. Peter saith: Baptisme nowe saueth vs, not the putting away of the filthynes of the flesh, but in that a good conscience consenteth to God by the resurrection of Jesus Christ. S. Paule also saith: we are the circumcision, whiche serue God in the spirite. Againe, by Christ are ye circumcised with circumcision whiche is done without handes, forasmuche as ye haue put of the sinful body of the flesh thorowe the circumcision that is in Christe, in that ye are also buryed with him thorowe Baptisme, in whome ye are also rysen againe thorowe fayth, that is wrought by the operation of God, whiche reysed hym from death. Item who doubted, that many and diuerse infantes of the Israelites died without circumcision? Shall we saye, that all these perished and were dampned for lacke of circumcision? God forbyd. God saued not these infantes for the circumcision sake, but for his mercifull promes sake, and because they were comprehended in the couenaunt of grace, which he had made with Abraham and his posterite. And is it to be thought, that this Lorde our God, that father of mercies and God of all consolation and comfort, wyll be lesse mercifull to the infantes of the Christians then he was to the yong chyldren of the Hebrues, seyng that the very same promyse of grace, mercie and fauour is made to vs, that was made to them? The infantes of the Hebrues dying without circumcision were saued because of the promes: and shal our children (whome in our hartes we haue consecrated and cõmended to God, whome also we haue greatly wyshed to haue bene baptysed, if they had not bene taken awaye by soden death) dying without baptisme, be dampned, seyng that the same gracious promes doth no lesse appertayne vnto them, then it doth to the other? Who seeth not nowe, howe greatly their doctrine dissenteth from the truthe of Gods worde, which teache that the infants of the christiãs dying without baptisme perish & are damned?

Moreouer doth not S. Paule cal the children of the Christians pure and cleane? If they be pure and cleane, can the lacke of a lytle water make them so vnpure and so vncleane, that they shall be caste out of the fauour of God, and haue their portion with the dampned whites in that lake that burneth with fyre and brymstone? They that be pure, shall se God. The childrẽ are pure. The chyldren therfore shall see God. The Aungels, whiche as ministers attend vpon the children for their health and safegarde, see the face of our heauenly father: and shall the infantes, vpon whome they wayte at the appointment of God, be cast from the sight of that heauenly father, because they departe vnbaptised? The infants of the Christians are so derely beloued of God, that he sendeth his Aungels to attende vpõ them: and shall the lacke of an outwarde signe be of suche force, that it shall quenche this loue of God towarde the infantes, seyng whom God ones loueth, he loueth vnto the ende? Therefore are the infantes of the Christians the sonnes of God. If they be sonnes, thē are they also heiers: the heyers, I meane of God, and heyers annered with Christ. Of Gods election.

Besydes all these thinges, what shall we saye of Gods election? Can the lacke of outwarde baptisme destroye and make of none effect the election of God? So that whom God hath chosen vnto euerlasting saluation, the want of an externall signe shall caste downe vnto euerlasting damnation? S. Paule saith: whome God appointed before, them also he called. And whome he hath called, them also he iustified: and whome he iustified, them also he glorified. What shall we then saye to these thynges? If God be on our syde, who can be against vs? Whiche spared not his owne sonne, but gaue hym for vs all: howe can it be, that with hym he should not geue vs al thyngs also? Who shall laye any thyng to the charge of Gods elect and chosen? It is God that iustifieth, who is he that can condemne? It is Christe, whiche died, yea rather, whiche is rysen againe, whiche is also on the right hande of God, and maketh intercession for vs. Who shall separate vs frō the loue of God? &c. I am sure, that no creature shall be able to plucke vs from the loue of God, whiche is in Christe Jesu our Lorde. Our Sauiour Christ saith also: All that the father geueth me, shall come to me, and him that commeth to me, I caste not away. For I came downe from heauen, not to doo that I wyll, but that he will, whiche hath sent me. And this is the fathers wyl, whiche sent me, that of all, whiche he hath geuen me, I shall loose nothyng, but rayse them vp again at the last day. Agayne he sayeth: My sheape heare my voyce, and I knowe them, and they folowe me, and I geue vnto them euerlasting lyfe, and they shall neuer perysshe, neyther shall any man plucke them out of my hande. My father whiche gaue them me, is greater then all, and no man is able to take them out of my fathers hand. If the election of God be certen, as it is moste certen, who learneth not then of these aforesayde sentences, that Gods elect can by no meanes perysshe: to be elected, is to be saued: The infantes are elected: the infantes therefore are saued. God, sayth S. Paule, did chose vs in Christ, before the foundations of the worlde were layde, that we should be holy and without blame before him thorowe loue: whiche ordained vs before thorowe Jesus Christe to be heyers vnto hym selfe accordinge to the good pleasure of his wil, to the prayse of the glory of his grace, wherwith he hath made vs accepted thorowe the beloued, by whome we haue redemption thorowe his bloud, euen the forgeuenes of sinnes, accordyng to the rychesse of his grace. Paule

Paule who learneth not that our saluation dependeth onely of the election of God, and not of any outwarde sacrament: Neither are we then first elected, when we be washed with the water of baptisme: but we were elected in Christ Jesu, sayeth S. Paule, before the foundations of the worlde were layde: that we may certenly knowe, that our whole saluation dependeth not of anye externall worke, but of the free election and vndoubted grace of God.

Who seeth not nowe, that the doctrine of them, whiche teache, ỹ Christen infantes dying without the outwarde baptisme of water, perysshe and are dampned, vtterly dissenteth from the verite of gods worde? They therfore that teache and holde this doctrine, are not only enemies to the saluation of the infantes, but they also vtterly obscure, yea and quenche the grace and election of God, and the secret operation of the holy ghost in the tender breastes of the most tender infantes, and attribute to an externall signe more then right is.

Father. What sayest thou then to these wordes of Christe? Verely, verely I saye vnto the: except a man be borne of water and of the spirite, he can not enter into the kyngdome of God. Are not these wordes plaine enough? Doth it not euidently appeare here, that except a man be borne not only of the spirite, but also of water, he can not be saued? How can infantes then be saued, if they be not borne of water? Sonne. The lyke maner of speaking almoste reade we in the holy scripture concerning circumcision, when God sayde vnto Abraham: Se thou kepe my testament both thou and thy sede after thee in their generations. This is my testament, whiche ye shall kepe, betwene me and you, and thy seede after thee. Euery man chylde among you shalbe circumcised. Ye shal circumcise the flesshe of your foreskynne, and it shall be a token of the bonde betwene me and you: and euery manchylde of eyght dayes olde shalbe circumcised among you, and suche as be in your generatiõs, and borne at home, and he that is bought with mony of any straunger, whiche is not of thy seede. He that is borne in thyne house, & he also that is bought with money, must nedes be circumcised, and my testament shall be in your flesh for an euerlasting bonde. And the vncircumcised manchilde, in whose flesshe the foreskynne is not circumcised, that soule shall perysshe from his people, because he hath broken my testament.

Who seeth not here, what streight charge God geueth concernyng circumcision? He must nedes, sayeth he, be circumcised. Agayne, The vncircumcised manchyldes soule shall perysshe. Who perceaueth not nowe by these wordes howe streight God here requireth circumcision: so that as the wordes do importe outwardly, the manchilde of necessitie must be circumcised, otherwyse his soule perisheth, &c.

What shall we then saye to those infantes, whiche died before the eight daye? are they dampned? Where then is this promes of God become? I wyll be thy God, and the God of thy seede. What shall we saye of Gods election & predestination? Are they made frustrate and voyde, because the flesshe of the foreskynne is not circumcised?

What

What shall we then saye to these wordes of thapostle? Whome God appointed before, them also he called. And whome he hathe called, them also he iustified: and whom he iustified, them also he glorified. What shall we then saye to these thinges? If God be on our syde, who can be against vs? Againe, God did electe & chose vs in Christe Iesu, before the foundacions of the worlde were layed. And a lytle after he sayeth: God hath predestinate and tofore ordayned vs thorowe Iesus Christe to be heyers vnto him selfe, accordinge to the good pleasure of his will. What shall we also saye to the operation of the holy Ghost in the tēder breast of the infant? Is that also vaine, if circumcision be absent, specially when necessitie compelleth? But howe standeth that with this saying of S. Paule? They that are ledde with the spirite of God, are the sonnes of God. If the infants be ledde with ỳ spirite of God, as we haue tofore heard: so foloweth it that they are the sonnes of God. If they be the sonnes of God, thē are they also the heyers of God. If they be the heyers of God, then are they also heyers annexed with Christ. If they be fellow heyers with Christe, howe can the lacke of an outwarde ceremonie condempne them, seyng it is wrytten: there is no condempnation to thē, which are in Christ Iesu? who doubteth, but that there were many infantes, whome that moste bloody tyraunt Herode slewe, when he pursued the Lorde Iesus that new borne kyng of the Iewes, which in that persecution died without circumcision? Shall we saye, that these all perysshed and are dampned? and not rather (as the churche of Christe beleueth and confesseth) that they are blessed sainctes and glorious martyrs in the kingdome of God? King Pharao gaue cōmaundement to the mydwyues of the Hebrewes womē, that in the byrthtyme they should kyll all the malechyldren of the Hebrues, and by no meanes to suffer them to lyue. What if this bloudy commaūdement of this most bloudy kyng had bene obeied of the midwyues so that they had slayne the infantes, before they had bene circumcised: is it to be thought, that they had so fallen away from the fauour of God, that notwithstanding his mercifull promes and couenante made with them and with their fathers, they had perysshed and bee dampned? The holy scripture declareth, that all the tyme that the people of Israell were in the wyldernes, whiche was the space of fourty yeares, there was no circumcision vsed among them: is it not to be supposed, that many in the meane tyme bothe of the younger & of the elder sorte died? Shall we nowe saye, that al suche were dāpned, because they died vncircumcised? God forbid. Therefore as the young children of the Hebrues many times died before they were circumcised, and yet notwithstanding for Gods election and promes sake they were saued: so likewyse the infantes of the Christiās preuented by death, remayne styll in the fauour of God and state of saluation, although (necessite so compelling) they die without baptisme, forasmuche as the gracious and mercifull promes of God pertayneth nowe no les to the infantes of the Christians, then it did in tymes

ter and of the spirite, he can not enter into the kyngdome of God.
Sonne. The lyke manner of speaking reade we in the Gospell of S. John, and they also are the wordes of Christe. Verely, verely I saye Iohn.6
vnto you: Except ye eate the flesche of the sonne of man and drynke his bloud: ye haue no lyfe in you. Some of the auncient fathers vnderstanding these wordes literally, thought that whosoeuer dyed without the receauing of the Sacrament of the body and bloud of Christ, was in great daunger of damnation: and therefore they ordayned, that the younge infantes also, so sone as they were baptised, should receaue the Sacrament of the body and bloude of Christe, lest that they departing without it, should fall from the fauoure of God, and so perishe: when to saye the truthe, these wordes of Christ are not to be vnderstande literally, but spiritually, not of the Sacramentall, but of the spirituall eating and drinking of Christes body and bloud, whiche is done by faith. And as these fathers grated to harde vpon this sentence of Christ: Except ye eate the flesche of the Iohn.6
sonne of man and drynke his bloud: ye haue no lyfe in you: so lykewyse did those fathers cleue tomuche to these woordes of Christe. Except a man be borne of water and of the spirite, he can not enter Ihon.3.
into the kyngdome of God: when they taught, that the chyldren dying without the baptisme of water perysche and are not saued. For as many of the people of God are saued, which neuer receaued the Sacrament of the body and bloude of Christ: so lykewyse are many saued, though they were neuer outwardly baptised with water, for as muche as the regeneration of a Christian consisteth rather in the spirite then in the flesche: euen as the circumcision also of the Jewes consisted not in the letter but in the spirite: not in the circumcision of the flesche, but in the circumcision of the hearte. This text therfore of Christ: Except a man be borne of the water and of the spirite, &c. Iohn.3 is to be vnderstande of suche as may conueniently be baptised, and yet notwithstanding contemptuously refuse baptisme, and in this behalfe despyse the ordinaunce of Christe, & by this meanes seclude them selues from the company of Gods people: These shall not enter into the kyngdome of God. For this contempt of the outwarde sacrament is an euident argument and a sure signe, that suche despisers of Gods ordinaunce haue not the spirite of God, without the Reade y whiche no man can be saued, as S. Paule saieth: If any man haue xxvii. Epistle of not the spirite of Christe, he is none of Gods: and so dooth it consequently folowe, that they haue no portion in the enheritaunce of S. Bernarde.
Christe and of God. But as touching the young infantes, whome Rom.8
their parentes would gladly offer vnto God by baptisme, and in their hartes they haue all ready dedicated them to God by prayer & a free willing spirite, if they had not bene preuented by death: they are free from this sentence of damnation: not only they, but also all other persones of what so euer age they are, if they do not contemne

the ordi-

the ordinaunce of God, but rather in the hartes moste desirously wyshe to receaue that outwarde baptisme of water according to the institution of Christ, if they might come by it. Suche as are thus affected toward holy baptisme, ar without doubt led with the spirite of God, and though baptisme of water be denied, yet inwardly beyng baptised with the holy ghoste, they can not perysshe, but haue euerlasting lyfe, as we reade of a certaine Emperour called Valentinianus, whiche being desyrous to be baptised, and notwithstanding preuented by death, came not vnto baptisme, & yet died in the Lord, and is saued, as S. Ambrose aboundauntly proueth. And who knoweth not, ỹ in ỹ primatiue church many wer sodenly takẽ away thorowe the tyrannie of wycked rulers from this lyfe, before that they could attayne vnto the Sacrament of baptisme, and suffered martyrdome for the testimonie of the Lorde Jesus? Shall we saye that all these perysshed, because they lacked the water of baptisme? God forbyd. Who seeth not nowe then, that this sentence of Christe, Except a man be borne of the water and of the spirite, he can not enter into the kingdome of God, is not so strayghtly to be taken, that we should iudge all those damned, whiche die without the baptisme of water? The theafe died without baptisme, yet the theafe was saued as these wordes of Christe spoken vnto him declare manifestly: this daye shalt thou be with me in paradise. It is notably sayde of saynt Augustine: Then is it fulfilled inuisibly, when not the contempte of Religion, but the article of necessitie excludeth the misterie of baptisme. And S. Bernarde lykewyse sayeth: The wyll is taken for the dede, when necessitie excludeth the dede. This thing cõsidered right well certayne fathers of Christes churche, whiche affirme the baptisme is deuided into thre kyndes, that is to saye, the baptisme of the holy Ghoste: the baptisme of blonde, and the baptisme of water: and of all these thre, the baptisme of water is the moste inferiour, for as muche as we reade, that diuerse so baptised, haue notwithstanding perysshed. But whosoeuer is baptised with the holy Ghoste, and so dieth: he can not perishe. For without this baptisme, the baptisme of the water profiteth nothing. Again, suche as confesse Christ boldly, and seale the confession with their bloud, and thorowe the crueltie of the moste cruell persecutors preuẽted by death, can not come vnto baptisme, are no lesse dere and acceptable to God, then they were baptised with water. For they are baptised with the holy Ghost and with their owne bloud: so that in them is fulfilled this saying of the Apostle: With the hart it is beleued vnto righteousnes, but with the mouth confession is made vnto saluation. For the scripture sayeth: whosoeuer beleueth on him, shall not be confounded.

Moreouer the wordes of Christe, which he spake after his resurrection to his disciples concerning baptisme, are diligently to be noted. The wordes are these: He that beleueth and is baptised, shall be saued. But he that beleueth not, shalbe dãned. He sayth not: He that is not baptised (with water) shalbe damned: but only, he that beleueth not, shall not,shalbe dampned: hereby declaring that our saluation hãgeth not of the water but of the fayth,as it is wrttẽ, he that beleueth on the sonne,hath euerlasting lyfe. But he that beleueth not on the son shall not se lyfe,but the wrath of God abideth on hym. Ihon. 3.

Of these afore sayd authorities both of the holy scripture and also of the auncient fathers, I gather and conclude,that both the infantes of the Christians and also other of more type age being of the nõber of the faithfull, if they be preuented by death,are saued,and enheritours of euerlasting lyfe,although they depart without baptisme: The infantes both because thei are contayned in the nõber of Gods people,and are concluded within this most gracious promes: I wil be thy God,and the God of thy seede: and also because they are prenented by death,and by this meanes of necessitie excluded from the sacrament of baptisme:the Elder,because they beleue in God,cõfesse their faith,& moste desirously wyshe to be baptised, if they might attaine therunto. Father, I can not disalowe thy doctrine in this behalf.But me thinke thou makest thre baptismes, which is contrary to this saying of thapostle: One Lorde,one faithe,one baptisme, one God,&c. Son. There is but one baptisme. Notwithstãding because this one paptisme is of diuerse diuerslỹ taken, as we haue tofore heard,therfore the auncient fathers of Christes churche haue thus made a partition of baptisme,somtime calling it the baptisme of water,somtime the baptisme of the holy Ghoste,and sometime the baptisme of bloude, forasmuche as al that are contayned in the visible churche are not baptised alyke. With water alone are the vngodlye and wicked hypocrites baptised, whiche outwardly faine repentãce and faith, whan inwardly they haue nothyng lesse,and therfore the baptisme profiteth them nothinge at all, but rather turneth vnto their dampnacion. With the spirite or holy Ghost they are baptised, whiche do truly repent and beleue,and fixe the eyes of theyr mynde on the commaundement of God and the promes annexed to baptisme,To them is the baptisme of water wholsome and profitable. With bloude are they baptysed,whiche preuented of death thorow the cruelte of the persecutours, can not come vnto the Baptisme of water, although greatly wyshed:And yet notwithstandyng boldly and stoutly confesse Christe and his holy Gospell before the tyrañts of this worlde, yea and confirme with their death, and seale with their bloud this their confession. These are holy martyrs and blessed witnesses of Christ:and therfore they are as acceptable and deare vnto God,although they were baptised with water. Father, And are these thre kindes of baptisme approued of Gods word? Sonne. Yea verely. Father. Where? Let me heare. Sonne. Of the baptisme of water Christe our Sauiour speaketh on this manner: Baptise all nations in the name of the father and of the sonne & of the holye Ghoste. He that beleueth and is baptised, shalbe saued. Of the baptisme of ỹ holy Ghost or of ỹ spirite,Christ also sayd thus to his apostles:John Ephe. 4 Math. 28 Mare. 16

Act.1 John Baptised with water, but ye shalbe baptised with ỹ holy goost.

Math. 20 Marc.10 Luke.12 And of the baptisme of bloud the Lord Christ hath these wordes spoken vnto Iames and John, which desired to be highest in authorite with Christ: Can ye drinke of the cuppe, which I shal drinke, & be baptised with the baptisme, wherwith I shalbe baptised? Again he saieth: I must be baptised with a baptisme, and howe am I payned, till it be ended? Father. I perceaue now right well, ỹ baptisme is an holy mistery and blessed sacrament. Sonne. Nothing is more true. For it is an holy ordinaunce instituted of God, and no practyse of mans imagination, put in vse in Christes tyme, and after his resurrection comaunded to be ministred vnto all that beleue, whether they were Iewes or Gentiles. For although it appeareth outwardly neuer so base a thing to be washed with water, yet it is an honorable misterie, and ought to be had in great reuerence and price, because it was commaunded of God to be done: in somuche that who so euer contemneth this holy Sacrament, and refuse to be baptised, when opportunite serueth, is not of God, neither appertaineth he vnto the kingdome of God. For he that despiseth the ordinaũce of God, despyseth God him selfe. Father. What iudgest thou of them, that ministre baptisme twyse to one persone? Sonne. You speake of the Anabaptistes, whiche condemning the baptisme of infantes, as a thing both vayne and vnprofitable (such is their madnes) because they can not openly protestе their faithe before the worlde, teache, that they ought to be baptised agayne, when they come to age, and haue the vse of reason, beyng able to confesse their owne faith. This doctrine of the wicked Anabaptistes, I vtterly both contemne and condẽne, as a doctrine pestiferous and poysonefull, which plainly dissenteth from the worde of God & from the practise of the primatiue church: forasmuche, as we haue tofore heard, the baptisme of infantes is grounded on the worde of God, pleaseth hym, and is acceptable vnto him, euen no lesse then is the baptisme of the elder sorte. Whosoeuer therfore is ones baptised, of what so euer age he be, according to the institution and worde of God (which abydeth for euer) he ought not to be baptised again. For to be baptised againe, is none other thing then to mocke and blaspheme God, to recounte God a lyar, as one whiche either wyll not, or els is not able to kepe his worde vttered in baptisme, to doubt of his ordinaunce, to call our saluatiõ into question &c. Father. What thynkest thou of baptisme, if it be ministred of a wicked and vngodly minister? Sonne. It is to be wyshed, that suche as are appoynted to be spirituall Ministers in the churche of Christe, should be menne bothe in doctryne ãnd lyfe godly and vertuous, that they myght be no stomblyng blockes to the congregation of God, but edifie Gods people both with sound learning & Christen cõuersation. But if it so chaunceth ỹ the life of him, which being admitted vnto the publique ministerie, baptiseth be euil wicked & vngodly, yet notwithstanding thafforsaid minister ministring baptisme truly and accordyng to the institution of Christ, his wicked life and vngodly conuersation hindreth baptisme nothing at all. For the sacramentes, when they be lawfully & duely ministred, are not of force & strength for the worthines of the minister, but for ỹ institution and ordinaunce of God, that the promes may be certen. For it is Christ him selfe, whiche truly & properly baptiseth, and no man, whose ministerie, as an hande, Christ vseth in baptising. Man baptiseth outwardly: but Christ baptiseth inwardly. Man washeth the body with water: but Christ cleuseth the soule with his holy spirite. For as S. Cyprian saith: Whether Iudas or Paule baptiseth, Christ washeth, absolueth and putteth away the sinne. To forgeue sinnes in baptisme, & to geue the holy ghost, saith S. Ambrose, is the office of God alone. If God therfore geue the effect of health, then is there no glory of man in this behalfe. For we knowe, that the holy ghost was geuē of God without laying on of handes, & that he which was not yet baptised, obtained remission of sinnes. As concerninge the visible ministery, both good and bad baptise: but inuisibly he by them baptiseth, whose both the visible baptisme & the inuisible grace is. Both good and bad may baptise, but to washe the consciences, ỹ can none doo, but he whiche is alway good, saieth S. Austen. Againe he saith: to minister and to distribute the worde and Sacrament the minister is somewhat: but to make cleane & to iustifie, he is nothing. For this thing worketh he only in the inwarde man by whom the whole uā is made. Farther. Whether is it requisite & necessary, that the infant which shuld be baptised, be plounged down into the water, or is it sufficiēt, that a litle water be poured vpō his head, or vpon his face? Some. It appeareth by the writinges of the auncient fathers, Tertulliane, Damasus, Cyrille, Austen, Ambrose, Basile, Theophilacte, & diuerse other, that in times past both in ỹ Greke and Latin churche the custome was to dippe such as shuld be baptised thryse into the water, in token that they are baptised in the name of the glorious trinitie, the father, the sonne, and the holy Ghost, one alone true and euerlasting God. And the plounging into the water signified, that we are buried with Christ, as the plucking of vs out of ỹ water preacheth vnto vs, that we be risen againe with Christe: which thing S. Paule also teacheth in these wordes: knowe ye not, that al we, which are baptised into Iesus Christ, are baptised to die with him? We are buried then with him by baptisme for to die, that likewise as Christ was raised vp frō death by the glory of the father, euen so we also shuld walke in a new life. For if we be graft in death like vnto him: euē so shal we be partakers of ỹ resurrectiō, knowing this that our old man is crucified with him also, ỹ the body of synne might vtterly be destroied, that hēcefoorth we should not be seruauntes vnto sinne. But to dippe thē thryse into the founte, as ỹ manner was then, I thinke it not to be of necessitie: but it may seme to suffice, if water be poured vpon their head or vppon their face.

☞ body, or some part therof. Moreouer as all the people of the Iewes was counted to be sprinckled with the blonde of the couenaunt, because it was accustomed to be sprinckled vpon all, when notwithstanding not their whole bodies, but some part of them was embrewed with the blond: so lykewyse a man or an infant, is taken to be wholy baptised, dypped and clensed, when some one member onely is ouerflowed with water, dypped or clensed. For this lawyth sprinkling was a figure of the blond of Christ (wher with the consciences are sprynckled) and of our baptisme. Furthermore seing that the vertue and power of clensing the myndes cometh not from the water, it is all one matter, whether the whole body, or some parte thereof, as the head, be washed. It is therfore sufficient if the signification of spirituall baptisme be obserued. That to baptise signifieth not to plounge the whole man into the water, it may easely be gathered both of S. Markes and S. Lukes Gospel, where we reade thus: Marc. 7 Luc. 11. Reuersi a foro non comedunt nisi prius baptizati: that is, The Phareseis, when they come home from the market, eate not, except they first be baptised: that is to say, wasche their handes. Again: Mirabatur Pharisæus, quod Christus non baptizatus accumbat mensæ. That is, the Pharisey marueled, that Christ was not baptised, that is to say, washed not his handes, before he sat downe at the table. Father. What thinkest thou of those, whiche promise for the infante in his baptisme, whome they call Godfathers and Godmothers? Sonne. The custome is olde & auncient in the churche of Christe, and hathe from time to time bene vsed among the Christianes aboue viii. hondred yeares, and it is no lesse commendable then auncient, if the godfathers and Godmothers satisfie their promyse, & doo according as they haue sayd, in bringing vp ỹ young infante in the nourture and doctrine of the Lorde, in the faith, feare and loue of God, in the obedience of Gods holy lawe, &c. But this I greatly discõmende in the churche of the Papistes, ỹ they will by no meanes suffer the fathers of the infantes to be present at the baptisme of their children, whome God aboue al other hath cõmaunded to instructe & to bring vp theyr children in the knowledge of his holy lawe, & of them wil require a streight accomptes concerning the education & bringing vp of their yoũg ones. Therfore as I do not discõmend the custome of hauing Godfathers & Godmothers, whiche shuld openly promise for their Godchildrẽ that they shal mortifie the rote of sinne, which springeth in the bodies, and subdue their lustes vnder the lawe of God: again that they wyll instructe & bring vp their godchildren in the faith of Christ: So likewise do I vtterly discommend this vse, that fathers can not be suffred to be present at the baptisme of their own children & ther also promise before God & his holy cõgregation, ỹ they wil vnto the vttermost of their power prouide & se, that their childrẽ shal so be brought vp, ỹ euen frõ their cradles they shal drinke in the principles of Christen religion, and learne to knowe and serue God, that their whole life may be agreable to their profession. It were good in my opinion, that the parentes should be present at the baptisme of their children, and so there promyse, and afterwarde do, as thou hast sayde. For it should put them wel in remembraunce of ỹ dutie, which they owe by the worde of God vnto their children.

Well, my sonne: we haue nowe sufficiently conferred of the holy Sacrament of Baptisme, and of the principall thynges perteyning vnto the same. Let vs nowe somewhat talke of the other Sacrament, I meane, the holy Supper of the Lorde, otherwyse called, the Sacrament of the bodie and bloude of Christe. Sonne, Let it so be, my moste louing and dere father.

Of the Lordes Supper.

Father. Tell me fyrst of all, what the Lordes supper is? Sonne. After the diffinition of S. Paule, it is the partakyng of the bodye and bloude of Christe. Father. Why, what saith saynt Paule in this behalfe? Sonne. Thus sayth he: Is not the bread which we breake, the partaking of the body of Christe? And is not the cup of thankes geuing, for the whiche we geue thankes, the partaking of the bloud of Christe? Father. Lett me heare other diffinicions of the Lordes supper, if thou haste any in store. Sonne. The Lordes supper is an holy and heauenly banket, in the whiche the faythfull Christians, beydes the corporall eating of the bread, and the outwarde drynkyng of the wyne, do spiritually through faythe bothe eate the body of Christe and dryncke his bloud vnto the confirmatiõ of their faith, the comfort of their conscience, and the saluation of their soules. Or thus: The supper of the Lorde is a spirituall foode, in the which Christe Jesus the sonne of God wytnesseth that he is the lyuynge bread, wherewith our soules are fedde vnto euerlastyng lyfe. Or on this manner: The supper of the Lorde is an holy Sacrament instituted of the Lorde Jesu to be a commemoration and a perpetual remembraunce of his body breakyng and bloud sheading, yea of his passion and death on the altare of the crosse, that the faythfull communicantes eatyng and receauing those holy misteries, I meane, the bread and wyne sanctified in the body and bloude of Christe, should earnestly set before their eyes the death of Christe and al the benefites, whiche they haue receaued thorowe the same, that is to saye, the grace, fauour and mercie of God, remission of synnes, quietnes of conscience, fredome from the captiuitie of Sathan, from the curse of the lawe, from the stynge of death, and from euerlastynge dampnation, the gyfte of the holy Ghost and assuraunce of eternall lyfe, and that by this meanes they should be prouoked and stirred vp to magnifie and prayse our heauenly father, for this his vnutterable kyndnes and exceading great loue. Or on this wyse briefly: the supper of the Lord is a memorial of Christes death. Fat. Who instituted & ordeined this holy & heauenly banket, which is called the supper of the lord. Son. Not Angel nor archangel, not king nor Patriarch, nor yet mere man, but Christ Jesus, ỹ Lord, both God & mã, king of kings of kynges and Lorde of Lordes Father. Where readest thou that? Sonne. In the Euangelist and in S. Paule. Father. Let me heare the wordes of the institucion of the Lordes Supper. Sonne, Sayne Paule reciteth them on this manner.

Math.26 Marc.14 Luke.22

1,Cor.11.

The Lorde Iesus the same nyght, in whiche he was betrayed, tooke bread: and when he had geuen thankes, he brake it and sayde: Take ye and eate: This is my body, whiche is broken for you: This do ye in the remembraunce of me. After the same manner also he tooke the cuppe, when supper was done, saying: This cuppe is the newe testament in my bloud. This do so ofte as ye drinke it in remembraunce of me.

Why Christ instituted his supper.

Father, To what vse, or for what purpose did the Lord Christ institute this his holy supper? Sonne. First, that it should be an holy memoriall and worthy remembraunce of his passion and death, of his body breakyng and bloude sheading, whiche he suffred on the altare of the crosse, where he offred him selfe an acceptable oblation and a swete smelling sacrifice vnto God the father for vs and for our synnes, that by his temporall death we might be deliuered from euerlasting death. Father. Howe proouest thou, that Christe ordained this his supper to be a memoriall of his death and passion? Sonne. It is euident both by the worde of Christ and also of S. Paule. For thus sayeth the Lorde Iesu: This do in the remembraunce of me. And S. Paule sayeth: So ofte as ye shall eate this bread and drinke of this cuppe, ye shall shewe the Lordes death till he come. Agayne, in that the Lordes supper is a sacrament, that is to saye, a signe of an holy thing (Bread is the signe of Christes body, and the wine is the signe of his bloud) it doth sufficiently instructe and teache vs, that it was ordayned of Christ to be a memoriall of his death and passion. For Sacramentes are instituted vnto this ende, to putt vs in remembraunce of other thinges, whiche are signified by them: As the water of baptisme, wherwith ỳ body is outwardly washed, preacheth vnto vs, that our soules are inwardly washed by the bloud of Christ, and clensed and sanctified by the holy Ghost.

The necessitie of the death of Christ.

Father, Was it of necessitie, that Christ should die for vs? Sonne: Otherwyse could we neuer haue bene saued. For there was nothing founde neither in heauen nor in earth of suche and so great price, dignitie and worthynes in the sight of God, that could pacifie the wrath of God, and satisfie, his iustice, and paie our raunsome for our sinnes, and so reconcile vs to God, and make an euerlasting agrement betwene him and vs, but Christ alone that lambe of God without spot, whiche taketh away the synne of the worlde. For all creatures were founde spotted in the sight of God, and vnapt to accomplyshe the worke of our saluation: so that of necessitie the sonne of God must by hym selfe alone fulfill this worke of our redemption, as it is wrytten: The bloud of Oxen and of Goates, can not take away sinnes. Wherfore when he (Christ) cometh into the world, he sayth, Sacrifice and offring thou woldest not haue: but a body hast thou ordained me. Burnt offrings also for synne, haste thou not allowed. Then sayde I: Lo, I am here.

here. In the beginning of the boke it is wrytten of me, that I shuld do thy wil, O god. Aboue, saith S. Paul, when he sayth. Sacrifice and offring, and burnt sacrifices, and sinne offringes thou wouldest not haue neither hast thou alowed them, (which yet are offred by ẏ law) then said he: Lo, I am here to do thy will, O God: he taketh away the first, to stablish the latter: by which wil we are made holy, euen by the offring of the body of Iesu Christ once for all. Father. Though sufficient dignity, worthines and perfection coulde not be found in the sacrifices of beastes and foules to pacify the wrathe of God kindled against man for sinne: was ther neither angel nor mā in heauen or in earth of such worthines and integrity, that myght perfectly haue finished this work of our saluation? Sonne. As concer ning men it is thus wrytten: There is no difference: al haue sinned. Ther is none righteous, no, not one. Al are gone out of ẏ way: they are al vnprofitable: there is none that dothe good, no, not one. God hath wrapped al nations in vnbelefe, that he might haue mercy on al. The scripture hath concluded al things vnder sinne, that the pro mes by the faith of Iesus Christ shuld be geuen vnto them that beleue. We are al by nature the childre of wrath. Thorow the synne of one (Adam) death went ouer all men, forasmuch as all haue synned. We are al hipocrites, vnclene, shepe that run a stray, and al our righteousnesses are as a cloth defiled with mēstrue. The perfectest of vs al is not able to say. My hart is clene, and I am free from sin. There liueth none, euen the most righteous, that sinneth not. No liuing creature is righteous before the eies of God. Seing then that the whole kinde of man is vnpure, wicked, vnrighteous, defiled w sinne, estraunged from al goodnes, and a verye lompe of leudnesse, what can such a monsture of wickednes do vnto the reconciliatyon either of him self or of other vnto God? Of the vncleane, what cā be clensed? Who can make him cleane, that is cōceiued of vnclene sede but God alone?

And as touching the angels, neither are they so pure in the sight of God, that they were of sufficient worthines and worthy sufficiency to make an agrement betwene God and man. For euen in them also was there found foly, as Iob sayeth: insomuch that God spared not the angels that sinned, as S. Peter wryteth, but cast thē down into hel, and deliuered them into chains of darknes (to be punished) to be kept vnto iudgement. In angels then also was there founde imperfection, so that they were no mete mediators betwene God & man, to set a loueday betwene them, and to bring them vnto an vnity. Who seeth not now then, how necessary ẏ death of Christ was? wythout the which no reconciliatiō could haue bene made betwene god and man. Yea not only things in earth, but also things in heauen are made at one with God thorowe the Passion and deathe of Christ, as S. Paul testifieth, saying: God hathe restored and made al thinges perfect by Christ, both the things which are in heauen, & the things which are in earthe. Againe, it pleased the father, that in

And to remember this his passion & death by the which we haue receyued so many noble and pretious benefits, the Lord Christ instituted this holy sacrament, which the Apostle calleth, The Lordes supper. Sonne. Yea verely. And therfore they that wil worthelye and wyth frute come vnto this holy and heauenly banket, must diligently cõsider, remember and set before the eies of their minde the Passion & death of our Lord and sauiour Christ Iesu, and the merites and benefites therof, that by this meanes they maye the more earnestly be stirred vp both vnto thankes geuing, and also vnto a continual meditation of a better life. Father. Is there any other cause, why ẏ lord Iesu did ordain this his holy supper? Sonne. you haue hard the chefe and principal cause, which is, the remembraunce of Christes death. Another end, why this holy banket was instituted, is, that it shuld be a signe and a token of the vnity and cõcord, of the harty good wil and singuler frendship, and of the perfect agrement in doctrine and religion, that ought to be among them that profes Christ. And thys
1.Cor.10 is that, which S. Paule writeth: we (though we be many) yet are one bread and one body, inasmuche as we all are partakers of one bread. Father. They then, which will approche vnto the table of the Lord, ought not only to shew them selues mindful of the Lords passion and death, but also prouide, that they bring with them charitable, frendly and louing harts toward al men, and mindes fatled in the truth of Goddes word, and in the vnity of his true religion.
Sonne. So is it. For whosoeuer presume to come vnto the Table of the Lord with vncharitable heartes and with mindes dissentynge from the truth of Gods word and estraunged from the vnity of gods holy congregation, they shal finde nothing there, but the wrath and anger

anger of God, the displeasure and vengaūce of God, and finally (except repentaunce cōioyned with true faith come) euerlasting death and damnation. For this holy table of the Lord abhorreth no synne so greatly, as enuy, hatred, malice, anger, displeasure, distractyon of mindes, dissention in religion &c. In consideration wherof, the auncient fathers of Christes church in times past were wont to cal this holy bancket or supper of the Lord AGAPE, that is to say loue, to put men in remembraunce that none shuld come vnto that heuenly table, wher the blessed sacrament of loue is ministred and setforth, but such as came with harts enflamed with true loue and vnfained charity toward al men. They therfore, which presume otherwise to come, are companions with Judas, into whom satan entred, so sone as he had vnreuerently & vnworthely tasted of these holy misteries, neuer forsaking him, til he had brought him vnto desperation, destruction and dampnation. Seing we be members all of one body, and haue one head, euen the Lord Christ Jesus: seinge also we haue all one heauenlye father, one elder brother, one enheritaunce in the kingdom of heauen: Again, seing we all be baptised with one Baptisme, and eat of one bread, and drinke of one cup: what thing shuld be of so great force to dissolue this vnity, and to breake that concord and amity, which we ought continually to haue among vs both in doctrin and manners? In this thing shal al men know, saith Christ, that ye are my disciples, if one of you loue a nother. And the blessed Apostle S. Paul exhorteth vs by the name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that we all speake one thing, and that there be no dissention among vs, but that we may be an whole body, of one minde and of one meaning: yea and that the same affection may raigne in vs one toward another, that was in Christe Jesu, so that if one member suffer, all should suffer with him: and if one member be had in honor, all members should be glad also, forasmuch as we be members one of a nother, and haue one heade, euen the Lorde Jesu. Father. What other causes are there of the institution of the Lordes supper? Sonne. The Lord christ ordained this holy supper also, that we worthely enioying the same, shuld the better be cōfirmed in our faith, and nothing doubt of the promes and good wil of God toward vs, but faithfully and constantly be perswaded, that what so euer our heauenly father hath promised vs in christ, and for christes sake, that will he aboundantly performe, so that we nead not fear the tiranny of satan, the curse of the law, the horror of death, the darte of desperation, the pains of hel, nor any other thing, whatsoeuer is most cōtrary to our health and salua tion, which al be taken away by the death of christ. If god be on our side, saith S. Paule, who can be against vs? which spared not his owne sonne but gaue him for vs al: how can it be, ꝑ with him he should not geue vs all thinges also? For who knoweth not, that sacraments are the seales of God, annexed to his most comfortable promises, which he hath most gratiously made to al sinners that repent and beleue, that thorowe the contemplation and beholding of them, yea thorow the enioying and vsing of them, their faith may be stirred vp, encreased and confirmed: Againe, this holy Sacramēt was instituted of the Lord Iesu, to preach vnto vs, that his blessed body and his pretious bloude is the true nourishment of the faithfull soule, and that thorowe this meate, whiche is receyued by faith, our soules be relieued, comforted, sustained, made strong, ioyfull and mery, and preserued vnto euerlastinge life, as Christe hym selfe testifieth, saying: I am the bread of life. He that cōmeth to me, shall not hunger: and he that beleueth on me, shall neuer thirst. And this is the will of him that sent me: that euery one whiche seeth the sonne, and beleueth on him, haue euerlastinge life, and I will raise him vp at the last day. Verely, verely I saye vnto you: He that putteth his trust in me, hath euerlasting life. I am that liuinge breade, whiche came downe from heauen. If any man eate of this bread, he shall liue for euer. And the bread that I will geue is my flesh: which I will geue for the life of the worlde. Who so eateth my flesh, and drinketh my bloud, hath euerlasting life: and I will raise him vp at the last day. For my flesh is meat in dede: and my bloud is drinck in dede. He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my bloude, dwelleth in me, and I in him. As the liuinge father hathe sente me, and I lyue for the Father: euen so he that eateth me, shall liue by the meanes of me. Iohn.6

Furthermore a nother cause of the institution of this heauenlye banket is, to moue vs to be thankful vnto our heauenlye father for the death and passion of his sonne, and for the inestimable benefits, frutes and commodities, whiche we haue plentifullye obtained by the same, as deliueraunce from Satan, fredom from the curse of the law, forgeuenes of sinnes, quietnes of conscience, the gift of the holy ghost, victory against sin, death and hell, righteousnes before God, saluation and euerlasting life. And to this end the auncient fathers of Christes church called the supper of the Lorde, Sacramentum Eucharistiæ, that is to say, the Sacrament of thankes geuing. So likewise read we of the primatiue and Apostolike church: All that beleued, sayeth blessed Luke, continued dailye with one accorde in the temple, and brake bread from house to house, and did eat their meat together with gladnes and singlenes of hart, praising God. And s. Paule sayeth: Is not the cuppe of thanckes geuing, for the whyche we geue thanckes, partakinge of the bloude of Christe? &c. Father. Nowe that thou hast declared vnto me, what the Lords supper is: who did institute it, and for what purpose and end it was ordained and commaunded to be frequented and vsed in the church of Christ come of, tel me, how we ought to prepare our selues vnto ỳ worthy receiuing of so worthy and holye misteries, that we comming worthely and reuerently vnto them, may be made partakers of al those heauenly benefites, which Christ hath purchased of god the father for vs by his glorious passion & blessed death. Sonne. This thing is also necessary to be known. And vnto this doth thapostle exhort vs saying: Vvho- Act.2 1.Cor.10 1.Cor.11

Vvho so euer shall eat of this bread, or drinke of the cuppe of the Lord vnworthely, shalbe gilty of the body and bloud of the Lorde. But let a man examine him self, and so let him eat of the bread, and drinke of the cup. For he that eateth or drinketh vnworthelye, eateth and drinketh his own damnation, because he maketh no difference of the Lords body. The Lord oure God can by no meanes abide that anye manne should come vnto his holy sacraments with vnwashed fete, as they vse to say: that is, vnreuerently and vnworthely, as we may se also in thold law. Was not this the commaundement of God, that whē the people of Israel did eate the Lordes passeouer, otherwise called the Paschal lambe, (which was the sacrament and figure of the true Paschall lambe euen Christ Jesus, which taketh away the sinne of the world) they should eat swete and vnleuended breade, and suffer no leauen to be in their houses, nor yet tast of any leauended bread by the space of vii. daies: and if any did the contrarye, that that soule should be plucked out from Israel? Was not Uza striken of God euen vnto the death, because he vnworthelye touched the arke of the Lord? Was not a certain man taken from the table, bound hād and fote, and cast into vtter darknes, where weping and gnashynge of tethe shalbe, because he presumed to come vnto the mariage of a certain noble kinges sonne without the wedding garment? Dyd not ỹ deuilenter into Judas immediatly after he had vnworthelye receyued the holy misteries of the body and bloud of Christ? Worketh not s. Paul, that the Corinthians wer both greuously and diuersly plaged of God, because they came vnreuerently vnto the Lords table? And who doubteth, but that euen at this present time many plages are cast vpon vs for abusing this holy sacrament? It is therfore conueniēt, that we learn how we may come vnto so holy misteries not vnworthely but worthely, not vnto our damnation, but vnto our saluation, least where we seme to seke remedy and comfort, we find destruction and displeasure. Father. wel saide, my sonne. Let me therfore now heare, how we ought te to prepare oure selues worthelye to come vnto the table of the Lord, least where we seeke consolatyon, we find desolation. Sonne. whosoeuer entendeth with frute to come vnto the table of the lord, and worthely to receiue ỹ holy misteryes of the body and bloud of our sauiour Christ, he must fyrst of al euen from the very hart repent him of his former wicked life, lament earnestly his corrupt manners, abhorre his old vngodly conuersation, and be hartely sory, that euer he hath committed such wickednes against the lord his God, and so disobediently transgressed and brokē his holy and blessed commaundements. Father. Is this repentance so necessary for the worthye preparation vnto the comminge to the lordes table? Sonne. It is so necessary, that who so euer presumeth to come vnto the supper of the lord without this repentaunce, he shall not only not receiue any benefite at the lordes table, but he also shal be gilty of the body and bloud of Christ, and get vnto him selfe euerlasting damnation. The vnpenitent sinners are mete ghestes for ỹ table

For Christe came not to call the righteous, that is to saye, such as iustify them selues, but sinners vnto repentaunce: There is more ioy in heauen ouer one sinner that repenteth then ouer ninety and nine iust parsons, that neade no repentaunce. Father. Is this faithe necessary to the faithfull Communicante? Sonne, So necessarye, that wythoute it all other preparations are frustrate and vaine. To sturre vp and to confirme the faithe of the faithfull Communicantes in that behalfe, it shall be necessarye, diligentlye to waigh, ponder and consyder these swete and comfortable promises, whyche are annexed to the holye misteries of the bodye and bloude of oure Sauioure Christe: euen these: VVhyche shall be betrayed for you. whyche shall be shedde for you, and for manye vnto the remissyon of synnes. Charity.

For

For thys Supper of the Lorde, as it abhorreth all synne, so lykewyse doothe it mooste chefelye deteſt hatred, malyce, enuy rancour, displeasure, and what so euer is contrarye to Christen charitye and brotherlye loue, beinge it selfe, as we to fore heard, a Sacrament of loue, vnitye and concorde. Father. Is charitye and loue so necessary also to them that entende worthelye to come vnto the Table of the Lorde? Sonne. So necessary, that wythout it, what so euer we doo at the Lordes table, it tourneth vnto dampnation. To speake wyth the tounges of menne, and of Aungels: to Prophecye and to vnderstande all secreates and all knowledge: to haue all faythe, so that we coulde moue Mountaynes oute of their places: to bestowe all oure goodes to fede the poore, yea to geue oure bodies to be burned, profiteth nothinge wythout charity and loue. 1. Cor. 13

Euerye one that loueth, sayeth Sainte Jhon, is borne of God, and knoweth God. But he that loueth not, knoweth not GOD, for God is loue. If anye manne saye: I loue God, and yet hate his brother, he is a lier. For how can he that loueth not his brother whome he hathe seene, loue God, whome he hathe not seene. Euery one that hateth his brother, is a manne sleare. In this, sayeth the Lorde Jesu, shall all menne knowe, that ye are my Disciples, if one of you loue a nother. Suche therfore as entend worthelye to approche vnto the Lordes table, lette them not onlye consider howe the matter standeth betwene them and God but also betwene them and theyr neighboures. And if they shall finde anye displeasure amonge themselues one towarde a nother, lette them, before they come vnto the Lordes Table seeke to be reconciled one to a nother, accordynge to this commaundement of oure Lorde and sauioure Christe: If thou offerest thy gifte at the aultare, and there remembrest that thy brother hathe oughte against thee: leaue there thine offeringe before the aultare, and goo thy waye fyrste, and be reconcyled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gifte. Howe greatlye those thynges displease God, although in outwarde appearaunce they glyster and shyne neuer so holye and vertuous, whyche come from an hateful and malitious hearte, the history of Caine declareth aboundauntlye. Aboue all thinges, sayeth S. Peter, haue feruent charitye amonge you. For charitye couereth the multitude of synnes. And let thys theyr loue be no fleshlye nor worldlye loue, but suche loue, as commeth oute of a pure hearte, and of a good conscyence, and of faith vnfained. Suche loue is the ende, that is to saye, the fulfilling of the lawe, as Sainte Paule sayeth: He that loueth hys neyghboure, hathe fulfylled the lawe. For these commaundementes: Thou shalt not committe adultrye: Thou shalt not kill: Thou shalt not steale: Thou shalt not bear false witnesse: Thou shalt not lust, and so forth, if there be any other commaundement, it is al comprehended in this saying, namely, Loue thy neighboure as thy selfe. Loue hurteth not his neighboure. Therfore is loue the fulfillinge of the lawe.

And Christ sayde vnto the Jewes: If ye were Abrahams children, ye woulde doo the woorkes of Abraham. Euen so, if we be Goddes children, as we professe by our outward comming vnto the Lordes supper, we must do the worckes of God. The woorkes, whiche God requireth of vs, are to beleue in the name of his only begotten sōne, to loue one another, and to walcke in a newe life. For vnto this end hathe God the father by the deathe of hys Sonne delyuered vs from the power of oure ennemies, that we shoulde serue him in holinesse and righteousnesse all the dayes of oure lyfe. God hath not called vs vnto vnclennes, but vnto holinesse. We are Goddes worke-manshippe created in Christ Jesu vnto good worckes, whyche God ordained, that we should walcke in them. The grace of God, which bringeth saluation vnto all men, hathe appeared, teachinge vs, that we should deny vngodlinesse and worldly lustes, and that we shuld liue soberly and righteously, and godly in this present world, loking for that blessed hope and glorious appearing of the great god, and of our sauiour Jesu Christe, whyche gaue hym selfe for vs to redeame vs from all vnrighteousnesse, and to purge vs a peculiare people vnto him selfe, feruently geuen vnto good worckes: Christ (which thorow the eternal spirit offred him self without spot to God) hath purged oure conscience from dead woorkes, for to serue the liuing God.

Father. And muste this disposition vnto innocencye of life continue in them so longe as they liue? Sonne. They maye not onlye dysspose them selues vnto good workes, but also practise good workes diligently all the dayes of their life, that they be not wordinge Gospellers, but working Gospellers, not fauourers onlye, but also followers of Goddes woorde. For it is not sufficient to begin well, except we continue well: nether it is sufficient for a while to continue wel, excepte we end wel. He that continueth vnto the end, shalbe saued. No manne that putteth his hand to the plough and loketh backe, is mete for the kingdome of God. No man is crowned, except he striue lawfullye. Be faithfull vnto the death, saith Christ, and I will geue thee the crowne of life. Our sauiour Christ in the gospel commaundeth vs to remember Lottes wife: by the which he goeth aboute to putte vs in remembraunce that it is not sufficient to begin well, except we continue well, and also end well. Lottes wife began well, when she came out of Sodome, but because she continued not well, but contrarye to the commaundemente of Goddes aungell looked backe againe to Sodome, she was punished and tourned into a salte pyllare. Math.10 Luc.10 2.Tim.1 Apoc.2. Luke.17. Gene.19

The wyse menne whyche came from the Easte partes to seeke Christe that newe borne kinge of the Iewes, after they had departed from that bloudy tiraunt kinge Herode, and hadde worshypped Christe, were commaunded by the Aungell of God, that they shuld no more retourne vnto kinge Herode, but go home into your countrye a nother waye. For all suche as haue dedicated them selues to God by takinge on them the holye Sacramente of Baptisme, and by receiuinge the holye and blessed misteries of the body and bloud of oure Sauyoure Christe, haue openlye professed, that from hencefoithe they wyll neuer haue to do with the Deuyll, the worlde and the Fleshe, but vtterlye renounce and forsake them, wyth all theyr woorkes, pompes and vanities, seruynge theyr Lorde God in holynesse and righteousnesse all the dayes of theyr lyfe. Math.3. Luk.1.

Nowe if anye fall from this theyr professyon, and ioyne familiaritye againe with the Deuyll, the worlde and the Fleshe, obeyinge their lustes, and satysfyinge theyr desyres, then haue they vterlye geuen ouer GOD and all godlynesse, yea then are they become mockers of God, and of his holye mysteryes, and gette to them selues euerlastinge dampnation. For if they (after they haue escaped from the filthines of the world, through the knowledge of the Lord and sauior Iesu Christ) are yet tangled againe therin, and ouercome: than is the latter end worse with them, then the beginning. For it had bene better for them, not to haue known ỳ way of righteousnes, then after they haue known it to turne from the holy cõmaundement, that was geuen vnto thẽ. But the same is hapned to them, that is vsed to be spokẽ by the true Prouerbe: The dogge is turned to his vomite again: and the sow ỳ Prouer, 21. was washed, is tourned againe to her wallowinge in the mire. To whome is this saying of the Lorde Iesu vnknowen? When the vncleane spirit is gon out of a man, he walketh thorowe dry places, seeking rest. And when he findeth none, he sayeth: I wil return again Luc. 11. vnto my house, whence I came out. And whẽ he cometh, he findeth it swept and garnished. Then goeth he and taketh to him vii. other spirites worse then him self, and they enter in and dwell there. And thend of that man is worse thẽ the beginning. Therfore whosoeuer entendeth to prepare him self worthelye vnto the Lordes table, let him first of all fal vnto harty repentaunce: secondly, let him humble him self before the maiesty of God by confessing his sinnes: Thirdly let him stedfastlye beleue and be perfectlye perswaded, that all hys sinnes are forgeuen him of God the father for Christes sake. Fourthly, let him nourish feruent loue in his hart toward his neighboure: Fiftly and finallye, let him for euer after so dispose him selfe to walke in a new life, that from henceforth he haue no more to doo with the Ephe. 5 vnfruteful workes of darknes, but in al poynts so behaue him selfe, as it becometh the professor of godlinesse. Father. Hitherto thou hast declared, what ỳ Lords supper is: Who did institute it: Unto what end it was ordained: and how we ought to prepare our selues worthely to come vnto the Lordes table, I wold now gladly heare, if any abuses haue crept into the church of Christ concerning the lords supper. Haue your Preacher or Catechist opened nothing vnto you in this behalfe? Sonne. Yes verely. They haue declared certaine notable abuses brought into the church of Christ in times past by Antichrist and his adherentes. Father. Whiche are they? Lette me heare part of them. Sonne. First, where as the Lord Christ ordained thys his holy supper to be receiued of many, Antichrist and his complices contrary to the institution and cõmaundement of Christ haue made a priuate breakfast of it, as we may see in the Popishe masse, where the mumbling massemonger eateth and drynketh all alone, and geueth no manne parte with him, except this be any part, to blesse the people wyth an empty cuppe, when he hathe dronke vp altogether, as the manner is in all the Poopes churches at pryncipall and hye feastes, as they terme them. Father. Lett me heare it proued by the woorde of God, that the Lordes supper oughte not to be a pryuate repaste (as the Papistes abuse it in their Masses but rather a commonbancket for many to receiue it together.

sonne. The institution it selfe declareth euidently, that it ought to be the foode of many together, and not of one alone. For thus reade we. When they were eating, Iesus toke bread, and when he had geuen thankes, he brake it, and gaue it to the disciples, and sayd: Take ye, eate ye, this is my body, whiche is betrayed for you. And he toke the cuppe, and thanked, and gaue it them, saying: Drinke ye all of this. For this is my bloud (whiche is of the newe testament) that is shed for many for the remission of sinnes. This do in the remembraunce of me. Math. 26 Mar. 14 Luk. 22 1. Cor. 11

Here is it euident, that Christe did not eate and drynke the Sacrament of his body and bloude alone, nor yet gaue it to one of his disciples only, but he distributed it to al his disciples, that thei shuld eate and drinke of it together, and not one alone. Take ye, eate ye. He sayeth not, take thou, eate thou alone by thy selfe. Agayn, Drinke ye all of this. He sayeth not, drynke thou alone of this. And the blessed Apostle S. Paule sayth: Is not the bread, whiche we breake (he sayeth not, whiche I breake) partaking of the body of Christe? Is not the cuppe of thankesgeuing, For the whiche we gaue thankes (he sayeth not, I geue thankes) partaking of the bloude of Christ? And a litle after he sayeth: We all are partakers of one bread, and of one cuppe. Again he sayeth: When ye come together into one place, the Lordes Supper can not be eaten. For euery one beginneth afore to eate his owne supper. Also in the same place he sayeth: My brethren whē ye come together to eate (the Lordes supper) tary one for another. If any man hunger, let hym eate at home, that ye come not together vnto condemnation. And blessed S. Luke describing the manner & custome of the primatiue churche, sayeth: All that beleued, kept thē selues together, and had al thynges common, and solde their possessions and goodes, and parted them to all menne, as euery man had neede. And they continued dayly with one accorde in the temple, and brake bread frō house to house, and did eate their meate together with gladnes and singlenes of heart praising God. Again vpō one of the saboth days, whā the disciples came together for to breake bread. &c. 1. Cor. 10 1. Cor. 11 Act. 2

Of these authorities of the holy scripture is it euident, that the Lordes supper ought to be the banket of many together, and not of one alone, as the Papistes abuse it. Father. But what is the doctrine of the auncient fathers in this behalfe? Sonne. In all poyntes lyke to the doctrine of the holy scripture. Of the order vsed in the old Latin church concerning the receauing of the holy cōmunion of the body & bloud of ỹ Lord Jesu, Anacletus bishop of Rome, writeth on this maner: When the consecration is ones done, let all communicate, that will not be excommunicate. For so did the Apostles ordaine, & the holy churche of Rome doth still obserue and maintaine the same. Here it is playne, that the manner of the Latin churche, otherwyse called the weaste churche, was, that many, yea all, sayth Anacletus, shoulde eate the Lordes supper together. Againe, that all, whiche would not be partakers of the Lordes supper, should be excommunicate. He addeth moreouer, that it was the ordinaunce of the Apo- The doctrine of ỹ olde Fathers concerning ỹ Lordes Supper. In epist. 2

stles, and that the church of Rome did obserue, kepe and maintaine that ordinance of the Apostles: that is to say, that when the Lordes supper was ministred, not one alone, as the māner is now, but many together wer partakers of the same. Father. The priuate masses were not then in vse, as it semeth. Sonne. Antichrist and the deuyll brought in those priuate, that is to say theuish, masses many hūdred yeres after for lukers sake, as the auncient histories doo euidentlye proue. Father. But what sayest thou of the Greke church, otherwise called the East church? what order obserued they? Sonne. Euen the very same that the olde Laten or West churche obserued. For the Grekes euen from the Apostles time vntil these our dais haue euer obserued and kept thorder that was vsed in the primatiue churche, neither woulde they at anye time receiue these priuate Masses into their churches, but when soeuer they celebrate the Lordes supper, not one alone (as the vse is in the Popes church) but many together are partakers of the same, according to this saying of S. Paule, we all are partakers of one bread, and of one cuppe. Father. Canste thou proue this by auncient writers of the Greke churche? Sonne. Yea forsoth very easly. Father. Let me heare. Sonne. The ancient Greke writer Iustinus Martyr hath these woordes. After that he, which is the ruler (in the ministery) hath geuen thankes, and all the people hath blessed, they, which are called with vs Deacons, do geue to euery one of them that are present, bread, wine and water to receiue: which with thankes geuing are consecrate, and they also carryt vnto them that are absent. And this meate is called with vs, Eucharistia, that is to say, thankes geuing. And Dionysius Areopagita in hys booke De ecclesiastica Hierarchia, sheweth euidentlye, that in his time also the bread and the cup was not receiued of the minister alone, but ỹ they were destributed to all men, so that manye were partakers of those holy misteries, and not one alone, as it is vsed in the Poppishe masses. S. Jhon Chrisostom in a certen homely hath these woordes. Forasmuch as it is the dominical supper, ỹ is to say, the lords, it ought to be common. For those things that are the lordes, belōg not to this or that seruant (only) but they are cōmon to all That therfore, which is the lords, euen the very same is also cōmon. For if it be thy lords, as it is in dede, ỹ oughtest not to take those thinges as proper to thee, but to set them forth as the lords things commonly to al: for this is the lords. But now thou dost not suffer it to be the lords, whē thou dost not suffer it to be common, but eatest to thy selfe. Clement bishop of Rome cōmaundeth, ỹ there shuld so many hostes be offred on thaltare, as shuld suffice the people. He sayth not, as should serue the priest alone. Bishop Durande wryteth on thys manner: In the primatiue church al that wer present at the celebration of the masses (he meaneth, the Lordes supper) were wont euery day to communicate, because al the Apostles did drinke of the cup, according to this saying of the Lord, drinke ye al of this. For they offred a great loafe of bread, and sufficient for all: which thinge the Grecians are reported to kepe at this day. Albertus in his boke de Missæ mysteriis, declareth, ỹ the vse in times past was, that so many as came together in the church, shuld communicate together. The auncient Grecians cal the Lordes supper Synaxin, that is to say, the cõmunion or felowshippe of many: or a partaking together of many. But wherfore do I gather together so many authorities out of the auncient wryters to declare, that the massing Papistes do vtterly abuse the lords supper, while they make it a priuate breakfast, admittinge no man vnto the partaking of those holy misteries but them selues alone, seing that euen of the very words, which they yet vse in their masse, it may easly be gathred, that in times past, before Antichrist sat as god in the consciences of men, & with hys deuelish decrees had driuen away Gods holy ordinaunces out of the church, the vse & mãner was ỹ many shuld cõmunicate together with the priest, and not the priest alone. I wil reherse some of the words, as they be mẽtioned in their masse boke, and as the massemongers in the kingdome of Antichrist say them at this present day in their masses. At their Post cõmunion they say thus: Quod ore sumpsimus domine, pura mẽte capiamus &c. That is to say: That which we haue taken with the mouth, O Lorde: graũt that we may receiue it with a pure mind, and that it may be made vnto vs of a temporall gift, an euerlastinge remeadye. Againe, Hæc nos communio purget a crimine, & cælestis remedii faciat esse consortes. Which is thus englished. This communion moughte pourge vs from synne, and make vs partakers of the heauenly remeadye. And in a nother place of their masse, the massemongers desyre God, that so many as shal receiue the holy body and bloud of Christ, maye be fylled wyth all heauenlye blessing and grace. All these woordes tofore rehearsed declare eudentlye, that in times paste, before this deuelishe priuate masse brast in, the minister and the people together dyd receiue the holy misteries of the body and bloud of Christ, and not the priest alone, as the manner is now in Antichristes kingdome.

Nether do we find any mention made of the priuate masse in ỹ writyngs of thauncient doctors before the time of pope Gregory ỹ first. As for the Grecians, the Armenians, the Indiãs &c, they know not these priuate masses, but they vse the lords supper in their churches according to thinstitution of the lord Jesu: not one alone, but many cõmunicating together, as S. Jerom saith: The lordes supper ought to be cõmon to al: for he deliuered the sacramẽts to al his disciples, ỹ wer present, equally. Father. I se now, that ỹ lords supper is greatly abused of the papists in their priuate masses: while cõtrary to the institution of Christ they make ỹ singuler & priuate, which ought to be vniuersal & common. But go forth to reherse thabuses of the lords supper, brought in by the papists. Son. Secondly, the papists greatly abuse, yea they alter, mangle, & deforme the holy institution of the lords supper, while they contrary to the commaundement of Christ take away half the sacrament of the body and bloud of our sauiour Christ frõ the cõmmunion of the lay people, ministring the sacramẽt vnto where Christe commaunded, that not onlye the breade, but also the cuppe should be ministred. Sonne. Concerninge the bread, whych is the misterye of his bodye, Christ sayeth: Take ye, eat ye. And as touching, the mistery of his bloud, he sayeth: Dryncke ye all of thys. And in the wordes of the cuppe it is to be noted, that Christe hathe thys woorde, All: which he hath not in the wordes belonging to the misterye of his body. Drink ye al of this, sayeth he: aforeseing without doute in the spirit, that there should arise false Prophets and false annoynted, which presumptuously woulde deny the mistery of his bloud to some certen men, as the papistes do to the laity, yea & to theyr owne priestes also, except they sacrifice & be clothed with their missal and mistical, with their histrionical & scenical robes, by this menes trãsgressing the cõmaundement of god for the maintenãce of their wycked trifling tradition. Therfore with expres, euidẽt & plain wordes Christ saith. Drinke ye al of this. All, saith he, excepting none. Wyth what therfore impudency shal I saye, or rather impudẽcy dare the aduersaries of gods truth against so euident wordes & expres commaundement of Christ take away the holy mistery of the blonde of Christ from the lay people? Drink ye al of this, sayeth he. Father. And did the disciples drink of this cup according to the commaundemẽt of Christ? Son. So testifieth blessed Mark, saying: They al drãk of it. Father. But here it is obiected: Christ spake these wordes to his disciples, which were consecrate priestes, & not to lay men: and therefore the priestes alone ought to receiue the cup of the mistery of christes bloud. Son. So likewise spake christ of the mistery of his body, these wordes onlye to his Disciples: Take ye, eat ye. Therfore looke with what autority the Papistes may take awaye the misterye of the bloud of Christe from the laitye: wyth the verye same autority maye they also take from them the misterye of Christes bodye. For he that sayde, Take and eate: the verye same saide. Take and dryncke. Deuyde this cuppe among you.

ter, vnderstand take and vse the Lordes supper, as both deuyne and humain letters manifestly declare. Are not these the wordes of blessed S. Paul: Is not the cup of thankes geuing, for ỳ which we geue thankes, partaking of the bloud of Christ? Is not the bread, whych we breke, partaking of the body of Christ? Because that we (though we be many) yet are one bread, and one bodye, inasmuche as we all are partakers of one bread, and of one cup. Of whome speaketh the holy Apostle here? Of consecrate prieستes, as they terme them, or rather of the whole congregation of God? Verely of the whole congregation of God. And forasmuch as he maketh mention here not only of the bread, but also of the cup: who seeth not euidentlye, that in the time of the blessed Apostle S. Paul, al the christians, so wel the tẽporalty as the spiritualty, as I may speake after the common manner receiued the holy communion of the body and bloud of Christ vnder both kinds according to the institution and commaundement of the Lord Jesu? which thing he declareth afterward manifestly, when he entreateth at large of the Lordes supper, ioyninge euer together the breade and the cuppe. Are not these his woordes? As often as ye shall eate Thys bread, and dryncke of thys cuppe. Againe, whosoeuer shall eate of Thys bread, or dryncke of the cuppe of the Lorde. Item, Let hym eate of the breade, and dryncke of the cuppe. And a lyttle after: He that eateth or dryncketh vnworthelye, eateth and dryncketh hys owne dampnation. Here see we that the Apostle entreatynge of the Lordes supper ioyneth alwayes the breade and the cuppe together, to declare that it can not be the Lordes supper, excepte there be distribution both of the bread and of the wine. And hereof maye we learne, that the Corinthians, whiche, I am sure, were not all consecrate Prieستes, but the greatest parte of them were Laye people, receiued in the dayes of S. Paul the holy sacrament of the bodye and bloude of Christe vnder bothe kindes, and not vnder the kynde of bread alone, as the manner is in the kingdom of the Pope. And betelye it is vnto me greate wonder, that euer the Pope durste so presumptuouslye (but what dare not Antichriste hauynge a mouthe ful of blasphemies euen agaynste the mooste highest, and exaltinge hym selfe aboue all that is called God, or that is worshypped, so that he doth sytte in the temple of God, boasting him selfe to be God) alter and chaunge, yea corrupt and mangle the holy testamẽt of our Lord and Sauiour Jesus Christ, that king of kinges, and lord of lordes, which he sealed with his moste pretious bloud. Thoughe it be but a mans testament saith saint Paule, yet if it be allowed, no man despiseth it or addeth any thinge thereto. Howe intollerable then is it, for a sinful mã to alter and chaunge, to corrupt and mangle the blessed testament of Gods onely begotten sonne, whych he confirmed with his death, and left it vnto his churche to be kepte inuiolablye or vnchaungeablie, as I may so speake? many hondred yeares after the tyme of the Apostles, as we may see in the bokes of the auncient wrytyghters: wherin we reade that both the breed and cuppe was geuen not onely to the stronge in age, but also to the young infantes, yea & that of necessitie, as some thought, being moued with this sentence of our Sauiour Christe, as it may seme: Uerely, verely I saye vnto you, except ye eate the fleshe of the sonne of man, and drynke his bloud, ye haue no life in you. Notwithstanding, as we may easely gather of the auncient wrytinges, the deuyll in all ages from tyme to time went about in his members to corrupt and to alter this godly institution of the Lorde Jesus, and to take away the misterie of the Lordes bloud from the communion of the laitie, contrary to the institution of Christ, so greatly in no age reuseth Sathan to obscure the glory of Christe, and to peruerte his holy ordinaunces. In the time of S. Cipriane that blessed Martyr, the lyke thyng was attempted, as it may easely be gathered of these his wordes: How do we teache or prouoke them to shed their bloud in the confession of the name (of Christ) if we doo denie them, when they go vnto the battell, the bloud of Christ? Or howe doo we make them mete and apt vnto the victorie of Martyrdome, if we do not first admitte them that wouldryghtly communicate in the church, to drynke of the Lordes cuppe? The lyke enterpryse was attempted also in the dayes of these two Bishoppes of Rome, Gelasius the first, and Iulius the first, but they bothe manfully resisted this wycked enterpryse, so that Pope Gelasius commaunded, that the whole Sacrament should be receaued in both kyndes seuerally accordyng to the institution of Christe, or els that whosoeuer would attempt the contrary, takyng onely the misterie of Christes bodye, and abstaine from the cuppe, should be restrayned from the whole Sacrament. He addeth moreouer, that the deuision of one and the same misterie, can not be done without great sacriledge. And the glose of the aforesayd decree of Gelasius hath these wordes: The Sacrament is not superfluously receaued vnder both kyndes. For the kynde of breed is referred vnto the fleshe, & the kinde of wyne vnto the soule: no he one is the Sacrament of the bloude, in the whiche is the seate of the soule. And therfore is the sacrament receaued vnder both kindes that it may be signified, that Christ toke both, the flesh and the soul, and that the participation of the sacrament is profitable as well for the soule, as for the body: so that if it should be taken onely vnder one kynde, it should be signified that it profiteth vnto the tuicion and preseruation of the one only. And Pope Iulius commaunded, that the people should receaue the holy cõmunion according to Christes institution, both the breed & cup, one seuerall from the other, as thapostle saith: Let a man examine him selfe, and so eate of that breed, & drynke of that cup. Moreouer, Gelasius (of whome we afore spake) wrote to certaine bythops, and cõmaunded all such to be excõmunicate & accursed, which receauing the body of Christ, abstained from the communion of the cup. Gelasius liued about the yeare of our Lord. iiii. C rett. And Iulius liued about the yeare of our Lord .iii.C.xxxvi.

Furthermore this vse of ministring the Lordes supper to the laye people vnder both kyndes according to the institution of Christe endured in the churche of Christ vnto the time of Pope Urban the iiii. and long after: which Pope Urban liued about the yeare of our lord M.ii.C.lxiii. In his dayes liued Thomas de Aquino the blacke frier, which died about the yeare of our Lord M.ii.C.lxxiiii. In his writinges it euidently appeareth, that in his tyme both kindes of the sacrament were deliuered to the laye people at the ministration of the Lordes supper according to the institution of Christ: and he rendreth a reason and sheweth a cause, why the Sacrament ought to be receiued vnder both kindes. These are his wordes, though whole Christ be vnder both kindes, yet is he not geuen in vaine vnder both kindes: For this is the true vse of the sacrament, that the body of Christ be exhibited and geuen aparte to the faithfull for meate, and the bloude for drinke. For the body (of Christe) is geuen for the saluation of the body, & the bloud (of Christ) for the saluacion of the soule. The like wordes hath S. Ambrose: that we receaue saith he, auaileth vnto the nutrition of body & soule, for the flesh of Christ is offered for the saluation of the body, & the bloud (of Christ) for our soule, as Moses prefigured the flesh, saith he, is offered for your body, the bloud for the soule.

The councel of Constance.

And this vse of receauing the holy sacrament vnder both kyndes continued in the churche vnto the councell of Constãce, which was holden & kept in the yeare of our Lorde, M.iiii.c.xv. in the whiche councell & xiii. session, it was decreed, that from that time forwarde, the cuppe of the misterie of Christes bloud shuld no more be geuẽ to the laitie, but that the leude people shuld hold thẽ selues cõtent with one kind & half of the sacrament, & thinke, that thei so cõmunicating after the determination of our mother holy churth like obedient children, did receaue enough for their saluation, forasmuch as vnder the kynde of bread, both the body and bloud of Christ is contayned. Here drone Antechriste with his wicked tradicion, Christe and his holy ordinaunce out of place: so that nowe, whosoeuer shall presume to teache, that the faythfull ought to communicate vnder both kindes according to Christes institution, he himselfe is an heretike, and his doctrine plaine heresie. And thus from that wicked councell hetherto (in the whiche councell moste vniustly that moste famous Clerke Iohn wickliffe, our countreman was condempned for an heretyke, and the two godly learned men Iohannes Husse and Hieronimus de Praga, were most cruelly murthered and brent of the bloudy Papistes, notwithstanding the Emperours saufe conducte for denying the Popyshe article of Transubstantiation, and for mayntayning the receauing of the Sacrãmẽt vnder both kyndes, according to ỹ doctrine of Christ, cõtrary to the practise of the primatiue church and contrary to the teaching of the auncient doctours, the cuppe of the misterie of Christes bloud, hath bene taken away in the kyngdome of the Pope from the communion of the laitie. Notwithstanding ding this may we euidently see, that for the space of xiiii. hondred yeares and xv. after Christe, the vse was from time to tyme that the laye people receaued the Sacrament vnder both kyndes, according to Christes ordinaunce, so that this order of cõmunicating the laitie vnder one kynde, as the custome is nowe vnder the Popes kyngdome, hath onely endured in the churche an hondred yeares & xlv. in this yeare of our Lorde 1560. Who seeth not nowe, howe this tradicion is no lesse new then wycked? Now, because it is lately inuented and brought into the churche: Wicked, forasmuch as it fighteth with the ordinaunce of God, whiche to violate and to breake, is more then double wyckednes.

Moreouer who knoweth, that the churches of the Grekes, of the Ethiopes, of the Rutenes, of the Bohems &c. (as histories make mẽcion) haue vnto this day alwayes obserued and kept the auncient & Apostolike maner of receauing the Sacrament vnder both kyndes according to the institution and ordinaunce of the Lorde Christ, and by no meanes would obey the new and wicked decree of the byshop of Rome in this behalfe? All the reformed churches throwout Europe also euen so many as haue shaken of the cruell and heauy yoke of Antechriste in this our age, haue vtterly reiected and cast awaye this wicked decree of the Pope, & receaue now generally the Lords supper according to the appoyntment of Christ vnder both kyndes. This thinge also is not to be passed ouer with silence, that in a certayne generall councell holden at Basyll, after that wycked councel before gathered at Constance, it was concluded, that accordyng to Christes institution the Lay people also shuld receaue the sacramẽt of the body and bloud of Christ vnder bothe kindes. And this decree was not only establyshed by the authoritie of the Emperour Sigismunde, with the consent of the other Nobles and learned men, but also cõfirmed, approued and allowed by Pope Eugenius the fourth, about the yeare of our Lorde M. iiii. C. xxxvi. I speake nothyng of the councell Toletane, in the whiche we may easely see, that at that tyme also the laie people vsed the Sacrament vnder bothe kyndes. But wherfore do I tary so long in setting foorth so cleare a matter, seyng this one sentence of Chrysostome, whiche I shall nowe recite, maye seme abundantly to declare, what is to be thought in this behalfe? Not as in the olde lawe, sayth he, the priest did eate parte, and the people parte: But one body and one cuppe is set forth to al. Those thynges, which belong vnto the Eucharist (that is to say, the lords supper) are common all betwene the priest and the people. In the Canon of the Poppyshe Masse, also we may playnely perceaue, that before the priuate Masse toke place, the people did receaue the Sacrament with the minister, yea and that vnder both kyndes. Father. Great abuses, I see ryght well, haue of late yeares brast into the churche of Christe, and specially about the Lordes Supper. But my dere sonne, if there be any other notable abuses behynde concerning the Sacrament of the body and blonde of Christ, let me heare them also. Sonne. Thyrdly, the Papistes greatly abuse the Supper of the Lorde, whyle they make it of a commemoratiue sacrifice, or a sacrifice of thankesgeuing, a sacrifice propiciatory, expiatory, satisfactory &c. Father. What meanest thou by that? Sonne. It is not vnknowē to the godly learned, that the Lorde Jesus instituted the holy misteries of his body and bloude to this ende, that they should be a memoriall of his body breakyng and bloude sheadyng, of his passion and death, whiche he suffered on the altare of the crosse for our redemption, as these his wordes euidently proue: Take ye, eate ye: this is my body whiche is broken for you: Do this in the remembraunce of me. Againe, drynke ye all of this: this cuppe is a newe testament in my bloude. Do this so ofte as ye shall drynke it in the remembraunce of me. So lyke wyse sayth the holy Apostle: So ofte as ye shall eate this bread, and drynke of the cuppe, Ye shall shewe the Lordes death tyll he come. But the Papistes can not be cōtent with this doctrine, that the supper of the Lorde (whiche they more gladlye terme the Masse) shoulde be a memoriall or remembraunce of that sacrifice, whiche Christe hym selfe offered on the crosse, but they wyll haue it the selfe same sacrifice, of the same vertue, strengthe, efficacie, myght and power, to saue the soules both of the quicke and dead. Father. Howe can that be? Sonne. They saye, that they offer vp Christe the sonne of God vnto his heauenly father for a sacrifice, bothe for the synnes of the quycke and of the dead. Father Is it so? Sonne. Nothyng lesse. For the holy scripture declareth playnly in many places that not another, but Christe hym selfe offered hym selfe a sacrifice vnto God his father to apease his wrath kyndled against mankind thorowe synne, and that by the vertue of that his one and alone sacrifice, God is at peace with man, fauoureth and loueth man, and accepteth man for righteous in his syght. S. Paul hath these wordes: Christ loued vs, and gaue vp him selfe for vs an oblatiō and swete smelling sacrifice to god. Againe, Christe thorowe the euerlastyng spirite offered him selfe vndefiled vnto God. Also in an other place Christe did that, whan he offered him selfe. And the Prophet sayeth: He offered vp him self, because it was his pleasure. And although the Papistes haue shewed them selues very arrogant and proude in matters of saluation, yet in this one point that they will take vpon thē to offer christ in their masses to be a propiciatory sacrifice vnto God the father for the sinnes of the quicke & of the dead, they shewe them selues to be more proude then Lucifer, as they say, or then that most proude king, whiche said in his heart: I wil clime vp into heauen, & exalt my throne aboue, beside the starres of God. I wil sit also vpon the holy mount toward the North. I wil clime vp aboue the cloudes, and wilbe like the highest of all. And verely this is that mā of sinne, the sonne of perdition, which is an aduersary, & is exalted aboue al ỹ is called God, or that is worshipped: so that he doth sit in ỹ temple of God, boasting him self to be God, whōe the lord shal cōsume with ỹ spirite of his mouth, & shal destroy with ỹ apperaunce of his cōming.

For

For what other thing is it to presume for to offer Christe, then the massyng Papistes to make thē selues equal in dignitie with Christ, yea then to excell Christe in dignitie? For he that offereth sacrifice vnto God, is greater and of more dignitie before God then the sacrifice that is offered: (for, for the offerers sake is the offering accepted of God, and not contrariwyse) it therfore foloweth, that the massing Papistes presuming to offer Christ for a sacrifice, are greater and of more dignitie before God, then Christ the sonne of God. O intollerable pryde. Who knoweth not, that Habel was greater and of more dignitie before God, then the firstlinges of his shepe, whiche he offered for a sacrifice? to whome also is it vnknowen, that Noah was more acceptable vnto God, and of greater dignitie before him, thē al the cleane beastes and cleane foules, that he offered for a sacrifice? Gene. 4. Gen. 8

was not Abraham of more excellēcie before God then the Ramme, which he offered vp for a sacrifice? The sacrificer is greater then the sacrifice. Who seeth not then, that the Massemongers sacrificing Christe, are greater and of more worthines before God, then Christ, whom they offer? Is not this, to be like the highest of al? But if ther bee none other remedy, but that the massinge priestes will sacrifice Christe in their masses, and so obtayne remission of sinnes vnto thē, for whome they offer: then doth it also folowe, that they must nedes murther, kyll and slea Christ, and shed Christes bloud. For without sheading of bloud, saith the Apostle, there is no remission of sinnes. But what reade we in S. Paule? Christ, sayth he, being rayled frō death, dieth no more. Death hath no more power ouer hym. For as touching that he died, he died as concerninge synne ones. And as touching that he liueth, he liueth vnto God. If Christ dieth no more then is he sacrificed no more. If he be sacrificed no more, then obtain the Papistes no remission of sinnes either for the quicke or for the dead by the vertue of their Popyshe masse, though they make it a sacrifice neuer so muche propiciatorie, expiatorie, satisfactory. &c. But these Massing Papistes are those false Prophetes & false teachers, whiche denie the Lorde that bought them, and bringe vppon them selues swifte damnacion, and many folowe their damnable ways, by whome the waye of truthe is euyll spoken of, and thorowe couetousnes with fayned wordes they make marchaundise of their captiues, whose iudgement is not farre of, and their dampnation sleepeth not. Esay. 14 Heb. 9. Rom. 6 2. Pet. 2

Moreouer this doctrine of the sacrifice of ỳ masse is playnly iniurious to the bloud of Christe, obscureth the pryce of Christes death, and disanulleth the vertue of Christes sacrifice, which he offered on ỳ altar of the crosse for our sinnes, & maketh Christ no perfect sauiour and redemer. For if any of our sinnes be put away thorowe the sacrifice of the Popyshe masse, than was not our redemtiō perfect in ỳ death of Christ, nether were all our sinnes washed away by ỳ bloud of christ. The missall sacrifice is iniurious to the bloud of Christ.

of Chriſt. But if all our ſynnes be put away by the death of Chriſte, accoꝛding to the doctrine of Chriſt and of his Apoſtles, then is their doctrine of the Miſſall ſacrifice vayne, falſe, wycked, and woꝛthy to be hiſſed out of the churche of Chriſte, ſeyng it ſo greatly embaſeth the dignitie of the ſacrifice of Chriſtes death, and pluckeb away our truſt and confidence from the merites of Chriſtes paſſion and death vnto the trifeling traditions and deuelyſhe doctrines of men. Foꝛ to ſtablyſhe a newe ſacrifice to take away ſinne, is nothiug elſ then to affirme and graunte, that the olde ſacrifice, I meane the deathe of Chriſt, is either of no foꝛſe, oꝛ elſ it is imperfecte. Foꝛ if the death of Chriſte be of full foꝛce, and ſufficiently perfect, yea and to the vttermoſte able to take away the ſinnes of the whole woꝛlde (as it is in dede) what nede we the Miſſal ſacrifice, lately bꝛought in by the deuill and Antichꝛiſte? Father. Chriſte then offered hym ſelfe a ſacrifice to God the father foꝛ our ſinnes. Sonne. Yea verely. He was both ỳ offerer & the offering: the ſacrificer & ỳ ſacrifice. Foꝛ ther was found neither Patriarke noꝛ Pꝛophet, neither Pꝛieſt noꝛ Leuite, nether Aungell noꝛ Archaungell, neither any other creature in heauen oꝛ earth, ỳ was of ſufficient dignite to offer this our ſacrifice, I meane the Loꝛd Jeſus: Muche leſſe are the filthie and vngodly Papiſtes, whoſe lyfe is full of all vnclennes, and whoſe doctrine ſwymmeth with diuerſe errours and hereſies, mete men to offer vp the Sonne of God a ſacrifice foꝛ ſynne to the heauenly Father: And therfoꝛe Chriſte offered hym ſelfe a ſwete ſmellyng ſacrifice to God the Father. Father. And was this his one ſacrifice, whiche he offered on the altare of the croſſe ſufficient foꝛ the ſynnes of the whole woꝛlde, ones offered: ſo that it nedeth no moꝛe to be reiterated oꝛ offered agayne, beyng and remaynyng of ſufficient foꝛce foꝛ euer and euer to purge the wickednelles of the people? Sonne. Chriſte is an euerlaſtyng pꝛieſt: and as his pꝛieſthode is euerlaſting, ſo lykewyſe is his ſacrifice euerlaſting: I meane, it endureth foꝛ euer in full vertue and perfecte ſtrengthe to put awaye at all tymes all the ſynnes of all people, that doo vnfaynedly repent and beleue, ſo that it nedeth not foꝛ any imbecillitie, weakenes oꝛ imperfection to be repeted oꝛ offered agayne, as the Papiſtes pꝛeſume, being of it ſelfe moſte perfecte and moſte full foꝛ the abholyſhyng of ſynne euen vnto the vttermoſte, yea and that euen to the woꝛldes ende, when ſynne ſhall altogether ceaſe, as the Apoſtle ſayeth: Jeſus Chriſte yeſterdaye & to daye, and the ſame continueth foꝛ euer. Be not caried about with dyuerſe and ſtraunge learnyng. Father. Let me heare it pꝛoued by the wooꝛde of God, that that one and alone ſacrifice, whiche Chriſte hym ſelfe offered ones foꝛ all on the altare of the croſſe, is ſufficient without any repetition oꝛ offering agayne to put awaye the ſynnes of the woꝛlde, ſo that we maye be thoꝛowely perſwaded, that the ſacrifice of the popiſhe maſſe, wherof the Papiſtes do ſo greatly bꝛag, and wher with they haue almoſte ſeduced the whole woꝛlde and to muche bleared the eyes of the ſimple & ignoꝛant, is vaine & wycked.

Heb. 11

Sonne,

Sonne. S. Paul sayeth, Iesus was a stablisher of a better testamēt. For among them manye were made prestes, because they were not suffred to endure by the reason of deathe. But this man (Christe) because he endureth for euer, hath an euerlasting priesthode. Wherfore Heb.7. he is able also euer to saue them to the vttermost, that come vnto god by him, seing he euer liueth to make intercession for vs. For suche an hie prest became vs to haue, which is holy, harmles, vndefiled, separate from sinners, made hier then heauen. Which needeth not dailye, as ponder hie prestes, to offer vp sacrifice, fyrst for his own sinnes, and then for the peoples sinnes. For that did he ones, when he offered Heb.9. vp him self. Again, Christ being an hie prest of good things to come, came by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with handes, that is to say, not of this building neither by the bloud of gotes and calues, but by his own bloude he entred in Ones into the holye place, and found euerlasting redemption And a litle after, Christe is not entred into the holye places that are made with handes (which are similitudes of true things) but he is entred into the very heauen for to appeare now in the syght of God for vs: not to offer hym selfe often, as the hie prest entreth into the holy place euerye yeare wyth straunge bloud, for then must he haue often suffered sence the worlde began. But now in the end of the worlde hath he appeared Ones to put synne to flyght by the offering vp of him selfe. And as it was appointed vnto all men, that they shal once die, and then commeth the iudgement: euen so Christ was ones offered to take away the synnes of many, and vnto them that loke for him shal he appeare again wyth out synne vnto saluation. Ones again he sayth, by the wil of (christ) Heb.10. we are made holy, euen by the offring of the body of Iesu Christ once for all. And euery prest (he speaketh of the prestes of the old law) is ready daily ministring, and offering oftentimes one manner of oblation, which can neuer take away sinnes. But this man (Christ) after he hathe offered one sacrifice for synnes, is set downe for euer on the right hand of God, and from henceforth tarieth til his foes be made his fote stole. For with one offring hath he made perfect for euer them that are sanctified. Hereto belongeth the saying of S. Peter, Christe i.Pet.2 his own self bare our sinnes in his body on the tree, that we beinge deliuered from sinne, should liue vnto righteousnesse. Saint Jhon also sayeth, Christ loued vs, and washed vs from our synnes in hys owne bloud, and made vs kinges and prests vnto God hys father. Apoc.1. And God the father hym self sayeth by the prophet, for the wyckednes of my people haue I striken him, which in dede had deserued ꝑ Esay.53 punishment, as S. Paule sayeth, God spared not his owne sonne; but Rom.8 gaue him (vnto the death) for vs all. Again, Christ died for our sins. Rom.4. Item, by Christ we haue redemption thorow his bloud euen remission of sinnes. And the Prophet sayeth, he only (Christ) hath take on Ephe.1 him oure infirmities, and borne oure paines. He was wounded for our offences, and smitten for our wickednes. For the chastisemente of our peace was layed vpon him, and with his strypes are we hea- Esa.53

led. As for vs, we haue gone all astraye (lyke shepe) euery one hath turned his owne waye. But the Lorde hathe heaped together vpon hym the iniquitie of vs al. Yet hath it pleased the Lord thus to burst him with plages, and to smite him with infirmities, that when he hadde made his soule an offering for sinne, he might see long lasting seede. Againe he shall iustifye the multitude, for he shall beare awaye theyr sinnes.

Item, he hath taken away the synnes of the multitude, and made intercession for the misdoers. And Christe him selfe sayeth by the Prophette, I haue troden downe the winepresse my selfe alone, and of all people there is not one with me. Esa.63

All these sentences aforesaide doo euidently declare, that by that one and alone sacrifice, whiche Christe that highe and euerlastynge Bishoppe offered ones for all vppon the aultare of the crosse, we are made righteous, holye, pure and perfecte, so that after that one and alone sacrifice doone by Christe on the tree, no Sacrifyce, no offeringe for sinne remaine to be offered for the synnes of the people of anye parsonne eyther in heauen or in earthe, all synnes beynge all readye taken awaye by that one sacrifice of Christe, so farre is it of, that we haue neade of that missall sacrifice, where of the Massynge Papistes, whose God the bealy is, doo so greatlye bragge: wherin also they stoutlye affirme, that they offer for a propiciatorye sacrifyce vnto God the Father for the synnes of the quicke and of the deade, the sonne of God Christe Jesus the Lorde: when as to forse we haue aboundauntlye heard, that Christe (and not anye other) offred hym selfe on the aultare of the Crosse a swete smellinge Sacrifyce vnto God his father for the synnes of the whole world, yea and that once for all: so that with that one and alone oblation wythoute anye repetition or renewinge of the same, all that are sanctified, are made perfecte forever and euer: And this is that, whyche the Lord Jesus hanginge on the Crosse sayde a lytle before his deathe: It is finished: as though he should saye. What so euer is necessarye for the saluatyon of manne, is perfectlye and euen vnto the vttermoste, and at the full accompished and fulfilled in this one and alone sacrifice of my body, which I nowe offer vnto my heauenlye father here hangynge vpon the crosse. For vpon the crosse and not vpon the popishe altare was Christ Jesus offered, and ther aboundātly he finished the worke of our redemption, as thapostle saith: Now by the meanes of christe Jesu, ye, which sometime wer far of, were made nie by the blond of christ: for he is our peace, which hath made of both one, & hath brokē down ẏ wal that was a stop betwene vs, & hath also put away thorow his flesh, the cause of hatred, euen the law of cōmaundemēts cōtained in the law wrytte, for to make of twain one new man in him self, so making peace: and to reconcile both vnto God in one body thorow the crosse, and slew hatred therby, and came and preched peace to you that were afarre of, and to them that were nie. For thorowe him we both (Jew and Gentile) haue an entraunce in one spirit vnto the father. Again it pleased the father, that in him (christ) shoulde all fulnesse dwell, and by him to reconcile all thynge vnto hym selfe, and Ibon.19 Ephe.2 Coloss1. Phil.3:

& to set at peace by him thorow the blud of his crosse both thinges in heauen, & things in earth. S. Peter also saith, Christ his owne selfe bare our sins in his body on the tree, that we being deliuered frō syn, shuld liue vnto righteousnes: by whose stripes ye wer healed. Father. What shal we then say to thanciēt fathers of Christes church, which in many places cal the supper of the lord a sacrifice? Sonne. Euē as y- mages are wōt to be called (as S. Austen saith) by the names of those things, wherof they are Images, as whē we behold a table or wall paynted, we saye: That is Cicero, that is Salustius: so likewise for as much as the celebration of the lords supper is a certain representatiue image of the passion of Christe, which is the alone true sacrifice, ther- fore the holy fathers many times cal ỹ Lords supper a sacrifice. Now if the Lords supper be not properly a sacrifice, but only a memorial of the true sacrifice, which is the passion & death of Christ: how can the massing Papists brag, that their masse (in the whiche many thinges are don contrary to thinstitution of Christ) is a propiciatory, satisfac- tory & erpiatory sacrifice for the sinnes of the quicke and of the dead? Father. How prouest thou, that this was the meaning of the fathers Sonne. S. Jhon Chrisostome saith: Do we not offer euery daye? We offer in dede, but yet that we do, is vnto the remēbrance of his death & et. This that we do, is done in the remembrance of that, which was don. This do ye, saith he, in the remembrance of me. Not a nother sa- crifice, as the bishoppe did, but the self same do we alway: yea rather we work a remēbrance of the sacrifice. The very same wordes in ef- fect hath S. Ambrose. In Christ, saith he, a sacrifice was once offred, mighty inough vnto euerlasting saluation. What do we thē? Do not we also offer euery day? Yea but vnto the remembrāce of his death. S. Austen also saith: The flesh & blond of this sacrifice before the cō- ming of Christ was promised by the sacrifices of similitudes: in ỹ pa- shion of Christ it was performed by the self truth: after thassension of Christ, it is celebrated by the sacrament of remēbrance. Prosper hath these words: The heauenly bread, which is the flesche of Christ, after his manner is called the body of Christ, whē it is in very dede the sa- cramēt or holy sign of the body of christ: & that immolation or offring of the flesh, which is don with the handes of the priest, is the passyon, death & crucifying of Christ: not in the truth of the thing, but in a sig- nifying mistery. Petrus Lōbardus the master of the sentēces wryteth on this māner: that which is offred & consecrated of the priest, is cal- led a sacrifice & an offring, because it is a remēbrance & representation of the true sacrifice & of the holy offring don on thaltare of the crosse. And christ was once offred on the crosse, and there he was offred in him self: but he is daily offred in the sacrament, because in the sacra- ment a remembrance is made of that, which was once don. And the ordinary glose hath these words: In thaltare there is no reiteratyon or doing again of (christes) sacrifice, but there is made a daily remē- brāce of one sacrifice once done on the crosse, according to the saying of christ: Do this in the remēbrance of me. But wherfore do I tarye so long in gathering together the testimonies of thold fathers, seyng we find these words wrytten in the Popes old law: Christ was once offred offred in him self: and yet is he daily offered in the sacrament. Upon these wordes thus sayth the glose: He is offered, that is to say. Thoffring of him is repzeſẽted, & there is made a memozy of the passion of chzist. Again: because we sal daily, chzist mistically is offred vp foz vs daily: and the passion of chzist is setfozth in a mistery. Now sayth the glose: Thoffring vp of chzist don foz vs, is repzeſẽted in the sacramẽt of his body & bloud. And Thomas Aquinas him selfe calleth the sacrifice of the masse a memozial of the Lozdes passion. Father. Thou hast sufficiently pzoued both by the scriptures, & by thancient fathers, that there is but one sacrifice, which purchaseth remission of sinnes foz all faithful penitent sinners, which is the death of chzist, once foz al offered of chzist him self on the altare of the crosse, whose vertue, power & strength is so great & in al poynts perfect, that it nedeth no moze to be offred, being of it self foz euer sufficient to put away the sinnes of the whole wozld: Again, that the Lozdes supper, although an holy institution oz ozdinance of chzist, is not a sacrifice to put away sinne, but a memozial of that one and alone true sacrifice, which chzist he him selfe offred on the crosse foz thabolishing of the wozldes synne: and hereof thou hast also suffyciently pzoued, that the masse, which is but the inuention of man, & cõtaineth in it many absurdities, abuses & errozs, is no pzopiciatozy, expiatozy oz satisfactozy sacrifice, as the aduersaries bzag, to put away the sinnes of the quicke and of the dead, oz as some wzyte, necessary ad salutem. Sonne. It is truth. Father. Remain there yet any other abuses of the Lozdes supper vndeclared? Sonne. Fourthly, the papistes haue greatly abused the Lozds supper, while they contrary to thinstitution of chzist & the pzactise of the pzimatiue church reserue the sacramental bzead, & kepe it in boxes and pyxes, & hang it vp, yea & so lõg reserue it, ỹ it cozrupt, putrify, waxeth mould, stinketh, is eaten of wozmes, so ỹ they are compelled to burn it, accoz ding to their decre. Father. Is it not lawful by the woozd of God to reserue the sacramentall bzead? Sonne. Chzist in deliuering the bzead to his disciples, saide, Take ye, eat ye. He saide not, take ye, reserue ye. The sacrament was instituted of chzist to be receiued & not to be reserued: to be eaten, & not to be hanged vp with a rope: to be meate of the faithful, & not to be deuoured of wozmes. They therfoze that reserue the sacramental bzead after the Lozdes supper be done, enterpzise that, which is not found in the wozd of God. Father. Was it not vsed in the pzimatiue church to reserue the sacramental bzead? Sonne. No. The pzimatiue, which is the Apostolike churche, walked in the steps of chzist, & obserued that, which their Lozd & master commaunded. And what if some, I know not wt what spirit pzouoked, kept of ỹ mistical bzead certaine yeares after the Apostles time, & reserued it in their chestes oz cofers at home, I can not tell foz what purpose, as the nature of man is alwais moze bent vnto superstition & coũterfet wozshipping of god, then vnto the simplicity of gods holy ozdinãce: Their erroz ought to be no pzesident to the true chzistians, whose delight is to hear the voyce of theyz shepheard, and whose only study is to walke in the holy waies of theyz Lozd God. Father. What was ỹ vse among the old churches? Sonne. In the pzimatiue church, if anye of

of the bread or of the wine remained after the lordes supper was ended, the cõmunicants making a cõmon feast together did either eate & drink it vp them selues, or els they gaue it to the poze, as it may be truly gathered of these authorities of thauncient fathers. S. Ierom saith: After the communion whatsoeuer things wer remaining vnto thẽ of the sacrifices, euen there in the church they eating the common supper together consumed & spent them. Of this cõmon supper or dãket wryteth both Chrisostome & Tertulliane. Thold bishop Clement saith also: Uerely so many sacrifices shalbe offred on thaltare, as ought to suffice the people. If there remain any, let thẽ not be reserued til to morow, but with the feare & trẽbling of the clarkes let them be spẽt. Origene also saith: The bread, which the lord gaue to his disciples & said, Take and eat he differred not, nether cõmanded he that it shuld be kept til to morow. And S. Austẽ saith: The bread appoynted for this purpose, is consumed & spent in receiuinge the Sacrament. Euagrius in his ecclesiastical history declareth, ỹ thold custom was when much of the holy parcels of thundefiled body of Christ our god remained, the yong childzen, which were wont to go to schole, were called for to eat them. In the time of Origene and Hesychius (as their commẽtaries testify) the bread that remained after the communion was wont to be brent. And a certain man called Humbertus wryteth on this manner: We rede not, that the lord him self did deliuer to his disciples an vnperfect, but a perfecte commemoration, the breade beinge blessed, and straight waies broken and destributed. For he dyd not onlye blesse it, and so reserued it to be broken till to morowe: neyther did he breake it onlye and keepe it in store, but he destributed it straight waies so sone as it was broken. In consideration whereof, blessed Alexander the Martyr, and first Pope from the Apostle Peter, putting the passion of the Lord in the Canon of the masse, sayeth: So oft as ye shall do thys, that is to saye, blesse, breake and destribute, ye shall do it in the remembraunce of me. For euerye one of these three done without the residue, that is to saye, eyther the blessyng without the breaking & distribution, or the breakinge withoute the blessing & distribution, representeth not a perfect remembraunce of Christe, as neyther doo the destribution without blessynge and breakynge. Paschasius also hath these wordes: Christe willing to setfoorthe the frute of this Sacrament, said: He that eateth my flesh, and drynketh my blood he shall liue for euer. And afterward Christ willinge that hys Disciples should be made partakers of the frute of this Sacrament after he had consecrated his body, he stode not still in the consecration, neither gaue it he to his disciples, that they should reserue & kepe it honorably, but he gaue it them for that purpose, for the which he did institute it, saying: Take ye and eate.

Of these authorities gathred out of the wrytings of thanciẽt fathers it is euident that the church of Christ, whẽ it was moste pure, & most diligently walked in the steps of the doctrin of Christ & of his Apostles, knew no reseruation of the Lordes bread, as it is nowe vsed in the church of the Pope. Neyther is this vse of reseruing and keping of boxing and pixing, of hiding and closing the sacramentall breade so greatly old. Verely it was the inuention of Pope Innocente the thyrde, aboute the yeare of oure Lord M.ii.C.xv. Father. God geue vs all grace to vse Christes holy Sacramentes aryghte, and accordinge to hys institution. Sonne. Amen. Father. Is there anye other abuse that hathe crept into the Church concerninge the Lordes supper. Sonne: Fifthly, the Papistes greatly abused the Lordes Supper, while they made of it a gasinge stocke by carryinge it aboute in publique processions, or by heauing and lifting it vppe aboue theyr heades to make it a spectakle to the people, by this meanes prouokinge them vnto the worshippinge of it, and so to fall vnto Idolatrye, vnto the great daunger of their soule healthe. For thys Sacrament was not ordained of the Lorde Iesu to be caryed aboute lyke a Popet, as the manner is in the Popes wicked kingdom, nor to be made an heaueoffering, as the Papistes vse in their Masses, but to be meat vnto the faithfull, to be broken and eaten in the remembraunce of Christes passion and death, as Erasmus Roterodamus very godly wryteth: Christ, sayth he, is in that Sacrament vnder thys manner of meat and drincke, that he should be receiued wyth hyghe purity of minde: not that he shuld be shewed abrode, or caryed about in plaies and cõmon pageauntes, or that he should be caryed about the fields on horsbacke. This was not the manner of the primatyue church, but in this thing the folish affections of the multitude hathe ben to much serued & obeyed. Neither is this custome so greatly old, but brought in, as it may appere of Pope Honorius the third, about the yere of our Lord M.CC.xrii.

Sixtly, this was also a great abuse amonge the papistes, that the sacrament of the body and bloud of Christ was alwais ministred to the cõmon people in a straunge and vnknowne tounge, whyche the simple & rude cõmon people vnderstode not, & so were not edefied, neither receiued they any profit by the wordes that wer spokẽ, although neuer so good and godlye. Father. Was this also an abuse? Sonne. Yes verely, and a great abuse: and directly contrary both to the doctrin of Christ, and thauncient practise of christes church. Father. How prouest thou that? Sonne. S. Paule sayeth: Brethren, if I come vnto you speaking with tonges: what shall I profyt you, except I speake to you, either by reuelation or by knowledge, or by propheryinge, or by doctrin? Moreouer, when thynges wythout life geue sound (whether it be a pipe or an harp) except they make a distinction in ỳ soũds howe shall it be knowen, what is piped or harped? For if the trompe geue an vncertaine voyce, who shall prepare hym selfe to the warre? Euen so likewise, when ye speake wyth tounges, excepte ye speake woordes that haue signification: howe shall it be vnderstand, what is spoken? For ye shall but speake in the ayre. And a lyttle after hee sayeth: when thou blessest wyth the Spirite (that is to saye, geuest thanckes in a straunge tongue, howe shall he that occupyeth the roume roume of the vnlearned, say Amen, at thy geuing of thanckes seing he vnderstandeth not what thou sayest? Thou verely geuest thanks wel, but thother is not edified &c. I had rather in the congregatyon to speke v. wozds with my vnderstãding to thinfozmation of other, then ten M. wozds with the tonge. Againe he saith: If when all the congregation is come together, & al speake with tonges, there come in they that are vnlerned, oz they which beleue not: wil they not say, that ye are out of your wyts? But and if al prophecy, and there come in one that beleueth not, oz one vnlearned: he is rebuked of all men, and is iudged of euery man, and so are the secreates of his hart opened, & so falleth he down on his face, and wozshippeth God, & saith, that God is in you of a truth &c. Let al thinges be done vnto edefying. If any man speake with tong, let it be by two, oz at the most by three, and that by course, and let another interpreate it. But if there be no interpreater, let him kepe silence in the congregation, and let him speake to him selfe and to God.

Who seeth not euidently by these wozds of the holy Apostle, that what so euer things be spoken in the congregation, whether it be in praying oz in preaching, all thinges oughte to be vttred in that language, which the people vnderstand, and that all thinges oughte to be don vnto edefying: which thing can not be brought to passe, if the administration of Gods misteries be done in a sozain and straunge tonge, as the Papistes do in al their churches. The papists therfoze haue greatlye abused them selues in the administration of Goddes holy misteries, while they haue vttred al things to ỳ people in suche a tong, as they vnderstãd not. Father. Was the vse in the churche of Christ also after thapostles time, that al things both in preaching & praying shuld be done in that speach, which the common people vnderstode? Sonne. Yea forsoth many C. yeres after, til that antichrist the bishop of Rome sitting now in the consciences of mẽ, and calling him self christes vicare, Peters successor, and supreme head of the vniuersal church of christ, deuised and commaunded the cõtrary: so that so many as submitted their neckes to the tirannye of that Romishe bishop, from that time forward were compelled to vse the Romane, that is to say, the Latin tonge in all their deuine seruice, as they vse to call it, contrarye to the doctrine of God, and contrary to the practise of Christes auncient churche, yea and that wythoute all edefyinge oz profytte. Father. And was thys Romyshe ozder vniuersallye receaued of all Christians thozowe out all Christendome.

Sonne. Nothinge lesse. Foz manye Christen nations euen vnto thys daye woulde neuer obey the Tirannye of that Romyshe Bysshoppe, noz knowledge hym to be Christes vicare, Peters successoure, Supreame heade of the vniuersall churche of Christe &c. noz yet to haue any moze power then any other ozdinary bishoppe hath: but whatsoeuer authozitye oz iurisdiction he chalengeth moze and obtayneth, there affirme it to be false and vsurped, yea and contrary to the woorde of God, and the Doctrine of the auncyente fathers of Chriſtes church.

Therefore as the Iewes from the beginninge vſed no ſtraunge tonge in their temples, nether yet doo at this preſent, but their own language, that is to ſaye the Hebrewe tonge: ſo likewiſe euen from the beginninge of Chriſtes profeſſion the Grekes, the Indians, the Armenians, the Illyrickes, the Slauones the Moſcouites, the Liburnians, with diuers other haue euer vſed their owne Countrye ſpeache in the celebration of Goddes miſteries, and not a ſtraunge tounge (as the manner is in the Popes churche) whiche they vnderſtande not. Whoſoeuer hathe trauailed either in the readinge of hiſtories, or of auncient wryters, he right wel knoweth theſe thinges ſo be true, which I now ſpeake. Father. I graunt my ſonne. But let me heare an autority or two out of the olde wryters, whiche teſtifye this thing to be true. Sonne. Saint Ambroſe ſayeth. If ye come together to edify the congregation, thoſe thinges oughte to be ſpoken which the hearers may vnderſtand. For what doth it profit, ỹ anye man ſpeke with a tong, which he alone knoweth: that he, which heareth, may haue no profit? Therfore he ought to hold his peace in the congregation, that they may ſpeake, which may profit the hearers. S. Ihon Chriſoſtome ſayeth, if I ſhal not ſpeake that, which maye plainly and eaſly be vnderſtand of you, but only ſhal ſhew my ſelfe to be endued with the gift of tonges, I beleue ye ſhal goo away, receiuing no frute of thoſe thinges, which ye vnderſtand not. For what profit can there be of a voyce not vnderſtand? Caſſiodorus ſaith, the ſpeach is vnprofitably vttred, that is not vnderſtand. Not only ſinging, but alſo vnderſtanding we ought to geue thanks. For no mã doth any thing wiſely, that he vnderſtandeth not. Haymo alſo ſaith your ſpeach ought to be vnderſtand, ỹ the ſouldior may prepare himſelf vnto the ſpiritual battel of Chriſt. To whom is the godly law of themperor Iuſtiniane vnknowen, in the which he commaundeth, ỹ al biſchops & prieſts both in the time of deuine ſeruice, and alſo in the miniſtration of the holy ſacraments, ſhould with ſo open and cleare voyce vtter al thinges in the tong, which the people vnderſtãd, that the hearers may therby be the better edified, & alſo be the more feruently ſturred vp vnto deuotion & praying vnto God? Many autorities out of thold wryters might here be aledged, to declare that all thinges ſpoken in the church both in preaching & prayinge, ought to be vttred in that tonge, which the people vnderſtande: but let theſe for this preſente ſuffyce. Father. Contented, my childe. But remayneth there yet anye other abuſe in the adminiſtration of the Lordes ſupper, broughte in by that byſchoppe of Rome?

The vii. abuſe.

Sonne. Seuenthlye. Thys alſo is a greate abuſe in the Popes church, that the Papiſts at the celebration of the lords ſupper do not onlye ſuffer the Communicantes to be preſent at the participatyon of thoſe holye miſteries of the bodye and blonde of Chriſte (whyche oughte of righte ſo to be) but alſo they admitte other, not communicating catinge to be present, onlye idle gasers and vaine beholders of those thinges, whereof they wyll not be partakers: where as of ryghte they oughte to be excluded, putte oute, and vtterlye banyshed from that companye in the time of that holye action. Father. Whye, is it lawfull for other to be presente at the ministration of the Lordes supper, whych are not communicantes? Sonne. No verelye. Father. Whye so?

None ought to be present at the ministratiō of the lords supper, but the cōmunycantes only.

Sonne. Fyrste, we reade not, that anye were present at the table, when the Lorde Jesus instituted and deliuered the blessed Sacramentes of his body and bloude, but onlye his Disciples, whyche all were Communicantes: to declare vnto vs, that none should be presente at that holye action, but suche onlye, as be partakers of those holye misteries.

Secondlye we read that the auncyent fathers of Christes churche woulde by no meanes suffer, that anye shoulde be presente at the ministration of the Lordes supper, but suche onlye, as woulde communicate. The other were commaunded to departe, and by no meanes to remayne amonge those that came vnto that holye and heauenlye bancket. Father. How prouest thou that? Sonne. Nicrologus in the booke de Ecclesiasticis obseruationibus, hath these wordes. Cap. 26

It is to be knowen accordinge to the vse of the aunciente Fathers, that the Communicantes alone were wonte to be present at the deuine misteries. In consideration where of before the oblacyon, (hee meaneth, the receiuinge of the Sacramente) accordinge to the Canons bothe they, whyche were called Cathecumini, that is to saye, parsons newlye instructed or trained vp in the Principles of Christen religion, and also Pœnitentes, that is, suche as for their losenesse of life were not yet meete to be admitted vnto the participatyon of those holye misteries, were commaunded to goo oute, so that it was not lawfull for them there to remaine. Saint Gregorye also bishop of Rome testifyeth, that this was the manner in times paste, that whensoeuer the holy communion of the body and bloude of Christe should be ministred, the Deacon turned him to the people, and cried out on this sorte: Si quis non communicat, exeat. That is to say. If any do not communicate, let him go out. For in this respect is the cōmunion called Missa, because al such are to be sent out by the Deacon, which are not partakers of the sacrifice or of the holy communion. &c. And in a nother place he declareth, that when the gospel was once read, the Deacon came and openly commaunded al such to departe, as had not prepared them selues to be partakers of the holye communion. For it was not lawful for such to be present at the celebration of those holy misteries. Againe he saithe, except such as doo not communicate, be commaunded to goo oute at the voyce of the deacon, accordinge to the custome and manner of oure auncestours the seruice or office, whiche commonlye is called Missa, canne not truelye and perfectlye be doone. Once again he saith: The erorcist e must cast out deuils, & say vnto the people, that all suche as wyll not communicate, must departe & go awaye. And Dionisius Areopagita wryteth, that after the Gospel was ones read, all ỳ did not cõmunicate were put oute of the churche, and by no meanes suffered to see those holy misteries, nor to be present at the ministratiõ of the same. Moreouer in the Liturgie of the Ethiopes we reade thus. So sone as the Gospel is ended, the Deacon sayth: All ye that wil not receiue the Sacrament or Eucharist, get ye out. And again, after the Crede is songe, the Deacon sayeth. Ye that will not communicate, departe and go your way: but ye that wil communicate, embrace and kisse one another. In the Liturgie of the Armenians, we finde these wordes: the Deacon a litle before the preface sayth: They that are not worthy to communicate and to be partakers of this holy oblation of God, let thẽ go out and stande before the churche dore, and there praye. And in the Liturgie of S. Jhon Chrysostome we reade, that when the cõmunicantes prepared them selues vnto the Lordes table, the Archdeacon commaunded the Deacon that stode without, to shut the chaun cell dores, that none mighte there remaine, but the communicantes only. And in a certain homely he hath these woordes: Who so euer is not partaker of the misteries, he standeth by impudent and lewde. Therfore they that are in sinne are first cast out. For euẽ as it is not lawful for them to approche and to drawe nie vnto the table, where their maister sytte, whyche haue offended him, and to be presente among the seruitours, but is dryuen out from amonge them: so lykewyse is it in this place, whyle the oblation is offered, whyle Christ that lambe of the Lorde is offred vp for a sacrifice. Againe he sayth: When the misteries be once done, thou mayest come and see: But so long as the misteries be in hande, get thee hence. For thou haste nothinge here to do. Father. I perceaue nowe right well, that the Papistes suffering other to be present at the ministration of the holy cõmunion of the body and bloud of our Lorde and Sauyoure Christe Jesu, whiche do not communicate, nor be partakers of those blessed misteries, erre greatly from the wayes and vsages of the auncyent Christen churches. Sonne. You saye truthe. Father. Is there anye other abuse behynde, creapt into the churche of Christe, concernynge the holye Supper of the Lorde? Sonne. This is an other greate abuse, that where as the LORD Christe Jesus, woulde haue the holye Communion of his blessed bodye and precyous bloude to be oftentymes receaued of the faythfull for a remembraunce of hys deathe and Passion, and for the worthye, diligente and earnest, consyderation of hys inestimable benefytes, whyche wee haue obtayned of God the Father, thorowe the same hys Passion and Deathe:

In expos. ord. rom.

Lib. 1. de ord. rom.

The viii. abuse.

The custome in the Poopes Churche is, that the people receaue that Sacramente vsuallye but once in the yere: That is to saye, at Easter, and that but vnder one kynde and manner contrarye to the institution of Christe, so that by this meanes the cõmaundement of Christe is broken, the Sacrament is neglected, the death of Christe is not earnestly remembred, the people become vnthank thanckefull, dissolutio n of lyfe brasteth in, vice encreaseth, vertue decreaseth. Father. Is it the wyll of Christ, that the faythfull shuld oftentymes come vnto those holy misteries? Sonne. Who doubteth of that? To what ende was the Lordes supper instituted, but that it should bee frequented and vsed: To what ende doothe God geue his commaundement, but that it shoulde bee put in execution and practise? Is not this the commaundement of Christe, concerninge this holy Supper in the vse of the same? This doo ye in the remembraunce of me. Are not these the wordes of blessed saynt Paule? The Lorde Jesus the same nyghte, in whiche he was betrayed, tooke breade: And when he hadde geuen thankes, he brake it and sayde: Take ye, and eate: This is my bodye, whiche is broken for you. This doo ye in the remembraunce of me. After the same manner also he tooke the cuppe, when Supper was doone, saying: This cuppe is the newe Testament in my bloude. This doo as often as ye drynke it in remembraunce of me. For as often as ye shall eate this bread, and drynke of this Cuppe, ye shall shewe the Lordes death, tyll he come. Luk.22 1.Cor.11.

Here heare we bothe the commaundement to receaue, and also mencion made of the often receauyng. Howe is this put in practise in the Popes churche, where the people receaue the Lordes Supper but once in a yeare? As often, sayeth Christe. As often, sayeth S. Paule. But As seldome, sayeth Antichriste. They take awaye from the people the misteries of Christes body and bloud, and feede them with holy bread and holy water, beggarly ceremonies of their owne inuencion. Father. Was as the vse in the tyme of Thapostles to come often vnto ỳ Lordes tables? Sonne. Yea verely. For thus read we in the Actes of the Apostles: They that gladly receaued his (Peters) preachyng, were baptised, and the same day there were added vnto them about thre thousande soules. And they continued in the Apostles doctrine and felowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers. Agayne, all that beleued, kepte them selues together, and hadd all thinges comon, and solde their possessions and goodes, and parted them to all men, as euery man had neade. And they cõtinued dayly with one accorde in the temple, and brake bread from house to house, and did eate their meate together with gladnes and singlenes of heart praysing God &c. Here heare we of dayly continuaunce of breaking bread: Whereby is vnderstand, the Lordes supper, and not of coming vnto the Lordes table once in the yeare, as the manner is in the Popes kyngdome. Father. And what was the vse in the primatiue churche after the Apostles tyme? Came the Christiãs then also often vnto the Lordes table? Sonne. That is not to be doubted. For Guilhelmus Durandus sayeth, that in the primatiue churche all that were present at the celebracion of the Lordes supper, were wonte euery daye to cõmunicate. And Platina in his boke of the lines of the Romysh bishop wryteth, that Anacletus bysshop of Rome made a decree, that the Christians should receaue the Eucha- Act.2 In.Rat.di. off.lib.4.

riste,

riste, that is to saye, the Sacrament of the body and bloud of Christ euery daye, and that those whiche would not communicate, shoulde be excommunicate. And many yeares after, as we may perceaue by readyng the auncient wryters, this often receauing of the Sacrament tontinued in the churche of Christe. For in the time of S. Augustine, as he himselfe wryteth, some did communicate euery daye, some but certayn dayes in the weake: some onely vpon the saturday and sonday: some not at all but onely vpon the sonday. So lykewise was the custome in the dayes of S. Hierome. And S. Augustine hath a notable sentence in this behalfe, whiche is this: Dayly to receaue the communion of the Eucharist, I neyther commende, nor discommend: notwithstanding I woulde wyshe and exhorte men to communicate euery sondaye. In the time of S. John Chrysostome also the Lordes Supper was greatly frequented. Among the Grecians euen at this present daye, if any man absent him selfe from the Lordes table by the space of xiiii. dayes (except he can render a reasonable cause of his absence) he is excommunicate, and put from the company of the faythfull. In all those mighty, large and populous kyngdomes, whiche are vnder that moste puissaunt kyng Precious Iohn, the holy communion of the body and bloud of the Lorde hath bene from the beginning dayly ministred to the people, and yet is at this present daye, as histories make mention. Moreouer vnto the often receauing of the holy misteries of Christes body and bloud, all the aūcient wryters do diligētly exhorte. But blessed Egnatius hath these wordes: Make haste oftentymes to come vnto the Eucharist and glory of God. For when this thing is busely done, the powers of Sathan are expelled. S. John Chrysostome sayeth: he that hath a pure conscience, ought euery daye to come vnto the communion. This aforesaid doctor in diuerse places of his wrytings both sharply and greuously reproueth his audientes for their slacke comminge vnto the Lordes table, and exhorteth thē many tymes in the yeare, yea dayly (if they haue pure myndes) to come vnto the holy communion. Theophilacte also admonisheth vs, that we shoulde not come this or that day vnto the holye misteries of the bodye and bloude of Christe, but at all tymes, whensoeuer we fynde our selues pure and worthy. S. Ambrose speaking of the Lordes supper, sayth: Receaue (the Lordes bread) dayly, whiche may profite thee dayly. So lyue, that thou mayest deserue to receaue it dayly. &c. Againe: If so often tymes as the bloud of Christe is shed, it is shed vnto the remission of synnes: I ought to receaue it alway, that my synnes may alway be forgeuē me. I that alway sinne, ought alway to haue the medicine. The medecine, sayeth he is the heauenly and worshipfull Sacrament. Hereto appertayneth the saying of S. Bernard: He that hath a wounde seaketh a medicine: we haue a wounde, whyle we are vnder synne: the medicine is the Sacrament: dayly receaue, daily thou shalt be healed. S. Hierome also sayeth: Would God we were able at all tymes to receaue the Eucharist without the condempnation of our

of our selues and without a pryckynge conscience, and to heare the Psalmiste, saying: Taste and se, howe swete the Lorde is. Psal.34.

Many other histories and authorities myght here bee alledged to declare, that when the churche of Christe was moste pure, the sacrament of the body and bloud of Christe was moste often receaued of the Christians: Againe, that we, which at this tyme lyue and professe Christe, ought to frequent the holy sacrament, and oftentymes to be partakers of those holy misteries: Least that we abstaynynge from so wholsome medicine, acquire and get to our selues woundes incurable. Who seeth not then, what and howe great an abuse this is in the Popes churche, the laye people comōly to receaue the Lordes supper but once in the yeare, yea and that vnder one kynde contrary to the institution of Christe? I greatly maruell, that the Papistes obserue not so muche as the decree of their father the Pope: For Pope Fabiane made a decree, and gaue out a cōmaundement, that al men should at the least thryse in the yeare receaue the holy cōmunion: that is to saye, at Easter, and at Whytsontide, and at Christmas. The very same thing was enacted in the coūcell Agathense, of the whiche we reade on this manner: The secular people whiche do not communicate at Christmas, Easter, and whitsontide, let thē not be counted Catholikes, nor taken among the Catholikes. De consec. dist.2 Lib.concil.

Thus see we, that the Papistes in abusyng the Supper of the Lorde are vtterly fallen from theyr owne lawe and decrees, whyle they commonly minister the Sacrament of the body and bloude of Christe to the Laitie, but once in the yeare, where as the commaundement of Christe, the practise of the Apostolique and primatiue churche, the vse of those churches, whiche vntyll this daye haue continued in the doctrine of the Apostles, the doctrine of the auncient fathers, and the best reformed churches in these our dayes teache the contrary.

Father. There haue bene (it can not be denied) great abuses, and yet are in the Popes churche concerning the supper of the Lorde: & this rare & seldome comming of the common people vnto the receauinge of the Sacrament of the bodye and bloude of Christe is not one of the lessest. But notwithstandinge because the people shoulde not be altogether without some outward thing to put thē in remembraunce of the body breaking & bloudsheading of Christ, the Papists haue brought into the church two ceremonies, that is to saye, holye bread & holy water, and they euery sonday minister them to the common people in steade of the honorable Sacrament of the body and bloud of Christe, by geuing them the bread to eate, and by castinge the water on their fates. Sonne. It may iustly be sayde vnto them as Christe aunswered the Pharisees and Scribes: Well prophecied Esaias of you, O ye hypocrites, as it is wrytten: This people honoreth me with their lippes, but their heart is farre from me: how be it in vayne do they serue me, teachyng the doctrines and commaundementes of menne. For ye laye the commaundement of God aparte, and ob- Math.15 Marc.7 Esay.29

and obserue the constitucions of men. &c. Ye cast awaye the commaundement of God, to maintayne your owne traditions. Father. Besydes these abuses, haue there not also crepte in certayne errours into the churche of Christ about the matter of the Lordes supper thorowe the vngodly doctrine of the Papistes? Sonne. Yes verely, diuerse, but three principally. Father. Whiche are they? Sonne. The first is, the doctrine of transsubstantiation The seconde is, the doctrine of the corporall presence of Christ in the Sacrament, as he hanged on the Crosse. The third is, that the godles and wicked people receauing the Sacrament, eate and drynke the body and bloud of Christe, no lesse then the godly and the faythfull people. Father. Why, what thynkest thou of transsubstantiation? Sonne. I thynke it to be a Papisticall, wycked and deuelyshe erroure. Father. Why doest thou call it a Papisticall erroure? Sonne. Because it was thruste into the churche of Christe thorowe the violent tyranny and tyrannicall violence of the Pope, and made of full force with the articles of the Christen beliefe. Father. What Pope brought it in? Sonne. Pope Innocent the thyrde. Father. Where? Sonne. At Rome in a certayne councell called Concilium Latronense, in the whiche were gathered together wonderfull swarmes of smeared, spyrituall ghostlyng Sorcerers, to the nomber of xii. hondred and odde, whereof the greatest parte were Monkes, Fryers, Chanons, and suche other idle monstures, whiche deuoure wydowes houses vnder the pretence of longe prayer, whiche haue an outwarde apperaunce of Godly lyuing, but haue denied the power therof, which thynke lucre, godlynes: whiche also beyng dampnable sectes, denye the Lorde that bought them, for as muche as they are the ennemies of the crosse of Christe, and haue the belly for their God. Father. At what tyme came transsubstantiation into the churche? Sonne. Pope Innocent the thyrde with his adherentes hatched this Cockatryces egge, I meane the horrible mōsture of transsubstantiation in the yeare of oure Lorde. M. twoo. C. xv: whyle he sate in the chayre not of Moses, but of pestilence. Father. This doctrine then of transsubstantiation is but newe. Sonne. Newe in deede, and as I may so speake, yesterdays doctrine. Father. And doeth Pope Innocent make this his newe doctrine of equall authoritie with the articles of the Christen faith? Sonne. Yea, as we may see in his deuelysh decree. Father. Why callest thou this doctrine of transsubstantiation a wycked erroure? Sonne. Because it is not grounded vpon the worde of God, but rather it is contrary to the woorde of God. For where as the holy scripture calleth the Sacrament of the body and bloude of Christe, bread and wyne: This doctrine of transsubstantiation teacheth playnly, that there is neyther bread nor wyne: whiche are two suche repugnaunces and contraries, as darkenes is not more contrary to lyght, nor death to lyfe. And as the holye scripture affirmeth bread and wyne to remayne in the Sacrament: so lykewyse doo all the auncient wryghters and olde Doctours of Christes

Christes churche: so that this doctrine of transubstantiation, is no lesse contrary to the teachyng of the holy scripture and of the godly fathers, then it is newe. And S. Ambrose sayth: we lawfully condemne all newe thinges, whiche Christ hath not taught: For to the faythfull, Christ is the way. If Christ therfore haue not taught that thing, whiche we teache: euen we our selues also iudge and recompt it detestable. Again he sayth, whatsoeuer is not of thapostles, it is ful of wyckednes. S. Hierome sayeth: that is the doctrine of the holye Ghost, which is set forth in the Canonical letters: against the which doctrine if councels establishe any thyng, I iudge it vnlawfull and wycked. Panormitanus also sayth, we ought more to beleue a simple laye man alledging the holy scripture, then an whole councell (without the scripture). Once agayne he sayeth, more credite is to be geue to suche one as is perfectly learned in holy letters, and bringeth for hym vniuersall authoritie, then to a generall Councel: Item, in matters concernyng faythe, the worde euen of one priuate man, is more to be regarded, then the saying of the Pope, if he be moued with better authorities of the newe and olde testament, then the Pope. It is needefull, sayth Origen, that we call the holy scriptures into wytnes. For our deuises and expositions without these wytnesses are not to be beleued. Saynt Cipriane sayeth: Adulterous and whorysh is it, vngodly is it yea playne sacrilege and Godrobbyng is it, what so euer is appoynted thorowe the madnes of man, that Gods ordinaunce should be violated and broken. For the authoritie of the holy scripture is greater, then all the perspicacitie or quicke syghte of mannes wytte, as saynt Augustine sayeth. Father. But wherefore doest thou call the doctrine of transubstantiation a deuelysh ertour? Sonne. Because the Deuell, whiche is a lyar and the father of all lyes, fyrst of all inuented this prodigious monsture of transubstantiation to corrupte the true doctrine of the Lordes Supper left vnto vs in the holy scriptures and in the Godly monumentes of the auncient fathers, and breathed it into the breast of his chaplain Pope Innocent the thirde, whiche being conceaued with this most vngratious monsture, was deliuered thereof at the councell Latronense, at the byrth wherof were present mo then a thousand Papists whiche gaue this monsture this monstruous name, Transubstantiation. Father, what meanest thou by this worde Transubstantiation? Sonne. A conuersion or chaungyng of a thyng from his owne naturall substaunce vnto the substaunce of an other creature, as if chalck shoulde be chaunged into chese, or a lore into a fryer. Father. Is the lyke thynge founde in the Sacramente of Christes bodye and blonde? Sonne. So saye the Papistes. Father. What saye they? Sonne. Thus saye they: that by the vertue of these fyue wordes, Hoc est enim corpus meum, this is my bodye: they at their Masses conuerte and turne the substaunce of bread into the substaunce of the naturall body of Christe: Agayne, that by the vertue of thole wordes Hic est enim calix sanguinis mei. &c.

What this worde Trānsubstantiō meaneth.

This is the cup or chalice of my bloud, &c. the substance of wyne is turned into the substance of that very bloud of Christ, whiche he shed for our sake on the altare of the crosse: so that now there remaineth no more bread or wyne, but the very naturall, real, and substãtiall body and bloud of Christ, which he receaued of the holy virgin Mary. Father. Whatsoeuer the Papistes for their belyes sake prate in this behalf, I am sure, reason sayeth, that there remaineth bothe bread & wyne. For after the wordes of cõsecration, as they terme thẽ we se, feale, taste, smell, sauoure & receaue bothe bread & wyne. Yea the bread after the consecration, if it be long kept, will mould & stinke and brede full of wormes: the wyne also will lose hyr taste & coloure and waxe sower & pale, as experience hath sufficiently taught. In consideration wherof, as I haue heard, it is agreed among the Papistes & set forth in their doctrine, that if the body of Christ (so terme they the sacramentall bread) should chaunce thorowe the negligẽce of the priest to corrupt and putrifie, a fire shuld be made, in the which that corrupt and rotten stuffe should be consumed vnto ashes, & the ashes to be reposed in the sacrary among the other reliques: Again, that if the bloud of Christ should fall vpon the grounde, the Priest should licke it vp with his tongue, and scrape the place, where the bloud fell, and the scrapinges gathered together, burn them in the fyre, and the ashes thereof also layde vp among the reliques, & that the priest for this his negligence should do penaunce by the space of xl. dayes: When, who knoweth not, that the true body of Christe is immortall, vncorruptible, and can by no meanes be any more subiecte to mortalitie or corruption, so farre is it of, that it can be consumed with fyre and brent vnto ashes, as S. Paule sayeth: Christe beyng raysed from death, dyeth no more. Death hathe no more power ouer hym. For as touching that he died, he died concernynge sinne once. And as touching that he lyueth, he lyueth vnto God. Sonne. Not only reason, but also the worde of God, and the auncient fathers of Christes churche affirme both bread and wyne to remayne in the sacrament, and by no meanes knowe or graunte any such monstruous transsubstantiation, as the Papistes fayne. Father. First tel me what the holy scripture sayeth in this behalfe. Sonne. Christe in the institution of the holy sacrament of his blessed bodye and precious bloude, as both the Euangelistes and also S. Paule testifie, tooke bread and gaue thankes, brake it, and gaue it to the disciples, & said, take, eate, this is my body, whiche is betrayed for you. Doo this in the remembraunce of me. Nowe who seeth not euidently, that that whiche Christe toke, was very bread? That whiche he toke, he also brake. And that whiche he toke and brake, he gaue to his disciples. And of that whiche he toke, brake and gaue to his disciples he sayd, take, eate, this is my body, whiche is betrayed for you. Here is it manifest and playne, that Christe both tooke, brake and gaue bread to his disciples, and they dyd eate of it remaynyng still bread in substaunce without any alteration or chaungyng, and called the bread his body, his body, as the manner of the scripture is to call the sygnes by the names of the thynges signified, that the thynges, whiche the sygnes represent, may the more stedfast remayne and abide in the myndes of the faythfull receauers. If the substaunce of bread remayne, where is then their transsubstantiation? Father. The Papistes graunte, that that was bread, whiche Christe toke into his handes: but they vtterly denie that that was bread, whiche he brake and deliuered to his disciples. Sonne. What was it then? Father Christes very naturall body, say they, as it was borne of Mary the virgyne, and hanged on the crosse. Sonne. Howe became it the naturall body of Christ? Father. Thorowe the vertue & power of certaine wordes, whiche Christe spake. Sonne. Whiche are they? Father. The Papistes are not yet fully agreed among them selues in this matter. Sonne, It is a comon thyng for lyers to varye in their tales, and one to tell one thyng, and another another thyng. But what saye they? Father, Some affyrme, that Christe had consecrate the bread and made it his body with certayne wordes, whiche are not mentioned in the scripture, before he delyuered the Sacramēt to his disciples, and sayde, take eate, this is my body. For howe could he haue delyuered his body to be eaten, if it had not bene his body afore? Or howe could he haue sayde, take, eate, this is my body, if it hadde not bene his body, before he spake. Sonne. At what tyme should Christe haue spoken these wordes, wherewith he made the bread his body? Father, When he blessed or gaue thankes, as they saye. Sonne. But the wordes of Christes blessyng or thankesguyng, are not contayned in the worde of God: it therfore followeth, that we haue not the wordes of consecration, whiche Christe vsed: it followeth also, that these wordes, whereunto the Papistes sticke with tothe and nayle, Hoc est enim corpus meum, are not the very ryght wordes of the cōsecration, and therfore bragge they of their transsubstantiation in vayne. Father. Some saye, that Christe in his blessinge or thankesgeyng rehersed these wordes, Hoc est enim corpus meum, first secretly & priuatly to him selfe & so consecrated the bread & made it his body, and afterward whan he brake it & deliuered it to his disciples, commaunding thē to take & eate, he openly pronounced those wordes, & gain to his disciples, I meane, Hoc est enim corpus meū, both to certifie thē of the presence of his body, & also to declare vnto thē, what wordes they also should afterward vse in the consecration of ỹ bread. Sonne. This thing is soner sayd then proued. For whatsoeuer they speake in this behalf, it cometh out of their own idle brayn, & not out of the word of God. And S. Hierome sayth, ỹ which hath not autoritie of ỹ scripturs, is despised with ỹ same facilitie or easines, wherwith it is proued. Again, without autorite of ỹ scriptures garrulitie or prating & vaine iangling hath no faithe, or is not to be credited. This dreame therfore of ỹ papists is of no force to proue their prodigious trāssubstantiatiō. Father. Some say, ỹ Christ made the bread his body by rehersyng these woordes, Hoc est enim corpus meum, once for al, yea and that with a cleare, euident and open voyce: and yet so, that neyther this woorde, Hoc, nor this woorde est, nor this woorde enim, nor this woorde corpus, nor yet this sillable, me, dothe muche in the matter: but this laste syllable vm, maketh vp all the market, in the whiche saye they, all the vertue of the consecration dependeth and reasteth, so that vm, being once pronounced, the matter is full finished: the bread is dispatched: a transsubstantiation is made: the substance of bread is turned into the substance of Christes corporall, reall, substanciall and naturall body, so that although that was bread, whiche Christe toke in his handes, yet that, whiche he brake and deliuered to his disciples, was not bread, saye they, but the very naturall body of Christe, and is now handled of the priestes handes, broken and torne on peces with the teeth of the faithfull, according to the doctrine of Pope Nicolas the second. Sonne. That it was very bread, whiche Christ brake, the order of the text doth most euidently declare. But that bread remaineth in the actiō of ỹ Lords supper not only before, but also after the consecration, as they terme it, S. Paul proueth manifestly by these his wordes. The bread whiche we breake, sayth he, is it not the communion, that is to saye, the partaking, of the body of Christe? Here the holy Apostle calleth the misterie of Christes body, bread, and sayth, that we breake bread: meaning that in the Lordes supper we both breake and eate bread. The blessed Apostle knew nothing of this prodigious monsture, transubstantiation, which the papistes more thē a thousand yeres after brought forth and deliuered it to the churche of Christe: and therfore he termeth bread, bread, yea & that after it is made the misterie of Christs body. Likewyse in an other place, where he entreateth largely of the sacrament of the body & bloud of Christe, he calleth after the wordes of consecratiō the misterie of Christes body, bread, thre tymes: which thyng he would neuer haue done, if he had knowen that there hadd bene any transubstantiation after the woordes of consecration, I meane, chaunging of the substance of bread into the substance of the naturall body of Christe. But not only S. Paule, but blessed Luke also termeth the misterie of the Lordes body, bread, whensoeuer he maketh mention of the supper of the Lorde, in his Chronicle of the Apostles Actes.

Now as touching the wyne, it is most manifest also that there is no transubstantiation, I meane, chaunging of the substance of wine into the substance of the naturall bloude of Christe, by the vertue of these wordes Hic est enim calix sanguinis mei. &c. For Christ him self after the wordes of cōsecration, as I may speake after ỹ accustomed maner, called ỹ misterie of his bloud, the frute of the vine tree. Now who knoweth not, that not ỹ bloud of Christ, but wyne, is ỹ frute of the vine. If the misterie therfore of Christes bloud be the frute of the vine tree, then is it not ỹ naturall bloud of Christe, as the Papistes teache, but naturall wyne. And here falleth downe to the grounde, yea euen vnto hell, from whence it fyrst of all came, the wycked doctrine of

trine of transsubstantiatiō. For we haue learned of the very wordes of Christe and of sayntPaule, and lykewyse of blessed Luke, that there is transsubstantiatiō neyther in the bread nor yet in the wyne. Father. Some affirme, that the disciples had receaued both bread & wyne, before Christe hadde recited the woordes of consecration, as they call them: and then muste it nedes folow, that those elementes of bread and wyne, whiche the disciples hadde already receaued, were not transsubstanciated nor turned into the naturall body and bloude of Christe, excepte the aduersaries wyll saye, that Christ dyd consecrate and transsubstantiate them after they were receaued of the disciples. Sonne. Of the misterie of Christes bloude it is playne and euident by the woordes of blessed saynt Marke, that the disciples receaued it before the woordes of consecration were pronounced. For thus wryghteth he: He toke the cuppe, and when he hadde geuen thankes, he toke it to them, And they all dranckc of it. And he Mar.14 sayde vnto them: This is my bloude of the newe testament, whiche is shedde for many. Verely I say vnto you: I wyl dryncke no more of the frute of the vyne, vntyll that daye that I dryncke it newe in the kyngdome of God. And the same maye also be thought of the misterie of Christes body: I meane, that they dyd eate the misterie of Christes body, before the woordes of consecration, as they call them, were pronounced. But howe so euer it was, they can not stablyshe nor grounde their doctrine of transsubstantiation by the woorde of God, as we haue sufficiently tofore hearde. Father. Do not the auncient wryghters and doctours of Christes churche teache and alow this doctrine of transsubstantiation? Sonne. Nothing lesse. For they dyd neuer so muche as once dreame of it, but alwayes taught the contrary, as we maye see in their bookes, whiche yet remayne. Whether the olde Doctours taughte transubstantiatiō

Father. Let me heare some authorities alleadged out of the auncient wryghters, concernyng this matter. Sonne. Fyrst of all Origene that auncient wryghter in the Greke churche commeth and offreth hym selfe vnto vs, as an ennemie of this wycked doctrine of transsubstantiation, whose woordes these are.

If any thyng enter into the mouthe, it goeth awaye into the belly, and is auoyded into the draughte: yea and that meate, whiche is sanctified by the worde of God and prayer, concernyng the matter thereof, it goeth awaye into the bely, and is auoyded into the draughte. But for the prayer, whiche is added vnto it for the proportion of the fayth, it is made profitable, makyng the mynde hable to perceaue and see that whiche is profitable. For it is not the material substaunce of bread, but the worde whiche is spoken vpon it, that is profitable to the man that eateth it not vnworthely. And this I meane of the typicall and Symbolicall body. In Math. cap.15.

Here Origene affirmeth playnely, that in the Lordes supper the bread, whiche he calleth the tipicall and Symbolical, that is to say, the figuratiue and the Sacramentall, body of Christe, remayneth, yea and that after it is sanctified by the worde of God and prayer:

And that the materiall ſubſtance thereof is receaued, digeſted, and auoyded, as the materiall ſubſtaunce of other bread and meates is: whiche could not be, if there were no materiall ſubſtaunce of bread at all remayning. Who ſeeth not nowe, howe directly Origene confoundeth, yea condempneth the fantaſticall doctrine of the Papiſts concerning that monſture of tranſſubſtantiation, whiche denie any ſubſtance of bread to remaine in the Sacrament?

That golden mouthed doctour S. John Chryſoſtome, cometh nexte in order, and ſayeth: Before the bread be halowed, we cal it bread: but the grace of God ſanctifiyng it by the meanes of the prieſte, it is deliuered nowe from the name of bread, and eſtemed worthy to be called Chriſtes body, although the nature of the bread tary in it ſtyll. Ad Cæſar. Monach.

Here the holy doctour ſayeth playnely, that the nature of bread remayne ſtyll in the Lordes ſupper, although it be called Chriſtes body. If the nature of bread remayne ſtil, where is then the Popiſh tranſſubſtantiation become? O to muche vayne and falſe doctrine.

Theodoretus an eloquent and great learned man, wryghteth on this manner: He that called his naturall body, corne and bread, and alſo named hym ſelfa vine tree: euen the ſame hath honoured the Symboles (that is, the ſacramentall ſignes) whiche are ſene, with the names of his body and bloud, not chaunging in dede the nature it ſelfe, but adding grace to the nature. Contra Eutichen. Dialog. 1

Againe he ſayeth: Neyther do the miſticall ſignes after the conſecration departe from their nature. For they abide ſtil in their former ſubſtance, both in figure and forme, and may be both ſene and touched, euen as before. Dialog. 2

What can be ſpoke more playnely againſt the doctrine of the Poppyſhe tranſſubſtantiation? If the nature and ſubſtance of bread remaine ſtyl after the cõſecration, who ſeeth not, how falſly the Papiſtes lie, which affirme, that the ſubſtãce of bread in the ſacrament abyde not, but is altered and chaunged into the ſubſtaunce of the naturall body of Chriſt.

Diuerſe other Greke wryters myght here be alledged for the cõfirmation of oure doctrine againſt the Papiſtes monſtruous and myſſhapen childe tranſſubſtantiation, begotten and borne at Rome: but let theſe ſuffice for this preſent. Onely this one thinge I wyll adde, that the Grekes with all the Eaſte churche could neuer be allured, moued, entyſed and brought to receaue this doctrine of tranſubſtantiation, beyng ſo lewde, vnſauery, vnreaſonable, monſtruous, wycked, worthye to be laughed at, and ſo vtterly eſtraunged from the wryghtynges bothe of the Apoſtles and of the auncient Fathers, althoughe dyuerſe wayes and at dyuerſe tymes attempted of the ſubtyle and wylye Papiſtes. For at a certayne councell holden at Florence vnder Eugenius the fourthe, Biſchoppe of Rome, about the yeare of our Lorde, a thouſande foure hundreth thyrty & one. The Pope with his adherentes ſought all meanes poſſible to bryng the Grekes and all the Eaſte Churche to confeſſe with the church of Rome: the doctrine of tranſubſtantiation, and that after the wordes of conſecration, the ſubſtaunce of bread and wine is turned into ned into the substaunce of the naturall body and bloud of Christ, no bread nor wine remaining, but only the accidents of bread & wine: notwithstandinge the Grekes vtterlye refused it, and woulde by no meanes receiue, admit, approue and alow such and so new & strāge doctrine, brought in of late without the authority of the holye scriptures, and hitherto vnknowen in those churches, which were founded and edified by the apostles and by the fathers of the primatyue church, insomuch that in the letters of mutuall consent concerninge the proceding of the holy Ghost, made betwene the Greke and Latin churches, the Grekes aboue al thinges did most earnestly take hede, and gaue diligent warning, that there shoulde be no mentyon made in those letters of any agrement or consente betwene them & the Romanistes in the late inuented doctrine of transubstantiation.

Father. This declareth euidently, that Transubstantiation is but a new inuencion, and vnknown of the best and purest churches, and therfore right wel worthy to be banished out of al churches.

Sonne. It is truth.

Father. But what say the auncient fathers of the Laten church? Do they alow this doctrin of transubstantion?

Sonne. Nothinges for this matter was also vnknowen to them as we may se in their writinges, Ireneus that learned and auncient father sayeth thus: The bread wherein we geue thanckes, whyche is of the earth, receyuynge the callynge of God, is nowe no common bread, but the Eucharist, that is to say, the bread of thanckes geuing, consistynge of two thynges, earthlye and heauenlye. Again he sayeth: When the cuppe myngled and the bread broken receiue the woorde of God, it is made the Eucharist (or Sacrament) of the body and bloud of christ: of whyche the substaunce of oure flesshe is stayed and encreased. Heare sayeth Ireneus plainly, that the Sacrament of the body and bloude of Christ consisteth of two things, one heauenly and thother earthly. What is this earthly thing, but very bread? Whiche thing he declareth manifestly, in that he sayeth, it is of the earth, and norisheth our bodies, as other bread doth. If the bread of thankes geuing be an earthly thing, and fedeth our bodies no lesse then al other bread doth, which we vse: who seeth not then, that the substaunce of bread remaineth: excepte paraduenture the Papistes will saye, that we be fed with the accidentes of bread, which is a thing impossible and againste bothe nature and reason. If breade remaine, where is then their transubstantiation?

Aduersus hereses, li. 4. cap. 34

Saint Cypriane that olde doctor and blessed Martir sayeth: The Lord calleth the bread beyng compact together of manye cornes, hys body: and he nameth the wyne beyng pressed out of manye grapes, and made into wyne, hys bloude. Againe he sayeth, The halowed breade entred into the wycked mouthe. Item. Dryncke sanctified into the bloude of Christe braste out of the defyled bowels. Here S. Cypriane openly affirmeth, that that, which Christ called his body, was very bread, euen such bread as is made of corne: Again, that that, whych he named his bloud, was very wine, euen suche wine, as is pressed out of many grapes. What can be spoken more plainly against the wicked doctrine of transsubstantiation.

Moreouer Gelasius a bishop of Rome, of Rome I say, but yet before Rome was infected with the pestiferous breath of that moost poysonful old serpent the father of al errors and lies, wryteth of the sacrament of the body and bloud of Christ against the heretike Eutiches on this wise, The sacrament of the body and bloude of Christe, whych we receyue is a godlye thinge, for the whyche also thorowe the same we are made partakers of the deuyne nature, and yet neuertheles the substaunce or nature of bread and wyne do not cease or departe and go away. Can any thing be spoken more plainly againste the error of the Popish transubstantiation, then this which a bishoppe of Rome wryteth? Would God all his successors had walked in the same simplicity of Gods spirit, and had with no lesse dexterity and vnryghtnesse handled the holy scriptures. Then should neuer so many pestylent errours and heresies haue crepte into the church For what can any man say more to ouerthrow the doctrin of the papistical transubstantiation, then this bishop of Rome vttereth? which with most manifest wordes affirmeth, that in the sacrament of the body and bloud of Christe, the substaunce of breade and wine remaineth and goeth not away. If the substance of bread and wine remain, and do not departe, wher is then transubstantiation become?

Contra Eutich.

Again, S. Austen one of the best wryters amonge the doctors of Christes church, sayeth thus: That whych ye haue seene, is the breade and the cup, whych also your eyes do shew you. But that fayth requyreth to be enstructed: the bread is the body of Christe, and the cup hys bloud Againe he sayeth. The sacryfice of the church consysteth of two thynges, of the vysyble kynde of the element, and of thinuysyble flesh and bloud of our Lord Iesu Chryst, both of the Sacrament, and of the thyng sygnyfied by the sacrament: euen as the parson of Christ consysteth of God and man, forasmuche as he is verye God and verye man. For euery thynge contayneth in it the verye nature of those thynges, whereof it consysteth. Nowe the sacryfyce of the churche consysteth of two thynges, of the sacrament, and of the thyng therby sygnyfied, that is to say, the body of Chryst. Therfore there is both the sacrament, and the thyng of the sacrament, whych is Chrystes body. S. Austen sayeth here plainly, that that which we see at the lords table wyth our corporal eyes, is bread: and that as the parson of Christe consysteth of two natures, that is to say, of his manhode and of hys Godhead: euen so the Sacrament consisteth of two natures, of the elementes of bread and wine, and of the body and bloude of Christe. If the elementes of bread and wine remaine, if that which we see wyth oure eyes be bread: who then perceyueth not euidentlye the manifest erroure of the popishe Transubstantiation, and that whatsoeuer the Papistes teach in this behalf, is plain falshode and lyes?

In ser. ad Infantes.

In sentent. Prosperi.

Bertramme, a great learned man among manye other, hath these wordes, wryting of the Lordes supper: As touchynge the substaunce of

of the creatures (he speaketh of the misteries of Chzistes bodye and blonde) looke what they were before the consecration, euen the verye same do they remain still afterward. Breade and wine were they before: in the whych kinde also being now consecrate they are seene to contynue and remaine.

What can be spoken mozе plainly against the popish transubstantiation, then to affirme, that bread and wine do remaine and contynue in the Sacrament, not only befoze the consecratyon, but also after the consecration?

Many mo, yea almost infinite authozities might be gathered out of the bokes of the godly auncient learned wzyters, which do manifestly impugne and condempne this wicked erroz of the Papisticall transubstantiation, but these tofoze alledged may seme to any indifferent parson aboundantly to suffice. And wherfoze should I labоz so greatly with the testimonies of the best and most auncient wzyters to subuert and ouerthzow this monstruous transubstantiation, seing that the Papistes them selues in their popishe masse call the sacrament Bread, yea and that after the consecration? Neither is thys to be passed ouer with silence, that certain among the papistes them selues could very hardly bzoke and digest this straunge doctrine of so monstruous transubstantiation. Foz that subtile Doctoz Ioannes Scotus, otherwise called Duns, one of the subtillest disputers & cheefe champions among the papistes, frelye confesseth that the artycle of transubstantion is neyther expzessed in the Crede of thapostles, noz yet in the other auncient and old Credes, but now in these latter times declared, setfozth, defined and determined of the church (he speaketh of the Romish synagoge) vnder pope Innocentius the thyzd in the councel Latronense in the yeare of our Lozd M.CC.xv. And he sayeth mozeouer, that the words of the scripture might be expounded more easly and more plainly without transubstātiation, but the church did chuse this sense (which is more hard) being moued therto (as it semeth) chiefly, because that of the sacraments men ought to hold, as the holy church of Rome holdeth: but it holdeth, that bread is transubstantiated or turned into the body and wyne into the bloude of Christe, as it is shewed. In sentenc. dist. 11 li. 4 quæst. 3

Furthermoze Gabriel Biel one of the chiefe captaines amonge the schole wzyters agreeth wyth Duns, speakinge on this manner? It is to be noted, that although it be plainli taught in the scripture, that the body of Christ is truly contained and receyued of the faythfull vnder the kindes of bread & wine. yet how the bodye of Christe is there, whether by conuersyon of any thing into it, or wythoute conuersyon the body is there with the bread, both the substaunce & accydentes of bread remaining there stil, it is not found expressed in the canon of the Bible. Notwithstanding foraſmuch as of the sacraments men must hold as the holy Church of Rome holdeth, as it is wrytten. De hæreticis. Ad abolendam, and that churche holdeth and hathe determyned, that the bread is transubstāciated into the bodye of Christe, and the wyne into hys bloud: In decre. de sūma Trinitate, & fide Cath. ca Firmiter. In Can. Missæ. Lect. 40 his blud: therfore is this opinion receiued of al catholikes, that the substance of bread remaineth not, but really and truly is turned, transubstantiated & chaunged into the substance of the body of Christ. again Comeracensis a schole wryter affirmeth plainly, that it is more probable and more to be alowed, yea and more agreable to the truth of Gods word, to graunt that in the Eucharistie, that is to saye, in the sacrament of the body and bloud of Christ there remaine very bread and very wine, and not the accidentes alone than otherwyse: if the church (he meaneth the Romish churche) hadde not determined the contrarye.

Note.

Who seeth not now euidently, that the doctrin of transubstantiation is new and lately sprong vp, not taught in the holy scriptures, vnknowen to the auncient fathers, not heard of in the godlye olde Councels, lately thruste into the churche of Christe of the Romyshe byshoppe and of hys adherentes by violence and tirannye, and now defended and maintained still of the Papistes, not wyth the holye Scriptures and auncient authorities, but wyth fyre and Fagotte, Sweard and halter?

Notwithstandinge the Papistes them selues, namelye suche as hadde any iudgement at all, graunt and confesse, that it is more easye, more playne, more probable, more to be allowed, yea and more agreable to the truthe of Gods woorde, to affyrme and beleue that the substaunce of breade and wine remaineth in the Sacramente, then otherwise, if the church of Rome had not determyned the contrarye: from whose triflinge traditions to dissente, they thoughte it more then double wickednesse.

But how can this their doctrin of transubstantiation stand with this saying of S. Austen? The word commeth vnto the element, and therof is made a sacrament. Here learne we of S. Austen, that euery sacrament doth consiste of two thinges, that is to say, of the woorde and of the element. Now is the Lordes supper a sacrament: it followeth therfore that it consisteth of the woorde and of the element. The word of this Sacrament is this. Take eate, thys is my bodye, whyche is betrayed for you. Do this in the remembraunce of me.

☞ Euery sacrament consisteth of the woorde & of the element.

Now must this word haue his element: which in dede is bread, and not thaccidents of bread, as the papists teach. Again, The word of ỹ other part of the sacrament is this: Take, drink of this al ye. This cup is a new testament in my blud &c. Now must this word also haue his element: which in dede is wine, & not thaccidents of wine, as ỹ Papistes holde. And who knoweth not, that an elemente is a thynge, that is to saye, a substaunce, and not the accydent of a thyng? who perceyueth not now, ỹ the papists teaching this doctrin of transubstantion do vtterly corrupt, & destroy the sacrament, & make it no sacramẽt in dede, forasmuch as they take away the element, which is bread & wine frõ the word? He ỹ wold take away water frõ the sacrament of baptisme, which is the element of that sacrament, should he leaue Baptisme a perfecte Sacramente? Euen so in lyke manner:

he that

He that goeth about to pluche from the sacrament of the bodye and bloud of Chrift the substance of bread and wine, destroyeth vtterly the aforsaid sacrament, and to say the truth, maketh it no sacramēt. We may therfore conclude truely and iustly, that the doctrin of transubstantiation, as I said before, is a papistical, wicked and deuelish error. Father. God rote out al errors ones out of his church, that we may walke only in the truth of his holy word. Sonne. Amen. I nothing doubt of this matter. For this prophecy of the Lord Jesu shal vndoubtedly be fulfilled, yea and that shortly: Euerye plante that my heauenly father hath not planted, shalbe plucked vp by the rotes. The doctrin of trāsubstātiation destroyeth the sacramēt of Christes body and blud. Math. 15.

Father: What is the second error? Sonne. The second error is: the doctrin of the papists concerning the corporal presence of Christ in the sacrament, as he was born of Mary the virgin, and hanged on the crosse. Father. This must nedes folow of the doctrin of transubstantion. For if the substance of bread and wine be turned into the substance of the natural body and blond of Christ: then must thys doctrin also be true, that Christ is in the sacramēt really, naturally, substancially, corporally &c. yea that the sacrament is the true, reall, natural, corporal, and substātial body of Christ. Sonne. You say truth. But as the doctrine of transubstantiation is vaine and false, as we haue euen now hard both by the holy scriptures, and also by the autorities of the auncient fathers: so likewise the doctrine of Christes corporal presence in the sacrament most vaine, false and erroneous. Of ỳ corporal presence of Christ in the sacrament.

Father. In that the papists say: it is the very same body ỳ was born of Mary the virgin, and hanged on the crosse: me thinke, they greatly ouershote them selues. For who knoweth not, that the bodye of Christ, which he receiued of Mary the virgin, and died for vs on ỳ altare of the crosse, was a mortal body. But that body is nowe become immortal, vncorruptible, glorious &c. If they thē deliuer that self same body as it was born of Mary the virgin, & hanged on the crosse to the communicantes: so followeth it, that they deliuer a mortal body: and by this meanes shuld it come to passe, that Christ hath ii. bodies, one mortal here in earthe at the destribution of the sacrament, and another immortal in heauen sitting on the right hand of God the father. Sonne. The papistes meane, that in the Sacramēt is contained the very self same bodye, that was borne of Marye the virgin and died for vs on the altare of the crosse, the qualities only changed, as mortality into immortality, corruption into vncorruption &c. Father. And is Christ in the sacrament with his glorifyed & immortal body, as he is in heauen? Sonne. Nothing les. For that manifestly fighteth with the truth of Christes body, and plainly stablisheth the heresy of the Marcionites. It is proper to God alone to be in al or in diuers places at ones: which property no creature hathe, no, not angel. Therfore forasmuch as the body of Christ, although he immortal and glorified, is, remaineth and abideth stil a creature, & is not swalowed vp, as I maye so speake, of the deuine nature, but being ioyned to the deuine nature, abideth stil a creature and very man:

than: it therfore foloweth most certenly, that Christes body tak̄ vp into heauen, neither is, neither can be both in heauen and in earthe at ones. And we are taught in the artikles of the christen faith, and thorow out the whole Bible, that as Christ is ascended into heauē, so likewise shal he there remain, as concerning his corporal presēce vnto the day of iudgement, as S. Peter saith: Iesus Christ must receiue heauen, vntil the time that al thinges, which god hath spoken by the mouth of al his holy Prophets, sence the worlde began, be restored again. And the Angels said to the Apostles at Christes ascension: Ye mē of Galile, why stand ye gasing vp into heauen, This Iesus which is taken vp frō you into heauen, shal so come, euen as ye haue sene him go into heauen. And S. Paul entreating of the sacrament saith. As often, as ye shal eat this bread, and drink of this cup: ye shal shew the Lordes death til he come. In this one sentence of ỹ holy Apostle, it manifestly appeareth, that Christ is not corporally in the sacrament, as the papistes teach. For he commaundeth vs to eat and drinke those holy misteries in remembrannce of the Lordes deathe til he come, meaning vnto the iudgement: wherby we maye plainly learne, that Christ is not there corporally, really, substantially, naturally &c, as the aduersaries teache, but in heauen only, and there shal remain in the glory of his father vntil that great and fearful day of iudgement come. And in the meane season as often as we shalbe partakers of that holy bread and cup, we shal cal to remembrannce the death of the Lord Christe, and all the benefites that we haue receiued therby, and geue moste humble thanckes for the same to God the father. Father. Is this then a true doctrin, that Christ is corporally in heauen only, and in none other place? Sonne. Yea verely. Father. Let me heare it proued by the word of God. Sonne. Oure sauiour Christ him self saith: Ye haue the poore alwayes with you, but me shal ye not haue alwais. I go to prepare a place for you And if I go to prepare a place for you, I wil come again, and receiue you euen vnto my self, that wher I am, there ye may be also. If ye loued me, ye would reioyse, because I said, I go vnto the father. Now I go my way to him that sent me, and none of you asketh me, whether I go. But because I haue said such things vnto you, your harts are ful of sorow. Neuertheles I tel you the truth, it is expedient for you that I go away. For if I go not away, the comforter wil not come vnto you. But if I depart, I wil sende him vnto you. I went oute from the father, and came into the world: again, I leaue the world, and go to the father. S. Marke saith. When the Lorde had spoken vnto them, he was receiued into heauen, and is set down on ỹ right hand of God. Blessed Luke sayeth, it came to passe, as Christ blessed them, he departed from them and was caried vp into heauen. S. Paul sayeth: It is Christ which died, yea rather which is risē again which is also on the right hand of God. God the father raised christ from the dead, and set him on his right hand in heauenly thinges aboue all boue all rule, power and might and dominion, and aboue al names that ar named, not in this worlde only, but also in the worlde to come. Christ is gone vp on hie, and hath led captiuitie captiue, & hath geuen giftes vnto men. Ephe.4. If ye be rysen againe with Christe, seeke those thynges whiche are aboue, where Christe sitteth on the right hande of God. Whensoeuer Christe, whiche is our life, shall appeare then shall you also appeare with him in glory. Colloss.3 This man Christe, after he hath offered one sacrifice for synnes, is sett downe for euer on the right hande of God, and from henceforth tarieth till his foes be made his footestole. S. Peter sayeth: Jesus Christe is on the righte hande of God, and is gone into heauen: Aungels, power & might subdued vnto hym. Heb.10. i.Pet.3

All these scriptures with diuerse other euidentlye declare, that Christe corporally dwelled only in heauen. Heauen is his reastyng place concerning his body, and shalbe vntil he come vnto the iudgement. Father. Christes body then is not in euery pixe & in euery altare, & in euery massemõgers handes, as the Papistes holde. Sonne. No verely. As touching his bodely presence, Christ is in heauen, yea in heauen only. Of them whiche teache vs the contrary, Christ byddeth vs take hede, saying: If any mã say vnto you, loe here is Christ or there is Christ, beleue it not. For there shall aryse false anoynted & false teachers, and shall shewe great miracles & wonders, insomuch that if it were possible, the very elect should be deceaued. Beholde, I haue tolde you afore. Wherfore if they saye vnto you: Beholde he is in the desert: go not ye forth: behold, he is in the secret places, beleue it not. For as the lightning cometh out of the east, & apeareth vnto the west: so shall the coming of the Sonne of man be. Father. How then are these sentences to be vnderstanded: Where two or three are gathered together in my name: there am I in the myddes of them. Agayne, beholde, I am with you continually vntill the ende of the worlde. Sonne. These sentences and suche lyke are to be vnderstanded not of Christes corporal, but of his spiritual presence. For Christ in that he is man, abydeth only in heauen: but in that he is God, he is euery where, at all tymes present with his churche by his almighty power and heauenly spirite, as Christe, when he should with his body ascende into the kyngdome of his father, promysed, that he would not leaue his disciples socourles, but that he would sende vnto them an other comforter, whiche shoulde abyde with them for euer, euen the spirite of truthe &c. Math.24. Math.18. Math.28.

Christ in his manhode is in one place onely at one time: but in his Godhead he is in al places at one time. Ihon.14.

Father. Thou holdest then, that Christe as concerning his bodely presence is onely in heauen: but as touchyng his Godly presence, he is euery where. Sonne. So am I taught by the woorde of God, as you haue hearde. Father. Yea, but what saie the auncient fathers of Christes churche: Do they also affirme this thynge?

Sonne. Most cõstantly, yea & ỹ with one voice. Father. Let me heare

some of theit sayinges. For it delyghteth me greatly to heare the doctrine and consente of the auncient Fathers, that we boldly saye: ☞ Our doctrine is bothe grounded of the worde of God, and also confirmed of the olde wryghters. Sonne. To recite all the authorities of all the auncient fathers, that make for our purpose: I meane, that evidently declare, that Christe in his corporall substaunce is onely in heauen, and not in the Sacrament, as the Papistes teach, were an infinite laboure. But I will reherse so many, as may seme for this present to suffice. Father. Agreed. Sonne. First of all I wyll alledge the mynde of the auncient wryghter Origene. Upon Mathewe he hath these woordes: Let vs firste of all enquire of his iournay to a straunge countrey, namely because it semeth to be contrary to that, which he promiseth of him selfe to his disciples, saying: Where twoo or three be gathered together in my name, there am I in the myddes of them. Againe, beholde, I am with you continually euen vnto the ende of the worlde. And also contrary to that, which John Baptist speaketh of him, shewyng that he is in euery place, on this manner: In the myddes of you standeth he, whome ye knowe not. He it is that cometh after me. Therfore wyll some man saye: If he stande euen in the myddes of them that knowe him not: if wheresoeuer two or three be gathered together in his name, he be amonge them: if so long as the disciples lyue, he be with them euē vnto the worldes end: howe then is he setforthe in this parable to take his iournay into a farre contray? Entreating of this matter, we ought to cōsider that, whiche Paule speaketh of him selfe: I verely absent in body, but present in spirite, haue determined all ready (as though I were present) concerning him that hath done this dede: in the name of our Lorde Jesus Christe, when ye are gathered together, and my spirite with you, with the power of the Lorde Jesus Christe, to deliuer him vnto Sathan, for the destruction of the flesshe, that the spirite may be saued in the daye of the Lorde Jesus. If that he be euer present with all his, howe do his parables lyyng him in to be gone into a farre countrey? Thus may this question be answered. He that sayeth vnto his disciples: Beholde, I am with you vnto the end of the worlde. And againe: where twoo or three bee gathered together in my name, there am I in the myddes of them: And he also that standeth in the middes of them that knowe hym not, is the onely begotten Sonne of God, God the woorde, and wysdome, and ryghteousnes, and truthe, whiche is not enclosed about with any bodely compasse. After this nature of his diuinitie he is not departed into an other countrey: ☞ but he is gone away after the dispensation of the body whiche he tooke, after the whiche also he was troubled, and became heuy, saying: Nowe is my soule troubled. And again, my soule is heauye vnto the deathe. And speakyng these thynges we deuide not his humanitie, (for S. John wryghteth: Euery spirite that deuideth Jesus, is not of God) but we reserue to bothe his natures their owne properties.

Of

Of these wordes of the auncient wryghter Origen, we playnely are taught, that the Lorde Christe as touching his diuinitie is present at all tymes and in euery place: Neyther can he be comprehended in any one seuerall place onely: but as conternyng his humanitie or bodely presence, he is not in all places, neyther is he here with vs on the earthe, but he is gone hence into a farre countrey, that is to saye, into heauen. If Christes body be not here on earthe, but is gone hence and estraunged from vs: With what forehead dare the Papistes affirme, that they haue hym enclosed in a waker cake, breake hym with their fyngers, and teare hym with their teeth? Can one and the same thing be both absent and present at one time and in one place? A monstruous doctrine. Father. Do any other of the auncient fathers agree with Origene in this behalfe? Sonne. All, without exception. For Cyrillus a Greke wryghter also agreeth wyth Origene in all poyntes, saying: Although Christe tooke awaye from hence the presence of his body, yet in the maiestie of his Godheade he is euer here, as he promysed to his disciples at his departure, saying: Beholde, I am with you continually euen vnto the worldes ende. Here haue we playnly also of Cyrillus, that Christe as concernyng his bodely presence is not here amonge vs: but as touchyng his Godheade, he is neuer awaye from vs, but remaineth with vs continually. In Ioan. libr. 6. cap. 4. Math. 28

I will nowe recyte vnto you some of the auncient latyn wryghters, that by this meanes you may heare and vnderstande, what tyme concorde and perfecte amitie hath from the begynnyng continued in the churche of Christe in all ages and in all places concernyng the truthe of Gods religion, tyll this monstruous beaste of many heades, I meane Papistrie, in the whiche be no then an hondred sectes, braste in and ouerflowed the worlde. And forasmuche as by the iudgement of all Godly learned menne, S. Austen is the beste and moste sincere expositour of the holy scripture among the auncient wryghters: I will first of all declare his mynde in this behalfe. As concerning his diuine Maiestie, as concerning his prouidence, as concerning his infallible & inuisible grace, sayeth S Augustine, these wordes be fulfylled whiche he spake: Beholde, I am with you vnto the worldes ende. But as concernyng the flesh, whiche he tooke in his incarnacion: as concernyng that whiche was borne of the Virgine: as concernynge that whiche was apprehended by the Iewes, and crucified vpon a tree, and taken downe from the crosse, lapped in lynnen clothes and buried, & rose agayne, & appeared after his resurrection: as concernyng the flesh, he sayd: you shall not euer haue me with you. Wherfore seing that as concernyng his flesh, he was conuersaunt with his disciples fortie dayes, and they accompanyng, seing and followyng hym, he went vp into heauen, both he is not here (for he sitteth on the ryghthande of his father) & yet he is here: for he departed not hence, as concerning the presence of his diuine Maiestie. In Ioan. tract. 50. Math. 28 Math. 26. Note.

As touchynge the presence of hys Maiestie, we haue Christe euer with vs: but as concernynge the presence of his flesshe, he sayde truly to his Disciples: ye shall not euer haue me with you.

For as concernyng the presence of his flesshe, the churche hadde Christe but a fewe dayes: but nowe it holdeth hym faste by fayth, it seeth not hym with eyes. Agayne he sayeth: Howe shall I laye hande on hym beyng absent, or seing he is gone? Howe shall I put my hande into heauen, that I maye laye hande on hym syttynge there: Sende thy fayethe, and thou haste layde hande on hym. Thy fathers haue layde hande on hym in the flesshe: but laye thou hande on hym with thy hearte: For Christe although he be absent, yet is he present: Excepte he were present, we coulde not laye hande on hym. Math.28 But because that is true, whiche he sayeth: Beholde, I am with you continually vnto the worldes ende: He is bothe gone awaye, and he is also here: He is bothe gone agayne, and yet hathe he not forsaken vs. He hathe caryed awaye his bodye into heauen, yet notwithstandynge he hathe not taken awaye his maiestie from the worlde. In Math. cap.26. Hereto agreeth the saying of saynt Hierome: Wherefore sayed the Lorde after his resurrection vnto his Disciples: Beholde, I am with you vnto the ende of the worlde: And nowe he sayeth, you shal not haue me alwayes? We thynke, that in this place he speaketh of his corporall presence, that he shall not bee wyth them after his resurrection, as he is nowe, lyuynge with them familiarly: Whyche thyng the Apostle consyderyng, sayeth: Although we haue knowen Christe after the flesshe: Nowe yet henceforth knowe we hym so no more. 2 Cor.5.

In Luc. lib.10. cap.24 Lykewyse sayeth saynt Ambrose: O Lorde Iesu, we ought not to seake thee vpon the earth, nor in the earth, nor after the flesh, if we wyll fynde thee. For we knowe nowe Christe no more after the flesshe. 2.Cor.5 Act.7 Stephen sought thee not vpon the earth, whiche sawe thee standyng on the ryght hande of God. But Mary whyche soughte thee on the earth, coulde not touche thee. Stephen touched thee because he sought ethee in heauen. In homi. Pasch. And saynt Gregorie wryghteth thus: Christe is not here by the presence of his flesshe, and yet is he absent no where by the presence of his maiestie. Agayne he sayth: In hom. Pentechost The worde incarnate bothe tarieth and goeth away: He goeth awaye in his bodye, but he taryeth in his Godheade.

In hom. Pasch. Lykewyse sayeth Beda: He (Christe) beyng God and manne was taken vp in his humanitie, whiche he tooke of the earthe: but as cõcernynge his Diuinitie he abydeth styll with his Sainctes on the earth, wherewith he fylleth earth and heauen. Hom. in Vigil. pen. Also in an other place he sayeth: He after his resurrection goyng vp into heauen, forsooke them corporally: whiche notwithstandynge neuer fayled them concerning the presence of his diuine Maiestie.

Lib.1. Moreouer Vigilius that blessed byshop and holy martyr, wryghtyng against Eutiches that Heretyke, whiche denyed the humanitie of Christe of Christe, hath these wordes: Christe sayde to his disciples: If ye loued me, ye would reioyse: for I go vnto my father. And agayne he Ihon.14 sayde: It is expedient for you that I go: for if I go not, the comforter shall not come to you. And yet surely the eternall worde of God, Iohn.16

the vertue of God, the wysdome of God, was euer with his father, and in his father, yea euen at the same tyme, when he was with vs, and in vs. For when he did mercifully dwell in this worlde, he lefte not his habitatiō or dwellyng in heauē: for he is euery where whole with his father, equall in diuinitie, whome no place can contayne.
For the sonne fylleth all thynges, and there is no place that lacketh the presence of his diuinitie. From whence then, and whether did he saye, that he would go? Or howe did he saye, that he went to his father, frō whom doubtles he neuer departed? But that was to go to ꝑ father, and to departe from vs: euen to take from this worlde that nature, whiche he receaued of vs. Thou seest therfore, that it was the propertie of that nature, to bee taken awaye and to go from vs, whiche in the ende of the worlde shall be rendred agayne to vs, as the Aungels wytnessed, saying: This Iesus, whiche is taken from you, shall come agayne, lyke as you sawe him goyng vp into heauē. Act.1
For loke vpon the miracle: loke vpon the mysterie of bothe the natures. The sonne of God as concerning his humanitie, went from vs: as concerning his diuinitie, he sayde vnto vs: Beholde, I am Math.28 with you all the dayes vnto the worldes ende. And a litle after he sayeth: he is both with vs, and he is not with vs. For those whome he left, and went from them, as concerning his humanitie, those he left not, nor forsoke them not, as touching his diuinitie. For as touching the fourme of a seruaunt (whiche he toke awaye from vs into heauen) he is absent from vs: but by the fourme of God (whiche goeth not from vs) he is present with vs in earthe, and neuertheless both present and absent, he is all one Christe. And a certayne byshop called Iustus Orgelitanus, worytyng vpon Salomons balades bryn-geth in Christe speakyng to the faythfull soule on this manner: De- In Cantica Canticorū.
syre thou not to see me alwayes in the body: whome thou seest better in the spirite thorowe fayth. For to this ende went I vp into heauē, that thou shouldest see me no more compased in a place: whiche notwithstanding do so replenishe and fyll all thynges with the presence of my deuinitie, that I am in euery place, and contayne al thynges, & am contained of no place. Breath should faile me, if I should go forth to recite the sayings of all the auncient Greke and Latin wryters, whiche moste constantly affirme, that as the Lord Christe, in ꝑ he is God, is euery where and filleth all places at all times: so likewise in that he is mā, he is only in heauen, & in no place els, where he shal remaine vntil the day of iudgemēt accordyng to ꝑ scriptures.
Now if this doctrine be true & certaine, as it is most true & most certain, then is the doctrine of the papists moste false and moste vayne, whiche teache the contrary, being thorowe the spirite of errour deceaued them selues, and also deceauing other.

Father. The Papistes denie not, that the naturall body of Christ is in heauen: but they saye moreouer, that as he is in heauen, so lykewyse is he on earth in the Sacrament although inuisibly: insomuch that whensoeuer the bread & wyne be once consecrate, ther straightwayes vnder the accidentes of bread and wyne the reall, corporall, naturall and substantial body of Christe is contayned euen the very selfe same body that was borne of Mary the Virgyne & died on the crosse. They adde moreouer, that loke in how many thousand thousand places the Sacramēt is, in so many thousand thousand places is the naturall body of Christe. Sonne. O monstruous doctrine. What any other thing is it thus to teache, then to affirme with the olde heretykes, that Christ had no true but a fantasticall bodye, no naturall, but a celestiall bodye: Or as some later heretykes haue taught, that the body of Christe is nowe not only glorified, but also deified, & swallowed vp of the deuine nature, insomuche that where so euer the deitie of Christe is, there is also his humanitie? O wycked and moste detestable doctrine. Is this any other thyng, then to destroye and vtterly to make nothing the humanitie of Christe?

Father. There is, they say, great difference betweene the mortall and immortal, the passible and vnpassible, the humbled and glorified bodye of Christe. Sonne. I graunt. For the glorified bodye of Christe, which is now in heauen, and sytteth on the ryght hande of God, is

Rom. 6 immortall and deliuered from all mortall qualities, as S. Paule sayeth: Christ being rayled from death, dieth no more. Death hat he no more power ouer hym. For as touchinge that he dyed, he died concerning synne once. And as touchyng that he lyueth, he liueth vnto God. Notwithstanding though the qualities of mortalitie be chaunged, yet the very same substaunce and nature of Christes body remayneth styll, and is not altered nor chaunged: so that as in his mortalitie his body was locall, and occupied a place, and was not in all places at once, but at one tyme in one onely place: So lykewyse nowe in his immortalitie, his body is locall, and occupieth a place, euen heauen, and is not in all places at once, as some holde. Father. Proue me by the worde of God, that the body of Christe although glorified and immortall is not in diuerse places at once.

Math. 28 Sonne. The Aungell of God sayd to certayne women, whiche came to annoynte the body of Jesus: I knowe that ye seke Jesus, which was crucified. He is rysen, He is not here. Beholde the place, where they layde hym. He goeth before you into Galile: There shall ye see hym, as he tolde you.

Of these wordes of the Aungell it is playne and euident, that as before the mortall and humbled, so lykewyse nowe the immortall & glorified body of Christe can be but in one place at once. For if the body of Christe nowe cladde with immortalitie and vncorruption

Act. 3 myght haue bene in all places at one tyme, then had not the Aungel spoken truly, when he sayde, He is not here &c. S. Peter sayeth playnly, that Christ must receaue heauen, vntyll the tyme that all thynges, thinges, which God hath spoken by the mouthe of all his holy Prophets, sence the worlde began, be restored againe. And all the holye scriptures openly testify, that Christ as concerning his corporal presence is in heauen only, and that there he shal remain in the glory of his father, til he come again to iudge the quicke and the dead: Neyther read we in al the bible that Christ sence the time of his assension hath occupied with his body any other place than heauen. Moreouer doth not Christ plainly forbid vs to beleue such, which teache vs, that Christ is in this place and that place: in the wildernes, and in secreat places &c. as some say, that his body is in al places, where so euer his Godhead is: some againe affirme, that Christes naturall body is in the pixe, is betwene the priestes handes at masse, is eaten of the mowse, ratte, ratte, dogge &c. This monstrueus kinde of doctrin the holy scripture knoweth not, neither was it euer taught of ỹ auncient fathers of Christes church: but it is a new doctrine creapt into the church of Christ through the suttiltie of Satan, and maintained by the cruel tiranny of Antichrist and his adherents. Father. Let me then hear also, what the doctrin of thold Doctors and holy fathers is in this behalfe. Teach they also, that the naturall body of Christ although immortal and glorified is only in heauen, and occupieth one place only at one time? Sonne: Yea verely. For the holy fathers of Christes church, led with the spirite of Christ, coulde teache nothing, but that which is agreable to the doctrin of Christ: namely, if we respect the principal poyntes of Christen religion. Therfore in this behalfe they also agree with the doctrin of the holy scripture, & with one accord affirme, that Christ, as concerning his corporal presence, is in heauen only, and occupieth but one place at one tyme: so that he is not in many and diuers places at once, as the aduersaries teach. And that you may be wel assured, that this is their doctrine, I wil here alledge certain testimonies out of their own writings. That auncient Doctor and couragious bishop of Christes churche hath these wordes, I meane S. Ambrose: Christ is to be sought neither vpon earth, nor in earthe, but in heauen, where he sytteth at the right hand of his father. Again he saith: Here the shadowe, here the image: there the truth. Shadow in the lawe, image in the Gospell, truth in heauen. Before the Lambe was offered, the calf was offered: now is Christ offered, but he is offered as man, as receiuing passion: but he offereth him selfe, as a priest, that he maye forgeue oure sinnes: here in image. There in truth, wheras an aduocate he maketh intercessy on for vs vnto the father. Next in order foloweth S. Austen, that most worthy and faithful Doctor, whose wordes are these: dout not, but that Iesus Christ as concetning the nature of his manhoode is now there, from whence he shall come. And remember wel, and beleue the profession of a christen man, that he rose from death, ascēded into heauen, sitteth at the right hand of his father, and frō that place and from none other shal he come to iudge the quicke and the deade. And he shall come (as the Angels said) as he was sene goo into heauen, that uen, that is to ſay, in the ſame forme and ſubſtaunce, vnto the whyche he gaue immortality, but chaunged not nature. After this forme (he ſpeaketh of chriſtes humaine nature) we maye not thincke that he is ☞ euery where. For we muſt beware, that we do not ſo ſtabliſhe his deuinity, that we take away the verity of his body. For it foloweth not, that the thyng whych is in God, ſhould be in euery place, as God is. For the Act.xvii. ſcripture doth truely teſtifye vnto vs, that we liue, moue, and be in him, and yet are we not in euerye place, as he is. But man is otherwiſe in God, and God otherwiſe in man, by a certain proper and ſingular way. For God and man is one parſon, and bothe of them, one chriſt Ieſus, whych is in euerye place, in that he is God, and in heauen in that he is manne. Againe in the ſame place he ſayeth: Doubte not, but that our Lord Ieſus chriſt is euery where as God, and that he is in a certayne place of heauen, becauſe of the meaſure of a true bodye. Ones againe in the ſame place he ſayeth: Take awaye the ſpaces of places from the bodies, and ſo ſhal they no where be: and forasmuch as they ſhalbe no where, neither ſhall they be. Take awaye the ſelfe bodies from the qualities of the bodies, and there ſhall be no place where they may be: and ſo it foloweth of neceſſity, that they are not. Tract.xxx And wryting vpon the goſpel of S. Jhon he ſaith thus: The Lord is alone, but yet his truth is here. For his body, wherin he roſe, muſt be in one place, but his truth is diſperſed in al places. Again: as concer- Tract.l ning the preſence of his maieſty, we haue chriſt euer with vs, but as concerninge the preſence of his fleſh, he ſayd truly to hys diſciples: ye ſhall not euer haue me wyth you. For as concernynge the preſence of hys fleſh, the church had chriſt but a fewe dayes: yet now it holdeth him faſt by faithe, thoughe it ſee him not with eies. Alſo in an other place he ſayeth: where and how the body of the Lord is in heauen, De fide & Symb.c. vi it is a thing both curious and vain to demaund. Notwithſtandyng ☞ thys muſt we beleue, that the body of chriſt is only in heauen. Saynt In hom. Paſchal. Gregory alſo ſayeth: chriſt is not here by the preſence of hys fleſhe: & In hom. in vigil. pēt. yet is he abſent no where by the preſence of his maieſtye. The verye ſame in effect wryteth Beda on this manner: chriſte after his reſurrection aſcending into heauen: lefte his diſciples corporally: whome notwithſtanding he neuer forſoke concerning the preſence of his deuine maieſty. Wyth theſe aforſaid auncient wryters agreeth the noble clarke Fulgentius, whoſe woordes are theſe: One and the ſelfe Ad Traſi. Lib.2. ſame chriſt of mankinde was made a man, compaſſed in a place, who of his father is God, without meaſure or place. One and the ſelfe ſame perſon, as concerning his mannes ſubſtance, was not in heauen, whan he was in earth, and forſoke the earthe, when he aſcended into heauen: but as concerning his godly ſubſtance (whiche is aboue all meaſure) he neyther left heauen, when he came from heauen, nor he left not the earth, when he aſcended into heauen: whiche may be knowen by the moſte certain woord of chriſt him ſelfe, who to ſhewe the placing of hys humanity, ſaid to his diſciples: I aſcend vp to my Iohn.xx father and your father, to my God and your God. Alſo when he had said of Lazarus, that he was deade, he added saying: I am glad for Ihon. 11 your sakes, that you may beleue. For I was not there. But to shew ꝑ vnmeasurable compasse of his deuinity, he said to his disciples: Behold, I am with you alwaies vnto the worldes end. Now how did Math. 28.

he go vp into heuen, but because he is a very man cõtayned wythin a place? Or how is he present wyth faithful people, but because he is very God, being without measure? Vigilius also a valeaunt defendoure of the christen verity hath these words: If the word and the flesh were Contra Eu both of one nature, seing the word is euery where, whye is not then tichen.
the flesh euery wher? For when it was in earth, then verelye it was not lib. 4.
in heauen: and now when it is in heauen, it is not surely in earthe. And it is so sure, that it is not in earth, that as concerning it, we looke for him to come from heauen, whome as concerning his eternal word, D we beleue to be with vs in earth. Therfore by your doctrine (the author speaketh vnto the heretycke Eutiches, who taught that the deuy-nyty and humanyty in chryst, was but one nature) either the worde is contained in a place with his flesche, or els the flesche is euerye where with the word. For one nature can not receyue in it self two dyuers & contrary thynges. But these two things be diuers and farre vnlike, that is to say, to be contained in a place, and to be euery wher. Ther fore inasmuch as the word is euery where, and the flesh is not euery where, it appeareth plainly, that one Christ him self hath in him two natures, and that by his deuine nature he is euerye where: and by hys humayne nature he is contayned in a place, that he is created, and hath no beginning, that he is subiect to deathe, and can not die.
Wherof one he hath by the nature of his word (wherby he is God)
and thother he hath by the nature of his flesh, wherby the same God is man also. Therfore one sonne of God, the self same was made the sonne of man, and he hath a beginning of the nature of his flesh, and no beginning by the nature of his Godhead. He is comprehended in a place by the nature of hys flesh, and not comprehended in a place by the nature of his Godhed. He is inferiour to aungels in the nature of hys flesche, and is equall to hys Father in the nature of his Godhead. He died by the nature of his flesche, and died not by the nature of his Godhead. Thys is the fayth and catholyque confessyon, whych the Apostles taught, the Martyrs dyd corroborate, and faythfull people kepe vnto thys day.

I could reherse diuers other both old and new wryters, whyche wyth one consent teache, that as the Godheade of Christe is euerye where, and can not be shutt vp in one certaine place: so likewise the manhode of Christe is onlye in heauen, and occupieth one certayne place, and can not be in mo places, then in one at ones: but lett these suffice for this present. For euen of them learne we sufficientlye, that the body of Christ is now only in heauen, and so in heauen, that it is in none other place, neither shalbe vntil the day of iudgement, so far is it of from the truth, that the papistes teach, affirming that the na tural body of Christ lurketh vnder the kindes of bread and wine, is vpon

vpon euery aultare at euery masse, is handled, touched and broken with the prestes handes, is receiued with the bodelye mouth of the prest and of the people, is crushed on pieces with the teathe of the Communicantes, is deuoured of muse ratres, dogges, Owles, flytter mouses &c. Facher. The opinion of the Papistes, I confesse, is grose and to much vnsauery: notwithstanding in my iudgement it greatlye derogateth the omnipotencye, and almightye power of Christe, (whyche beinge God is able to doo all thinges) to affyrme, that Christes body is so enclosed in heauen, that it canne be in none other place: or to saye, that the bodye of Christe canne be but in one place at ones. Sonne. Fyrste as touchinge the omnipotencye and almightye power of Christe, in that he is God, this thinge derogateth nothynge the glorye, Maiestye and vertue of the Lorde Jesus, to teach as we are taught of the holy scriptures, and haue receiued frō the moost auncient fathers of Christes church: namely, that Christe in his humanitye hathe forsaken the earth, and is gon vppe into the glorious kingdome of hys father, where he shall remayne vntyll he retourne vnto the iudgement. For Christ being God is not therfore called almightye, because he is able to doo all thynges wythout exception, but because he is of sufficient power to doo, whatsoeuer hys good pleasure is to do, as the Psalmographe sayeth, Omnia quæcunque voluit fecit. He hath doone what so euer hys good pleasure was to doo. For there are manye thinges whiche God canne not doo. He canne not lye. He canne not denye hym selfe. He canne not saue the vnfaythfull. He canne not condempne the faithful. He canne not denye mercye to them that be mercifull. He can not make the damned, enheritoures of euerlastinge saluation. He canne not make one of like dignitye with him selfe. He canne not loue wyckednesse, nor abhorre righteousnesse. He canne not delyghte in the deathe of synners: and as some wryte, he canne not restore virginity once violated, neyther canne he synne, nor doo anye thynge agaynste his word or determinate purpose &c.

Of thomnipotēcy & almigh ty power of God.

Neyther dooth e thys thinge anye whitte at all hinder the omnipotencye of God, or proue God to be the lesse omnipotent or almightye. For as I said before, God is called almighty, because he is able to doo, whatsoeuer his godly pleasure is, and because there is no superiour power aboue hym, but that he may doo all that he wyll: and all that his pleasure is to doo, that maye he brynge to passe, and no power is able to resiste hym, as he sayeth by the Prophette: I wyll worke, and who shalbe hable to turne it away? Like wyse sayeth the Psalmograph: The lord breketh the councel of the heathen: & bryngeth to nought the deuises of the people. But the councel of the lord shal stād for euer: & the thoughts of his hart throughout al ages. For as Salomon saith, There is no wisdom, no forcast, no councel, that can preuail against the lord. Moreouer as cōcerning Christes being in heauen only vntil the day of iudgemēt, we are taught of the holy scriptures both so to beleue & to teach. For in the woorde of God we find none other place appoynted for the humanity of Christ then heauen as we haue to fore abundantly hard.

Why God is called almightye.

Esay.43
Psal.33.
Pro.xxi.

And

And as touching the body of Christ although immortal and glorified to be but in one place only at one time, you haue hard before both the determination of the holy goste, and also the consent of thauncient godlye fathers in this behalfe: which all with one perfect agrement teach & affirm, that the body of Christ is but in one place at one time, although his Godhead be euery where, and fulfilleth al thynges. For this is diligently to be noted, that to be in many or in al places at ones, is only appropriated to the nature of God. For no creature although neuer so glorious, pure, immortal and spirituall, can be in no places at ones, then in one only. Yea the verye angels and inuisible spirites, for as muche as they be creatures, are only in one place at ones, as Basilius Magnus testifieth, saying: The aungell which rode by Cornelius, was not at the same time also with Philip: nor the Angel which spake to Zachary at the altare, was not y same time in his proper place in heauen. But the holy Ghoste was at one time in Abacucke, and in Daniel at Babylon, and wyth Ieremye in pryson, and wyth Ezechiel in Chobar. Of thys sentence of Basil lern here two thinges: one is that all creatures, although neuer so pure and perfect, are only at one time in one place, and not in manye and diuers places at ones: again, that God alone, which is the creator & maker of al creatures, can be in manye or in all places at ones. And Didymus in his boke, wherein he wryteth of the holy ghost, proueth, that the holy ghost is very God, because he is in many places at one time: whiche no creature can be. For, sayeth he, all creatures vysyble and inuysyble be eyrcumscrybed and enuyroned eyther wythin one place (as corporal and visible thinges be) or wythin the propretye of theyrowne substance (as angels and inuisible creatures be) so that no angel (saith he) can be at one time in two places. And forasmuch as the holy Ghost is in many men at one tyme, therfor (sayeth he) the holy Ghost must needes be God.

Cap. xxii.

Who seeth not now, except he be wilfully blinde, that forasmuch as the body of Christ is a creature, although glorified and cladde wyth immortalitye, it is and canne be but in one place at ones? To teach the contrary, is none other thing then to euacuate and vtterly to destroy the nature of Christes humanity, and to affirm with certain heretikes, that the body of Christe is deified, and so swalowed vp of the Godhed, that it is nowe in al places with the Godhed at al times: which is a most haynous and detestable heresye. For S. Austen affirmeth plainly, that a body must needes be in some certayne place, and sayeth moreouer, that if it be not within the compasse of a place, it is no where. And if it be no where, then is it not. Saint Cyrill likewise consideryng the proper nature of a very body, sayd, that if the nature of the Godhead were a bodye, it must needes be in a place, and haue quantitye, greatnes and eyrcumscryption. We may therfore wyght wel conclude both with the authority of the holy scriptures & with the testimonies of thauncient wryters, that the body of Christ, although vtterly estraunged from corrupcion and mortalitye, & now glory-

glozified and immozital, is and remain stil a perfect and true bodye, circumscribed, compassed and measured, and can not be in dyuers places at one time. Father. This doctrin is now so plain and euident so open and manifest, that it can not be denied: And I muche maruell, how the papistes, specially the learned sozte durste euer mayntain so damnable heresy, and teach, that the bodye of Chziste is in an infinite number of places at one time. Foz by this means they make his body to be god (whose pzopzety alone it is to be in many oz in al places at ones) and so confound the two natures of Chziste, attributing to his humain nature, that thing, which belongeth onlye to his deuinitye: whych is a mooste hainous and abhominable heresye. Father. But what is then to be sayd, concerning these wozds, which the papistes continually obiect, and to the whiche they cleaue wyth toth and naile, and the which they defend with stockes and chains, with fyze and fagot, with sweard and halter, and with al other kind of tirannye? Sonne. Of what woozdes speake you? Father. Of these: Hoc est enim corpus meum. Foz thus rede we: Chziste toke the bzead, thancked, bzake it, and gaue it to his Disciples, sayinge: Take eate, this is my body, which is geuen foz you &c. Spake he these wozdes, This is my body, of the bzead, oz rather of his owne naturall bodye, which he receiued of Marye the virgin? Sonne. I knowe what some hold and teach in this behalfe. Some say, that Chziste deliueringe the bzead to his disciples foz to eat, poynted to his owne bodye and sayde, Thys is my body, which is geuen for you. And afterward sayd vnto them: Do that, that is to say, bzeake the bzead, and eate it, in the remembzaunce of me. But I rather appzoue and alowe the iudgement of them, which teach that Chziste spake these woozdes, Hoc est corpus meum, This is my body, of the bzead, whych he hadde nowe made and appoynted the mistery of his body. Father. If chziste spake these woozdes of the bzead, then is the bzead his body. Sonne. His body, I graunt, in mistery and figure, but not in nature and substance. Foz the body of Chziste was made of the substance of Marye the virgin, and not of the substãce of bzead. Though Chziste called the bzead his body yet doth it not therfoze folow, that the bzed is his naturall bodye, but so tearmed foz certaine resemblaunces and likenesses betwene the body of chziste and the creature of bzead, as we haue tofoze heard. Chziste in diuers places of the holy scripture diuersly nameth him selfe. He calleth him selfe a vine, a dooze, a stone &c, and is called of Saynte Paule a rocke: not that he is a natural vine, dooze, stone, rocke &c. but foz certaine resemblaunces and pzoperties, whyche he hath wyth them. Chziste calleth his father a plowman, his Disciples vine bzaunches, the good sede, the childzen of the kingdome: the tares, the sonnes of the wicked: the field, the wozld: the harueste, thend of the wozld: the reapers, the angels &c. not that they are so in dede, but foz certain pzoperties and resemblaunces, whyche are betwene them. Euen after the same manner chziste calleth the bzead his body: not that it is hys natural body in deede, but because it repzesenteth, signifi-

signifieth, declareth, preacheth & setteth forth his body vnto vs: & hath also, as I may so speake, certain properties with the body of Christ. For as the bread is broken of the faithful in thaction of the Lordes supper, so was christes body broken on the altare of the crosse. And as the bread nourisheth, preserueth & comforteth the body, whan it is eaten: so likewise the body of christ nourisheth, preserueth & comforteth both the body & the soul of the faithful communicants, as Christ himself testifieth: I am the bread of life: He that cometh vnto me, shal not hunger, and he that beleueth in me, shal neuer thyrst. I am that liuing bread, which came downe from heauen. If any manne eate of thys bread, he shall liue for euer, and the bread, whych I shall geue for the life of the worlde, is my flesche. He that eateth my flesche, and drynketh my blonde, hathe euerlastinge life, and I shall rayse hym vppe in the last day. For my flesche is very meat, and my bloud is verye drincke. He that eateth my flesh, and drynketh my bloud, dwelleth in me, and I in hym &c. For these and suche like propertyes and resemblaunces did Christ call the bread his body. Father. It is then no proper, but a figuratiue speathe, when Christe calleth the breade his body. Sonne. You saye truthe. And that the breaking of christes bodye on the aultare of the crosse for oure redemption, myghte the more surely be fixed in our heartes, when we come together to eate the Lordes supper, christ enabled the sacramentall bread wyth the name of his body, when notwithstanding it is the figure and sygne of his body. Neither is this a rare and seldome found thing, but rather commen and vsuall in the holye scriptures, to call the sygne by the name of the thynge that it sygnifyeth, as Saynte Austen saith. The thynge, whyche sygnyfyeth is wonte to bee called by the name of that thinge, whiche it signifieth, as it is wrytten. The vii. eares, are vii. yeares. It sayeth not, they signify vii. yeares. And vii. kyne, are vii. yeares and manye other lyke. And so sayde S. Paule, that the stone was christe, and not, that it signified christe, but euen as it had bene he in dede, which neuertheles was not christ by substance but by signification &c.

Why Christe called the bread his body. F.

In Leu. 17. queſt. 57.

Again. In suche wyse is blond the soule, as the stone was christ, and yet the Apostle sayeth not, that the stone signified chryste, but sayeth, it was christe. And thys sentence. Blonde is the soule, may be vnderstande to be spoken in a sygne or sygure. For Christe did not stycke to saye, Thys is my bodye, when he gaue the sygne of hys bodye. Ones agayne he sayeth: We customablye vse to saye, when Easter drayweth nyghe, to morowe or the nexte daye is the Lordes passyon. And yet it is manye yeares sence he suffered, and that Passyon was neuer doone but ones. And vpon the Sondaye we saye. Thys day the Lord did rise againe, and yet it is many yeares sence he rose from deathe. Whye then do not men reproue vs as lyers, when we speake in this sort? But because we cal these dais, by a similitude of those dayes, wher in these thynges were done in dede.

Ad Bonif. epiſt. 23.

And so it is called ỳ day, which is not that day in dede, but by ỳ cours of the yere it is a like day. And such things be said to be done ỳ day, for the solemne celebracion of the sacrament, which thinges in dede were not done that day, but long before: was Christ offred any more but ones: And he offred him self, and yet in a sacramẽt or representation, not only euery solemne feast of Easter, but euery day he is offered to the people, so that he doth not lie, that saith: he is euery day offered. For if sacraments had not some similitude or likenes of those things, wherof they be sacraments, they could in no wise be Sacraments. And for their similitude & likenes, commonly they haue the 6 name of the things, wherof they be sacraments. Therfore as after a certain manner of speche, the sacrament of christes body, is christes body: the sacrament of christes bloud, is christes blud: so likewise the sacrament of faith, is faith. And to beleue, is nothing elles, but to haue faith. And therfore when we answer for yong childzen in their baptisme, that they beleue, which haue not yet the mind to beleue, we answer that they haue faith, because they haue the sacrament of fayth. And we say also, that they tourne vnto God, because of ỳ sacramẽt of conuersion vnto God, for that answer pertaineth to the celebration of the sacrament. And likewise speaketh the Apostle of baptisme, saying: that by baptisme we be buried with him into death. He saith not, that we signify burial, but he saith plainly, that we be buryed. So that the sacrament of so great a thinge, is not called but by the name of the thing it selfe.

rom. 6.

Of these words of S. Austen, it manifestly appereth that the sacraments are called by the names of those things, wherof they be sacraments: as the sacrament of faith, which is baptisme, is called faith. And the sacrament of Christes body and bloud, is called the body & blud of christ: not that they be the thinges thẽ selues, but they be so called, because they be the figures, sacraments & representatiõs of the things which they signify, & wherof they bear the names. Likewise in tholde testament was it saide of the Paschall Lambe: This is the Lordes Passeby, or Passeouer: and yet that Paschal lãbe was not the Lords very Passeouer or Passingby, but it was a figure, which represented his passing by: euen after the same manner in the newe testament, the sacramental bread, is called the body of Christ, & the sacramental wine the blud of Christ: not that they be Christes very body & blud in dede, but they be figures, which by Christes institutiõ be vnto the godly receiuers therof, sacraments, tokens, significatiõs & representations of his very flesh & blud: instructing their faith, ỳ as the bread & wine fede thẽ corporally, & continue this tẽporal life: so ỳ very flesh & blud of christ fedeth thẽ spiritually, & geueth euerlasting life. Neither ought this phrase or mãner of speking seme straunge to any man, ỳ hath but a spark of reson, seing it is not only vsed in the scriptures of God, but also in our familiare and dailye talke. when we behold the images of king Edwarde the vi. or of Quene Elizabeth oure mooste gracious Quene and Gouernesse at thys present:

ble dot not to saye: Thys is kynge Edwarde, and thys is Quene Elizabeth: Lokinge vppon the pictures of Hercules or Hector, oure manner is also to saye. This is Hercules: or this is Hector whome notwithstanding they only represente those parsonnes, whome we name. It is well and learnedlye sayde of S. Austen: In Sacramentes we must not consyder, what they be, but what they signifye. For they be signes of thinges, being one thing and signifyinge a nother. which thing he doth shew specially of this Sacrament of the bodye and bloud of Christ, saying: The heauenlye breade, whyche is Christes flesshe, by some manner of speache is called Christes bodye: when in very dede it is the sacrament of his body. And that offeringe of the flesshe, whiche is done by the priestes hands, is called Christes passion, deathe and crucifyinge, not in verye deede, but in a misticall signifycation. Again he sayeth, as it is recited in the Popes decrees: As the heauenly bread, which is Christes flesh, after a maner is called the bodye of Christe, when in verye dede it is a sacramente of christes bodye, that is to saye, of that bodye, whyche being visible, palpable, mortall, was putte vpon the crosse: And as that offeringe of the flesshe, which is done by the priestes handes, is called the passion, the death, the crucifying of Christe, not in truthe of the thinge, but in a signifying mistery: so is the sacrament of fayth (which is baptisme) sayde. Upon these aforesayde woordes wryteth the expositoure on thys manner: The offering, whiche the Priest maketh, is called improperlye the Passyon, Death, or crucifying of Christe, not that it is that, but that it signifyeth it. And the heauenlye sacramente, whyche truelye representeth Christes flesshe, is called Christes bodye, but improperlye. And therfore it is sayde (after a māner, but not in the truth of the thyng, but in the sygnifyinge mystery) so that the sence is this: It is called the body of Christ, that is, signifyeth. Fa. These thynges, whyche thou haste alledged oute of the auncient wryters, are so euident and plaine, that no man can with a good conscience (except he will wilfully resiste the truthe) deny, that these woordes of Christ This is my body, this is my bloud, are figuratiuely to be vnderstād, and not so grosly, as the woordes sound: yea and that so much ỹ more because, if they shoulde literally be taken, they should vtterly dissent from many other textes of the holy scriptures, whych most euidentlye declare, that Christe as concernynge hys corporal presence is not in earthe, but in heauen onlye, and there shall remayn vntyll the day of iudgemente.

Notwythstandynge I would be gladde to heare, how the auncyent fathers of christes churche haue vnderstande and taken these woordes of christe, that by this meanes leauing errour, and embrasing truthe, I myghte from hencefoorthe walke with a quiet conscience in this behalfe, and no more be caried about with euery wynde of Doctryne. For it muche greaueth me to see in these oure dayes suche and so greate dissentyon to be raysed vppe of Sathan among menne about this Sacramente of the bodye and bloude of christe:

Why the Christ instituted the sacrament of his bodie and bloud which holy and heauenly sacrament the Lord Christ ordained to be not only a pledge of his loue towarde vs, but also a sure and an vnloseable bond of hartye loue and singuler good will, which we, that professe christes art partakers of those holy misteries, ought to haue & continually to nourish among our selues, all contention, strife, debate, enuy, hatred, malice and al vncharitablenes vtterly laid a side and cast away. Sonne. How thancient fathers take and vnderstode these words of Christ. This is my body, this is my bloud, it may easily be knowen by their own wrytinges. First Tertullian, which liued in the yeare of our Lord Clx. hathe these woordes, wrytinge against the heretike Martion, whiche denied the veritye of Christes body, affirming it not to be a naturall but a fantasticall body: Christ taking bread, and destributing it to his disciples, made it his body, saying: Thys is my bodye: that is to say, A fygure of my bodye. But thys bread could not haue bene a figure of it, excepte Christ had had a true body. For a vaine thinge or a fantasye can take no figure. Againe he sayeth, wrytinig against the aforesaid heretike: Christe him selfe did not reproue or discommend bread, why che doth represent his bodye. Saint Ambrose, which liued in the yeare of our Lorde iii. C. lxxx. sayeth: Before the consecration a nother kinde is named, but after the consecration the body of Christ is sygnyfyed. &c. Agayn he sayeth: Make vnto vs (O Lord) this oblation to be acceptable, whiche is the fygure of the bodye and bloud of oure Lorde Iesu Christe. Saint Jerome, which liued in the yeare of our Lord iiii. c. xxii. wryteth on this manner: After the misticall Easter lambe fulfilled, and that christe had eaten the Lambes flesh wyth the Apostles, he toke bread, which comforteth the hart of man, and passeth to the true sacrament of the Easter Lambe: that as Melchisedech brought forthe bread and wine prefiguring him, so might he likewise represente the truthe of hys bodye. Saint Austen, which lyued in the yeare of oure Lord iiii. c. xxx. wryteth on this wise: The Lord doubted not to say, Thys is my bodye, when he gaue the sygne of hys bodye. Againe he sayeth: The Lord admitted Judas vnto the mandye, wherin he did betake and deliuer vnto the Disciples the fygure of hys bodye and bloud. Saint Cyprian, whych liued in the yeare of our Lord iiic. lx in a certain sermon wryteth on this manner: The Lord gaue at the table, in the whiche he made his laste bancket wyth the Apostles, bread and wyne wyth hys owne handes: but on the crosse he gaue hys bodye to be wounded wyth the handes of the souldioures. &c. Againe, the Lorde called breade made of many cornes and ioyned together, hys bodye: and the wyne pressed oute of manye grapes, and made into wine, he named hys bloud.

Petrus

Petrus de natalibus saith: The body of Christ is corporally contayned in heauen, but in the host it is contained sacramentally. S. Bernard which liued in the yere of our Lord M.C.xl. saith: The flesh of christ euen at this present day is exhibited and geuen to vs, notwithstanding spiritually nor carnally. Beda, which liued in the yeare of oure Lord vii.C.xxxii. wryting vpon the gospel of Luke, hath these wordes: After the solemnity of thold Easter lambe was finished, which was obserued in the remembraunce of the old deliuerans out of Egipt: he goth vnto the new, which the church gladly obserueth in the remembraunce of his redemption, that he in the stead of the flesh & bloud of the lambe, might institute and ordain the sacramente of hys flesh and bloud in the figure of bread and wine, and so declare him self to be the same, vnto whome the Lord sware: Thou arte an euerlasting preest after the order of Melchisedech. And he hym selfe brake the bread which he gaue, to shew that the breking of hys body should not be done without his owne will. And likewise he gaue them the cuppe after he hadde supped. And because breade dothe confyrme or strength the flesh, and wine worketh bloud in the flesche, therfore is the bread mistically referred vnto the body of Christ, and the wine referred vnto his bloud. Christianus Druthmarus hath these woordes: The Lord gaue to his disciples the sacramente of hys body vnto the remissyon of sinnes, and vnto the conseruation of charitye, that they beinge mindefull of that acte, shoulde alwaies doo that in a fygure, whyche he should do for them, and not forgette this charitye or loue. This is my body, that is to say, in a sacrament or holy signe. Againe he sayeth: Wyne maketh mery and encreaseth blonde, and therefore not vnaptly the bloud of Christ is fygured by it: for whatsoeuer commeth to vs from him, maketh vs meary with a true mirthe, and encreaseth all our goodnesse. Rabanus Maurus sayeth: For as muche as corporall breade confirmeth the heart, therfore it is aptly called the bodye of Christe: and because wyne worketh blonde in the flesh, therefore is it referred vnto the bloude of Christe. Isydorus wryteth on thys manner: The breade and wyne thorow mistical prayer, and pronouncinge of Christes woordes are consecrate vnto the remembraunce of the Lordes passyon, whych he suffered for vs. Father. These woords of thancient fathers are so open, plain and euydente, that no manne canne with a good conscience denye, but that these woordes, Thys is my body. This is my bloude, are not carnallye, but spirituallye, not proprely but figuratiuelye, not naturallye but syguificatiuelye to be vnderstande.

If any man vnderstand the wordes of christ carnally, he shal surely profyt nothing therby. For what meane these words, the flesh profyteth nothing? He meant not of his flesh (God forbid) but he mente of them that fleshly and carnally vnderstode those thinges that christe spake. But what is carnall vnderstanding? To vnderstand the words simply as they be spoken, and nothyng els. For we ought not so to vnderstande the thinges which we see: but al misteries must be considered wyth inwarde eyes, and that is spiritually to vnderstand them. For, as he sayeth in a nother place: If thou were spirituall or wythout a body, Christ would haue geuen vnto thee nakedly those giftes (which are signified by baptisme, and the sacrament of thankes geuinge) euen spirituall and wythout a bodye. But for as much thy soule is ioyned to the body, thinges worthye of vnderstandinge are deliuered vnto thee in sensyble thinges. Againe, what doo I call the Communion? Euen the very same bodye are we. What signifyeth the breade? The body of Christ. What are they made, whyche receyue it? The bodye of Christe. Ones againe: If Christe died not, Whose symbole and sygne is thys sacrysyce? So what an earnest studye he had, that we shoulde alway remember, that he died for vs. Also in a nother place: If it be perillous to put these halowed vessels vnto priuate vses, in the whych the true body of christ is not, but a mystery of hys body is contayned: How muche more the vessels of oure bodye, whyche God hathe prepared a dwelling place for him self, oughte we not to geue ouer to the Deuyll for to do in them what he wyll? Item: when ye come to these misteries, thincke not that ye receyue the deuine body (he meaneth the body of christ) at the hande of manne. Ones again he sayeth: He prepared this table, that daily for a symylytude or likenesse of the body e and bloude of chryste, he shoulde shewe vnto vs in a Sacrament bread and wyne after the order of Melchisedech: Theodoretus also sayeth: Our sauyoure chryst wythout doubte chaunged the names, and gaue to the body the name of the sygne or token, and to the token, he gaue the name of the body. And so when he called hym self a vine, he called that bloud, whiche was the token of bloude.

And a lytle after he sayeth: The cause is manifest to them that be expert in true religion For he woulde, that they whiche be partakers of the godly Sacramentes, should not set their myndes vpon the nature of thynges, whiche they see: but by the chaungyng of the names, should beleue the thynges whiche be wrought in them by grace. For he that called that, whiche is his naturall body, corne and breade, and also called hym selfe a vine: Euen he also did honoure the visible tokens and signes, with the names of his body and bloud, not chaungynge the nature, but adding grace to nature. Epiphanius sayeth: Christe speakyng of a loaffe, whiche is rounde in fashion, and can not see, heare, nor feele, sayde of it, This is my body. Cyrill sayth, Christ gaue to his disciples peces of bread, saying: take and eate: this is my bodye. Theophilus Alexandrinus sayeth: The misticall waters in baptisme are consecrate thorowe the comynge of the holy Ghoste: And the Lordes bread, wherein the body of our sauiour is shewed and represented, and the whiche we breake for our sanctifieng: and the holy cuppe, which is set on the table of the church, beyng thynges without sense or vnderstandyng, are sanctified thorowe the inuocation and commynge of the holy Ghoste. Gregorius Naziazenus sayeth: Let vs be partakers of the passeouer, & notwithstanding as yet in a figure, although this passeouer be more playne and euident then the olde passeouer. For the passeouer of the lawe, I speake boldely, was a more obscure Figure of the figure: but not long hence we shall enioye it more perfectly and more manifestly, when the Sonne of God shall dryncke with vs that newe (wyne) in the kyngdome of his father, reuelyng and teachyng vs those thynges, whiche he hathe nowe but lytle declared vnto vs. Athanasius entreating of the eatyng of Christes flesh and drynkyng of his bloude, sayeth, that for this cause he made mencion of his ascension into heauen, to plucke them from corporall phãtasie, that they might learne hereafter, that his flesh was called the celestiall meate that came from aboue, and a spirituall foode, which he woulde geue. For those thynges, whiche I speke to you, sayth he be spirite and life. Whiche is as muche to saye, as that thyng whiche you see, shall be slayne and geuen for the nouryshement of the worlde, that it may be distributed to euery body spiritually, and be to al men a conseruation vnto the resurrection of eternall lyfe. Theophylacte sayeth: Beholde the folishnes of these people (he speaketh of the Capernaits). For it had bene their dutie to aske & to learn those things whiche they knewe not. But they ranne backe, and expounded nothyng spiritually, but all thynges as they appeared. For when they hearde of flesh, they imagined, that he woulde compell them to become deuourers of flesh and bloud. But for as muche as we vnderstande of it spiritually, we are no deouruers of flesh, and moreouer we are sanctified by suche meate. Agayne he sayeth: forasmuche, as we haue oftentymes sayde, they expoundynge carnallye those thynges whiche Christe spake, were offended, he sayeth: When the thynges, whiche I speake, are spiritually vnderstanded, then do they profytt.

Afterwarde about the yeare of oure Lorde, 1215. Pope Innocentius the thirde did not only affirme, that the body of Christ lurked vnder the kyndes of bread and wyne, and was handled and broken with the handes of ỳ prieste, yea and crushed and torne on peces with the tethe of the cōmunicantes, according to the doctrine of Pope Nicolas the second, but also he decreed by generall councell, that the sacramētal bread was turned into the naturall substance of Christes body, and the sacramentall wyne into the naturall substaunce of the bloude of Christ: so that from that time vnto this present age, this wycked doctrine of Christes bodely presence in the sacrament hath so preuailed, that few haue espied ỳ truth of gods holy word in this behalf: which thing is ỳ alone occasion, ỳ many euen at this present day remayne & abide stil in their olde errour & blindnes. As for an example: this one sentence, This is my body, grosly taken & fleshly vnderstand, yea & receaued after the literall sense, semeth to teache that the naturall, corporall, reall, substancial & essential body of Christ is in the sacramēt: but if we cōsider ỳ other places of the holy scripture, whiche are many in nōbre, affirming plainly ỳ Christ as concerning his corporal presence is not on earth but in heauē, & so in heauē, ỳ he neither is, or yet shalbe in any other place vntil the day of iudgement: we shal easely graunt, ỳ it is but a sacramētal & figuratiue speache, & cōfesse ỳ this one sentence ought to geue place to a multitude, so ỳ the sacramēt is called Christes body, because it signifieth & representeth to vs the body of Christ & not ỳ it is so in dede & in truthe.

Sonne.

Sonne. It is truely sayde. For sacramentes and signes in the holye scripture yea and in our dayly speache also, are called by the names of the thinges, whiche they signifie, as we haue tofore heard. But as we may drawe to an ende in this matter, wouide God all menne wouide at all tymes remember this good lesson of saint Augustine. Seldome (sayth he) is any difficultie in proper wordes, but either the circumstance of the place, or the conferring of diuerse translations, or els the originall tongue wherein it was wrytten, wyll make the sense playne, but in wordes that be altered from their prayer signification, there is greate diligence and heede to be taken. And specially we must beware, that we take not literally any thing that is spo- De doctrina Christi. lib. 3. cap. 6 figuratiuely. For contratiwyse we muste not take for a figure any thyng, that is spoken properly. Therfore muste be declared (sayeth S. Austen) the manner howe to discerne a proper speche from a figuratiue. Wherein (sayeth he) must be obserued this rule, that if the thing, whiche is spoken, be to the furtheraunce of charitie, than is it a proper speche, and no figure. So that if it be a cõmaundement that forbyddeth any euyll or wicked acte, or commaundeth any good or beneficiall thyng, then it is no figure. But if it commaunde any euyll or wicked thing, or forbid any thing that is good and beneficiall, then is it a figuratiue speche. Nowe this saying of Christ (except ye eate the flesh Iohn. 6 of the sonne of man and drinke his bloud, ye shall haue no lyfe in you) semeth to cõmaunde an heinous and a wycked thing: therfore it is a figure, commaunding vs to be partakers of Christes passion, keppynge in our myndes to our great comfort and profitt, that his flesh was crucified and wounded for vs. Agayne he sayeth: The Lorde and the teaching of his Apostles hath geuẽ to vs a few signes for many, De doctrina Christi. lib. 3. cap. 9
and those moste easy to be done, moste excellent in vnderstandyng, & in perfourming moste pure: as the sacrament of Baptisme and the celebration of the body and bloud of the Lorde: whiche euery man when he receaueth, knoweth whereunto they be referred, beynge taught, that he worshyppe not them with a carnall bondage, but rather with a spirituall fredome. vnfaythfull and wicked eate and drinke in the Sacrament the bodie and bloud of Christ. Father. And what sayest thou (my Sonne) to this their doctrine? Is it to be alowed? Sonne. Nothyng les: forasmuche as it is contrary bothe to the doctrine of Christe and to the teachyng of the auncient fathers. And notwithstãding the Papists ar fallen to such impudẽcie and vnshamefastnes, while they affirme the corporall presence of Christe in the Sacrament, that they shame not to saye, that not only the wycked and vngodly but also the brute beastes, as the mouse, the ratte, the ratte, the weasel, &c. eating the sacrament, eate also the very true and naturall body of Christe, as he was borne of Mary the virgine and hanged on the crosse: which is so monstruous doctrine, that nothing can be inuented more prodigious or monsturelyke. Father. Let me heare it proued by the worde of God, that the wycked and vngodly eate not the flesche of Christe, nor drynke his bloud. Sonne. Christ him selfe, which is not only true, but also the selfe truthe, saith thus: I am that lyuing bread, whiche came downe from heauen. If any man eate of this bread, he shall lyue for euer. And the bread whiche I shall geue, is my flesche, which I shall geue for the life of the worlde. Uerely, verely I saye vnto you: except ye eate the flesh of the sonne of mã, and drinke his bloud, ye shall not haue lyfe in you. But whosoeuer eateth my flesh, & drinketh my bloud, hath euerlasting life: and I wyll rayse him vp at the last daye. For my flesche is meate in dede, and my bloud is drynke in dede. He that eateth my flesche and drynketh my bloude, dwelleth in me, and I in hym. As the lyuing father hath sent me, euen so lyue I by my father, and he that eateth me, shall lyue by me. This is the bread, whiche came downe from heauen: not as your fathers haue eaten manna and are dead. He that eateth of this bread, shall lyue for euer. Agayne he sayeth: I am that bread of lyfe. He that cometh to me, shal not hõger: & he that beleueth on me, shal neuer thurst. &c.

The third errour of the Papistes in the doctrine of the Sacrament.

John. 6.

Of these wordes of our Lorde and Sauiour Jesus Christe it is manifest, playne and euident, that the vertue and power of his flesh and bloud is so great and mightie, that whosoeuer eateth and drynketh thereof, shall lyue for euer and haue euerlastyng lyfe. But the wicked and vnfaithful, although they eate the Sacramental bread and drinke the Sacramentall wyne, haue not euerlastinge lyfe, as we haue Judas for an example: Therfore it followeth, that the wycked and vnfaythfull do not eate nor drynke the body and bloude of Christ. Againe, Christ sayeth: He that eateth my flesche and drynketh my bloud, dwelleth in me, and I in hym. But the wycked and vnfaythfull dwell not in Christ, nor Christe in them: therfore the wycked and vnfaithfull neither eate nor drinke the body and bloude of Christe, although they dayly receaue the sacramentes and signes of them, as S. Augustine saieth: He receaueth the meate of lyfe, and drynketh the euerlasting cuppe, that dwelleth in Christe, & in whom Christe dwelleth. For he that agreeth not with Christe, dothe neither eate the flesche of Christ, nor drinke his bloud, although to the condẽnation nation of his presumption, he receaue euery daie the Sacrament of so high a matter. For this is to eate that bread of lyfe, euen to beleue in Christe, that is to saye, by loue to be incorporate in him. Therfore forasmuche as the reprobate hath not beleued in hym, he hath not eaten hym: and so he had not the faith of the Christiãs, whereby alone synnes are released. Father. These wordes are very playne, and can not iustly be denied: of the whiche we learne truly, that not the vnfaythfull, but the faythfull, not the wycked but the Godlye disposed only eate and drynke the body and bloud of Christe. Notwithstanding I would also in this behalf gladly heare the iudgement of the auncient fathers and olde writers: that we may be well assured euen by their testimonies also, that this is no new doctrine, to teach, that the Godly only eate Christe and not the wycked: the faythful & not the vnfaythfull: the members of Christ, and not the members of Sathan. Sonne. The auncient writer Origen hath these woordes: The worde was made flesche and very meate: whiche who so eateth, shall surely lyue for euer, whiche no euyll man can eate. For if it could be, that he that continueth euill, myght eate the worde made flesche, seyng that he is the worde and bread of lyfe, it should not haue bene written: Who so euer eateth this bread, shall lyue for euer. Agayne he sayeth: the one and perfecte sacrifice is Christe offered. If any man touch the flesche of this sacrifice, he is made holy streightwayes. S. Cipriane sayth: None do eat of this lambe, but such as be true Israelites, that is to saye, pure Christian men without coloure or dissimulation. S. Hierome sayth: All that be louers more of pleasure then of God, eate not the flesche of Iesu, nor drinke his bloude, of the whiche hym selfe sayeth: He that eateth my flesche and drynketh my bloud, hath euerlasting lyfe. Againe he sayeth: Heretykes eate not the flesche of Iesu, whose flesche is the meate of faythfull men. Also in another place he sayeth: They eate this bread, whiche are strong in Christ. &c. And they drynke this wyne, which are virgines holy both in body and in spirite. S. Ambrose sayeth: Iesus is the bread, whiche is the meate of saynctes: and he that taketh this bread, dieth not the death of a sinner. For this bread is the remission of synnes. And in another place he sayeth: He that did eate Manna, dyed, but he that eateth this body, shal haue remission of his synnes, and shall not die for euer. S. Augustine sayth: They can not be bothe the members of Christe and the members of an harlotte. For he sayeth: He that eateth my flesche and drinketh my bloud, dwelleth in me, & I in hym. Here dothe he showe, what it is, not sacramentally, but truly & effectually to eate the body of Christ: euen to dwell in hym. He that dwelleth not in Christ, let him not say or thinke, that he eateth the body of Christe, forasmuche as he is not of his body. He is not a member of Christe, whiche maketh him selfe a member of an harlot. Also in another place he sayeth: This is to eate that meate and to drynke that drynke, euen for a manne to dwell in Christe, and to haue Christ dwelling in hym. And therfore he that dwelleth not in Christe, and in whom Christe dwelleth not, without without doubt he neyther eateth spiritually his flesshe, nor drinketh his bloud, although carnally and inuisibly he byte the Sacrament of Christes body and bloud, but he rather eateth and drinketh the sacrament of so worthy a thing vnto his owne damnation. Item they iudge truly that saye, that he eateth not the body of Christe, whiche is not in the body of Christ. Neither are they counted to eate the body of Christe, forasmuche as they are not rekened among the members of Christe. Ones againe he sayeth: The heretikes that are without the churche, may haue the Sacrament, but the matter of the sacrament they can not haue. Hilarius sayeth: These thynges taken and and receaued (he speaketh of the body and bloud of Christ) make, that both we are in Christe, and Christe in vs. Cirille sayeth: The fathers, whiche did eate Manna, died, because they receaued thereby no strength to lyue euer (for it gaue no lyfe, but onely put away bodely honger) but they that receaue the breade of lyfe, shall obtayne immortalitie, and shal eschewe al euylles of destruction, and for euer lyue with Christe. Agayne, He that eateth the flesshe of Christe, hath euerlasting lyfe. Ones agayne: whan we eate the flesh of Christ than haue we lyfe in vs. For if thorow the touchyng of Christes body alone, thynges corrupt were made whole: howe then shall we not lyue, whiche both taste and eate his flesshe? And in a certayne glosse recited in the Popes lawe, we reade thus: As in Baptisme Christe is put on sometyme sacramentally, and sometyme vnto the sanctification of lyfe (the first is comune both to good and badde, but the second is proper only to the good) so lyke wyse Christe is eaten of euyll persones sacramentally onely: But of the good he is receaued both Sacramentally and spiritually, and of all the faythfull, spiritually.

All these testimonies of the auncient wryters diligently considered, declare manifestly, that not the wycked and vnfaithfull, but the godly and faithfull persones onely eate the body & drynke the bloud of Christ. The vngodly eate the sacrament, but they eate not Christ, whiche is signified by the sacrament, as S. Augustine wryteth of Judas: The Apostles, sayeth he, did eate bread that was the Lorde: but Iudas did eate but the bread of the Lorde, and not the bread that was the Lorde. For whosoeuer eateth Christe, lyueth for euer, dwelleth in Christe and Christ in hym is incorporated and made all one with christ: is made a member of christes body: is sanctified & made holy: is made cleane both in body and soule: dieth not the death of a synner: hath remission of his synnes: optayneth immortalitie: escheweth all euylles of death, and for euer liueth with christe. But none of all these thinges chaunce to the vnfaithfull and wycked persones: Therfore eate they not the body of christe, nor yet drynke his bloud.

In Ioan. tract. 59.

What it is to eate Christ.

Father. I would gladly heare what it is to eate Christe. Sonne. Christe is eaten or receaued two manner of wayes, that is to say, sacramentally and spiritually. He is receaued or eaten sacramentally, when we eate and drynke the sacramentall bread and wyne, according to the institution of Christ: whiche thing is done not onely of ꝑ faithfull, but also of the vnfaithfull. He is also eaten or receaued spiritually, when we beleue in Christe, embrace him as our alone Sauiour, put our whole hope, truste and confidence of our redemption and saluation in that one and alone sacrifice, which Christ offered vpon the altare of the crosse, hauing his body there broken, & his blond there shedde for the remissiō of our sinne: Again, when we earnestly consider in our mindes the passion & death of Christ with al ꝑ benefites therof, chawyng and digesting them with the stomache of our heart: be thankefull for them to God the father, and labour to ꝑ vttermoste of our power to lyue worthy his kyndnes, daply encreasyng more and more in all godlines and honestie. And after this maner the godly and faithfull only eate and receaue Christe. Other eating or receauing of Christ there is none. Father. Why, is not the very naturall body of Christ eaten of the communicantes bothe faithfull and vnfaithful at the Lordes supper? Sonne. Christ is only receiued and eaten of the faithfull communicantes: the vnfaithfull receaue not the body and bloud of Christ, but the sacramentes of the same only, yea and that vnto their damnation. Father. And is Christ receaued corporally with the corporall mouthe of the faithfull communicantes? Sonne. The naturall body of Christ is only in heauen, and notwithstanding the soule of the faithfull communicante with her mouth, that is to saye, with fayth, doth truely and vnfaynedly fede vpon it vnto her greate ioye and comforte, and feeleth no les true refection, then the bodye dothe by receauing corporall foode: yea the faythfull communicante thus eating and receauing Christe, receaueth both in body and soule an heauenly nouryshement, a syngulare comforte, and an vnspeakeable ioye. Father. Faith than is the mouthe of the soule, wherewith Christe is receaued and eaten. Sonne. Yea verely, as Christ sayeth. I am that bread of lyfe. He that cometh vnto me, shall not honger, and he that beleueth in me, shall neuer thurste. Hereto pertayneth the saying of Saynt Augustine: Why doest thou prepare thy tethe and thy belye? Beleue and thou hast eaten. For to beleue in him, is to eate the bread of lyfe. He that beleueth in hym, eateth hym. Lykewyse sayeth saynt Cipriane: So ofte as we do these thynges (he speaketh of receauing the misteries of the body and bloud of Christe) we whette not our teethe to byte, but with pure faythe we breake the holy bread. Hereto agreeth the saying of Eusebius Emissenus, whiche lyued about three hundreth yeres after Christs ascension: When thou dost go vp to the reuerend altare to fede vpon spirituall meate, looke vpon the holy bodye and bloud of thy God with thy faythe, honoure hym, touche hym with thy mynde, take him with the hande of thy harte, and chefly drynke hym with the draught of thy inwarde man. Chrysostome also sayth: Where the dead corps is, sayeth Christe, thyther wyll the Aegles resorte. The dead corps is the bodye of the Lorde, because he dyed. For ercepte he hadde fallen, we hadde neuer ryssen agayne.

dyng

Bertrammus sayth, speaking of the body & bloud of Christ. It is a spiritual meate, & a spiritual drinke, spiritually feding ꝑ soule, & geuing the life of euerlasting satietie, as our Sauiour him selfe cõmending this misterie sayth: It is the spirite that quickneth, for the flesh profiteth nothing. In the Popes owne lawe we reade thus: Christe is eaten two maner of wayes: One waye, sacramentally: which chaunceth both to the good and to the bad. Another way, whan he is receaued by faith and loue working together: and this belongeth only to the good. Father. I perceaue now right well, that Christes naturall body is not eaten, as the Papistes teache, with the mouth of the body, but with ꝑ mouth of the soule, which is faith. Sonne. It is truth.

De consec. dist.2 Glosa in cap. Quid est.

De consec. dist.2. cap. vtrum.

For thus rede we in the boke of the Popes Canons: Christum fas vorari dẽtibus non est. That is to say, Christ can not be deuoured with tethe. As S. Austen likewyse saieth, as we tofore heard: why doest thou prepare the tethe & the belly? Beleue and thou hast eaten. For to beleue in him, is to eate the bread of life. He that beleueth in him, eateth him. Again he sayth: whan the Lord spake of his flesh & said: Except a man eate my flesh, he hath not euerlasting lyfe in hym: his disciples were offended (peraduenture they were seuenty) and said: This is an hard saying: who can away with this? And they went away from him, and walked no more with him. This semed hard vnto them, that he sayeth: Except a man eate my flesh, he shall not haue euerlasting life. They toke it folyshly, they vnderstoode it carnally: they thought, ꝑ the Lord wold haue cut of certayne peces from his body and geuen them, and therfore they said: this is an hard saying. Notwithstanding they were harde, & not the saying. yet he instructed them and said vnto them: It is the spirite that quickeneth: the flesh profiteth nothing. The wordes, whiche I haue spoken to you, are spirit and lyfe. Understond you spiritually the thing that I haue spoken vnto you. This body that ye see, shall ye not eate, neyther shall ye drynke that bloude, whiche they shall shed that shal crucifie me. I haue set forthe vnto you a certayne Sacrament: whiche beyng spiritually vnderstanded, shall quicken you, or make you alyue. Father. If Christ be not otherwyse truly eaten, than with the mouth of the soule, whiche is fayth, and if the faythfull alone eate the bodye of Christe and drynke his bloude: Howe cometh it to passe, that we sometyme reade in auncient Fathers, that the wycked also eate the bodye of Christe:

In Ioan. tract.25

S. Au-

S. Austen sayth on this wyse: Iudas receaued the body and bloude of the Lorde, &c. Sonne. You heard before, that sacramentes in the holy scripture haue the names of the thinges, that are signified by the. After the same manner speaketh S. Austen in this place. He sayeth, that Iudas receaued the body and bloud of the Lord, whan he meaneth the sacrament of the body and bloud of the Lord. For that Iudas receaued not the body and bloud of Christe, it appeareth manifestly by these wordes of S. Austen: The Apostles, saith he, did eate bread that was the Lord: but Iudas did eate but the bread of the lord, and not that bread that was the Lorde. Here S. Austē affirmeth plainly, that the Apostles receiuing the sacramentall bread, receiued also Christ him selfe: but Iudas, which was wicked and vnfaithfull, receiued only the sacramentall bread, and not Christe: so farre is it of that he receiued the very body and bloud of Christ, whiche can not be eaten nor dronken, but only of the faithfull, yea and that none other wyse than with the mouth of the soule, which is faith: which fayth the beleuing alone haue, and therfore they alone eate and drinke the body and bloud of Christe. For this cause whan we reade in the olde fathers, that the wycked receaue the body and bloud of Christe, it is to be vnderstande of the sacrament of the body and bloud of Christ, remembryng alwayes, that figures, signes or sacramētes beare the names of the thynges, whiche they signifie and represent. All misteries, sayeth S. John Chrysostome, are to be considered with inward eyes, that is to saye, spyritually. Father. Hetherto thou haste declared (my sonne) what the Lordes supper is: who did institute the Lordes supper: Why the Lordes supper was instituted: Howe we ought to prepare our selues vnto the Lordes supper: and what abuses and erroures haue crepte into the the churche of Christe therowe the wycked doctrine of the Papistes about the Lordes Supper: so that nothyng almoste concerning the supper of the Lorde hath escaped thee, whereof thou hast not sufficiently spoken, yea and confyrmed the same both by the authoritie of the holy scriptures and by the testimonies of the auncient fathers. Notwithstanding let me aske thee one or two questions, although not of so great and weyghty importaunce. What thinkest thou, is it more mete to receaue the supper of the Lorde at a table, or rather at an altare. Sonne. At a table. Father. Why so? Sonne. For our sauiour Christ did both institute this holy supper at a table, & thapostles of Christ also did receiue it at a table. And what can be more perfect, then that, which Christe & his apostles haue done? All the primatiue church also receiued the supper of the Lorde at a table. And S. Paule speaking of the Lordes supper, maketh mentiō not of an altar, but of a table. Ye can not be partakers, sayeth he, of the Lordes table, & of the deuils table also. Tables for the ministratiō of the Lordes supper cōtinued in the church of Christ almost iii. hondred yeares after Christe vniuersally, and in some places longer, as histories make mencio: so that ỳ vse of altars is but a new inuention, & brought in, as some wryte, by Pope Sixtus the second of that name.

De bap. cō tra Dona. cap. 8

In Ioan. tract. 59.

A good lesson.

In Ioan. Hom. 46

A table is more mete for the ministration of the lords supper, then an altare. 1. Cor. 10

Moreouer an altare hath relation to a sacrifice. And altars in the olde lawe were buylt and set vp at the commaundement of God to offer sacrifice vpon them. But all those sacrifices do nowe cease (for they were but shadowes of good thynges to come) therefore the altares ought to cease with them. Christe alone is oure altare, our sacrifice and our prieste. Our altare is in heauen. Oure altare is not made of stone, but of flesshe and bloude: of whome the Apostles wryteth thus: We haue an altare, whereof it is not lawfull for them to eate whiche serue in the tabernacle.

Heb. 10.

Furthermore ỹ Papists haue greatly abused their altars, while they had suche confidence in them, that without an altare or in the steade thereof, a Superaltare, they were perswaded that they coulde not duely and truely and in right fourme minister the sacrament of the body and bloud of Christe. And this their altare and Superaltare lykewyse must be consecrate, haue printes and characters made therin, washed with oyle, wyne, and water, be couered with a clothe of hayer, and be garnished with fine whyte linnen clothes and other costly apparell, or els whatsoeuer was done thereon, was counted vayne and vnprofitable. The vse also of altares hath greatly confirmed and maintained the moste wicked errour and damnable heresie, which the Papistes holde, concerning the Sacrifice of the masse: whyle they teache, that they offer Christe in their masse to God the father, an oblacion & sacrifice for the sinnes of the people both of the liuing & of the dead, & by this meanes they greatly obscure & deface that moste swete smelling & alone true, perfect & sufficiēt sacrifice of Christes death. And therefore all the altares of the Papistes ought nowe no les to be throwen down and cast out of the temples of the Christiās, then in times past ỹ altars of the priests of Baal: so far is it of that they be mete to be vsed at ỹ celebration of ỹ Lordes supper.

Finally, who knoweth not that we come vnto the Lordes table, not to offer bloudy sacrifices, to the perfourmaunce whereof we had nede of altares, but to eate & drynke, & spiritually to feede vpon hym that was ones crucified & offered vp for vs on the altare of the crosse a swete smelling sacrifice to God the father, yea & that ones for all: Nowe if we come together to eate and drinke these holy misteries, & so spiritually to eate Christes body and to drinke his bloud vnto saluation both of our bodies and soules: who seeth not, that a table is more meete for the celebracion of the Lordes supper, then an altare?

Of gestures to be vsed at ỹ Lordes table.

Father. Thy reasons are good and not to be discommended. But what sayest thou concerning the gestures to be vsed at the Lordes table? Shall we receaue those holy misteries kneling, standyng or sytting? Sonne. Albeit I knowe and confesse, that gestures of themselues be indifferent, yet I would wysche all suche gestures to be auoyded, as haue outwardly any appearaunce of euill, according to this saying of S. Paule: Abstaine from all euill appearaunce. And first of all forasmuche as kneling hath bene long vsed in the churche of Christe at the receauing of the Sacrament thorowe the doctrine of the Papistes, although of it selfe it be indifferent, to be, or not to be vsed, yet woulde I wysche, that it were taken awaye by the authoritie of the hier powers. Father. Why so? Sonne. For it hathe an outwarde appearaunce of euill. When the Papistes thorowe their pestilent persuasions hadde made of the Sacramentall bread and wyne a God, and had taught and commaunded the people to take and worship it as God: than gaue they in cõmaundement streightwayes, that all people should withall reuerence knele vnto it, worshippe and honour it. And by this meanes this gesture of knelinge creept in, and is yet vsed in the churche of the Papistes, to declare, that they worship the sacramẽt as their Lord God & Sauiour. But I would wysche with all my heart, that either this kneling at the receauing of the sacrament were taken awaye, or els that the people were taught, that that outward reuerence was not geuen to the sacrament and outward signe, but to Christ, whiche is represented by that sacrament or signe. But the moste certaine and sure waye is, vtterly to cease from knelyng, that there may outwardly appeare no kynde of euyll, according to this commaundement of S. Paule. Abstayne frõ all euil appearaunce: lest the enemies by the continuance of knelyng should be confirmed in their errour, and the weakelings offended, and plucked backe from the truthe of the Gospel. Knelyng with the knowledge of godly honoure is due to none, but to God alone. Therfore whan Sathan commaunded our Sauiour Christe to knele downe before him and worshippe him, he aunswered: It is wrytten: thou shalt worshyp the Lorde standyng, whiche is vsed in the moste parte of the reformed churches in these our dayes, I can right well allowe it, if it be appointed by common order to be vsed at the receauing of the holy communion. And this gesture of standing was also vsed at the commaundement of God of the olde Iewes, whan they did eate the Paschall lambe, whiche was also a sacrament and figure of Christ to come, as our sacrament is a signe & figure of Christe come and gone. Neither did that gesture want his misterie. For the standing of the Iewes at the eating of the Lordes passeouer, signified that they had a further iournay to go in matters of religion, and that there was a more cleare light of the Gospell to shyne, than had hetherto appeared vnto them, which were wrapped round about with the darke shadowes of ceremonies: againe, that other, yea and those more perfect, sacramentes were to be geuen to Gods people: which all thinges were fulfilled & came to passe vnder Christ, the authour of the heauenly doctrine of the Gospell, and the institutor of the holy sacramentes, Baptisme & the Lordes supper.

Of kneeling.

of the

Sytting.

Nowe as concerning syttyng at the Lordes table, whiche is also vsed at this day in certayne reformed churches, if it were receaued by publique authoritie & comon consent, & might conueniently be vsed in our churches: I could alowe that gesture best. For as it is not to be doubted, but that Christe and his Disciples sate at the table, whan Christ deliuered vnto them the sacramẽt of his body & bloud: which vse was also obserued in ỳ primatiue church & lõg time after:

So lykewyse it is moste comely, that we chzistians folowe the exã-ple of our maister Chzist and of his disciples. Nothyng can be vnre-uerently done, that is done after the example of Chzist and of his Apostles. We come together to eate and dzynke the holye misteries of the body and blood of Chziste: we haue a table set before vs: is it not mete and conuenient, that we sytte at our table? The table being pre pared, who stãdeth at his meat? Yea rather who sytteth not down?
Iohn. 6. We han Chziste fedde the people, he bad them not knele downe, nor stande vpon their feete, but he cõmaunded them to syt downe: which kynde of gesture is moste mete when we assemble to eate & dzinke, ☞ whiche thing we do at the Lozdes table. Neither doth the sytting of the communicantes at the Lozdes table want her misterie. For as the standyng of the Iewes at the eatyng of the Lozdes Passeouer signified, that there was yet to come another doctrine than the lawe of Moses, euen the preachyng of the glorious Gospell of our Lozde and Sauiour Chziste Iesu: and other Sacramentes than Circumcision and the Passeouer, euen the Sacramentes of Baptisme & the Lozdes supper: So in lyke manner the sitting of the chzisten com-municantes at the Lozdes table doth signifie, preache and declare vnto vs, that we are come to our iournays ende cõcernyng religiõ, and that there is none other doctrine, nor none other Sacramentes to be looked for, than those only, which we haue already receaued of Chzist the Lozde. And therfore we sitting downe at the Lozdes table shewe by that our gesture, that we are come to the perfection of our religion, and looke for none other Doctrine to be geuen vnto vs.
Notwithstanding, as I sayde before, gestures are free, so that none call indifferent, this rule of S. Paule is diligentlye to be obeyed:

Abstayne from all euyll appearaunce. Father. I do not disalowe thy iudgement in this behalfe. But come of, tell me: what sayest thou cõ
Of vestures at the ministration of the Lozdes Supper. cerning the vestures, whiche the Ministers vse at the ministration of the Lozdes Supper?

Sonne. In some reformed churches the Ministers vse bothe a surplesse and a cope: in some onely a surplesse: in some neither cope nor surplesse but their owne decent apparell. Father. And what thynkes thou in this behalfe? Sonne. When our Lozde and Sauioure Chziste Iesus did minister the Sacrament of his body and blonde to his disciples, he vsed none other but his owne comune and dayly apparell: and so lykewyse did the Apostles after hym, and the prima tiue churche likewyse vsed that order, and so was it cõtinued many yeares after, tyll superstition began to crepe into the churche. After that tyme, fonde folyshe fansye of mans idle brayne deuysed with out the authoritie of Gods worde, that the Minister in the diuine seruice and in the ministration of the holy Sacramentes should vse Surplesse awhyte lynnen vesture, which we nowe comonly call a Surplesse.
Untyll this tyme the churche of God continued in the simplicitie of Chziste and of his Apostles, requyring no paynted visores to sette forth

wyth the glory and beauty of our religion: which is than most glori ous and most beautiful, when it is most simple, and none otherwise setforth, whan it was vsed and left vnto vs of Christ, and of his Apostles. And contrariwise it is than most obscured and defaced, whē it is dawbed ouer with the vile & vain colours of mannes wisdome although outwardli neuer so gorgious and glorious. Afterward as superstition grew and encreased, so likewise the people began more and more to be liberal in geuing to the churche, and in adournynge, decking and trimming the temples of the christians, yea and that so much the more, because they were now perswaded, that such temple and wil workes pleased God, deserued remission of sinnes and euer lasting life. By this meanes came it to passe, that the simple & plaine tables, which were vsed in the Apostolike & primatiue church, were taken away, and stading altares set vp and gorgeously decked with sumptuous apparel, and garnished with golde, pearle and precyous stone. And because that he, whych should minister at that gorgious and sumptuous altare, should aunswer in some poynte to the glorye therof: therfore it was deuysed, that the minister also should haue on his backe, galant and gorgious apparel, as an Amyce, an albe, a tu-nicle, a gyrdel, a fannell, a stole, a vestmente, &c. where of some were made of sylke, some of velvet, some of cloth of gold, yea and those gar nished with angels, with Images, with birdes, with beastes, wyth fishes, with floures, with herbes, with trees, and withal things that might satisfy and please the vaine eye of the carnall manne. And all these thyngs being before but voluntary, grew afterward vnto matters of so great wait and importance, yea vnto such necessity, that it was made a matter of conscience, yea it was become deadlye synne to minister the holy communion without these scenical, histrionicall and Hickescornerlike garments: so that now to syng masse or to cōsecrate, as they vse to say, wythout these popish robes, is counted in the church of the Papistes more then twise deadly synne: so farre is it of, that these missal vestures, are now thinges of indifferencye.

vestmēts

Wherfore in my iudgement, it were meete and conuenient, that all suche disguised apparell were vtterlye taken awaye, forasmuche as it is but the vaine inuention of manne, and hath bene greatly abused of the massynge Papistes. For what hathe the temple of God to do wyth Idolles? What concord is there betwene Christe and Be-liall? what haue the vestiments of a popish altare to do wyth the table of the Lord Christ? Father. But what thinckest thou of the Surplesse, which is now commonly vsed in the most parte of the refourmed churches: Is it lawfull to weare a surplesse, or not. Sonne. In thynges indifferent we may vse our liberty, whiche we haue gotten by Christ. Therfore if a magestrate being godly, commaund that the minister in the time of his edministration weare a surplesse, not for the maintenaunce of superstition, but for a semely and decent order, his commaundemente in this behalfe is to be obeyed, and no godlye minister ought to resyst it. For in all matters that are not contrary whether it be lawful to weare a surplesse.

Rom.13 to Gods worde, the magestrate is to be obeyed, not onlye for feare of punishment: but also for conscience sake. But if the magistrate commaund any thing directly against Gods worde, in this behalfe he is not to be obeyed, nor his commaundement to be accõplished, but we must answer with the Apostles: We must obey God more then mẽ. Whether it be righteous in the syght of God to heare you rather then Act.5. God, iudge ye. But in thinges that be indifferent, we must take hede that we clogge no mannes conscience, nor make that a thing of necessitye, which is mere voluntary. Father. It is wel said. But what thinkest thou of the receiuinge of the misteries of Christes passyon and death? In the church of the papistes the laye people canne by no meanes be suffred with their hands to touch either the Lords bread or the cuppe: but the sacrificinge priest put the bread into the peoples mouth and geue them the wine, as thoughe the people were vnworthye either to touch the breade or the cuppe. In the reformed churches they take bothe the Sacramentall breade and cuppe in theyr owne handes deliuered vnto them by the minister. Sonne. When the Popishe priestes hadde exalted theim selues to farre aboue the laitye, and counted the common people in comparison of them selues prophane and vncleane parsonnes: Againe, when they hadde made of the sacrament a god, & had taught the people to worshipit, and to knele vnto it: than that the sacrament mighte be had in the greater estimation, they decreed among them selues, that the laity should by no meanes touche with their vncleane handes the bodye of theyr Lorde God as they call it: Againe, that they with their prophane handes should not touche the sacred and halowed chalice, where in notwithstanding not the mistery of Christes bloude, but mere wine is contained. For as the Papists like theues haue stollen away frõ the common people the Lordes cuppe, contrary to Christes institution. And although I knowe, that it is a matter neither of saluation or damnation, as they vse to say, the laity either to take the Sacramente into their owne handes or els to receiue it at the hande of the minister into their mouthes: yet is it more agreable to thinstitution of Christ, and to thorder of the primatiue church to take the Sacraments into their own hands, both the bread and the cup. For what hath the hand more offended, then the lips, the tonge, the mouth, the tethe &c. Hath not he sanctified the hand, which halowed ỹ mouthe? Be not both of like holines before God? A lay man to touch the Sacramental bread or cup with his bare hand, is counted in the paryshe church a greuous synne: but if the lay man haue a gloue on his hãd made of a shepes skin, then he may be bolde to touche it: as thoughe their were more holines or worthines in a sheapes skynne, then in a christen mannes handes. O hypocrites swalowinge in a Cammell, and straining oute a gnatte. When Christe delyuered the sygnes of hys bodye and bloude to hys Disciples syttinge at the table, he sayd not vnto them: Gape, holde, eate. &c. and so thruste the breade into theyr mouthes: but he delyuered the breade into their hands, & said. Take ye and eate Neyther sayde he: Holde, open your mouthes:

Of receyuing the sacramẽt wyth the handes.

I will pour wine into them, but he deliuered the cup into their hãds saying, Take and deuide this among you. And this order continued many yeares after Christes time, as we may finde both in hystories, and also in the monuments of the auncient writers. This possible cause therfore of thrustinge the sacramentall breade into the mouthes of the communicants, ought vtterly to be abolished, least ỹ by the maintenance therof the popishe and wicked error of Christes corporal presence be established and confirmed. Father. Is the sacramentall breade to be worshipped, as the Papistes haue here to fore taught? Sonne. Nothing les. For it is writtẽ: thou shalt worshippe the Lord thy God, and him alone shalt thou serue. To worship any creature as God, is plain Idolatry. Christ said, take, eat, deuyde among you. He said not, behold, fal downe, and worshippe. The worshipping therfore of the sacrament ought vtterly to be forbidden, and to be abolished, as mere Idolatry and most execrable abhomination before the Lord our God: to whome alone al worship, honor & glory is due. Father. Wel, my deare sonne, thou hast not only satisfied, but also ouercome mine expectation in all things, wherin I haue hither to talked with thee. Fiue partes of the Catechisme haue we passed ouer: one part now remaineth behinde to be entreated of, whyche is concerning the offices of all degrees. Sonne. You say truth moost louing father.

¶ Of the offyces of all degrees.

Father, what order wilt thou obserue in this sixte and laste part of the Catechisme. Sonne. I wyl fyrst entreate of the offices and dueties of the hier powers both temporal and Ecclesiastical: and afterward of al other degrees in order, that are stablished and grounded in the word of God. Father. Thou wylte than begyn fyrste with the temporall Magestrate? Sonne. Yea verelye.

¶ Of the office and duty of the temporal Magistrate.

Father. Fyrst of all tel me, my sonne, what a temporal Magestrate is. Sonne. A temporall magestrate is a publique parson, to whõ the sweard is committed for the defence of the good, and for the punishment of the euil. Father. Is the magistrate appoynted of god an officer: or is he rather a tiraunt vsurpinge power and authority ouer other parsons against al right and law? Sonne. He is ordayned of God to be a ruler ouer his people, and no man hath iustly rule and autority in any common weale: which is not ordayned of God. Father. Let me heare this proued by the word of God. For there are, as I heare, which vtterly deny ỹ magestrate to be of God, that is to say, of Gods ordinaunce and appoyntment. Sonne. We speake of the Anabaptistes, which are so ennemies to this noble degre and honorable estate, that they are almost frendly to none, hauing their foun-

bation in the religion of Christ. But that magistrates rule at the appointment of God, it is thus proued. God by the mouth of Salomō speaketh on this maner: Through me kinges raigne, through me princes make iust lawes. Throughe me Lordes beare rule, and all iudges of the earth execute iudgement. And the wyse manne sayeth: Heare O ye kinges and vnderstand: geue eare ye that rule the multitudes. For the power is geuen you of the Lorde, and the strengthe from the most high God. Saint Paule also sayeth: There is no power, but of God. The powers that be, are ordained of God. Therefore who so resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinaunce of God. And they that resist, get to them selues dampnation. Saint Peter lykewise exhorteth vs to honor the king, and to be subiect vnto him as the supreme gouernour, and to the other rulers that are sent of him, yea and that for the Lordes sake, that is to say, because they are Goddes officers ordained of him for the punishment of the euyll, but for the prayse of the good. Father. But what if the magestrates be euil, wicked, vngodly, tiraunts, haters of the truth, oppressors of the poore &c. Are they also appoynted of God? Sonne. In Iob it is thus wrytten: For the synnes of the people: doth God make an hipocrite to raign ouer them. And God him self sayeth by the Prophet: I shal geue the childzen to be theyr princes, and babes shall haue the rule of you. The people also shalbe pilled and polled. &c. The Psalmograph prayeth against the vngodly on this manner: Set (O lord) a tirant ouer them, that the heathen may knowe them selues to be but men. And oure sauiour Christ confessed, that the authority whych Pilate had, although a wicked and vngodly parson, was from God, and he willingly suffered death vnder that tiraunt. Neyther do we reade, that the Apostles at any time did reiect and cast awaye the regiment of the heathen rulers as a thinge vnlawful: but they rather exhorted the subiectes to obey them, so fat as they commaunded nothing contrary to Gods worde, to honor them, to praye for them, to geue them tribute, custome, toll. &c. Thus se we, that not onlye godlye, but also vngodly princes, not only righteous, but also vnrighteous and wicked rulers are geuen vs of God. The one, I meane the good, for the fauor which God beareth toward vs, whan we labor to walcke in his holy waies: the other, I meane the euyll, for anger and displeasure that he bathe towarde vs, when he seeth vs disobediente to hys lawes and ordinaunces. Father. What manner of men shuld magistrates be? Sonne. Men of actiuity, and such as feare God: true men and hating couetousnes: wise and politike: and whose conuersation is alowed of al men. Father. What is the office of a tempozall Maiestrate? Sonne. It consisteth chiefly in two poynts. The fyrst is, that he banishing oute of his kingdome all false religion and Idolatry, do auaunce, setforth and maintain Gods true religion & holy word. The second is, that he gouern his people iustlye, defende them from all perils, preserue their goodes, maintaine the good, and punyshe the euyll.

Father.

Father. Haue ciuile Magistrates also to do with matters of religiō?
Sonne, Yes verely. For God hath appoynted temporall rulers not only kepers and maintayners of the workes of the seconde table of the lawe, which concerne the body, but also of the workes of the first table of the lawe, whiche belong vnto God and vnto the soule. As the Magistrate by the vertue of his office is bounde to prouide, that so muche as in hym is, there be no manslaughter, no whordome, no theafte, no false witnes bearing, none vniust coueting of other mēs goodes, &c. in his lande or dominion: So lykewyse is his dutie to aforsee, that there be no false Religion, no Idolatrie, no superstitiō, no inuocation of straunge Goddes, no dishonouring of the Lordes name, no wycked doctrine &c, vsed in his countrey or kingdom. And for this purpose, because he should not be deceaued of the wyly and suttle Hypocrites, whiche desyre aboue all thinges to leade the hygher powers in ignorāunce and blyndnes, that they may doo what they lyste without checke, the Magistrate is commaunded of God, to be learned hym selfe in the lawes and ordinaunces of God, that he may do all thinges according to Gods booke, and not after his owne fansie or will, nor yet after the craftie perswasions of the suttle hypocrites. The kyng, sayeth God, when he is set vpon the seate of his kyngdome, he shal wryte hym out a copy of this lawe in a boke. And it shall be with him, and he ought to reade therein all the daies of his lyfe, that he may learne to feare the Lord his God, and to kepe all the wordes of this lawe &c. And to Iosua God sayde likewyse: Let not the boke of this lawe departe out of thy mouth, but recorde therein daye and nyght, that thou mayest obserue and do according to all that is wrytten therein. For than shalt thou make thy waye prosperous: and than shalt thou do wysely. The Prophet Dauid also exhorteth the kynges and rulers of the earth to get them vnderstāding, and to be learned in the lawe of the Lorde, yea and to kysse the sonne, that is to saye, to embrace Christe the sonne of God and his holy Gospell, lest, if they do the contrary, God be angry with them, and so they perysshe from the ryght waye. The lyke thing reade we in the syxt and nynth chapters of the booke of wysdome. Father. Proue by the worde of God, that the temporall rulers haue to doo with matters of Christen religion. For there wante not at this present daye, which thinke that ciuile Magistrates ought not to medle with matters pertaining vnto the soule, but vnto the body only. As for all spirituall causes and matters of religion, they belonge, saye they to the byshop of Rome and to his adherentes. Sonne. These are the Papistes, which desyre alone to reigne in the consciences of mē, and to haue rule ouer their fayth. But that temporall rulers oughte to medle with matters of Gods religion, and that it appertayneth vnto their office to weade out all false worshipping of God, and all wycked doctrine, it is probable inough by diuerse histories of the holy scripture. As I may passe ouer king Dauid and Salomon his sonne, whiche trauayled not a lytle in auaūncing Gods true Relygion,

Whether the tēporal rulers ought to medle wt matters of Christē religion.

kyngdomes of the landes that were round about Juda, & the king and his people lyued in great ioye, quietnes, and wealth, hauyng aa noble and notable historie to declare and shewe, that all Prynces in their dominions haue authoritie and power to redresse abuses & errours in matters of religion, and that for that purpose they maye at all tymes appointe visitacions to be had in their kyngdomes for a reformation of all enormities both in spirituall and temporal mat-

The Papists make the magistrates no better then swyneheards and shepe heardes. ters. Sonne. You saye truthe. But this can not the Papistes abyde.

Lorde God, prouiding honest liuing for them, that they might substantially apply them selues to the studie of the lawe of the Lorde: and the Lord was with Hezechia, so that he prospered in al things, whiche he toke in hande.

The moste worthy and moste glorious actes of that moste noble and moste goly king Josia, are more famous and knowen, than that they nede here to be recited. He purged all Juda, and all Hierusalem from byll altars, groues, kerued images, and images of metal, and suche other kindes of idolatrie. He repared the house of the Lord his God. He renewed the feast of the Passeouer. He read in the eares of all the people the wordes of the lawe of the Lorde, and made a faithfull promes to the Lorde, that he and all his people should walke according to the statutes of that booke: so that they turned not aside from the Lorde God of their fathers, so long as he lyued. The Lord God therfore differred his plage, that he had threatned to Juda, suffered Josia to liue in muche honoure, and brought him to his graue in peace, so that his eyes did not se the mischief that the Lorde God afterwarde brought immediatly vpon Hierusalem and vpon the inhabitours of the same. 2.Par.34

What shall I speake of Jehu kyng of Israell, whiche caused all the Priestes of Baall to be slayne, all the images to be set out of the temple of Baal, and to be burnt? He cõmaunded also his captaines and men of warre to breake the image of Baal, and to destroye the house of Baal, so that Baals house was made a draffe house vnto this day. And because Jehu thus sought ꝯ glory of God & destroyed idolatrie with the maintainers therof, he lued in his kingdom vnto his dieng day, & his children vnto the fourth generation sate on the seate of Israel. And as these aforesayd most noble kinges shewed them selues valeasit & courageous magistrates in matters of gods religion by banishing all idolatry & wicked doctrine, & by erecting & setting vp ꝯ true worshipping of God & the sincere preaching of his moste holy worde: so likewyse reade we in Ecclesiasticall histories of certaine noble Christen Princes, which attempted the like enterprises in auaunting the true religiõ of God, & in driuing out of their dominions al idolatrie, fals worshipping of God, wicked doctrine &c. 4.Reg.23

Of this sorte was ꝯ godly Emperour Constantinus Magnus: whom whã God had called vnto the Empire & vnto the knowledge of his holy word, he streightwayes cõmaunded, that the tẽples of ꝯ idols should be shut vp, & frõhencefoorth to be no more frequented, nor sacrifice to be offered any more in thẽ vnto those false Gods. He cõmaunded also, that the gospel of our Sauiour Christ shuld be preached openly, & he gaue to the preachers therof large stipendes & honorable rewards. And whan ꝯ wicked & damnable heresy of Arrius began to spreade abrode, ꝯ most noble Emperour with his great labour and cost gathered together a great nõber of learned bishops & celebrated an holy & honorable councel at Nice for ꝯ suppression of ꝯ comuche detestable heresy. How godly & princelike he behaued him selfe at ꝯ councel, histories do abundantly declare. Constantinus Magnus.

God therfore blessed hym many and diuerse wayes.

Gratianus Valentini. Theodosius

What shal I speake of Gratianus, Valentinianus and Theodosius moste holy and worthy Emperours, which gaue out streyght commaundement throweout all their dominions, that al their subiects should receaue and admitte none other doctrine, then that onely, whiche the holy and blessed Apostle S. Peter hadde preached and taught. And they cõmaunded, that all the tẽples of the Idols shuld vtterly be throwen down and rooted out, that the idolatours might haue none occasion after their tyme to set vp againe their wicked sacrifices.

Adauctus

In a certaine citie of Phrigia Adauctus Lieuetenaunt of that countrey vnder Diocletiane that tyrantlyke Emperour, topled downe al the idols, and perswaded the whole multitude to receaue the doctrine of Christ.

Again, in the citie Nicomedea a certaine Noble mã receauing the letters of that wycked tyrant Diocletiane, which he had sent for the abolyshyng of Christen religion, rent them all on peces and troode them vnder his fete, the people lokyng ón.

Diuerse suche lyke examples we reade in Ecclesiastical wryters: whiche declare manifestly, with what and how feruent zeale a christen Magistrate ought to be ledde towarde Christen religiõ, so that his chief study and labour should be to seke the honour and glorie of God, to auaunce his holy religion, to set forth his blessed worde, and to procure the saluation of his subiectes soules, al idolatrie, superstition, hypocrisie and what so euer is contrary to wholsome doctrine vtterly excluded and put away. And for this cause are thei called in the holy scripture Gods, that is to saye, persones appointed of God to conserue, kepe and maintayne true religion, and to forbid and abolyshe idolatrie, superstition, wicked doctrine &c. And that thei may this do the more conueniently, it is mete and necessary that they ad these two thinges, without the whiche true religion can not longe stande. The first is that they prouide godly and learned preaches, in all partes of their dominions, which more truly & vnfainedly teache their subiectes the way of the Lorde, that they may from their very heart feare the Lord God, honour him, serue him, worshyp him, call on his holy name, thanke him for his benefites, & leade a life worthy their profession. And that the preachers may labour in the vineyard of the Lord the more gladly, & haue the better courage to do their dutie: it is the office of a good Magistrate to prouide honest & quiet stipendes for the preachers, that they may haue wherof to fede both thẽselues and their family, yea and also to gene somewhat to the poore.

And to encourage the Godly Magistrates to do this: it shalbe good for them always to set before their eyes this saying of the wyseman: Whan the preaching of Gods worde fayleth, the people perishe & run out of order. The second is, that forasmuche as preachers be mortal & can not alway remaine in their function & office, but muste nedes geue ouer to nature, & chaunge this life after the maner of all men, & Magistrates erect & set vp scholes, where the yougth of the Christen

common weale may be brought vp in good letters and godly maners, but specially in the knowledge of Gods true religion, that the young children being trained vp euen from their cradles in the misteries of Gods most holy worde, may in time to come supplie the roumes of the departed pastors, & become good shepheardes of ỹ Lords flocke feding them not with the pestiferous leauē of Pharisees, but with the sweate & comfortable wheat of Christes Gospell. And that they may be the more able this to do, the Magistrate must diligētly prouide, that ỹ bokes both of the olde & new testament be read euery day to the youngones with some short exposition of the same, ỹ they may learne holy letters from their infancie, as we reade of Byshop Timothe, & not spend all their childhode or young age in mans doctrine, doctrine many tymes more mete for the childrē of the Turkes than for the children of the Christians, which as S. Paul sayth, are holy & cleane. And that they may ware the soner ripe in the knowledge of godlines, it shalbe conuenient, that the scholers do oftentimes repaire vnto the tēples to heare the sermons, & afterwarde to render accōptes of those thinges ỹ they haue heard, lest they become forgetfull hearers. And it shall not a litle profite vnto the encrease of godly knowledge, that the scholers sometime haue some theme of ỹ holy scripture offered vnto them priuatly in their scholes, & so proue their wittes, what they are able to do in dilating that text sometime by tonge, sometime by penne. And that those thinges may be done of the scholers with the more frute, a Christē magistrate must diligētly prouide, that suche as shalbe chosen & appointed scholemaisters, be men of grauitie, wisdom, knowledge, learning, of an honest & godly cōuersation, of an approued life, of vncorrupt manners, diligent and painfull in their office, fauourers of true & pure religion, earnest louers of gods word, haters of idolatry & superstition, and suche in all pointes, as may be to their scolers not only teachers of good & godly doctrine, but also examplegeuers of honest & vertuous conuersation, that as in doctrine so likewyse in maners they may procede & go forward, & afterward become profitable members of the Christē comon weale. And that the scholemaisters may be the better encouraged to do their office, & to bring vp the yougth of the christians in ỹ nouriture & doctrine of the Lorde, that they may afterward become good profitable mēbers of the comō weale, whether they be called vnto tēporall or spirituall affaires: it shall be necessary, that the magistrates prouide liberally for ỹ teachers & bringers vp of yougth, ỹ they may haue wherof honestly to liue. For if we thinke it a thing vnsitting & vnreasonable, not to prouide for our swyneheardes and shepheardes, whiche attend vpon our brute beastes: what a shame were it to leaue our scholemaisters, whiche bring vp our children made like to the image of god in vertue & learning vnprouided? The very heathen in times past haue liberally entertained the teachers of their children: and shal Christians be negligent in this behalfe?

Math.10 1.Timo.5 wozkeman is worthy of his rewarde. And they that rule well, are worthy of double honour. Father. These thinges, whiche thou haste spoken, my dere sonne, if they were diligently considered and put in practyse, would make a flozishyng Christen common weale, so that God should be truly honozed and his holy church garnished with al kynde of good and Godly officers bothe in spirituall and tempozall matters. But come of, and tell me, what the office and dutie of the Magistrate is in wozldly affaires. Sonne. As the dutie of a Magistrate is, to auaunce the glozie of God, to set fozth the Gospell of our Sauiour Christ, to plante true religion in all his dominions, to banishe idolatry and false wozshippinges of God, to wede out bnfaithfull teachers and false Pzophetes, and in steade of them to appoynt godly and learned pzeachers whiche may attend bpon the flocke of Christe, whome he purchased with his moste pzecious bloude, & foz their godly trauailes to appoint them such stipendes as shal be liberally sufficient both foz them and foz their family, yea of the same also to geue somewhat to the pooze: again, to erect and set vp scholes foz the vertuous bzinging vp of yougth, and to apoint godly, graue and learned scholemaisters foz the right institucion of them, yea and those also bountyously recompensed foz their painful trauailes: so like wyse is it his office & dutie, to gouerne his people, whom God hathe committed to his charge, iustly, to defend them from all perilles, to preserue their goodes, to maintain the good and godly, & to punishe the euil & wicked. Father. Are the people, ouer whom ỹ Magistrates reigne, Gods people? Sonne. Yes verely, Gods people, his wozkemanship and the shepe of his pasture. Foz so are they termed in the wozde of God. Father. And are the magistrates apointed of God to gouerne his people? Sonne. The magistrate is Gods minister apointed to this end, that he may gouerne & rule ỹ people of God. And foz this cause thei be called in the holy scriptures, Gods, pzinces, kyngs, rulars, gouernours, shepeheardes, guydes, captaines. &c. Father. And this their regimēt ought to be iust & righteous. Sonne. yea. Foz they must rendze an accomptes to him that is kyng of kinges & lord of Lozdes of their regiment and gouernaunce. To gouerne iustlye is required of a magistrate aboue all thinges. Father. What is it to gouerne iustly? Sonne. To do all thinges accozdinge to equitie and iustice, and by no meanes to decline from the way of righteousnes, neyther vnto the right noz vnto the left hand: to cast away al pareialitie in iudgemēts: not to peruerte iustice foz bzibes sake: not to iudge neyther foz fauour noz foz hatred: to heare both partes indifferētly: and neyther to iustifie the wicked noz to condemne the innocente. Father. Is it thus commaunded of God? Sonne. To whome is that vnknowen: God sayth, ye shal do no vnrightuousnes in iudgement.

Act. 20

Thou

Thou shalt not fauour the poore nor honour the myghtie: but in righteousnes shalt thou iudge thy neighbour. Heare ỳ cause of your brethren, sayd Moses to the Iudges, & iudge righteously betwene euery man and his brother, and the straunger that is with him. Se that ye knowe no faces in iudgement, but heare the smale as wel as the greate, and be afrayde of no man, for the iudgemẽt is Gods. He that sayeth to the vngodly, sayth Salomõ, thou art righteous, him shall the people curse, yea the commentie shall abhorre hym. But they that rebuke the vngodly, in them doth God delight, and a ritch blessing shall come vpon them. Iudge the thing that is ryght, O ye sonnes of men, sayeth the Psalmograghe. O loue rightuousnes, ye that are the Iudges of the earth. Notable is ỳ exhortation, that king Iosaphat gaue to the Iudges: Take hede, that ye do, sayeth he. For ye execute not the iudgemẽt of men, but of God, which is with you in the iudgement. Wherfore nowe let the feare of the Lorde be vpon you, and take heade, and be doinge the thinge that pleaseth him. For there is none vnrighteousnes with the Lorde our God, that should haue any respect of persones, or take rewarde. Father. Wolde God. al magistrates would obey these moste righteous cõmaundements of God Than should not so many deale vnustly, as they do now a dayes. For giftes, rewardes and bribes, do so rule in the heartes of many rulers in this our age, that they vtterly weygh down and suppresse iustice, and make it of no force. Sonne. Where bribe taking is vsed: Iustice is vtterly refused. And wher mony is set by: there right loseth the maisterie. Therfore God in his lawe commaundeth, that suche should be made rulars ouer the people, as hate couetousnes & abhorre bribes. Wolde God that all such bribe takers & gift eaters would set before their eyes these cõmaundementes of God: Thou shalt take no giftes: for giftes blinde the sight, & peruert the wordes of the righteous. Wreast not thou the lawe, nor knowe any persone, neither take any rewarde, for giftes blynd the wyse &c. Against such bribetakers and gift eaters, the Prophet crieth out on this maner: Wo be vnto them, that geue sentẽce with the vngodly for rewards, but condemne the iuste cause of the righteous. Therfore like as fyre licketh vp the strawe, and as the flame cõsumeth the stubble: Euen so their roote shall be as corruption, and their blossome shall vanysh away lyke duste. Job also sayeth: the fyre shall consume the houses of suche, as are gredy to receaue giftes. Father. As giftes and bribes cause the subuersion of iustice, lykewyse doth frendship many times: so truly is it sayd in our common prouerbe: As a man is frended: so is his matter ended. Sonne. Neither frendship nor fauour ought to preuayle against iustice. Father. Some Magistrates are so vndiscrete, that when matters of controuersie be brought before them, the fyrst tale dooth so preuayle, that the other partie can not be heard, although his cause be neuer so iuste and good. Sonne. These Iudges forget the worke of nature, whiche hath created in them two eares: one to heare the accusaunt, the other to heare the defendaunte.

Both parties ought to be herd indifferently.

And in this behalfe I would wyshe that they were lyke to kyng Alexander the great, whiche, whan any man complayned to hym of an other being absent, vsed to stoppe the other eare with his hande. Beyng demaunded, why he dyd so: he answered, that as he lefte open one eare to the accusant, so he would kepe one eare stopped and close for the defendaunt. Here euen of an Heathen prince may rulers learne to heare both partes indifferētly. Father. If the Magistrates woulde thus behaue them selues in al their sessions and courtes: the common weale should be better ordered in many places, than it is nowe, neyther should the poore people so greuously complayne of iniuries and wronges done vnto them. I praye God, geue the Magistrates grace accordyng to their office to gouerne the people of God iustly. Sonne. Amen. Father. It is the dutie of Magistrates also to defende their subiectes from all perilles, and to kepe suche goodes, as they haue harmeles? Sonne. That is their office. They are called in Gods booke Shepeheardes, because as a good shepehearde dothe not only fede his flocke, but also defend his flocke, & mightely fighte for the conseruation of his flocke against the wolfes. So likewyse a true Magistrate ought to seke al meanes possible to saue his people, to kepe them harmeles, to saue their goodes, and to be as carefull for them, as for them selues. For as S. Paule sayeth: The Magistrate is Gods minister appoynted for thy wealth. Yea to saue & to defende the lyues and goodes of their subiectes, they ought to put their owne lifes and goodes in ieoperdie. Their awne priuate commoditie ought to geue place to the safegarde of the common weale.

Rom. 13

What a fatherly care Moses, Iosua, Samuel, Dauid, and other noble Princes had for their people, the holy scriptures do euidently declare. Father. If it be the dutie of Princes to defende their subiectes from all perilles, and to kepe suche goodes, as they haue, harmeles: then ought they not to vse their subiectes as slaues, bilanes and pay sauntes, nor to spoyle them of their goodes, whiche were eyther left vnto them of their parentes, or els they haue gotten with their hard labour, at their pleasure. Sonne. The wyseman sayeth: If thou be made a Ruler, pryde not thy selfe therein, but be thou as one of the people. Take diligēt care for them, & loke wel thereto, & when thou hast done all thy dutie, set the downe, that thou maiest be mery with them, and receaue a crowne of honour. Salomon also saieth: Mercie and faythfulnes preserue the kyng, and with louing kyndnes his seate is holden vp. The ritcher and the wealthier that the commons are in any Realme: the rytcher & the wealthier is the Prince of that Realme, yea and the strōger also is he, and the further from all ieopardie and daunger. But contrariwyse, the poorer and the baser that the commons are in any Realme: the more feble and the lesse valeaunt is the Prince against his ennemies. This considered the wyse man, whiche wryteth on this manner: The encrease and prosperitie of the commons is the kynges honour: But the decay of the people is the confusion of the Prince. Notable is this saying of Marcus Curius ius Curius that moste noble councell of Rome: I had rather, sayth he, beare rule ouer them that are ryche, than to be ryche my selfe. Marcus Curius.

Moreouer that a Magistrate may not vniustly take awaye his subiectes goodes, the historie of Nabot and of wycked kyng Achab, declareth that moste manifestly. And who knoweth not, howe vehemently God thondereth by his Prophetes against suche wolyshe & tyrantlyke Rulers, whiche poll and pyll the people, and oppresse thē against all equitie and ryght? Are not these the woordes of God by the Prophet Amos? O heare this worde, ye that do poore men wrōg and oppresse the nedy: Ye that say to your Lordes, bryng hether, let vs drinke. Therfore the Lord hath sworne by his holynes: the dayes shall come vpon you, that the ennemies shall cary you away. &c. 3. Reg. 21. Amos. 4

Again, by the same Prophet he sayth: O wo be to the proud wealthy to suche as thinke them selues so sure, euen them, which holde them selues for the best of the world, and rule the house of Israell as they luste. Ye are taken out for the euill daye: euen ye that sytte in the stole of wylfulnesse: ye that lye vpon beddes of Iuorie, and vse your wantonnes vpon your couches: ye that eate the best lambes of the flocke, and the fattest calues of the droue: ye that synge at the lute, and in playing of instrumentes compare your selues vnto Dauid: ye that drynke wyne out of goblettes, & annoynte your selues with the best oyle, but as for Josephes hurte none of you all are sory for it. Therfore nowe shall ye be the fyrst of them, that shall be led away captiue, and the lusty cheare of the wylfull shall come to an ende. &c. The Lord is mynded to smite the great houses. For ye haue turned true iudgement into bitternes, and the fruite of righteousnes into wormwoode. Ones again by the same Prophet he sayeth: O ye that oppresse the poore, and destroy the nedy in the lande: shall not your destruction come vpon you as a water streame &c. And by the Prophet Micha God also speaketh on this manner: O ye heades of the house of Jacob, and ye leaders of the house of Israell: should not ye knowe, what were lawful and right? But ye hate the good and loue the euill. Ye plucke of mennes skynnes, & the flesh from their bones. Ye eate the flesche of my people, and flaye of theyr skynnne. Ye breake their bones: Ye choppe them on peeces as it were into a caldrone, and as flesche into a potte. Nowe the tyme shall come, that when they call vnto the Lorde, he shal not heare them, but hyde his face from them, because that through theyr own imaginacions they haue dealt so wyckedly. &c. Father. It is to be wyshed, that all Princes woulde remembre this saying of the moste wyse Prince & kyng Salomon: with true iudgement, sayeth he, the kyng setteth vp the lambe: but if he be a mā that oppresseth the people with gatherings, he tourneth it vpside downe. For when the righteous beare rule, the people are in prosperitie: but when the vngodly haue the ouerhand, then the people are in beggarie. Sonne. Yea it is to be wyshed, that all Magistrates from the hyghest to the lowest, myght so behaue thē selues in their office, that they myght iustly saye with Samuel Amos. 8. Micha. 3 Pro. 29 1. Reg. 12.

on this wyse: Beholde, here am I: beare recorde of me before the Lord, and before his anoynted. VVhose oxe haue I taken? VVhome haue I done wrong to? whome haue I hurte? or of whose hand haue I receiued any brybe? to blynde myne eyes therewith, and I wyll restore it you a-gayne? The people aunswered Samuel and sayd: Thou hast done vs no wronge, nor hurte vs, neither hast thou taken ought of any mannes hande. He sayde vnto them agayne: The Lorde is witnes against you, and his annoynted is wytnes this daye, that ye haue no euyll in my
3. Reg. 12 handes, Father. It were not out of the waye for all Princes to remẽber what chaunced to Rehoboam king Salomons sonne for the vngentle entreating of his commons. And howe vnfortunatly it hathe gone with many Princes in times past for their insatiable pollinge and pyllyng of their subiectes, histories in all places make mencion:
prou. 28 Lyke as a roring Lyon, and as an hongry Beare, euen so is an vngodly Prince ouer the poore people, sayth Salomon. But lette vs beare more of the Magistrates office: which, thou saydest, is not only to gouerne the people iustly, to defend them from all perils and to preserue their goodes, but also to mainteine the good, and to punish the euill. Sonne. So is it. Father. What is it to maintaine the good?
Magistrates ought to mayntain good and godly people. Sonne. To defend them from the violence of the wicked, not to suffer them to be oppressed of the tyrauntes, to helpe them vnto their right, to defende their cause, to mayntaine their good name, to prouide for them, to suffer them not to lacke any good thyng, to promote them, to place them in offices about the matters of the common weale, to haue them in reuerence for vertues sake, although they be neuer so psal. 82 Psalmographe also say eth: howe long wyll ye geue wrong iudgement, and accept the persones of the vngodly? Defend the poore and fatherles: se that suche as be in nede and necessitie haue ryght. Deliuer the outcast and poore: saue them from the hande of the vngodly.

Magistrates ought to punish ỹ wicked. Father. As the dutie of the Magistrate is to maintaine the good and godly: so ly kewyse is it his office to punishe the wicked and vngodly. It is not so? Sonne. Yes verely. For so are we taught by ỹ word of God.

of God. God him selfe sayeth: who so sheadeth mans bloud, by man (he speaketh of the Magistrate) shal his bloud be shed. Again, thine eye shall haue no compassion, but lyfe for lyfe, eye for eye, tothe for tothe, hande for hande, foote for foote, shalt thou requite. Likewyse sayeth S. Paule: Rulers are not fearefull to them that doo good, but to them that do euyll. Wilt thou be without feare of the power: Do well then: and so shalt thou be praysed of the same. For he is the minister of God for thy wealth. But and if thou doo that whiche is euyll: then feare. For he beareth not the sweard for nought. For he is the minister of God, to take vengeaunce on hym that dothe euill. Gene. 9 Deut. 19 Rom. 13

S. Peter also sayeth: Submitte your selues to all manner ordinaunce of man for the Lordes sake: whether it be vnto the kyng as vnto the chiefe head: eyther vnto the rulers, as vnto them that are sent of hym for the punyshement of euyll doers, but for the prayse of them that do well. God in the lawe of Moses streyghtly commaunded, that the magistrates shoulde by no meanes suffer these kynde of persones to lyue: that is to saie, ỳ blasphemer of Gods holy name, the false Prophet, the Idolater, the Witche, the Nicromancer, the Sorcerer, the murtherer, the manstealer, the adulterer, and the adultresse, the wyllyngly deloured mayde before she was maried, he that hath to do with a brute beaste, a stubburne chyld against father and mother, a false wytnes, &c. And euery godly magistrate did pu nyshe the wycked in euery age accordyng to ỳ lawes of the Realme, where they dwelte, both among the people of God and among the Heathen. And this order is obserued at this daye in al nacions both faythfull and vnfaithfull. That Magistrate, whiche suffereth the wycked to escape vnpunyshed, is guilty of all the mischief that is done by them, and doth nothyng els than seke the subuersion & bitter destruction of the common weale, vnto his owne damnation. God commaundeth that the malefactour shall not be spared. That Rular therfore, whiche spareth the malefactour, is first disobedient to God, and afterward iniurious to hym selfe, and last of al a wolfe & an enemy to the common weale. For to suffer the wycked to lyue, is nothyng els than to destroy the goode. Of the prosperitie of the euyll, what foloweth but the destruction of the goode? Not to plucke awaye the wolffe from the lambe, what other thyng is than to murther the lambe. Those Magistrates are vnworthy to reigne, which beyng moued with childyshe, yea rather folyshe pitie, fauoure and pardone and open malefactours, and suffer them to liue vnto the great hynderaunce of the common weale, according to the common prouerbe: Folyshe pitie marreth the citie. The Magistrate hath not a Peacockes tayle geuen vnto hym whan he is made a Rular, but a sworde, whiche sweard he ought to plucke out and exercise, whan so euer occasion is geuen, lest the weedes ouergrowe the corne, and the wycked triumphe against the righteous. He beareth not the sweard in vayne, sayeth S. Paule. For he is the minister of God to take vengeaunce on hym that doeth euyll. Note. Rom. 13 Psal. 101

I will destroye

wyll destroye out of hande al the vngodly that are in the lande, that I may roote out all wycked doers from the citie of the Lorde. Dyd not God commaunde Moses to hange vp those wycked Rulers and Princes, whiche of a folyshe pitie would not punyshe and put to death the wycked offendours, but rather spared them? Take sayeth he, all the heades of the people, and hang them vp before the Lorde against the sonne, that the wrathe of the Lordes countenaunce may be turned from Israel. By this one hystorie it appeareth euidently, howe greatly God is displeased with these Magistrates, whiche cease to punyshe the wicked. And albeit that these sheepyshe, sluggish and sleapy Rulers escape in this worlde vnpunyshed for this theyr negligence and dissolute or loose regiment, yet shall they not auoide the handes of the moste hyghe Magistrate in the worlde to come, but they shall so muche the more suffer punyshementes, because that they haue not Ministred due correction to the wycked and vngodly as theyr dutie was. For thus sayeth the wyse man speakyng to the Magistrates: Geue eare ye that rule the multitudes, & delyght in muche people. For the power is geuen you of the Lorde, and the strengthe from the hyghest: which shal trye your workes, and search out your imaginacions. Howe that ye beyng officers of his kyngdome, haue not executed true iudgement, haue not kepte the lawe of ryghteousnes, nor walked after the wyll of God. Horryble and that ryght sone shall he appeare vnto you: For an harde iudgement shall they haue that beare rule. Mercye is graunted vnto the symple, but they that be in authoritie shall be sore punyshed. For God whiche is Lorde ouer all, shall excepte no mannes persones, neyther shall he stande in awe of any mannes greatnesse. For he hath made the smale and greate, and careth for all alyke. But the myghtie shal haue the sorer punyshement.

Num. 25

Sapi. 6.

Whether the magistrate mai lawfully punish Idolatours and false teachers.

Father. But lette me aske thee one question (my Sonne): In punyshyng the wycked and vngodlye, may the temporall Rulers also punyshe the Idolatours and false Prophetes or Preachers of corrupte and wycked doctrine? Sonne. The Magistrate hathe the sworde committed vnto hym, not onely to punyshe the transgressoures of the seconde table, but also suche as offende and breake the commaundementes of the fyrste table. For if the temporall Rulars ought not to suffer any persone to escape vnpunyshed, that offendeth man: muche lesse ought he to suffer any to escape vnpunyshed, that offendeth his Lorde God, spetially by idolatrye and false doctrine. Is not this the cõmaundement of God geuen to all hyghe powers? If there aryse among you a Prophet, or a dreamer of dreames, and geue thee a sygne or a wounder, and that sygne or wounder, whiche he hathe sayd, come to passe, and then saye: Let vs go after straunge Goddes, whiche thou haste not knowen, and let vs serue them: Herken not thou vnto the wordes of that Prophet, or dreamer of dreames. For the Lorde thy God proueth you, to wytte whether ye loue the Lorde your God with your heart and with all your soule.

Ye shall

ye shall walke after the Lorde your God, and feare hym, kepe his commaundementes, and hearken vnto his voice, serue him & cleaue vnto him. And that Prophet or dreamer of dreames shall die, because he hath spoken to turne you away from the Lord your God &c. And therfore thou shalt put the euill away from thee. If thy brother, the sonne of thy mother, or thine owne sonne, or thy doughter, or the wife that lyeth in thy bosome, or thy frende whiche is as thine owne soule vnto thee, entice thee secretly, saying: Let vs go and serue straunge Gods, whiche thou haste not knowen, nor yet thy fathers &c. Thou shalt not consent vnto him, nor harken vnto him: Thyne eye shal not pitie him, neither shalt thou haue any cõpassion on him, nor kepe him secrete, but cause him to be slaine. Thine hande shall be first vpon hym to kyll him, and then the handes of all the people. And thou shalt stone him with stones that he die, because he hath gone about to thruste the away from the Lorde thy God, which broughte the out of the lande of Egipte, and from the house of bondage. And all Israel shall heare and feare, and shall do no more any suche wickednes as this is among you.

Againe God sayeth: The prophet whiche shall presume to speake a woorde in my name, whiche I haue not commaunded hym to speake, or that speaketh in the name of straunge Gods, the same prophete shall die. Deut.18

Also in an other place: He whosoeuer curseth his God, shall beare his synne. And he that blasphemeth the name of the lord, let hym be slayne: and all the multitude shall stone him to deathe: whether he be borne in the lande or a straunger, whan he blaspheme th the name of the Lorde, let him be slayne. Leu.24

Can there be a greater cursing of God, than to fall from him whiche is the alone true God, and to turne vnto creatures, and to craue all thynges of them, as of God? And can there be a more heynous blasphemy done or spoken against the moste glorious name of the Lorde our God, than to preache and set forth doctrine contrary to Gods worde? and by this meanes to bring the people into errour, and to leade them from the waye of truthe vnto falshode and so finally vnto euerlasting damnation? Wo be vnto them, sayth the Prophet, that call euyll good, & good euill, whiche make darkenes lyght, and lyght darkenes, that make sower swete and swete sower. Wo be vnto them that are wise in their owne sight, and thinke them selues to haue vnderstanding. Esay.5

But we haue not only an expresse cõmaundement to kyll and put out of the way all idolatours and false Prophetes. I meane suche as wilfully and obstinatly resiste the truthe, and wyl by no meanes be reformed, but we reade also of diuers kynges and rulers whiche did put the same commaundement in execution and practise: & God blessed them greatly for it. Reade we not, that Iehu kyng of Israel caused all the priestes of Baal to be slayne, all the images to be fett out of the temple of Baal and to be burnte. He caused also his captaines and menne of warre to breake the image of Baal, and to destroye the house of Baall, so that Baals house was made a draste house. And did not the Lorde bless Iehu for thus doing, so that he 4.Reg.10

lyued quietly in his kyngdome vnto his dying daye, and his sede sate on the seate of Israel vnto the fourth generation? Reade we not also that kyng Iosia put down the Ministers of Baal, whome the kynges of Iuda had founded to burne incense in the hyll altars and cities of Iuda that were rounde about Ierusalem, and also the that burnte incense vnto Baall, to the Sunne, to the Moone, to the planetes and to al the hoste of heauen? Reade we not also that kyng Iosia did slea all the priestes of the hyll altares that were there, eue vpon the altares, and burnt mennes bones vpon them, that were Idolatours and false preachers? Moreouer, reade we not that Nabuchodonozor although an Heathen kyng set out a proclamation & commaunded, that all people, kynredes and tongues, whiche spake any blasphemy against the God of Israel, should die the death, and that their houses should be pyked. &c? Reade we not agayne that kyng Darius gaue out a commaundement, that who so euer did hinder the glorie of the God of Israel, there should be a beame taken frō his house, and set vp, and he hanged thereon, and his house be made a dongehyll? What shall I speake of kyng Artharerses, whiche cōmaunded also that whosoeuer would not fulfyl the lawe of the God of Israell and obeye his voyce, he should haue his iudgement without delaye, whether it were vnto death, or to be rooted out, or to bee condemned in goodes, or to be put in pryson. Furthermore we rede that these noble Emperous Constantinus, Valentinianus and Theodosius did not only by their lawes forbid the worshipping of Idols, but also they made certayne penal statutes against the Idolatours so that whosoeuer woulde presume to offer sacrifice to any Idole contrary to their decrees, they should die the death. Lykewyse reade we of Leo the thyrde Emperour of Greece, whiche commaunded all Images to be taken out of churches and opēly to be brent: He made a law also, that who so euer resisted his proceadinges in this behalf, he should suffer death. Ecclesiasticall histories minister vnto vs dyuerse suche lyke examples, whiche declare manifestly, that Princes haue not onely authoritie by the worde of God to medle with matters of Christen relygion, but also to punyshe the ennemies and hynderers of the same, but specially Idolatours and false Prophetes.

Father. And what sayest thou of Heretikes? Sonne. Euen the same that I haue sayde of Idolatours and false Prophetes. Father. Maye the Magistrate also punyshe them? Sonne. Yea and also take them out of this lyfe, if they wyll not repent, amend and come to the truthe. Father. What, if they kepe their errours and heresies in their breastes secretly, and publysh them not abrode? Sonne. Then hathe the Magistrates nothing to do with them. God alone seeth and iudgeth the heart. Father. What if the Heretykes publyshe their heresies, and go about to infecte other with their pestilent doctrine? Sonne. They ought not strayghtwayes to bee vngently entreated, to be throwen into pryson, to be condemned and so to be caried vnto the place of execution: but fyrst of all to haue them conuented before the godly the Godly Magistrates & learned ministers, bysshops or pastors, & frendly & louingly to conferre with them without sorow, checks, or frountes, that their conference may semen proceade not of anger, malice, hatred or displeasure, but rather of amitie, frendshyp, loue & good will, yea of such an harte, as wisheth rather their saluation than their dānatiō. And forasmuchas heresie is a spiritual thing, & cannot be weded out with any corporal violence: therfore ought furthe as be godly learned to trauaile with heretikes & to conuince thē, not with fyre & fagot, with swerde & halter, or with lawe will I, nor yet with olde customes & auncient fathers, but with ỹ sincere & pure word of God, with the faithful testimonies of the old godly wryters, & with the perfect consent of the Apostolike & primatiue church. These are ỹ armones, which we must vse against ỹ heretikes & enemies of gods truth, as S. Paul sayth: The weapons of our warfare are not car- 2. Cor. 10 nation to the obedience of Chryst, & are ready to take vengeance on all disobedience. For it is required of a spiritual minister, not only to Tit. 1 be able to exhort by wholsome doctrine, but also to improue, cōuince & ouercome thē that speake against it. The seruant of the Lord saith S. Paul, must not striue, but be gentle vnto al men, apt to teache, & 2. Timo. 2 one that can suffer the euill with mekenes, & can enforme them that resiste (the truthe) if that God at any time will geue thē repentance for to know the truth: and that they may come to them selues agayn out of the snare of the deuill, wherthe are holden captiue of him at his pleasure. Again he sayeth: Brethren, if a man be taken in any faulte, Galat. 6 ye which are spirituall, helpe to amēd him in the spirite of mekenes, considering thy selfe, lest thou also be tempted. S. James also saith: Iacob. 5

Brethren, if any of you do erre from the truthe, & another conuerte him: let the same knowe, that he, whiche conuerteth the sinner from going astray out of his way, shall saue a soule from death, and shall hyde the multitude of synnes. Father. What, if they after frendly con ference had, do persever and continue styl stubburne and obstinat in their erroneous opinions & blasphemous doctrine? Sonne. I would hyghe that according to the comon proverbe, euery stone shoulde be moued, and euery occasion sought to wynne them vnto the truthe: But if they remayne incorrygible, and will by no meanes leaue and gene place to the truthe, then lette this commaundement of Saynt Tit. 3
Paule be obeyed: A man that is an heretyke, or an authour of sectes, after the first and seconde admonicion auoyde: knowynge that he (that is suche) is peruerted, and synneth euen damned by him selfe. Or, as our Sauiour Chryste byddeth: Tell it to the congregation. Math. 18
And if he heare not the congregation, lette hym be vnto thee as an heathen manne and as a Publycane. Father. Nowe then is the heretyke auoyded: he is to the Congregation as an heathen and Publycane: He is geuen to Sathan: He is excommunicate:

he is cut of from the congregation of God, what is nowe to be done? Shall he straight wayes be put to death? Sonne. S. Paul sayth, the Magistrate beareth not the sweard in vayn. If the that beareth false witnesse against man, be worthy of death by the cõmaundement of God: is he worthy of les punishment, that beareth false witnesse against God? If the that speaketh euill of a king, whiche is but a mortall man, yea but earth, duste and ashes, dieth the death without remedie: shall he escape vnpunished, that openeth his mouth to speake blasphemies against the most highest, that king of kings, & Lorde of Lordes? If that mẽber be worthely cut of from the body whiche is corrupt, & not only vnprofitable, but also perilous, yea pernicious & hurtfull to the whole body: is such one to be suffred in a cõmõ weale, whiche by his pestilent doctrine corrupteth both body & soule, & bringeth them to euerlasting damnation? If that magistrate be counted worthy of prayse & cõmendation, which doeth so defend his countrey with his sweard frõ the inuasiõ of a forain enemy, that his subiects may lyue in his realme quietly bothe with bodies & goodes: Howe much more worthy to be cõmended is that rular, which with his authoritie & power doth so dryue away the maisters of errours & the teachers of false doctrine either by banishment or by sweard out of his realme, that his people retaining the wholsom doctrine of ỳ gospel, may be found in faith & good workes, & so liuing with a quiet conscience before God & man in this world, obtain euerlasting ioye in the world to come? If that shepeheard be counted wyse & discrete, which putteth away the scabby & diseased shepe from the residue of the flock which is whole & sound: is not ỳ Magistrate to be counted prudent and wyse, which seperateth such as are infected with errour & heresie from thẽ that are yet sound in doctrine & iudgement? Notwithstãding it is to be wished, ỳ forasmuch as God wold haue all men to be saued & to come vnto the knowledge of ỳ truth: again, forasmuch as God alone geueth faith & right iudgemẽt, & calleth som at this hour some at ỳ hour, euen when his godly pleasure & blessed will is: ỳ Magistrate would first of al gentily & louingly deale with heretikes, & se vnto what cõformitie he could bring thẽ with his wisdome & counsel, & also suffer thẽ to haue accesse vnto such as be godly learned, which may yet ones again haue conference with thẽ. It were not vnfitting also, that the magistrate shuld enioyne & compell the heretikes to resort vnto the hearing of sermons, in the which sermõs the heresies of those sectaries shuld be declared, refelled & confuted by the worde of God of the preachers: if peraduenture by this meanes it may come to passe, ỳ they may be called vnto repẽtance & vnto the knowledge of their errours, and so be saued. For who knoweth not, ỳ this is the ordinary way, whiche God vseth in calling sinners vnto repentannce and faith: euen the preaching of his word, as S. Paule sayeth: faith commeth by hearing, and hearing cometh by the worde of God? The Psalmographe also sayeth: I wyll teache the vnryghteous thy wayes, and the vngodly shall turne vnto thee.

If the Heretikes wil not heare, but stil obstinatly resist the truth, and go forth to spreade abrode their errours and heresies, yea their blasphemies against God and his holy worde, and by this meanes seduce the subiectes and leade them out of the waye of truthe, and moue sedicion in the common weale, settinge them at variaunce, whiche ought to remayne in one minde, as citisenses of one citie and subiectes of one Magistrate: than may the Headruler with a good conscience punishe those Heretikes, not only as heretikes, but as sedicious persones and troublers of common weale, whether it be by emprysonment, losse of goodes, banyshemēt, swearde, or otherwise. For this sentence of S. Paule must for euer and euer abyde true: If thou do euyll, than feare. For the hier power beareth not the sweard in vayne. For he is the minister of God to take vengeaunce on hym that doth euill S. Peter also testifieth, that the rulars are appoynted of God vnto the prayse of them that do well, but vnto the punishment of euill doers. But if the Magistrates be so shepishe, sleapie and sluggishe, and ledde with suche childishe and folyshe pitie, that they wyll not punyshe these wicked blasphemers of Gods truthe & sedicious troublers of the comon weale, but let them runne at large, or suffer all men to haue free accesse vnto them, and so they poyson the myndes of the symple and innocent with their pestilent errours and blasphemous heresies: lett those rulars be well assured, that as they do not the dutie of a good Magistrate, so shall they not escape vnpunyshed at the hande of God: and so many as perysshe thorowe their negligence and their dissolute or lose regiment, their bloud shal be required at those vnrighteous Magistrates hādes before the iudging seate of Gods maiestie. Them that worshyp me, saieth God, I wyll worshippe: and they that despise me, shal come to shame. Father. Albeit I do not disalowe these thynges, whiche thou hast spoken cōcerning heretikes, and the punyshement of them, specially if they be incorrigible, sowers of wycked doctrine, corruptours of mennes myndes, seducers from God and his truthe, sedicious persons, troublers of the common weale, authors of schismes and diuisions, breakers of the publique peace &c, yet I woulde wyshe, that all Magistrates should be ware and circumspecte in handlyng such as be called heretikes, and specially those Magistrates whiche beare rule in the kyngdome of the Pope. For hetherto the tyrānny of the Pope & of his Papistes haue so preuayled in many kyngdomes, that whosoeuer hath spoken against the lessest of the Popes decrees and ceremonies, he hath bene compted for an heretike, accused and condemned yea and with fyre consumed vnto ashes, although he beleued & confessed all thinges to be true, that are comprehended within the holy Byble. These smeared Pylates, I would saye, Prelates, first of all accused hym and afterward pronounced the sentence of death vpon hym, and streyghtwayes delyuered hym to the temporal Magistrate for to bee putt to execution, makynge the Magistrate theyr hangemanne and bondeslaue, to hange, to drawe, to quarter, to burne, to dzounde &c. as it pleased them to appoynte. O slauery. O misery. O vnoble nobilitie. In suche places therfore, where the Deuyll and the Pope yet reigne, it shall be necessary for all Magistrates, if they wyll auoyde the heauy indignation and fearse displeasure of God, to take heade vnto these bloudie Antichristes, and from henceforth no more to bee theyr hangemenne or slaughtermenne, but to knowe the cause them selues, and to examyne the persone them selues, yea and to iudge the matter them selues, and afterwarde pronounce as it shall seame good to theyr wysdome and discretions, yet so, that they shall at all tymes seeke rather the saluation of the persone than the destruction, the life than the death, euermore remembryng, that their power is geuen them from aboue to edifie and not to destroye. Lette the destruction of errours rather than of men be sought. He that is this day a Saule, may be tomorowe a Paule. If that noble doctour saynt Augustine hadde bene taken awaye eyther by halter, fyre or swearde, whan he was infected with the heresye of the Manicheis: verely he had not lefte to the churche of Christe so many Noble and learned workes vnto the great profit of his posteritie. Neyther are they streyghtwayes to be counted Heretikes, whiche doo erre, peraduenture of ignorannce and for lacke of knowledge, but such as thorowe the instincte and mocion of the Deuyll, haue dronkē in damnable errours directly agaynst the manifeste worde of God, and obstinately, malitiously and wyllyngly defende them, and by no meanes wyll suffer them selues to be plucked from them, eyther with the authoritie of Gods worde, or with the testimonies of the auncient writers, or yet with probable reasons and argumentes. And therfore muste those Magistrates, whiche lyue vnder the tyranny of the Romyshe Bishoppe, that Antichriste, that Sonne of perdicion and that Babylonicall strompet, take heade, that thei be no more deceaued with the glysterynge visore of fayned holynes, nor yet become any longer the hangemenne and bouchers of those spytefull, I woulde saye, spirituall generation, whiche condemne menne not for resisting the truthe of Gods worde, nor yet for dissolution of lyfe, although neuer so wycked and detestable, but for impugnyng theyr fayned holynes and counterfayte religion, wherewith they go about to leade their captiues not to saluation but to destruction, not to lyfe, but to death, yea death euerlastyng. If those, whome the bloudy and cruell Papistes that adders spawne and generation of vipers, do accuse & condemne for heretykes, be founde onely to resyste Antichriste & his Antichristiā decrees: let the Magistrates take heade, that thei ioyne not handes with the aduersaries, and consent to the sheading of innocent bloud, as their predecessours haue done in times past vnto ꝑ great perill of their euerlasting dānation, but rather washyng their handes from their wicked conspiracie, withstand those bloudy Papistes, yea and remembryng them selues to bee called Goddes and Gods be sought for their saluation before any extremitie be shewed. Let the cruell sentence of the Papistes moue the godly Magistrates nothyng at all to attempte extremities: but let them rather remember with them selues, that they be the ministers of God, whiche wylleth not the death of a sinner, but rather that he turne and liue: whiche will haue all men to be saued and to come vnto the knowledge of the truthe: whiche call some vnto hym in the eyght or tenthe houre, in the dawning of the daye, some in the morninge, some at hie noone daye, some in the euening, some at midnighte. Let them also consider that power is geuen them not to destroye but to edifie. Let them also folowe the practises of the noble auncient Magistrates, whiche lyued in the churche of Christe, before the tyranny of the bysshop of Rome was knowen. Euery moste diligently at all tymes labour to extinguysshe heresies, and to confounde them, that the churche of Christe maye be in the vnitie of the faithe and in the sincerite

counselles both generall and nationall: they gathered together learned men in the holy scriptures: they commaunded the heretikes to be sent, disputacions were had: the heretikes were suffered quietly and without any mockes or tauntes so speake and to shewe their learning and reasons. An answere was made agayne soberly, charitably and temperatly, yea and that not out of the Popes decrees or lawes will I, but out of the worde of God, whiche at that tyme was iudge alone of all controuersies: the learned byshops and Godly pastors in all their disputacions behaued them selues so grauely and louingly, so quietly and learnedly, that whatsoeuer came from them semed to proceade from the spirite of humilitie, mekenes, gentelnes, loue and good will, yea from suche a spirite, as rendred nothyng more, than their amendement, conuersion, and saluation: whereby it came to passe many tymes, that they which before entred seing the great gentelnes of the learned father steward thē both in quiet dis-

Of the office and dutie of the Miniſters of Gods worde.

Father. Firſt of all tell me, what a Byſhop or ſpirituall paſtor is? What a byſhop or ſpirituall paſtor is.
Sonne. He is the miniſter of Chriſte, and the diſpenſatour of the miſteries of God. Father. Why is he called a Miniſter of Chriſt?
Sonne. Becauſe he is Chriſtes ſeruaunt and Embaſſadour to ſpeake his maiſter Chriſte. Father. May not a ſpirituall paſtor ſpeake & 1. Cor. 4 and teacheth any other wyſe than he hathe learned of his maiſter is not the Miniſter of Chriſte, but the bondſlaue of Antichriſte.

What are theſe miſteries of God? Sonne. The knowledge of his holy

Whose synnes ye shal forgeue, ar forgeuen the: whose sinnes ye do retain are retained. Ite, fede my lābes. Fede my shepe. And S. Paule sayeth: God hath ordayned in the churche, firste Apostles, secondarely Prophetes, thyrdly teachers, &c. Father. Maye euery man that will take vpon him this ecclesiastical function or office of spirituall ministery? Sonne. Nothing lesse. For S. Paule sayeth: Howe shal they preache, excepte they be sent? Aaron and the Prophetes, Christe and his Apostles preached not tyll they were sent. Those that take vpō them the ministerie before they be called, are of the nomber of those, whom God by the Prophet describeth on this maner: I sent them not, and they ranne: I speake not vnto the, and they preached. Father. Howe many wayes may the ministers be called vnto the ministerie? Sonne. Twoo. One is, whan they be called immediatly of God, as the Prophetes and Apostles were: whiche were raysed vp of God to prophecie and to teache without any vocation or callyng of manne. And this kynde of vocation God vseth customably outwardly to approue and confirme with wonderfull testimonies and signes, as we may more see in Moses, Helias, &c. But this calling is now ceased. The other is, whā the ministers be called mediatly, as they saye, and in order of men, that is to saye, of the magistrate and of the people. They that are thus called vnto the ministerie, may right well perswade them selues, that they are called of God, and that their calling is lawfull, and that they liuing in that vocation please God, & their seruice is acceptale vnto God. Father. May not a man offer hym selfe to the churche, and desyre to be admitted vnto the ministerie? Sonne. Yes verely, so that it rise not of ambition and of the desyre of ease and worldly lucre. Agayn, so that he submitte him selfe to the iudgement of the Congregation, eyther to be admitted, or to be refused. For thus wryteth S. Paule: If any man desyre the office of a Byshop, he desyreth a good worke. Againe, couet spirituall giftes: but most chiefly that ye may prophecie, that is to saye, teache the congregacion. Who so euer therfore perceaued hym selfe to be apte and mete to rule in the cōgregation both in lyfe and doctrine, and feleth in hym self to be moued thereunto by the instinct of the holy ghoste, and hath in hym selfe also an ardente zeale and feruent desyre to helpe and profit the churche of Christe, & to auaunce Gods true religion: the same man may with a good conscience desyre the ministerie. Father. What differēce is there betwene a byshop and a spirituall minister? Sonne. None at all. their office is one: their authoritie and power is one. And therfore S. in Englishe? Sonne. An ouersear, or superintendent, as S. Paule sayde to the Elders or Byshops of Ephesus: Take hede vnto your selues and to all the floche, ouer whome the holy Ghoste hathe made you Byshops, Ouersears, or Superentendentes, to rule, or feede, the congregacion of God, whiche he hath purchased with his bloude. Father. What maner of man ought he to be, that should be chosen to be a minister? Sonne. S. Paule in his letters vnto Timothe and Titus declareth this euidently. Unto byshop Timothe he wryteth thus: A byshop (he meaneth euery spiritual minister) must be blameles, the husbād of one wyfe, diligēt, sober, discrete: a keper of hospitalitie, apte to teache, not geuen to ouermuche wyne, no fyghter, not gredie of fylthie lucre: but gentle, abhorring fighting, abhorring couetousnes, one that ruleth well his owne house, one that hath chyldren in subiection with all reuerence. For if a man can not rule wel his owne house, how shall he care for the congregation of God? He may not be a younge scholer, lest he swell and fall into the iudgement of the euill speaker. He must also haue a good reporte of them, whiche are without, least he fall into rebuke and snare of the euyll speaker. And vnto byshop Titus he wryteth thus: For this cause lefte I thee in Creta, that thou shouldest refourme the thynges that are vnperfect, and shouldest ordaine Elders in euery citie, as I had appointed thee. If any be blameles, the husbande of one wyfe, hauing faythfull childzen, whiche are not slaundered of ryot, neyther are disobedient. For a Byshop must be blameles, as the stewarde of God: not stubburne, not angry, not geuen to muche wyne, no fyghter, not geuen to fylthy lucre, but a keper of hospitalitie, one that loueth goodnes, sobre, ryghteous, godly, temperate, and suche as cleaueth vnto the true worde of doctrine, that he may be able also to exhorte by wholsome learnyng, and to improue them that saie against it. Father. I would gladly, that this rule of S. Paule were obserued in the election and admission of our spirituall ministers in this our age. Than should not the ministerie be so euill spoken of, as it is at this present. Sonne. It were good in this behalfe for the Bishops and Elders of the congregation to remember this commaundemēt of the Apostle: Laye handes sodenly on no man, neither be partaker of other mennes synnes. Agayne: Let them first be proued, and thā let them minister, so that no man be able to reproue them. Father. Let me now heare, what the office and dutie of a bishop or spiritual minister is. Sonne. It consisteth pryncipally in three poyntes. First, in teachyng the worde of God and in ministring the Sacramentes. Secondly, in praying for the people. Thyrdly, in leading a good life vnto the example of his parisheners. There are also that adde to these aforesayde thynges, the maintenaunce of hospitalitie, and say, that it appertaineth also vnto the office of a Byshop or spiritual Pastour to maintaine hospitalitie. And S. Paule in the description of a byshop sayeth, that he ought not to be geuen to filthy lucre, but to be a keper of hospitalitie. Father. Verely a vertue worthy of so noble what are these misteries of God? Sonne. The knowledge of his holy will, the gifte of his woyde and sacramentes, the opening of his Sonne Christe Jesus to mankynde and of the salucour Lorde and Sauiour Christe ascended with his body into the kyngdom of his father, he sayde to his Apostles, and also to al their successours, whiche are all spirituall ministers that labour in woyde Math, 28 and doctrine: Teache all nations, baptising them in the name of the all thynges that I haue commaunded you. And beholde I am with you continually vnto the worldes ende. Agayne, go ye thorowe out the worlde, and preache the Gospell to euery creature. He that beleueth and is baptised, shalbe saued. But he that beleueth not, shall be condemned. Ones again: As my father sent me, so send I you. Take the holy gost. Whose synnes ye shal forgeue, ar forgeuen thē: whose sinnes ye do retain are retained. Itē, fede my lābes. Fede my shepe. And S. Paule sayeth: God hath ordayned in the churche, firste Apostles, secondarely Prophetes, thyrdly teachers, &c. Father. Maye euery man that will take vpon him this ecclesiastical function or office of spirituall ministery? Sonne. Nothing lesse. For S. Paule sayeth: Howe shal they preache, excepte they be sent? Aaron and the Prophetes, Christe and his Apostles preached not tyll they were sent. Those that take vpō them the ministerie before they be called, are of the nomber of those, whom God by the Prophet describeth on this maner: I sent them not, and they ranne: I speake not vnto thē, and they preached. Father. Howe many wayes may the ministers be called vnto the ministerie? Sonne. Twoo. One is, whan they be called immediatly of God, as the Prophetes and Apostles were: whiche were raysed vp of God to prophecie and to teache without any vocation or callyng of manne. And this kynde of vocation God vseth customably outwardly to approue and confirme with wonderfull testimonies and signes, as we may more see in Moses, Helias, &c. But this calling is now ceased. The other is, whā the ministers be called mediatly, as they saye, and in order of men, that is to saye, of the magistrate and of the people. They that are thus called vnto the ministerie, may right well perswade them selues, that they are called of God, and that their calling is lawfull, and that they liuing in that vocation please God, & their seruice is acceptale vnto God. Father. May not a man offer hym selfe to the churche, and desyre to be admitted vnto the ministerie? Sonne. Yes verely, so that it rise not of ambition and of the desyre of ease and worldly lucre. Agayn, so that he submitte him selfe to the iudgement of the Congregation, eyther to be admitted, or to be refused. For thus wryteth S. Paule: If any man desyre the office of a Bysshop, he desyreth a good worke. Againe, couet spirituall giftes: but most chiefly that ye may prophecie, that is to saye, teache the congregation. Who so euer therfore perceaued hym selfe to be apte and mete to rule in the cōgregation both in lyfe and doctrine, and feleth in hym self to be moued thereunto by the instinct of the holy ghoste, and hath in hym selfe also an ardente zeale and feruent desyre to helpe and profit the churche of Christe, & to auaunce Gods true religion: the same man may with a good conscience desyre the ministerie. Father. What differēce is there betwene a bysshop and a spirituall minister? Sonne. None at all, their office is one: their authoritie and power is one. And therfore S. Paule calleth the spirituall ministers somtyme Bysshoppes, somtyme Elders, sometyme Pastors, sometime Teachers, &c. Father. What is By shop in Eng-

Ye haue eaten vp the fattte: ye haue clothed you with the wolle: the beste fed haue ye slayne, but the flocke haue ye not nouryshed. The weake haue ye not holden vp: the sycke haue ye not healed: the broken haue not ye not ye bound together: the outcastes haue ye not brought againe: the lost haue ye not sought, but churlishly and cruelly haue ye ruled them. Thus are they scatered here and there without a shepheard: yea al the beastes of the fild deuour them, and they go astray &c. Therfore O ye shepheardes, hear the word of the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lorde God. As truely as I liue, forasmuch as my sheepe are robbed and deuoured of al the wilde beastes of the field, hauing no shepherd: and seing that my shepheardes take no regard of my shepe, but feede them selues only, and not my shepe: therfore heare the word of the Lord (O ye shepheardes) thus sayeth the Lorde God. Behold, I my selfe will vpon the shepheardes, and require my shepe from their handes, and make them cease from feadinge of my shepe: yea the shepheardes shall feede them selues no more. For I wil deliuer my sheape oute of their mouthes, so that they shall not deuoure them after this &c. Father, Is it the dutye of a spirituall pastor only by his preachinge to exhort? Sonne. The mi- Titus.i.

crepe into the consciences of the people, and so deceiue them. It is therfore necessary and conuenient, that such be chosen vnto the ministery, as shalbe able to driue away these wolues from the Lordes flocke, yea and that not with fyre and fagot, not wyth sword & halter, not with stockes and chaines, but with the authorities of the holye Scripture, with the testimonies of the auncient fathers, and with argumentes agreable to the word of God. Such a noble warriour in the Lordes battel was Apollos that man of greate eloquence and learninge. He was Act.xviii.
mighty in the scripture, sayeth Luke, and spake feruently in the spirit, and ouercame the Jewes mightely, shewinge by the scriptures, that Jesus was Christ. Such a warrior also was S. Stephen, S. Paul, S. Justen &c. These stoutlye and stronglye resisted the aduersaryes of Gods truth, and defended the shepe of Christ from the teethe of the ra uening wolues. Such ought all spirituall pastors to be. For it is the duety of a good shepheard, not only to driue his flocke vnto good and wholsome pasture, but also to defend them from the rauening beastes that no hurt chaunce vnto them. Father, God send vs once suche shepheardes. We may soner wish them, then haue them, so great ignorancy and blindnes occupieth the heartes of the most part of our pastors at this present. Sonne. Besides doctrine, there is also required of a spiritu all ouerseer, due and faithful ministration of the Sacraments. For of Baptisme thus saith the Lord Christ: Baptise all nations in the name of the Father and of the Sonne, and of the holy Ghost. Of the miste-ries of his body and blond he sayeth: Do this in the remembraunce of me &c. The sacraments are than duely and faythfully ministred, when they be deliuered vnto the people, according vnto Christes institucion without any adding or putting to of the Popes beggerly ceremonies, euen simply and plainlye, and when the true vse of them is preached, declared and set forth to the people, that the simplest and plainest amog them maye vnderstande what they are, what they signifye, and what profite is receiued by the worthye takynge of them. For Sacraments receiued, and not perceiued profite little. Father. Rehearse vnto me nowe the seconde poynte of the Office and duetye of a Bishop or spirituall Pastor. Sonne. That consisteth in prayinge for the people. Father. Howe proouest thou that by the woorde of God? Sonne. God commaunded the Priestes of the olde lawe to praye for the people, whyche thynge they vsed datlye and diligentlye. Oure Sauioure Christe also prayed for his holye congregation and churche. So likewise did the Apostles of Christ. The holye and blessed Apostle Sainte Paule maketh mention in manye places of his Epistles, howe he prayed for the faythfull continuallye. To the Romaynes he wryteth thus: I thanke my God thorow Jesus Christe for you all, that your faith is spoken of in all the world.

And this I praye, that your loue maye encrease yet more and more in knowledge, and in all vnderstanding &c. To the Colossians he thus wryteth: We geue thankes to God the father of our lord Jesus Christ alwayes for you in oure prayers. Againe. We haue not ceased to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be fulfilled with the knowledge of his will in all wisdome and spirituall vnderstandinge, that ye myghte walke worthye of the Lorde. &c. To the Thessalonians he hathe these wordes: We geue God thankes alwayes for you all, makinge mention of you in oure prayers withoute ceasynge. &c. To Timothe he wryteth thus: Wythout any ceasinge I make mention of thee in my prayers night and day.

Thus see we, that as the duetye of a good spirituall Pastour is to preach the holy word of God to the people: so likewise is it his office to pray for the people. Father. How shal he praye for the people? Shall he daily say, as the manner in the Popes church is, our Ladies mattens, mattens of the day, Masse, Euensonge, Seuen Psalmes, fiftene Psalmes, Letany, Suffrages &c. and all in Latin, which for the most part, neither the priestes them selues nor the people vnderstand.

Sonne. Wyth a pure conscience, and in the Spirite shall they call vppon God oure heauenlye father, in the name of Jesus Christe hys dearlye dearely beloued sonne, that he of his fatherly goodnesse wyl vouchsafe to defend his church against al heretikes and tiraunts, & to kepe those whom he hath committed to his spirituall charge, in the true fayth, and studye of the heauenly doctrin of the Gospell, and to nourish and confirme in them faith and the true inuocation of his holy & blessed name, that they may garnish the doctrin of the Gospell with godly manners and vertuous examples. Thus did Christe and all the Apostles, yea and the godlye bishoppes and pastoures of the primatiue churche pray for the people of God continually. And this also oughte to be the exercise of all godly ministers at this present day, that the Lord maye geue good successe to their labdures, and make their doctrine to be frutefull in their hearers. For except God also teacheth inwardlye by his holye spirite, the outward ministery profiteth litle, as S. Paul: I haue planted, Apollo watered: but god gaue the encrease. So then, neither is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth, but God that geueth the encrease. And as the Psalmograph sayeth: Except the Lorde build the house, their laboure is but loste that build it. Except the Lord kepe the city, the watchman waketh but in vain. Fa. What is the third poynt of the Office and duetye of a Bishoppe or spirituall pastor? Sonne. As it is the duetye of a true spirituall and godlye Minister, to preache the worde of God, and to minister the holye Sacramentes to the people: again, to pray vnto God also for the helth and sauegard of his church: likewise is it required of him, that he lead such a life, and so godly a conuersation, that al his Parishners beholding him and his manners, may take an ensample to liue soberly, righteouslye and godlye in this present worlde. To this ende are the pastors called of oure Sauioure Christ, the light of the world. For as the lighte sheweth vnto vs howe we may safely walke and without daungers: so likewise the spirituall ministers ought so to shine with all kinde of vertues, that who so euer beholdeth the godlinesse of their life, maye knowe howe to walke in all their conuersation, and so please God. For this cause S. Paule in the description of a Bishoppe, dothe principalye and fyrste of all require, that he be irreprehensible, that is to say, such one as no man can iustlye accuse, or lay any notable crime to his charge againe: to whome it can not be worthelye laide, whan he reproueth anye sinne: Physition heale thy selfe, or as S. Paule hath: Thou beleuest, that thou thy selfe arte a guide of the blinde, a light of them which are in darknesse, an informer of them which lacke discretion, a teacher of the vnlearned, whych hast the ensample of knowledge, and of the truthe by the lawe. Thou therfore, which teachest another, teachest not thy self. Thou preachest a man should not steal, yet thou stealest. Thou that sayest, a man should not commit aduoutrye, yet thou breakest wedlocke. Thou abhorrest Images, and yet robbest God of his honor. Thou that makest thy boste of ye lawe, through breaking the lawe dishonorest God. For the name of God is euil spoken of among the gentiles thorow you.

In consideration whereof, God in the Olde lawe commaunded, that none shoulde minister vnto him, that hadde anye deformitye in his body. Whosoeuer, sayeth he, hath any blemish, shall not come neare:

Of leading a godly and vertuous lyfe.

as if he be blinde, or lame, or that hathe a bruised nose, or that hathe anye mishapen member, or is broken footed, or broken handed, or haue no heare on his eyebrowes, or haue a webbe or other blemishe in hys eye, or be maungye, or scaulde, or hathe his stones broken. &c.

What other thing ment God by this, then that such as shoulde be appoynted to the ministery, should be sound and fautlesse both in doctrin and life, hauing none imperfection nor insufficiency in them, where of they may be iustlye accused of the aduersarye. For loke what the eye is to the bodye, the same shoulde the spirituall minister be to the flocke of Christ. The lyghte of the bodye, sayeth our Sauiour Christ, is the eie. Wherefore if thine eie be single, all thy bodye shalbe full of lyghte. But and if thine eie be wicked, all thy body shalbe full of darkenesse. Wherefore if the light that is within thee, be darknesse, howe great is that self darknesse? Be vnto them þ beleue saith S. Paul, an ensample in word, in conuersation, in loue, in spirite, in faythe, in pureness. Againe, kepe thy selfe pure. Item, in all thinges shewe thy selfe an ensample of good workes in the doctrine with honestye, grauitye, and with the wholsome woorde, whiche canne not be rebuked: that he which withstandeth, maye be ashamed, hauinge no euill thing to speake of you. Saint Peter also sayeth. Feede ye Christes flocke, as muche as lieth in you, takinge the ouersyghte of them, not as compelled there to, but willingly, not for the desyre of filthye lucre, but of a good minde, not as thoughe ye were Lordes ouer the Parishes, but that ye be an ensample to the flocke. And when the chefe shepheardе shall appeare, ye shall receyue an incorruptible crowne of glorye. Againe, in settinge forthe what manner a manne a Bishoppe and ouerseer of the Lordes flocke should be, sayeth not the Apostle, that he ought to be blameless, as the stewarde of God, sober, discreate, righteous, godlye, temperate, one that loueth goodnesse, no dronckarde, no fyghter, not geuen to fylthye lucre, but abhorringe couetousnesse, and in fine, suche as no manne shall be able to reproue neither in doctrine nor life? Father. I see nowe ryghte well, that a good life is also required of God in the Minister. Sonne. To such as teache well, and liue euill, GOD speaketh on this manner by the Psalmographe: Whye doest thou preach my lawes, and takest my couenaunte in thy mouthe? Where as thou hatest to be reformed, and haste caste my woordes behinde thee. When thou sawest a theefe, thou consentedst vnto him, and haste bene partaker wyth the aduouterers. Thou hast let thy mouthe speake wickednesse, and with thy tong thou hast set forthe deceit. Thou satest and spakest againste thy brother, yea and haste slaundered thine owne mothers sonne. These thinges haste thou done, and I held my tonge, and thou thoughtest (wickedly) that I am euen such one as thy selfe: but I wil reproue thee, and set before thee, the thinges that thou haste doone. Oure Sauyoure Christe sayeth: Whosoeuer doeth and teacheth, the same shalbe called great in the kingdome of heauen. To teache well, and to liue euill, is nothynge els than to defile the doctrine that is taught, and to perswade the people, that what so euer is preached, is vaine and vntrue. True doctryne profyteth not so muche, as corrupt lyfe marreth and destroyeth.

Father. If the Preachers liue euill, and teache well: shall we therfore contempne and despise the worde of God, whiche they preache? Sonne. God forbid. Seneca sayeth: Not who speaketh, but what is spoken, se that thou marke. Although the godlinesse of the preachers life dothe wel commend & setforth the word of God, specially to the weaklinges: yet the dignity and worthinesse of the Lordes worde, consisteth not in the life of the Preacher, whether it be godlye or vngodlye. Therfore where they preach wel and liue euil, let vs folowe the counsell of oure Sauioure Christe, whyche sayeth: The Scribes and the Pharisies sit in Moses seat. All therfore what so euer they bid you obserue, that obserue and do: but do not ye after their workes: for they say and do not. Mat. xxiii.

Notable is this sayinge of S. Jhon Chrisostome: If the priestes lyue wel, sayeth he, it is their auauntage: but if they teach wel, it is youres. In Matth. cap. xxiii.

Be not curious to boult oute that whiche pertaineth to a nother man. For oftentimes good learning cõmeth forth from an euil man, as euyl earth bringeth forthe precious gold. Is precious golde despised for the vile earthe? Therfore as the golde is chosen, and the earth forsaken: so likewise take you the learning, and leaue the manners. Again he sayeth: Let vs take the doctrine, but not the manners. Herbes are not necessarye for the Bees, but the flowers are. So ye likewise, gather the floures of doctrin, and leaue their fashions of liuing. Father. God geue vs al grace to be the same in life and cõuersation, that we are in name and profession. Sonne. Amen. Father. But what sayest thou of hospitality? Doth that also pertaine vnto the office of a Bishop or spiritual pastor? Sonne. Saint Paule, as you heard, in the description of a bishop, sayeth, that he ought to be a maintainer of hospitality. Again he saith, distribute vnto the necessity of the Saintes. Be redy to harbor. Ones again he sayeth: Forget not hospitalitye. For therby haue diuers men lodged aungels vnwares. Likewise sayeth S. Peter: Be ye harberous one to a nother without grudging. God in the old law commaũded, that tithes should be paid to the Priestes, not only that they shuld haue wherof to liue them selues, but also to haue whereof they mygbte geue to the poore, and relieue the necessity of their nedy brethrẽ. By the Prophet Malachy he sayeth: Bring ye euery tithe into my barne, that there may be meate in my house. The Bishops house, the Parsonnes house, the Vicares house, the Priestes house, the Archdeacons house, the Deans house, the Prebendaries house &c. All these are Gods houses: and tithes and offeringes be brought into these houses, not for the incumbentes sake only, but also for the maintainaunce of the poore, & that the neady maye haue wherof to be relieued at their handes. The spirituall ministers are called in the Latin tongue, Pastores, that is to say, feders: not for this cause onlye that they shoulde feede them selues, but rather that they shuld feede the flocke of Christe bothe spiritually and corporally. Of hospitality. 1. Timo. iii. Titus. i. Rom. xii. Heb. xiii. 1. Peter. iii. Mala. iii.

And hereof also haue we a goodlye example, I meane of hospitalitye, and relieuing the poore in our sauiour Christ, which whan he liued

herdon earth, and preached the gospell, did not onlye feede the people with the woord of God, but also with corporal sustenance, so that he fed thē both corporallie and spiritually. This did he without dout to geue an example to all bishops and spirituall ministers, that they shoulde be careful for the people, namely for such as be in necessitye, and harbour them and relieue them in all their need, and by no meanes to suffer them to lacke anye good thinge to the vttermoste of their power. someday, that when Christ commaunded Peter, and in him all pastors to fede his flocke thrise: he went, that he shuld first feede them with the woorde of God sermonlye, with example of good life: and thirdlye, with hospitality. Of this I am sure, that both Peter and all his fellow Apostles were alwaies careful for the poore, and made prouison for them bothe by them selues and by other. And as touching that holy and blessed apostle S. Paule, howe carefull and diligent he was for the poore, it is easy to see bothe in his own wrytinges and others. What shall I speake of the honorable bishops and holy fathers which liued after the Apostles time? Their houses were alwayes open, & readye to receyue straungers, to harbour the poore, to relieue the miserable afflicted saintes of God, to comfort so many as were in necessity. &c. This to do was their glory. When their houses wer ful of poore people, than ioyed they and reioyced. Yea many of those holy bishops and godly fathers were so wholye geuen to the maintainaunce of hospitality, and relieuing the poore, that when thei had not sufficient of their owne goodes to succoure them with all, they labored with their owne handes to get more, that the poore people might lacke no good thing: as we read of S. Paule, then to receiue. Saint Jerome sayeth: Whatsoeuer the clerkes haue, (he meaneth the bishoppes and ministers of Christes churche) that is the poores, and their houses ought to be commō to al menne, and they ought to apply them selues to the receiuing of pilgrimes and straungers. And in the Popes law it is thus founde writtē: Hospitality is so necessary for bishops, that if they be foūd to be no maintainers therof, they may lawfully be deposed. In cōsideration wherof, Gregory writeth to bishop Jhon, how they did put out and depose a certaine bishop at Antioche, because of his tenacitie and niggardlinesse, and did chuse a nother in his place called Rusticus, a man not greatlye learned, notwithstandinge liberal, and a greate maintainer of hospitalitye for the poore. place: A bishop should haue a liberal hand, he should help them that be in need, and thincke other mennes necessity to be his own necessitye: if he be not thus affected and minded, he beareth the name of a bishop in vaine. Father. Hospitality is a noble vertue, semelye for all menne, but namely for bishops and spiritual pastors, whose goodes are the goods of the poore, that they may be found pastors and feders, not onlye of the soule, but also of the body, and so answer to their name.

Of the offyce of Deacons.

But what is to be saide of the Office and dutye of Deacons? Are not they also ministers in the Church of Christ? Sonne. Yes verely, and necessary ministers also, if theyr offyce wer rightly and truly executed and vsed. Father. What is Deacon in English? Sonne. A minister or seruaunt. Father. what manner a man ought he to be, that should be a Deacon? Sonne. Saynt Paule describeth him on this manner, and sayeth, that a Deacon should be the husband of one wife, and such as ruleth his childrē wel, and his own household honest, not double tonged, not geuen vnto much wine, neyther gredy of filthy lucre, but holding the mistery of the fayth wyth a pure conscience. For they that minister well, get them selues a good degree, and great liberty in the faith, which is in Christe Jesu. 1. Timo. iii.

Father. what is the office of Deacons? Sonne. If we consider and mark wel, what blessed Luke wryteth of this matter in his Chronicle of the Apostles actes, we shal sone perceiue, what their office and duety is. These are his wordes: In those daies, when the nombre of Disciples grewe, there arose a grudge among the Grekes against the Hebrues, because their widowes were despised in the dailye ministratyon. Then the xii. called the multitude of the Disciples together, and said: It is not mete that we should leaue the word of God, and serue tables. wherfore brethren loke ye out among you vii. men of honest reporte, and full of the holy Ghost and wisdome, to whome we maye commit this busynesse. But we wil geue our selues continually to prayer, and to the ministration of the word. And the saying pleased the whole multitude. And they did chuse Steuen. &c. The offyce of a deacon. Act. vi.

Here is it euident to be sene, that Deacons in the primatiue and Apostolike church, were chosen to this end, that they should dailye serue at the table in the ministery of corporal fode, that the Apostles myghte not be hindered from the ministery of the word. Those Deacons were the Amners and distributoures of suche thinges, as were geuen of the faithful in their Ecclesiastical assembly or otherwise, for the behoue, ble commodity and profit of the poore people, of pilgrims and straungers, of widowes and fatherlesse children. The true office therfore of a Deacon, is to minister vnto the necessity of the saincts, thinges necessarye for their corporal sustenaunce, whether they be goodes freely and willingly offered of the congregation for that purpose, or whether they be thinges otherwise by their wisdome procured vnto that end. We read also, that the Deacons did preach the Gospel, as we may se in thactes of the Apostles of Steuen and Philip: which thing, I thincke, they began first to practise by the authority and appoyntment of the Apostles, after that the Communion of thinges began to cease at Jerusalem, and the Christians were dispersed into diuers countries. Of this may we gather, that although the chefe and principall office of a Deacon be to prouide for the poore, and to minister vnto their necessities: yet maye they also, if they be godly learned, be admitted of the rulers of Christes Act. vi, & viii.

church vnto the ministery of the word. Moreouer in the Ecclesiastical wryters we read, that Deacons afterward were admitted not onlye to preach the word, but also to minister the Sacramentes, and to doo all thinges what so euer the Bishop or pastor did in the Ecclesiasticall ministery: which seemeth vnto me to be a confusion of the orders, and farre to dissent from the fyrste institution. In the churche of the Pope, the name of a Deacon remaineth still: but the office of a Deacon, as it was vsed in the Apostles time, is vtterly abolished. They are now appoynted, as their cheefe office, daily to saye Mattens of the daye, and to sing the gospel at Masse, and to stande neareste to the priest. Here is all their solemne busines, that they haue to do: one thing excepted, whych is to singe, Ita missa est, on principall feastes, when hie Masse is done. As touching the poze and the prouision for them, the Popish Deacons do not so much as once dreame of the matter: so farre are they fallen away from the true office of a Deacon. And would God, that euen in the reformed churches, whiche haue forsaken the wicked doctrine of the Bishop of Rome, the office of a Deacon were restored vnto the ryghte vse, that our churches might go right vp, and not halt in any condition. Then should the state of the poze be in much better case, then it is at this present. Father. We haue now talked of the cheefe and principal offices of such as bear rule in the Christen common weale. Let vs now heare the duties and offices of the inferiour degrees. And fyrst of al, the duty of subiectes towarde their superioures, namelye the tempozall Magistrates. Sonne. Agreed.

The office of a Deacon in the Popes church.

Of the office and duety of Subiectes.

Father. What is the dutye of subiectes towarde their superioures? Sonne. It consisteth principally in fiue poyntes. The fyrste is, that they euen from the very harte loue and reuerence the ciuill Magistrates as the ministers and vicares of God: whom God him self doth vouchsafe to adourne and garnish with his own name, saying: Ye are Goddes. Father. Nut be the duety of subiects not only wyth outward gesture and wozdes to loue, reuerence and honoz the hier powers, but also with a true and inward affection of the hearte, then maye they not hate them, and vnwoorthely speake of them. Sonne. You say truthe. For God sayeth by Moses: Thou shalt not raile vpon the Goddes (that is to say, the tempozal magistrates, which execute the office of God) neither blaspheme the ruler of thy people. And the wiseman saith: Wythe the king no euil in thy thought, and speake no hurte of the riche in thy priuy chamber: foz a bird of the aire shall betraye thy voyce, and wyth her fethers shall she bewray thy wozdes. When the people of Israel began to hate Moses, and vnreuerently to speake of him being appoynted of God to be their Magistrate: Moses answered and sayde vnto them: Your murmuringes are not against vs, but against the Lorde. For what are we that ye haue murmured against vs? And God sayde to Samuel, when the people desired a kinge, and woulde haue him no moze to be their Magistrate: They haue not cast thee awaye, but me: that I should not raigne ouer them. What so euer displeasure is done against against the Magistrate, whether it be in thought, worde or dede: that same is done against God, and it shall not escape unplaged, as Salomon sayeth: The king ought to be feared as the roring of a Lion: who so provoketh him unto anger, offendeth against his owne soule. Lykewise sayeth S. Paule. Let every soule submit him selfe unto the authority of the higher powers. For there is no power, but of God. The powers that be, are ordained of God. Wholsoever therfore resisteth power, resysteth the ordinaunce of God. And they that resist, shall receive to them selfe dampnation. Againe, he (the Magistrate) beareth not the sweard in vain. For he is the minister of God, to take vengance on him that doth evil. Prouer. xx. Rom. xiii.

Secondly, the duety and office of Subiectes is, not onlye with the very hearte to love and reverence the civill Magistrates, but also fervently and hartely to praye for them, that God maye be present with them, assist them, defend them, rule and governe all their councels, studies, devises, enterprises, affaires &c. unto the glorye of his name, and unto the tranquillity and quietnesse of the Christen publique weale. Prayer for the Magistrates.

Father. Where are we taught to pray for the Magistrates? Sonne. S. Paule sayeth: I exhort that aboue all thinges, prayers, supplications, intercessyons, and geving of thankes be had for al men: for kings and for all that be in authoritye, that we maye live a quiet and a peaceable life with all godlinesse and honestye. For that is good and accepted in the sight of God our sautour. And Jeremy the Prophet commaunded the Jewes that were led away captive unto Babilon under king Nabuchodonozor, that they shuld pray for the Citye (he meaneth the Magistrates, and all the inhabitauntes therof) wherin they were prisonners. Seke, saith he, after peace and prosperitye of the citye, wherin ye be prisonners, and pray unto the Lord for it. For in the peace therof shal your peace be. Baruch the Prophet also sayeth: Pray for the prosperity of Nabuchodonozor king of Babilon, and for the welfare of Balthasar his sonne: that their daies may be upon earthe, as the daies of heauen, that God also may geve us strength, and lighten our eies, that we may live under the defence of Nabuchodonozor kinge of Babilon, and under the protection of Balthazar his sonne, that we maye long do them service, and finde favor in their sight. And in Esdras we read thus: let them offer swete savours unto the God of heauen, and pray for the kinges life, and for his children. 1. Tim. ii. Jere. xxix. Baruch. i. 1. Esd. vi.

Thirdly, it is required of all faythful subiectes, that they do not only love and reverence their Magistrates, and praye for them, but also that they humbly obey them, yea & that not for fear of punishment, but for conscience sake. For as god hath appoynted the magistrate to rule so hath he commaunded to obey. This commaundement of God maye by no meanes be disobeyed. For to disobey the Magistrate, is none other thing than to disobey God, whose minister the Magistrate is, and whose office he executeth. Father. Where is obedience in the holy scriptures required of subiectes towarde their superioures? Sonne. Are not these the wordes of blessed S. Paule? Let every soule submit him selfe to the hier powers. For there is no power but of God. The powers that be, are ordained of God. Wholsoever therfore resisteth the power, resysteth Obedience toward the magistrate. Rom. xiii.

resisteth thordinaunce of God. But they that resist, shal receiue to them selues damnation &c. Again, ye must obey not only for feare of punyshment, but also for conscience sake. Also in a nother place: We arm the subiects, that they submitte them selues to rule and power: that they obey the officers, that they be ready vnto euery good worke, that they speake euil of no man, that they be no fighters, but gentle, shewing meekenesse vnto all men. Likewise sayeth S. Peter: submit your self vnto al manner ordinance of man for the Lordes sake, whether it be to the kynge, as vnto the chief heade, other vnto rulers, as vnto them that are sente of him for the punishment of euill doers, but for the praise of them that do wel. Father. If this obedience were thorowly grafted in the hartes of subiectes, al murmuringes, tumultes, commotions, seditions, insurrections &c. shuld sone cease in the common weale. Sonne. They should sone cease: for they should neuer be attempted. But whosoeuer thorowe the motion of the deuil, enterprise such things against the magistrates they alway come vnto a miserable ende: so farre is it of, that they haue good successe in their wicked and dampnable attemptes, as histories of all ages do euidently declare. To what end Dathan and Abyron, Zambrye and Baasa with suche other like came, it is well knowen to them that rede the holy histories. The wise manne geueth a good lesson and sayeth: Feare the king, and kepe no company with seditious persones. All subiectes ought to be so affected toward their rulers, as the people of Israel were toward Iosua, whan they said: Al that thou haste commaũded vs, we wil do, & whether so euer thou sendest vs, we wil go. And whosoeuer he be that doth disobey thy mouth, and will not harken vnto thy wordes in al that thou commaundest him, let him die. Only be strong and of good courage. Father. But what, if the Magistrates commaund such statutes, actes, decrees, and proclamations to be obserued of their subiectes, as be contrary to the lawes and commaundementes of God? Shall the subiectes obey the hier powers in this behalfe also? Sonne. Nothinge les. Here we owe them no obedience. We muste saye wyth thapostles: Whether it be right in the sighte of God to heare you rather than God, iudge ye. We muste obey God more than men. But of this matter we haue tofore sufficiently spoken, whan we entreated of the fift commaundement. Father. Well remembred my sonne. Go forth therfore to declare, whatsoeuer remaineth of the duety of subiectes toward their superiours. Sonne. Fourthly, the office of subiectes is, willingly and without grudging to beare such burdens, and to paye suche charges, as the Magistrates shall reasonably require of them, either for the prouision and maintenance of their Princelike estate, or els for the sauegard of the common weale. Father. Where is that commaũded in the word of God? Sonne. Our sauiour Christe sayeth: Geue vnto Cesar, that is due vnto Cesar. And S. Paule sayeth: Geue to euerye man his duety: tribute to whome tribute belongeth: custome to whome custome is due: feare to whome feare belongeth: honoure to whome honour pertaineth. Hereof we haue also in the holye scriptures diuers examples, which teache, that subiectes oughte not to denye the magistrates such tributes, customes, tolles, tenthes, rentes, subsidies &c. as the

the head rulers reasonably and iustly require of them, vrgent and necessary cause prouokinge them therunto. In the newe Testament we rede ỳ Joseph & Mary his espoused wife wēt into their own city to be tared at the commaundement of Augustus the Emperour. Our Sauiour Christ paid tribute bothe for him selfe and for his disciples to the officers of the Emperour. Father. May the magistrate take awaye the subiectes goodes at his pleasure? Sonne. Nothinge les. For there is a propriety of goodes and possessions as wel in the subiect as in the magistrate: so that if the magistrate do vniustly take awaye his subiectes goodes, he is a tiraunt, and shall not escape the terrible indignation & fierse plages of God, as we may see in the history of kinge Achab and Naboth the Israelite, whose vineyard the king wrōgfully toke away, and therfore both he and all his posterity were moste greuously punyshed. Sainte Paule sayeth, that the magistrate is the minister of God ordained for oure wealthe, and not for oure destruction, for the maintenaunce of our goodes, and not for the vniust taking away of them. For this is to play the tiraunt, and not to do the part of Gods minister. It was wittely and wisely said of a certain Emperour: It is the propriety of a good shepheard to sheare, and not to deuour the shepe. The hier powers are called in the word of God, shepheardes and not Wolues. The propriety of a good shepheard is, to take that only from the shepe, which they may well forbeare, yea and that without anye domage or hurt to them selues, as the woll and milke in time of the yere. But the nature of a Wolfe is, without any respect to rent, to tear, to destroy, to kil, to murder, to deuoure and to swalowe vp, whatsoeuer commeth to hand. The rulers that are so disposed, are called of the prophet, wicked and companions of theues: Yea they are termed in Gods boke, rauening wolues, and roring Lions. But a godly Magistrate shall not abuse his authority and power, whiche he hathe receiued of God for the wealth of his subiectes. He shall require of his people iust tributes and iust exactions, euen such as necessitye rather than riot shall axe, and aboue all thinges beware, that they do not wast and consume his subiectes goodes with vnmeasurable, and vnreasonable exactions and pollages. He may not rule ouer his people, as thoughe they were brute beastes or bonde slaues, as the Turkes and barbarous Princes doo, which know not the gospel, but as their brethren in Christ, and fellowe enheritours of euerlasting life. Father. Remaineth there any thinge of the duety of subiectes toward their rulers? Sonne. Fiftly and finallye, it is required of the subiectes, that they do not blase nor publish abrode but rather conceale and hide the faultes, ouersightes and negligences of the magistrates: seing that charity couereth the multitude of sinnes For it is not almost possible, but that in so great waighte & multitude of matters, the magistrate shal somtime omit and let passe that, which of necessity he ought to haue done, or sometime do that, which had ben better to haue bene left vndone. For who almoste in his owne priuate causes do not many times ouershote him self? What maruel is it then, though he, which is a ruler ouer an whole city, yea ouer an whole cōtry or kingdome, do sometime erre, faile or do amisse in some thynges? The duetye therfore of al faithfull subiectes is, to enterprete al the doinges tinges of the prince vnto the beste, forasmuche as they knowe, that the heart of euery magistrate is in the hand of God, and he turneth it whether so euer he will. And this is it, that God sayeth by Moses: Thou shalt not raile vppon the Goddes, neither blaspheme the ruler of thy people. Father. If the subiectes did diligently consider with thē selues, what benefites and commodities they haue by the temporall Magistrates, they would not only take in good part al the doinges of theyr rulers, but also geue god most humble thankes for them. For by them is publique innocency, honest behauyoure, godly learninge, vertuous knowledge, sincere erudition, necessarye artes, frutefull occupations, maintained. By them we liue in tranquilitye and peace. By them we enioy our own possessions without any disturbaunce. By them we are preserued from all iniuries and cruel oppressions. By thē our realmes are defended from the inuasion of bloudy tirauntes. By them the glory of God florisheth. By them the gospel of Christ triumpheth, and all sectes and heresies are extirped and plucked vp by the rotes. To conclude, by them all good thinges chaunce to vs, and al euill thinges are remoued from vs. Sonne. Fire and water are not more necessary vnto the conseruation of this our mortal life, then the office of a Magistrate is for the preseruation and maintenaunce of good order in a Common weale. Father. It is true my sonne: and God make vs thankefull for this his benefite. Sonne. Amen. Father. Nowe that thou haste opened vnto me the office and duetye of subiectes towarde the ciuill Magistrates: my desire is, that thou likewise declare, what the dutye of such as be hearers of Gods worde towarde their Bishops and other spirituall pastoures, which go about no les diligently to defend the soules of their parishners from the tiranny of the deuil, the worlde and the flesh with their sweard, which is the sworde of the spirit, I meane the worde of God, and to preserue and kepe them in the fauor of God, than the tēporal magistrates with their corporal sweard, study to kepe their liues bodies and goods safe and free from al daunger & disturbance. Of the duetye of Parishners towarde theyr Pastours and ministers.

Spirituall pastors are to be honored and reuerenced.

PArishners owe vnto their pastoures by the worde of God foure thinges. Father. Which are they? Sonne. The first is outward honour and reuerence. Father. Whye so? Sonne. For they are the angels, ambassadors and mynysters of Christ. They are also the dispensatoures of the misteryes of God. They watche and take care for the saluatyon of our soules. They shew vnto vs the way of truthe. They comforte the weake. They confirme the strong. They stablish and make strong the wauering and doubtful. They make the blinde to see, and the halte to go right vp. They set the prisonners at libertye. They bringe ioye and quietnesse to troubled consciences. They driue away Satan wyth his suttle suggestions. They plant the faith of Christ in vs. They fede our soules with the heauenly fode of Christes Gospel. They by their prayers asswage the wrath of God kindled against vs thorowe synne. In sine, they by their ministerye bringe vnto vs a sea of good thinges: so that without them we can none otherwise but perishe and fall from the way of saluation, as Salomon saith: When the preaching of gods word faile, the people perish and run cleane out of order. Who honoreth not the ambassadour of an earthly Prince, and haue him in greate reuerence? And shall we leaue them without honoure, whiche are the ambassadours of him, which is king of kinges and Lord of Lordes? we esteme him greatly, that bringeth vnto vs good & ioyfull newes concerning our body and this present life: and shall we not think him worthye of muche more estimation, whiche bringeth vnto vs blessed and heauenly newes concerning the saluation of oure soules and lyfe euerlasting? as the Prophet sayeth: O how beautifull are the feete of them, which bring tidinges of peace, & bring tidyngs of good things. Saint Paule writeth, that the Galathians for the woordes sake, which he preached vnto them, receiued him as an angell of God, yea as Christ Iesus him selfe. Pro. xxix. Esa. lii. Rom. x Gala. iiii

He addeth moreouer, that they loued him so derely, that to pleasure him, they could haue bene contented to digge out their owne eies, and to geue them vnto him. In what great estimation all good and godly men in times past had the Prophets, Apostles, & Preachers of Gods word, the histories declare manifestly. Certesse they that do dishonor the ministers of Christ, dishonour Christ him selfe, as Christ testifyeth, sayinge: He that despiseth you, despiseth me, and he that despiseth me, despiseth him that sent me. Father. What honour and reuerence is it, that we owe vnto the ministers of Gods worde? Sonne. Honourablye and reuerently bothe to thinke and to speake of them, namelye for the ministery sake, whiche they vse at the appoyntmente of God: to attribute vnto them the opinion of wisdom and learning: to be perswaded that as they are garnished with diuers giftes of the spirite far passing the common sort of men, so likewise they are preserued, kept and defended of God: to geue them outward honour and reuerence wyth oure body, as to put of our caps, to bow the knee vnto them, to geue them the vpper hand in all places, to geue them audience, when they speke &c. Father. Proue by the word of God, that we owe this honour & reuerence to the ministers of Christes gospell. Sonne. The wise manne sayeth: Fear the Lord withal thy soule, and honoure his ministers. Loue thy maker withal thy strengthe, and forsake not his ministers. Honor God withall thy soule, and reuerence his priestes. Geue them their portion of the first frutes and encrease of thearth, like as it is cõmaunded thee. S. Paule sayeth: The priestes or elders that rule wel are worthy of double honor, most specially they, whith laboure in the word and teaching. Againe, we beseche you brethren, that ye knowe them, which labor amonge you, and haue the ouersighte of you in the Lord, and geue you exhortation, that ye haue them in hie reputatyon throughe loue for their workes sake, and be at peace with them. Also in a nother place: Let a man this wise esteme vs, euen as the ministers of Christe, and stewardes of the misteries of God. Item, he that despiseth (the minister of Gods word) despiseth not man, but God. And our sauior Christ himselfe saithe: He that receiueth you, receiueth me, and he that receiueth me, receiueth him that sente me. But he that Luc. x. Plentifully and liberally to geue vnto them, whatsoeuer is necessary for the maintenance of them and of theirs, and of their degre and estate, that they may quietly, and without any disturbance or thought taking for worldlye thinges, geue their mindes to the study of godly letters, to prayer, to the preaching of Gods word, and to the ministration of the holye Sacraments. And this ought to be the study and care of Princes, to prouide and aforesee, that the Pastours of Christes church be not neglected or forsaken, but that prouision be made for them in all thinges that concerne their bodely sustenaunce and liuing, either of the common treasury, or els of priuate collections, or of tenthes, or els of their owne liberality according to this sayinge of the Prophet: Kinges shall be thy

Rom. xiii. hath appoynted the subiects to pay to the temporal magistrate tribute, tol, custome &c. that he may the more frely attend vpon his office, and see to the common weal: so likewise hath he ordained, that they which preach the gospel, should liue of the gospel. Do ye not know, how that they, which minister about holy things, liue of the sacrifice? & how that they which stand at thaltare, are partakers of thaltare? Euen so also did the lord ordain, that they which preach the gospel, should liue of the gospell. Father. Rehers the third part of thoffice & duety, which the parishners are are bound by the commaundement of God to doo vnto their pastors.

Sonne. Their duety is not only to reuerence & honor the ministers of gods word, & to make sufficient prouision for their liuing, but also to obey them. Father. What meanest thou by that? Sonne. Not to winse, kick & spurn against their sayinges, although sometime they seme to reproue them sharply for their misbehauor, but to suffer them selues to be admonished & warned of them, & to be called again home to the shepefold, yea & also to obey them & to folow their most wholsom admonitions & precepts, forasmuch as they know, that their pastors & prechers are appointed of God to attend vpon the health of their soules, as they which shal rendre an accompt at the great day of iudgemēt to the high shepherd Christ for the state of them al: again, what so euer wholsome doctrin they teach them out of the word of God, gladlye to receiue it, & humbly to obey it, and most diligently to practise it in their life and conuersation. Father. Where are we commaunded to obey the spiritual pastors? Sonne. S. Paul sayth: Obey them that haue thouersight of you, and submit your selues vnto them: for they watch for your soules, euen as they that must geue accompts, that they may doo it with ioye, and not with greefe. And in thold law we rede thus: That man that will do presumpteously, and wil not harken and obey the commaundement of the priest, which standeth before the lord thy god to minister, that man shal die, & thou shalt put away euil from Israel. And al the people shal heare, that they may fear, and do no more presumpteously. Father. But what if the minister commaund thinges contrary to the word of God: shal we also obey them in this behalf? Sonne. Nothing les. So long as they sit in the chair of Moses, that is to say, so longe as they teache the word of god purely, truelye, sincerelye, and without the mingling of mans doctrin, they are to be harde & obeyed as the angels & ambassadors of God: but if they ones sit in the chair of pestilence, that is, if they teach mennes traditions, straunge doctrine not contained in the holye Bible, but forged of their owne idle braines, or deuised by other without the authority of Gods worde, they are by no meanes to be obeyed, but to be abhorred as extreme enemies of our soules health, according to this saying of S. Paul: If we our selues or an angel frō heauē preach anye other gospell vnto you, then that whiche we haue preached vnto you, let him be accursed. And as S. Jhon saith: If there come any vnto you, and bring not this learning: him receiue not to house, neither byd him God spede. For he that biddeth him God spede, is partaker of all his euill dedes. But of this matter we haue tofore sufficientlye spoken in the declaration of the fifte commaundemente. No doctrine, no commaundement is to be obeyed, that fyghteth with the worde of God. Father. Well said. Therfore let me now heare the last parte of the duety of Parishners towarde their pastoures and preachers. Sonne. For as muche as we be all menne, and no manne liueth without faulte: it is required of the Parishners, that if the Ministers do at anye time offend, or commit that thing, which is vnsemely for their degree, and vnworthy their estate, ether in word or dede, they do not publish & declare the same abrode to their infamye and shame, & to the dishonor of their ministery, but rather that they for the wordes sake, which they preach do beare with them, dissemble the matter, conceale and hide the faults accoꝛding to thoꝛder of charity, which couereth ỹ multitude of sinnes. And in this behalf let them folow the godly example of the most godly Emperour Constantine the great, whose gentle behauiour in couering the vices and faultes of Ecclesiastical parsons, is meruelous & almost to be wondred at. Amõg al other, this his saying is notable, which we rede in Chꝛonicles: Certes, saith he, I owe such reuerence & honoꝛ to ỹ ministery of Gods woꝛd, which ye pꝛofes, and to you (ye bishops and pꝛiests) foꝛ the woꝛdes sake, that if I saw any of your oꝛder sin with a woman, I wold couer him with my mantel: because men should haue none occasyon to speake euill of your religion foꝛ any vnsemelines cõmitted on your behalf. Let thẽ also folow god the father, if they wil be his childꝛen, which doth not straightwais, whẽ we haue offended him publish & punish vs & our sinnes, but he rather dissembleth and cloketh them, pacientlỹ abiding our conuersion & amendment. As we wold ỹ God shuld deale with vs: so likewise ought we to deale one with a nother. Euery one of vs ought to be to other not a Wolf, but a God. Bꝛethꝛen, sayeth S. Paul, if a man be taken in any fault, ye which are spiritual, help to amend him in the spirit of meknes: considering thy selfe, least thou also be tẽpted. Bear ye one a nothers burthen, and so fulfil ỹ law of Christ. Foꝛ if any man seme to him selfe, that he is somewhat, when in dede he is nothing: the same deceiueth his owne minde. Let euery man pꝛoue his own woꝛke, & then shal he haue reioysing, only in his selfe, and not in another. Foꝛ euery man shal bear his own burthen. If they pastoꝛs teach the woꝛd of god purely and faithfully: & otherwise do their office wel: though they somtime thoꝛow the frailty of mannes nature do amisse and offend, yet ought the Parishners quietly to bear with them, to speake the best of them, louingly and charitably to admonish them seuerely, to pray foꝛ them, and to do all thinges that may maintaine their good name, yea and that foꝛ the gloꝛy of the ministery of the Gospel, which they pꝛofesse. Aboue all thinges, sayeth S. Peter, haue loue amonge your selues. Foꝛ loue shall couer the multytude of synnes. Father. Although, my sonne I doo not discommend thy iudgement, concerning the hiding of the ministers faultes (foꝛ all of vs offend in many thinges) yet I would wishe, that al bishoppes and pꝛeachers should so oꝛder their life accoꝛdinge to their Doctrine, that they might not only be the salt of the earth, but also the light of the woꝛld, that god may be gloꝛified both by their doctrine and conseruation. Sonne. It is greatly to be wished. Foꝛ, as oure Sauioure Christ sayeth, whosoeuer doth and teacheth, the same shalbe called great in the kingdom of heauen. Notwithstanding better is it foꝛ the christen people to haue a true & faithful teacher of Gods woꝛd, with a life not altogether faultlesse & pure: than to haue an hipocrite outwardly glistering with the bilar of holines, and the same to be a sowꝛer of wicked doctrin, & a coꝛruptoꝛ of mens soules. Foꝛ as Chꝛisostome sayeth: If the pꝛiestes liue well, it is their auauntage: but if they teach well, it is the peoples pꝛofit. Father. Let vs go foꝛth with the offices of other degrees. What followeth? Son The nexte in oꝛder that followeth to be entreated of, is the duetye of husbands vnto their wiues. Father. What sayest thou of that matter?

Let me heare now the office of a maried man.

Of the duetye of husbandes toward theyr wyues.

SOnne. Foure thinges are necessarily required of euery true & godly christen maried man, if he wil do the duety of a faythful husband toward his wife. Father. Which are they? Sonne. The first is, that he loue his wife. Father. Howe should he loue her? Sonne. Euen as him self, and as Christ loued his congregation. Father. Where findest thou that? Sonne. Sainte Paule sayeth: Ye husbandes loue your wiues, euen as Christ also loued the congregation, and gaue him self for it to sanctify it, and cleansed it in the fountaine of water through the word, to make it vnto him self a glorious congregation without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blame. So oughte men to loue their wiues as theyr owne bodies. He that loueth his wife, loueth him self. For no man euer yet hated his owne flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, euen as the Lord doth the congregation. Again, he sayth: Ye husbands, loue your wiues, and be not bitter to them. Father. Wherfore shuld the husbande loue his wife? Sonne. First, because god hath so commaunded, as we to fore heard: whose commaundement to disobey, is more thā double wickednes. The husband in louing his wife according to the wil of God, doth with his obedience greatly auaunce the glory of God, and the honour of his holy name: and it is also a testimony to his own conscience, that God was the author of his mariage, and that he liuinge quietlye with his wife in that state, pleaseth God.

The duety of an husband is to loue hys wyfe. Ephe. v.

Colos. iii.

Certen causes why the husbande oughte to loue hys wyfe.

Secondly, the husband ought to loue his wife, because his mariage, which he hath made with his wife in the feare of God, is an holy mistery of that spiritual mariage and true loue, whiche Christe the Sonne hath made with euery true faithful soule, as he sayeth by the Prophet: I wil marry thee vnto me in faith. For as a faithful husband brenneth with true and vnfained loue toward his dere wife: so likewyse is the loue of Christ toward his holy congregation, moste feruent and brenning: in so much that we are now become members of his body, of hys flesh, and of his bones: which thing he hath most manifestlye declared by taking mannes nature vpon him.

Ose. ii.

Ephe. v.

Thirdly, the maried man ought to loue his wife, not for the satisfying of his carnal pleasure, not for nobility of parentage, not for beauty nor for properne of personage, nor yet for richesse &c. (for suche loue is betwene ruffians and harlots) but because she is his sister in the christen faith, and enheritour with him of Gods most glorious kingdom: Again, because she is geuen him of God to be an helper vnto him, and a faithful yokefellow as well in aduersity as in prosperity: Moreouer he shal loue her, because she is flesh of his flesh, and bone of hys bones: and in fine, because she is endued thorow the spirit of God, with noble and godly vertues, as shamefastnesse, chastity, modesty, sobriety, diligence, sadnesse, pacience, temperance, silence, obedience, and such other ghostly vertues. All these thinges diligently considered, shall easly prouoke a true christen maried man, derely and hartely to loue his wife, although she be neuer so poore and base in beautye.

Gene. iii. Matth. xix. Ephe. v.

Father. Must the loue of a maried man toward his wife, excel his loue toward al other persons? Sonne. Yea verely. For we rede, that so sone as God at the beginning, had brought the woman vnto Adã: he brast out into these wordes and saide: This is nowe bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh. She shalbe called woman, because she was take out of man. For this cause shal a man leaue his father and his mother, & shalbe ioyned with his wife, and they shall become one flesshe. Father. How long ought this loue to continue betwene man and wife? Sonne. So long as they liue together, as Christe sayeth. Let not man putte a sonder, that which God hath coupled together. The woman, sayeth S. Paule, which is in subiection to a man, is bound by the law to the mã as long as he liueth. But if the man be dead, she is losed from the law of the man &c. So likewise may it be said of the man. So long as god blesseth the man and wife together with life, ought vnfained loue to remain betwene them, yea, and if it be possible, dailye to encrease more and more: so farre is it of, that it ought in any poynt to be diminished. Father. What is required more of a maried man? Sonne. That he so dearly loue his wife, that he do not only not touch any other woman, but also that he refrain bothe his eies and the thoughtes of his hearte from coueting any straunge flesh. Father. Where is that commaũded? Sonne. Yea rather where is it not commaunded? Is not this the commaundement of God? Thou shalt not couet thy neighboures wife. Father. Is it not inough, if I do abstain from the act of grosse whoredome, except I also kepe my hart pure from filthye and vnclene thoughtes? Sonne. Christ sayeth: Whosoeuer loketh on another mans wyfe to lust after her, hathe committed aduoutrye with her al readye in hys heart. Father. Must I also kepe mine eies pure and chast, and refraine them also from lasciuious and wanton sightes? Sonne. That is our duty. Father. But it is hard so to do. Sonne. I graunte. In oure power it lieth not so to do. We must therfore pray vnto God with the Psalmographe for the clennes of the heart, and say: Make me a cleane hart (O God) and renue a right spirit within me. And for the stablenesse of the eies pray must we on this manner with the Psalmograph also: O turn away mine eies, least they behold vanitye: and quicken thou me in thy way. It shal also profit vs greatly to consider alway in our mind these sentences of the holy scripture. Apply not thy self to the deceitfulnes of a woman. For the lippes of an harlot, are a dropping hony combe, and her throte is more glistring then oyle. But at the last she is as bitter as wormwod, & her tõg as sharp as a two edged sword. Her fete go down vnto death, and her steppes pearse thorow hel. &c. Kepe thy way farre from her, and came not nie the dores of her house &c. Be glad with the wife of thy youth. Louing is the Hind, and frendly is the Roe. Let her breastes alwayes satisfy thee, and hold thee euer contẽt with her loue. My sonne, why wilt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and embrace the bosome of a nother woman? For euery mannes wayes are open in the sight of God, and he pondereth all their goinges. The wickednesse of the vngodly shal catch him self, and with the snares of his own sinnes shall he be trapped &c. Kepe thee from the euill woman, and from the flattering tonge of the harlot, that thou luste not after her beautye in thy heart, and least thou be taken with her fair lokes. An harlotte wyl make a man to begge his bread, but an honest maried wife will hunte for the precious life. May a man cary fire in his bosome, & his clothes not be brent? Or can one go vpon whote coles, and his fete not be hurt? Euen so whosoeuer goeth into his neighbors wife, and toucheth her, can not be vngilty. Therfore let not thine heart wander in the waies of an whore, & be not thou deceiued in her pathes. For many one hathe she wounded and cast downe: yea many a strong man hath bene slaine by the meanes of her. Her houses are the way vnto hel, and bring men downe into the chambers of death. Old Toby saide to his sonne: My sonne kepe thee well from whordome: and beside thy wife, see that no faute be knowen of thee. Iob also sayeth: I made a couenaunte wyth mine eies, that I would not loke vpon a damsel. For how great a portion shal I haue of God, and what enheritaunce from the almighty on hie? As for the vngodly, and he that ioyneth him self to the company of wicked doers, shall not destruction and misery come vpon him? Saint Paul sayeth: If any that is called a brother (that is to say, a christian) be an whoremonger, se that ye eat not with him. Fle fornicatyon, for neither fornicatours, nether aduouterers, neither weaklinges, nether abusers of them selues with mankinde, shall enherite the kingdome of God. Again he sayeth. Wedlocke is honorable among al parsons, and the bed vndefiled. But whoremongers and adulterers God shal iudge.

Heb. xiii.

Moreouer it shal not be vnfitting nor out of the way to cõsider how greuously God in al ages hath punished whoredome. For whoredome the whole world almost was drowned with waters. For whoredome Sodome and Gomorre with certain other cities, were cõsumed with fire and brimstone from heauen. For whoredome all the Citezens of Sichem were slaine with sweard. For whordome there were slaine in the wildernesse on one day xxiii. M. of the Israelites. For whoredome the whole tribe of Beniamin was almoost slaine and destroyed. For whordome the sonnes of Hely the priest, perished in battel. For whordome Dauid and his whole kingdõ fel into great miseries. For whordome Salomon fel into Idolatry, and into other greuous sinnes.

Not only the holy scriptures, but also humain histories do set for the vnto vs many and horrible examples of Gods wrath, and fierse vengaunce againste whoremongers and adulterers: which oughte at all times to be remembred, but specially whan the Deuil and the flesh moue and tempt vs vnto the vnclennesse of the body. The consideration of these thinges shall easly driue away Satan and his suttle suggestions with that pestiferous Moremaid the flesh, and al her deceytful pleasures, and cause the godlye maried man to reaste in the loue of his wife, all straunge women vtterlye refused. Father. How adultery and whordome with all other vnclennes of the body may be auoided, thou declaredst very godly in the exposition of the vii. commaundement. Therfore go forth, and let me heare more of the duety of a maried man toward his wife. Sonne. Thirdly, it is required of euery godly maried man, that he make prouisyon for his wife, children and familye, that they lacke nothing that is necessary for their liuinge, but that he minyster vnto them all good thinges. For if any man be negligente in thys behalfe, the husbãde is bound to make prouision for his wife and family.

example of Christ, ought the husband to prouide all good and necessary to do vnto his wife, and to suffer her to lacke no good thing. Item, the husband and the wife, are one flesh and one body: the husband therfore

1. Timo. v. oughte to make no les prouision for his wife then for him selfe. To be short, this sentence of S. Paule shal for euer and euer abide true, yea and that vnto the condempnation of all sluggishe and negligente husbandes and such like: If any man do not prouide for such as belong vn to him, he hath denied the faith, and is worse then an infidel. How care ful husbandes ought to be for their wiues and children, the examples of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Dauid, Toby, and such like do sufficientlye declare. Therfore whosoeuer entendeth to mary in the fear of God, he ought first of all to consider, if he haue wherof to nourish his wife, and to bring vp his children. If he haue not, let him abstaine from mary-age, til he haue learned some honest and vertuous occupation, wherby he shalbe able to fede both him selfe and his. They that are otherwyse minded,

minded, fal for the moste part after their marriage vnto beggerye, and from beggery vnto stealing, and from stealing to hanging. And in the meane season they geue an occasion to their wiues to geue thē selues to vnclennes of life, and to play the whores, not knowinge otherwise how to liue for lacke of prouision. Better had it bene for such husbands to haue had a milstone tied about their neckes, and to be cast into the middes of the sea, than so losely to marry, and afterward to be the authours of so many, and so grieuous euils. Father. Is it the duety of an husband only to prouide for his wife thinges necessary for the bodye?

Sonne. Not only. His duetye is also to prouide thinges necessarye for her soules health, as right institution in the misteries of Christes religion, knowledge of Gods holy word, the true vnderstandinge of the holy Sacramentes, and all other thinges that be necessarye for the saluation of her soule. Father. How prouest thou, that the man is thus bound to teach his wife the waye of truthe, and to enfourme her from time to time in al such matters as appertain vnto saluation, and vnto euerlasting life?

Husbandes ought to prouide for the sauegard of their wiues both bodye and soule.

Sonne. Saint Paule hath these wordes: Let your women kepe silence in the congregations. For it is not permitted vnto them to speake, but to be vnderobedience, as the lawe sayeth. If they wil learne anye thinge, let them aske their husbandes at home. For it is a shame for women to speak in the congregation. Again, let the woman learne in silence with all subiection. Here is it euident, that if the wife lacke knowledge in spiritual and heauenly thinges, she ought to aske her husband, and to learne of him. If the wife be bound to learn of her husband, than is the husband bound to teach his wife, and to enfourme her with the knowledge of Gods misteries. Is not the vnbeleuynge wife many times sanctified by the beleeuing husbande? Howe knowest thou, O man, (sayeth S. Paule) whether thou shalt saue thy wife or no? How can the faithful man saue his vnfaithfull wife, but by teachinge her the word of saluation? The man is bound to loue his wife, as christ loued the congregation. Christ loueth his congregation, that when he was here corporally on earth, he him selfe taughte it, and nowe that he is gon from vs concerning his bodely presence, he sendeth vnto the faithful his holy spirit, to instruct and to teach them, and to lead them into the way of truth, as he sayeth by the Prophet: I will poure oute of my spirit vpon al flesh: and your sonnes and your doughters shal prophesye. Again he sayeth: That comforter, that holy spirite, whome the father shall send in my name, he shal teach you al thinges, and lead you into al truth. After the example of Christ ought the husband to instruct his wife, and to seeke all meanes possible to bringe her vnto the truth. Again, the man is bound to loue his wife, as him selfe. Is there any man so estraunged from all wit and reason, that he desire to be ignorant of those thinges which concerne his saluation? Will not he rather vse all meanes possible to be taught, and to come vnto the knowledge of those thinges? Euen that care ought the man also to haue for his wife, that she in like maner may haue the perfecte knowledge of the way of saluation. We are commaunded to teache, and warne one a nother: and shal not the husbande teache his wife, and warne her of those thinges, that belong vnto her saluation? Euerye man is a bishop in his

in his owne house, who seeth not than, that the housholder is bound to teach his household, the chefe membre wherof the wife is, and therfore necessarily to be instructed and taught of her husbande?

The husbande is bound to defend hys wyfe from all iniuries.

But it is to be noted in this parte of the husbandes duety, that the man is not only bound to prouide for his wife both bodely and ghostly, but also to defend her from al iniurye and displeasure. Her lyfe, her honesty, her good name and her health ought he to conserue, kepe and maintain, yea to put him self in danger & perill for the sauegard of his wife, rather then any harme shuld chaunce vnto her, folowing in this behalf the ample of Christ, which for the defence of his church bestowed his bloud and life. And for this cause is man head of the wife, euen as Christ is head of the congregacion: namely to gouerne, rule, defend, preserue and maintain her in all godlines and honestye, and to tender her and her wealth, euen as the hed studieth, deuiseth and compasseth all meanes possible, how to conserue and kepe all the members of the body in safety, health and wealth. Father. It is meete and conuenient, that the man should this doo. But nowe my sonne tell me, what is the fourth and last part of the office and duetye of a husbande towarde hys wife. Sonne. To beare and forbeare his wife: to dissemble the faults of his wife: not to se, but to wincke somtime at her negligences: to couer her vices: to forgeue her sinnes: not to be churlishe and cruell towarde her, but quiet, gentle, modest, pacient, long suffering, kinde and softe in al his behauiour toward her, and euen such one as a gentle and tender father is toward his most dere and swete child: euer remembring, that that sere, I meane the feminine kinde, is more weake both in body and minde, then the man is, and therfore is called in the holy scripture, the weaker vessel. And this is it that S. Paule sayeth: Loue your wiues ye husbands, and be not bitter vnto them. Hereto agreeth the sayinge of S. Peter: Ye mē dwel with your wiues according to knowledge: geuing honour vnto the wife, as vnto the weaker vessell, and as vnto them that are heirs of the grace of life, that your prayers be not hindered. That Christ is to the congregation, that same oughte euerye husband to be to his wife. Now who knoweth not, in what state Christe toke the congregation to his wife? and how many of her faults he doth dailye dissemble and wil not see, but rather couer them, neuer layinge them to her charge, and for his loue sake towarde her, recounteth her fautlesse, faire and beautiful, although in her self and of her self spotted with diuers blemishes, as it is wrytten: I am blacke, O ye doughters of Ierusalem, like as the tentes of Cedarnes, and as the hangings of Salomon, but yet I am fair and wel fauoured with all. The congregation in her self is blacke and defourmed, but in Christ she is fair and wel fauored. Again, though the congregation runneth somtime astray and folowyth straunge louers, yet is not he so angry with her, but that he pacientlye abideth her cōuersion: and if she at any time return again vnto him, he receiueth her most ioyfully, and embraseth her moste louingly, neuer laying to her charge afterwarde, what so euer tofore she hath done amisse, as he him self sayeth by the prophet: Commonly whē a man putteth awaye his wife, and she goeth from him, and marryeth with a nother, then the question is: should he resort vnto her any more after

after that? Shal not that woman be then defiled and vnclean? But as for thee, thou hast played the harlot with many louers: yet turn again to me, saith the Lord, and I will receiue thee. For I, yea euen I only am he, that for mine owne selues sake do away thine offences, and forget thy sinnes, so that I wil neuer thincke vpon them any more. Esa. xliii.

After this manner ought the husband to deal with his wife, and as I may so speake, be euen a Christe vnto her. Moreouer who knoweth not that such as are strong, are commaunded in the woorde of God to beare thinfirmities of those that are weake: yea not only to bear patiently what is done against them, but also to forgeue it, and for euill to recompence good? Ought not the manne much more to do this to hys wife, which is his own flesh, and his owne bones? If the fote chaunce sometime to stomble, so that the body do fall, and is put in ieoperdy: do al thother membres of the body rise vp against the fote, and eyther greuously smite it, or els cut it of? Nothing les: but rather bear it both quietly and patiently, and are afterward more circumspect, that the foote maye no more stomble. What so euer one member is to a nother member of the same body: euen the very same ought the husbād to be to his wife, forasmuch as they two are one flesh. Wen saith S. Paule, ought so to loue their wiues, as their owne bodies. He that loueth his wyfe, loueth him self. No man at any time hath hated his own flesh, but he rather cherisheth it, and nourisheth it, euen as the Lord doth the congregation. So ought men to doo to their wiues. Father. There can be no long concord betwene man and wife, except one beare with another, & one winke at a nothers faultes. Therfore in this behalfe the currish & doggish behauour of some losebandes, rather then husbands, is greatly to be reproued, which wil nothing at al beare with their wiues, but al thinges take to the worste part: yea be the faulte neuer so litle, they make of a flie an Elephant, and of a molhil a mountain: making suche a sturre in the house, as though heauen and earth should goo together. Rom. xv. Gal. vi. Colos. iii. Rom. xii. Ephe. v.

Sonne. These husbandes are much worse, then the heathē Philosopher Socrates, which to maintaine peace and quietnesse in his house, was wel contented to beare all kindes of displeasures at his wiues hande. Socrates.

Father. They entreating their wiues euil, haue alwaies this saying of God: Thou shalt be vnder the power of thy husband, and he shall rule thee and kepe thee vnder. And hereof they gather, that they maye doo with their wiues what they lust, and vse them, yea rather abuse them at their pleasure. Gen. iii.

Sonne. Husbandes are not appoynted heades and rulers of the women vnto this ende, that they shoulde raigne ouer theyr wiues like Lordes, or bridle them like horses, or make them to cowch downe like dogs: or to tomble before them in the mire like swine: but to be the very same to their wiues, that Christ is to the congregatyon, that is to say, such as shuld at al times defend their wiues from al perils and daungers, and prouide for them all good thinges, as we haue before heard: and what so euer the wiues lacke either in counsel or wisdome, the husbandes to supplye it and to make it good: so that the husband shall euermore be that to the wife, which the head is to the bodye. And as the head doth not compasse nor imagine, howe to hurt the body, but rather howe to conserue the bodye and to keepe it harmlesse: so Note.

likewise ought the man, whome God hath appoynted head of the woman, not to abuse his power, but to vse it vnto the conseruatyon and healthy, vnto the quietnesse and sauegarde of his wife: euer settinge before his eies this commaundement of God by the Apostle: Ye menne loue your wiues, and be not bitter vnto them. Sainte Peter also exhorteth all husbands, that they dwel with their wiues accordynge to knowledge: that is to say, modestly, soberly, quietly, and as it become christen men withal pacience and long suffring. And to moue the mē to be the more gentle, the holy apostle putteth them in remembrance, that their wiues be no dishcloutes, nor no handbasketstoyes, nor no drudges, nor yet slauishpeople, but fellow heires with them of euerlasting life, and so deare to God, as the men, forasmuche as they also be made like vnto the Image of God, redemed by the bloude of Christe, and sanctified by the holy ghost. Father. Some husbandes also be so churlish, & so wedded to their own fansy, that although their wiues be both sober, wise and prudent, and also able to geue good councell, yet wil they by no meanes heare them, nor folowe their counsell and aduise, but rather do that, which their brainsicke heades haue determined, although folish and worthye to be laughed at. These husbandes erre and go out of the way. For wemen also many times can geue better councell than men, and are able to determine what is good, and what is otherwise, no les than their husbands. Their counsels therfore and deuises are not to be neglected and despised, as the wyse and sage Cato monisheth, sayinge.

Colos. iii. 1. Peter. iii

Vxoris linguam, si frugi est, ferre memento.

If thy wife, saith he, be able to geue good counsel, be contēt to heare her, and to suffer her to speake. Rede we not, that when Sara Abrahams wife willed her husband to put away Agar the bondmaide, and her sonne Ismaell, whiche she had borne to Abraham, Abraham was loth so to do? But God saide vnto Abraham: Let it not be grieuous in thy sight, because of the lad, and of thy bondmaid. All that Sara hath said vnto thee, heare her voyce &c. Did not Isaac also folow the counsel of his wife Rebecca, in sending awaye their sonne Jacob from the furye of his brother Esau into Mesopotamia vnto his vncle Laban? Let husbandes therfore know, that godlye and sage Matrones haue no les the holy ghost, then the men haue, and be endued no lesse wyth the frutes of Gods spirite then they are: and therfore are theyr counsels worthy also to be had & to be folowed. Fa. If al husbāds wold thus behaue them selues toward their wiues, as thou haste declared, then shuld there be continual concord and perfect agremēt at al times betwene married folke, and so a most swete and pleasaunt lyfe. Sonne. It is greatlye to be wished. For there is nothinge, that pleaseth God better, then amity and concord betwene husband & wife: which thing God graunt for his mercies sake. Father. Amen. Nowe my sonne, seing thou hast shewed thoffice of an husbande towarde his wife: let me now heare also, what the duety of a wife is vnto her husband. Sonne. I wil do it gladly, mine owne dere father.

Gen. xxi.

Gen. xxviii

Of the duety of VViues toward their Husbandes.

Diuers

DIuers thinges are remẽbred in the holy scripture, which do belong vnto thoffice and duety of a true, honest & godly wife: which I wil recite in order. The fyrst is, that she submit her self to the wil of her husband, and be content to be admonished, ruled, and gouerned by him, knowledging him to be her head and Lord, & geuing him such reuerence & honor as the wife oweth to the husband by the word of God. Father. How prouest thou, that wiues ought to be in subiection to their husbandes? Sonne. God him self at the beginning said to the womã: thou shalt be vnder the power of thy husbande, and he shal rule thee. S. Paule sayeth: Ye wemen submitte your selues vnto your owne husbandes, as vnto the Lord. For the husband is the wiues hed, euẽ as Christ is hed of the congregation, and the same is he that ministreth saluation to the body. Therfore as the cõgregation is in subiection to Christ: euen so let the wiues be in subiection to their husbandes in al things. Again: ye wiues submit your selues vnto your owne husbandes, as it is comely in the lord. Also in another place: Let the women learne in silence with all subiection. But I suffer not a woman to teach, nether to vsurp authority ouer the man, but to be in silence, For Adam was first formed, and than Eue. Adam also was not deceiued, but the woman, & was subdued to the trãsgression. Notwithstanding thorow bearing of childzen she shalbe saued, if they cõtinue in faith, and loue, & holines, with discretion. S. Peter also saith. Ye wiues be in subiection to your husbands, that euen they which obey not the word, may without the word be won by the conuersation of ỹ wiues, while they behold your chast cõuersation coupled w̃ fear. Fa. Where is the man called the hed of the woman? Son. S. Paul sayth: The husband is the wiues hed, euen as Christ is the hed of the cõgregation. Again, in that God hath made man ruler ouer the womã, it euidently appereth, that mã by gods ordinance is hed of the woman. Fa. Wher is it cõmaunded, that wemẽ shuld reuerẽce their husbãds? Son. S. Paul saith: let the wife reuerence her husband. And S. Peter saith: In old time holy women wer obedient to their husbands, euen as Sara obeyed Abraham, & called him lord. Fa. The stobernes thẽ & the vnreuerence which some froward wiues vse against their husbands, is by no means to be cõmended. Son. Yea rather most highly to be discõmended. For God by no meanes can abide, that the wyfe shuld grow vp vnto such arrogancy, pride, & hautines of minde, that she shuld in any cõdition lout or flout, contemne & despise her husbãd, whome God hath appoynted her hed, although he be neuer so simple homely, plain, & of slẽder wit or policy, as we may se in the history of Michol Sauls doughter & Dauids wife: which despised Dauid, & laughed him to scorne as a light brayned fellow, because he daunsed before the Arke of the Lorde. But God did plage her for her vnreuerẽce toward her husband, so that she had no child vnto the day of her death. And as this Michol escaped not vnpunished for thabusyng of her self against her husband Dauid: no more shal those vnreuerent, scornful & disobedient wiues go away vnplaged frõ the face of God. God by no means can abide that his ordinance shuld be neglected & despised. Loke what subiection, reuerẽce, obediẽce, worship & honor the congregation oweth to Christ her head: euen the very same, as I may so speake, oweth the wife vnto her husband, as S. Paule saith: Ye women submit your selues vnto your owne husbandes, as vnto the Lord. For the husband is the wiues head, euen as Christe is the

And loke what great offence the cõgregation committeth, whan vnreuerently she disobeyeth Christ her hed: euen the like offẽce cõmitteth the wife, as I may so speake, when she disobeyeth her husband, whom God hath appoynted to be her heade. For it is wrytten: Let the wiues be in subiection to their husbands in al things. Father. But what, if the husbands shuld cõmaund their wiues to do things contrary to the cõmaundement of of god: shal they also obey them in this behalfe: seing it is said, Let the wiues be in subiecti õto their husbandes in all thinges? Sonne. Yeare the wiues owe no obedyence to wiues owe no obediẽce to their husbands commaundyng wycked thynges. their husbandes. We must obey God, more then men. If the husband for feare of the losse of his goodes or life, shuld cõmaund hys wife to commit Idolatry, and to defile her self with image seruice: or for lucres sake moue his wife to playe the harlot: here the wife oughte not by any meanes to obey her husband, nor to satisfy his cõmaundemẽt but rather to forsake him, or to suffer death, if the crueltye of the time shuld so require. Obedience to god and to his holy word ought to be ☞ preferred before al obedience to be shewed vnto man, & vnto his cõmaundementes. Therfore if the man will chalenge of the woman ỳ obedience, subiection and reuerence that the congregation oweth to her hed: let the man prouide, that he be the same to his wife, ỳ Christ is to the congregation, & that he commaund nothing, but that maye stand with the word of God, & work gods fauor & euerlasting salvatiõ to his wife so obeying: as Paul wryteth of Christ: Christ sayth he

Wiues ought to loue theyr husbandes. carnal pleasure, beauty, richesse, strength, nobility, goodlines of parsonage, or of any outward thing, but onlye of obedience towarde the commaundement of God. For God hathe commaunded that wyues shuld loue their husbands. If we ought to loue al men as our selues: how dere then ought ỳ loue to be, that shuld be betwene man & wife: whõe God hath coupled together, & which are one flesh, & membres one of anothers body? The maried woman therfore shal loue her husband as her self, and thincke her own husband in her eies to be most fair, most beutiful, most proper, most handsome, most amiable, most honest, moste garnished with al vertues and qualities that become a godly husband: which opinion the husband also ought to haue of his wife, that one may vnfainedly reioyce in another, & hartely loue one another. In thre things, saith the wiseman, hath my spirite euer had plesure: which also are alowed before god & man: The concord of thre then: the loue of neighbors: & man & wife that agreeth wel together. This loue grafted in the wiues hart toward her husband by the holy ghost,

ghost, shal make her to do al things willingly, and to seke al meanes possible to please her husband, and by no meanes to offend & displease him. This loue shal so worke in her, that she shal accommodate & apply her self and al her studies, labours and trauails wholye vnto the contentation of her husbands mind in al honest and godlye thinges, yea and that not only at commaundemēt, but also, as they vse to say, at a becke. For the nature of true and harty loue is such, that it nead no prescription of lawes: for frely and of it self it doth more, than anye law can require of it. This loue shalbe of such efficacy, vertue, might power and strength, that no perswalions, no flatteringe woordes, no fair promises, no gifts, no tokens &c. shalbe able to turne her mynde from her husband, and to entangle her with straunge loue, and so to make her to defile her husbands bed, and to cast away her first fayth and promise that she made to her husband. Father. Would God thys loue were in the harts of al maried women in these our daies. Then shuld not holy and honorable matrimony be so defiled with adultrye, whordome and all other vnclennesse, as it is now (alasse for pity) yea and that almost without checke or punishment. Sonne. The Deuil, which goeth about like a roring Lion, seking whom he may deuour, is enemy to al degrees that God hath ordained, but specially to the christen state of holy matrimony, as we may see from the beginning. He can by no meanes abide, that this holy order shuld be kept of the maried folk vnspotted & without blemish. Therfore a thousād ways deuiseth he to pollute & defile the honorable state of matrimony, & specially by fornication, adultry, incest, & such other most damnable vnclennes. It shal therfore, as we haue tofore spoken of the man, be necessary for euery godly maried woman, euer to set before her eies all those cōmaundements of god, which forbid whordome and adultry, & also al those most terrible histories of Gods anger against whores & whoremongers, that be mentioned in the holy bible. It shal not be vnprofitable also, to consider with her self her mariage promesse that she hath made to her husband before God, and before his holy cōgregation: from the which to fal, and the which to transgresse & breake, is more then double wickednes, & deserueth not only horrible plages in this world, but also euerlasting damnation. Neither shal it be vnsitting or out of the way, to remember secretly with her selfe, what a great diuersity there is betwene an honest maried wife and a strompet or whore. The blessing of God is vpon the godly maried woman: The curse & vengance of god is vpon the whore. The honest maried woman hath a fre & ioyfull conscience: The whore hath an vnrestful minde in her, tormenting her continually with the remembraunce of her wicked liuing, as with the painful pains of hel fire. The faithful maried woman delighteth in the presence of her husband: the whore abhorreth her husband, and hathe al her pleasure in the companye of straunge louers. The true maried woman seketh how to enrich her husband: The whore deuiseth al means possible to empouerishe him. The godly maried woman hath great ioye, when she beholdeth her true & natural childrē, being well assured ỹ they are the blessinges of god, forasmuch as they are the frute of her matrimony by her lawful husbād: the whore hath no delite in her children, forasmuch as so ofte beholdeth them, they are witnesses against her both of her most detestable whordom, & also of her damnation, putting her in remembrance of her vnfaithfulnesse against her husband, & of her wicked behauior with strãge louers: again, that her children wer not begottẽ in true matrimony, but are bastards & misbegotten, & therfor they wer both begotten, conceiued & born in the heuy anger, wrath & displeasure of god, so that by this meanes they cannot prosper, but haue short continuance on thearth, as the wise man saith: Thus shal it also go with euery wife, that leaueth her husbãde, & gets the inheritaunce by the strãge mariage: that is to say, she shalbe openly punished in ỹ stretes of the city, & she shalbe chased abrode like a yong horse fole. And when she thinketh leest vpon it, then shall she be takẽ. Thus shal she be put

Ec. xxiii. to shame of euery man, because she wold not vnderstand the feare of the Lord. For first she hath bene vnfaithful vnto the law of the most highest. Secondly, she hath forsaken her own husband. Thirdly, she hath plaid the whore in aduoutry, & gotten her children by a nother man. She shalbe brought out of the congregation, and her children shalbe loked vpon. Her children shall not take rote: and as for frute, her braunches shal bring forth none. A shameful report shall she leaue behind her, and her dishonor shal not be put out. And they that remain, shal know, that there is nothing better, then the fear of god: and that ther is nothing sweter, then to take hede vnto the cõmaundemẽts of the lord. A great worship it is to folow the lord: for long life shalbe receiued of him. Again, the honest maried woman is satisfied & wel cõtented with thalone company of her husband, nether doth she desyre
Ec. xxvi. to be entangled with the loue of straungers: The whore is neuer satisfied, but is like as one that goeth by the way & is thirstye: euen so doth she open her mouth, & drinke of euerye next water, that she may get. By euery hedge she sits down, & opẽs her quiuer against euery a row. The godly maried woman cannot be entised neither with faire words nor with gifts to defile her husbands bed: The whore is easly moued to al kind of dishonesty, yea for a morsel of bread or a potte of bear. The true maried womã is not ashamed to shew her face in the presence of all men: The whore lurketh in corners, and dare not appere in the company of such as be godly and honest, as our sauioure Christ sayeth. All that do euil, hate the light. The honest maried wo-
Iho. iii man hath a good name, and cometh to wealth & worship: The whore is of euery man euil reported, and she is despised of men, as donge in the streat, & the best end of her is extreame beggerye with shame. The godly maried woman maketh peace and quietnes, where so euer she becometh: The whore causeth strife and dissention, and setteth men together by the eares. The vertuous maryed woman is sure alwais to haue God her healper and aider in all her honest trauaties. The whore hath God euer an ennemye vnto her: and all that euer she goeth about, commeth vnto confusion, and hathe no good successe. The honest maried woman dare with a good conscience in all her necessitye and trouble call vppon God, with this perfecte perswasyon and assured hope, that he will both heare her and helpe her.

The whore is so confounded in her conscience, and so feleth the whot wrath & fearle vengaunce of God kindled against her for her wicked dome, that she dare not once lift vp her eies vnto God but in her hart wisheth, that there were no God, that she might liue frely & without punishment. The godly maried woman while she liueth in this world, is at rest and peace in her conscience with god and men & after this life she is wel assured to be heir of euerlasting glory. The wicked in this world is like a raging sea, which findeth no rest: and when she is once dead she hath her portion in that lake, that bṙneth with fire and brimstone. If a godly maried woman set these things continually before her eies, she shal easly both repel Sathan and his firy darts, and quietly repose her self in the lour of her husband according to her bounden duetye. Father. I alowe thy sayinges well my sonne. Go forth now to open vnto me the office and duety of an honest & godly wife toward her husband. Sonne. The third poynte of a vertuous matrone is, to loke vnto her house, to prouide that nothing perish, decay, or be lost through her negligence: to se that what soeuer be brought into the house by the industry, labor and prouision of her husband, be safely kept & warely bestowed: not only to cõmaund other to do things, but also to set hand to the busines her self: neuer to be idle, but alwais to be wel occupied: to be an example of al godlines & honesty to her household. To reprone vice sharply in her seruantes & to cõmend vertue: not to meddle with other folkes busines abrode, but diligẽtly to loke vpon her own at home: not to go vnto her neighbors houses, to taste & prate after the manner of light huswiues: not to be tauernhunters: not idely & wantonly to gad abrode, seking new customers: not to resort vnto places where cõmon plaies, enterludes & pastimes be vsed: not to accõpany her self with any light parsons, but only with suche as be sober, modest, graue, honest, godlye, vertuous, huswifelye, thriftye, of good name, wel reported &c: and in fyne, continually to remain at home in their house diligentlye and vertuously occupied, except vrgent, waighty and necessary causes compell her to go forth, as to go vnto the church, to pray or to hear the worde of God: to visit her sick neighbors or to help thẽ: to go to the market to bie things necessary for her household &c. Father. If al maried women were such huswiues, my sonne, as thou hast here poynted & set forth: many husbands shuld be in better case then they be at this present. For many women be of such disposition, that they can almost no more abide their owen house, than an Hare can away with a tabret: what so euer meate & drinke they haue at home, be it neuer so good, they thinke it as bitter as gal. And whatsoeuer cõpany they haue at home, although he neuer so honest & vertuous, yet are they none other but thornes & prickes in their eies: abrode must they. Their house is a wilde cat. They shal easlye finde it again at their return. Set cocke on the hoope. Let the deuil pay the malt man. But my sonne, lette me heare, if ought yet remain of the wiues duety. Son. The fourth poynt of an honest & godly matron is, patiently & quietly to bear thincõmodities of her husbãd: to dissemble, cloke, hide, & couer the faults & vices of her husbãd: not to vpbraid nor to cast thẽ in his tethe: not to eraspe nor sharpẽ her husbãds mind thorow her churlishnes, but rather soft, gentle and sober behauiour to quiet him, to pacifye his anger, to mitigate his furye, and as they vse to saye, to make him of a Lion a Lambe. So sayeth S. Peter: Be wiues be in subiection to your husbandes, that euen they, which obey not the worde, may without the worde be wonne by the conuersacion of the wiues, while they beholde your chaste conuersation coupled with feare. This thinge practised a certaine vertuous woman called Monica the mother of S. Austine with her husband. She hauing such an husband as was not only of a fearse nature, churlish, cruel, impacient, angry, dronken, and replenished with all kinde of vice, but also an heathen man, and geuen to Idolatry, yea and a very enemy to her religion, and to her likewise for her religion sake, did vse him with such gentlenesse of woords, and with so swete, kinde and louing behauiour, that at the lasse she ouercame him, brought him from rudenes and vice vnto ciuilitye and vertue: and in fine, she brought him frō gētility vnto christianity, so that he became a christiā & a professor of godlines. And al this cam to pas thorow her godly conuersation. For when her husband was dronke, she was sober. When he was angry, she was pacient. When he blowed out many furious and vnsemely woordes: she either held her peace, or els gaue him fair and gentle language. When he in his manners was more like a brute beast, then a man: she shined in her house as a mirrour of vertue, in whome there appered nothing but true godlynes. Moreouer this was also her property, not to fall at woords with her husband in his anger or dronkennesse, or to vpbraid him by it in the presence of other, but to conceale and hide his faulte at all times, so much as lay in her power: and when his fury & dronkennesse was past, to warne him of it by swete woordes, and gentlely to exhort hym vnto better thinges. Thus did she not only thorow her vertuous behauor win her husband from vice to vertue, from wickednes to godlinesse, from Gentility to Christianity, yea from hel to heauen, but also she became a noble example of most noble vertues to other wome and a good counsel geuer: in so muche that whan a certaine woman complained to her of her husbandes churlishnesse, and of his cruell handling of her, she very modestly and soberly answeared and sayde vnto her: I fear much, least your husbandes be so bitter, sharpe and churlish against you, not so much of their owon croked nature, as thorow your owne fault. For I doubt not, but if you woulde sometyme geue place to your husbandes in their anger, and beare with them in their dronkennesse, and conceale and hide their faultes at a time, rather than fall out with them, and vpbraid them by their wicked life, ye shoulde haue more gentle and more profitable husbandes, then ye now haue: and all this cometh to passe, because of your rashnesse and lacke of sobriety, forasmuch as ye bear not with your husbands somtime, when ye se them out of the way, and waite your time, when ye may conueniently admonish them of their vices and faultes, ye and that gentelly and louingly, that they may perceiue that your admonitions and councels procede not from an hatefull and euil will, but rather of a louing and wel desiring minde towarde them. For I my self also had sometime a churlish and a froward husbande, but by entreating treating hym gentlely, by bearing with him pacietly, and by geuing him swete wordes and wholsome exhortations. I brought him from that rude behauior, and conuerted him vnto the christen faith: so that now he is become a true professor of godlinesse, and a profitable Citezin of the christen publique weale. Father. O moste worthy and noble matrone. O most goodlye spectacle for all women to beholde. O most godly example to be folowed. Sonne. If all women would addresse thē selues vnto the practise of this godly art of this most godly matrone Monica, and vse the like gentlenes and sober behauior toward their husbands: more loue, peace, amity, quietnesse and concord shuld be found among maried folke, then is at this present day. But some women are more like the furies of hell, then Monica S. Austens mother. For their whole delighte & pleasure is to scold, to brawle, to chide and to be out of quiet with their husbandes: so far is it of, that with their godly conuersation and gentle behauior they go about to maintain amity and concord in their houses. And when they are reproued for their misdemenor toward their husbands: they shame not to answer: A woman hath none other weapon but her tonge, which she must nedes put in practise. They haue bene made dolts and foles long inough: it is now high time to take hart of grease vnto them. There is no worme so vile, but if it be troden vpon, it will tourne again, &c. Father. These furies are farre vnlike the godly auncient matrones, which are commended to vs in the holy scriptures, and in other histories, and yet wil they be called and counted Christians: being in dede worse then the Paganes wiues in their behauior. Sonne. Of suche women speaketh the wiseman on this manner: It is better to dwel in a wildernesse, than with a chiding and an angry woman. Again, it is better to sit in a corner vnder the tole, than with a brawling woman in a wide house. Iesus the sonne of Syrach also sayth: There is not a more wicked head, then the heade of the serpent: and there is no wrath, aboue the wrath of a woman. I will rather dwell with a Lion and a Dragon, then to kepe house with a wicked wife. The wickednesse of a woman chaungeth her face: she shal muffel her countenaunce, as it were a beare, and as a sacke shall she shewe it among the neighbors. Her husband is brought to shame amonge hys neighbors, and when he heareth it, it maketh him to sigh. All wickednesse is but litle to the wickednesse of a woman: the portion of the vngodly shal fall vpon her. Like as to clime vpon a sandy way is to the feate of the aged: euen so is a wife ful of wordes to a stil quiet man. The wrath of a woman is dishonor and greate confusyon. If a woman get the mastery, then is she contrary to her husband. A wycked wife maketh a sory hart, an heauy countenaunce, and a dead woūd. Weake handes and feble knees is a woman, that her husbād is not the better for. Of the woman came the beginninge of synne, and thorowe her all we are deade. Geue thy water no passage, no not a litle: neither geue a wicked woman her wil. If she walk not after thi hād she shall confound thee in the sight of thine enemies. Cut her of then frō thy flesh, that she do not alway abuse the. Fa. God geue al wiues grace so to behaue them selues, as it becometh women that profesle godlines. Father, Where is that commaunded in the word of God? Sonne, Saint Paul hath these words: I will that women aray themselues in comely apparel with shamefastnes and discrete behauior: not with broyded heare, either gold or pearles, or costly arape: but as becometh wemen, that professe godlines through good workes. Here to agreeth S. Peter: Womens apparel, saith he, shal not be outward with broyded heare and hanging on of gold, either in putting on gorgious apparel: but let the hid man, which is in the hart, be without al corruption, so that the spirit be at reast and quiet: which spirite before God is a thing much set by. For after this manner in thold time did the holy wemen, whiche trusted in God, tire them selues, & were obedient to their husbandes, euen as Sara obeyed Abraham, and called him Lord: whose doughters ye are, so long as ye do well. Father, Why doth the holy ghost geue so straight a charge cõcerning womens apparel? Sonne. The spirite of God knoweth right well the vanity that lurketh in womens harts, and how desirous they are of vain thinges, but speciall of gorgious apparell and precious iewels. Therfore to restraine them from this vanitye, and to kepe them in a comely order concerning their apparel, such godly lessons are left vn to vs by the holy Apostles, which both wrote and spake, as the holye Ghost taught them. And notwithstanding who seeth not in this our age, howe litle this commaundement of God is regarded of a nomber of vain wemen, which are so addicte vnto vanitye, that they litle esteme, what either God or man commaundeth, so that they may satisfy their vaine desire and carnal lustes. Father. Why, is it not lawful for wemen to be honestlye apparelled? Sonne. Honestlye, but not sumptuously: cleanly, but not vainly. It is the part of an hethenish woman, and not of a christen matrone to be decked and trimmed like a Marelady, or the Quene of a game. And to say the truth, it is muche to be feared, that that woman, whiche so trimmeth and setteth forthe her self, passing her degree and estate in costlye apparel, keepe her selfe within the bounds of honesty. If she seke only to please her husband with her apparel, (which is the duety of euery honest woman) what need she then to set out her selfe, as it were to sell, so mintonlike when she goeth abrode? Is this to please her husband, which is at home, or rather to sturre vp the lustes of other toward her, which are abrode? For who doubteth, but that many wemen thus disguising thẽ selues, wound the harts of many, infect the eies of many, and geue also occasions of much euil to many? A measure therfore ought to be kepte in their apparel. Neither ought any womã to go apparelled otherwise, then their degree and estate require. The princes wife accordinge to her degree being a princes wife, and so forth orderly euen to the poore husbandmans wife, that al thinges may be comelye done and in order, as the Apostle sayeth. For God is the author of peace and not of confusion. And whether the wemen be of hie or low degre, nobly apparelled or otherwise, let none of them al glory in their apparel, accordinge to this commaundement of the wise man: Neuer reioyse thou in thine apparel: but euen those that are most sumptuously arayed, let them be like minded to that moste vertuous and godly Quene Helter, which in her prayer made vnto god confesseth, that she hated the token of preeminence and worship, which she bare vppon her heade, what time she must shew her self and be sene: and abhorred it like an vncleane cloth: again, that she did not weare it, whan she was quiet & alone by her self. If we haue to eat and drinke saithe S. Paule, and wherwith we may be couered (he sayeth not, wherwith we maye be gorgiously, galantly, sumptuously and finely apparelled) let vs be cõtent. For nothing brought we into the world, neither shall we carry anything out of it. Let the godlye matrones therfore be content wyth honest and comely apparel, euery one according to their degre, without any gorgiousnes or niceneslle, alwais remembringe, that clothes were first of al prouided of God to couer our filthy, shameful and miserable nakednesse, and not to decke and trim vs like Peacockes: and aboue all thinges let them prouide, that the inwarde man be decked and garnished withal kind of godly and goodly vertues, which may blast out into godlinesse of life, that by this meanes they maye shewe them selues to be such wemen as professe godlinesse, and also garnish the doctrin of our sauior Christ Jesu thorow their good workes, and glorify the most glorious name of the Lorde oure God. Father. God geue all wemen and vs likewise grace so to do. Sonne. Amen. Nowe foloweth in order the duety of parents or fathers & mothers toward their children: wil it please you to hear that also? Father. Yea mooste gladly my deare sonne. 1. Timo. vi

Of the office and duety of Fathers and mothers toward their children.

SOnne. In the office and duety of parentes toward theyr children, many thinges are to be considered. Firste of all who so euer entendeth to haue good, godlye and vertuous children, and the continuaunce of them and of theyr posterity vppon the erth: it is necessary that he bewarie & circumspect in chusing his wife, and also in orderinge his owne lyfe. And forasmuch as the man is the principal part, it shall be expedient that he him self liue in the feare of God, and garnish his life withall kinde of godly vertues, that he may be an ensample of godlines and honesty to so many as are vnder him. And as the man shall dispose & geue himself wholly to vertuous and godly exercises, that he maye please God, and procure Gods blessinge in time to come not onlye to him self, but also to his wife, whome he entendeth to mary in the fear of the Lord, & likewise to his children, which he trusteth to receiue of the liberality of God, as tokens and pledges of Gods dere loue and singuler good wil toward him: so in like manner shal he in chusing a wife, of whome thorow the blessing of God he may receiue children, vse a discretion, and take hede whom he take vnto him to be his wife: and in this behalfe not to respecte, (as the maner of the world is) rychesse, beauty, fauour, nobility, frendship &c. but rather the godly qualities of the minde, the honesty of her parentage, her vertuous bringing vp, her huswiuelinesse and readye disposition to do good. Thys thing greatlye considered the holye auncient fathers in tymes paste godlines of the maid. For it is diligentlye to be consydered, whome a man shal take to wife, by whome he loketh to haue children. Euerye tree bringeth forth frute like vnto it self, according to the common pro uerbe: Of an euil crow, cometh an euil egge. He that choseth such one to be his wife, as cometh of wicked parents, haue ben wickedly brou ght vp, and is wicked her self, void of all feare, faith, loue and knowledge of God, destitute of vertue, full of vice &c. what children are to be loked for of suche a monsture of wickednesse, but monstruous and wicked children like to their mother? And what good thing can come vnto them from God? Or who dare promise to him self long posterity of such frute? It shal therfore be mete and conuenient for him that wil marry in the Lord, and haue children in whome he may delyte, and of whom he may hope good things, to chuse him suche a wife, as vnfainedly feareth God, and bendeth her self to liue according to her profession, and afterward craue of God to haue children by her.

That frute, wherwith God shal blesse those maried folke, so coupled together in the feare of the Lord, shal surely take rote and prosper, as it is wrytten: Blessed is the man, that feareth the lord: he hath great the generation of the faithful shalbe blessed.

The father ought to be present at the baptis-me of hys children.

Secondly, whan God hath blessed christen parents with childrē:
the father shal prouide, that the infants in conueniēt time and place be consecrated to God by holy baptisme, and offred to god by feruent prayer: at the which time and place, it is the duety of a godlye father to be present, and diligentlye to note what is there promised for the children, both by him and by other: that he may traine and bring thē vp according to the vow and promise there made.

Mothers ought to nurs theyr owne chyl-dren.

Thirdly, it is the duty of a good and natural mother, not to putte forth her children to other wemen to be nourished, fostured & brought vp with straunge milke, except very necessity compell her, but to nurse them her selfe, yea and that with her owne milke. For to what ☞ end hath God geuen her milke in her brest, but that she with the same milke shuld nourish and bring vp her children? If God hath created nothing in vain, than hath he not geuen that milk into the Mothers breast without cause: verely to nourish and to bring vp her infantes.
Those mothers therfore, which either of niceneſſe or for ease, put out their children from them to other, whan they them selues haue abō dance of milke, and might wel bring them vp, if they would take the pain: as they be but half mothers in dede, so likewise do they greatly offend God, and corrupt the nature of the infants. They offend God, in that they resist his ordinance and workmanship by putting away their milke, and by the refusing the labour of nursing their children, which God as a penaunce hath laid vpon them. They corrupte also the nature of thinfantes, in that they be fostured and brought vp not of their mothers, but of straunge wemen: not with the naturall, but vnnatural milke. And by this meanes it many times comes to passe,

that

that children being brought forth of gentle and godly parēts, proue churlish and wicked, and vtterly estraunged from the nature & good disposition of the Parentes. For children by drinkinge in straunge milke, drinke in also straunge manners and a nother nature. Therfore as it is the duty of a good and natural mother to nurse her child her self, yea and that with her owne milke: so likewise is it the parte of a true father to prouide, that his wife hauing aboundance of milk do not refuse the labor of fosturing her infāt, accordinge to the worke and commaundement of God: knowinge, that in so doinge she shall greatly please God, and satisfy the office of a true & naturall mother. Father. The holye scripture declareth that the auncient godlye Matrones of the olde Testament nursed their children them selues. So likewise did the mother of Christ, Mary the virgine. Sonne. Yea and al godly wemen from the beginning vnto this day for the most part, a few nicelinges excepted, which are borne to do no good, but onlye to consume idlely the good frutes of thearth. Father. In diuers countries, where I haue trauailed in times past, I haue knowen and proued, that those wemen, which are most noble, & of most excellent parētage and of greatest renoum, and of hiest authority, do not put forthe their children abrode, but nurse them at home with their own milk, only hauing certain honest and godly matrones otherwise to attend vpon the infants. Sonne. A custome much commendable, and worthi to be practised of al godly, true, and natural mothers. Father. go forth my sonne, and declare more of thoffice and duty of good parentes toward their children. Sonne. Fourthly, in the time of nursinge the Infantes, the father and the mother must prouide, that no bodely harm chaunce to the children either by fire, water, ouerlaying or otherwise but that they be kept warely and diligently both by night and daye. But this is cheifly the office of the mother, which ought principallye to attend vpon the yong ones in their infancy: forasmuche as the father is occupied abrode aboute the prouision for his familye. And it shalbe necessary, that the parents do many times commend their little children to God in their prayers, besechinge him for his mercye, to send them his holy angel, which may attend and waite vpon them, gard and preserue them from al euil, and euermore conduct them vnto al goodnes, that they may liue, prosper, and become creatures worthy such a creator. Father. This is godly. Sonne. Fiftly, when the litle children begin to learn to speake, the parents muste diligentlye take hede, that neither they them selues, nor anye other by the reason of niceneſſe or wantonneſſe learne them to stammer, to lispe, and to pronounce their wordes by halfes: but let them teach their yong ones to speake plainly and distinctly, and to vtter euery word and Syllable truly and perfectly. For many in their youth learne such vnapt manner of speaking and pronouncing their wordes, that when they come to age, they can not leaue it. So sone as the children be able to speak plainly, let them euen from their cradles be taught to vtter, not vain folish and wanton, but graue, sober and godly wordes: as God, Iesus Christ, Faith, Loue, Hope, Pacience, Goodneſſe, Peace, &c. And when they be able to pronounce whole sentences, let the Parentes teache

their children such sentences, as may kindle in them a loue towarde vertue, and an hatred against vice and sinne: as for an ensaple, God alone saueth me. Christ by his death hath redemed me. The holy ghost sanctifyeth me. There is one God. Christ alone is oure mediatoure and aduocate. The bloud of Christe clenseth vs from all synne. There is no damnation to them that are in Christ Iesu, whiche walke not after the flesh, but after the spirite. Departe from euill, and do good. Seke peace. Pray without ceasing. Be thanckful in al thinges. Be swift to heare, and slow to speake, walke in loue, as Christ hathe loued vs. Truste in God, and worke that is good. Flee idlenesse. Spende thy time frutefullye. Be humble and lowly: for such doth God loue. Abhorre pride: for God is an enemy to the proud. Learne to die &c. After these and such like godly sentences dronken in of the yong ones, it shalbe profitable to teach them the Lordes prayer, the Articles of the Christen faythe, and the ten commaundements, with such other wholsome doctrin, as is contained in the Catechisme or Principles of Christen religion, that euē from their very yong and tender age, they may learne to dryncke in godlinesse. It is also the duety of faithfull Parentes, to teache their children to say grace both at dinner and supper, that they may learne to know of whome they haue al good things both for soul and body and to be thanckful for them. In these and such like godly exercyses the Parents must daily and diligently traine vp their youthe, that they being thus acquainted with vertue from the beginninge, maye the more easly for euer after, abstain from all synne and vice. Father. If Parents wold labor thus to bring vp their children, vertue shuld sone encrease, and vice decrease. Sonne. Sixtly, for asmuch as childrē be naturally geuen to playe, and are destrous of pastimes: it shall be conuenient that such pastimes and playes be deuised for thē, as may not hurt their tender bodies, nor yet infect the mind with any leudnes. In their pastimes the parents must take hede, that one of them hurt not a nother: again, that they vse no swearing, no vain talke nor dabling, but vse a certen kinde of grauitye and modestye, euen in the middes of al their most pleasaunt pastimes and mery conceites, that grauity, sobriety, and modesty maye growe vp with them euen from the very cradels, al lightnesse, leudnesse and wantonnesse of manners vtterly repelled and laid aside.

Children ought to be brought vp in the knowledge of gods word

The playes or pastimes of children.

Seuenthly, the Parentes also must take hede, with whome they do accompany their yong ones both in earnest studies and in merye Pastimes: For as great profit is to be gotten of companye keepynge with honest and godly persōs: so likewise by keping felowshyp with the wicked and naughtye packes, all euils are possessed. And as the company of the vertuous is to be recounted more precious then gold or pearle: euen so the felowship of the sinnefull and vngodlye is to be eschued, as the plage and pestilence, yea as hel and the deuill. For as the one bringeth health and saluation: so likewise the other bryngeth death and dampnation. With such as a man kepeth companye, euen such shal he him self also proue, as the Psalmograph saith: With the holy thou shalt be holy, and with a perfect man thou shalt be perfect. With the cleane thou shalt be clean, and with the froward thou shalt learne learn frowardnes. The wisemã also saith: who so toucheth pitch, shal be defiled withal. And he that is familier with the proud, shal clothe him self wt pride. Again, depart frõ the wicked, & no misfortune shall chaunce vnto thee. Salomon also sayeth: He that kepeth companye with wise men, shalbe wise: but who so is a companion of foles, shall come to misfortune. Ec. The godly matrone Sara Abrahams wyfe, could by no means abide, that her son Isaac shuld play & kepe cõpany wt Ismael her hãdmaids son, but she draue both him & his mother out of the doores. Jacob also wold not in any cõdition kepe cõpany wt his vngodly brother Esau. Old Toby amõg other most godly & wholsom admonitiõs charged his son yong Tobias, yt he shuld not kepe cõpany, nether eat nor drink wt the sinners. This saying of Sara yong Tobias wife in her prayer vnto God, is so notable, yt it is right well worthy to be wrytte in letters of gold. Thou knowest, o lord, yt I neuer had desire vnto man, & that I haue kept my soul clean frõ al vnclenly lust, I haue not kept cõpany with those that passe their time in sport, nether haue I made my self partaker wt them, yt walke in lyght behauior. And we are cõmaunded in the word of god, yt we shuld not eat, nor kepe cõpany wt suche, as be of a leud & wicked dispositiõ. Son. Not wout a cause. For as the wisemã saith: Loke what way a child tradeth in his youth: he wil not depart frõ the same in his age. What soeuer liquore is first of al put in a bore, it wil smel of the same continually. It is an hard poynt to leaue things accustomed. For custõ is another nature. Good parẽts therfore ought aboue al thyngs to prouide, that their children at al times accompany thẽ selues with none, but with such only, as be honest, godly & vertuous: least by the cõpany keping of the euill, their good disposition be altered & corrupted, for as S. Paul sayeth: Euil wordes corrupt good manners.

Eightly, it is the duty of godly & christen parentes, to teache their children good mãners, yea & that euen in their very tẽder age & yonge yeres, least they proue rude & barbarous in their behauior, & so becõe sauage people, & vnprofitable mẽbres of ỹ christen cõmon weale. Let thẽ first of al be taught, that whan so euer God, Christ, or ỹ holy goost be named of thẽ, or of other in their presence, they shew som outward reuerence, either by putting of their cap, or else by bowing their kne. Again, if they be presẽt in the time of prayer, or whan ỹ holy scripture is red or preched: or else whan the holye and blessed Sacramẽts are ministred, or whan any other godly misteries be in hand, let them either knele down or stãd vp, as the mãner & custõe of the place is, yea and that with their caps put of. Let thẽ also be taught to reuerence their elders, to rise against them, to make curtesy vnto them, to put of their caps, and to geue them the way. If any man speake vnto them, let them salute them again, and vncouer their heades. If anye man talke with them, let them stande right vp, holde vp their heades, and loke them in the face with a modest and cherefull countenance, mixt with grauity. Let them hold their handes and fete still: let them not bite their lippes, nor scratte their heade, nor rubbe their elbowes, nor pose in their eares, but all the partes of the bodye beinge sette in a comelye order, let them diligentlye marke, what is sayd vnto them that they may make an apt and discrete answer.

Let them also be taught, to behaue them selues manerly at the Table, whether they do sit at it, or wait and attend vpon it. This also is not to be neglected, that the childzen be accustomed both euenynge & mozning to humble them selues vnto their parents, to kneale before them, and so with all reuerence to aske them blessinge, and to desyre their continuall fauour: yea and daily also to pray for the prosperous preseruation of their parents. Father. If childzen from their infancye were accustomed to these and such like good and vertuous maners, then shuld not such rudenesse, grosnesse and barbarousnesse of behauiour, nor such disobedience and vnreuerence to their elders, be fownd in them, as is at this present day. For ciuility and comely behauiour is now a daies so neglected, that it is almoste despised. There is no reuerent obedience, nor obedient reuerence vsed of the youth toward their superiours in this our age. Parents are not had in such honor and worshipp of the childzen, as they ought. More barbarousnesse occupieth the harts of all youth almost at this present. Sonne. No maruel. For chzisten discipline is exiled out of the church: neither are parents so diligent in doing their office, as they are bounde by the commaundement of God. But I will prozede with my matter.

Childzen set to schole

Ninthly, when the childzen be come to the age of vi. or vii. yeres, let the parents prouide, that they be sent to schole, yea and that vnto such a scholemaster, as feareth God, is learned, well mannered, and is able with discretion to iudge of the nature & capacitye of the childzen, and so according to the same to teache, instructe, trade, rule and gouerne them. But in this education and bzinging vp of the childzen in good letters, this muste be prouided, that the childzen be not after the common custome of scholes, continually nousled in readyng and learning Heathen and Pagane wzyters, of whome manye tymes is dzonken in more wickednesse then godlinesse, more sin then vertue: (For the tonge maye not so be filed, that the minde be defiled: nor the speche so polished, that the harte be polluted) but rather that with eloquence they learne also godlinesse. For those scholes wherin nothing is taught but the doctrin of Paganisme, are more mete for the youth of the Turkes and of the Sarazens and of such other miscreantes & cast awais, then for the childzen of the chzistians. Neither can I see, what greate profitte can come to a Chzisten common weale of suche scholes. Vain are all they, sayeth the wiseman, in whome ther is no knowledge of God. Yea where there is no knowledge of God and of his holy wozd, there hath the soule no pleasure. To knowe thee, O God, is perfecte righteousnesse: and to knowe thy righteousnesse and truth, is the rote of vnmoztality. And as oure sauiour Chziste sayeth: This is euerlasting life, to know thee to be the alone true God, and whom thou hast sent, Iesus Chzist. Likewise saith S. Paul: I shewed my self amonge you to knowe nothinge but Iesus Chziste, euen him that was crucified. Wythoute thys knowledge, I meane of Chzist and of his Gospell, all other knowledge is not greatlye profytable, yea it rather hindereth than prozyteth.

Sapi. xiii

sapi. xv.
Iohn. xvii

his Philike &c. without the knowledge of Christ crucified, are ignoraunt and blinde men, nether knowing or seing any thing, that is allowable before God, or is profitable for their soules health. For vaine are all they, saith the wiseman: in whome there is no knowledge of God. Therfore godly parents must earnestly prouide, that their children going to schole, do aboue al things learn to know God, that he is their maker and father, that they receiue of him al good things necessary both for body and soule, and that he hathe not made them to this end, that they shuld alway remain here, but rather that they leauinge this transitorye life at his appoyntment, shoulde for euer after dwel with him in his glorious kingdom, and haue such ioyes as eye neuer saw the like, eare neuer hard thee like, no tounge is able to expresse the like, nor no hart is able to conceiue, or to thincke the lyke. Sap. xiii

They must also learne to know, that all the benefites, which they receiue of God the father, are not geuen vnto them for their owne dignitye and worthinesse, for their owne merites and deserues, but onlye for the dignity and worthinesse, for the merites & deserts of our alone mediatour Christ Jesus, our alone sauiour, our alone redemer, oure alone peacemaker, our alone aduocate, our alone hie priest, oure alone law fulfiller, and oure alone righteousnesse: for whose sake God the father is wel pleased with vs, so that thorow him we obtaine all good thinges both worldly and heauenly of our most dere father, so that now we are become the sonnes and heires of God, and heirs annexed with Christ Jesus of euerlasting life. Rom. viii

Moreouer they must be taught, that for this most louing kindnes of their heauenly father towarde them for Jesus Christes sake, they labor to the vttermoste of their power, to please God, to feare God, to loue God, to belene in God, to call on the glorious name of God by feruent prayer in al their necessities, to be thankefull to God for all his benefites, to walke worthy of their profession, to lead a new life, to become new creatures, to be fruteful in doing good workes, to liue according to their vocation and calling, to shine as mirrors of vertue, and in fine, to be suche, as shall resemble their heauenlye father and their elder brother Christe in all their life and conuersation, as it is wrytten: He that sayeth, he dwelleth in Christe, ought to walke, as Christ hath walked. For we are deliuered from the power of our enemies to thys end, that we should serue the Lorde our God in holinesse and righteousnesse all the dayes of oure lyfe. And Christe hathe purged our conscience from dead woorkes, saith S. Paule, to serue the liuing God. 1. Jhon. ii. Luc. i. Heb. ix.

Furthermore that the children maye learne these thinges the more commodiously, it is the duty of parents to prepare for them, not ydle and wanton, not vain and trifling bokes, but wholsom, holy and godly bokes, as the new Testament of our sauiour Christ Jesu: the parables of Salomon: the boke of Jesus the sonne of Syrach and such like, y they may be trained and brought vp in them: & by this means drink in the knowledge of godlines from their yong & tender peres. It shall profit also verye much vnto true godlinesse, that the children be brought vnto the church to hear the godly Psalmes, prayers and Bokes for children.

chapters that be there red, but specially to heare the sermons and pre chinges of Gods word: and when they come home, to require of thē an accomptes of such thinges as they haue hard in the churche, but namely concerning the sermon. If they can wel cal the doctrin of the preacher to remembraunce, and make true reporte therof: let thā the parents praise and commend them, that by this meanes the children may be encoraged to continue, yea to encrease in wel doing. For as the common saying is: vertue praised encreaseth. But if the parents shal finde them negligent in this behalfe, lette them be rebuked, yet not to sharply, and exhorted to do better, and to geue more diligence hereafter. It shall also helpe greatlye forwarde vnto the encrease of true godlinesse, if the parentes take this order with their children, ꝧ whēsoeuer they come home from schole vnto dinner or supper, so sone as they them selues be set downe at the table, and grace sayd: One of their children rede a chapter of the olde or new Testament, the other geuing good ear thervnto, and the chapter ones done, reuerently to talke of the same, that such as be present, may be edified, as S. Paul sayeth: Let no filthy communication procede out of your mouth, but that which is good to edify withal, as oft as nead is: that it may minister grace vnto the hearers. Again, let your speach be alwaies wel sauoured and poudred with salt, that ye may know, howe ye oughte to answer euery man. Fa. Is it the duty of parents thus to traine vp their childrē in the knowledge of god, and of his holy word: Son. It is the principal office of a christen father ꝧ mother. Fa. yet the cōmon sort of parents thincke, that they haue done their duty toward theyr children abundantly, if they kepe them frō fire ꝧ water, ꝧ from other dāgers: if they clenly apparel thē: if they geue them meat and drinke inough, if they prouide to leaue thē richly after their departure. Son The Turkes ꝧ Sarazens, and thother infidels do this also for their children. They therfore, which only make prouision for the bodies of their childrē, and neglect their soules, are none other then Turkishe ꝧ saracenlike fathers: ꝧ in this behalf no better thē the brute beastes, which also prouide for the bodely cōseruation of their yōg ones. But it is required of christen parents, yea and that most chefely, that thei study also for the helth ꝧ welth, for the conseruation and preseruatiō of the souls of their children, forasmuch as they know, that their children are appoynted of God after this life to be the citezens of heauē ꝧ there to remain for euer ꝧ euer in glory. Neither is it with christen mens children, as it is with the ponglings of brute beastes, whose bodies being ones dissolued, there remain no part of them vnperished. But whā the bodies of the childrē return again vnto the earth, theyr souls are taken vp into the glorious kingdom of heauen thorowe the ministery of gods angels, ꝧ ther remain in ioy vnto the day of iudgement, whā their bodies by the mighty power of God shalbe restored vnto them: ꝧ so their bodies ꝧ souls linked and ioyned together, they shal cōtinue with their Lord god for euer after in ioy ꝧ glory, worlds without end. In consideration wherof, the parēts ought to prouide, not only for the bodies, but also for the soules of their chyldren, that they may be made citezens worthy of suche and so glorious a citye.

Ephes. iiii.

Colos. iiii.

The principal office of a christē parent is to bring vp his childrē godly.

Father.

Father. I wold gladly hear it proued by the worde of God, that it is the duety of christen parentes to see their children brought vp in the knowledge of God and of his holy word. Sonne. The probation is so easy, as that which is most easy. God himself geue this commaundement to al parentes: Take hede to thy selfe, and keepe thy soule diligently, that thou forget not the thinges, which thine eies haue seene, and that they depart not out of thine hart all the daies of thy lyfe: but teach them thy sonnes, and thy sonnes sonnes. Deu. iiii.

Again: These wordes, which I commaunde thee this daye, shalbe in thine harte, and thou shalt shew them vnto thy children, and shalt talke of them, whē thou art at home in thine house, and as thou walkest by the ways, & when thou liest downe, and when thou risest vp: and thou shalt binde them for a signe vppon thine hande. And they shall be warninge betwene thine eies, and thou shalt wryte them vpon the postes of thy house, & vpon thy gates. Deut. vi.

The Psalmograph also sayeth, I wil open my mouth in a parable: I will declare hard sentēces of old: which we haue hard and knowen: and such as our fathers haue told vs: that we shoulde not hide them from the children of the generations to come: but to shewe the honour of the Lord, his might, and wonderful woorkes that he hath done. He made a couenaunt with Iacob, and gaue Israel a law which he commaunded oure fathers to teache their children, that they r posterity might know it, and the children, which were yet vnborne: to the entent, that when they came vp, they might shew their children the same: that they might put their trust in God, and not to forget the workes of God, but to kepe his commaundementes. Psal. lxxviii

And kinge Ezechias in his thankes geuing vnto God, sayeth: The father shal declare thy truth to his children. Esa. xxxviii

The wiseman also saithe: If thou haue sonnes, bring them vp in nourter and learninge, and holde them in awe from their youth vp. Eccle. vii

Again, he that teacheth his sonne, shall haue ioye in him, and need not to be ashamed of him amonge his acquaintaunce. Eccle. xxx.

Likewise saithe S. Paule: Ye fathers moue not your children to wrath, but bring them vp in the doctrine and information of the lord. Ephe. vi

All these sentences of the holy scripture declare manifestlye that parentes are bounde by the commaundemente of God, and as they will auoid the daunger of euerlasting damnation, to teach their children the lawe of God and the true worshippinge of him, that they in their yong yeres drinking in the knowledge of gods most holy will may learne to serue their Lorde God in holinesse and righteousnesse all the daies of their life. And accordyng to these commaundements of God, al good and godly parents from the beginning haue trauailed from time to time to bringe vp their children, as we haue dyuers examples in the holy scripture. Luc. i.

Father. Recite to me parte of them.

Sonne. Abraham, which in the holye scripture is called the father of the faithfull, brought vp his children bothe godlye and vertuously, and taughte them the lawe of God, as he him selfe hadde learned of the holye Ghost, as these wordes do manifestly declare. Shal I hide from Abraham, saith God, the thing, which I entend to doo: seynge that Abraham shalbe a great and a mighty people, and all the natyons of the earth shalbe blessed in him. Examples of the godly bringinge vp of youth. Rom. iiii. Gene. xviii

I know this also, that he wil command his children and his houshold after him, that they kepe the way of the Lord, and doo after right and conscience. And as Abraham trained vp his children in godlines and vertue: so like wise did al the other godly Patriarkes, that succeaded him from time to time. How diligent king Dauid was in the godly bringing vp of his children, and specially of Salomon, that he might worthely succede him in his princelike estate: as many other, so likewise these words, which he spake to Salomon lying on his death, do sufficiently shew: Behold saith he, I must walk by the way of all the world: neuertheles be strong & quite thy selfe manfully, and se thou kepe the appoyntment of the Lord thy God, that thou walke in his wayes, and kepe his commaundements, ordinaunces, lawes and testimonies, as it is wrytten in the law of Moses &c.

The trauail of the godly auncient father Tobias in bringinge vp his sonne in the fear & knowledge of God euen from his infancye, is more knowen to such as rede the holy histories, than it nede here to be rehersed. His exhortations are such, that they are worthye at all times to be remembred of all men, specially of youth.

Blessed Luke in the chronicle of the Apostles actes, maketh mention of the iiii. doughters of Philip the Euangelist, which did Prophecy, that is to say, they were so godly brought vp in the knowledge of Gods most blessed law, that they were able to declare and expounde the holy scriptures and misteries of God, according to this Prophecy: I will pour out of my spirit vpon al flesh, and your sõnes and your doughters shal prophecy. Rede we not also, that blessed S. Paul dothe greatly commend bishop Timothe, because he had knowen the holye scriptures euen of a childe?

Ioel. ii.
Act. ii.
ii. Tim. iii.

These and diuers other like histories shew euidently that al godly parents from time to time in all ages haue bene diligent according to the commaundement of God to bring vp their children in ỹ knowledge of Gods most holy word, yea and that from their very cradles and tender infancy: so that whosoeuer will do the parte of a good and godly father, may not only make prouision for the wealth of the bodies, but also for the health of the soules of his children: which cannot be brought to passe without the knowledge of gods word. Yea more blessed and happy is that childe, to whome his father hathe procured the knowledge of God and of his holy worde, with other vertues & good sciences, then that sonne, to whõe his father departing, leaueth a thousand pounds by the yeare. For the possessyons of the one are constant and immortall: the possessions of the other are inconstante, transitory and subiect to the vanity of frowning fortune. Moreouer S. Paul sayeth: Exercise thy selfe rather vnto godlinesse. For bodelye exercise profiteth litle: but godlinesse is profitable vnto all thinges, as a thing whiche haue promises of the life that is nowe, and of the life to come. This is a sure saying, and by all meanes worthye to be allowed. Our sauiour Christ sayeth also.

Fyrste

fyrst of all seke the kingdome of God and the righteousnesse there of, and all these thinges (he meaneth necessaries for the sustentation of the life) shalbe cast vnto you. Likewise saith the Psalmographe: I Psa. xxxvii was here yong, and nowe I am waxen olde: and yet neuer sawe I righteous man forsake, nor his sede begging their bread on thearth. Father. I se nowe right wel, that thoffice of a godlye father is to ser, y his children be vertuously brought vp, and in the knowledge of gods moste holy worde. But let me aske thee one question. What, if the father doing his duety, the children be negligent and will not learne: or if they learne, they will not frame their life accordyng to their knowledge: may not the father with a good conscience correcte those chyldren? Yes moste lawfully. For moderate correction is as necessary for children, as meat and drinke. He that spareth the rod, saythe Salomon, hateth his sonne: but who so loueth him, chasteneth hym betimes. Folishnesse sticketh in the hart of the lad: but the rod of correction shal drime it away. Withhold not correction from the chylde: for if thou beatest him with the rod, he shall not die there of. If thou smite him with the rod, thou shalt deliuer his soul from hell. The rod and correction minister wisdome: but if a childe be not be loked to, he bringeth his mother to shame. Nourtour thy sonne with correction, and thou shalt be at rest, yea he shall do thee good at the heart. Iesus the sonne of Syrach also sayeth: If thou haue sonnes, bring them vp in nourtour and learning, and holde them in awe from their youthe vp. If thou haue daughters, kepe their body, and shewe not thy face fearful toward them. Again he sayeth: Who so loueth his child, holdeth him stil vnder correctiō, that he may haue ioy of him afterward. He that techeth his sonne, shal haue ioy in him, & nede not to be ashamed of him among his acquaintāce. Who so enformeth and teacheth his sonne, greueth the enemye, and before his frendes he maye haue ioy of him. Thoughe the father die, yet is he as thoughe he were not dead. For he hath left one behinde him that is like him. In his life he saw him, and had ioy in him, and was not sory in his deathe, nether was he ashamed before his enemies. For he left behinde him an auēger against his ennemies, and a good doer vnto his frendes. He that chasteneth his childe, bindeth the woundes together, that his hearte may feare euery word. An vntamed horse will be hard, and a wantō childe will be wilful. If thou bring vp thy sonne delicatelye, he shall make the afrayde: and if thou playe with him, he shall bringe thee to heauinesse. Laugh not with him, least thou wepe with him also, and least thy teth be set on edge at the laste. Geue him no libertye in hys youth, and excuse not his folye. Bowe downe his necke while he is yonge: hit him on the sides, while he is yet but a child, least he waxe stubburne, and geue no more force of thee, and so shalt thou haue heauinesse of soule.

Parentes ought to correct their chyldren, if they do amis. Pro. xii. Pro. xxii. Pro. xxiii. Pro. xxix. Eccle. vi. Eccle. xxx.

Moreouer who knoweth not, that God in the law of Moses commaunded, that the children, which were stubburne and disobedyent to their parentes, should be stoned vnto deathe? To whome also is it vnknowen, vnto what miserable ende the priest Hely came, because he broughte vp his children dissolutelye, and corrected them not for Deu. xxi.

ward and brake his necke? Peaceably not his sonnes also in battell. Again, did not Adonia the sonne of Hagith exalt him selfe, and say: I will be king? And his father would not displease him in any condition, nor said so much to him, as, why doest thou so? And what was the end of him, was he not slain? Fathers therfore ought not to be slouthfull nor negligente in the correction of their children, when they see them do amisse: least the vengance of God fall bothe vpon them and vpon their children. Father. Notwithstanding the correction ought to be gentle and fauorable. Sonne. According to the fault: & also according to the nature of the child that offendeth. If the fault be little: correction by word is sufficient: or els litle punishment. But if the faulte be great: let correction be done according to the fault. Some children are so be brought as sone to amendment by wordes, as by stripes. But this is to be obserued of all parents in al their corrections: that byfore of al, before they punish their children, which haue offended, they lay the fault openlye before them, declare vnto them howe greatlye they haue offended and broken Gods commaundement, and exhort them from thencefoorth to do better: that the children maye euidentlye perceiue, that both the wordes and stripes, which they suffer at their parents hands, procede from such an hart, as hartelye wisshe and desyre not their destruction, but their saluation: not their losse, but their profit. And this meaneth thapostle, when he saith: Fathers, prouoke not your children to wrath, least they be of a desperate minde. The good will of the father toward his childe ought to appeare and shine euen in the middest of his anger: and a moderation is to be hadd bothe in wordes and stripes, that the wittes of the children be not dulled, nor they driuen to such an hatred with their parents, that they begin no more to loue them as parents, but to hate them as tirauntes, & herof take an occasyō to run away from them. Father. As those fathers are not to be commended, whiche are so tender ouer their children, that they can not abide the winde to blowe vpon them: nor thoughe they offend, ones to frowne vpon them, or to geue them a sharp word: euen so are those parents greatlye to be discommended, whiche furiously rage against their children, and without consideration beat them as stockfish. These parentes are rather butchers, then fathers. Son. It becomes al parents to vse a moderation in correcting their children. But nowe that I haue answered to your question, I wil go forth with thoffice of the parents. Fa. Let it so be. Son.

Thynges to be obserued in correctiō

Tenthly, after the children haue consumed certaine yeares in the schole of godlinesse, vertue and learning: it is conuenient that the parents do nowe consider with them selues, to what kind of honest and godly exercise they wil put their children, that they maye be able hereafter to liue as good and profitable members of the common weale, and by their owne industry and labour to get their liuing, yea and to haue also, wherof to geue vnto the neady. For God hathe appointed no man to be idle in this world, but euery man to eat his own bread in the labour of his own handes, and to drinke his owne drincke in the sweate of his owne browes. And who knoweth not, what a sure patrimony and strong defence against the cruel dartes of pouerty & begge-beggarie, and honest and good occupation is: according to this cõmõ prouerbe, Artem quæuis terra alit: that is to say, a man hauing an occupacion, shalbe hable to liue, wheresoeuer he become. Therfore shal it be wisdõ for godly parentes, to determine with thẽselues betimes, how they will bestow theyr childzen, that they maye be hable afterwarde to lyue. If any of theyr childzen shall be found apte in time to come, to be spirituall ministers in the churche of God, pastors & preachers: or to be scholemasters: or magistrates in the publique weale: then shall it be conuenient, that they continew still in theyr studies & be sent vnto some vniuersitie, where they may exercyse themselues in such kinde of learning, as shal be most mete for that vocation, which they entend afterward openly to profesſe vnto the glory of God, and vnto the profyt of theyr countreye. The residue of their childzen, let the parentes appoynt to some honest and vertuous occupation, that they may be hable afterward truly & honestly to lyue of themselues, and by no meanes suffer them to lyue idely, nor to be of the nomber of suche simme shakebucklers, as in theyr yong yeares fal vnto seruing and in theyr olde yeares fall vnto beggery, if not vnto worse. An honest and profitable occupation, is a riche and wealthye patrimonye. But in this behalfe also this cõsideration must be had of the parẽts, that their childzen be set to suche occupations, as they of nature be most apt and enclined vnto. So shall the science, which they learne, prosper the better with them, and they also shall somoche the sooner come vnto the knowledge and perfection of the same. For by stryuing against nature, nothing cometh well and fortunately to passe.

Furthermore, after the childern be set in such estate, that by their knowledge, industry and labor, they be hable to lyue of themselues, yea and to make prouision for other also, if God shall call them to be rulers of households: and the time doth now require, that they geue them selues to mariage: wherof also they shew them selues very desirous, that they may be frutefull in the earth, and leaue sede behinde them, as their auncestours before haue done according to the cõmaũdement of God, it is the office and dutie of good and godly parentes, to prouide mariages for them, that they may mary in the Lord, and with the consent of their parentes, to whom also in this behalfe they are obedient, and without whose councel and aduise, they ought not rashely to enterpryse any thing concerning matrimonye. Childzen in the state of marimony ought not to folow theyr owne blind iudgemẽt with fansie, carnall appetite, sensual pleasure. &c. but the graue, sage, prudent and wyse councell of their parents, as persons which bothe by their wisdom and experience know, will and can better prouide for them in this case, then they can or may prouide for them selues. Those childzen, which of theyr owne brayne and fansye attempt mariage without the good will & consent of their parentes, do grenously offend: and seldom cometh to pas, that such mariages com vnto a fortunate and prosperous ende. What canne prosper, where feare toward God, and obedience toward the parentes is cast alyde, and fleshly sensualitie folowed? If Gods blessing be not present, what cãpaut good succes?

Gen. 1.

Parentes ought to prouide mariages for theyr childzen.

And

And as the dutie of childzen is, not to entangle themselues with ter the manner of the wozld, as the riches of the mind I, meane honest and godly qualities. Let them in this behalfe folow the holy and auncient patriarches, which, because they would couple their childze

as shal marry theyz daughters, be mē that feare God, loue his wozd, kepe theyz bodye, and shew not thy face cherefull towarde them.

Mary

mary thy daughter, and so shalt thou perfourme a weyghty matter, but geue her to a man of vnderstanding.

But this is also semely, that parents geuing their children to mariage, geue vnto them also, according to their habilitie, som honest portion of substãce, that they may be the more hable to lyue: which thyng also shal not a little encrease, maintayne, and confirme loue and frẽdship betwene the maried folke, whẽ they consider the liberalitie & free harte of the parents toward them. Notwithstanding let thẽ so geue, that they themselues lack not. For better it is, that children craue of theyr parentes, then that parentes should aske of their children. D)

Moreouer as all these things heretofore rehearsed appertaine vnto the office of christen parents, and may by no meanes be neglected: so lykewyse is this also the dutie of fathers & mothers, so vprightly to lyue, and so innocently to behaue themselues in all their wordes & actes, that they offend not theyr children, nor be vnto them example geuers of euill, but rather that in all theyr doings they shine as mirrours of vertue in the presence of their children. For as nothing doth more profit and edifie the children, then the vertuous, honest and innocent lyfe of the parents, so lykewise nothing corrupteth & hurteth more bothe the bodyes and mindes of the children, then the wicked & naughty manners of fathers and mothers. For the children thinche, that nothing is vnlawful in thẽ, that is lawfull in the parents: again that they may boldly do that, which they see their parents enterprise, ble and practise before their face. Let all parents therfore thinke, that feare God, that it is not sufficient for them to prouide, that their children be brought vp in godlynes and vertue, except they also confirm the same with their examples & manners, that their children beholding their innocency and quyet behauiour, maie studie with all dilygence to practise the same in theyr lyfe and conuersation. For as the cõmon prouerbe is: the yonge cock croweth, as he heareth the olde. Again, the childe foloweth the father. It were good for all fathers to haue this saying of Christ euer before theyr eyes: Whosoeuer doth offend one of these litle ones, which beleue in me, it wer better for him, that a milstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea. Mat. xviii

Finally, this is the duty of all parents at all times, with theyr fervent and earnest prayers to commend their children to God, that he maye preserue, kepe and gouern them with his holy spirit in his faith, feare and loue, & blesse al their doings, geuing good succes to all their godly & honest enterprises: and so endew them with the aboundance of his grace, that they in this world seruyng him in holynes & righteousnes all the daies of theyr lyfe, may after their departure from this vale of misery, enioye the heauenly enheritaunce purchased, not with corruptible gold and siluer, but with the precious bloud of that pure and vndefiled lambe Christ Jesus oure Lorde: to whom be glory for euer. Father. Amen. Now my child, seyng thou hast so godly and fruitfully set forth the office of parents toward their children, I also greatly desire to heare of thee on the other parte the dutie of children vnto their parents, Sonne. It foloweth next in order.

Of

Of the dutie of children toward their Parents.

AS concerning the dutie of children toward their parents, we talked of that matter in the declaration of the fyfte cõmaundemẽt: so that it may seme no waimost superfluous any more to speake of it: notwithstanding forasmuch as the place and order requireth, that we speake sõwhat also now of the office and dutye of children, and it is your pleasure, that I shoulde so doo: I will gladlye expresse vnto you, what so euer I haue to say in this behalfe. Father. I alowe thy diligence. Son. The most worthy apostle S. Paule describeth the office and dutie of children toward their parentes on this manner: Children, obey your fathers and mothers in the Lorde: for that is right. Honor thy father and mother (the same is the first commaundement in the promes) that thou mayst prosper, and lyue longe on the earth. Again he sayth: Ye childrẽ obey your fathers and mothers in all things: for that is well pleasyng to the Lorde. Here se we, that the office & dutie of children toward theyr parents, consisteth in two things. Father. What two things ar they? Sonne. Honour and obedience. That child, whiche will doo his office truly and faythfully accordyng to the commaundement of God, must bothe honour and obey his father & mother. Father. In what pointes doth the honour of parentes consist? Son. Fyrst of all in hauing a reuerent opinion of them, of their prudence and wisdom, of their state and vocation, of their regiment and gouernaunce: being perswaded, that they are oure parents not by fortune & chaunce, but by the singular prouidence & good will of God, geuen vnto vs of God for oure great commoditie, profit and wealth.

Ephe. vi.

Colos. iii.

Children ought to honour and to obey their parents.

Of honouring parẽts

Secondly, in louing them, yea and that not faynedly, but from the very botom of the hart, and in wishing vnto them al good things frõ God, as vnto parsons, whiche next vnto God haue and doo best deserue of vs.

Thirdly, in geuing them that reuerence and honour outwardlye, which by the commaundement of God is due from children to theyr parents: as to bow the knee vnto them, to aske them blessing, to put of their cap, to geue them place, reuerently and mekely to speake vnto them, and with all outward gestures to shew a reuerent honour and honorable reuerence toward them, as parsons representing the maiestie of God,

Fourthly, in labouring to the vttermost of their power, to be thãkfull, and to reaquite their parents for suche and so great benefites, as they haue receyued of God by them and theyr labours. As for an example: if their parents be aged and fallen into pouertie, so that they are not hable to lyue of them selues, nor to get their lyuing by theyr owne industry and labour: then ought the children, if they will truly honour their parents, to labour for them, to see vnto theyr necessitie, to prouide necessaries for them and by no meanes, somuch as in thẽ is, to suffer them for to lacke any good thyng: forasmuch as their parentes cared and prouided for them, whẽ they were not hable to care and prouide for them selues.

Fiftely and finally, in concealing, hiding, coueryng and in enterpreating terpretinge al their parentes faultes, vices and incommodities vnto the best, neuer obiecting nor vpbraiding them by any thing done amisse, but quietly and pacientlye to beare all thinges at their handes, considering that in thus doing they greatly please God, and offer vnto him an acceptable sacrifice: and by no meanes to folowe the wicked manners of the most wicked Ham, which whē Noah his father was dronken, and lay vncouered with his priuities in the tent, wēt and told his two brethren without: but rather to practise the godlye behauioure of Sem and Japhet, whiche takinge a garment, layde it vpon their shoulders, and commynge backwarde, couered the naked priuityes of their father: namelye, their faces beinge turned awaye, least they shuld see their fathers priuities. By this meanes wer they blessed, and Ham cursed. Genc.ix.

It becommeth a good and godlye childe, not to display, but to conceale the faultes of his father, euen as he wisheth, that God shoulde couer hys owne offences, as the wiseman saithe: Reioyse not, when thy father is reproued: for it is not honor vnto thee, but shame. For the worshippe of a mannes father is his own worshippe. and where the father is without honoure, it is the dishonestye of the sonne. My sonne, make much of thy father in his age, and greue him not as lōg as he liueth. And if his vnderstanding fail, haue pacience with him, and despyse him not in thy strength. For the good dede that thou shewest to thy father, shall not be forgotten: and whan thou thy self wāt test, it shall be rewarded thee. &c. Fa. Where in consisteth the obedience of a childe toward his father. Sonne. In two thinges principally Eccle.iii.

Of obeying parents.

fyrste, in shewinge him selfe obedient, not fainedlye, but from the very heart, to the wil and commaundemente of hys father in executing, perfourminge and accomplishing the same withall diligence: euermore seking to do that which maye please him. and eschuinge againe at all times, what so euer in any poynt may displease hym.

Father. But what, if the father commaunde the childe to doo that thing, which is contrary to the word of God? Sonne. Here the chylde oweth vnto the father no obedience. For we must obey god more thē men. But of this matter we spake, whan we talked of the fyfte commaundemente. Act.v.

Secondly, in attempting no graue or waightye matter, withoute the councel of his father: but to desyre and craue his fathers aduyse and iudgement in all thinges: as not to enterprise mariage without his consent: nor to entangle him selfe with any waighty cause, wythout the councel and consent of his father: alwaies preferring hys fathers iudgement before his owne, as one of more experience, larger wisdome and greater knowledge: yea as one that tendereth his commodity & profit, no les than his owne. Fa. What ought to moue children to shewe this honor and obedience vnto their parentes. Sonne, First the commaundement of God, which saithe: Honoure thy father and thy mother. Again, ye children obey your fathers and mothers in the Lord.

Children oughte not to enterprise marage wythout the councel and consent of their parents.

Exo.xx. Ephe.vi. Colos.iii.

Secondly, the promise, which is annexed to the cōmaundement: men this, that they, which honor & obey their parents, shal prosper, and liue long on the earth. Thirdly the commination or threatnynge of Pro.xxx. Gods anger and vengaunce againste all disobedient children. Who so laugheth his father to scorne, and setteth his mothers commaundement at naught, saith the wiseman, the Rauens pycke oute hys eyes in the valley, and deuoured be he of the younge Egles.

ii. Re. xviii. How miserably perished Absolon for his disobedience agaynst his father? Is not the cõmaundemẽt of god, ẏ such childrẽ as are stoburn and disobedient to their parents, shuld be stoned vnto death? Fourthly, the great labors and pains, which the parents take, and the infinite charges and costes, which they also bestowe, in bringinge vp of them. These and such like thinges diligently considered, shall easlye moue the hart of any natural and well disposed childe to shewe true honor and vnfained obediẽce vnto his parents, and cause hym to seke all meanes possible to gratify his parents again, ẏ to aunswer kindnes for kindnes. Father. God for his mercy worke this good disposition in the heartes of al children toward their parents. Sonne. Amen. Father. Go forth now, my sõne to recite thoffices of such degrees, as remain. Son. Next in order foloweth the office of housholders or masters toward their seruaunts.

Deut. xxi.

Of the offyce of Masters or housholders towarde theyr Seruauntes.

Masters ought to gouerne theyr seruants godly, and to train them vp in godlinesse.

Forasmuch as euery housholder or mayster that keepeth seruauntes, maintaineth them vnto this ende, ẏ by theyr labor and worke, thinges may be prouided and gotten ẏ be necessary for him selfe and for his family: ẏ forasmuche as al labor and pain is taken in vain, except God blesseth the labors, and geueth good successe to the trauails: therfore the first and principall office of a master or housholder is, to bring vp his seruaunts and family in vertue, and in the true knowledge of God, and to traine them dailye in the exercises of true godlinesse at certayne houres appoynted: that by this meanes God maye prosper theyr labours and trauailes, and blesse his household, and enrich euery corner of his house, geuing him aboundance of all thinges. For it is the blessing of the Lord that maketh meune ritch. And except the Lorde build the house, they labor in vain that build it. In the morninge before they go vnto labor, let the master of the house cal al his seruants together, and mekely kneling downe vpon their knees, let one in the name of them al, geue thankes vnto our heauẽly father, that it hath pleased him of his mercifull goodnesse to preserue and defende them that night from all euill, and to geue them swete slepe and comfortable reast: and desyre him also to kepe and saue them that day from all perils and daungers, and graciouslye to prosper their labours, which they entend to enterprise, and alwais to assiste them wyth his holy spiritte, that they take nothinge in hande, but that maye be acceptable in his sight, profitable to their christen brethren, and healthfull to their soules. Lette the reaste of the familye marke diligentlye what is sayde, consente to it in theyr heartes, and whan it is ended, saye Amen.

pro.r. psal. cxxvii.

Exercises of godlines

prayer in the morninge.

Afterward al the seruants risinge vp againe together, let them all

wyth

one voyce recite the artikles of the christen faithe: that done, let them all fall downe againe vpon their knees, and one of them rehearse the ten commaundements of God, the residue geuing eare vnto them, & saying together at the end of euery commaundement these woordes, Lord haue mercye vpon vs, and encline oure hartes to kepe thys lawe. And whan al the commaundements be ended, let them say together with one voyce on this wise, lifting vp their harts, eies and handes vnto heauen. Lord haue mercye vpon vs, and wryte all these thy lawes in our heartes, we beseche thee. These thinges done, if conuenient leasure wyl serue, let a chapter be redde in the presence of them all: euen such one, as the master of the house shall thincke most expedient and profitable for his family.

After these thinges, let the master geue his seruaunts some litle exhortation, to moue them to liue in the feare of God, to auoid sinne, to embrace vertue, and in al poynts to frame their life accoording to their vocation and calling, euery one in his office, doing their woorke so, as though they did it vnto God, which beholdeth all their doinges, and wil reward euery man accoording to his dedes: and so let thē departe euery man vnto his woorke in the peace of God.

Prayer before dinner or supper.

Whan the time requires, that the Seruauntes shal take theyr repast, whether it be breakefaste, Dinner, or Supper: before they sytte downe, let them all reuerentlye stande before the Table, and one in the name of them all, praye vnto God to blesse them and those hys gifes, whiche they shall there receiue of his bounteous liberalitye: and so manerlye sit downe together euerye man in his place, so behauing them selues all the time of their repast, as it become the ghestes of God: all wanton talke, all skolding woordes, and all swearing vtterlye laide a syde. Let all their communication either be of godlye matters pertaining vnto their saluation: or els of such thinges as belong vnto their vocation and calling. Let them not eate and dryncke vnto surfeting and dronkennesse, but vnto the satisfactyon of nature, which is content with a litle, alwais remembring, that we lyue not to eat, but we eat to liue. For a belly to much burdened, is not meete vnto labour.

Grace after meat.

Their repaste taken, let one of them in the name of all saye grace, and geue thankes to God for his benefites so liberally bestowed vpon them, and desyre him to geue them grace to walke woorthye of his louing kindnesse, that they neither in thought, woord or dede commyt anything displeasaunt to his diuine Maiesty, but vnfainedlye serue him in holinesse and righteousnesse all the dayes of their life. Afterward saluting one a nother, let them repaire vnto their woorke in the feare of God, doing that diligently, that their vocation requireth. And let this be their exercise at all times both at breakfast, dynner & supper. For euery housholders house ought to be a schole of godlines, inasmuch as euery housholder ought also to be a byshop in hys owne house, and so to ouersee his family, that nothing raigne in it but vertue, godlines & honesty. After this manner did the holye Patriarkes and all godlye housholders both of the Old and Newe Testamente rule and order theyr families in times paste, yea and manye other godly parsons, as the Ecclesiastical histories doo manifestlye shewe

And after thys manner also oughte euerye true and faithful housholder to gouerne & rule his familye and housholde, that God maye be honoured in hys house, and his holye name magnifyed of all thinhabitauntes therof.

Moreouer the dais appoynted vnto worke godly and vertuously passed ouer: whan the Sonday come and such other dais as are cõsecrate to spirituall exercises: the housholder, when conuenient tyme require, shal repair vnto the church withal his family attending vpon him, and there both he and his whole household earnestly pray vnto God, with his most humble thankes for his benefites so bounteously bestowed vpon him and his family. They shall also geue good aduertence to the thinges that be red in the church, and specially to the chapters of the holy Bible. And if there be a sermon, let the housholder prouide, that both he and his family sitte in suche conuenient place nie vnto the pulpit, that they may wel heare the preacher, & the better note what is spoken. Again, if the holy and blessed cõmunion be ministred that day: let both the housholder and such as belong vnto him, being prepared therunto, addresse them selues vnto the receiuing therof withal humility and worthines. And when the housholder with his company be returned home, and he is set downe at the table: let him call before him all his seruauntes that were wyth him at church, and require of them an accompts of those things, that they haue ther hard. Such as can wel report the sermon, and such other like godly things vttered in the church, let the maister cõmend them: but such as be negligent & forgetful, let him exhorte them to be more diligent hereafter, and so with godly & vertuous talke passe ouer the time, til the houre calleth againe to the churche, whether he and hys ought withal reuerence to resort, and to do such things as the worthines of the place requireth. The Euening prayer done, it shall not be vnsemely for the housholder to licence his seruaunts to take some honest pastime for the recreation of their wearied bodies, so that it be done with sobriety and chriſten modesty: all lightnes and wanton toyes set a side. The housholder thus training vp his household in the exercises of true godlines, shal so obtain the fauor of God, that al thinges shal right wel prosper with him.

Secondly, as it is the duty of a good maister or housholder, to prouide, that godlines be planted in the hartes of his seruauntes: so is it his office likewise to see diligently, that no vice take roote in them. For commonly where so euer God buildeth a church, the deuyll wyl builde a Chappell iuste by. And whereſoeuer the good manne of the house sowe wheat: there wil the enemy also sowe tares.

Math. xiii.

Therfore the housholder must haue a diligent and watching eye, that no vice crepe into his house. But aboue al thinges, let hym take hede, that there be no swearing vsed in his house. For ỹ offendeth god greatly, & prouoketh the vẽgeaunce of God to fal vppon that house, wher it is vsed, as the wiseman saith: A man ỹ vseth much swearing, shall be filled with wickednesse: and the plague, that is to saye, the whote wrathe and the fearfe vẽgeaunce of G O D, shall neuer goo

from

from his house. Again he sayeth: The woordes of the swearer bryngeth death. God graunt that it be not found in the house of Jacob. And the prophet Zachary sayeth, that he sawe a flyinge boke of xx. cubites long, and ten cubites brode, in the whiche were contained the curses and plages that shal fal vpon the house, where swearing is vsed. I wil bring it forth saith the Lord of hostes, so that it shall come to the house of the Swearer, and consume it with the Timber and stones therof. Zacha. v.

Let him also take hede, that there be no whoring nor vnclennesse of body, no, not so much as a filthy word vsed in his house, but al clennesse and purity of life, as S. Paul sayeth: As for fornication and al vnclennesse, let it not ones be named amonge you, as it becommeth saincts: or filthinesse, or folish talking, or iesting, whyeh are not comly, but rather geuing of thankes. For this ye knowe: that no whoremonger, either vnclene person, hath any inheritance in the kingdom of Christ and of God. Let no filthy balades or songes of loue be song in his house, that might stur vp the filthy desires of the flesche, but rather songes of the holy scripture, and the Psalmes of Dauid set forth in meter in our Englishe tonge, verye apte for that purpose. In these thinges let them exercise them selues, whansoeuer they entēd to sing that they may reioyse in God, as S. Paul sayeth: Be ye filled wyth the spirit, speaking vnto your selues in Psalmes and himnes, & spiritual songes, singing and making melody to the Lord in your hartes, geuinge thankes alwaye for all thinges vnto God the father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. Ephe. v. Dauids psalmes set forth in english meter. Ephe. v.

Again, let him prouide, that there be no quarellinge, scolding, chiding and fighting vsed in his house, but rather all loue, charity, quietnesse, amity and concord. If there chaunce to fall any variance betwixt the seruauntes: let the master of the house call for them that be at debate: hear the matter quietly: declare vnto them how vnsemely a thing it is for the seruaunts of one master, dwellinge in one house, wearing one liuery, feding vpon one table, sleping together &c. to fal at variaunce one with a nother: whiche oughte to take al one parte, draw al by one line, speake al one thing, loue together as brethrē &c. And before they depart from their masters presence, let such reconciliation be made betwene them, that they aske one a nother forgeuenesse, and desire the good will one of a nother, and promesse before their master, that they wil for euer after continue in harty frendship one toward a nother.

Moreouer let him take hede, that there be no picking nor stealing vsed in his house, but all truth: no lying, but all fidelity: no dissimulation, but all symplicity: no craft and suttilty, but a plain and right vp dealing withall menne: no wickednesse, but godlinesse: no synne, but vertue: no vice, but integrity of manners: no corruption of life, but puryty of conuersation, that in al things they may garnish the doctrine of our Lord and sauior Jesus Christ.

Thirdly, as it is the duety of a master or housholder to train theyr seruāts in al poyntes of godlinesse, and to exercise them in all vertue & goodnesse: so likewise is it his duety to geue a good exāple of vertue and godlineſſe to his ſeruauntes in life and conuerſation, leaſte ꝑ he commaunding good thinges, and worꝛking the cõtrary, deſtroy moꝛe by his wickednes of life, then he edify with the godlineſſe of woꝛdes. Nothinge make the menſeruauntes ſo good, as the goodneſſe of the maſter: and nothing maketh the maidſeruantes ſo honeſt, as the honeſty of the miſtreſſe. It is a vaine thing foꝛ the maſter to ſaye vnto his ſeruaunt: Be good ones: when he him ſelf is continuallye euyll. What ſhal it pꝛofyt a maſtreſſe to exhoꝛt her maid vnto honeſty, whē ſhe her ſelfe is an harlot? Let a maſter and a maſtreſſe be the ſame in their houſes, that they would wiſh their houſholde ſeruauntes to be. Foꝛ nothing dothe ſo muche allure vnto godlineſſe, as good example geuing. Let maſters and maſtreſſes therfoꝛe ſhine in their houſes as great lightes ful of godlineſſe and vertue, that theyꝛ ſeruaunts ſeing their good woꝛkes, maye take an occaſion to ꝓctiſe the like, and to gloꝛify our father which is in heauen. After this ſoꝛt did the holy Patriarkes and all godlye perſons vſe them ſelues in their houſes from the beginning. I wolde wiſhe all houſholders to haue theſe woꝛdes of the Pſalmograph euer befoꝛe their eies, and accoꝛding to the doctrine of the ſame to rule and gouern his houſe.

The wordes are theſe.

Pſal. c. i.

1. I wil walke in my houſe with a perfect harte.
2. I wil take no wicked thing in hand.
3. I hate the ſinnes of vnfaithfulneſſe: there ſhal no ſuch cleaue vnto me.

Father. If all houſholders with their ſeruauntes were ſuch, as the Pꝛincelike pꝛophet Dauid doth here deſcribe: then ſhould godlineſſe and vertue raign in mo mens harts, then they do at this pꝛeſent. But let me heare, if ought remain of the houſholders offyce. Sonne. Foꝛthly, it is the duty of a godly houſholder oꝛ mayſter, not to be rigoꝛous and haſty with their ſeruaunts, but rather to be gentle & quiet wyth them: ſo that if the ſeruaunts ſomtime thoꝛow negligēce oꝛ ouerſight leaue any thing vndone, oꝛ do not thinges in ſuche oꝛder as they ought to do, they quietly and pacіently beare with them, exhoꝛtinge thē from henceforth to be moꝛe diligent and circumſpect in doynge theyꝛ duty: and by no means like a mad man fall out with them, curſe and lame them, caſt diſhes and pots at their heads, beate them, put them in daunger of their life. ꝛc. This becommeth not chriſten modeſtye, noꝛ ciuil ſobꝛiety. It becommeth euery godly maſter oꝛ houſholder euer to ſet befoꝛe his eies this ſaying of the wiſeman: Be not as a Lion in thine owne houſe, deſtroying the houſholde folkes, and oppreſſyng them that are vnder thee.

Eccle. iiii.

Here

Hereto agreeth the saying of S. Paule: ye masters put away threatnyngs: knowing that your master also is in heauen: neyther is there any respecte of persons with him. Again masters, do vnto youre seruaunts that which is iust & equall: knowing that ye also haue a master in heauen. Ephe. vi.

Fa. Why is it not lawful for a master to correct his seruaunts that offend, as well by stripes, as by wordes? Son. If words may doo good, what nede stripes? Who offendeth not somtyme? If a seruant be so negligent or wilfull, that he will not amend his fault, although many tymes heretofore admonished and rebuked for the same, the master may vse his discretion in this behalfe, and minister suche moderate correction to the offender, as shall seme mete to hys wisdō: this alwayes cōsidered, that measure be obserued in al things & that correctiō be ministred with discretion & fauour. We be bought al with one price, & we be al enheritours of one glori. Christē mē may may not hādle their seruaunts, as the vnfaithfull Turcks do, which entreat their seruauntes as bondeslaues, yea as beastes without any respect of manhode. Colos. iiii

Fyftely & finally it pertayneth vnto the office of a master or householder, to geue vnto their seruauntes suche couenauntes, as were agreed of betwene them: meate, drincke, lodging, apparell, wages. &c. and to put vnto them suche labours as are tolerable, and that they can well beare: and by no meanes to charge them with suche burdēs as they can not beare, nor with such paynes as they are not hable to suffer, nor yet to defraude them of theyr necessary foode or reast, wher by they should be the les hable to doo theyr worke. It is the dutie also of a good master not only to prouide, that his seruaunte shall haue al things necessary, for him so long as he remayneth with him, & al his couenauntes at his departure: but also, if he be of habilitie, to make some prouision for him, that he maye afterward be the more hable to lyue, as the wiseman saieth: Where as thy seruaunt worketh truly, entreate him not euyll, nor the hyrelyng that is faithful vnto thee. Loue a discrete seruaunte as thyne owne soule: defraude him not of hys lybertie, neyther leaue him a poore man. Father. God make all masters thanckfull to theyr seruaunts, & geue them grace to consider the painfull labours of theyr faythful seruauntes. But my sonne, as thou hast nowe opened vnto me the office of masters or householders: so lykewyse declare thou now vnto me the dutye of seruaunts toward their masters. Son. I will gladly do it, myne owne deare father. Eccle. vii.

Of the dutie of Seruaunts toward their masters.

Of honoring masters.

The chief and principall pointe of the dutie of seruauntes cōsisteth in honouring and obeying their masters. Father. What is it to honour the masters? Sonne. Reuerently to thinke of them: honorably to speake of them: hartely to pray for them: stedfastly to defende their good name: and in all pointes so to esteme of them, as of parsons appointed of God to rule ouer them, by whom God fedeth them, clotheth them, gouerneth them, & teacheth them. This honour toward their masters, although neuer so simple & base, may the seruaunts by no meanes neglect, nor denye to their rulers. For to dishonour the master, is none otherthing then to dishonour God: who hath streightly commaunded thee, that arte a seruaunt to honour thy master, and to haue hym in reuerence.

Father. Where is it commaunded? Sonne. God thy the holy apostle. S
1. Timo. vi. Paule sayth: Let as many seruauntes as are vnder the yoke, counte their masters worthy of all honour, that the name of God & his doctrine be not euill spoken of. Father. Owe seruauntes also obedience Of obeing masters. vnto their masters? Sonne. yea verely. Father. What it is to obey the masters? Sonne. Faythfully and with a good hart to doo that, whiche the master commaundeth: and diligently to take hede, that nothyng be eyther enterprised or neglected, that may in any poinct offende the master: but rather to seke how to pleasure him, and to satisfye his cō-maundement. Father, Where is this obedience commaunded? Sonne Ephe. vi. S. Paule sayeth: ye seruaunts obey them, that are your bodely masters with feare and trembling, euen with the singlenes of your hart, as vnto Christ: not doing seruice vnto the eye, as they that go aboute to please men, but as the seruaunts of Christ, doing the will of God from the hearte with good wil, seruing the Lord and not men, know Colos. iii. ing this: that what soeuer good dede any man doth: the same shall he receaue again of God, whether he be bond or free. Again: ye seruaūts be obedient vnto them that are your bodely masters in all things: not with eye seruice as mē pleasers, but in singlenes of hart fearing god.
And what so euer ye do: do it hartely, as though ye did it to the Lord, and not vnto men: knowing that of the Lord ye shall receaue the re-warde of inheritaunce: for ye serue the Lord Christ. But he that doth Tit. ii sin, shall receaue for his sinne. Neither is there any respect of persons with God. Once again he saith: Exhort seruaunts to be obedient vnto theyr owne masters, and to please them in all thinges, not aunswe ring agayn, neyther to be pickers, but that they shew all good fayth-fulnes, that they may do worship to the doctrine of God our sauioure in all things. Father. But what, if the masters be vnkinde, churlish & shrewed: must the seruaunts obey them also? Sonne. So teacheth vs
1. Pet. ii. S. Peter saying: seruauntes, obey your masters with feare: not only if they be good and courteous, but also though they be froward. For this is thanck worthy: if a man for conscience toward God, endure grefe, and suffer wrong vndeserued. For what prayse is it, if when ye be bufeted for your faults, ye take it patiently: But and if whē ye do Masters cō maunding contrary to Gods word are not to be obeyed. well, ye suffer wrong and take it patiently: thē is there thanck with God. Father. What if the master cōmaund their seruaunts to do that whiche is contrary to the will of God: shal they obey them also in this behalfe? Sonne. Nothing les. For we must obey God more then men.
But of this matter we spake in the declaration of the fifte commaun dement. Notwithstanding what so euer the master commaūdeth his seruaunt to do, not being repugnant to the word of God, it ought to be done with all diligence and cherefulnes of mynde, as we haue Ja cob for an ensample: whiche serued Laban his vncle and master in ke ping his flockes of shepe many yeares, yea and that with great pains

these twenty yeare haue I ben with the. Thy shepe and thy goates haue not ben barren, and the rammes of thy flocke haue I not eaten. What so euer was torne of beastes, I brought it not vnto thee, but made it good my self: of my hand didst thou require it, euen as it that was stollen by day or nyght. By day the heate consumed me, and the frost by nyght, and my sleape departed from myne eyes. &c. Father. We haue few Jacobs at this present day. Such diligence and faithfulnes, such labours & paines, as Jacob tooke, ar not now a daies found in our seruauntes: vnto suche dissolution of life, stubburnes of harte, and hautines of mind are they come. Sonne. It is the more to be lamented. To become right Jacobes, that is to saye, faythfull and painfull seruauntes, this shall healpe greatly: if suche as serue, consider with them selues, that God hath cast them into that kind of lyfe, that god hath made them seruaunts and subiect vnto other, and that therfore they ought with all diligence and faithfulnes, with al labour & paine to satisfye theyr masters commaundement: yea and that not with eye seruice as men pleasers, but in singlenes of heart: forasmuche as they know, that in doyng faythfull seruice vnto their masters, they serue & please God. They ought also to set this before their eyes: that if they walke truly and faithfully in theyr vocation, seruing their bodely masters accordyng to the will and commaundemēt of God, they shal not escape vnrewarded: if not at mās hand, yet at the hand of god, which for his promise sake will leaue no good worke vnrewarded, as Saint Paul sayeth: What so euer good dede any man dothe, the same shall he receaue agayne of God, whether he be bonde or free. God will reward euery man accordyng to his dedes: that is to saye, prayse, honour and immortalitie to them which continew in good doing & seke immortalitie. But vnto them that ar rebels, and that do not obey the truth, but folow vnrighteousnes, shall come indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish vpon the soule of euery man that doth euyll How beneficiall God is to those seruauntes which truly & faythfully diligētly & painfully serue theyr bodely masters: the hystories of Jacob and Joseph show manifestly. Neyther shall faythfull and painful seruaunts be rewarded only in this worlde with the aboundance of all temporall things, but also in the worlde to come, they shal receaue the rewarde of heauenly inheritaunce. Again this they ought also to consyder, that as they serue their masters nowe, so shall they be serued of other, when they be householders and masters. If they be true, faythfull, trusty and diligent seruauntes to theyr masters: God shall geue vnto them in time to come true, faithful, trusty and diligent seruaūts again. But if they be vntrue, vnfaithfull, vntrusty and negligent seruaunts to their masters: euen with such shall God paye them home agayne. For this saying of our sauiour Christ shall for euer and euer abyde true: With what measure that ye meate with all, shall other mē meate to you agayne. Therfore what soeuer ye would that mē should do to you: do ye euen so to them also. For this is the lawe and the prophets. If seruaunts would remember these thinges: it should encourage them to do theyr dutie, and to lyue accordyng to theyr vocation & calling. Father. Is there any thing behinde of the seruauntes dutye?

Sonne. The chefe point of their dutie ye haue hard. This only remaineth, that euery seruaunt, where many be in house together, do striue and labour to the vttermost of their power to excell other in vertue, godlynes, honestly, and in all kind of well doyng: beyng certenly perswaded, that in thus doing they please God, which will abundantly acquit this their faithfulnes toward their masters both in this worlde and in the worlde to come. Let them be faithful and true to their master Let them picke, steale, or bybe nothing frō their master. Let thē studie by all meanes possible, honestly and truly to enryche their maister, and not in any condition to hinder him. Let them vse no lying, swearing, nor whoring in their masters house, but rather with Ioseph embrace all godlynes, honestie and vertue: and in all pointes so behaue them selues, that their master may reioyse in them, and they in theyr master, and God in them bothe. So shall it goo well with all parties. Father. Well sayde, my sonne. What folowethe nowe?

Sonne. The offices and duties of the chefe degrees and estates we haue all redy heard. It now remayneth that we talke sōwhat of the inferiour degrees, as of widowes, of yonge men, of maydes, of oldemen, of olde wemen. &c. Father. What sayest thou of widowes and of theyr office?

Of the office of widowes.

Sonne. S. Paule describeth two kindes of widowes: the yonger and the elder. The office of the elder or auncient widow is, to be occupyed aboute matters of God and about busynesses of the congregation, and wholly to geue her selfe to the exercises of the spirite, as to frequente the temple in the tyme of prayer, to be present at the sermons, to visit the sicke, to relieue the nedye, to wash the fete of the saincts, to be riche in good workes, to continue in prayers and supplications bothe daye & night, and to be holy both in body and mynd. Suche a vertuous and holy widow was that noble matron Judith, which in the hier parts of her house made her selfe a priuye chamber, where she dwelt, beyng closed in with her maides. She ware a smocke of heare, and fasted al the dayes of her lyfe, except the Sabboths and new mones, and the solemne dayes that the people of Israel kepe. She was a woman of a very good report with euery one: for she feared the Lorde greatly, and ther was no body that spake any euell word of her. Suche a godly widow also was Anna, of whom S. Luke writeth, that she departed not from the temple, but serued God with fastyng and prayers nyght and day.

Luke. ii.

As touching the yonger widowes, for asmuche as many of them waxe wanton ageinst Christ, and folow Satan, breaking theyr first fayth and promes, which they made to God at their baptisme (which is to abstayne from all vnclennes both of body and mynd, and to lede a pure and honest lyfe) and so cast them selues into the daunger of euerlastyng damnation: it is conuenient by the doctrine of S. Paule, that they marry agayn, bringe forth children, guyde their house vertuously, and so lyue in the holy state of matrimony, that woman may haue

1. Timo. v.

haue iuste occasion to speake euyl of them. Father. Where writeth S. Paule this? Sonne. In his fyrste epistle to Timothe. These are his wordes. The yonger widowes refuse. For when they haue begon to ware wanton agaynst Christe, they will marry, hauing damnation, because they haue cast awaye theyr fyrst fayth. And also they learn to go from house to house idle, yea not idle only, but also prattlers and busy bodyes, speakyng thinges, which are not comely. I will therfore, that the younger woman marry to beare children, to guide the house, and geue none occasion to the aduersary to speake euyll. Fa. The counsell of the holy apostle is good and necessary. For what is more conuenient and mete for such wydowes, as are auncient, olde, aged, and as they vse to saye, paste the worlde, then to apply their mindes vnto the exercises of spirituall and heauenly things, alwayes meditating death, and their departure from this vale of misery, wyshing with S. Paule to be loosened oute of thys mortall and wretched bodye, and to be with Christe. Again, what is more semely for a younge widow, whiche is apte to be a wyfe and to bryngforth children, then to marrye in the feare of God, & to take vnto her an husband, by whom she maye haue children, and godly to bryng them vp, and to gouerne her housholde vertuously, and to do such other thinges, as appertayne vnto an honest and godlye wyfe: For how lyghte, vayne, trifeling, vnhonest, vnhousewifelike, younge widowes haue ben in all ages, and are also at this present day, experience doth sufficiently declare. Nothing therfore is better for yonge widowes, then to mary againe, so that it be dō in the Lord. By this meanes they shall answer to theyr age, lyue honestly with theyr husbandes, be free from all suspicion of vnclennes, & passe ouer their time among their neyghbours in good name & fame. 1. Timo. v. Phil. 1

Sonne. Olde widowes also in this oure age ar not free frō faulte. For many of them, which by the course of nature are not only past childebearyng, but also redy to go to theyr graue, do so dote and are so mad in these oure dayes, that when they ought to leaue the worlde, they begin to thinke a new of the worlde: & when they should only meditate & consider spirituall & heauenly thinges, they set their mind on fleshly pleasures: insomuch that som of thē being almost fourescoure yeares holde haue ben knowen to marry with boyes of xviii. yeares olde: a nother sort beyng so plaged with diseases, that they were not almost able to sturre in their beddes, haue notwithstā ding geuē themselues to maryage, beyng farre growen in age, yea and that vnto suche husbands, as the ryches once passed, haue litle estemed theyr wiues, but leauyng them in all misery, whom they founde ryche and wealthye, they haue entangled thē selues with straunge loue, vtterly forsaking the company of theyr olde and totheles wyues. Father. Frutes worthy suche mounstruous mariages: mariages in times past hated euē of the very heathen and Infidels. It is good for so many as haue the gyfte of continencie to kepe them selues free from mariage, that they may the more frely serue God: but specially for olde women, which by the course of nature are past childzen bearyng. For theyr mariages ar prodigious mariages. Sonne, you say truth. But I wil go forth to rehe the office and dutye of younge menne that be vnmaryed. Father. Let it be so my sonne. Olde widowes dote in these ours dayes. *

Of

Of the office and dutie of young men vnmaried.

SOnne. The office and dutie of such young men, as be vnmarried, cõsisteth chiefly in these points. Fyrst that they bothe with their wordes, workes, and outwarde gestures do shewe reuerence, worship and honour vnto them that be theyr elders. Father. Leuit. xix. Where is that cõmaunded? Sonne. God him selfe saythe: thou shalt ryse vp before the horeheade, and reuerence the face of the olde man, & dread thy God. I am the Lorde. Secondly, that they do not only outwardly reuerence their elders, but also be ruled by them, aske counsel of them, and suffer them selues to be admonished and rebuked by thẽ: being perswaded, that there is more wisdom, knowledge, vnderstandyng, learning and experiẽce in the elders, then in them selues which are but young and of small practise. And therfore ought young persõs to haue a great delyght and singular pleasure to frequent the compayny of suche as be auncient and of good experience and wisdom, that by this meanes they may com by knowledge, as the wyseman sayeth: Eccle. vi. my sonne, kepe company with the multitude of such elders as haue vnderstanding, and consent vnto theyr wisdõ with thine hart, that thou mayest heare al godly sermons, and that the worthy sentences escape Eccle. viii. the not. And if thou seest a mã of discrete vnderstanding, get the sone vnto him, and let thy fote treade vpon the steppes of his dores. Again he sayth: thinke scorne of no man in his olde age: for we waxe olde also. Despise not the sermons of such elders as haue vnderstãding, but acquaint thy self with the wyse sentences of thẽ: for of them thou shalt learne wisdom and the doctrine of vnderstanding, and how to serue great mẽ without complaynt. Go not from the doctrine of the elders: for they haue learned it of their fathers. For of them thou shalt learne vnderstanding, so that thou maist make aunswer in the time of nede.

Thirdly, that they be not proud, nor stand in theyr owne conceyte nor bragge or boste them selues of suche giftes, as God hathe endued them with, but rather that they be sober minded, humble, meke, louely, gentel, and redy to heare other, and also to geue place vnto their elders, as S. Peter saieth: ye young folke, submit your selues vnto the 1. Pet. v. elders. Submit youre selues euery man one to a nother. Knit youre selues together in lowlines of mind. For God resisteth the proud, and Titus. ii. geueth grace to the humble. S. Paule also saith: Exhort the younger men that they be sober minded.

Fourthly, that they be not idle, no tauernhunters, no vsers of vnhoneste or vnlawfull pastimes, no pickers of quarels, no dronckardes, no kepers of euyll company, but rather well occupyed, contente with the houses where they dwell, vsyng honeste & lawfull pastimes, quiet, sober, kepyng company with the godly & vertuous, and euer hauing God before their eyes.

Fyftly and fynally, forasmuch as they entend once to mary, if God blesse them with lyfe: it is the dutie of young men also to kepe their bodies vnpolluted, vndefyled, vnspotted, free & vtterly estraunged frõ all whordom and vnclennes, that they may come with pure bodies vntõ the holy state of honorable wedlock, folowing in this behalf the

godlye example of the moste godlye yonge manne Ioseph, Iacobs sonne: whyche dyd rather chuse to loose all his promotyons and wel thynges, yea to be cast into prison, and there to suffer many and great miseries, than he would transgresse the cõmaundement of God, and muste hys bodye in anye kinde of vnclennesse, before God called him vnto the blessed state of matrimony.

This example lette all younge menne that be vnmaryed haue continually before theis eies, and remember how graciously God delt with Ioseph after ward, howe he blessed him, and made him great and of hyest autority in all Egipte, the kinge onlye excepted. Gene.xli.

Therfore whan the Deuill, the World and the Flesche shall moue thẽ vnto vnclennesse, eyther to deflowre maides, or to corrupte mennes wyues, or to defyle widowes, or otherwise vnhonestlye to behaue themselues either in thoughte, woorde and deede: let them say wyth Ioseph: Howe can I dothys wyckednesse, and synne agaynste God? Gen.xxxix.

Let them eschue idlenesse, vaine talke and euill companye, and geue them selues to prayer, and to the reding of the holy scriptures: & they shall easily auoide and eskape the flatteringe and deceytfull songes of that pleasaunt, but poysonfull Woorcmaide the flesche. Watche and praye, sayeth oure sauioure Christ, that ye fall not into temptatyon. Mat.xxvi. I haue hidden vp thy woordes in my hearte, sayeth the Psalmographe, that I mighte not sinne againste thee. Father, Thy councell is good, my sonne, God geue vs all grace to folowe it. But what sayest thou, concernynge the duetye of maides and yonge womenne, that be vnmaryed? Psal. cxix.

Of the duetye of Maydes and younge vnmaryed women.

SOnne. The maids, whether they be in their fathers houses, or abyode at seruice, muste diligently take hede, that they haue continually before their eies the feare of God, and aboue all thinges seeke to please him, and to frame their life accordinge vnto his holy woorde. And that they maye the better this doo, they ought manye times to call vpon God for his holye spirit and grace, that he may kepe them safe and sound bothe in minde and bodye. For wythoute hys healpe and fauour nothynge can prosper or haue good successe: wythoute hys grace, and wythoute the comforte of his holye Spirite, neyther the bodyes nor the mindes of the maides can continue pure, chaste, continente and honest, but rather fall into all kinde of vnclennesse. God therfore is at all times to be called vpon wyth feruent prayers, that he may preserue and kepe them in all godlinesse, honesty and vertue, as we haue Sara yonge Tobias wife for an example: whyche, whan she was a maid, gaue her self busily vnto prayer, insomuch that we rede, that at a certain time she went vp into an hie chamber of her fathers house, and there continued in prayer vnto God by the space of iii. daies and iii. nightes, neither eating nor drinking in the meane time. Tob.iii.

Secondly, the duety of honest & godly maides is, to be obedient to

to their maſters and maſtreſſes, and diligently to do in the houſhold affaires, whatſoeuer they are commaunded: and alwais to haue an eie vnto the godly doings of their maſtreſſes, and ſtudiouſly learn to do the like, that when the time comes, that they alſo ſhall be houſholders, they maye knowe the better howe to rule and gouerne their owne houſe.

Thirdly, it appertaineth vnto thoffice of vertuous maides neuer to be idle, but alwaye to woorke ſome good thinge. For idleneſſe is a great occaſion of many euils, as the wiſeman ſayeth, idleneſſe bryngeth much euil. So ſone as idlenes occupieth the minde of any perſon, vain & euil thoughts braſt in straightwaies, out of ỹ which ſpryngeth all miſchefe, as pryde, ſlouthfulneſſe, banketting, dronkenſhyp, whoredome, adoultry, vain communication, bewrayng of ſecretes, curſed ſpeakinge &c. to auoid theſe peſtilences, it ſhal become honeſt and vertuous maides to geue them ſelues to honeſt and vertuous exerciſes, to ſpinning, to carding, to weauing, to ſowing, to waſhing to wringing, to ſweping, to ſcouring, to bruing, to bakinge, and to all kinde of labors without exception, that become maides of theyr vocation, of what ſo euer degree they be, rich or poore, noble or vnnoble, faire or foule. This thing ſhall helpe greatly in time to come to gette their liuing, if need require. King Salomon in the deſcriptyon of an
Pro. xxxi. honeſt faithful woman: ſayeth on this manner. She occupieth woll and flaxe, and laboureth gladly with her owne handes. She is like a marchauntes ſhyp, that bringeth her vitailes from a farre. She is vp in the night ſeaſon, to prouide meat for theyr houſholde, and foode for her maidens. She layeth her fingers to the ſpindle, and her hand taketh hold of the diſtaffe. &c. Thus were diuers godly maids brought vp in their tender yeres, which be mentioned in the holye ſcrypture, and they practiſed the ſame, when they were wiues, Anna olde
Tob. ii Tobias wife learned to weaue, when ſhe was a maide: and therfore when her huſband was blinde, and could not woorke, ſhe went daily to the weauing woorke: and loke what lining ſhe could get with the
i. Reg. ii. labor of her handes, ſhe brought it home for the relief for her family. Hanna alſo the wife of Helcana wrought with her owne hands, and made cloth, ſo that euery yeare ſhe brought a coate of the clothe that
Act. ix. ſhe had made, to Samuel her ſonne, when ſhe came vp with her huſband to offer vnto the Lord. Tabitha alſo is greatly commended in the holy ſcripture for cotes and garments, that ſhe made both for her
Act. xvi own family and alſo for the poore. Again, Lydia a godly and faithfull woman occupied ſelling of purple. Priſtilla alſo a vertuous woman made tentes with her huſband Aquila: of the which occupatyon S.
Act. xviii Paule was, and laboured with them for his liuing.

Not onlye the deuine hiſtories, but alſo the Eccleſiaſticall and other humayne wrytings miniſter vnto vs aboundaunce of ſuch and the lyke examples: whyche declare ſufficientlye, that in all ages all godly women from time to time haue learned and practiſed ſome art or occupation, where by they might gette at the leaſte ſome parte of theyr liuinge, if neceſſitye ſhoulde requyre. And what is more brytle, then wyttle and flatering fortune, or more inconſtante & flutyng, then

then the transitory possessions of the world: An incorruption is a most certain patrimony.

Fourthlye, not onlye idlenesse is to be eschued of those Maydens, whiche entend to proue godlye and vertuous, but also the runninge about into vain spectacles, games, pastimes, playes, enterludes &c: where rather vice then vertue, sinne then soule healthy, wickednesse then goodnesse is to be learned. Let them remember, what chanced to Dina Jacobs daughter thorow going abrode to se vaine sightes. Was she not destroyed: & lost her virginity. Virginity ones lost, what remaineth safe & praise worthy in a maide? The chiefe, best & greatest dowry that a maid can bring to her husband is honestye: the which if she lack, though she might strive with king Cresus in ritchesse, yet is she more miserable then Irus. Let the maids therfore above al thinges seke to maintaine their honesty, and eschue all suche thynges, as might worke the corruption therof. Ge. xxxiiii.

Fiftly, forasmuch as nothing doth so greatly hinder ꝑ good name and fame of maids, as keping cõpany with naughty packs, & persõs of a dissolute & wanton life, (for euery man proueth suche as he is, wt whom he is cõuersant) and contrariwise, nothing doth so much commend, auance & setforth their good name and fame, as resorting vnto such as are wel reported, and of an honest disposition: therfore shal it be requisite that al godly maids do refrain thẽselues from keping cõpany with light, vain & wanton persons: whose delite is in fleshly & filthy pastimes, as singing, dauncing, leaping, skipping, playinge, kissing, whoring &c. Al such must they auoid: if they tẽder theyr good name: which ones lost, they are no more of estimation, but cotemned and despysed of al good & godly persons. The wise man saithe: Lyke as the clerenesse of the eyes reioyseth the hart, so dothe a good name fede the bones. Again, a good name is more worth, thã great riches: & louing fauor is better then siluer & gold. Ones againe he saithe: A good name is more worth then a precious oyntment. Jesus the sonne of Syrach also sayeth: Labor to get thee a good name: for that shall continue surer by thee, then a thousande greate treasures of golde. A good life hath a nomber of dais: but a good name endureth for euer. Pro. xv. Pro. xxii Eccle. vii Eccle. xli

Sixtly, this also must honest maides prouide, that they be not full of tonge, and of much babling, nor vse many wordes, but as fewe as they may, yea & those wisely and discretely, soberly and modestly spoken, euer remembring this common prouerbe: A maid shuld be seene and not hard. Except the grauity of some matter do require, that she shuld speake: or els an answer is to be made to such thinges as are demaunded of her: let her kepe silence. For there is nothinge that doth so much commend, auaunce, setforthe, adourne, decke, trim, and garnish a maid, as silence. And this noble vertue may the virgins learne of that most holy, pure and glorious virgin Mary: whiche, whan she either hard or saw any worthy and notable thing, blabbed it not oute straight wais to her gossips, as the manner of women is at thys present day, but being silent, she kept al those sayinges secreat, and pondred them in her hart, saith blessed Luke. Silence in a mayde is greatly cõmendable. Luc. ii

Seuenthly, forasmuch as maides no les then yonge meune after they ones come to xiiii. yeres of age, are so desirous to be maried, & to Vntimely mariages hurt greatly.

haue the companye of other to thys ende, that they maye be frutefull accordyng to the worke of God and nature: & notwithstanding suche vntimely mariages are not to be commended, seing that thorowe the bodies of the persons so to sone maried are greatly enfebled, and the frute that cometh of them, proue weaklings, of smal stature, and almost of no strength, and so vnprofitable for the common wealth: it shalbe conuenient for al honest maides, if they tender the healthy and conseruation of their bodies, and the prosperity of the frute wherwith God shall blesse them afterward, and the continuaunce of the same, that they labor to the vttermost of their power to suppresse that lust and desire in them by moderate eating and drinking. by vsing a temperate diet, and by auoyding al superfluity, & by keping their bodies low either by fasting, or by receiuing of such meat and drink, as shal least of al enflame the body, or prouoke it vnto lust. It shalbe necessary in this behalfe, that the maides vse no fine and exquisite meates, but homely and vsuall, euen such as may slea hunger, and not kindle lust, satisfy nature, and not pamper the bodye. The drincke also, that they shall vse, ought either to be pure water, or else thin ale, or small bear, that it may slake thirst and not kindle lust. For nothing doth so tame the raging lustes of the flesh, as slender and moderate diet: and contrariwise, nothing doth so enflame and set on fyre carnall concupiscence, as fine fare and whote wines, as S. Paule sayeth: Be not dronke with wine, wherin is excesse. Again, let vs walke honestye, as it were in the day light: not in eating and drincking, not in chambering and wantonnesse: but put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ. And make not prouisyon for the Flesshe, to fulfyll the lustes of it. For if ye lyue after the Flesshe, ye shall die. But if ye thorowe the Spirit, do mortify the dedes of the body, ye shall liue. Our sauior Christe saith also: Take hede to your selues, least at any time your hartes be ouercome with surfeting and dronkennesse. If thauncient Romains did forbid their women the vse of wine and delicate fare, least by the reason therof, they might fal into any vnclennesse and dishonesty, & so bring shame both to them selues, to their husbandes and to their family: howe muche lesse tollerable is it for maides to accustome them selues, to such meat and drincke, as shall excite and sturre vp carnall concupiscence and fleshly lust in them, and prouoke them peraduenture vnto leudnesse and dishonesty, and so by this meanes they shame thē selues for euer after, and dishonest their whole stocke and kinred? What wicked vnclennesse and vncleane wickednesse hathe in times past brast out from delicate fare, both diuine and humaine histories aboundantly declare: neither want we experience hereof at this present day. Let the maids therfore aboue all thinges vse slender, simple and homely diet. By this meanes shal they kepe their bodies in good temperature, conserue their health, quiet their mindes, suppresse carnal lustes, auoid vnclene desyres, exchue euil company, and set them selues in a goodly order against the time that God shal cal them vnto the holy state of honorable wedlocke.

Of maides apparell.

Eightlye, seinge that, as experience teacheth, maides desyre nothinge so greatly as galante apparell, and sumptuous raiment, and couet that so greatly, that many times not a few of them labor to cōe by it, not only with the losse of their truth, but also of theyr honestye,

it shall not be vnsytting, that all honest and godly disposed maydes cō trne them selues with comely and semely apparell, euen such as bercō eth their degree, state vocation and calling, vtterly reiecting & casting away all nyce vanitie and vaine meanes of aparrel, according to the doctrine of the gospell. I will (sayth S. Paule) that the women be mea neth also maydes and all of the woman kind) aray them selues in cō-ly apparell, with shamfastnes and discrete behauiour, not with broy-ded heare gold or pearles, or costly araye: but as becometh women, that profesle godlynes thorow good workes. Likewyse sayth S. Peter: Womens apparell shall not be outwarde with broyded heare, and hanginge on of golde, eyther in putting on of gorgeous apparell: but in the hid manne, which is in the hart, be without all corruption, so that the spirite be at rest and quyet: which spirit is before god a thing muche set by. For after this manner in the olde tyme did the holy women, which trusted in God, tier themselues. &c. After a most noble and Esth. xiiii.
vertuous Queen confesseth in her prayer vnto God, that she vtterlye abhorred and hated that princelike and gorgious apparel, euen as an vncleane cloth, which she was cōpelled to weare, whē she must shew herself to the people: and that whē she was quyet and alone by her self, she did not were it. If a princes of so noble estate, of so great dignitie and of so hie preheminence did not gladly weare costious apparel, but wished rather to go simply apparelled, and so vsed, when she was alone by her self: how vnseemely a thing then is it for homely and base maydes, for maides farre inferioure to her degre, so to tire them sel-ues, so to tricke and trim their bodies, as though they were mareladies or popets in a game? Vaine and nise apparell becommeth the daughters of the heathen, and not the children of the christians, whistration of the lightnes of the minde: so that what so euer woman delighteth in gorgious garmentes, she setteth forth her self to sale, and declareth euidently her incontinency bothe of body and minde. Looke how much the body is beautified with the galantnesse of apparell: so much is the minde defourmed with the corruption of arroganey and vaine glory. And the more humbly that the body is outwardly clad:

the more humble is the minde within, and the better garnished with the richesse of godly vertues. The decking and trimminge of a christian is inward, not outwarde: it consisteth in minde and not in bo-dye: in vertue and godlinesse, and not in gold and pearl, as it is wrye ward man, leaste the fashion of the inwarde man be defourmed. The maid that desyreth the garnishing of the bodely vesture, spoileth her eth about with her galant apparell to allure the eies of other to be-holde her: neither keepeth she her promesse with Christ, that seketh ra ther to please the people, then her husbande.

And thus must it nedes folow, that she whiche soweth lust to the eye of man, do reape wrath in the sight of God. Lette not the mayde

Hauing fode, and wherewith we may be couered (he sayethe not, garnished, dressed, trimmed and galantly set oute in oure apparell, lyke Maylordes and Maylaidies) let vs be contente. All the godlye from the beginning both men, women and maydes, euen so manye as professed godlinesse, haue ben contented with simple and semely apparel being rather desirous to garnish thinward man with the beautye of vertues, than thoutward man with the galauntnesse of fine apparell. Let al maydes therfore that are studious of vertue, and desyre rather to please God and all godly men, than the worlde & the wirked worldlinges, vtterly sequester their mindes from the filthy desires of vaine and lighte apparell, and contente themselues with suche vestures as become maides that profesle godlinesse, euery one accordyng to their vocation and calling, and aboue all thinges seeke to garnish & trim their inwarde manne with the goodlinesse and beautye of vertues, that their whole life may be nothyng els, then a very mirrour of vertue and godlinesse.

Finally, when the time cometh, that they fele them selues apt vnto mariage, and are desyrous to contract matrimony to thend, that they
Of maides mariages: may auoid al vnclennes, and bring forth fruite accordyng to Gods ordinance, as their parents haue done before them: they must diligently take hede, that they presume not to take in hand so graue, waighty and earnest matter, nor entangle them selues with the loue of anye parson, before they haue made their parents, tutors, frendes, or suche as haue the gouernaunce of them pryuye of their entent, yea and also Children ought not to contract matrimony with out the consent of their parents. require their both councel and consent in the matter, & by no meanes to stablish or appoynt any thing in this behalfe without the determination of their rulers. For this is part of the honor that the chyldren owe to their parents and tutors by the commaundement of god, euē to be bestowed in mariage, as it pleaseth the godly, prudent, & honest parents or tutors to appoynt: with this perswasiō, that they for their age, wisdome and experience, yea and also for the tender loue, singuler beneuolence, and harty good will that they bear toward thē, both know and will better prouide for thē, then they be able to prouide for them selues. The histories of the holy bible teach euidentlye: that the godly fathers in times past appoynted the mariages of their childrē: and that the chyldren attempted nothing in this behalf wythout the councel, consent, determination and appoyntment of theyr parentes. And that authority, which parentes at that time had ouer theyr children, haue fathers and mothers also at this present. And as the chyldren then did not take vpon them to marye withoute the consente of their parentes: no more ought they to do in this our age. The children which presume to mary withoute the councell of theyr parentes, doo greatly offend God, and are fallen away from the obedience, whyche they owe to their parents or tutors in this behalfe, by the commaundement of God. Let al godly maides take hede therfore, & they snarle not them selues with the loue of any other, nor marry with anye parson, before they haue the good wyll of theyr parentes.

Let

yet the receaue no tokens of any men, nor be to much familiar with any person in the way of mariage: but if any be sutes vnto them for to marry with them, and they could well be contented for their godly qualities and honestie of life to take them vnto their husbandes in the feare of God: let them first of all open the matter to their parents or tutors, being contented to be ruled by them, submitting their owne iudgement to the iudgement or wisdom of their superiours, and praying also vnto God, that he may rule and gouerne the hartes of their parentes on suche sort, that they may appoynt that thing, whiche he knoweth to make most vnto his glory and vnto the saluation of their soules. If their parents do agree vnto their desyre: let the thanke God for it, and know that God is the author of this their mariage, & that as he hath brought them together, so will he blesse both them & their marriage, and geue good sucses vnto them in all their godly and honest attempts, so that they shall lacke no good thing. But if their parents do not consent, let the children be cõtent, and think that it is for the best, and that they see more in the matter, then they them selues can perceaue, being far inferiour to them in age, wisdõ, discretion, knowledge, reason, experience. &c. And let them thincke, that this also commeth of God, which ruleth the hearts of their parents, & turneth them which way it pleaseth him, and al for their commoditie and profit, for their health and wealth: yea let them think that God is their father, and they his children: again, that he is their creator, and they his creatures: and therfore that he will not neglect them, but so prouide for them, as a father for his children, and neuer forsake them so longe as they lyue in the obedience of his holy word. Father. Thou holdest the, that parents ought to place their children in mariage: and that children in this behalfe also owe obedience vnto their parents. Son. Verely. Father. Ought not the consent of the children also to be considered in this behalfe no les then the authoritie of the parents? Sonne. God forbid elles. For we rede, that whē Rebecca was promised, that she should go with Abrahams seruaunte to be married vnto Isaac, they sayd: We will call the damosell, and enquire at her mouthe. And they called forth Rebecca, and sayd vnto her: Wylt thou go with this man? and she answered: I will go. &c. Here se we, that thoughe the authoritie of the parents be great ouer their children, yet in the matter of mariage the cõsent of the children may not be neglected. For parents must so vse their authoritie, that they doo not abuse it. They abuse it, when it turneth vnto the hinderaunce, incõmoditie and destruction of their children. The parents therfore must so place their children in mariage, as may profite and not hinder them, yea and that with the good will and consent of the children, to whom the matter chiefly pertayne, that the authoritie of the parents and the consent of the children may go together, and make perfect an holy and blessed mariage. Father. This is commendable. But som parentes greatly abuse their authoritie, whyle they sell their children to other for to be married for worldly gayne and lucre, euen as the Greaser selleth his oxen to the Butcher to be slaine, hauing no respecte to the person, whether he be godly or vngodly, honest or vnhonest, wyse or folysh. &c. If money, if riches, if the muckes of the worlde come: let the child go. The person is goldy ynough, honest ynough, wyse ynough &c. though he be neuer fo lyngodly, wythoutbaill honestly, & a very foole. Sonne. These be wicked perswasions and marriages this made, for the most part haue neuer good successe. The experience dayly teacheth. It becometh therfore all godly and godlesse parents to prouide for their children such mates & yoke fellowes as feare God, loue his word and will diligently prouide for their soules euerlasting prouided, it becometh all faithfull children to obey the authoritie of their parents, and to take such vnto the to be their companions in matrimony, as their Fathers and mothers haue appointed them to liue together in the feare of God, loving one another, as Christ loueth the congregation. Father. Thou speakest godly, my son. What followeth now? Sonne. That we speake of the office and dutie of olde and auncient menne.

Of the office of olde and auncient menne.

First thole menne, whiche be auncient & gro wne in age, ought aboue all thinges so to behaue themselues, that bothe in their wordes and workes they may shyne as great lyghtes among the younger folkes: so that when their Inferiours in age do beholde them, they may truly seme to loke vpon mirrours of vertue and glasses of godlynes, hauing nothyng in them, that they may iustly accuse and condemne, but many thinges, that they ought of dutie bothe to allowe and to folow. And in this behalfe, forasmuch as the study of godlynes is a thing most worthy to be embraced & practised of the younger sort: it shall be fitting and conuenient, that olde and auncient menne geue a good example of the same in their outward behauiour, by resorting vnto the sermons and preachings of Gods worde: by reading the holy scriptures, and by accompanying such, as be louers and auauncers of gods true religion: that the younger folke beholding this their earnest zeale toward the truth of Gods most holy word, may be kindled vnto the lyke exercises, and from their youthe drink in true godlynes, and so at the lasse ware auncient in the knowledg of God and of his sonne Christ Iesu oure Lorde: which knowledg bringeth euerlastyng lyfe. For what is more comly for olde age, whose departure frō this world by the course of nature is at hande, then the consideration & meditation of heauenly things, & an vtter sequestratiō of their minde from the studie of earthly thinges, wholly reposyng themselues in the delyght not of trasitory and mortall pleasures, but of constante and immortal ioies, contrary to the disposicion of the most part of our auncients in this our age, whose propertie is, the longer they liue, the more couetous they are: and the les nede they haue of worldly things the more desyrous they are of the same. Father. Couetousnes is a vice appropriated, as it may seme, to olde mē, according to this olde saying: Cum omnia vicia senescunt: sola auaritia iuuenescit. When all vices ware olde: couetousnes alone wareth young. For menne of this oure time, when they become to that age, that they are redy to depart oute of the worlde, then begin they to purchase land. And when they be redy to be caried out of house into graue, then fall they to bying of houses, and building of gorgious mantions. O bayne madnes, and mad vanitie. Sonne. It is truth. And therfore, as I sayd before, nothyng is more fitting for olde age then the meditation of their hasty departure frō this world, & the continuall consideration of the heauenly ioyes.

John. xvii.

Couetousnes reygneth chiefly in olde men

Secondly

Secondly, the dutie of olde and auncient men is, to declare their good affection & tender zeale toward Gods holy word in their talk & communication: so that their chief speakyng be alwayes of the holy scriptures and of suche thinges as make vnto edifying, that suche as commune at their cõmunication may learne godlynes, knowledge & wisdom. They must take hede, that no lyght and wanton words proceede out of their mouth, which may infect the eares of the hearers, & minister vnto them occasion of leudnes: but let their talke be suche, as shall prouoke vnto vertue, godlines and honestie. God sayth the wise man, hateth an olde body that doteth and is vnchast: not only vnchast in body, but also in words. For as many as profes Christ, specially the auncient, ought to be so farre straunged frõ all vnclẽnes, that it should not once be named amonge them. Let no fylthy communication proceede out of your mouth, sayth S. Paule, but that, whiche is good to edifye with all, as oft as nede is: that it may minister grace vnto the hearers. Oure Sauiour Christ sayth, that at the day of iudgemente we shall rendre an accounte of euery idle word that we haue spoken. And who knoweth not, that euill words corrupt good manners?

1. Cor. xv.

Thirdly, the olde men ought to auoyde the whole lompe of sinne, & vtterly to cast it away from them, and so purely and innocẽtly to liue that their life may be blameles, and an example to the younger folke of all godlynes and honestie, replenished with all kinde of vertues & garnished with al manner of good workes. For as nothing doth more dishonour olde age, then wicked and corrupt lyfe: so likewise nothing doth more beautifye and garnishe olde age, then innocencye of lyfe & godlynes of conuersation, as the wyse man sayth: Age is an honourable thing: neuertheles it standeth not only in the length of tyme, nor in the multitude of yeares: but a mans wisdom is the graie heare, and an vndefiled lyfe is the olde age. S. Paule requireth of the elder mẽ, that they be sober, sage, discrete, sound in the fayth, in loue, in pacience. He wolde haue them sober, that is to say, no dronckardes, no tauernhunters, not geuen to muche wyne, not sytting all day at the alehouse tiplyng and quaffing. For olde age is much geuen to belly cheare, and soone falleth into dronckennes: which vice greatly disgraceth al men, but the older sort specially, whose lyfe ought to be vnspotted, & a myrrour of vertue to all young folke. For dronkennes maketh of a reasonable man a brute beast, spoylyng him of al his senses, so that no part of his body can do his office: & by this meanes is he made a byle dong hyll of Sathan, to be vsed, yea rather abused at his pleasure vnto all syne and wickednes.

Sapi. viii.

Tit. ii

Again, he wolde haue them sage and graue: that is to say, suche persons, as neyther in countenaunce, gestures, words, behauiour or apparell, should shew any poynt of lyghtnes, incontinencie, impudẽcie, or what so euer is contrarye to the dignitie of olde age: but rather so behaue them selues in all points, as becõmeth their age, state and vocation, vnto the good example of other.

Furthermore, he requireth of them that they be discrete: that is to saye, temperate, quiet, not rashe, not vncircumspecte, not furious, not doing any thing of head and without iudgemente: but vsyng such temperaunce in all their affayres, as shall become men of good consideration and grauitie: and suche discretion in all their enterprises, as shall not be

not be counted vnworthy nor vnseemly for their age, that the younger folke beholding this their discretion and temperaunce, maye be occasioned to folowe and practise the lyke in all their attemptes, vtterly reiecting and casting away all rashnes and hedlong iudgement.

Moreouer the holy apostle commaundeth, that olde men be sounde in the faythe: that is to saye, that they truly and constantlye beleue in God, embrace his holy word, continue in the same vnto the end, and by no meanes suffer themselues to be carryed about with euery wynd of doctrine, as the apostle sayeth: Be not caried about with diuers & straūge learning: for it is good, that the hart be stablished with grace: that the younger sort seing this their constancie in gods religiō, may be occasioned the rather at their example to do the like, and grow dayly more and more in the knowledge of godlines, till at the last they also more waxe auncient in Christe.

Hebr. xiii.

Item it is required of auncient men, that they be also sounde in loue: he meaneth, toward their neyghboure. For out of their faith toward God ought true, perfect and vnfayned loue issue towarde their christen brother, yea toward their very enemy for gods sake: not only inwardly or with lippes to loue hym, but also outwardely and with dedes, redy at all times, to succour his necessitie, & to do for him, what so euer lyeth in their power as S. John sayth: Let vs not loue in word nor in tong, but in worke and truth. For he that is sound in loue, loueth his neyghbour as him self, & is the very same to his neyghbour, that Christ is to him, as S. Jhō saith: Herby perceaue we loue: because he (Christe) gaue his lyfe for vs: and we ought to gene oure liues for the brethren. But whoso hathe this worldes good, and seeth his brother haue nede, and shutteth vp his cōpassion from him: how dwelleth the loue of God in him?

1. Johan. iii.

1. Johan. iii.

In fine, the blessed apostle S. Paule chargeth the olde and auncient men, that they also be sounde in pacience: that is to say, if God at any time sendeth them aduersitie either for the trial of their faith, or for the correction of their manners, that they grudge not againste God, but pacientlye and thankefully beare his louing visitacion, beyng fully perswaded, that that crosse which God hath layd vpon them, cometh not from an angry but from a louing hearte, euen such an hart as seeketh not their destruction, but their saluation. For what son is he whom the father chastneth not? If ye endure chastening, sayth the Apostle, God offereth himself vnto you, as vnto sonnes. But if ye be not vnder correction, wherof all are partakers, then are ye bastards and not sonnes. For whō the Lord loueth, him he chasteneth: yea he scourgeth euery sonne that he receaueth. Agen, if theyr neyghbour at any time offend them eyther in word or dede, that they seke not streyghte wayes to be auenged of them, and to acquite euill for euill, but rather pacientlye & quietly to beare it at their neyghbours hand, obeying thys councell of S. Paule, whiche sayth: If it be possible (asmuche as is in you) lyue peaceably with all men. Derely beloued auenge not youre selues, but rather gene place vnto wrath. For it is written: vengaūce is myne: I will reward, sayth the Lorde. Therfore be not ouercome of euill, but ouercome euill with goodnes. And as S. Peter sayeth: Christe suffered for vs, leauing vs an ensample, that we should folow his steppes: whiche did no sinne, neyther was there guyle founde in hys his mouth: which when he was reuiled, reuiled not agayne: when he suffered, he threatned not. But cõmitted the vengeaunce to him, that iudgeth righteously. Patience is a present remedy against all euiles, with the whiche except we be enarmed, we can neyther liue godly before God, nor charitably before our neyghbours. Patience is the bõd of perfection, without the whiche all neyghbourly loue doth decay, & all quyetnes both of body and mynde cease and goth away. Thorow your patience, sayth our sauiour Christ, shall ye possesse youre soules. And the apostle sayth: ye haue nede of patience, that after ye haue dõ the will of God, ye might receaue the promes. Again, let vs run with patience vnto the battaile that is set before vs, loking vnto Iesus the captayne and finisher of our fayth, which for the ioye that was set before him, abode the crosse and despised the shame, and is set downe on the right hand of the throne of God. Patience. Luke.xxi. Heb.xii

Thus haue I set forth the office and dutie of olde and auncient men, euen as I haue learned oute of the word of God. Father. Godly hast thou declared all thinges. Let me nowe heare, what is the dutie of olde and auncient women, Sonne. I will doo it gladly.

Of the office and dutie of olde and auncient women.

FIrst, suche, as be godly and auncient matrones, are commaunded of the holy Apostle. S. Paule, that they weare such raymẽt as becommeth holynes. Olde women for the most parte, if they be riche and of habilitie, are greatly desirous, when fauour and beauty fayleth them, to garnishe and set forth them selus with sumptuous aparel, that by this meanes at the least they may commende them selues to the people and allure their eyes vnto the consideration and beholding of them, that in som part they may sticke in the eyes of men, and not vtterly be reiected for their wrinckled forehead and withered face: where as they ought not to seke how they may please men by their vayne and lyghte apparell, but how they may please God by the deckyng and trimming of their inward man with the beautifull araye of vertues, forasmuch as they know, that they being aged, can not long continue in this world, but must shortly depart. For after this manner, sayth blessed Peter, in the olde time did the holy women, which trusted in God, tier them selus. Therfore the holy apostle willing to bridle this folish, vayne and carnall affection of trimming them selues in their olde age, cõmaundeth all sage and auncient matrons, that they laying a syde all lyght and lyghtlyke apparell, araye and tire them selues with such raymente, as becommeth the women that professe godlines. Father. Not without a cause. For to what end should they go about to please ỳ world, that are redy to go out of the world? If they be olde women and maryed: not lyght apparell, but sad raiment pleaseth a godly husband. If they be vnmaried: what is more comely, then to weare such aray, as becõmeth their state, profession and age? In olde womã to be decked with galant apparell, is none other thing, then to daube ouer an olde rottẽ tottering waull with new plaistering. Therfore those womẽ ar most of all to be commended, which consyderyng their age, apparell themselues according to the same, al vanitie and lyghtnes laid aside. Son. Truth it is, But I wil go forth with the office of olde women, as S. Titu.ii. 1.Peter.iii

Paule describeth it.

Secondly, forasmuch as olde age is naturally bent to much babbling, and specially such as be of the feminine kind, whō by the iudgement of all wyse and learned men, silence dothe rather commend then speache: S. Paule willing to restrayne this their immoderate manner of talking, comaundeth, that the auncient women by no meanes do abuse their tong, eyther by prating, or by fauls accusyng and euyll reporting of other: but that they rather geue them selues to silence, or when they speake, so speake as it becometh women of grauitie, wysdō and knowledg, without reproche or ignominye to other, alwayes remembring, that at the day of iudgement they must render an accompt
Mat. xii. before the hygh iudge Christ of euery idle word, that they haue spokē.

Thirdly, forasmuch as nothing doth so greatly prouoke olde womē vnto babling, as to much drinking (for whē the wyne is in, the witte is out) and olde women naturally loue well tiplyng: the holy Apostle cōmaundeth, that the auncient matrones shall not geue them selues to much wine but rather embrace sobrietie and temperauncie, beyng content with that, that sufficeth, and not oppresseth nature. For as sobrietie is the nurse of manye noble vertues: so likewise dronkennes is 17 the mother and nurse of many leud vices. And where dronkēnes taketh place, neyther body nor minde doth his office. The minde is void of memorye, and altogether without vnderstanding. The body is so intoxicate & out of all order, that neyther eye, tonge, hande, nor fote can do their office. And albeit that dronkennes is vile and discōmendable in all creatures: yet in olde women, whiche ought to be Mestresses of sobrietie, and mirrours of all vertue, it is not only vile and discommendable, but also horrible and detestable. For an olde womā ouercom with dronkennes, is made a sincke of all euills. There is no synne, which easly floweth not into her. There is no vertue, wherof she maketh not shipwracke. In consyderation wherof, the blessed Apostle S. Paule chargeth the olde womē soberly and temperatly to behaue them selues in their diet, that they may geue good ensample to the younger women, and be the more apt to do such thyngs, as be long vnto their vocation and callyng: lest that they doing the contrary, forget Christen modestie and grauitie, and fall vnto suche leudnes and lightnes, as is vnsemely for their estate.

Fourthly and finally, forasmuch as it is not sufficient for true Christianes not to do euil, except they also do good, as the Psalmographe
Psal. xxxiiii sayth, depart from euill, and doo good: therfore the holy Apostle, after that he hath disswaded the olde women from vanitie of apparell, frō much bablyng & from dronckennes, declareth, what good they ought Math. iii. to doo, lest that they being trees without frute, be hewen downe and castinto the fyre. And this good worke, that he requireth of thē, is, that i. Timo. ii. they teache honest things. Fa. But S. Paule in a notherplace sayth: I suffer not a woman to teache, neyther to vsurp authoritie ouer the man, but to be in silence. Sonne. The same S. Paule also in a nother
i. Cor. xiiii place, expounding what is ment by those wordes, which you now rested, sayth: Let youre women kepe silence in the congregations. For
Gen. iii. it is not permitted vnto them to speake, but to be vnder obedience, as sayth the lawe. If they will learne any thing, let them aske their husbands at home. For it is a shame for womē to speake in ỹ cōgregatiō.

Of

Of these wordes of S. Paule, we learne, that it is not lawful for women to teach in the congregation openly, which only appertayne vnto men, yea and vnto suche men alone, as are appoynted by publique authority vnto the ministery: notwithstanding women to preach and teach in their owne houses, it is not only not forbidden, but also most straightly commaunded. For who knoweth not, that euery man and euery woman is a bishop in their owne house, and oughte to teache their family, and to bring them vp in the doctrin and nourtour of the Lord our God? It is therfore lawful also for old and auncient Matrones to teach. Father. Whome shuld they teach? Sonne. Yonge women, saith S. Paule. Father. What shoulde they teache them? Sonne. To be sober minded: to loue their husbandes: to loue their children: to be discreat: chast, huswiuely, good, obedient to their husbands: that the worde of God be not euill spoken of. Father. I loked, that thou shouldest haue said vnto me, that the auncient matrones shuld teach the younge women trimly to daunce, mintonly to play vpon the lute or virginals, coningly to work with the nedle, finely to apparel themselues, handsomely to play the seruinge maides, pleasantlye to entertaine straungers, younkers, and gentlemen &c. Sonne. These be thynges of vanitye, rather prouokinge vnto leudnesse than vnto vertue, heretofore abhorred and hated of all modest and sober women. The workes and qualities, which S. Paule here setteth forthe, that the auncient matrones shoulde teache the younge women, are necessarye workes and godlye qualities. Can any thinge be more necessary or godlye in a christen common weale, than to bringe vppe maides and younge women vertuously: and to teache them to be sober minded, to loue their husbandes, to loue their children, to be discrete, chaste, huswiuely, good, obedient to their husbandes &c. Father. If al our maids and younge women were thus brought vppe, we should not haue so many idle, vnhonest, and leud women, as we haue at thys present day. Sonne. To bring this thing to pas, it is expedient, ỹ by publike authority scholes for women children be erected & set vp in euery christen cõmon weale, & honest, sage, wise, discreate, sober, graue & learned matrones, made rulers and mastresses of the same, and that honest & liberal stipends be appoynted for the said scholemastresses, whych shall trauail in the bringing vp of yong maides, that by this meanes they may be occasioned the more gladly & willingly to take paines. And to this end without doubt at the beginning were the monasteries of solitary women, whome we heretofore called Nonnes, built and set vp, and endowed with possessyons of our godly auncestoures, although in processe of time they were greatlye abused, so that they were made of christen and free Scholes, prysons of Antichrist, and as Saynte Apo. xviii. Iho̅n saithe, habitations of Deuyls, and holdes of al foul spirites, cages of al vncleane and hatefull birdes.

Scholes for women children ought to be set vp.

The yong mayds were not enforced to weare thys or that apparel: to abstain from thys or that kynde of meats: to syng thys or that seruice: to say so many prayers: to shaue their heds: to vow chastity, & for euer to abide in their cloister vnto their dying day. But contrariwise they might weare what apparell they woulde, so that it were honest and semelie, and such as becommeth maydens that profes godlines. They might freely eate all kindes of meates according to the rule of the Gospell, auoyding all excesse and superfluitie, yea and that at all tymes. Theyr prayers were free and without compulsion, euery one praying, whan the holye ghost moued theyr hartes to praye: yea and that suche prayers, as present necessitie required, and that also not in a straunge tonge, but in such language, as they did rightwel vnderstand. To shaue their heds, and to kepe such like superstitious obseruances, as our Nonnes did in times past, and yet do in the kyngdom of the Pope, they were not compelled. For al that they were cõmaunded to do of their scholemastresses and gouernesses, was nothing els thã the doctrin of the gospel, and matters appertaining vnto honest and ciuil manners: whom they most willingly obeyed. Moreouer it was lawful for them to go out of the cloysture, when they would, or when they were required of their frendes: and also to marrye when and with whome they would, so that it were in the Lord. And wold God there were some consideration of this matter hadde among the rulers of the christen common weale, that the yong mayds might be godly brought vp, and learne from their cradles to be sober minded, to loue their husbands, to loue their children, to be discrete, chast, huswiuely, good and obedient to theyr husbandes, accordinge to the doctrine of Sainte Paule. Father. It is a matter mooste worthye to be consydered. For if it be thoughte conueniente) as it is mooste conNote. uenient, that scholes should be erected and set vp for the right education and bringing vp of the youthe of the male kynde: why shoulde it not also be thought conuenient, that scholes be built for the godly instruction and vertuous bringing vp of the youth of the female kynde? Is not the woman the creature of God, so well as the man? And as dere vnto God, as the man? Is not the woman a necessarye member of the comon weale? haue not we all oure beginning of her? Are not we borne nursed and brought vp of a woman? Do not the children for the most part proue euen such as the mothers are, of whom they com? Can the mothers bring vp their children vertuously, when they themselues be voyde of all vertue? Can the nurses instill any goodnes into the tender brestes of their nurse children, when they themselues haue haue learned none? Can that woman gouern her house godly, whiche knoweth not one poynt of godlynes? Who seeth not now then howe necessarye the vertuous education and bringinge vp of the womankinde is? Whiche thinge canne not be conueniently brought to passe, except scholes for that purpose be appoynted, and certaine godly matrones ordained gouernesses of the same, to bring vp the maides and younge women in the doctrine and nourtoure of the Lorde. And verely in my iudgement, they doo no lesse deserue wel of the christen common weale, that found and stablishe scholes with honest stipendes for the education and bringinge vp of the women children in godlynesse and vertue: then they, which erect and set vp scholes for the institutiõ of the men children in good letters and godlye manners.

Sonne,

Sonne. It is truely saide. But if it shall please you, I wyll goo forthe to recyte the offices and dueties of the other degrees. And forasmuch as we haue nowe laste of all talked of Scholes: I wyll fyrste of all rehearse the duetye and office of Scholemasters: that they also maye learne, howe to behaue them selues in theyr vocation and callynge.
Father. Let it so be.

Of the offyce and duety of Scholemasters.

SOnne. I haue hard our preacher and our Catechiste also many times say, that that common weale, where a good magistrate, a faithful preacher, and a diligent scholemaster is, can not decay and perishe, but rather greatly prosper and florish. For thorow ỹ magistrate publique peace is maintained, bertue is auaunced, vice is depressed. Thorow the preacher true religion is knowen: the woorde of God, which is the foode of our soules, is taughte. and the holye misteries of Christes churche are ministred vnto the great consolation and ioy of al the faithfull. magistrate. Preacher.
Thorow the Scholemaster the youth of the Christen common weale is brought vp in the knowledge of God and of his holye woorde, and also in the science of good letters and vertuous manners: and so trained vp in them from their very cradles, that as they growe in age, so likewise they encrease in godlinesse, vertue, learninge, knowledge, good manners and innocency of life: and afterward become the faithful seruauntes of God, and profitable membres of the cõmon weale, yea and good Cityzens of the country, where they inhabite. Therfore thole rulers and Magistrates, in whose power it is to chuse and appoynte Scholemasters, oughte aboue all thinges to take heede, that they electe and ordaine suche Scholemasters, suche teachers and instructoures of the Christen youthe, as vnfaynedlye, and from the verye bottome of the heart feare God, loue his word, embrace his religion, tender the glorye of God, wyshe the encrease of true godlinesse in all persons, are learned, are vertuous in their life and conuersatyon, desyre well to the christen publique weale, and aboue al thynges seke howe best to profytte, further, auaunce, promote and set forwarde the youthe committed to their charge in all godlinesse, learninge, knowledge and vertue. Father. God graunt vs many suche scholemasters. But nowe declare vnto me accordyng to thy promise the office and duetye of a Scholemaster. Schole master. What men scholemasters ought to be.

Sonne. Fyrst, forasmuch as the moste noble treasures and most precious Jewels of the Christen common weale, are committed to a Scholemaster to be kepte and preserued in safety, yea to be kept and preserued in such sort, that he may rendre thẽ home again much more noble, precious and glorious, then he receyued them: (I meane the children of the Christians, in whome our sauioure Christe so greatlye delited, that he commaunded them to be broughte vnto him: yea he tooke them vppe in hys armes, louinglye embraced them and blessed them, pronouncynge, that the kyngedome of heauen pertayneth math. xix. mark. x.

And that the scholemaster maye doo thys thinge the more aptlye, and with the greater frute: it shall be conuenient that he reade vnto his Scholers some godlye and learned Catechisme, containinge the Principles or chefe poyntes of Christen religion, and that he exercise them in the same daily, diligently searching whether they truelye vnderstande the thynges whyche they reade. If they vnderstande them not: so is it the duetye of a good Scholemayster, to declare it vnto them, and to shewe them the true vnderstandynge of all thynges, leaste they pronounce after the manner of a Paret without any vnderstanding, and profit nothing by theyr studies. For what dothe hastye pronouncynge profyt, where vnderstandynge is absent?

Christen children ought to be brought vp in christen doctryne.

☞ After that the Scholemaster hathe diligentlye exercised hys scholers in the Doctrine of the Catechisme, so that nowe they vnderstand the Principles of Christen religyon: it shall greatly profytte vnto the encrease of godlye knowledge, if he ones in the daye reade vnto them a lesson oute of the new testament of our sauioure Jesu Christe.

And all be it the whole booke, beinge the woorde of life, and the foode of oure soules, be mooste worthye to be learned so perfectlye, that it maye readelye be recited by hearte: yet forasmuche as tender wyttes are not to be accombred wyth manye thinges, leaste they be there dulled, where they oughte to be quickned: it shall be good, that the Scholemaster doo acquaint his scholers principallye with these parcels of the newe Testamente: that is to saye, with the Gospell of Saint Mathew and of Saint Jhon, and with those Epistles whych Saint Paul wrote to the Romains, and to the Galathians. For who so vnderstandeth these parcels well, he shall easlye vnderstande the residue of the Newe Testament, yea of the whole bible. For in them is contayned, what so euer is taughte in the whole scripture, necessarye for oure saluatyon. In those wrytinges therfore of Sainte Mathewe, Jhon, and Paule, let the Scholemaster exercise his scholers bothe daily and diligently.

And

And in these their lessons, as occasyon shall serue, let them sometyme handle and set forth vnto them some common place of the holy scripture, as of God, of Gods word, of the law, of the Gospel, of fayth, of charity, of hope, of good workes, of our iustification by Christ, of baptisme, of the Lordes supper, of remission of sinnes, of the laste iudgement, of the resurrection, of the euerlastinge ioyes of the faithfull, of the endlesse paynes of the vnfaithful. &c. Likewise let them sometime entreate of some vertue or of some vice. And in the treatise of vertue, let them declare how acceptable it is to God, and how God in all ages hath blessed them, that haue practised that vertue in their life and conuersation, whether it be humilitye, modestye, sobrietye, concorde, peace, patience, or any other vertue. Let them alledge certaine histories concerning that matter out of the holy scriptures, that the scholers by this meanes may the better be acquainted with the worde of God, and be the soner brought vnto the loue and practise of the same vertue. Wehan they shal entreat of any kinde of sinne, let them payne and set forth the abhomination of that sinne, how horrible & greuous it is in the sight of God, how pestilerous, noysome and hurtfull it is to man, how greuously it hathe bene plaged and punished in euerye age, and howe the practisers of that sinne haue alwayes come vnto a most miserable end in this world, as they may speak nothing of the intollerable paines, which they now suffer, and worldes without end shall suffer in that lake that brenneth with fire and brimstone. And here also let them call to remembraunce some histories of the holye scripture, which manifestly declare the great anger of God, agaynst all such as vse that sinne, or anye other kinde of wickednesse, as the Psalmographe saith: Thou art the God that hath no pleasure in wyckednesse; neither shal anye euil dwell with thee. Such as be folishe, shal not stand in thy syght: thou hatest all them that work vanity &c. Psal.v.

These thinges shal meruelously kindle and stur vp the minds of the scholers both vnto the loue of vertue, and also vnto the hate of vice, and shall so plant godlinesse in their yong and tender breasts, that as they grow in age, so likewise shall they encrease in all godlinesse and vertue, and neuer depart from it, so long as they liue: so greatly doth it profit to be acquainted with good thinges from the tender yeres. For what so euer is than drouken in, abideth stedfastly, and falleth not lightly away.

Moreouer forasmuch as the education and bringing vp of a child doth either make or marre him, whether it be in religion, doctryne or maners: it shalbe necessary, that a good & godly scholemaster enarme the breasts of his scholers against al heresies & wicked opinions wyth the sound & wholsom doctrin of the holy scripture: yea & that so much the more, because this our age is most miserably vexed wyth diuers & sondry damnable sectes, as Papistes, Anabaptistes, Arrians, Dauidians, Adamites, Libertines, Epicures &c. which euery one of them goo about to defend their vaine opinions, false errours and wicked heresies with tothe and nayle, and shame not also manye times to alledge the scriptures for the confirmation & maintainance of their deuelish doctrine, as the Deuil plaid with Christ, that they maye the easlyer Mat.iiii.

The papistes teache, that Christ alone is not our mediatour, aduocate and intercessour, but if we will haue oure prayers heard, & our petitions graunted of God, we must also desyre ye helpe of Mary ye virgin, of Paule, Peter, James, Christopher, Katerin, Margaret, &c and make them oure mediatours, aduocates and intercessours vnto God that they may pray for vs. Against this wicked errour of the papistes set these sentences of the holy scripture. Oure sauiour Christ saith, I am the way, and the truth and the lyfe. No man commeth vnto the father but by me. And what so euer ye shall aske in my name, that will I do, that the father may be glorifyed by the sonne. If ye aske any thing in my name, I will do it. If ye abyde in me, and my wordes abyde in you: what so euer ye will, aske, and ye shall haue it. Ye haue not chosen me but I haue chosen you, and haue ordayned you, that ye should go and bring forth frute, & that your frute may abyde: that what soeuer ye shall aske the father in my name, he may geue it you. Verely, verely I say vnto you, what soeuer ye shall aske the father in my name, he will geue it you. Hitherto ye haue asked nothing in my name. Aske & ye shall receaue, that your ioy may be perfect. S. Paule sayeth. There is one God, & one mediatour betwene God & man, euen the man Christ Iesus, which gaue him self a ransom for all men. Agayn, Christ is on the right hand of God, and maketh intercessiō for vs. Also in a nother place he saythe: Christe is able euer to saue them to the vttermost that come vnto God by him, seing he euer liueth to make intercession for vs. S. John also sayeth: If any man sinne, we haue an aduocate with the father Iesus Christ the righteous, he (eis) that obtayneth grace for oure sinnes: not for our sinnes only, but also for the sinnes of the whole worlde.

Christ alone is oure mediatour & aduocate.

The papistes teache, that there is a place of purgatorie after this life called Purgatorie, in ye which the children of mens soules are most miserably tormented with the most greuous payne of fyre, and shall not be delyuered from those intolerable tormentes, till they haue either satisfyed themselues by suffering these worthy and condign punishmentes for their offences, or els be redemed from thence by the sacrifice of the popish masse, by the prayers and merites of the monkes, or by doing the workes of almose where the holy scripture teacheth vs none other purgatorie for the soule, but only the precious bloud of our Lorde and sauiour Christ Iesu. Therfore against this their deuelysh dreame of purgatorie, bring forth these vttrances of gods word. Saint John sayth. The bloud of Iesus Christ maketh vs clene from all sin. Agayn, Christe washed vs from oure sinnes in his owne bloude, and made vs kinges and priestes vnto God his father. S. This shall a godly & diligent Scholemaster gather such floures out of the holy Bible for his scholers from time to time, as occasion shall serue: with the swete and stronge sauour wherof they may repel and put away the pestiferous and mortall odours of the errours and heresies not only of the Papistes, but also of al other sectaries, whom the deuill hath all ready raysed vp, or hereafter shall reyse vp vnto the great disturbaunce of Christes Churche: that with what so euer errout or heresye any sectary shall assayle them, they thus defensed with the armours of the holy ghost, may not be seduced, but continew constant and stedfast in the wholsom doctrine of Christ that master and Iohn. viii. teacher of truth vnto the ende, & so be made his true disciples; as christ him selfe sayth: If ye continue in my word, then are ye my worthy disciples: and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shal make you free. Let the scholemaster therfore be diligent to gather together the wycked opinions of al sectaries, and the holy scriptures that do impugne and condemne them, and deliuer them to the scholers to commend to memorie, that they beyng thus enarmed against the subtill assaultes of sathan and of his ministers, which many times chaunge thēselues into aungels of lyght, that thorow the glistering visar of fayned holines and thorow swete and flatteryng wordes they may deceaue the hearts of the simple, maie stand strong and stedfast against all the infernall armye, and lyke valeaunt souldiours mightely conquer, vanquishe and ouercome all oure enemies vntothe glorye and prayse of oure graund captaine Jesus Christ, king of kings and Lorde of lordes.

Father. If the youth of the christians were thus brought vp frō there tender yeares in the knowledge of gods most holy and blessed worde, and had they breastes thus furnished with the armoures of the holye scriptures against the damnable opinions of the papistes, & of such other wicked sectaryes, as the deuill hathe raysed vp in this our tyme: the christen common wealth should sone haue a nother face both vnder trane and manners. For the alone occasion of all the euils, wherwith we are troubled most miserably now a daies, whether we respect learnyng or lyfe, cometh only of the naughty and wicked education of the youth. If the youth were godly and vertuously brought vp, and in the feare of God trayned from their young yeares, and were taught diligently the worde of God from time to time, not only all contention of doctrine, but also all corruption of lyfe should sone fall awaye: and all

godlynes and vertue succede in the places therof, Son. That is moste true. Therfore, as I sayd before, the principall point of a good scholemaster is euen from the verye cradles to sow the sedes of godlynes & vertue in the tender breastes of the young childrē, that as they growe in age, so they may encrease in all godlines and vertue, and neuer depart frō them, so long as they lyue, according to the saying of the wise man: It is a common saying, that a child, when he is olde shall not go away from such things, as he learned in his youth. For to teache them nothing but the doctrine of Hethen and prophane writers, is not to edifye but to destroy, not to correct but to corrupt the youthe of the christians. And such Scholemasters are more mete to teache and bringe vp the childrē of the Turkes and of such other miscreaunts, then the childrē of them that profesſe Christ. This commaundement of Christ ought the scholemasters continually to haue before their eyes: Firste of all seke the kingdom of God and the righteousnes therof. Father. After that the scholemaster haue diligently planted the religion of Christ in the tender breastes of the childrē by teaching them the worde of God: what is then his duty to do? Son. To teache them good letters, I meane Poetes, Oratours, Historiographers, Philosophers, &c. not that they should be mates with Gods word, but rather hādmaids vnto it, and serue to setforth the honour & glory therof. For vnto this ende ought all liberall sciences to be studied & learned: euen that they myght not deprasse but auaunce the true religiō of God. For eloquēce without godlines is as a tynge in a swynes snoute: yea all artes and sciences not coupled with the loue of religion, are rather instruments of wickednes then of godlynes: and as Tully sayth, to geue to a leude man eloquence without wisdom, is none other thing then to geue vn to him armours to destroye the common weale. But in reading these kynds of authors to his disciples, the scholemaster must diligētly take hede, that he rede those only to his scholers that be moste profitable, & contayne in them no matter, that may eyther hynder the religion of God or the innocencye of manners. Som writers in many places of their workes are wanton and vnhoneſt, as Martialis, Catullus, Tibullus, Propertius, Cornelius, Gallus, and such lyke: some wycked & vngodly, as Lucianus. &c. From the reading of these and suche lyke lyghy writers, is conuenient that the youth do obstaine: leſt by the reading of them they make shipwracke both of theyr sayth and māners, and in their tender yeares drynke in suche corruption, as shalbe noysome vnto them all their lyfe after. For as he sayth, euyll wordes corrupt good manners. The very heathen wer so ware and circumspecte in the vertuous and honeſt bringing vp of their youthe, that they by no meanes would suffer the breasts of their childrē to be infected with the reading of vncleane and wanton writers, although neuer so wise, learned and eloquente Rede we not, that the Lacedemonianes commaūded that the bokes of the Poet Archilochus should be caryed out of their citie, because they entreated of vayne, folishe, lyght, wanton & trifling matters: and that they by no meanes would suffer their children to reade them, leſt by the reading of them they shoulde get more hurte to their manners, then profyt to their wittes? They estemed eloquence eloquence nothing in comparison of vertue and honestye. Eloquence is to be embraced, but not with the losse of vertue. All thinges ought to geue place to vertue and to innocencye of lyfe. Plato that moste diuine and noble Philosopher also expelled all Poetes out of his common weale, as persons occupied about vaine, false, lying and wanton matters, vnworthy to be red of such as tender the auauncemēt of vertue. Was not the poete Ouidius banished of Augustus Cæsar for the bokes, which he made De arte amandi (he might more iustly haue teared them, De arte meretricandi, because that thorow the reading of them he corrupted the mindes of the youthe) yea and so banished, that he could neuer after obtayne fauour to returne into his countrey, notwithstanding the making of his bokes to the contrary De remedio amoris, but after his long and miserable banishment and lyfe amonge the barbarous and rude Getians, most miserably perished and dyed in that most sauage and wild countrey? A punishment worthy of such fact. If the wise Heathen thought it a thinge vnsitting, to haue their youth corrupted with the reading of vayne and wanton bokes, & therfore banished both them & theyr authors out of their cities: how much more ought the christians to be ware and circumspecte, that nothing be red to theyr youth, that may infect them with any leudnes, or worke corruption eyther to their fayth or to their manners. It was wel said of our coūtrey man master Lilye somtime scholemaster of Paules in Londō: Puerum nil nisi pura decent. It wer not oute of the way for the scholemaster to haue these verses of the Poet alwaies before his eies to put him in remembraunce that a childe ought neyther to heare nor to see any thing, whiche is not good, godly, honest and commendable.

Iuuenalis Satira. xiiii

This also is to be considered, that the Scholemaster in all hys lessons and readings do seke an occasion to speake of vertue & godlines, alwayes inculkyng and beating into the heads of his Scholers, that which may prouoke them vnto vertue, and fray them away from vice, that from their tender yeares, godlines may grow vp with them. For. To enterlase godlines in ỹ lessons of prophane writers, maketh greatly vnto the auauncement of vertue: & Heathen authors so redde profyt very moch. But what remayneth of the office of a scholemaster? Son. After ỹ the scholemaster haue sowē in ỹ tender breastes of his scholers the seedes of godlines & doctrine, it shal be necessary that he also plāte in them good manners, and bryng them vp in humanitie and ciuilitie of lyfe, that they may know how to behaue them selues in al places and toward all persones, lest the wildenes and rusticitie of manners destroy that in them, which vertue and learning haue bylt and set vp: alwayes hauing before his eyes these our common prouerbes: A child wer better vnborne, then vntaught. Again, manners make a man. Let the scholemaster instruct them, how they shal behaue them selues in the temples: abrode in the stretes: at home in the houses: in theyr playes and pastimes: at the table in dinner or supper: toward their parentes, rentes, magistrates, superiours, elders, citesins, scholefelowes, & gene rally towarde all men and in all thinges: that their behauiour maye answer in all points to their knowledge and learning, and that their life maye be blameles before men, so that they may prosper in wysdom and age, and in fauoure with God and man. Father. This is a good point of a diligent scholemaster. For I see not, what the excellency of learning profiteth, if ciuilitie of manners lacketh. Uerely learnyng without manners, is as a gold ryng in a swynes snoute. But is there any other thing behind, that belongeth vnto the dutie of a scholema-ster? Sonne. Yea forsoth. It is not sufficient that a scholemaster do his endeuour to make his scholers vertuous and well mannered, excepte he him self also be vertuous and well manered. For examples in the eyes of children moue more then wordes. If the master teacheth ver-tue and good manners, & he him self be vicious & leud, what profiteth it? what he edifyeth in wordes, he destroyeth in manners. And as a certayne man sayth: It is an vncomely thing for a teacher, to reproue that vice in a nother, wherof he him self is giltye. It becometh a good scholemaster to do that, he cõmaundeth: & not to thinck that he hathe don his dutie sufficiently, when he hath taught wel: although his life be neuer so leud & wicked. Such scholemasters are like to the scribes and Phareseis, of whõ the lord speaketh in the gospel on this mãner:

The Scribes & the Phareseies sit in Moyses seate. All therfore what so euer they bid you obserue, that obserue and do: but do not ye after their workes. For they say & do not. And as S. Paule sayth: thou that teachest a nother, teachest not thy self. A godly & an honest scholema-ster therfore must not only prouide, that he teach his scholers good & godly things, but also that he practise the same in his lyfe & conuersa-tion vnto the good ensample of his disciples: forasmuch as the proper-tie & nature of youth is to folow ỹ mãners of their superiours, wherther they be good or euill, being perswaded, that it is lawfull for them to do, whatsoeuer they see their scholemaster do before their eyes. In consideration wherof let the teacher diligẽtly take hede, that no vain or light cõmunication procede out of his moth: that he vse no vnsemly gesture: again, that all his behauiour be such, so godly, so honest, so ver tuous: that his scholers may see nothing in him worthy to be reprehẽ ded: but many, yea all things most worthy to be followed: euer hauing before his eyes this saying of Christe: Who so euer dothe offend one of these litle ones, which beleue in me: it wer better for him that a milstõ were hanged about his neck, & that he were drowned in the depth of the sea: remembring also, that the hope of the christen cõmon weale is cõmitted vnto him of speciall trust to be brought vp in godlines & ver-tue: which to frustrate, wer more then double wickednes: again, not forgetting, that in teaching the youth he hath God & his holy angels which do behold him and all his doings, so that if he doo well, he shal not go vnrewarded, but shal haue manifold blessings poured vpõ him both in this world & in the life to come: contrariwise, if he behaue him self vnsemly in his office, he shal not escape vnplaged, neither in this world nor in the world to come. Father. If scholemasters would diligẽtly do their dutie, we should haue a blessed cõmõ weale, repenished with all know-

knowledge, godlynes, wisdom, learning, innocency of lyfe, ciuilitie of lyfe, ciuilitie of manners: all barbarousnes, rudenes, ignorancy, superstition, papistry, idolatry, vtterly banished and dryuē out of the boūds of christianitie. But come of my dere son, and tell me if any thinge yet remayne, that pertaineth vnto the dutie of a scholemaster. Sonne. One thig is yet behind, and this it is: that he, which is a scholemaster, kepe a measure in chastisyng his scholers. For the most part of teachers do ouer shot them selues in this behalfe, and haue no mean in punishing. They think them selues then best scholemasters, and most faithfull to do their office, whē they teach lytle, and beate much. But a good scholemaster must vse both wisdom and discrestion in this matter.

Of the chastising of scholers.

He must consider the nature of his scholers. Some be so gentle & corrigible, that wordes may seme abundantly to suffice, and that without stripes. Some are so stubburne, stiffe necked, and almost incorrigible, that to bring them into the way, and to make them to prosper in their studies, there is nede not only of wordes but also of stripes. The childzen, whiche eyther are tender, or tender witted, or fearefull, or easye to be reclaymed: the Scholemaster ought gently to entreat, and to rebuke them only with wordes, or at the least, if they offend ofte, to minister vnto them easy punishment. But those childzen, which are negligent, frowarde, stubburne, and rather geuen to play then to studies, yea & that of set purpose: the master ought not only with wordes sharply, to reproue them, but also with stripes largely to chastice them. Notwithstanding in al punishments a measure is to be obserued, lest thorow to moche seueritie, wittes rather be dulled thē quickned: studies rather oppressed then excited, and learning rather hated then embraced. And this also ought to be considered in punishmentes: that before the scholemaster beate his childzen, he fyrst of all lay theyr faultes before them, so that they them selues are compelled to graunt that they haue greuously offended, and haue iustly deserued to be punished: and shew vnto them out of the word of God, that they haue done amisse: & that God is angry with them, and will greuously plage them, if they will not amend: agayn, that he himselfe is loth to punish them, as one that rather reioyceth in their well doing, then otherwise: and if it were not so wel for the amendment of them selues, which haue so offended, as for the example of other, he could rightwell be content to let them go vnpunished. These thinges thus handled, let hym punish the offenders: yet so, that they may thinke, that that punishment, wherby theyr master minister vnto them for their faultes, cometh rather of loue, then of hatred towarde them. And that they may the better be perswaded thus to thinck, let the scholemaster, as I sayde before, vse a moderatiō in punishing, and not beate them lyke stockefishes, as a greate nomber of scholemasters doo: which like frantick men, when any thing offend them, be it neuer so litle, so furiously behaue them selues towarde their scholers, that a man beholding them, may right well think, that they are vexed with som infernal furie. Let the scholemaster therfore kepe a measure in chastisyng, and folow the example of a good father which neyther with tomuch softnes marreth his childzen by making them to wanton: nor yet with tomoche seueritie dulleth them, theyr wittes, wits, & their memory, but rather so vseth his correction, ỳ the childre are more amẽded then hindred, according to this cõmaundement of S. Paul: ye fathers moue not your childrẽ vnto wrath, least they be of a desperate mind: but bring thẽ vp in the doctrine & nurture of the lord. And when the Scholemaster hath punished his scholers, measurably & according to the rule of reason: let him geue thẽ immediatly sõe gentle & louing exhortation, to beware ỳ they fall no more into ỳ same or the like fault: & declare vnto them how goodly & pleasant a thing it is both before god & man to do well: contrariwise, how wicked a thing it is, vile, displesant & abhominable in the sight of god & of al good men, to do euil. Father. If al scholemasters wold thus behaue them selues bothe in teaching & correcting, as thou my sonne hast now declared: there wer a good hope, that our childrẽ shuld prosper & go forward in their studies, better than they do now a dais. But forasmuch as thou hast setforth thoffice of a scholemaster toward his scholers: I wonlde also gladly heare the duty of a scholer toward his teacher and master. Sonne. I wil do it, yea and that most gladly.

Of the offyce and ducty of scholers.

As a scholemaster is bounden by his office, first & aboue all things to plant in the brests of his disciples true religion & the knowledge of god, that as they grow in age, they likewise may encrease in godlines & vertue & so lead a life worthy of their profession: euen so is it the duty of al good scholers, & of such as entend to prosper in their studyes, and to haue god their merciful lord, to endeuor them selues vnto the vttermost of their power, euen frõ their tender yeres to drink in godlynes, & to learn how they may truly & faithfully serue, honor and worshyp god, cal on his holy name by feruent prayer, be thankfull vnto him for his benefites, & lead a life worthy of his kindnes. And that they maye do these things with the more frute: it shalbe conuenient, that the scholers alwais at their vprising in the morning, after thankes geuen for their quiet slepe, do cõmend them selues to God, & most hũbly beseche him to preserue thẽ that day and euermore frõ all euil, to kepe them in his fear, faith & loue: to prosper them in their studies, & so to direct all their trauels, that both they & their enterprises may turn vnto the glory of his holy name, and vnto the profit of the christen common weal.

Scholers ought to loue and to reuerence their schole masters.

Again after ỳ that the harts of scholers be stablished in god & in hys holy word, so that now their chefe & principal delite is in the studye of godlines & of true religion: the next poynt ỳ apertaineth vnto their duty is, to loue, reuerence & honor their scholemaster, euẽ as a nother father: honorably to think & speak of him, & to conceal & kepe secreat his faults, if he haue any: also quietly, patiently, thãkfully & in good part to take his both admonitions & corrections, being perswaded ỳ they come frõ such an hart, as tẽdereth both them & their cõmodity. For if that father, which only begetteth the grose bodye, in this poynte not much differing frõ the brute beastes, be worthy of honor: How muche more is he to be honored & reuerenced, whithe tilleth, trimmeth, decketh, garnisheth both body & mind with honest vertues & godly qualities. Here ye loke how much the minde passeth the bodye (the one we haue common with brute beastes, thother with the heauenly spirits) so much doth the father of the minde, passe the father of the body.

This considered right wel, Philip king of Macedonia, which whan Alexander his sonne was borne, wrote vnto Aristotle that famous Philosopher, and in his letters thanked God, not so muche that he had geuen him a sonne, as that it chaunced, that he was borne in the time of so noble a Philosopher, which might instruct, teach and bring him vp in vertue and learning, and thorow his good aduertisemēts to make him such one as is worthy both of so noble a father, and of so worthy a kingdome. This most puissaunt and worthy Prince knew right wel, that the nobilitye of the father, the good disposityon of the childe, and all other good giftes of nature, profit litle vnto the furnyture of a true man, excepte there be a cunninge artificer to feame the minde aright, and to adourn it with the wholsome preceptes both of doctrin and of manners. In what great honor & reuerence, learned & diligent scholemasters were had in times past, euen among the verye heathen: histories abundantly declare: as I may speake nothing of ye exceding great liberalitye, whiche they at al times shewed to the teachers of their children. Christen children therfore may not denye that honor and reuerence to their scholemasters: whiche the very heathen in times past most willingly gaue to their teachers: yea and ye so much the more, because they taught vain and worldlye matters: but oures teach profitable and heauenly thinges, thinges necessarye vnto euerlasting saluation.

Moreouer the duty of scholers is earnestly and diligently to apply their bookes, and to geue their mindes to the studies of good letters, remēbring with thē selues, that that is their vocation, whervnto they are called of God: and therfore with al their industry, labour and diligence they ought to folow it, and by no meanes to be negligent therein: least God be angry with them and punish them. Whatsoeuer their master teacheth them, let them diligentlye note it, and commend it to memory. Let not their bodies be in the scholes, and their minds in the fields: but let them most earnestly do that, which the place requireth. Aboue all thinges they ought to take hede, that they spende not their time in vain: but rather that there escape no day with them, wherein they haue not sōwhat profited both in lerning & māners. Let thē often times repete & they haue lerned, that nothing be forgoten. Let thē confer with other in doutful maters. Let thē not be ashamed to be taught of other. Let thē striue with al main to excell their felowes in vertue, learning, knowledge & good māners. If any of their age & cōtinuāce do passe thē in doctrin: let thē bear it heuily, & neuer cease til thei haue ouertakē him, yea & ouerrome him. Let thē diligently mark the best & purest words & phrases of the latin tōg, & vse thē in their daily speech. And ye they may do this thing ye more aptly: let thē make paper bookes, & in thē diligently note both the best & most notable sentences, & phrases of the Romain tōg, & practise thē both in their speking & writing: & according to the words & phrases of that writer to frame both their tonge & stile. And although we lack not authors, whom the scholers may worthely folow in this behalf, yet by the iudgemēt of all learned men Cicero, which is the father of eloquence, and the prince of ye latin speach, is most worthy to be embraced, & both in tōg & pen to be followed. In this author therfore, for ye right framing of the latin tong, let the

the scholers most diligently exercise them selues, and labor to thutter-most of their power to expresse both his wordes and phrases in theyr speaking and wryting: and by no meanes, so much as is possyble, admit any other or straunge phrases. Let the scholers also cal them selues often times to an account, and se how they prosper in the studies of good letters and manners, but specially of godlinesse. If they find them selues negligent in any poynte, let them redresse that is amisse: and alwais take hede, that they do not neglect their vocation, where vnto God hath called them: but labour withal diligence to doo that, which their calling requireth: that is to saye, to become learned, eloquent, wise, prudent, conning &c.

Finally, it is the duety of good and godly scholers, not onlye to be learned, but also to haue their liues so garnished with good manners and godly vertues, that there appere nothing in them worthy of reproche. In the temples let them shew them selues deuoute, holye and religious both in praying and in hearing the holy sermons. In theyr houses at home let them behaue them selues modestlye, soberlye, honestly and temperately. In the streates abrode let their behauiour be gentle, quiet, amiable, pleasaunt, frendly and louing toward all men: all contention, disquietnesse, strife and debate sette a parte. In their plaies and pastimes let them shew no poynt of childish lightnesse, but remember Christen modesty. In their wordes, let them be ware and circumspect, that they abuse not them selues in vaine, folish, triflynge and wanton communication. In countenaunce let grauity, sobriety, modesty and shamefastnesse appere. In gesture let no pride, no statelinesse be shewed. In all their gestures let there be an honest comelynesse, and sober behauiour, that who so euer behold them, may conceiue a good opinion of them. To end, lette them so compose theyr lyfe and maners: let them so appoynt their trauails and studies, that in time to come they may be good and profitable members of the christē publique weale, vnto the glory of God and vnto the profit of hys holy congregation. Father. Amen. Remaine there yet behinde anye other degrees, whose offices are also to be declared? Sonne. Two onlye. The duetie of the rich man, and of the poze laboring man: whych once finished, we wil in few words knit vp thoffice of all degrees in cōmon, and so make an end. And first I wil begin with the office of rich mē. Father. Let it so be.

Of the offyce and duetye of Riche men.

SOnne. First, it is the duty of richmen to consider, of whō they haue receiued their temporal goods and possessions. Father. Of whom haue they receiued their riches? Sonne Verely not of them selues: nor by their own industry, labour, diligence, wisdome, policye, forecaste &c. Father. Of whome then? Sonne. Of God: from whome cometh down euery good and perfect gift. Father. How proouest thou that? Sonne. By the woorde of God, whych is the faithfull testimony of the Lord. Salomon sayeth: The blessynge of the Lorde maketh men ryche: as for carefull trauaile it doth nothing thereto.

Iesus the sonne of Syrache sayth thus: Prosperitye and aduersitye: lyfe and death: pouerty and richesse come al of the Lorde.

pro.x Father. Saith not Salomon: An idle hand maketh poze, but a quick labouring hand maketh rich? Sonne, I graūt. Foz as God fedeth vs, and notwithstanding by meanes: euen so God enricheth vs, and yet by a meane: which meane is labour. Foz though we laboure neuer so muche, yet excepte God blesseth our labours: our trauail is vaine, as the Psalmograph sayeth: Except the Lorde build the house: theyr lapsal.cxxvii bour is but lost that build it. Except the Lord kepe the city: the watch man waketh but in vaine. It is but lost laboure, that ye haste to ryse vp early, and so late take rest, and eat the bread of carefulnesse.

Father. When the rich men haue considered, that their goods are the gift of God: what is than their duety to do? Sonne. To be thankefull vnto God foz them, and not to glozy in them selues, as thoughe they had gotten them by their owne policy and wit.

The ryche men ought to be thankfull to God foz their richesse.

Foz if we oughte to be thanckefull to God foz all his benefites: verely we ought not to be vnthanckefull foz the gyft of richesse, whyche is one of the pzincipall giftes that appertain vnto the body. Foz without them, the life that is ledde, is a miserable life: yea in a manner no lyfe. Who wisheth not rather not to liue, than miserablye, wzetchedlye, beggerly and painfullye to liue? The life that is passed ouer in penury and wzetchednesse: is it any other thing than sozowe and paine? He is therfoze twise ingrate, vngentle and churlyshe, that geueth not thanckes to God foz the richesse and possessyons, wherwyth he is endewed. Father. It is lawful then to possesse wozldlye goodes. Sonne.

It is lawful to possesse the goodes of the wozld. Why not? Are they not the giftes of God? May we not lawfully possesse, that God liberallye geueth? Father. Yet haue I heard, that some haue condempned richesse, as thinges vnlawfull to be had in the possessyon of Christians. Some also haue counted it a poynte of greate perfection to leaue the goodes of the wozlde, and to pzofesse wylfull pouertye, as they call it. Sonne. As touchinge the fyrste: I aunswere, that richesse may lawfullye be possessed of the Christians. Abzaham, Isaac, Jacob, Josephe, Dauid, Salomon, Ezechias, Josias, Job, Toby, Nicodemus, zacheus, Josephe of Arimathea, with manye other were rich menne, and endued wyth greate possessyons, yet were they dearly beloued of God, and are now glozyous and blessed saints in heauen.

As concerning the second sozt, whiche bragge that they forsake the goodes of the wozld, and pzofesse wilful pouertye: these are those subtle hipocrites and double dissemblers, which forsaking nothing, possesse al thinges: which spending their time idlelye, liue of the labor of other mennes handes, & of the sweat of other mennes browes: which

Rom.xvi serue not the Lorde Jesus Christe, but theyr owne bellyes, and wyth swete and flatering woordes deceiue the harts of the simple. Is thys perfection? yea rather most vile imperfection. Christe saide not onlye:

Math.v. Blessed are the pore: but he added in spirite. They are pooze in spirite, not, that haue nothing: but they, whych hauing richesse, are not with standinge contente to departe from theyr richesse, whan so euer the glozye of God, oz the commodity of the christen brother doth require: as S. Paule sayeth, Brethren, the time is shozt.

For the fashyon of this worlde goeth away.

And in a nother place S. Paule commaundeth Timothe, to charge them which are rich in this worlde, not that they shuld profesſe wilfull pouerty, and forsake their worldlye goodes, but that they be not hye minded, nor put their trust in vncertain richesse, but in the liuing god, (which geueth vs aboundantly al thinges to enioye them:) that they do good: that they be rich in good workes: that they be ready to geue, and gladly to distribute, laying vp in store for them selues a good foũdation in time to come, that they may obtaine euerlasting life. Likewise saith Dauid: If ye haue aboundaunce of richesse, sette not your heart vpon them. The Psalmograph commaũdeth not the rych men to forsake their goodes, and to runne into a cloyster, there to profesſe wilfull pouertye, and to liue idlelye, of the laboure of other mennes handes: but he willeth them, not to set their hearts vpon them: to delight in them: to trust in them: and to serue them. For as oure sauiour sayeth: Ye can not serue God and mammon. Father. Are not these the wordes of Christ? Uerely I say vnto you: it shall be hard for the rich to enter into the kingdome of heauen. And again I saye vnto you: it is easier for a cable rope to go thorow the eie of a nedle, thē for the rich to enter into the kingdome of God. Who wold desyre now to be rich, seing that richesse are such an obstacle and let vnto the heauenly enheritaunce? Who wisheth not rather to be poore in this worlde, and so enter into glory: than to be rich here, and afterward to be dampned? Did not God chuse the pore of this worlde, and made them heires of his glorious kingdome? Did not the Apostles forsake al thinges, and folowe Christe? Who seeth not now, that pouerty is a ready way vnto euerlasting saluatyon? Sonne. Neither richesse nor pouerty of them selues helpe vs any thing at all vnto the kingdome of God: for euerlasting life is the gift of God thorow Jesus Christ oure Lorde. And both richesse and pouerty come from God, as the wise man sayeth. And where you doo alledge the saying of Christe, to declare that it is an hard thing for rich men to enter into the kingdome of heauen, you shall vnderstand, that that sentence of our sauioure Christ doothe no more exclude the rich than the pore out of the kingdome of heauen: in asmuch as blessing is the richesse of God. Christ speaketh of that kind of rich men, which haue their heartes glued vnto their richesse, contrary to this saying of the Psalmograph.

That Christ speaketh of such riche men, blessed Marke declareth manifestly in these his wordes: Jesus sayd to hys disciples: how vneasely shal they that haue mony enter in to the kingdome of God,

Mark. x.

And the disciples were astonied at his wordes. But Iesus answered and said vnto them: Children, how hard is it for them that trust in money, to enter into the kingdome of God? Richesse, if they be not abused, hinder men no more from the kingdome of heauen, than pouerty impacientlye borne doth further them.

And as touching the Apostles, in effect, hart and minde, they had geuen ouer their worldly goodes, so sone as Christe called them vnto the ministery of his holy word: (that is to say, rather than they would leaue their vocation, wherevnto they were called, they were content not only to leaue their goodes, but also their life: so greate desyre had they to winne all menne vnto the Gospell, but the possession and vse of their goodes they did not refuse and caste awaye, but contynued still owners of them for the releefe of their owne necessitye, and for the comforte of other also. Father. Sayde not Peter thus vnto Christ of him selfe, and of his fellowe disciples? Beholde, we haue forsaken all thinges, and we haue folowed thee. Sonne. Truthe it is. But thys forsakinge consisted rather in effecte and minde, than otherwise, as S. Paule said of him selfe: None of these thynges moue me: neyther is my life deare vnto my selfe, so that I maye finishe my course wyth ioye, and the ministration (of the woorde) whyche I haue receyued of the Lord Iesu, to testifye the gospell of the grace of God. For he that sayde: Beholde, we haue forsaken all thinges &c. euen the verye same had notwithstanding being Christes disciple, a house of his owne and a familye, and also meate and drynke in hys house, and all other thinges necessarye, to entertaine suche as came vnto hym.

We reade also of Sainte Mathewe, that after Christe hadde called him to be his disciple and Preacher of his holye woorde: yet had he still his goodes in possessyon, insomuch that he feasted Christe and his Disciples with diuers other. Reade we not thus also in the gospell? The Disciples went away again vnto theyr owne home. Reade we not also that the Apostles hadde shippes of their owne, and that they laboured in them for to gette theyr liuinge, but namely after the deathe of Christe? Who seeth not nowe, that the Euangelicall pouertye consisteth not in the lacke or want of worldly goodes, or in forsakinge nothinge and possessynge all thinges, after the manner of the monstruous monkes: but rather in effect, spirite and minde: so that to forsake all thinges for Christes sake, or to be poore after the doctrine of the Gospel, is not to possesse nothing, & to haue al things ministred by the painful labors of other: but to haue a minde so estraunged frō the desire & loue of worldly things, that it can alway be content, prest & redy to forsake whatsoeuer is vpon the earth, yea the very life it selfe, whansoeuer the glory of God, or the commoditye of the Christen brethren require. Father. I se now right well, that as the rychesse are the gift of God, so likewise may a christen man lawfullye possesse and enioy them, yea and that with a good conscience. But to what end hath god geuen to rich men their richesse. Sonne. After that the riche men haue cōsidered with them selues, that they haue receiued their riches of Goddes free liberalitye, and accordinge to theyr bounden dutye, haue geuen him thankes for them:

Joan. 21 Joan. 21.

Why God hath geuen the rich mē their goods

It is their dutie also to weygh with them selues, for what purpose & to what ende God hath endued them with their possessions & worldly substaunce, lest by the abuse of them they be put out of office with that vnrighteous Steward, fall from the fauour of God and loose the enheritaunce of euerlasting glory. That they may spend theyr goodes aryght and accordyng to the blessed pleasure of God: it shal be expediēt that the riche mē cōsider with themselues, that the riches, which they haue, are not theirs, but Gods, as God him self sayth by the prophet: gold is myne, siluer is myne. The Psalmograph saith, the earth is the Lordes, & all that is contayned in it: And by the same Psalmograph God him selfe sayth again: All the beastes of the forest are myne: and so are the cattell vpon a thousand hilles. The whole worlde is myne, & all that therein is. And as their riches are Gods: so likewyse will he call them to an account, how they haue bestowed them, as we may se in the Gospell of S. Luke, and in other places of the holy scripture. They muste therfore also consyder with them selues, that they ar not the proper owners of the goodes, whiche they haue in possession: but only the dispensatours & distributors of Gods goodes: and that therfore they ought to be ware & circumspect how they spend those goods that God haue committed vnto them. The folish world thinketh, that they may bestow their goods as they lust, and recounteth no sin wastfully to spend them in riot and excess: but the godlye riche man knoweth, that they be the goodes of God, and that therfore they must be bestowed accordyng to the wil of god. Such therfore as feare God maye not spende away their goodes in dysyng and carding and suche other vaine, folish, & fleshly pleasures: neyther in eating, drinckyng & banckettyng: nor yet in gorgious apparel and costious buildings, but as God hath appoynted. Reade we not in the Gospell, that the vngodly ryche man was damned and cast downe into the depe dongeon of hell fyre, because he abused his riches in cōsuming them vpon delicate fare, superfluous apparell, &c. We rede not, that he was any bryber, poller, piller extortioner, vsurer, or wrōg doer to any man, but only that he abused his goodes, and spent them otherwise then the will of God was. Fa. How shall the riche men then bestow their goods accordyng to Gods good will and pleasure? Sonne. Fyrst of all in the ware vsyng of them about their owne necessities without excesse. For what soeuer is spēt superfluously and without necessitie, is consumed contrary to the wyl of God, and deserueth euerlasting damnation. The rich therfore, that feare God, shall take with thanks geuing somuch of the goods, which they haue receyued of God liberally, as shal abundantly suffice the necessitie both of themselues and of so many as belong vnto hym. For if any man make not prouision for his owne family, he hathe denyed the fayth, & is worse then an infidel. Father. What shal he do with the rest of his goodes? Son. All riche men ought to consider with them selues, that they are, as I sayd before not proper owners of the goodes, but only the dispēsatours and distributers of gods goods, which he hath committed to their handes. Theyr owne necessarye expenses deducted, they ought to distribute the residue, as time and occasion shal serue. Father. To whom shall they distribute those goods, to Monkes, Fryers, Channons, Nonnes, Anchers, Anchresses, Pardonners, Soule

But as concerning widowes and fatheries children, God geueth the rich men a speciall charge of them, as parsons, whiche haue most nede of healpe, and are most of all vnable to defend themselues. S. James also sayth The pure and vndefiled religion before God the father, is to visit the fatherles and widowes in their aduersiti, and to kepe him self vnspotted in the worlde. Father, What reward shall the riche man haue at the hand of God for the faythfull distribucion of their goods to the poore people? Sonne. Oure sauiour Christ saith: When ye haue done al those things, which are cōmaunded you: say, we are vnprofitable seruaūts. we haue done that, which was our dutie to do. For I was an houngred, & ye gaue me meate. I was thirstie and ye gaue me drinke. I was harbourles, and ye toke me in: Naked, and ye clothed me: sick, and ye visited me. I was in prison, and ye came vnto me. Then shall the righteous aunswer him, saying: Lorde, when saw we thee an hūgred and fed thee? Or thirstie, and gaue thee drinke? When sawe we thee harbourles, and toke thee in? Or naked, and clothed thee? Or whē saw we the sicke, or in prison, and came vnto thee? And the king shall aunswer, and say vnto them: Verely I say vnto you: inasmuche as ye haue don it vnto one of the least of these my brethern, ye haue done it tome. And these shall go into euerlasting lyfe. Blessed is the mā, saith Dauid, that considereth the poore (and nedy) the Lorde shall deliuer him in the time of trouble. The Lord shall preserue him, and kepe him alive, that he may be blessed on earth, & not be deliuered into the wil of his enemies. The Lorde shall comfort him, when he lieth sick vpō his bed. &c. Agayn, he hath sparsed abrode and geuen to the poore: and his righteousnes remayneth for euer. His horne shall be exalted with honour. Salomon sayth: He that is mercifull, doth him self a benefit: but who so hurteth his neyghbour, is a traitour. He that is liberal in geuing shall haue plentie, and he that watereth, shalbe watered also him self. Who so hourdeth vp his corn, shalbe cursed among the people: but blessyng shall lyght vpon his head that geueth fode. Again: Who so despyseth his neyghbour, doth amis: but blessed is he that hath pitie on the poore. Thus are the riche men taught in the holy scripture not to differre

to be distributed by their executors or by their frendes: but out of hand, euen so lone as an occasion is offered, to minister vnto the poore and nedy persones all good thinges. There is an old verse worthy to be remembred. Da tua, dum tua sunt: post mortem tunc tua non sunt. Giue thy goods, whyle they be thine: for when thou arte ones deade, they be none of thine. There is also an olde distinction, not worthy to be forgotten: and it is this.

Quod sibi quisque serit præsentis tempore vitæ:
Hoc sibi messis erit, cum dicitur, Ite, venite.

Looke what so euer a man soweth in the time of this present life: that shall he reape, when Christ shall saye: get ye hence ye cursed into euerlasting fire. &c. Come ye blessed of my father, posses the kingdom &c. Likewise sayth S. Paul: whatsoeuer a mã soweth, that shal he also reap. For he that soweth in his flesh shal of the flesh reape corruption. But he ỹ soweth in the spirite shal of the spirit repe life euerlasting. Again he ỹ soweth little, shal reape little: & he that soweth largely, shal reape largly. For God loueth a cherfulgeuer. Father. It is good thẽ for a mã to bestow his goods him selfe vpõ ỹ poore before he dye. Sõne, yea verely: so is the cũsel of the wisemã, which saith: do good vnto thy frẽd before ỹ dy & accordig to thin hability reach out thine hãd, & geue vnto the poore. Be not disappointed of the good day, and let not portion of the good day ouer passe thee. Shalt thou not leaue thy trauailes and labours vnto other menne? In the diuiding of the heritage geue & take and sanctify thy soule. Worke thou righteousnes before thy death for when thou art ones deade, there is no meate to find. Moreouer the Apostell sayth, that euery man shall beare his owne burden, and receiue his reward accordig to his owne labour: again, that God shal geue to euery mã after his owne dedes, euen those deedes, whiche he hathe done in his owne body, whether they be good or euell. As God findeth vs, so shal he iudge as. If he find vs at the howre of death vnfruitfull and without good workes: wo: maye be sure to receiue the curse of euerlasting damnation, though neuer so many good workes be done for vs of other after our deth: neither cã ỹ purgatorie rakers with all their trentals, dirigies, commendations, masses of Scalacrli &c, profit vs any thing at all. Father. Then are many deceyued, which although they haue bene vnfrutefull figge trees all the dayes of their life, hope notwithstanding to be saued by such meanes. Sonne. From whẽce should they be saued? Father. They say out of purgatory. Sõne. The scripture knoweth no such place. Hell and heauen are set fourthe in the worde of God: mo places after this life the scripture knoweth not. And as two places only in the holy scripture are declared, that is to say, heauen and hel: so likewise are there set forth vnto vs only two kindes of people: that is to say, good and badde: faythful and vnfaythfull, as owre sauioure Christe sayth: he that beleueth on the sonne of god, hath euerlasting life. But he that beleueth not on the sonne of god hath not life, but the wrath of God abideth vpon him. Again, he that beleueth and is baptised, shalbe saued. But he that beleueth not, shal be condened. So sone as the faythfull depart, they are caried streight waies by the ministery of the Angels into the bosome of Abraham. And as for the vnfaythfull, the deuils after theyre deathe carry them streight waies into hel fire, as we may se in the history of poore Lazarus and of the richglotton. Luc. xvi.

layth beleueth, that there are two places after thys lyfe. One is the kyngdome of heauen, a place appoynted for the faythfull: the other is hell fire, where the vnfaithful shalbe tormented.

As for the thirde place, saithe he, we vtterlye knowe none: neyther doo we finde in the holye Scryptures, that there is anye. And in a nother place he sayethe, that the soules of all the Sainctes sence the Assention of Christe, so sone as they be departed from the bodye, goo straightwayes vnto heauen, and are there wyth Christ, lokynge for the resurrection of theyr bodies: euen as the soules of sinners goo vnto hell, and abide the risinge againe of their bodies &c. Again he saith: There are two dwelling places: one in euerlastinge fire, the other, in the euerlasting kingdome. Father. If the matter stand thus: I do not see, what large Legacies bequeathed of the ryche menne to Soule preistes to synge for them when they are deade, or anye other good workes doone for them, profit the deade any thinge at all. Sonne. You saye truthe. Heare what Sainte Jerome sayth: While we are in this present worlde, we maye healpe one a nother, whether it be by prayer or by councell. But whan we come ones before the iudgynge place of Christe: not Job, not Daniel, nor Nohe can pray or entreate for anye manne: but euerye manne shall beare his owne burden. Lyke vnto this writeth S. Jhon Chrisostome, saying: Let vs not thincke, that when we come thither, mercy shall be graunted vs, whiche doo not so behaue oure selues, that we maye deserue to receiue forgeuenesse, although Abraham should pray for vs, ye although Noe, although Job, although Daniel shoulde entreat for vs. Therfore while the time is in oure handes, let vs prepare for oure selues muche confidence wyth God. Such as God findeth thee, saith S. Cyprian, whan he calleth thee: euen such also dothe he iudge thee. The righteous are called vnto ioy: the vnrighteous are plucked vnto punishment. Comfort is out of hand geuen to the faythfull: and payn to the vnfaithful. The time, that we haue in this worlde, saith Gregorius Nazianzenus, is the time of worcking: but that, whiche is to come, is the time of rewarde. Likewise saith Hisychius. In this worlde to come there is no worcking: but they that haue wrought now, come there vnto rewarde. Prepare thy workes, saith Chrisostome, against thy departure, and addresse thy self vnto thy iournay. If thou hast taken ought from anye manne, geue it him again, and say with Zacheus, if I haue defrauded anye manne of anything, I geue hym foure tymes as much. If thou be ennemy to anye manne, reconcile thy selfe before thou come vnto the iudgement. Dispatche all thinges here, that thou mayste beholde that iudgynge seat without grefe. So longe as we be here, there is good hope and inough: but if we be ones gone that way, it lieth not in oure power afterward to repent, nor to put away our offences. For, as Saint Ambrose saith, he that receiueth not remissyon of his synnes here, shal not haue it there. He shall not haue it in dede, for he canne not come vnto euerlasting life: for euerlastinge life is remissyon of synnes. Therefore David as a pilgrime making haste vnto that common countrye of all the sainctes, desyreth, that his sinnes maye be forgeuen hym, before he depart oute of thys lyfe, saying: Forgeue me, that I may be refreshed, before I goo hence.

Father. I see now, that it is a vain thing to trust vnto the good dedes of other, whan a man is departed. Sonne. Saint Austen saithe: Euery one sleapeth with his owne cause, and shall rise again with hys owne cause. And Theophilacte sayeth, that the vertue of my neyghboure shall scasely be inough to defende him selfe: so farre is it of, that it can be sufficient for me also. For euery man, sayth he, shall be iustifyed by his owne workes, and not by the workes of his neighboures. And he compareth them, that hope to be relieued by the good workes of other, after they be deade, to the fine folyshe virgines, whyche woulde haue begged Oyle of the fiue wise virgines, but all in vayn: insomuch that they were not suffred to enter into the bridegromes chamber. For it shall be no time than: sayethe he, to worke: neither shal it be honest to begge. For they are folishe virgines, that begge. Father. Would God, all ryche menne knewe these things, that whyle they haue time, they might do good, and shewe mercy vnto the poore. Sonne. The God of this worlde hathe blinded the mindes of many ryche men, whyche beleaue not, least the lyghte of the glorious Gospell should shine vnto them, and they by this meanes being merciful, should be saued, and be made heirs of euerlasting glory.

In Ioan. tract. 40. In Math. cap. xxv.

In Luke capi. xvi.

Basilius Magnus in a certaine Sermon greuously rebuketh those Couetous ryche menne, whyche, so longe as they liue, wyll departe from nothinge to the poore: and whan they see none other remeadye, but die thou muste, than make they their will, and bequeathe largely to the poore. Thou sayest, sayeth he, I wyl enioy my goodes so long as I liue: But I will remember the poore in my Testamente after I am dead. Ah wretche, sayethe he: wilte thow then be gentle and liberall to menne when I shall se the deade corpes? Shall I then cal thee a louer of thy brother? Ah knowe thou, knowe thou: there is no more byinge, whan the marte is doone, and whan the shoppe wyndowes are shutte vp. Father. The hope of long life dothe much harme in thys behalfe. For the ryche menne perswade them selues, that they shall liue longe, and therfore they are lothe to departe from any thing, while they liue, least if they shoulde be liberall to the poore, they them selues should want and haue neade.

Hope of long life, maketh many vnmercyfull.

Sonne. Infidelitye, vnfaithfulnesse, mistruste, or lacke of belefe is the occasyon of all thys mischefe, as it is the onlye cause of all euilles besydes. If the ryche menne hadde a true faythe in God, and were thorowlye perswaded of Goddes liberalitye and good wyll towarde them, they woulde soone geue ouer thys their couetousnesse, and become mercyfull to the poore people. Salomon sayethe: He that hathe pitye vppon the poore, lendeth vnto the Lorde: and loke what he layeth oute, it shall be payde hym againe. Also in a nother place he sayth, He that geueth vnto the poore, shall not lacke: but he that tourneth awaye hys eyes from suche as be in necessitye, shall suffer greate powertye hym selfe.

Infidelity is the roote of al euyll.

If the couetous rich worldlings did beleue these promises & such like, which god hath made and setforth in the holy scriptures to all such as are liberal to the poore: they would neuer be so vnmerciful, as they are, nor differ their almesse so much as one hour, but freely and plenteously geue, whan so euer occasion is offred. Is not this the saying of ỹ psalmograph? I haue bene yong, and now am old, and yet saw I the righteous neuer forsaken, nor his sede begging their bread. He is alwaies mercyful, and lendeth: yet his sede hath Gods plenty and inough. Psa.xxxvii

As touching the hope of longe life: who knoweth not, howe shorte and vncerten the life of man is: What is your life, saithe S. Iames. It is euen a vapoure, that appeareth for a litle time, and then vanysheth away. The history of the rych man setforth in the gospel, sheweth euidently, how vaine it is for rich menne to gather greate heapes of worldlye goodes, and to promise them selues long life to enioye the same. The grounde of a certain rich manne, sayth oure sauior Christ, brought forthe plentifull frutes: and he thoughte wythin hym selfe, saying: what shal I doo, because I haue no roume where to bestowe my frutes? And he said: This wil do. I wyll destroye my barnes, and build greater, and therin wil I gather all my goodes, that are growen vnto me: and I wyll saye to my soule: Soule, thou haste muche goodes layed vppe in store for manye yeares. Take thine ease, eate, drynke, be merye. But God sayde vnto hym: Thou foole, thys nyght will they fetche awaye thy soule againe from thee. Then whose shall those thinges be, which thou hast prouided? Our sauioure Christ concludeth and saith: So is it with him that gathereth riches to himself, and is not rich toward god. Take hede therfore saith he, and beware of couetousnesse For no mannes life standeth in the aboundaunce of thinges, which he possesseth. Iames.iiii Luke.xii

Here see we, what greate preparation this couetous ryche worldlinge made, yea and that for a greate nomber of yeares: and promysed him selfe many ioyful daies and long life, whan notwithstandyng euen out of hande he loste both lyfe and goodes, leauing al his possessions, he knew not to whome: so truly is it sayd of the Psalmograph: He (the couetous manne) heapeth treasure vpon treasure, and canne not tell for whome he gathereth his treasure. Father. It is to be wyshed, that all rych men were so mercifully disposed toward the poore, that they myght freely and with a good conscience say with Job: when the poore haue desired any thing at me, haue I denied it them? Haue I caused the wydowe to stande waytinge for me in vayne? Haue I eaten my portion alone, that the fatherlesse hathe had no parte wyth me? For mercye grewe vp wyth me from my youthe, and compassyon from my mothers wombe. Haue I seene anye manne pearyshe thorowe nakednesse, and wante of clothinge? Or anye poore manne for lacke of rayment, whose lydes thancked me not, because he was warmed with the wolle of my shepe? Did I euer lifte vppe myne hande to hurte the fatherlesse? Yea in the gate, where I sawe my selfe to be in authorite: then let mine arme fall from my shoulder, and mine armeholes be broken from the ioyntes. For I haue euer feared the vengeaunce and punishment of God, and knewe verye well, that I was not able to beare hys burthen. Psal.xxxix Iob.xxxi

Haue I put my trust in golde? Or haue I said to my fynest golde of all: Thou arte my confidence? Haue I reioyced, because my power was great, and because my hand gate so much? Did I euer greatly regard the rising of the sunne: Or had I the goinge downe of the Moone in great reputation? Hath my heart medled priuelye with anye deceyte? Or did I euer kisse mine owne hand? That were a wickednesse worthy to be punished for thē should I haue denied the God that is aboue. Haue I euer reioyced at the hurte of mine ennemye: Or was I euer glad, that any harme happened vnto him? Oh no: I neuer suffred my mouth to doo such a sinne, as to wishe him euill. I haue not suffered a straunger to lie without: but I opened my doores vnto him that went by the way. Sonne. If our rich men would folow this godly ryche man Job, whose wordes ye haue now recited: than should they better do their duty toward the poore, than many of them do at this preſēt day, which rather poll and pill the poore people, and seke how to vndo them, then socour, comforte and relieue them: yea than shoulde they shewe them selues true dispensatours, faithful administratours & good Stewards

Luk. xii. waies to haue this admonition of oure sauioure Christe before theyr eies: Take hede and beware of couetousnesse. For no mannes life stādeth in the aboundance of thinges, which he possesseth. But nowe my sonne, seing we haue so largely conferred of the office of ryche men: I would now gladly hear the duty of the poore labouringe man, that we may also cal to remembraunce what he ought to do, that he be no vnprofitable member of the Christen common weale. Sonne. Order requireth, that we shoulde nowe entreat of that matter: therfore I wyl doo it gladly.

Of the offyce and duetye of Pore labouringe men.

FIrst it is the duety of them whiche are poore, and by the reason of their pouerty are compelled to labor (althoughe no man in a christen common weale ought to be idle, but to worke some good thing vnto the glory of God, and vnto the relefe of the poore, be he neuer so rich or welthy) not to disdain, nor to beare it heauily, that they are enforced to get their liuing wyth the labor of their handes, and with the sweat of their browes: nor to think that God hateth thē, because they liue not in this world so easly and delicately, as ẏ welthier sort do: nor yet to enuy such as be riche, or vniustlye to take awaye other mennes goods: but rather quietly and pacientlye to liue in their vocation, being assured that they are called thervnto by the prouidence of god: diligētly to labor for their liuing: truly to eat their owne breade: faithfully to dispose thē selues in al their doings: & charitably to behaue thē selues toward al mē, with this faithfull perswasion & assured hope, that god wil so blesse & fortunate their labors, that they shal wāt no good thing
Tob. viii. as Tobias said to his sonne: My sonne, be not afraide: truthe it is, we lead here a poore life: but great good shal we haue, if we feare God, & departe from al sin, and do wel. Father. The state than of a laboring man of an artificer, or of a common Citezen, that eateth his breade in the sweat of hys face, pleaseth God, and is acceptable vnto him.

Sonne,

Gods: No les then the state of a kinge or of an Emperor. For it is the Lord from whom cometh both richesse and powerty. It is the Lord, that enricheth and empouerisheth, as it is written: The lord maketh poore, maketh riche, bringeth lowe, and heaueth vp on hie. He raiseth the poore out of the dust, and lifteth vp the begger from the dōghill: Psal. cxiii.
to set him among princes, and to ennoble him with the seate of glory.

Now to speake plainly, there is no condition of life more pleasaunt in the sight of God, then that, which is passed ouer in labour and honest exercises. Did not God appoynt man euen in the state of his innocēcy to dresse and kepe the garden of Eden, otherwise called paradyse: Genes. ii
Did not God also commaunde manne, after he had offended, that he should eat his bread in the sweat of his face, til he retourned vnto the earth? And this commaundement was not only geuen to Adam, but Gene. iii also to al his posterity. Therfore according to this commaundement al the holy men and women of thold Testament gaue them selues to labor, and did eat their bread, and drink their drink in the labour of their handes, and in the sweat of their browes. Likewise in the newe Testament, none refused labor. Our sauiour Christ was a Carpēter. His Apostles were fyther men. Saint Paule was a tent maker, and prouyeth in manye places of his Epistles, that he gained his breade with the labor of his handes. And so forth from time to time all godlye persons in euery age gaue thē selues to some godly exercise, that they might not be vnprofytable membres of the christen common weale: whereof we may easlye conclude, that no life pleaseth God better, then that, which is passed ouer in labour: as I may speake nothing, howe that there is no meat eaten more merely, and with a better conscience then that which is gotten with labour, as the Psalmograph sayeth: Psa. cxxviii Thou shalt eat the labours of thyne handes: O wel is thee, and happy shalt thou be. And although the poore labouring men haue not such abundaunce of worldly goodes nor so delicate fare, as the ryche and lusty wordlynges haue: yet let them be content & prayse God in their frugality, whych hath promysed, that they labouringe according to his will, shall want no good thing, neyther will he suffer them to perish for hunger, but minister vnto them al good thinges, so that they shal lacke nothing that is necessarye for them and theyrs. They, which feare the Lord sayeth Dauid, shal want no māner of thing that Psa. xxxiiii is good. For behold, the eye of the Lord is vpon them that fear hym, Psal. xxxiii and vpon them that put theyr trust in his mercy, to deliuer their soules from death, and to feede them in the tyme of dearthe. Againe, I haue psal. xxxvii been ponge, and now am old, and yet saw I neuer the righteous forsaken, nor his seede beggynge theyr breade. And who knoweth not, that a smal thing whych the righteous hath, is better then greate richesse of the vngodly. For the armes of the vngodly shalbe broken, but the Lord vpholdeth the righteous. Are not these the wordes of Salomon? Better is a litle with the feare of the Lord, then great treasure with sorow. Again, better is it to haue a litle thinge with righteous- Pro. xv ritheſſe: if a man be cõtent with that he hath. For we brought nothing into the worlde, neither may we carye any thing out. If we haue foode and raiment, let vs therwith be content. For they that will be riche, fall into temptation & snares, and into many fondeſſe and noyſome luſtes, which drowne men into perdition and deſtruction. For couetouſneſſe of money is the rote of al euil: which while ſome men luſted after, they erred frõ the faith, & tangled them ſelues with many ſorowes. But thou man of God, flie ſuch things. Folow righteouſneſſe, godlineſſe, faith, loue, pacience, meknes &c. Again he ſaith: Let your conuerſation be without couetouſneſſe, and be content with ſuch things, as ye haue al ready. For he hath ſaid: I will not fail thee, nether forſake thee: ſo that we may boldly ſay: The Lord is my helper, and I will not feare what man may do vnto me.

Heb. xiii. Iohue. i. Pſal. 117.

Secõdly, it is the duty of all godly labourers, of whatſoeuer arte or occupation they be, diligently, truly and faithfully to labor, alwayes ſetting before their eies, that God beholdeth al their doings, and will reward them accordyng to their actes: again, that in al their trauails, labors and exerciſes they vſe no craft, wilineſſe and ſubtilty with their neighbors, but that they deal with al men honeſtly, iuſtly, vprightly & brotherly, al fraud and guil, al falſhode and diſſimulation vtterly laid a ſide: foraſmuch as they know, that God can abide no ſuche wickednes, but will moſte extremely punish it, as the Pſalmographe ſaythe: Thou art the God, that hath no pleſure in wickednes: nether ſhall the euil dwel with thee. The vnrighteous ſhall not abide in thy ſight: for thou hateſt al them that work iniquity. Thou ſhalt deſtroy them that ſpeake leaſing: The Lord wil abhorre both the bloud thirſty & deceytful man. The holy Apoſtle alſo ſaith: This is the will of God, that no man oppreſſe or defraud his brother in bargainynge: becauſe that the Lord is the auenger of all ſuch thynges.

Pſal. v.

1. Theſſ. iiii

Thirdly, ſuch goodes as the labouring men get by their induſtrye and diligẽce, which alſo is the bleſſing and gift of god, they muſt take hede, that they ſpẽd them warely and honeſtly, and not waſtfully and wickedly. Many, what ſo euer they wynne all the whole weke paſt, they laſh it out prodigally at the tauerne or alehouſe on the ſonday, & neuer ceaſe riotouſly to waſt theyr gaines, til al be brought to naught no care in the meane while had for theyr carefull wyfe, poore chyldren, and miſerable family. Another ſort conſume their goodes in dicyng and carding and in ſuch like wicked paſtimes. Another company beſtowe all that euer they haue, in galant apparell and fine araye, farre paſſyng their degree and eſtate, wythout anye reſpecte hadde to theyr neceſſarye charges. Another ſorte are ſo hard and niggardly, ſo holdfaſte and wedded to the worlde, that whatſoeuer they can gette, they ſo horde it vp, that they had rather, that their wyfe and children ſhuld pearish for honger, than they gladly would ſpend a grote for theyr reliefe: like vnto him, whych ſayde: The ſauoure of lucre is good, how ſo euer a man come by it, yea and that of euery thing.

How we the labouringe man ſhall vſe his goodes.

Thus may not the godly labouring man be affected and mynded: but what ſo euer God ſende him by the laboure of his handes, and by the ſweate of his browes, let him geue God thankes for it, and make merry

marye wyth it, be, his wife, his children, and his familye: nothynge doubting, but that Lorde, whych is riche inoughe for all them that call on hym, will abundantlye prouide for him and his, if he goo forthe diligently to labour accordinge to his vocation and callinge, as S. Paule sayethe: The Lorde is at hande. Be carefull for nothinge. Also S. Peter: Caste all your care vppon the Lorde: for he careth for you. There is a sore plage (sayth the wise manne, whyche I haue seene vnder the sunne, riches kepte to the hurt of him that hathe them in possession. For oftentimes they perish with his great misery and trouble: and if he haue a childe, it getteth nothing. Like as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thither again, and carryeth nothing awaye with him of all his labor. This is a miserable plage, that he shal go away euen as he came. What bealpeth it them then, that he hath labored in the winde: All the dates of his life also he did eat in the darke, with great carefulnesse, sickenes and sorow. Therfore me thinke its a better and fatter thinge, a manne to eate and drincke, and to be refreshed of all his labour, that he taketh vnder the sunne, all the dayes of hys lyfe, which God geueth him: for this is his portion. For vnto whome so euer God geueth richesse, goodes and power, he geueth it hym to enioye it, to take it for his portion, and to be refreshed of hys labour: thys is the gyfte of God. For he thinketh not muche howe longe he shall liue, forsomuche as God fylleth hys hearte wyth gladnesse.

Moreouer let him eschue all superfluous expenses, al riotous company, all vaine pastimes, all banketting &c. and thinke, that it is the part of an honest man rather to spend a pound in his own house wyth his wife and children, than a penny in the Tauerne or alehouse. Be merye with the wife of thy youth, saith Salomon, as with a louyng Hinde and frendlye Roo. Let her breastes alwayes satisfye thee, and delite thee contente wyth her loue: Keepe not companye wyth wyne bibbers and riotous eaters of flesshe: for suche as be dronckardes and riotous shall come to pouertye: and he that is geuen to muche sleape, shall goo wyth a ragged coate. Who hathe woo? who hathe sorowe? who hathe strife, who hath brawling, and who hathe woundes wyth outerause? Or who hathe redde eyes? Euen they that be euer at the wyne and seeke excesse. Loke not thou vpon the wine, howe redde it is, and what a colour it geueth in the glasse. It goeth downe softlye, but at the laste it byteth lyke a Serpente, and stingeth as an adder. So shal thine eies loke vnto straunge women, and thine harte shall muse vpon frowarde thinges, &c. He that hath pleasure in banckets, shall be a poore man: and who so deliteth in wine and delicates, shall not be rich. For wine maketh a man lecherous, and strong drink cruell: a man to be enquier: who so deligheth therin, shal neuer be wise.

Again as concerning his apparell, let the labouring manprouide that it be not to much sumptuous, but honest, graue, semely and mete for his degre, and such in all poyntes, as becometh hym that profesth godlines, euer setting before his eies this saying of Job: naked came I out of my mothers wombe, and naked shall I returne vnto the same againe.

But this is also to be considered, that the labouring man or artifionly of the charitable almesse of good and godly people. So admo-him rather labour with his handes the thing which is good, that he may geue vnto him that nedeth. Yea he shall sometime spare it from his own belly and back, to geue it vnto the poore, forasmuch as we all be members of one body. And this is it, which god sayth by the Pro-Esay, 58. phet: Breake thy bread to the hungry and bring the poore wandring man into thy house: when thou seest a naked man, couer him, and despise not thine owne flesh.

Fourthly, let euery labouring man, of what condition so euer he be

Saynt Paule sayth we beseth you brethren, that ye encrease more and more, and that ye study to be quiet, and to meddle with your owne busines, and to worke with your own hands, as we commaunded you: that ye maye behaue your selues honestly towarde them that are without, and that nothing be lacking vnto you. Agayne, when we were with you, this we warned you of: that if any would not worke, the same should not eate. Ones agayne: we haue heard saye, that there are some, which walk amõg you inordinatly, working not at all, but beinge busy bodies. Them that are such we cõmand, and exhort by our Lord Jesus Christ, that they worke with quietnes, and eate their own bread. Brethren, be not ye weary in well doing. Eccle. viii. i. Thess. iiii. ii Thess. iii

These and such like sentences shal greatly encorage the labouring mã to eschewe idelnes & to goforth according to his vocation to labour and trauayle, that he may haue the more abundantly both to fede his owne family, and also to geue to such, as haue nede.

Fiftly and finaly, for almuch as we liue not only before God, but also before man: and we are commaunded so to line, that with oure godly conuersation we may beautify and garnish the doctrine of our Sauiour Christ Jesus, and stoppe the mouthes of folysh and ignorant men: it shalbe conuenient, that the labouringe man or artificer sete diligentlye to liue with hys neighboures honestlye, quietly and brightlye, and not to be a busy body among them, or to sturre vp dissentyon, contentyon, stryfe and debate: but to the vttermoste of his power to conserue and maynteine vnity, peace and concorde both publique, and priuate, as the Apostle counselleth: prouide, saithe he, afore hãd things honest not ōly before god, but also in the sight of al men. If it be possible (as much as is in you) liue peacibly with al mẽ. Likewise sayth saint Peter: be ye all of one mind, of one hart, loue as brethren, be pitifull, be courteous, not rendring euill for euill, or rebuke for rebuke: but contrarywise, blesse: knowing that ye are therunto called, euen that ye should be heires of the blessing. For he that doth lōg after life, and liueth to se good dayes: let him refrayne his tong from euill, and his lippes that they speake no guyle. Let him eschewe euil, and do good: let him seake peace and ensue it. Tit. ii i. Pet. ii Rom. xii. i. Pet. iii. Psal. xxxiiii

Therfore seing we are all men, and cannot at all times so circumspectly liue, but sometime one of vs offend another: if any such thinge chaunce betwene his neighbour and him: let the labouring man or artificer streightways sete a reconciliatiõ, and procure the renewing of loue and amitye, so sone as is possible, as the holy Apostle sayth: be angry, and sin not. Let not the sonne go down vpon your wrath: neither geue place vnto the backbiter. Let no grudge nor malice long remayne, lest being festured and cankred, it be hearde to be put awaye, but streightways remoue it, & in the stead therof place againe loue and frendship. If any possessed with an euill spirit would sow dissention betwene him and his neighbour by making false report: let him not be light of credit, but streightways repayre to his neighbour and louingly and frendly breake the matter to his neighbour: and whan he haue ones proued it contrary, desire him to shew him the like kind Ephe. iiii. nes, if any chaunce to bring any slaunderous reportes of him also. But if it so be, that the matter be found true, as it is reported: then let him charitably admonish his neighbour, and exhort him from henceforth to behaue him selfe more christenly and neighbourlye, and none otherwise to report of him, than he himselfe woulde be reported. By no meanes let him seke to be auenged, nor to render euill for euill, but rather folow the counsell of sant Paule, which sayth: Derely beloued auēge not your selues, but rather geue place vnto wrath. For it is wrten: vengeance is mine and I will reward sayth the Lord. Therfore if thine ennemy hunger, feede him: if he thirst, geue him drink. For in so doing thou shalt heape coales of fire on his head. Be not ouercome of euil, but ouercome euil with goodnes. Againe, if any man haue a quarell agaynst a nother: as Christ forgaue you, euen so do ye. Aboue all things put on loue, which is the bond of perfection. And the peace of god rule in your harts: to the which peace ye are called in one body.

Furthermore in all his labours and trauayles, in all his byinges and sellings, and in al his other businesses, which he hath to do with his neighbor: let hym do to a nother, as he wold be don to, not seking his own profit to the hurt and domage of other, as saint Paule sayth: Let no man seke that which is own: but let euery mā seke that, which belongeth to a nother: for we are all brethren and members of one body. In fine, let him be that to his neighbour, that he wisheth God to be vnto him. Father. If the common people would thus behaue themselues one toward an other: then should we haue a ioyfull and a quiet common weale: than should hatred, malice and all displeasure be sone banished, and loue, amitye and concorde quickly enter in: then should penury, scarines and dearth of thinges, wherwith, thorowe the couetousnesse of certeine insatiable couetous men the poore people are now most miserably greued and oppressed, be vtterly taken away from vs. and in their place succede abundance and plenty of all good things, according to the aboundant and plenteous blessinges of god, wherewith he dayly most richly enricheth vs, as sayut Paule sayth: god geueth vs aboundantly all thinges to enioy them. But now my sonne let me heare the duety of al degrees in comun, according to thy promes, and so make an end. Sonne. most gladly.

Of fayth: Heb. xi. Rom. xiiii. Heb. xi.

First of all and aboue all thinges, al men owe vnto god faith, which is the ground and foundation of the christen religion: without the which faythe it is not possible to please god, yea without the which fayth, all that euer we do, is playn sinne, and abhominable before god: For he that commeth vnto god must beleue that God is, and that he will reward them that seke him. Father. How prouest thou, that it is ỳ duety of al men generally to beleue in god? Son. The wisemā saith, haue faith in the lord with al thine hart, and lean not vnto thine owne wisdōe. Iehosaphat saith: beleue in the Lord your god, and ye shalbe without ieoperdy, Iesus the sonne of Sirach sayth: in al thy workes beleue thou in the lord from thy whole harte: for ỳ is the keping of the commaundements. nothing Againe: O ye that fear the lord, beleue him and your reward shal not be empty. Our Sauiour christ sayth: ye beleue in God, beleue ye also in me. For this is the will of him that sent me, that euery one that seeth the sonne and beleueth in him, haue euerlastinge life. And sayut John sayth: this is his commaundement, that we beleue on the name of his sonne Jesus Christ. Abraham beleued god, sayth the scripture, and it was counted vnto hym for righteousnes. Father, What owe we vnto god more then fayth, that is to saye, to beleue hym and his holy word, and by no meanes to doubt of it? Sonne, Secondly, for asmuch as fayth worketh by charitye or loue, we muste prouide, that we do not only beleue in the Lord our god with our whole harte, but also that we most entierly loue him, and haue all our delight and pleasure in him. Father. Where are we commaunded so to do? Sonne. Moses sayth: heare O Israell: the lorde our God is Lord only: and thou shalt loue ꝑ lord thy God with althine hart, & with all thy soule, and with all thy might. Josua sayth: take good hede vnto your selfes, that ye loue the Lord your god. Dauid sayth: loue the lord al ye his saintes for the Lord preserueth them that are faithfull. Father. Doth the Lord our god require of vs any more, but to beleue in him, and to loue him? Sonne. yea verely.

Ecle. ii. Joan. xiiii. Joan. vi. 1. Joan. iii. Gen. xv. Rom. iiii. Of loue. Galat. v.

Thirdly, as out of fayth, loue: so likewise out of loue springeth the fulfilling of gods holy law, at the lest an earnest study and feruent desire to frame our lifes according to the same, whereby we also shewe euen before men, that our fayth and loue, which we haue inwardly toward god and which are only knowen to god, are true and vnfayned This also is therefore required of vs, that as we beleue and loue god: so likewise we addresse our selues with all our power vnto the accomplishmēt of his holy will: which both necessarily and orderly followeth as our Sauiour Christe sayethe: if any man loue me, he will kepe my worde, and my father will loue him, and we will come vnto him, and dwell with him: But he that loueth me not, kepeth not my worde. Againe if ye loue me, kepe my commandementes. For he that hath my commaundementes, and kepe them, he it is that loueth me. Abide in my loue. If ye kepe my commaundements, ye shall abide in my loue, euen as I haue kept my fathers commauudements, and I abide in his loue. Ye are my frendes, if ye do thinges, which I commaunde you. Thys obedience and earnest study to addresse our conuersation according to the blessed wil of god, muste be coupled with a reuerent feare toward god: which as a bit maye restreigne vs from all euil, & as a spurre may pricke vs forward vnto all goodnes and vertue. Father. Where is that commaunded? Sonne. The preacher sayth: feare god, and kepe hys commaundementes: For that belongeth vnto all men. The Psalmographe sayth: O feare the lorde all ye his sayuctes: for they that feare him shall lacke nothinge. The Prophet Micheas sayth: What acceptable thing shall I offer vnto the Lorde? shall I bowe my knee to the hye God? Shall I come before him with brent offringes, and with calues of a yeare old? Hath the lord a pleasure in many thousand rammes, or innumerable streames of oyle? Or shal I geue my first borne for mine offēces, and the fruit of my body for the sinne of my soule? Of prayer.

Of thanks geuing.

Fourthelye and finallye, oure duetye towarde the Lorde oure God is: forasmuch as sometime in this wretched world we be assaulted with the bitter stormes of aduersity, and so oppressed with them, that we knowe not what to doo: to resorte vnto God, which is a present helper in all troubles, be they neuer so many and greuous, with feruent prayer, and earnestly to call vpon him, that he may be our defence, shield and buckler against all assaultes of our enemies, and against all the bitter stormes of aduersity, nothing doubting but that as he hath promised, so likewise he both can and will heare and deliuer vs from al euil: again, whan so euer fortune smileth vpon vs, not to be proude & arrogant, and to forget God, but rather to be thankful vnto him for those his benefites, to vse them vnto the glory of his holy name, and euer to walke worthy the louing kindnes of so louinge and kinde a father. Father. where are we commaunded to pray vnto God in our aduersity? Sonne. God sayth by the Psalmograph: call on me in the time of thy trouble, and I wil deliuer thee, and thou shalt glorify me. Salomon also sayth: the name of the Lord is a mighty strong tower: vnto that the righteous flieth, and findeth socour as the prophet sayth: who so euer calleth on the name of the lorde shalbe safe. For there is one lord of al, rich inough for all that call on him. he that putteth his trust in him, shal neuer be confounded. Father. And where are we commaunded to geue thankes to God in oure prosperitye. Sonne. The psalmograph sayth: Offer vnto god the sacrifice of praise. Againe, I will prayse the name of God with a song: and magnifye it with thankes geuing. This shall please the Lorde better then a bullocke, that hath hornes and hookes. God him selfe: who so offereth me thankes and prayse he honoreth me: and to him that ordereth his conuersation aright, wil I shew the saluation of God. Father. This is the duty of all christians towarde theyr Lord God, that thou hast nowe recited. Sonne. Yea verelye. Father. What nowe remayneth? Sonne. That I declare the duty of all men toward their neighbours. Father. What is that? Sonne. To loue our neighboure, as our selfe: & to do none otherwise to other, than we wold that other shold do to vs. Father. Where is that commaundement? Sonne. As concerning loue towarde our neighbour, the holy scripture hath this commandement in diuers places: thou shalt loue thy neighboure as thy selfe.

For he that loueth a nother, hath fulfilled the lawe. For these comboure as thy selfe. Loue hurteth not his neighboure. Therfore is loue the fulfilling of the lawe.

And touching that, this is also our duty, none otherwise to do vn wise sayth God by the Prophet: washe thine harte from wicked-in harte: for they shall see God. This maye we euidentlye see in the hystorye of Abell and Caine. The sacrifices of Abell were accepted and allowed of god, because they came frō a pure and cleane hart: but the oblations of Cain were vtterly reiected and cast away, because they came from an vnpure and vncleane harte. Likewise the workes of the Scribes and Phareseis, and of suche like hipocrites Math. xxiii.

were highly alowed of mē, because outwardly they glistred with a cer taine shine of holines: But our sauiour Christ, which knewe the filthy uncleanes of those most filthy and vncleane hipocrites, compared thē vnto paynted sepulchres, which appeare beautifull outwarde, but are within ful of dead mennes bones: and sayd vnto them: euen so ye also outwardly appeare righteous vnto menne: but within ye are full of hipocrisy & wickednes. Agayn ye are they which iustify your selues before men. But God knoweth your hartes. For that which is highly estemed amongs men, is abhominable in the sight of God.

Now forasmuch as nothinge doth so defile the harte, as vncleane thoughtes (for frowarde thoughtes separate a man from God, sayth the wiseman, and the holy ghoste withdrawyth hymselfe from the thoughtes that are without vnderstandinge, and where wickednes hath the vpperhand, he flieth from there: yea inquisicion shalbe made at the day of iudgement for the thoughtes of the vngodly) we must aboue all thinges take heede of Satan, which goeth aboute like a roringe lion, seekinge whome he maye deuoure: and of the flesche, which alwayes lusteth ageinst the spirite: and also of the worlde, which ceaseth not with his vain plesurs and deceuable riches to allure mennes heartes from the true, constant and immortall goodes vnto the desire of vayne and transitory thinges. If these at any time go about to occupy and possesse our heartes, and to estraunge them from the moste wholesome considerations of God, and of his holy lawe, and to allure them vnto the meditacion of wicked, vnclene and godles thinges and so pollute and defile the inwarde man: which is the temple of the holy ghost: let vs by no meanes consent to their suttle suggestions & crafty persuasions, but rather manfully resist them, and not so much as ones suffer them to enter into our heartes, no, not with one euill thought: but in all thinges kepe our heartes so pure and so cleane both toward God and our neighbour, that the holy ghost may bouch safe to make his mansion and dwellinge place in vs for euer. And that this thing maye the more fortunatly come to passe, let vs at all times, so much as is possible, sequester our mindes from all worldlye and carnall thinges, and so vse the worlde, as though we vsed it not: and so liue in the flesh, as persones wholy mortified to the flesh, as S. Paule sayth: They truely that are Christes, haue crucified the flesh with the affections and lusts: againe, for almuch as of our selues we are fraile vessels, and are sone ouercome of these our so mighty enemies, as we may see in Adam, Dauid, Salomon, Lot, Noah, Peter, Magdalen, and in diuers other the elect people of god: it shalbe necessary, that we geue our selues oftentimes to prayer, and craue healpe at the hand of our Lord God against these cruell and fearse aduersaries, according to the most wholsome counsell of oure sauiour christe which sayth: watch and praye, that ye falle not into temptation. The spirite is redy, but the flesh is weake. Let vs pray vnto our heauenly father, as the lord christ taught vs: O heauenly father, lede vs not into temptation: but deliuer vs from euill. Let vs also praye with Dauid: Make me a cleane heart O God, and renew a right spirite within me. Cast me not away from thy presence, and take not thy holy spirite from me. O geue me the comforte of thy helpe agayne: and stablish me with thy free spirite.

It shall also profit greatly vnto the keping of oure harte pure and estranged from vayne, wicked, carnall, worldlye and idle thoughtes: if euery one of vs do consider with our selues, vnto what vice we are most of all bent, and when we are prouoked thereunto, either of the deuill, of the worlde, or of the flesshe, straight wayes to resist those temptations tations with some sentēce of the holy scripture. For there is not a better armour against the infernall army, then the sworde of the spirite, which is the worde of god. Therfore sayd Dauid: In my hart have I hidden thy wordes, that I might not sinne against the. And to geue us an example hereof, our graund captayne and lord Jesus christ toke vnto him this armoure, when Satan assaulted him, and so put hym to flight. The word of God is pure and cleane: yea it is a shield vnto all them, that trust vnto it. It is the power of God to saue so many as beleue. Let vs therfore furnish our breasts with this armour of the holy scripture, and we shal become valeant and glorious conquerours.

Ephe. vi. Psal. 119. Math. iiii. Psa. 30 Rom. i

Moreouer to be euer well, vertuously and godly occupied and at all times to eschewe idlenes, is also a necessary thing to kepe our harts pure and cleane. For idlenes openeth a window to Satan and to all his Satanicall army, and encourageth them to assayle vs with theyr tentations: but such as are godly and vertuously occupied easly escape all such daungers.

Idlenes is abour all thynges to be eschewed.

Furthermore this shall also greatly helpe vnto the conseruation of the cleanes of our hearts: if we, so sone as Satan, or the flesshe, either the world go about to assayle vs and to occupy our minds with their vile & vayne suggestions, cal streightwayes vnto remembrance oure death and departure from this world, and againe, the terrible iudgement of god agaynst all wickednes: which God shall call vs vnto an account for euery wicked thought, idle worde and sinfull worke, that we haue done. To set these thinges before the eyes of our mind continually, shall kepe the inwarde man in a most goodly and godly order, so that not so much as a vayne thought shall find any dwelling place in vs. so farre is it of, that we shall runne hedlong into all kinde of sin as the wise man sayth: remember thy latter end, and thou shalt neuer do amisse. If we on this wise labour to kepe our heartes pure & clene so that we suffer not so much as an il thought to rule in them, whereby eyther God shoulde be dishonored, or oure neighboure hindred, or our soule defiled: oh, who is hable to expresse, what a ioye, yea what a heauen we shall find in our consciences? as the wiseman saith: a quiet hart is a continuall feast. Agayne, a mery hearte maketh a cherefull countenance: but an heauy heart compelleth a man to sigh.

Of death.

Secondly, forasmuch, as our Sauiour christ saith, a good man out of the good treasure of the hart bringeth fourth good thinges: and out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh: it is necessary, that we out of a pure heart bring fourth pure wordes: euen such wordes as may neither offende God nor man, but rather edefye and minister grace to the hearers: yea and that so much the more, because we are taught in the gospel, that at the day of iudgement we shall render an account of euery idle word, that we speake. The wiseman sayth: who so kepeth his mouth & his tongue, the same kepeth his soule from troubles. Againe, he that keepeth his mouth, kepeth his life: but who so openeth his lippes to euill, destroyeth hym selfe. Let no filthy communication procede out of our mouthes. As for fornication and al vnclenes, or couetousnes, or filthynes, or folish talking, or iesting, which are not comely, let them not ones be named among vs, but rather geuing of thankes, as it becommeth sayntes. And forasmuch, as S. James sayth, as the tong, is a little member and boasteth great things, and is so set among oure members, that it defileth the whole body, and setteth toth a fire all that we haue of nature, and is it selfe set a fire euen of hell: yea it is an vnruly euill, full of deadly poyson: and cannot be tamed of the nature of man (for therewith blesse we God the father, & therwith curse we men, which are made like vnto the image of god) it is meete, that we for the taming and ordering of so great an euill flie vnto God with harty prayer, and beseech him so to dispose and gouerne our mouth, that nothing may flow out of it, which shal not turne vnto the glory of God, the profit of our neighboure and the saluation of our soules. Let vs pray with Dauid ad say: set a watch, O lorde, before my mouth and kepe the dores of my lyppes.

Psal. 141. pro. xxx. pro. viii. Psal. 140.

Let vs praye also with Salomon: O God remoue from me vanity and lies. Let vs likewise haue this saying of the wiseman euer before our eyes: put away from the a frowarde mouth: and let the lippes of slaunder be farre from the. A man full of wordes, sayth Dauid, shall not prosper vpon the earth: euill shall hunte the wicked person to ouerthrow him.

Of eies pro. vi.

Thirdly, as it is oure duty, godly and vertuously to vse our tongue and with iudgement so to dispose oure wordes, that no euill folowe thereof: so likewise it becommeth vs soberly and modestly, grauely & temperatly to vse al the other partes of the body. In our eies let there neither appere pride nor wantonnes. For the Lorde sayth Salomon, abhorreth a proude looke. Neither can he abide adulterous and wo rich eies. In consideration wherof, the wiseman for a redresse of both these euels prayeth vnto God on this maner: O lord, let me not haue a proud loke: but turn away al voluptuousnes from me: take frō me ỹ lusts of the body: let not the desires of vnclenes take hold vpō me, and geue me not ouer into an vnshamefast and obstinate mind. It shalbe good alwayes to haue in remembrance this sayinge of the wiseman: Let thine eies behold the thinge that is right, and let thine eyelidded looke streight before the. And that we may this do the more perfectly accordinge to the will of God, it shalbe conuenient that we praye with Dauid and say: O turne away mine eyes, lest they behold vanitie: and quicken thou me in thy way.

Moreouer with oure handes let vs worke no wickednes. For the Lord abhorreth those handes that sheade innocent bloode, sayth Salomon. He also detesteth those hands, which are giltty of theste or robbery, or of any other leudnes. The handes of the christians ought not to be exercised in any poynte of wickednes, but in honest & godly trauayles and labores, as it is written: thou shalt eate the labores of thine handes. Againe: Let him that stole, steale no more: but let him rather labour with his hands the thinge which is good, that he may geue vnto him that needeth. Saint Paule glorieth and reioyseth, that he with the labour of his owne handes sedde both him selfe and such also as were with him. And who knoweth not, that a man is borne to labour euē as ỹ bird is to fly. And vnto this ende god hath geuē vs oure handes: euen that we should worke some good thing with thē, profitable to our selues and to our neighboures, and by no meanes to abuse them with any vayne, wanton, vngodly or wicked exercises: nor to suffer them to be idle, forasmuch as an idle hand maketh poore, but a quick labouring hand maketh rich.

Furthermore our feete we ought so to direct, ỹ they by no meanes haste

vnto wickednes. For the lord abhorreth the feste. shalbe ydle in running to do mischief. Vnto tauerns, alehowses, playhowses, whore houses, dauncinge houses, and such other places of wickednesse: lette vs by no meanes directe oure steppes: but rather vnto suche places, where the worde of God is to be heard: where the poore people are to be relieued and succoured: where honest and vertuous companye doth resorte: where vertue is to be learned: where vice and all synne is abhorred: where we neade not to be ashamed of oure beinge, where we haue a touche bothe the place, the companye and the exercyse &c. euer hauynge before oure eyes this saying of Salomon: Ponder the pathe of thy feete, and lette all thy wayes be ordred aryghte. Tourne not aside, neyther to the ryght hande nor to the lefte: but withholde thy foote from euell. For the Lorde knoweth the wayes that are on the right hande. As for the wayes that be on the left hand they be frowarde, but he shall directe thy goynges, and thy wayes shall be guyde in peace. Againe, the path of the ryghteous is to eschue euyl: and who so loketh wel to his wais kepeth hys owne soule. Pro.iiii. Pro.xvi

And that we may thus trade oure steppes in all godlynesse and honestye: lette vs with the Psalmographe praye on this manner and saye: Thou, O Lorde, haste charged, that we shall diligently kepe thy commaundementes. O that my wayes were made so directe, that I myghte kepe thy statutes. So shall I not be confounded, whyle I haue respecte vnto all thy commaundementes. O make me to goo in the pathe of thy commaundements: for therin is my desyre &c. psal.cxix

And as it is oure duetye thus to vse these membres of oure bodye, whyche I haue nowe spoken of: so in lyke manner are we bounde by the commaundement of God, honestlye and godlye to vse the residue of the same, that oure whole bodye maye be the Temple of the holye Ghoste, as Sainte Paule sayeth: knowe ye not, that ye are the temple of God, and howe that the spirite of God dwelleth in you? If anye manne defyle the Temple of God, hym shall God destroye. For the Temple of God is holye, whyche Temple ye are. Againe, knowe ye not, howe that your bodies are the Temple of the holye Ghost which dwelleth in you, whome ye haue of God, and howe that ye are not your owne? For ye are dearlye boughte. Therefore glorifye God in your bodies, and in your spirites, whiche are Goddes. Once againe: Beare not ye the yoke with the vnbeleuers. For what felowshyppe hathe ryghteousnesse wyth vnryghteousnesse? Or what companye hathe lyghte wyth darknesse? Or what concorde hathe Chryste wyth Belial? Either what parte hathe he that beleueth wyth an infidell? Or howe agreeth the Temple of God wyth Images? For ye are the Temple of the liuynge God, as GOD sayde: I wyll dwell amonge them, and walke among them, and wyll be theyr God: and they shall be my people. Wherefore come oute from amonge them, and separate your selues from them (sayethe the Lorde) and touche none vncleane thynge. So wyll I receyue you, and wyll be a father vnto you, and ye shall be my sonnes and daughters, saith the Lord almighty. We ought to vse godly all the members of our body 1.Cor.iii 1.Cor.vi 2.Cor.vi Exo.xix. Leui.xxvi Ese.xxxvi Esa.lii

Fourthly and finally, we shal than do our duety toward our selues, and lyue wyth a meary conscience bothe before God and mā, if we be that in dede, that we are called. if oure life answer to oure profession:

we garnisshe the doctryn of God our Sauiour with good workes if we doo all thyng as the Apostle sayeth, without murmuryngs and disputing, that we may be such as no man can complain on: and vnreproued sonnes of god without rebuke in the mids of a croked & perverse nation, and shine as great lightes in the world, holding fast the word of life: yea to be short, than shal we do our duty toward our Lorde, whē we so liue, that our conscience do neuer accuse vs of any euill thynge, neither in thought, word nor dede, but rather at all times testify vnto vs, that whatsoeuer we do, is good and pleasāt in the sight of god, and acceptable before his deuine maiesty. For our reioysing is this, sayeth
2. Cor. 1 thapostle, euen the testimonye of our conscience, that in singlenesse (of hart) and godly pureness, and not in fleshly wisdom, but by the grace of god, we haue had our conuersation in the world. To end, let euery

For no mā is able to expresse, what a precious iewel and noble treasure, yea what a paradise and heauen a good, pure & clear conscience is. It is as the Poet sayeth, Murus aheneus, that is to saye, a

Thus haue I (most louing father) according to your commaundement and wil, declared vnto you, al the parts of the Catechisme, and in such order, as I learned them of our preacher and Catechist. If I haue not in al poyntes satisfied your expectation, I shall desire you to consider my yong and tender age, and my smal exercise as yet in matters of christē religion. As I encrease in age, so I trust also to encrease in the knowledge of gods most holy wil, that at the last, I thorow the spirit of god, may grow and waxe ancient in Christ, and so at the laste become a perfect man in faith and truth: which thing I most humbly beseeche God for his mercye, yea for his deare sonne Christes sake to graunt me. Father. Amen. O my most dear and dearly beloued sonne, I thanke God for thee, and I blesse his holy name for the good gifts that he hath bestowed vpon thee. And I most humbly beseche him for his holy names sake, that as he hath begon in this thy yong and tender age to pour a good spirit into thee, & to bring thee vnto the knowledge of the gospel of his sonne Christ Iesu (whiche knowledge bryngeth euerlasting life) so it may please him of his fatherly goodnesse to continue this his fauor toward thee, and daily more and more to multiply and encrease these his heauenly benefits in thee: ỹ in thys world thou maiste be a good and profitable citezen of the christen common weale, and in the world to come an enheritoure of euerlasting glorye. For this I say vnto thee, my dere sonne, thou haste not onlye satisfyed mine expectation, but thou hast also greatly ouercome it, and rendred psal. viii Luc. xi a reason of thy faith and knowledge, farre passyng bothe mine opinion and thine age. But it is truely said of the Psalmograph in his prayer vnto God: Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast ordained praise, because of thyne ennemyes, that thou mightest stylle the ennemy and the auenger. And God him selfe sayth by the Prophet: I
Act. ii wyll poure out of my spirite vpon all flesh, and your sonnes and your daughters shall prophecy.

The Psalmographe also saith: I haue had more vnderstanding than the old men, because I sought after thy commaundementes. Psal.cxix

Our sauior Christ likewise geueth thankes to his heauenlye father, that it pleased him to hide the misteries of his blessed will frō the prudent and wise of this world, and to reuele and open them to lytle ones. Math.xi

For not many wise men after the flesshe, not many mightye, not many of hie degree, are called: but God hathe chosen the foolishe thynges of the worlde, to confounde the wyse. And God hathe chosen the weake of the world, to confound thinges, which are mighty. And vile things of the world, and things which are despised hath god chosen, yea and things of no reputation, for to bring to nought things of reputatyon, that no flesh shuld reioyce in his presence. The doctrine that thou hast now in y declaratiō of the Catechisme vttred vnto me, is in al poynts sound, true, godly, faithful, wholsome, & substancially grounded vpon the foūdation of thapostles and prophets, Jesus Christ him self being the hed corner stone: so that the gates of hel shall neuer be able to preuail against it, yea though a showre of rain descend, & the fluds come, & the windes blow, and beat vpon this doctrin, yet shall it not fall: for it is groūded on the rocke Christ Jesus: & though it be tried with fire, yet shal it not consume and perish: for it is not hay & stubble, but gold, siluer and precious stones, builte vpon a foundation, which is Jesus Christ: again, although heauen and earth perish, and al flesh wyth the glory therof wither & fade away, yet shal this doctrin endure for euer, so that not one iote or one title of it shal perish, as god him self saith by the prophet: What hath chaffe & wheat to do together, saith the lorde? Is not my word like a fire, saith the Lorde? and like an hammer, that breaketh the hard stone? And as this doctrin is agreable to the word of God, so likewise doth it not dissent from the teaching of the true catholike and apostolike church, but cōcordeth and agreeth therwith in al poyntes: yea and with so many as frō the beginning vnto this our age haue taught the truth of gods word. And I dout not, but that so many as are content with the voyce of their shepherd Christ, & regard not the voyce of strangers, both do and wil approue & allow this doctrin. As for such as follow straūge doctrin, & will not consent vnto the wholsom words of our lord Jesu Christ, & to the doctrin, which is according to godlines, as they be puft vp and know nothing, but waste their brains about questions and strife of words, wherof spring enuy strife, railings, euil surmisings, vain disputation of men that haue corrupt mindes, and that are robbed of the truth, which thinke that lucre is godlines: euen so from thē that are suche and so minded, ought we to seperate our selues, and to haue nothing to do with thē, forasmuch as they be the blind guids of the blind. And although, as Jannes and Jambres withstode Moses, these men of corrupt mindes and leud, as concerning the faith, resist the truth: yet shall they preuaile no lenger. For their madnes shalbe vttred vnto al men, euē as theirs was. The god of peace shal tread satan vnder our fete shortlye. Greate Babilon that wicked whore, that stout and strōg strompet, that blasphemous baud, that murdering mother of al the whordoms and abhominatiōs of the earth, that painted & glorious harlot, with whom the very kings of the earth haue cōmitted fornication, and the inhabitors of the earth are dronken wyth the wyne of her whoredome: thys whore, thys strompette, thys baude, thys harlotte, shall shortlye haue a fall wyth all her Sonne. I confesse (most louing father) that of my self I haue no good thing, neither am I able any thing to do, that may be plesant in the syght of God, which of my self am not able so much as to thinke a good thought, (al our hability is of God, whiche worketh in vs both to wil wel and to do wel) therfore according to your good aduertisement, I wil to the vttermost of my power, endeuor my selfe to haue God my gracious Lord, both by prayer & godly life, that he may go forth dailye more and more to blesse me with his benefytes, and to make me a vessell of mercy, and an enheritor of his glorious kingdom thorow Jesus Christ his only begotten and derely beloued sonne, and mine alone sauiour. Father. I commend thy good and godly disposition. And I beseche God, to confirme thee in his truth vnto the end. Sonne. Amen. Father. Come my deare childe: let vs goo and see what thy Mother doth. Maister Thomas Wotton Esquier, Thomas Becon wysheth longe life, continuall health, and prosperous felicitie.

AMong all other his benefites, wherwith God promiseth by the Prophet to ennable, adorne, garnish, decke, and enriche his holy Congregation, whom he hathe maried vnto hym in faith: one not of the least is, that Kinges and Queenes, that is to saye, noble personages, and suche as be of great reputacion and of highe auctoritie in this worlde, shalbe her Nurses, kepe and kesser her, loue and fauour her, preserue and defend her. Of this sorte there are not a fewe of the nobilitie (God be thanked) at this present in dyuers and sondry Realmes and Contries, which vnfainedly loue, fauour and tender the holy Church, euen the felowshyppe of the faithfull, laye hand on Christes Gospell, kisse the Sonne, and auaunce the true religion of Christ agaynst Antichriste and all his adherentes: so that the congregation of God beinge thus fostured, maintayned and defended by the hier powers, doo greatlye in these oure dayes spring, encrease, grow, prosper, florishe, fructifie, and triumph vnto the great glory of God, and vnto the singuler consolacion of all the godly. Ose. 2. Esay. 49.

The office of a noble man.

And verely this is the office of a noble and worthy personage that beareth rule in a Christen common weale, euer to set before his eies, whose seruaunt and officer hee is: and whose person hee doth representt, and for what cause hee is called vnto that authoritie amonge his brethren. Now who knoweth not, that the noble man or Magistrate is the seruaunt and officer of God? If hee be the seruaunt and officer of God: so is it his dutie to accomplishe his lordes and Masters commaundement, and diligently, to satisfie his wyll and pleasure in all thinges. The Magistrate also representeth, not the person, of that moste cruell tiraunt Nero the Emperour, nor of that moste voluptuous Kinge Sardanapalus, nor yet of that most couetous Prince Midas: but hee representeth the most worthy person of God, and for that cause he is called in the holy scripture, God, because hee ruleth as God among the people of God with all equitie and iustice, with all clemencie and mercie, euermore labouringe godly and quietly to rule and gouerne those, ouer whom God hath made him a shepparde and ouerseare. Againe, who is so ignorannt of the will of God expressed in the holy scriptures, which knoweth not, that a Magistrate or noble person is for this purpose called vnto authoritie, that hee might profite and doo good to the Christen common weale? And what greater benefite can a good and godly Magistrate shew to the people of god, then to bring them vnto the knowledge of their saluation in the bloud of Christ thorow faith: then to remoue & to take out of the waye all such lettes and stombling blockes, as might in any poynte hinder them from comming vnto the way of trueth: then to do all thinges concerning matters of religion, not as olde croked custome maintaineth, not as the triflinge traditions of men teach, not as the deuelish decrees of Antichrist prescribe, not as vnwritten verities enforme, not as worldly policie deuiseth, nor yet as good entent and blinde zeale moueth, but as he is commaunded by the word of God, which is the selfe trueth, as God sayde to Iosua: Bee thou stronge and as bolde as thou canste, that thou mayest obserue and doe according to all the law, which Moyses my seruaunt commaunded thee. Turn ther from neither to the right hande, nor to the lefte: that thou maiest doo wisely in all thou takest in hand. Let not the boke of this law departe out of thy mouth: Why the Magistrate is called god.

but receyue therein daye and nyghte, that thou mayest obserue, and doo accordynge to all that is wrytten therein. For then shalte thou make thy wayes prosperous, and then shalt thou doo wysely.

And vnto this thinge the holy Ghoste exhorteth Kynges, Princes and Rulers in dyuers places of the holye scripture. By that Princelike Prophet and Psal. ii. Psalmographe Dauyd hee speaketh on this manner: Bee wyse nowe O ye Kynges, bee learned, ye that bee Iudges of the earth. Serue the Lorde in feare, and reioyce vnto him with reuerence. Kisse the Sonne, least hee bee angrye, and soo ye perysshe from the ryghte waye. Agayne, lyfte vp your heades Psal. xxiiii. (O ye gates) and bee ye lyfte vp, ye euerlastynge doores, and the Kynge of glory shall come in. By the wyse man hee also sayeth: O set your affection vpon righteousnes, ye that bee Iudges of the earth haue a good opinyon of the Sapi. i. Lorde, and seeke hym in the singlenes of hearte. For hee wyll bee founde of them, that tempte hym not and hee appereth vnto suche, as put theyr truste in hym. Againe, heare (O ye kynges) and vnderstande: O learne ye that bee Iu- Sapi. vi. ges of the endes of the earth. Geue eare ye that rule the multitudes, and delyghte in muche people. For the power is geuen you of the Lorde, and the strength from the hiest: whych shall trie your workes, and searche oute your imaginacions: howe that ye beynge officers of this kyngdome, haue not executed true iudgemente, haue not kepte the lawe of ryghteousnes, nor walked after the wyl of God. Horribly, and that right sone shal hee appeare vnto you: for an harde iudgemente shall they haue that beare rule. Mercye is graunted to the simple, but they that bes in authoritie, shall bee sore punyshed. For God, whyche is Lorde ouer all, shall excepte no mans person, neyther shal hee stande in awe of anye mans greatnes. For hee hathe made the small and greate, and careth for all alike. But the myghtie shall haue the surer punyshmente. Vnto you therefore (O ye Kinges) doo I speake, that ye maye learne wysedome, and not go amysse. For they that keepe his righteousnesse, shalbe righteously iudged, and they that are learned in ryghteous thinges, shall finde to make answere. Wherefore set your lust vppon my wordes, and loue them, so shall ye come by nurtour. &c. O set your lust vppon wysedome, that ye maye reygne for euermore. O loue the lighte of wysedome, all ye that bee rulers of the people. &c. O receaue nourtour thorow my wordes, and it shall doo you good.

Here see wee, how earnestly the holy Ghoste calleth all Princes and Rulars vnto the knowledge of his blessed worde, exhorting them to publyshe and auaunce that aboue all thinges, that they which are the people of God, maye know it, beleue it, serue God accordinge to his owne appointment, and walke in the rules of the same all the dayes of theyr lyfe. And as Kynges, Princes, Rulars and Magistrates are commaunded of God to set forthe his holy religion, to auaunce his glorious gospell, to mayntaine and cherishe his faithful congregation: so like wyse haue all vertuous and godlye Magistrates from time to time in all ages laboured to the vttermoste of theyr power to accomplishe this blessed wyll and holy commaundements of the Lorde our God, as wee rede of Dauid, Ezechias, Iosaphat, Iosias. &c. and also of Constantine the greate, of Theodosius, Valerus, and suche like: whyche all thorow oute all theyr kingdoms with all maine banished Idolatry, superstition, false worshipinge of God. &c. and with all theyr power they did set vp the worde of god, the true religion of God, the faith of God, and the pure worshipping of God, frō minge theyr Subiectes continually after the rule of Gods most holy and blessed wil. And not only in times past, but also in these our dates God hath raised vp many worthye & noble, many godlye & vertuous Magistrates, whych vnfaynedly seek his glory & the auauncement of his true religion: vtterly banishing out of their Realmes all Idolatry, Papistry, superstitiō, false religion & perterfaite worshippynge of God. &c. And albeit other forrayne nations minister vnto vs abundaunce of examples in this behaife, yet this oure Realme also is not soo without the like, that wee bee vtterly destitute of them. What shall I speake of that most victorious Prince King Henry the eight, which first of all in thels oure dayes gaue the attempte, yea, and that with moste prosperous successe, in purging the Church of Christ, in restoring vnto vs the knowledge of Gods most holy word, and in plantinge the true relygion of Christe, banishinge out of this his kingdom that Romyshe Antichrist with all his Satanicall Sectaries? What shall I heare rehearse that moste godly, vertuous and Christen Prince King Edward the first a ruler worthy of immortality, (if immortality might chaunce to any mortall man) whiche did not only followe the steppes of his most worthy father in pourging the church of Christ, but also in the perfection therof excelled all the Princes and Rulars in this our age. The worthy and most notable actes of this our moste gracious Princesse Queene Elizabeth in restoringe and renewinge the true and holy relygion of God, whych before of late yeares was obscured with the darke and cloudy mystes of mens wicked tradicions vnto the great dishonour of God, and vnto the hie perill of many soules which were seduced yea and poysoned thorow the pestilent leauen of the most pestilent Pharisels: are more geuen and knowen, then they need here to bee recited. Verely her hyghnes is to this Realme, that the sonne is to the earth after many stormy, cloudy and tempestuous dayes. God preserue her grace longe in honoure and health amonge vs, vnto the glory of hys holy name, the confusion of Antichriste, the encrease of his glorious Gospell, and the perfect confirmacion and establyshment of hys faithfull congregation in this Realme of England, that hys worde and true relygion maye abyde in vs vnto the ende.

King Henry the eight.

King Edward the first.

Queene Elizabeth.

And as God hath geuen vs these aforesayd the most worthy Princes to doo that which is right before the eyes of his diuine Maiestie: so likewise hath hee stirred vp in this our most florysshing Realme many godly and christen Magistrates, which doo their vttermost endeuour, and labour, with all men that all false religion extirped and plucked vp by the rootes, the sincere, pure and true religion of our Sauiour Christe Jesu maye bee planted in the heartes of the Queenes Maiesties subiectes. Among these most worthy and godly Magistrates is your worshyp to be nombred, which dayly and without ceassing according to your vocation and calling, labour and trauaile to set forthe Gods most holy word in those parties where you inhabite vnto the good example of all other rulars and Magistrates. Nothinge is more deare vnto you, then the glorious Gospel of our Sauiour Christe, whiche you moste entierly loue and most tenderly embrace. And as your worshippe doth most highly fauoure it: so is it your most harty desire that all men may bee led with the like affection toward it, that wee receauing one doctrine, may with one mouth and one minde glorifie God the father of our Lord Jesus Christe.

Moreouer as in matters of Christen religion, so likewise in Politique affaires you show your selfe a worthy and profitable member of the christen common weale, whyle in all your doynges bothe private and publique, bothe secreate and open, you vse suche certeintye and suche vpryghtnes, that the verye aduersaryes are compelled to magnyfie and prayse God for you, and to wyshe vnto you all good and prosperous thinges.

Againe as touching the godly order, whych is prvuately vsed in your private house: it is suche and so prayse worthy, that the whole company of vertues maye iustlye seeme there to haue made theyr habitation: suche and soo greate godlines is found in them that appertaine vnto you.

These are the workes not of fleash and bloud, but the fruites of the spirit of God, grafted in your heart by his mightie operation and working. For as the holy Apostle sayeth: The natural man perceaueth not the thinges that belong to the spirite of God. For they are but folishnes vnto him. Neither can he perceaue them, because they are spiritually examined. But hee that is spirytuall,

1. Cor. 2. discusseth all thinges. Euery good gifte, and euery perfect gift is from aboue, and commeth downe from the father of lightes, saith S. James. And our Sauiour Christ saith: No man can come to mee, except the father that sent mee, drawe him. Euery man that hath heard, and hath learned of the father, com-

Iacob. 1. Iohn. 6. meth vnto mee.

Quench not this good spirit, but rather go forth to store vp this good gift of God wrought in you, that at the last ye may grow and ware auncient in christ vnto the glory of his holy name and vnto the saluation of your soule. For this is the redy waye vnto heauen: this openeth a passage vnto euerlasting glory: this maketh vs felow enheritours of Gods most glorious kyngdom, as god him selfe saith: Them that worshyp mee, I wyl worshyp: and they that despise mee, shall come to shame. And our Sauiour Christ saith: If any man minister vnto mee, him will my father honour.

1 Reg. 2. Iohn. 12. Considering therfore these godly fruites of gods spirite in your breast, and ledde with an inward affection toward your worshyppe in the purenes of true and christen loue: after that in this my long and greuous sickenes I had finyshed this my bookes of Matrimony: I thought it not vnsittinge to dedicate the same vnto your name, as a testimony of my singular hartie good wyl toward you. In this treatise I first of all haue set forth the excellencie and dignitie of holy and honorable wedlocke, and haue also dysclosed the wycked doctrine of the aduersaries, which either in times past or at this presente haue done their endeuour to disgrace and deface the honour and glory of Matrimony.

The contentes of the boke of Matrimony. Secondly, I haue declared, what Matrimonie is: in the which part are opened dyuers thinges concerninge Matrimony, worthy to bee knowen in this oure age.

Thirdly, I haue opened, vnto what ende Matrimony was institute and ordayned of God at the beginning: in the which parte also I haue entreated certaine matters worthy of consideration.

Forthly and finally, I haue shewed, how such as be coupled together in the holy and blessed state of Matrimony, oughte to lyue in the same accordinge to the will and ordinaunce of god, both concerning them selues, and all such like wise as appertaine vnto their cure and charge: so that whatsoeuer is necessary to bee knowne touchinge Matrimony, is abundantly handled in this treatise, yea and that according to the word of God and the doctrine of the holy fathers of Christes churche.

This my labour whatsoeuer it bee, I send vnto your worshyp, desiring you to take it in good parte and to accepte it as the gifte of him, which wisheth vnto you all ioyfull and prosperous thinges bothe for your soule and body, that you may bee whole and sound before God with that perfection, which is required of a true Christian.

God preserue your worshyppe and all yours in continuall healthy with increase of all goodnes and godlynes vnto the ende.

Amen.

¶ To the godly and Christen Reader.

IF God, which is the alone geuer of all good thinges had endewed mee with the diuine gifte of such and so great eloquence, that I might iustly and without any reprehension haue compared with that moste excellente Greke Pericles, whose vaine of ornate eloquence either in perswading or dissuadinge euen of very nature seemed to bee incomparable, and not able of any mortall man to bee obtayned, nor yet scasely in any poynte so much as a shadow of the same to be expressed: yet I here frely confesse that I myghte well appeare more barbarous than the rude and grosse Garamantes, if I shold take vpon mee to decantate and set forth the dignitie of honorable wedlocke accordinge to the desertes thereof, and exalte it with suche encomies, laudes and prayses, as it hathe alwayes bene thought worthy euen of them, that haue most florysshed with pregnant wittes and excelled with all kynde of knowledge both diuine and humaine. Let other praise Chastitie so muche as they liste, which they saye (wold God it were so) filleth heauen, yet wil I commend matrimony, which replenysheth bothe heauen and earth. Let other set forth single liuing with so many prayses, as they can accumulate and tomble one in anothers necke, for as much as it is voyde of all care, trouble and dysquietnes, yet wyll I for euermore commend the state of honorable wedlocke which refuseth no kynde of payne and trouble, so that it may bryng any profit at all to the publique weale of Christendome. Let other approue solitarye lyuinge, whych is partaker of none of all those burdens, that the common sorte of men doo sustaine, yet wyl I preferre that state of liuing, which accordinge to the order of charitie, is redy at all times to beare the burdens of other, and to seke the quietnes of other no lesse than of it self. Let other praise that kinde of life, wherby mankynde decayeth and in processe of time should bee vtterly destroyed, yet wyl I commend that manner of life, which begetteth and bringeth forth to vs excellent Kinges, noble Princes, Princelike Dukes, Puyssaunt Lordes, baleaunt Knightes, conninge artificers for the maintenaunce of the common weale, learned wittes. &c. Let other auaunce that life, wherby Monarchies, Empyres, and Kyngdomes bee made desolate, barren and vnfruitfull, yet wyl I most of all prayse that life, which maketh Realmes to florishe with innumerable thousandes of people, wherby the publique weale is preserued in safe estate. Let other praise such as may iustly seeme to bee monstures of nature for theyr sterilite and barrennes, yet will I commend them, which according to theyr fyrst creation and the natural disposicion, that God from the beginning engrafted in them, are fruteful as a plenteous vyne. Let other allow the fansie of those belly gods, which for a voluptuous, careles and swinish maner of lyuing, and because they wyll not liue of the labour of theyr owne hands, and the sweat of theyr owne browes, after the commaundement of God, had rather liue like abhominable adulterers, stinkynge whoremongers, vncleane fornicatours, detestable Sodomytes, vnnaturall monstures vnto the great slaunder of the Christen religion: and so to dye as vnprofitable cloddes of the earth, than godly to marry and leaue behinde them such frute, as in time to come might bothe profite the common weale, and also set forthe the glory of God, whan notwithstanding both the law of God, of nature, and of man both suffereth and prouoketh them vnto the contrary, seing they haue not the gift of chastitie geuen them, and it is better to marry than to burne, as the Apostle sayth: Yet wyl I commend and prayse such as doo not degenerat, as Icarus dyd, from theyr natural kinde, but embrace holy wedlocke, whyche is honorable among all persons, and bring forth frute accordinge to the com-

maundement of God, because they wyll not perpetrate nor once attempte any thinge, that should bee vncleane in the sight of God, and a stombling stocke in theyr owne conscience. To bee short, let other prayse them, whyche whan they dye, leaue no liuish and quicke testimonies behinde them, yet wyll I commend them, which, whan they geue ouer to nature, leaue quycke and liuish testimonies behinde them, wherby they declare that they haue lyued, and not ben vnfrutefull nor vnprofitable to the Christen publique weale. For can christen Matrimony bee any otherwyse than a thing of great excellencye and incomparable dignitie, seyng it was not ordeyned of Minos of Creta, nor of Licurgus of Lacedemony, nor yet of Solon the Athenien, but of the most high and immortall God him selfe, and by him, yea by him alone commended to mankynde in so much that men may seeme to bee allured, moued and stirred vnto this state of liuinge with a certen inspiracion of the holy Ghost: In Paradyse also that garden of pleasure was it instituted, yea and that before anye sinne reygned in this world, to shew that it bryngeth to man great ioye, wealth, felicitie and quietnes. And since that time hath it euer bene had in great estimacion: yea and that not only among them that professe vnfayned faith in the liuing god, but also among so many as only were led by the instincte of nature, in so much that it was recounted a thinge of much ignominie, and reproche to liue without the state of wedlocke and to bee vnfruitfull. Were not the holy Patriarches marryed men: Did not the Prophetes of God liue in the christen state of holy wedlocke: Did not God in the olde law bothe wyll his preestes to marry, and also appoint them, what wyues they should haue: was not Christ borne in mariage: Were not the Apostles of Christe marryed men: Dyd not Christ garnish mariage with the firste fruites of his miracles, whan bee with his mother and his Disciples were at a wedding in the Citie of Cana in Galyle, was not Philip the Euangelist a maryed man, and had foure doughters excellently learned in holy Scriptures: Were not many other holy men both Bysheps and preestes maryed longe after the Apostles time, as wee reade in the autentike Hystories: Doth not S. Paul call the forbiddinge of marryage, the doctrine of dyuelles:

Not man but God hym selfe instituted holye wedlocke, yea and that in Paradise.

Of these thinges it is manifest, of how great estimation holy wedlock hath euer bene since the first beginninge of the worlde amonge all degrees of parsons. Who wyll not now commend honorable wedlocke, as a thinge of greate excellency: Who wyll not thinke it a state of liuinge worthy highe prayse and commendacion: Who wyll not iudge that it ought to bee embraced with metinge armes (as they saye) seynge that by it so many noble treasures chaunce vnto vs: vertue is mayntained, vice is exchewed, houses are replenished, cities are inhabited, the ground is tilled, sciense are practised, kyngdems florysh, amitie is preserued the publique weale is defended, naturall succession remayneth, good artes are taught, honest order is kepte, Christendome is enlarged, Gods word promoted, and the glory of God highly auaunced and set forth:

The excellencie of wedlock

The frutes and commodities of wedlocke.

But alas, and wo is mee for it, the glory of this christen matrimony is now greatly obscured, yea almost vtterly extincte and quenched thorowe the abhominable whoredom, stinckinge adultery, wicked fornication, and all kinde of vnclennes, which is vsed now a dayes among vs, yea and that frely and without any punishment. There is no trueth, there is no mercy, there is no knowledge of God on the earth as the Prophet saith, cursing, lieng, manslaughter, theyfte and whoreh̄unting haue ouerflowed the world. Men now a daies hunte the Stewes and harlottes houses, as Hieremie sayth. They are become lyke wylde stoned horses that runne after mares, for euerye one neyeth at hys neighbours wife. And would God this were the worste.

The dyshonour of wedlocke.

Ose. iiii.

Jere. v.

Matrimony is despised, whoredome is had in price. True wyues and faithfull yokefellowes are neglected and set at nought, but whores and harlots are

embraced, kissed, kulled and much set by. Honest wives sit at home and almost perishe for hunger: but harlottes are sumptuously fed with all kinde of deyntyes. Matrimony is called an halter, but whoredome is recounted a pleasure. Wedlocke is now taken for a kinde of liuing replete with all misery, care, sorow, pouertie, wretchednes and beggery, but to liue in whoredome and suche other detestable vnclennes, is recounted to liue like a cleane and vpryghte vp man, like a lusty bryte, like a iolye ruffelar, like a fellow, that wyll not geue his head for the wallynge, yea like such an one, as it would doo a man good (saye they) to bee in his company, bee is suche a minion and pleasaunt fellow, ful of his merye conceates and wanton toyes. To tarye at home but one daye with theyr wyues, is more than twise an hell, but to bee dallyeng amonge whores, whole dayes, nightes and monethes, and there to spende all that they haue, is a pleasure for a Pope, and recounted no payne at all. O good god how longe wylte thou suffer this intollerable abhominacion? How longe shall the heade rulers wincke at this great wickednes? Shal England neuer bee pourged of this filthy vnclennes and vncleane filthines? Shall there neuer bee a remedy found in England for the extirpacion of this diuelysh and tomuche beastlyke vice, seynge wee haue had so many occassions geuen vs in times passe, and yet still haue dayly? Shal wee euer laughe at this great abhominacion, whiche is wared so highe, that it can growe vp no further? Shall this commaundemente of god neuer haue place amonge vs Englishmen? There shall bee no whore amonge the doughters of Israel, nor no whoremonger amonge the sonnes of Israel. Are not wee also the people of God? Are not wee Israelites, and suche as bee conuerted from oure olde conuersacion vnto true godlines? Hathe not God also redemed vs from all iniquitie, and purified vs a peculiare people to him selfe, that wee should bee earnest followers of good workes? Oughte not so much clennes of life appeare in vs, as it did in times passe amonge the olde Jewes? Hathe god delyuered vs from the power of oure enemyes, that wee should liue dissolutely, and not rather that wee shold walke before him all the dayes of our life in holines and righteousnes? Is not this commaundemente also geuen to vs: Thou shalt commit no whoredom? Is it not sayd vnto vs, for to auoide fornication, let euerye man haue a wife of his owne and euerye woman an husbande of her owne? Why than doo wee tomble and bury oure selues in this filthy and stincking puddle of vnclennes, and not rather embrase holy wedlocke, whiche is honorable amonge all men? Why haue wee a pleasure to forsake our owne wyues, and to ronne a whorehunting after harlots? Why doo wee consume, waste and spende awaye so vnthriftelye all that euer wee haue amonge noughty packes, and leaue our poore wyues and children at home succourles and vnprouyded for? Why doo we make of the members of Christe the members of an whore? Certes oure finall destruction is nearer at hand than wee are ware of: For this pronite and bent redines vnto this filthy sinne of the flesh is an euident token that the great and terrible daye of iudgement is at hand. For among all other, Christ rehearseth this token before his comming, and saith: As it came to passe in the dayes of Noe, so shal it be like wyse in the dayes of the Sonne of man. They dyd eate, drincke, marrye, and were married euen vnto the very daye, that Noe entered into the Arke, and the flood came and destroyed them all. Againe as it chaunced in the dayes of Loth, they dyd eate, drincke, bye, sell, plante and bilde, but the very same daye that Loth wente oute of Sodome, it rayned fyre and brimstone from heauen and destroyed them all. Accordinge to those thinges shall the daye bee, whan the sonne of man commeth.

tes were in the time of Lothe, this is sinne, this is wickednes, this is hygh abhominacion, this stinketh before the face of God, and deserueth euerlastynge dampnacion. What other thinge doth the most part of men now a daies? As I may speake nothing of the filthy Sodomites, which alas for pitie, are now in common in the worlde vniuersally, howe many now a dayes contracte matrimony aright and after the word of God? Who regardeth not more the pleasure of the flesh, than the hauing of frute? Who hath not a respect rather to the worldly ritches, than to the honest qualities and godly vertues of her, wheme hee entendeth to marry? Who regardeth not more the vanitie of beauty, than the honestie of conditions, in asmuche that a common prouerbe is risen therof among vs: I wyl (say they) haue a wife some what sneuwtzeyze, thoughe she bee somwhat whorysshe. Againe, what payne is it to mee, thoughe other good fellowes fare wel, so that I fare neuer the worse? Item, God saue the Quen, that baketh such bread, that all the whole house fareth the better for it. Againe blessed and happy is that hole: that findeth the house wod and cole. O extreme abhomination. O shameles beastes. O vnnatural monstures. O wicked clods of the earth. It shameth mee to thinke, that they are not ashamed to speake. It shameth mee to speake, that they are not ashamed to doo. It shameth mee to doo, that they are not ashamed to reioyce of. O very vileins and beastlike slaues. Who is able to expresse eyther by tonge or penne theyr wycked abhompnacion? Fleshly pleasure before hauing of frute? Ryches of the worlde, before riches of the mynde? Beauty of face, before honest qualities and godlye vertues? Ah whorysh lone, Ah aduiterous wedlocke, Ah vaine vanitie. A faire woman without discrete manners (sayth Salom) onis lyke a ryng of golde in a swines snowte. Againe, fauour is deceatfull and transitory, and beautye is a vayne thinge, but a woman that feareth God, is to bee commended. The lyppes of an harlot, sayth Salomon, are a dropping hony combe, and her throte is softer than oyle. But the conclusion and ende of her, is as bitter as wormewood, and as sharpe as a two edged sworde. Her feete go downe vnto death, and her steppes pearse thorow to hell. And what other thing, I praye you, is a ryche woman without godly qualyties, than an asse laden with a greate multitude of treasure? Behold vnto what poynte these whorish lose bondes, housebandes, I woulde haue sayde, are fallen. This maketh them to set so lytle by theyr wyues, and to haue harlots in so greate price. For whan they once haue that they desired of theyr wiues, whan beauty beginneth once to decay, whan the ryches are consumed, whiche were the alone occasion of hauynge theyr wyues, then cast they theire wiues vp for hawkes meat, as they saye, than are they wery of theyr olde pasture, and wyl loke for new bayte.

To much of one thing, saye they, is nought. Shifte of meate is good. Iucundum nihil est, nisi quod reficit uarietas. Therfore must theire sely poze wiues contrarye to the lawe of nature, God, and man, bee kepte for holye dayes, tied vp at harde meate, only beare the name of a wyfe, and filthy whores shalbe mayntayned with all kynde of felycitie, wealth and pleasure. O the preposterous manners of this worlde. O the sinistral iudgementes of these wedlocke breakers. O the great damnacion that hangeth ouer these worlehunters heades. I leaue of to speake of those abhominable vileins, whiche pronoke theyr wyues wickedly to make theyr bodyes common to other for lucres sake. Neither wil I rehearse here, how there bee some husbandes, which let out theyr wyues to other, euen as men vse to let out theyr hackney horses for monye, and bee at a composicion with them, what they shall haue for theyr wyues quarterly, and they againe shall for theyr mony at all times haue them not only at commaundement but also at a becke or wyncke, yea the husbandes them selues wyl not disdaine to bringe them. caste downe his head, nodded and fared as though hee had bene a sleepe. O shameful abusion. Can anye greater dishonour chaunce vnto the holy state of honorable wedlocke? Do not these thinges requyre a redresse? Were it not conuenient that the publique magistrates and common head officers with the other nobles of the christen Realmes vniuersally should entreat of these thinges in theyr Parliamentes, Assemblies, Synodes, Councels. &c. that whoredome might once be banished and christen matrymony truly obserued, faithfully kept, and reuerently had in honour? May not but that ye be warned.

Furthermore as they set nought by theyr wyues, so do they neglect the right institution and bringing vp of theyr chyldren, suffering them to do what they wyll. Go they to God or to the dyuell, as they saye, they passe not. Theyr example leadeth the Chyldren rather to perdycion than vnto saluacion. For they heare nothing of them but lasciuious wordes, wanton communicacion and bawdy tales, or els chiding, scolding, brawling, fighting, and all kinde of wicked rudenes: What can children learne here? What goodnes is to bee sucked out of the breastes of suche vngodly parentes. Wo worth them, if they do not amend and correct theyr sinfull manners. For here of commeth it to passe, that ther are now a daies so great swarms of wicked liuers, as theeues, whoremongers, bloudsoupers, men sleers, abusers of the most blissed name of god, falsewitnesbeares, extorcioners couetous parsons, dronckardes, glottons, fayned frendes, traytours, rebels. &c. How can they proue otherwise, seynge they are brought vp without any feare of God, and withoute anye knowledge of Gods most blissed lawe? It is a common sayeng, sayth Salomon, that a childe, whan hee is olde, shall not go away from suche thinges, as he learned in his youth. Of the negligent bringing vp of Children. whence soo greate swarmes of wycked people arise nowe a dayes. Prouer.xxi.

Here may wee see as in a clere lampe of Phebus, how greatly the glorious beauty of honorable wedlocke is defaced. Ah shall not that daye once come againe, that holy matrimony shalbe restored to her old fauour? Ah shal not wee once see that daye, that that glisterynge strompet adultery shalbe ashamed to shewe her face? Ah shal it not once come to passe, that these whorehunters shal bee ashamed to appeare in the sighte of honest maryed folke? Graunt, O lord, graunte I moste humbly beseche thee, that it maye come to passe, yea and that shortelye.

But some men peraduenture wyll maruel, how it is come to passe, that matrimony now a dayes is so lytle esteemed, and whoredome so commonly vsed, yea and that euen of them: which haue wyues of theyr owne, or els may haue. Verely how it chaunseth vniuersally, I know not, excepte it bee, that wee bee more prone, redy and bente vnto vice than vnto vertue, but of this am I certenlye assured, that it is easye to declare some causes of this greate absurdite. The causes of the dyshonour of wedlocke.
First as touching men of nobilitie, wee see dayly by experyence that they for the moste parte marrye theyr children at theyr pleasure whan they are verye yonge, euen to suche as wyll geue them most mony for them, as men vse to sel theyr horses, oxen, sheepe or any other cattel. Who that wyl geue most mony, shalbe soneste sped. For all thinges are obedient to mony. They are not certen, whyther the parson wyll proue godly, vertuous, well disposed, wyse, prudent, circumspecte, honest. &c. to whome they marrye theyr yonge childe, and yet are they streyghtwayes redy to yoke them togither, so that mony come. They had rather theyr children should liue euer after in perpetual misery, than they would lose the sale of them, although they bee scase sale worthy, they bee so yong. This kinde of marryeng hath euer bene detested euen of the very Ethnikes, and of so many as haue bene illumined with any sparke of prudent reason. And not without a cause. For whan they come once vnto the perfection of Men of nobilitie. Eccle.x.

age,

age, and see other whome they coulde finde in theyr harte to fansie and love better, than many of them beginne to hate one another, bee wery one of another, spite one another, and curse theyr parentes euen vnto the pitte of hel for the coupling of them together. Than seeke they all meanes possible also to bee deuorced one from another. But if it bee so, that they remayne styll together, what frowning, ouerwharting, scolding, and chiding, is there betwene them so that the whole house is filled full of those tragedies euē vnto the toppe? One casteth another in the teeth with theyr bloud e auncient stocke. Eche of them thinke theyr selfe best at ease, whan they bee furdest one from another. There is nothing more displeasaunt than one to beholde another. One wisheth anothers death. One drayweth this waye, another that waye. Hee fauoureth this parson, shee that. Hee spendeth his goodes in this place, shee in the contrary. Eche of them is glad to brybe away from another. Thus goeth all to hauocke. Nothinge remayneth in safe estate. What a wycked and hellyke life is this? The baser sorte of people seeth this vnquiet life, that is vsed among the Gentilmen and theyr wyues, whiche oughte to geue an example of all honest and gentle softnes to other, than go they home, and if anye thinge (bee it neuer so lytle) displeaseth them, streight are they together by the eares with their wiues, so that shortly after the whole towne is on a rore. If any man beinge of a gentle nature and softe harte monisheth his neighbour of his vnquietnes and rough entreating of his wife, hee is also redy to fall out with him, and sayth, why may not I punyshe my wife so well as such and such a Gentleman doth? Whom should wee follow but out heades and superiours? If it were not conueniente for vs so to do, I am sure they would not do it. O euell example that soweth discorde betwene man and wife. Who so euer offendeth one of these litle ones, whiche beleue in mee (saith Christ) it were better for hym that a mylstone were hanged about his necke, and that hee were drowned in the deapth of the sea. Wo be to the worlde because of offences. How be it, it cānot be auoided, but that offences must come. Neuertheless wo bee to that man, by whom the offence commeth. What is the oryginall cause of all these tragicall and bloudy dissencions, but only the couetous affection of those parentes, whyche for lucres sake so wickedly bestow their children in theyr youth and yoke them with such as they can not fauoure in theyr age? Were it not better and more godly to leaue them vnmarryed, vntil they were of a lawfull age, and than so to bestow them, that all parties should bee contented with all, and euer after liue quietly together in the Christen state of holy matrimony vnto the vertuous example of the baser sorte? At the least by these meanes the parents shold bee without blame. But it is not so lucreful, I graunt, not to the couetous parentes, yet much more profitable for the childzen in time to come. And wo bee to that father whiche had rather satisfie his owne couetous affection, than to procure a quiet maner of liuinge for his chylde. Themistocles although an Emperour and a man of great nobilitie, whan men marueled why hee married his doughter rather to a good honest playne man of the contrie, than to a great riche man and one of an auncient stocke, aunswered: I had rather haue a man without mony, than mony without a man, meanynge that hee whiche is a man, shall soone get mony inough for his necessary vses, but as for hym, that wanteth suche qualities as belongeth vnto a man though hee hath neuer so many possessions in store and commeth of neuer so hyghe bloud, yet is hee but a dastard, and shall soone lose, that hath ben longe in gettinge. Thus see wee that the couetous affeccion of certen Gentilmen (which for lucres sake mary theyr children before they come vnto anye perfecte knowledge eyther of them selues, or of other) is one occasion, why holy wedlocke is so litle esteemed nowe a dayes, and so large a wyndow opened vnto whoredome and adultery.

Math. xviii. Luke. xvii.

Themistocles.

What shall wee now saye vnto them, whiche at a iust and conuenient age come

come togither, yea and that not only by the procurement of their parentes, but also by their owne consent, and yet liue wickedly to the greate dyshonour of honorable wedlocke? Certes here must nedes bee a greate fault, if not on both, yet on one party. Dissencion chaunceth many times betwene suche, because one cannot bee content to forbeare another, to geue gentle aunswers, louingly to cherith one another, and to bee a like mynded in all honestie and godly thinges, but streightwayes fall out for euery light trifle contrary to the bond of matrymony. This engendreth much hatred and displeasure betwen married folkes in somuch that if it be not shortly remedied by mutuall reconsiliation, it plucketh their mindes so farre one frō another, that scarcely there cometh euer after any harty frendship and true loue between them. This is a great dishonor to holy wedlock.

Howe dissencion chaūceth many tymes betwene married folkes.

Some also haue suche froward and scolding wiues, that they can at no time be in quiet with them, they are so lady like and high in the instep, chiefly if thei brought any substaunce with them, than they think, that their husbādes ought of very duty to giue them place, to forbear them, and to suffer them to haue the preheminēce, and to doo what they list. The beasts wil not be in subiection to their husbandes, but rather take vpon them to rule, as though not only theire goods: but also them selues were not their husbands and at his cōmaundemēt, yea and that by the appointment of God. This oftē times causeth the husband to geue his minde to straunge women, and to breke the bandes of wedlock. The woman is not behinde, but shapeth him a hood of the same cloth, and so is holy matrimony rent and torne.

Frowardes scolding wyues.

Gene.iii.
i.Cor.xi.
Ephe.v.
Collos.iiii.
i.Pet.iii.

Some also there be againe, whiche haue gentle wiues, louing, faithful, honest, obedient and redy to doo, what so euer their husbandes commaūd them, so ithe reasonable, godly & honest, and yet wil they not be pleased nor cōtented, but like stubbecurres vngently intreat them, beat them, buffet them and put them out of the doores, handling them rather like dishclouts, thā like honest wiues, vnto the great slaunder and ignominy of wedlock.

Curryshe husbandes.

All these doo muche derogate, obscure and deface the dignitie and excellencie of the christen matrimony, yea and that so much the more, because they profesle the same order of liuing, and yet liue nothing agreable to to the same.

Another sorte of people ther are, whiche might mary if they wolde, and yet doo they rather choose to liue in abhominable whoredom, than they wolde couple themselues with an honest woman in lawful mariage. Many obiect and lay for their excuse, pouertie, and say, that if they should mary: they were vterly beggard for all euer. To whome I answere, If they be not able to help for to mainteine an honest wife, whiche will also labour, worck and take paines to get her owne liuing: how are they then able to mainteine their whores? and to away with the costs and charges that they spend in wanton and riotous company? as I may speke nothing of their waste mony, whiche they consume on their vaine iagged & garded apparaile? Who euer wāted that liued according to Gods word? O thou wicked and shameles whorehunter, if thou thorow the sufferaūce of God, hast ynough to finde thee & to satisfy thy beastlike affects & carnall pleasures: why dosse thou dispaire of the blessing of God, if thou shouldest leaue thine abhominable liuing, and take to thee a true and lawfull wife? God leaueth no man succorles that putteth his trust in him, and diligently laboreth for his liuing according to his vocation and calling. Did not Christe turn the water into sweet wine at a certen mariage to the wych so many as liue in holy matrimony according to his word, shall neuer want? The water of the riuer shall sooner be turned into wine, and the stones of the feeld into bread: than the faithful shalbe left succorles. Did not God feed the people of Israell with meat from heauen? Did he not giue them drinck out of the hard rock? Did he not make a Crowe to bring meat vnto the Prophet Helyas twise on a that holy wedlocke is so litle esteemed, and that whoꝛedome and aduitry is so greatly vsed at this daye.

Hytherto haue I declared howe greatly the honour and renowne of holy wedlocke is decayed, and by what meanes it is come to passe. What remayneth now but that some remedy be found? And would God that al men would employe

employ their ingenour in this behalf. Wold God that whordom and adultry were so detested amog vs, that it might not ones be named: as ỹ Apostle saith. Wolde God that all whorehunters and adulterers were so abhorred among christen men, that no man wolde vouchesafe to eat with them nor to keep the compeny, no nor yet to bid them Godspeed. Certes it is a thing muche to be wondered at, that whordom should growe vp into suche height, among them that professe the frutes of the spirit. But what marvell is it, seeing that whordom now a dayes is become, but a lusty contagious pastime of youth, and reputed almoste for no sinne at all. We read, that if a man among the Egiptias had bene taken in adultry, he should openly in the presence of all the people have be scourged naked with whippes vnto the number of a thousand stripes. The woman that was taken with him, had her nose cutof, wherby she was knowē euer after to be an whore, and therfore abhorred of all men. Amog the Arabians they that were taken in adultry: had their heads striken from their bodyes. Among the Athenias adulterers were punished by death without mercy. In like maner is it at this day among the Tartarians, and yet are they Infidels. If a woman among the Germaines in times past, had bene conuicte of of adultry, she had all the hear of her head cut of, beeing striped starke naked, her husband put her out of his doores before his neighbours, and in the sight of all the people he scourged her with whippes about the citty or towne, and euer after she was so dispised, that no man wolde vouchesafe to mary with her. Among the Turcks euen at this day, they that be taken in adultrye bothe man and woman are stoned straightwayes to death without any mercy. Was it not likewise emong the Israelites by the commaundement of God?

Thus se we how whordom and adultry in times past have bene punished, and yet is in certen natiōs, Wolde God it were not laughed at euen amōg them, that moste of all ought to maintain the puritie and clēnes of matrimony. But the redresse of all these moste greuous enormities: pertain vnto ỹ ciuil magistrates whose office and duty it is to prouide that all whoredom & adultry be banished out of the boundes of Christendom, that holy wedlock may once again be had in price, and restored vnto her olde beauty and prestine glory. Howe this thing may moste conueniently be broughte to passe, the hygher powers for their wisedome and discrecion, wherwith they be endewed frome aboue, shall easely consider. I beseche God prosper their moste godly trauayles in these and suche lyke enterprises, that vertue maye encrease and vice decaye. In the meane season it shalbe very expedient that all men seke to lead an honest, pure cleane and godly lyfe, and not suffer them selues by no meanes to be spotted with the fylthy synne of abhominable whoredome. Let theym that be married seke none other straunge company, but let the husbande be contented with his owne wyfe, and the wyfe with her owne husbande. Let them that be vnmarried, and can not lyue without the company of a woman, gette them wyues of their owne, and so lyue godly together. For it is better to marry, than to burne. And to auoyde fornication, sayth the Apostle, let euery man haue a wyfe of his owne, and euery woman an husbande of her owne. As for suche as entende not to entangle them selues with mariage, but determyn to lead a sole & continent lyfe, let thē seke all meanes possible to mayntayne the same, as by reading the holy Scriptures, by godly meditations, by continuall prayers, and suche other vertuous exercises, lest whyle they abstayne from the acte of matrimony. Sathan our olde aduersary draweth thē vnto all kynde of wickednes, and suche vicious vncleannes, as maye not here with honesty be named. Let all preachers also in their sermons exhorte the hearers vnto purite of lyfe. Let all fathers and mothers, maisters & maistresses with all other gouernours, se that none vncleannes be vsed among them that are vnder them.

To conclude, let vs all seeke and devyse all meanes possible, that holy wedlocke may once againe be had in such honour, that all whoredom, fornication, adultry, incest and all other vnclennes may vtterly be abhorred, detested and hated worse than any venemous serpent. And to encourage all manner of persons in this behalfe, I haue set forth this treatise entewynge of Christen matrimony, which teacheth so largely all thinges that pertayne vnto this kynde of life, that whosoeuer readeth it and practiseth the same, I doubte not, but he shal be occasioned to forsake all vnclennes, and to embrace holy matrimony, so shal he be moued to geue God thankes for the settinge forth of this lytle worke in our maternall tong. ¶ Of the excellency and dignitie of holy Matrimonye.

FOrasmuche as at this present, I entend by the grace of God to entreate of the blessed state of holy and honorable Matrimony: I haue thought it not vnfitting somwhat to speake of the maiestie and excellencie, of the dignitie and worthines of the same, that by thys meanes some parte of the glory therof maye be recouered, whiche these many yeares hath ben greatly obscured and hyndred, yea, & almost vtterly defaced thorow ỹ wicked doctrine of certayn moste wicked and most filthy hypocrites, whiche sweating to establiche their single and wyueles lyfe, and to lifte vp that with prayses incõparable euen vnto the starres, yea aboue the starres, haue most vilely and vnhonestly both iudged, taughte & written of the holy state of honorable Matrimonye, as of a kynde of lyfe base, vnperfecte, fleshly, troublesome, paynefull, vnquiet, carefull, vnrestfull, stuffed full of all sorowe, calamitie, misery, wretchednes, disorde, strife, contencion, debate, and what not: whan notwithstandinge who knoweth not, of what vnperfect perfectiõ their state of single lyfe is, replenished with all kynde of vnclennes, fornication, whoredome, adultrye, incest, and suche kynde of filthy liuing beside, as the naming therof woulde not a litle not only corrupt the ayre, but also offend the eares and myndes of the godly readers, as the frutes of their wyueles state dayly shew and declare vnto the great condemnacion of their wyueles lyfe, and vnto the singular commendacion and praise of holy and honorable wedlacke: While they as vnnatural monstures, forsaking the order and appointment bothe of God and nature, thrawe them selues hedlõg into suche a kynde of lyfe, as is no where cõmaunded in the worde of God, whiche alone oughte to be the rule of all the faythfull Christians, concerning thinges eyther to be done, or to be lefte vndone, neyther are they able of them selues, without the greate and singulare benefite of God (whiche is so rare a gifte, that it chaunceth to fewe) to obserue and kepe that, whiche they bothe folishely and presumptuously, without any cõmaundment of God haue of their owne brayne and vnfatled iudgement professed and promised, as the Wyseman sayth: I knowe, that I can not lyue chaste, except God geueth me the gifte. Likewise sayth our Sauioure Christ: All can not away with this sayeng, (he meaneth to lyue vnmarried) but they to whome it is geuen: yea to lyue in the flesshe contrarywise the nature and disposition of the flesshe is as a certayn man sayeth, rather to be counted the lyfe of an Aungell, than the lyfe of a man.

God alone is the authour of Matrimony.

But in settinge foorth the excellency and dignitie of holy & honorable Matrimony, whens shall I rather take my beginninge, then of the Institutor and ordayner therof? Not Romulus of Rome, not Solon of Athens, not Minos of Creta, not Lycurgus of Lacedemonye did institute and ordayne the blessed state of Matrimonie, nor any other creatur, eyther in heauen or in earth, but God hym self, that most hygh maiestie, that moste excellent kinge of kynges, and that moste noble Lorde of Lordes: which createth, ordayneth and appointeth nothinge, whiche is not moste highly good, moste highly necessary, profitable, pleasaut, comfortable, &c. If lawes, statutes and ordinaunces, if orders of lyfe, & profession of artes & sciences are so muche the more commendable & praysworthy before men, because of the Authors, deuisers and inuentors of them: howe muche more ought that lawe, that statute, ordinaunce, that order and that profession to be in moste hyghe price and greate reuerence, whiche was instituted and ordayned of the best and greatest God?

A comparison betwene God and Frances.

The order of the Fraunciscanes, otherwise called the Grayfryers, was more regarded and esteemed amonge vs in the tyme of blindenes and errour, than any other secte of the monstruous Monkes: because it was fayne of al inuented and deuised of a certayne man, called Franciscus Assisius an Italian: notwithstanding by reporte of writers, a very simple ma, and a playn Idiote: how muche more ought that order to be regarded and magnified which was made, established and setforth by hym, whiche alone is wyse, yea and the very fountayne of wisedome: without the knowlege of whom all mans wysedom is mere folishnes & plain dotage? Frances was a ma and of hym self a very lompe of synne: but the Author of Matrimony is God, & the self moste high goodnes. Frances was a subiect and an homely creature: but the Institutor of Matrimony is the kyng of glory, and the creator and maker of all thinges contayned eyther in heauen or in earth. Loke howe muche God excelleth Fraunces: euen so much doth the holy & blessed order of Matrimony passe, excede & ouercome the order of Fraunces, although counted of the Papistes neuer so Seraphicall.

Frances order is mans imagination: but the order of Matrimony is Gods institution. In fine, Frances order is a state of hypocrisie and superstition, and therfore before God, synne and abhominacion: but the order of Matrimonye is a state of holines and perfection, and therefore before God, worthye of prayse and commendation.

1. Pet. ii.

The Matrimoniall lyfe excelleth all orders of lyfe inuented by man.

And as the order of Frances is vile and of no reputation, if it be compared with the maiestie and excellencye, with the dignitie and worthines of holy and honorable wedlocke: so likewyse all other orders of lyfe, be they counted neuer so Angellical and Seraphicall, neuer so deuoute and religious, in comparison of Matrimony are moste vile, mooste base, mooste vayne: forasmuche as God is the author of the one: and the idle braynes of men haue inuented the other: whan notwithstanding it is written: ye shall not put oughte to the woorde, whiche I speake: neyther shall ye pluck any thing from it: Agayne, that which I commaunde thee, do thou onely: put nothing vnto it, neyther plucke any thing frō it. Item: ye shall not do euery one of you, that whiche ye youre selues thincke righte and good: but that, which I cōmaund you se that ye do. This therfore maketh greatly vnto the auaūcemēt, prayse and cōmendacion of holy & honorable Matrimonye, that, not man, but God, not a creature: but the Creator of all thinges, is the alone institutour and authour therof. Who seeth not nowe, of what great dignitie and excellency Christen matrimonye is:

Deut. xiii.

Deut. xii.

Matrimonye was instituted of God in Paradyse before all synne.

But how greatly doeth this also glorifye and exalte, honoure and ennoble this honorable & noble state of the Matrimoniall lyfe, that Matrimony was not instituted first of all in this wicked and wretched worlde, which is nothing els then a stinckinge sincke and a vile pudle of sinne, as other kindnes of lyfe were: but in Paradise, that garden of moste swete, ioyfull and comfortable pleasures: And here learne we two thinges: First, that God willing to shew, what a swete, pleasaunt, blessed, happye, fortunate, quiet and ioyfull state of lyfe, holy Matrimony is, instituted the same in the moste delectable garden of Paradise, and not in thys worlde, which is a valley of teares and a dungehyll of sorowes: Secondly, that the Matrimonial lyfe excelleth all other degrees and estates in antiquitie: and therfore also in dignitie. For thus rede we, that after the moste hyghe God hadde created man lyke vnto hys owne similitude and image, and hadde placed hym in that ioyfull and pleasaunt garden of Paradise: that mooste blessed and glorious Trinitie, one alone true, immortall and euerlastinge God, the Father, the Sonne, and the holy Ghoste sayde: It is not good for man to be alone.

Let

Let vs make hym an helper lyke vnto hym selfe. God, which knoweth best what is moste expedient for man, pronounceth here, þ it is not good for man to be alone: but that he hath nede of an helper. Therfore as a moste wyse and moste prudent Lord, he falleth in hande with making another creature, whiche maye be a comforte and helpe to man: without whom the life that man leadeth maye seme to bee no liuely life. But let vs beholde the forming of this creature. God (saith the holy scripture) caused a slumber to fal vpon Adam, and hee slept. And he toke one of his ribbes, and closed vp the flesshe in stead therof. And the rib, which the Lorde God had taken from man, made hee a woman, & brought her vnto mã. Here haue we agayne two thinges worthy to be noted. The first is, that the blessed trinitie is the creatour and maker no les of the woman, then of the man: whereby it is geuen vs to vnderstande, that the woman is before God of no les price and dignitie, then man is, so that they, which so contemptuously and despitefully either write or speake of the Feminine kinde, doo greate dyshonour to God, and not a litle embace the dignitie and worthines of his creature, whom God calleth an helpe to man, and not a destruction, as Fryer Vincent wold haue her called, and. S. Peter calleth wemen the felow heires with men of the grace of life. The second is, that God brought the woman vnto man: by the whiche we are perfectly instructed and taught, that God is the authour of Matrimony: that God coupleth Man & Womã together: that God ioyneth together the two maried parsons, and maketh of them two, one flesshe: linckling them together with so vnloseable a knot, that whatsoeuer God in this behalfe hath ioyned together, that maye man by no meanes seperate nor put a sunder. Againe, that marriages made in the feare of God, and framed according to his word betwene the faithfull and beleuinge parsons, are not brought to passe by fortune or by chaunce, but by the singular prouidence, determinacion, counce, wysedom: and fore appoyntmente of God: according to this our common prouerbe. Matrimony is destenye. For the holy scripture saieth: that God brought the woman vnto man. And Sara the doughter of Raguel: which had maried seuen husbands: and all were slayne of the deuyl called Asmodeus: in her prayer vnto God (among other thinges) hath these wordes. Paraduenture, either haue I ben vnworthy of them (the meaneth her husbãds) or els were they vnmete for mee: For thou happely hast kepte mee to another husband. The Angel Raphael sayde to yong Tobias: here is a nie kinsman of thine, one Raguel by name, whiche hath a daughter called Sara, and hathe neyther Sonne nor doughter but her. Al his goods belongeth vnto thee, and thou mayste marye her, and therfore deale her of her Father, and bee shal geue her thee to wife. The forsayd Angel sayd also to Raguel the father of Sara: feare not to geue Tobias thy doughter: for vnto this man that feareth God belongeth thy doughter to wyfe, therefore myght none other haue her: Are not

Gene.i. When God had thus formed and made woman of the mans rib, and brought her vnto man beinge now newly waken oute of hys slumber: God sayde to them bothe, growe and encrease, and replenyshe the earth. Here is another good lesson worthy to bee noted, and maketh greatly vnto the auauncement, dignitie, prayse and commendacion of holye Matrimony: After that God had created man and woman in his owne Image, hee commaunded neyther Angel nor Archangel to marry and couple them together: but hee hym selfe, as I may so speake, occupied the place of a Minyster, & maryed Adam and Heua together. O who is able to expresse, how highly this maketh vnto the prayse of Matrimony, that the glorious Maiestie of the Godhead, God the father, the Sonne and the holy Ghost, did not onely voucheſafe, to bee present at the maryage of Adam and Heua, and to geue the Woman to the Man, but also to marry and ioyne them together in the holy state of honorable wedlocke: God not only to adorne, garnish, and ennoble Matrimony with his diuine presence, but also to be the Minister at the celebracion of Matrimony: O prayse passing all prayse. If it had pleased the diuine Maiesty only to haue ben present eyther at the singinge of the firste Masse of a new made Priest, or els at the profession of a Nonne: Oh good God, what wagons and waynes of Praises wold the Papistes haue thrust out into the worlde concerning masse and monckery: But God knoweth no such fansies, neither wyll hee haue anye thinge to doo with them, but to plage and punyth them. Let therefore all orders geue place to the blessed order of holy and honorable Matrimony.

Masse and Monckery are not of God.

Moreouer so sone as God had maried and coupled man and woman together: man being enflamed with the loue of his wife and burning with a feruent, singular and moste harty good wyll toward her, brast out into these wordes, and sayde: this is now bone
Gene.ii. of my bones, and flesshe of my flesshe. She shalbe called Woman: because she was taken out of man. For this cause shall a man leaue his father and his mother, and shalbe ioyned with his wife, and they shall become one flesshe. Adam had sene before all the moste goodly and beautiful creatures that God had made, and gaue to euery one of them their proper name, euen as they be now called: but he delighted in none so greatly, as in Woman. So sone as her beheld her, he was rauished streight wayes with the loue of her, delighted in her as in hym selfe, called her his owne bone and hys owne flesshe, and was so greatly enflamed with moste hartye and vnfayned loue toward her, that all other creatures in comparyson of her, although neuer so goodly, pleasaunte and beautifull, seemed in hys eyes to bee byle and of no reputacyon. Yea father and Mother (sayth he) to whom notwithstanding next vnto God the greatest honor and reuerence is to be geuen, shall rather bee forsakē, then the wyfe shalbe neglected: lette succourles, than the wyfe shalbe vnprouided: refused, then the wyfe shalbe hated: forasmuche as man and wyfe are one flesh. These woordes spake Adam without doubt, concerning his wyfe thorowe the inspiration of the holy Ghoste, and as he was taught of God, to declare, what a goodly and amiable creature, the wyfe ought to be in the syghte of her husbande, and how feruent, constante and vnchaūgeable the loue of the man ought to be towarde the woman: verely so feruent, so constant and so vnchaungeable. that it ought to be immortall, if any immortalitie might chaunce to suche mortall thinges. Likewise sayeth our Sauiour Christ, entreating of this matter: haue ye not read, how that he, whiche made man at the beginning, made them man and woman, and sayde. For thys cause shall a man leaue father and mother, and shal cleaue to his wyfe, and they twayne shalbe one flesh? Wherefore now they be not twayne, but one flesh. Let not man therfore put a sunder that which God hath coupled together. Math.xix. Gene.ii.

Thus haue we hearde of what great excellencye and dignitie Matrimony is, seing that neyther Aungel nor man is the institutor, author & ordayner of it, nor any other creatour, although neuer so excellent & precious: but God alone, that King of kings, and Lorde of Lordes.

And as this doeth greatly adourne, beautifye and setfoorthe the excellency and dignitie of Matrimonye: I meane, that God is the Institutor of it: so likewise doeth this not a litle auaunce and ennoble the maiestie of Matrimonye, that the holy spirites and blessed Aungels of heauen haue many times ben sent frome God to the faithfull aboute matters of marriage: whiche thinge also declareth euidently, how pure and cleane a state of lyfe Matrimonye is before God and his holy Aungelles: so that it is not without a cause sayde of the Apostle: Wedlocke is honorable among all persones, and the bedde vndefiled. But whoremongers and aulterers God shall iudge. Howe frendly and louingly did ỹ Aungels talke with Abraham and Sara, concerning the hauing of a sonne, whan they sate together at the table? Howe present was the Aungel of God to comforte Ismaell Abrahams sonne & his mother Agar in their necessitie and great distresse? Howe dyd the Aungel of God make the iourneye of Abrahās seruaunt prosperous, when hys maister sent hym to his natiue countreye for to take a wyfe vnto hys sonne Isaac? When Jacob at the commaūdement of his father and mother went to Mesopotamia for a wife, howe did the Aungels of the Lorde come vnto hym, accompanye hym, conforte hym, kepe hym, defend hym, and preserue hym from all euill? Was not Moyses also preserued from drowning, whan he was put into the water, being but.iii. monethes olde, by the ministerie Heb.xiii. Gene.xxviii Gene.xxi Gene.xxiiii. Gene.xxix Ge.xxvii. Exod.ii.

the holy Aungels of God haue ben in tymes past about maryage matters, redy at all tymes to defend, bielle and preserne thesame?
And it is not to be doubted, but that in all ages the Aungels of the Lorde shew thesame diligence, and beare thesame good wyll towarde the godly maried persons, that they did in tymes paste towarde the auncient Patriarches, and suche as feared God. For Heb.i. as the holy Apostle sayeth, the Aungels are all ministringe spiri-tes, whiche are sent of God to minister for their sakes, that shall Psal.xxxiiii. bee heyres of saluation. The Aungel of the Lorde, sayeth Dauid, pitcheth his tent rounde about them that feare him, and deluereth them. Matrimony therfore must nedes be of great excellēcye and dignitie, seing that the glorious Aungels of God do not disdayne to trauayle about the matters therof, but gladly acquaint them selues with maried folke, and seke to pleasure theym in all thinges. If the Papistes had but halfe so muche for the commendacion of their popishe chastitie & wyueles lyfe: oh how earnestly woulde they triumphe, seing they do nowe so greatly triūphe, yea and that before they haue gotten the victorie, and also causeles?

The fathers of the olde Testa-ment maryed. Moreouer, what shall I speake of the reuerend Patriarches, of the sage Judges, of the noble Kynges, of the holy Priestes, of the godly enspired Prophetes, of the faithfull Citizens, of the ho nest yōg men, of the bertuous maides, & of al other godly persons, which lyued in the olde testament? Were they not al maried? Dyd not they all take vpon them the sweet & pleasaunt yoke of moste swete & moste pleasaūt Matrimony? yea it was coūted among thē
a thing of great ignominy and rebuke, to lyue vnmaried, & to dye without issue: so farre is it of, that they glorified in their single & wyueles lyfe, or reioyced, that thei died without frute, as our Papistes do at this present. If we beholde also the bokes of the holy scripture, how abundātly do they contayn matters of Matrimonye? The holy Ghoste in all his writinges maketh mēcion of nothing so gladly as of mariage, and of things appertayning vnto thesame, whiche thinge maketh not a litle vnto the auauncemēt of holy and honorable Matrimonye.

Thus muche haue we borowed out of the olde Testament, to Commendatiō of Matrimony out of the new Testament. setforth the maiestie & excellency, the dignitie & worthines of Matrimonye. Now will we also heare somwhat, concerning thesame matter out of the new Testament, that by this means we maye learne,

learne, one and the same prayse of Matrimony to bee bothe in the olde and new Testament, and therfore the glory therof endureth from generacion vnto generacion. But whence shall I rather take my beginnynge, than of oure moste louynge Lorde and moste swete Sauiour Iesus Christe, whyche, when the tyme came to fore appoynted of his heauenly Father from euerlastynge, that hee should take vpon hym oure nature for our sake, and so become man, choled not vnto hys Mother an holye Anchresse, a Religious Nonne, or a deuote wowesse (so would the Papistes haue wrytten of the prayse of single life volumes larger than the Golden Legend, and bokes longer then the Iliades of Homere) but rather suche one, whyche although a Mayde, yet a mayde espoused and marryed. As oure Sautour Christe was the authour of Matrimony, so would hee bee borne in the holye state of blessed Matrimony, to declare, that it is an order of life moste pleasaunt and moste acceptable to GOD. And albeit that oure Sauioure Christe was not marryed (for hee was God, and tobe manhode vpon hym only to bee oure redemer, and to doo that for vs in his flesche, whyche wee were not able to accomplyshe in oure flesche, I meane, to make a perfecte reconciliacion betwene God and vs, as Saint Paule saith: What the lawe coulde not doo, in asmuche as it was weake because of the flesche: that performed God, and sente hys Sonne in the symylytude of sinfull flesche, and by synne damned sinne in the flesche: That the ryghteousnes of the law myghte be fulfilled in vs, whych walke not after the flesche, but after the spirite. Agayne, when the tyme was full come, God sente hys Sonne made of a woman, and made bonde vnto the lawe, to redeme them, whyche were bonde to the lawe: that we thorow election myghte receaue the enherytaunce that belongeth vnto the naturall Sonnes.) yet as hee dyd chose to bee borne in Matrimonye: So lykewise dyd hee garnyshe Matrimony with the firste fruites of his myracles, beynge hym selfe presente at the mariage with hys Mother and with hys Dyscyples. This maketh greatlye vnto the commendacyon and prayse of blessed Matrimony. If hee had bene present at the professyon of a Nonne or at a Prestes firste masse singynge, or at a Churche halowynge, or at the mynystracyon of any other trifelynge tradycion inuented by the Deuyll and the Pope: The enemyes of Gods trueth would not a lytle haue bragged of the matter. But Christ to set forth the dignitie of holy Matrimony, instituted Matrimony, was borne in Matrimony, was present at the celebracyon of Matrimony, garnyshed matrimony with the fyrst fruites of his myracles, by chaūginge water into wyne: by this hys wonderful signe declarynge, bothe in what greate estimacion hee had Matrimony, and also, that such as lyued in that godly state of life vertuously and accordyng to the word of God, should want no good thing. And what shal I speake of those men, whome he dyd chose to be his disciples or Apostels, and Preachers of this moste healthfull and glorious gospel. What were they, Monkes, Freers, Chanons, Ankers, Heremites, and such other wyueles hipocrites and monstruous Votoryes? Nothyng les. They were all maryed men, as both Ecclesiasticall historyes and the wrytinges of the auncient fathers do most manifestly declare. Maketh not this also greatly vnto the commendacion of holy Matrimony? Who therefore hathe so whorysshe a forehead, and is fallen into such impudencie and vnshamefastnes, and is so estraunged from the course of reason, that dare eyther seyng Christe the Lord hym selfe dyd chose vnto hym suche to bee hys Mynysters, as were no wyueles Votoryes or single Syr Johns, but honest godly maryed men, hauynge bothe wyues and chyldren? Neyther is this to be passed ouer with silence, that all the holy Byshoppes and Preystes or Mynysters of the prymatiue and auncient Churche of Christe were for the moste parte maryed men, lyued in the holy state of matrimony, and had both wiues and Children, as the historyes shewe. They thought it godlynes and not whordom to liue in holy matrimony and to obey this commaundemente of GOD: Encreasle and multiply, and replenyshe the earthe. Neyther was the Matrimony of the spirytual Mynysters euer forbydden, tyll the Deuyl and the Pope of late yeares brought it to passe, accordynge to this Prophecie of S. Paule: The spirite speaketh euydentlye, that in the latter tyme some shall departe from the faythe, and shall gene hede vnto spiryres of erroure and deuylyshe doctrines of them, whyche speake false thorowe Hipocrysye, and haue theyr consciences marked wyth an hote Iron. Forbyddynge to Marry, and commaundynge to abstayne from meates, whiche GOD hath created to bee receaued with geuyng thankes, of them whyche belene and knowe the trueth. For all the creatures of God are good, and nothinge to be refused, if it bee receaued with thankes geuynge. For it is sanctyfyed by the worde of GOD and prayer. This therefore maketh greatly vnto the glory and prayse of blessed Matrimony, that the auncient Byshoppes and Ministers of Gods worde were maryed men, and no wyueles Votories.

The auncyent Byshops were married.

Matrimony is a misterye of Christ and his Churche.

Furthermore thys also greatly auaunceth the excellencye and dygnytye of honorable wedlocke, that Matrimonye is an holye mysterye or secreate of the Vnyon and couplynge together of Christe and of the Christen Congregacion, as Sainct Paule sayeth: No man euer yet hated hys owne flesshe, but nourisheth and cherysheth it, euen as the Lorde doeth the Congregacion. For wee are members of hys body, of hys flesshe, and of hys bones. For this cause shall a man leaue Father and mother, and shall be ioyned to hys Wyfe, and of two shall bee made one flesshe. This is a great secreate: But I speake of Christe and of the congregaryon. For as the woman is called bone of the bones of man and flesshe of the flesshe of man: so lykewyse whatsoeuer the Congregacyon is and hathe, it is and hathe altogether of Chryste and thorowe Chryste, as it is wrytten. Of hys fulnes haue all wee receaued, euen grace for grace. For the lawe was geuen by moyses, but grace and trueth came by Jesus Chriſte. John.i.

Hereto agreeth the sayinge of Saincte Paule: GOD spared not hys owne Sonne, but gaue hym for vs all. Howe can it bee, that wyth hym hee shoulde not geue vs all thynges also? As a mayde, although neuer so poore and myserable, beyng maryed to a Kynge, is nowe become owner of all hys substaunce, and equall wyth hym in all hys Royaltie and honoure, so that whatsoeuer is the Kynges, that same is hers also: Euen in lyke manner wee, although of and in oure selues moste poore, beggarlye, myserable, Wretched, Nedye. &c. beyng marryed thorow faythe to the Sonne of the kynge GOD, are made of the same power, Dygnytye, Honour, Glory, Welth, Ryches. &c. that Chryste is: So that if Chryste bee puyssaunt, worthy, Honorable, Glorious, Wealthy, Ryche. &c. as hee is moste puyssant moste worthy, moste honourable, moste glorious, moste welthy, moste Ryche. &c. euen in the verye same state are wee. For Chriſt hym selfe is oures, therefore whatsoeuer hee hathe, must nedes bee oures also. Roma.viii. Roma. viii. i. Cozin. i.

Agayne, as the man and the Wyfe are one: so likewise Chryst and the Congregacion are one, as Saincte Paule sayeth: We are members of hys bodye, of hys flesshe, and of hys bones. For this cause prayed oure Sauiour Chryst vnto hys Father on this manner I praye not for them alone (hee speaketh of hys Disciples) but for them also whyche shall beleue on mee thorowe their preachynge, that they all maye bee one, as thou Father arte in mee, and I in thee and that they also maye bee one in vs: that the worlde maye beleue, that thou haste sente mee. And the glorye, whiche thou gauest mee, I haue geuen them, that they maye bee one, as wee also are one: I in them, and thou in mee, that they maye bee made perfecte in one, and that the worlde may know that thou hast sente mee, and hast loued them, as thou hast loued mee. Ephe.v. John.xvii.

Moreouer as the man is the head of the woman: so likewyse is Chryste heade of the Congregacion. Ephe.v.

In fine, as the wyfe of her selfe cannot bryng forthe chyldren wythout the knowledge of her Husbandes bodye: so likewise can the Congregacion bryng forthe no goodnes, but by embalinge Chryste, whiche is done thorowe faith, as Chryste hym selfe sayeth: As the braunche cannot beare frute of it selfe, excepte it byde in the Vine: No more can ye, excepte ye abide in mee. I am the Vine: ye are the braunches. Hee that abydeth John.xv.

For an honest louynge and diligente wyfe is a Crowne, that is to saye, a greate honoure and glory, to her husbande.

If all these thinges, whiche I haue now called vnto remembraūce, be diligētly weyghed, pondered & cōsidered: thei shall marueiously setforth the excellency & dignitie of holy & honorable matrimonye: & sette her in suche state, as she shall not onely be able to compare with Dame fained chastitie: but also to ouercome her, and vtterly to dryue her into exile, and to bannyth her oute of the bondes of Christianitie, that the most famous and glorious Empresse Lady Matrimony maye reygne in the heartes of all godly personnes, and recouer her olde glorie and honoure, whereof she hathe ben certayne yeares moste vniustly depriued thorowe the deuyll and the Pope and their Antichristiane adherentes.

But forasmuche as all these thinges, which I haue hytherto alleged for the commendacion of Matrimonye, are gathered out of Gods worde: I haue thoughte it good to enterlase a lawe or twoo, whyche the Heathen in tymes paste made, concernyng wedlocke: that by thys meanes wee maye knowe, that Matrimonye

The lawe of Romains. The graue, auncient, prudente and wyse Romaynes, consyderinge that without the office and exercise of Matrimonye theyr common weale, whyche than was mooste florishinge and populous, muste nedes decaye, and come vnto ruine, and by thys meanes at the laste become deserte for lacke of Inhabytauntes & a very spoyle to the enmenye: made a strayghte lawe: that suche

as lyued among them vnmarried ou they were aged, should paye certayne greate summes of monye for the defence and mayntenaunce of the common weale: and moreouer, that they should bee iudged and counted also the very enemyes of the common weale, and vnworthy to lyue in any common weale. But contrariwise, they that enbraced holy Matrimony, and enryched the common weale with aboundaunce of Children, whyche in tyme to come myght defende the Contrey from the enemy, and leaue it to their posterytie suche a blessed and happye common Weale as they receaued it of their Progenitours, were endewed with many large and noble priuyleges, and also rewarded with many greate and precyous gyftes: whereby wee maye euydently perceaue, in what greate price and estimacion Matrimony was euen amonge the very heathen.

The seuere and noble Lacedemonians made a law also among them, that if any of the Lacedemonians remayned vnmarried, till hee was paste .xxxvii. yeares of age: hee should by no meanes bee suffered in Sommer time to come vnto the Playes, Pastymes, Sportes and suche other publique spectacles or sightes, as were vsed among them for theyr solace and delight: agayne, that in winter time hee should bee carryed naked about the common market: hee hym selfe declarynge to the people, that hee suffered those punyshmentes iustlye and worthely, because hee had disobeyed the lawes, and almuch as in him was, sought the destruction of the Common weale. For what other thinge doo these wyuelees monsters by their single life, than vtterly seke the desolacion and destruction of the contrey, where they inhabite: worthy in dede not only to bee punyshed by the purse, but also to bee dryuen out of the company of all honest and godly persons. The law of the Lacedemonians

These lawes of the heathen, as I may let others other passe, declare euydently, in what greate price, estimacyon, reuerence and honoure, Matrimony was amonge them: whyche thinge also the sharp and seuere lawes, whych they made for the breache of Matrimony and for the punishment of adultery, moste manifestlye shewe. Many other thinges myghte here bee spoken concernynge the prayse of Matrimonye: But these maye seeme to suffyce for this present. And forasmuche as Satan is an enemye to all the orders appoynted of GOD, and sweateth to the vttermoste of hys power to destroye them, at the leaste to brynge them into contempte with the wycked worldlynges, and to dysgrace them so muche as hee can, but specyallye the holy and honorable order of Matrimonye: I haue thought it good here in fewe wordes to declare the wyckednes of suche, as throwe the suggestion of suttle Satan haue in all ages labored to deface, the excellentye, dignytye and glory of Matrimony, and haue shewed them selues professed enemyes of this godly state of lyfe.

The Nicolaits Apocalip. ii.

First of all, wee will cal to remembraunce the pestiferous secte of the Nicolaites, which god protesteth that he vtterly detesteth, abhorreth and hateth. This wicked secte amonge dyuers other heresies, taught that mens wyues ought to be common, and that to commit whordom was an indifferent thing, and might ryghte well and lawfully bee vsed. These Heretikes with this there doctrine did greatly obscure the glory of holy Matrimony. For Matrimony coupleth not man and woman together vnto this ende, that either man or woman should entangle them selues with the loue and company of straunge flesh, but that the man should bee content with the woman, and the woman with the man, as S. Paule saieth: to auoyde fornication let euery man haue his owne wyfe, and euery woman her owne husbande. And the scripture saieth: they shalbe two in one flesche. Agayne, man shall cleaue to his owne wyfe. Once againe, if while the man liueth, the woman couple her selfe with another man she shalbe counted a wedlocke breaker. Here see we euidently the Heresie of the Nicolaites condemned, and that mens wyues ought not to be common to many, but rather that euery man ought to bee contente with hys owne wife, and euery woman content with her owne husbande. Bede wee not, that God rebuked Abimelech, and plaged Pharao, because they would haue taken into them Sara Abrahams Wyfe: are we not commanded not so much as once to couit our neighbours wife: saith not our Sauiour Christe, that whosoeuer doth but lust after his neighbours wyfe, committeth adultrye in hys hart with her: and as touching whordom, who knoweth not that to be so detestable a sinne, that none from the beginnynge of the world hath beue more greuously punyshed, as the histories of the holy scripture playnly declare: Shall not God iudge whoremongers: shal not whoremongers be shut out of the kingdom of God, and haue their portion in that lake, that burneth with fyre and brimstone: who seeth not than, what a most wicked doctrine, the heresie of the Nicolaites is: and notwithstanding wold God that there were not many Nicolaites in these our dayes, which can be content partly for fauoure, and partely for gayne, to make their wyues common to other like vnto a certayne Lob Lowte of the contrey called Nicol, which dwelling in a priestes house, and hauing his wife there likewise, was well contente that the Priest should at his pleasure take his pastaus with her: in so much that this Lowte at a certaine time turninge the spit, the Priest fell in dallians with Nicols wife before his face: which thing whan Nicoll perceaued, he fayned him selfe to slepe, and nodded with hys heade. In the meane season came into the Priestes house a certaine familiar and accustomed frend of the Priestes, one well acquainted with the misteries of that chaste nacion, and seing the boldnes of the Priest in handlynge Nicols wyfe, and Nicols dastardnes in dissembling the matter, said: Nicol why nappest thou

Nicol

Nicol (as one newly waken out of slepe) answered: it is good napping for auauntage. Such noddy nodding Nicols nourisheth the worlde many and dyuers at this present daye: whose damnacion slepeth not. As they therfore doo greatly auaunce the dignitie of holy Matrimony, which in the feare of God liue chastly and pure lye with their wyues, and kepe theyr wyues in the obedyence of Gods word without knowledge of any straunge flesche: euen so do they greatly deface and dishonour holy Matrimony, whi he kepe not them selues within the boundes of Matrimony, but are entangled with the loue of other, whether they bee men or women. For the maryed man ought to keep hym selfe onely to hys owne wyfe: and euery maryed woman ought to keep her selfe only to her owne husband, and by no meanes to make eyther of their bodies common to other after the pestilent doctrine of the most pestilent Nicolaites.

Not onely the Nicolaites, but dyuers other Heretikes haue greatly obscured the glory of honorable Matrimony, as the Marrionites, the Saturnites, the Tatians, the Encratites, the Manicheis, &c. These Heretikes doo not only contemne, but also condemne Matrimony, as a Prophane and vnholy thing, yea as carnal, fleshly and damnable: neyther admitte they any into their congregacion, but such as detest mariage: or if any be maried, they must be deuorced before they can be receaued into their felowship not much in this behalfe vnlike to the papistes, which make their chaulinges to forsweare maryage, before they will admit them vnto theyr Poppish Ministery. All these with one consent iudge very vilely of the holy state of honorable wedlocke, and count it as an vncleane thing: whan not withstandinge the blessed confessour Paphnutius in a certayne Councel openly protested and sayde agaynste the enemyes of Matrimony: that it is true chastitie for a man to lye with his owne wyfe. But against all these Heretikes, whych eyther contemne or condemne maryage, or otherwyse vilely esteme of it, must wee set the bulwarkes of the holy scripture: as these among other for an ensample. Whatsoeuer God ordayned, is good and holy. God ordained Matrimony: therfore is Matrimony good and holy. All the Godly from the begynnynge lyued in the holy order of Matrimony, and pleased God. Who than can denye Matrimony to bee good and godly, seyng that God can abyde no wyckednes, nor approue any vncleane thinge? But God approueth and alloweth suche as lyue in Matrimony: therefore Matrimony pleaseth God, and is no vncleane thinge in hys sight. Chryste the Sonne of GOD was borne in Matrimony. Chryste sanctifyed Matrimony with the firste frutes of hys myracles. God by the mouth of Saint Paule commaundeth all men and women for the auoydynge of fornication, to marry. Saint Paule sayeth, if the vnmaryed maryeth, hee synneth not. Agayne hee sayeth: all thinges are pure to them that are pure. Then is Ma-

to be betwene man and wyfe sayde: man shal forsake father and Math.xix. mother, and cleaue to his wyfe. He saieth not, to his wyues. Our Sauiour Christe sayeth: they twayne shalbe one flesche. Agayne they are not twayne, but one flesche. Here Christe maketh menci-on of two persons ioyned together in matrimony, but not of thre, foure, or fiue, as though it were lawful for one man to haue many i.Cozin. vii. wyues, or mo wyues then one. Sainte Paule sayeth, to auoyde fornication, let euery man haue his wyfe, and euerye woman her Ephe.v. husbande. He saieth not, wyues and husbandes. Againe, let euery one loue his wyfe (he saith not, his wyues) euen as him selfe. The holy Ghoste in all places of the holy scripture teacheth the vnitie, Gene.vi. and not the pluralitie of wyues. It shall not be out of the waye to consider, that when God was determined to bringe the fludd vppon the face of the earth, hee commaunded Noah to prepare an Arke, into the whych hee and hys wyfe, hys thre Sonnes and theyr thre wyues myghte enter, and so bee preserued from drowninge. GOD commaunded moreouer, that Noah should take wyth hym into the Arcke euerye lyuynge thinge, and of all flesh. A payer, sayeth God, of euery one shalt thou bringe into the Arke, to kepe them aliue with thee. They shalbe male and female. Of fethered foules also after theyr kinde, & of all cattel after their kynde, of euery worme of ye erth after his kinde: two of euery one shal come vnto thee, that thou maist kepe the alyue. Of these wordes, whiche God spake vnto Noah, concerning the conserua-

tion

tion of all mortal kynde, we may easely perceyue, that Gods good will and pleasure is, that two onely should be ioyned together in the matrimoniall lyfe, and not three or foure, or mo, after ỳ luste and desire of the flesshe. Noah and his wyfe, sayeth the scripture, speakinge of one womã, & not his wyfes, speaking of many. &c. God nameth a payre of euery kynde, and not a multitude. Male and female, sayeth he, and not Male and Females: as thoughe one man might haue many wyues, accordinge to the doctrine of the Mahometanes and of the Anabaptistes. Did not God in the institution of a kynge commaunde, that he shoulde not multiplie wyues to hym self: What any other thinge is this, than to commaunde, that according to the firste ordinaunce of God, a kynge shoulde be content with one wyfe, and not entãgle hym self with the loue of many wyues, as we rede of kynge Salomon, whyche thorowe the multitude of wyues and thorowe their wicked perswasions suffered his hearte to be turned awaye from the Lorde his God, and worshipped fals and straunge gods, as Astaroth the ỳ god of the Zidons, and Mylcome the abhominacion of the Ammonites, and Thamos the abhominacion of Moab, and Moloch the abhominacion of the chyldren of Ammõ. &c. If it be not lawfull for kynges and Prynces to haue many wyues, is it lawfull for subiectes: that whiche is denied to the greater: is it graunted to ỳ lesser: That the Superioure maye not maye the Inferioure: S. Paul in the description of a Bishoppe, and likewise of a Deacon, willeth that suche shoulde be chosen to be Bishops and Deacons, as haue but one wyfe, and not many wyues. A Bishop, sayeth he, muste be the housbande of one wyfe. Agayne, let the Deacons be the housbandes of one wyfe. Here se we, that as of the temporall magistrate, so likewise of the spirituall magistrate it is required, that they be the men of one wyfe, and not euery one of them, the housbande of many wyues. If the hyest officers in the congregacion of God be forbidden to haue many wyues: shall it be lawfull for the inferiour degrees licenciously to take vnto theym so many wyues as they luste: They shalbe two in one flesshe, sayeth oure sauioure Christe.

Let euery man haue his wyfe, and euery woman hyr husband, sayeth s.Paull. Are not these the wordes also of the Apostle: If whyle the man lyueth, the woman couple hyr selfe with another man, she shalbe coũted a wedlock breaker. May it not in like maner be sayde of the man: If whyle the woman lyueth, the mã couple him selfe with another woman, he shalbe counted a wedlock breaker. Here is it also euident and playne ynoughe, that as no woman ought to haue mo husbandes at ones, then one onely: so likewise no manne oughte to haue mo wyues at one tyme, then one onely. If any of them do the contrary: so are they wedlocke breakers. And who knoweth not, that Matrimonye contracted betweene two persons, one man and one woman, expresseth, declareth, clareth, and setteth forthe the misterie of the spiritual coniunctio and heauenly copulation betwene Christe and his spouse, the congregatione. Whiche misterie is vtterly destroyed, if pluralitie of wyues be graunted to one man. Neither can suche carnall & outwarde Matrimonye signifie and pointe forthe the spiritual and inwarde Matrimonye betwene Christe and his congregation. Cynti. vi. For as Christe hath but one spouse, as it is written: One is my doue: One is my dearling: so likewise euery true Christen manne ought at one tyme to haue but one wyfe, and by no meanes to couple hym selfe to any other woman, so long as she liueth. If he dothe the contrary, so is he an adulterer and wedlockebreaker. Likewise is to be vnderstanded of the womā. They therfore, which teache the multitude of wyues, and affirme, that it is lawfull for a man to haue so many wyues at ones, as he luste (according to the doctrine of Mahomet & of the wicked Anabaptistes) greatly erre, and not a litle deface and obscure the glorye and maiestie of holy and honorable wedlocke.

The Bishoppe of Rome. But amonge all these aduersaries and ennemies of Matrimonye, the Romishe Bishoppe, that Antichrist, that man of sinne and that sonne of perdition, maye not be passed ouer with silence: whiche although eyther with the corruption of hys lyfe, or with the wickednes of hys doctrine he hathe moste filthely corrupted, mangled and defiled all the misteries of God, of hys holy worde, and blessed Sacramentes: yet the moste holy state of godly Matrimony hathe he moste vilely and moste wickedly enbased, caste doune, and made almoste of no reputacion. No Turke, no Iewe, no Saracen, no Infidell, no Ethnycke, no Heathē, no Miscreaūt no, no Deuill hath at any time so vilely and so wickedly taughte and written of the blessed state of honorable wedlocke: as thys wicked Bishop of Rome and hys adherentes haue done, as their writinges abundantly declare. Dothe not Pope Gregorie in hys decree commaunde, that those married men, whiche sleepe with their owne wyues (he meaneth, as I thynke, the matrimoniall acte betwene man and wyfe) shoulde not presume to enter into the Churche, before they be washed with water, but abstayne from comynge into the holy place for a certayne space, tyll they be purified? Dothe not thys hys decree greatly derogate the honour and glory of honourable and glorious Matrymonye? Dothe not thys Pope shewe hym selfe vilely to esteme of Matrimony, whiche forbiddeth the honest married man, that hath had the knowledge of his wyues bodye in the feare of God, to enter into the Church before he hathe purified and washed hym selfe with water? 33. 4. 4. L. Vir. What other thynge is thys then to teache, that Matrymonye is no pure state of lyfe, although instituted of God, practised of all godly persons frō the beginnyng, garnished with the fyrst fruites of Christes miracles &c. Agayn, that the matrimoniall acte betwene man & womā, in the feare of God is vnpure and vncleane?

When

Whan not withstanding the holy Ghoste by the mouth of S. Paul pronounceth wedlocke honorable, and the acte of wedlocke pure and cleane, sayinge: Wedlocke is honorable amonge all persons, & the bedde vndefyled. But whoremongers and adulterers God shall iudge. If the Pope had ben perswaded, ỳ matrimony, or the acte of matrimony had ben pure and clean: woulde he euer haue forbidden the married man lyenge with hys wyfe to enter into the churche, before he had purified and washed hym selfe with water? And who seeth not the folye of this Pope, whiche appointeth the married man to washe hym selfe with water, before he enter into the churche? As though water were of suche vertue & stregth that it coulde put awaye the faulte, if any were committed in the acte of matrimony done betwene a man and his wyfe in the fear of God? and vnto that ende, for the whiche it was instituted and ordeined of the Lorde oure God. O corrupte and blynde iudgement. The Papistes strayne out a gnatte, and swalowe doune a Camell. Outwardly they washe and purifie all thynges, but inwardly they are full of all wickednes and hypocrisy. What shall I speake of Pope Innocēt (as I maye let passe pope Syricius, pope Gregorie the seuenth Pope Alexander the thyrd, Pope Boniface Pope Nicolas, Pope Calixte, with the other rable of Popes and of their adherentes, very enemies to God and to nature, yea and to all mankynde) whiche so vilely and wickedly speake of holy matrimonye, that he feareth not to saye, that to lyue in wedlocke, (which the holy Ghoste by the mouth of S. Paull calleth, honorable) is nothing els then to lyue in the flesche: When notwithstandinge the aforesayde Apostle calleth the Matrimonial acte, pure and vndefiled. And to proue, that to lyue in Matrimonye, is nothinge els then to lyue in the flesche: he alledgeth this texte of S. Paule no les fasly then wickedly: They that are in ỳ flesh, can not please God. Whereof it shoulde folowe, if S. Paule were so to be vnderstanded, as this moste wicked and deuelish Pope hādleth the matter: that no maryed person shoulde be saued. For Excepte we please God, we can not be saued. But no married man pleaseth God, for asmuche as he lyueth in the flesche, after Pope Innocentes doctrine: Therfore no married man can be saued, God haue mercye on vs. If thys doctrine so wicked and so pestilente, so false and so corrupte, come from him, whiche is called the moste holy father Gods vicare in earth, Peters successour, supreame heade of the vniuersall Churche of Christe thorowe out the worlde, dispensatoure of the treasures of the Churche, I meane, the woorkes of supererogation, the merites of saincte, the good woorkes of the holy religious persons, Monkes, Fryers, Chanōs, Nonnes, Anckers, Anckresses, Heremites, &c. But ye are not in the flesh, but in the spirite: if so be ỹ the spirite of god dwel in you. These wordes wrote S. Paul to the Romains, which were for the moste part maried mē, & not poperilly votaries & bowelles. These married men, sayeth he playnly, liued in the spirite and not in the flesshe. Who seeth not now then, howe false, wicked and deuelish the doctrine of Pope Innocent is: whiche teacheth, that to be married, is to lyue in the flesshe: whan the holy Apostle sayeth, that they whiche are maried, liuing in the feare of God, are in the spirite, & lyue accordyng to ỹ will of God, & please God no les, then they, which lyue in the order of a Magistrate, of a spirituall Ministre, &c. For all thinges are pure to them, that are pure: but vnto them that are defiled, & vnbeleuing, is nothynge pure, but euē the very myndes and consciences of them are defiled. Titus.i.

But the Pope hath not only greatly obscured the honor & glory of honorable Matrimony, by thus vnworthely speakinge & wrytting of it: but also many other & diuers wayes. How frēdly ỹ pope is to matrimony cōcerning the secōd mariages, sufficiētly sheweth also. Is not this the doctrine of the Pope, which marye the secōd time shuld not be cōsecrate, halowed or blessed of the Priest: agai, that the priest shuld not be present at such mariages, nor gene his cōsent vnto thē: if he do (except the pope licēce him) he must be suspended both frō his office & priesthode: Moreouer in the counsayll Neocesarience, there is a tyme of penaūce apointed for the men & for the women, ỹ marry more thā ones. O good God, what meaneth the Pope by his doctrine: Is it any other thinge, thā to reckōt the secōd or third mariages litle better then whordō: If they alow the secōd, iii. iiii. v. vi. &c. mariages to be good, godly, honest & lawful: why do they forbid the Priest to cōsecrate, halowe & blesse thē: to be presēt at those mariages: yea & why do they apoint such as oftē mary, a certai space to repēt or to doo penaūce: Who repēteth hi, but of euil doing: If such as marye after thē ones ought to repēt thē of their dede: doth it not thē folow, ỹ in so mariēg, they haue done euil: Who seeth not herebỹ secōd, iii. or. iiii. mariages to differre nothing frō whordō after the Popes doctrine: Again, who knoweth not this, ỹ the Pope wil by no meanes suffer hym to be a Priest or minister in the church of Christe, ỹ hath ben twyse maryed, or els hath taken a wydow to wyfe, bee he neuer so learned, honest, godly & vertuous: Who seeth not now, what an enemy the Pope is to matrimony, seing he so vilely & vnworthely estemeth ỹ second mariages: But what haue the. ii. iii. iiii. &c. marryages offended more thā the first maryage: When Sara was dead, Abraham toke hym a wife called Ketura. Sinned Abrahā in thus doinge: Ceased he to be the father of the faithful, & to please God, because he marryed the seconde tyme: God is no les the author of ỹ seconde, thyrd, fourthe, &c. maryages, then of the firste. S. Paule sayeth, that the married woman is bounde to her husbād so long as he lyueth. But if the man be dead, she is lowsed from the lawe of the man: so that she is no wedlockebreaker, thoughe shee couple her selfe with another man. Who seeth not here, that second marriages are approued and alowed in the word of God:

1. Cor. vii. Again he sayeth: the wyfe is bound to the law, as long as her husbande lyueth. If hyr husband slepe, she is at libertie to marry with whom she wil, so it be in the Lord. Is it to be thoughte, ỳ the holy Apostle wolde haue licēsed the maried persons to marrye twise, if such marriages had ben vnhoneſt, wicked, vngodly, vnlawful and vnacceptable in the sight of God? When ỳ Saduces came to Christ concerning a certain womā, which had. vii. husbādes: did Christe speake any thing vnto the condēnacion of those so manifolde marriages? Which thing he wolde vndoubtedly haue done, if the womā had offended in ỳ behalf. S. Hierome although a great & large prayser of the single lyfe, disalloweth not a man, though he marye eight tymes. All godly & lawful maryages, be they the first. ii. iii. iiii. &c. are alowable before ỳ eyes of Gods maiestie: neither haue they at any tyme ben disalowed, tyl the Deuyl & the Pope began to beare rule, whiche enuye no state so muche, as the holy state of honorable Matrimonye.

Maryage forbidden at certen tymes. 31. q. 4. Non oportet. Non licet. Nec prorsum. Est. de feriis. Capellanus.

Moreouer what an aduersarie to Matrimonye hath the Pope shewed him self, in forbidding marryage to be solēnised at certayn tymes in the year? By the Popes law it is not lawful for any persons to cōtract Matrimony & openly to solemnise maryage frō the first Sūday in aduēt to the octaues of the Epyphanye: frō ỳ Sūday in Septuagesima to the octaues of Easter: frō the beginning of the Rogacio days to Trinitie Sūday: & .iii. wekes before ỳ feast of the Natiuitie of s. Jhon Baptist. &c. as I may speake nothing of the vigiles, of processiō days, of Embring days & such lyke. If any presume to marye cōtrary to this order of the Pope: hys law is, ỳ they be separated & put asunder, as persons vnlawfully married & cōtrarie to the determinacio of our mother holy church. God be mercifull vnto vs. What hathe holy Matrimonye, whiche is an honorable and blessed state of lyfe, euen Gods owne ordinaunce, offended, that certayn tymes of the yeat, as is tofore sayde, it mai not be celebrated? Matrimonye was solemnised in ioyefull Paradise: and maye it not at all tymes be admitted into the Popes churche? If it be not lawefull to solēnise Matrimonye at al tymes of the yeare: neither is it lawfull at any tyme of the yeare. The Pope therefore muste nedes haue an euill opinion of Matrimonye, whiche so many tymes in the yeare forbiddeth to celebrate it in hys Churche. If it be lawfull for the Pope to forbid mariage certayne tymes of the yeare: so is it also lawfull for him to forbid it all times of the yeare, and so at the laste to destroy the order of Matrimonye, and cause marriage to cease, that all the glorie maye rest in his chauen wyueles nacio. This man of synne casteth away the commaundement of God, to stablishe his owne wicked triflinge traditions.

marryed, what tymes they maye not geue eche to other the due beneuolence, as sainct Paule termeth the acte of Matrimony. 1.Cor.vii.
The acte (sayeth he) of Matrimony may not lawfully be exercy-sed by man and wyfe at all seasons. There be certayne tymes in the yeare, in the whiche they oughte to abstayne from that acte.
The firste is, the holy tyme of Lent to the octaues of Easter.
The seconde is, the Embringe dayes, and the Rogacion dayes.
The thyrd is, holy dayes and holy nightes, that is to say, all Sū-dayes and other feastfull dayes with all their vigiles thorow out the yeare. The fourth is, at all suche seasons as the wyfe is with childe: and from that tyme tyl she be purified. In these tymes and seasons man and wyfe oughte not to knowe one another: and if they do: he or she, whiche is the occasion and prouoker therof, synneth greatly, sayeth the Pope. But howe agreeth this with the Heb.xiij.
doctrine of S. Paule, whiche calleth Matrimony honorable, and the acte of Matrimony pure and clene: he calleth it not synne for the marryed persons to geue eche other the dutye of Matrimony, yea and that at all tymes in the feare of God; but he garnisheth
it with a goodly and semely terme, and calleth it due beneuolēce, 1.Cor.vii.
saying: Let the man geue vnto the wyfe due beneuolēce. Lykewyse also the wyfe vnto the man. The wyfe hath not power ouer her owne bodye: but the husbande. And likewise the husbande hathe not power ouer hys owne bodye: but the wyfe. Withdraw not your selues one from another, except it be with consente for a tyme, for to geue your selues to fastinge and prayer. And afterwarde come agayne together, lest Sathan tempte you for youre incontinency.
Is not this the commaundement of God: Encreace and mylty-plye, and replenish the earth? Agayne, that to auoyde fornication Gene.ii.
men should marrye, seinge it is better to marrye then to burne? Is 1.Cor.vii.
it synne to obey the commaundement of God? What other thinge do the marryed folke in geuing due beneuolence one to another, thē that, which God cōmaundeth? How dare this Romishe Antichriste then make that synne, which God hath ordeined, cōmaunded, and pronoūced to be pure, to marye whē the Pope will: to haue þ know ledge of our wyues at the Popes appointment, & not otherwise, without sinne: oh, what a misery is thys? Among the Turches & Barbarous naciōs, such crueltie, such tyrānye is not founde concerning marriage. Is not this that man of sinne, that sonne of per- ii.Thes.ii.
dicion, that aduersary, which is exalted aboue all þ is called God, or that is worshipped: so þ he sit as God in the tēple of God, & shew hym self as God? Is not this Antichrist the captain of them, which according to the Apostles prophecie, shall depart from the faith, & 1.Timot.iiij shal geue hede vnto the spirites of errour, and deuelish doctrine of them which speake false thorow hipocrisy, & haue their consciēces marked with an hote yron, forbiddinge to marrye? Is not thys Romish Bishoppy beast, which opened his mouth to blaspheme þ name Apoc.xiij.
of God and hys tabernacle, and theym that dwell in heauen?

Which also maketh warre with the saintes? Is not he also that Apoca. xvii. whore of Babylon, whiche is dronke with the bloud of saintes, & with the bloud of the martirs of Jesu which also take vpon hym Apoca. xviii. to sell the bodies & soules of men? In such slauery & thraldom both of bodye & soule are not the pore Christians that lyue vnder the Turke, as those moste miserable Christians are, whiche lyue vnder the tyranny of the Bishop of Rome: which notwithstandinge calleth hym self the seruaunt of seruaunts, Christes vicare, Peters successour. &c. Whan no man liuing is so farre estraunged frō the lyfe & maners of Christ & Peter, as this Antichriste is.

1. Cor. vii. Saint Paule, I graunt, exhorteth the maried folke, that they sometime abstayne, yea and that vnto this ende, that they maye
the more frely geue them selues to prayer & fasting: but he appoin teth no tyme, nor how longe, as the Pope doth. He willeth also, that they do not so abstayne, except both consent. But this Pope, consent thei, or consent thei not, commaundeth vnder payne of deadly sinne, that so many dayes and so many wekes thei abstain and that whosoeuer be the occasion and prouoker to the contrary be it the man or the wyfe, that partie sinneth greatly. Agayn S.
Paule counsaileth the maried folke, that they withdraw not theselues one from another, but for a time, and afterward come again together, lest Sathan tempte them for their incontinency. But the Pope can well be cōtēt, and greatly alloweth the acte, if the maried man forsake hys wyfe, and the maried woman geue ouer her hous-bande, and both go into the cloysture, the man into a monkery, and the woman into a Nonery, therefor euer to remayn, so long as thei lyue, and neuer more afterward to come againe together, although they fele in them selues neuer so greatly the fearse and vnruly flames of incontinency.

Spirituall con sanguinitie & affinitie. Furthermore hath not this Romish bishop openly declared his enmitie and euil will to the holy state of honorable wedlocke, in that he hath forbidden by his diuelish lawes certayn persons to marrye together, whome the lawe of God hath made free to couple theym selues together in the order of Matrimonye, if the holy Ghoste call them therunto: What shall I speake firste of all of the spirituall kin-red or affinity, as they terme it: which cometh in the ministracion of Baptisme & confirmacion, after the Popes doctrine? The Pope in his lawe plainly forbiddeth, that there maye no marriage be made betwen them that baptise and them that are baptised, nor betwen them that baptise and be baptised, & betwene theym that are Godfathers and Godmothers, as they be commonly called, to the chyldren that are baptised, nor betwene any of their chyldren. If any of these contracte Matrimonye betwene them, the mariages are pronounced of the Pope vnlawfull and incestuous, and maye by no meanes be continued, but out of hande be dissolued and broken, and penaunce enioyned for contracting suche mariages.

And

And the Popes reason is this: If that consanguimtie and affinitie, whiche cometh of the fleshe be an impediment to matrimonye: howe muche more oughte spiritual kynred, whiche cometh by the spirite of God and by the ministracion of the blessed Sacramentes that is to saye, Baptisme and confirmacion, let and put awaye Matrimonye, concerninge suche persons as be linked together in that spirituall consanguinitie and affinitie? Againe he sayeth: If they may not marye together, whom adoption ioyneth: howe muche les ought they to marry together, whiche are knytte together by the heauenly Sacrament and by the regeneration of the holy Ghoste? Whosoeuer therfore enterpriseth suche marryages, he is excommunicate and caste oute of the catholike Churche. A cupsfuenciall reason of the Pope.

And thys impediment is wrought at the ministration of Baptisme and confirmation in them, that eyther minister the Sacrament or receyue the Sacramente, or are Godfathers and Godmothers to them that are baptised or confirmed. All these maye not contracte matrimony one with onother, nor yet the chyldren of them: so that in this impediminte there are .iii. degrees. The firste is fatherhode: the secõde is gossippric, and the thirde is brotherhode. The firste degree is betwixte the Ministers of the Sacrament, and the chyldren that are chrisstened. For he that ministreth ỹ Sacrament is a spiritual Father to the chyldren that are chrisstened, and dothe represent the parson of almighty God oure heauenly Father: and the chyldren so chrisstened, are spiritual sonnes and doughters to the minister, whether it be Priest or other: so that betwene them that chrisstē or be chrisstened no matrimonye maye be made. The seconde degree is, betwixte the naturall father and mother, and the father and mother spirituall. 30.q.3.c. Non oportet

The Fathers and Mothers spirytuall are the Godfathers and Godmothers, whyche promise for the Chyldren at Baptisme: and these represente oure mother holy Churche. Betwene these persones and the chyldren chrisstened maye be no matrimonye: for they are parentes and chyldren in spirite. The thyrde degree is, betwixt the chyldren that are Chrisstened and the chyldren of the Chrisstener, and of the Godfathers and Godmothers aforesayde. These by no meanes after the Popes lawe maye marrye, for they are spirituall brethren and systeren. If anye of these persones aforesayde doo marrye together: their matrimonye by the Popes sentence is no Matrimonye: and if any suche marrye contrarie to the decree of the Pope: thei must be seperate, as persons vnlawfully ioyned together, and dryuen vnto penaunce. And thys muche also is to bee vnderstande of the confirmacion of chyldren. For the same impediminte of Matrimonye is betwixte the Bishoppe, whyche doethe confyrme, and the chylde confyrmed: betwixte the chylde & the person whiche holdeth the chylde at the confirmation, and the wyfe or husbande of thesame person carnally knowen afore: againe betwirt the Bishop and the natural father and mother: betwirt the holder wyfe or housbande of the holder and the naturall father & mother: betwirt the chylde whiche is confirmed, and the chylde of the Confirmer and of the holders of the chylde in confirmation, aswel afore as after, and aswel lawful as bastards. O good God haue mercy on vs, & treade doune Sathā vnder oure feete. What multitudes of people doth that Romish Bishop exempte here frō contracting Matrimony together: whom notwithstandinge the holy lawe of God suffereth to be ioyned together in marriage: Is this any other thing then to controll God & to reproue hys lawe of imperfection: yea and to make that sinne, whiche God knoweth to be vertue: and to condemne that as vnlawfull, whiche God alloweth for lawefull, good and godly: O Antichrist. O deuil. O man of synne. Is not this to forbid Matrimony? Is not thys to laye heauy burdens vpon mens backes? Is not this to make the commaundemente of God frustrate and of none effecte for to stablish mans wicked tradicions? Is not this to make of the free men of God, the vnde slaues & miserable captiues of Antichriste? ye are derely boughte sayeth S. Paule: be not ye the seruaunts of men. Agayne, Stand faste in the libertie, wherwith Christe hath made vs free, and wrappe not youre selues agayne in the yoke of bondage. Item, If ye be deadde with Christe from the ordinaunces of the worlde, why as thoughe ye yet lyued in the worlde, are ye ledde with tradicions? Touche not. taste not, hādle not: which all perishe thorowe the very abuse, after the cōmaundementes and doctrines of men: which thinges outwardly haue the similitude of wisedome by superstition. &c.

If those reasons of the Pope, which we haue hytherto heard, be sufficient to let those persons from mariage, of whom we haue tofore spoken, & if any mariage be cōtracted betwen them, to dissolue thesame, by the reason of ỹ spirituall consanguinitie knytte betwen thē at the ministration of Baptisme & confirmatiō: which reasons notwithstanding be carnal reasons, yea folish fantsies sucked out of his owne fingers endes, and nowhere grounded in the worde of God: how muche more is this reason of force, that the Christians by their regeneracion and newe byrthe hauinge one commune heauenly father, one common Lord and Sauiour, euen Christe Jesus, one Gospel, one Baptisme, one faithe, one hope, one spirite, one heauenly enheritaunce. &c. Beinge also members of one bodye, yea one body together, of the whiche body Christ Jesus alone is the head: again, beinge brethren & sistern so strōgly & streightly lynked together by the spirite of God, that no carnall cōsanguinitie or affinitie cā ioyne & couple together any persons with so sure a knotte, oughte not to marrye one with another: If the Popes reason be good, my reason is better, beyng stedfastly grounded on Gods worde: and by this meanes shal the Christē men men be compelled to sende vnto the Turkes or vnto the Jewes for wyues: and the Christen women must likewise send vnto them for husbandes: seing that the Christians are so linked together by spirituall consanguinitie, that they by no meanes maye marrye one with another. Who seeth not nowe, to what poynte we are come, if reason might rule without the authoritie of Gods worde? But what hathe spirituall kinred to doo, with the kinred of the flesh: that one should be such a let to the other, that maryage maye not come betwene them? O drousie dreames.

But this is greatly to be maruayled at, that Baptisme and confirmacion (of the whiche one I confesse to bee a Sacrament instituted of Christe: the other is no Sacrament, but a mere trifelinge tradicion of man, and as it is now vsed in the Popes Church, vtterly vayne and vnprofitable) bringe suche and so greate consanguinytie and kinred in the spirite to them, whyche haue to doo about theyr ministracion, as we haue tofore hearde, that they by no meanes maye marry together and the holy Sacrament of the bodye and bloud of Christ, at the ministracion and receauyng wherof wee confesse our selues to bee so lincked together in spirite & in all the fruites of the spirite, that wee are made one bodye, as. S. Paule sayth, we (though we be many) yet are one head, and one bodye, inasmuche as wee all are partakers of one breade & of one cuppe: hindreth maryage nothinge at all betwene the receauers thereof. But what should we maruel at the doinges of him, which in stead of reason and the scripture of god, vseth, Sic volo, sic iubeo? Neither may he be controlled, whatsoeuer he speaketh. It is sufficient, that hee hath spoken. Reason must be still. Scripture must geue place. Notwithstandynge who is so blinde, which seeth not, what an extreme aduersarye to the holy state of Matrimony the Pope is, while with his trifelinge tradicions, deuylishe decrees. croked constitutions and Antichristian actes, hee forbiddeth suche to marry together, as the lawe of God freely permitteth and suffereth to contracte matrimony, betwene them?

Confirmacyō is no sacrament

1. Cozin. 1.

And as the Pope hath played the right Antichrist in his tradycion of spirituall Consanguinitie and ghostly kynred: so lykewyse hathe hee done in carnall consanguinitie and affinitie, God in his holy lawe, as it is to be sene in the boke of Leuiticus, hathe appoynted certaine degrees of consanguinitie and affinitie, which maye by no meanes marrye together. The Pope not contented with those degrees, extendeth his inhibicion not only vnto the forthe degree accordynge to the statutes and ordinaunces of certayne Christen Emperours & learned lawyers, but also vnto the seuenth degree: so that whosoeuer marrye wythin those degrees, theyr maryages are incestuous and vnlawful, and muste be dissolued. And it is wonder to see, how the Popes amonge them selues barry in this behalfe, which notwithstandynge wyll bee counted neuer to erre, nor to dyssent, but alwayes to be led with the spirit of vnitie and concorde, and specially in matters of christen religion. Pope Fabiane (as Gratiane the Cānonistе testifieth) made a decree, that no man might marry within the fifte degree, but in the fifte degree and so forth he might lawfully marry. But Pope Gregory, Pope Nicolas and Pope Julius not content, with this decree of theyr predecessour, commaunded, that none should marry with anye of theyr kinred vnto the seuenth degree. If anye presume to attempte the contrary: theyr maryages shall bee counted incestuous and vnlawful, and by no meanes to be continued, but streight wayes to bee dyssolued, and the parsons put to penance. And this theyr decree was appointed and establyshed both in the councel Meldense and Lugdunense. But the Councel Guarmacience proceded further: for that appoynteth no nomber of degrees, but decreeth, that no man, shall marrye with anye of hys kynred, though the woman bee neuer so farre of from hym either in consanguinitie or affinitie: euen so longe as anye step of kynred do appeare, and till all the stocke bee worne oute vnto the vttermost: yea there are that wryte, that if Adam were alyue againe at this present, he myght haue no wyfe in the worlde: for as muche as all men and women in the worlde bee lineally and dyrectly descendynge from him. But Pope Innocent the thirde considryng the fondnes of his predecessours, and theyr to muche boldenes in forbyddynge those degrees to marry, whych the worde of God setteth at libertie: renewed the decree of Pope Fabian, whereof wee heretofore spake, shewynge hym selfe in this behalfe more reasonable and more frendlye to Matrimonye, than dyuers of hys predecessours were, althoughe in other matters hee haue not a lytle ouershot hym selfe.

Thus see wee, how the Bysshoppe of Rome hathe from time to tyme in all ages, and in all matters shewed hym selfe an extreme aduersary to honorable wedlocke, while hee hath soughte al meanes possyble to hinder and let the glory of holy Matrimony, and to driue from mariage, as from an vncleane thing, so many as he could deuyse, euer hauing in hys mouth this saying: Nuptie terram replent: Virginitas paradisum. That is to saye: Maryage replenysheth the earth: But Virginitie filleth Paradyse: As though Virginitie were not the daughter of maryage, and thorow maryage is made a Citezin and indweller of Paradise: whiche also without maryage should neyther bee, nor yet possesse paradise: so that Virginitie owe moste humble thankes to matrimony for such and so great benefite.

Of the maryages of spirytual ministers.

But the Pope hathe not stayed hym selfe in the rage of those furies, whyche wee heretofore haue hearde: But hee goeth forth euer lyke hym selfe, styll to playe the parte of Antichryste, and in all poyntes to shewe hym selfe a thorowe ennemye to the dygnytye and excellencye of honorable Matrimonye.
For from whence commeth the forbyddynge of the Matrimony of spirytuall Ministers or Preestes, as they bee commonly called.

but

but from the Bysshop of Rome: God neither in the olde, nor in the newe Testament hathe at anye tyme forbidden the maryage of Prieſtes. Yea hee hathe rather commaunded it, and honorably ſet it forth in his dyuine letters. God hath done that for the Matrimony of Prieſtes, which hee neuer dyd for the Matrimony either of King or Keſar, or of any other mortall creature. For in his holy lawe geuen by Moyſes, hee appoynteth euydently what woman the Prieſtes ſhould marry and take to their wyues. Are not theſe his wordes: Let not the Prieſt take a wife, that is an aduoutreſſe, or defiled, nor put from her husband, for ſuche a one is holy vnto his God. Hee ſhall take a mayde vnto his wyfe: but a wydow, a deuorſed woman, or an harlot, ſhall hee not marry: But ſhall take a mayde of his owne people to wyfe. Agayne, by the Prophet hee ſaieth: the Prieſtes ſhal marry no wydow, neither one that is put from her husbande: but a mayde of the ſeed of the houſe of Iſrael, or a wydow that hath had a Prieſt before. Doth not Saint Paul alſo ſet forth in his letters what manner of wyues the ſpirytuall Miniſters ſhall haue: Their wyues muſt bee, ſaith hee, honeſt, no euyl ſpeakers: but ſober, and faithful in all thinges. All the Prieſtes of the olde Teſtament were maryed, and theyr children ſucceded them in the Miniſtery. Ieremy the Prophet, which was ſantified in hys mothers wombe, was Helkiah the Prieſtes Sonne. Ezechiel the Prophet, to whom maruelous viſions and great myſteryes were reueled, was Buzi the Prieſtes Sonne. S. Iohn the Baptiſt, which was ſantified in his mothers wombe by the holye Ghoſte, which was the forrunner of Chriſt, which baptiſed Chriſt which ſaw the holy Ghoſt commynge downe from heauen in the likenes of a doue, to whom God the Father ſpake from heauen, of whom Chriſt geueth this witnes, that hee was more then a Prophet, and that among them which are borne of women, aroſe not a greater then Iohn the Baptiſt, was Zacharias the Prieſtes Sonne: of whoſe parents blеſſed Luke wryteth, that they were both ryghteous before God, and walked in all the lawes, and ordynances of the lord, ſo that no man could finde faute with them. All the Apoſtels of Chryſt were marryed men, as the monuments of the auncient writers, teſtify. Bleſſed S. Mathew maketh mention of Peters wyues mother: and ſo likewiſe doeth bothe Saint Marke and Saint Luke. The hiſtoryes declare euydentlye, that Saint Petronilla was Saint Peters daughter. And there are, which write, that Saint Marke the Euangeliſt was Saint Peters naturall Sonne. Of this thinge thus rede wee, that Saint Peter in the latter end of his firſt Epiſtle hath theſe wordes: The congregacion of them, which at Babilon are companyons of your election, ſaluteth you, and ſo doth Marcus my Sonne. If any man ſay, that Saint Paule called Timothe his ſonne, and yet was he not hys natural Sonne in fleſhe: I graunt. But Saint Paule addeth theſe wordes, and ſaieth: In fine, to expresse declare, that Timothe was

These many testimonyes haue wee out of the worde of GOD, with great honor vnto the holy ministery admytted & receaued of the cõgregacion of god, seing we haue in store many popes or Bysshops of Rome, which were maryed Prieſtes ſonnes, and notwithstandinge they were admitted vnto the Papacy, and occupied Peters chaier, as they vse to saye: Pope Bonifface the firste of that name, was the Sonne of a certayne Prieſt called Iucundus. In the yeare of our Lord. cccc. xxii. Pope Felix the third of that name, was the Sonne of Felix Prieſt of Rome, and lyued in the yeare of our Lord. cccc. lxxiiii. Pope Gelasius the firste had a Bysshop to hys father, called Valerius: in the yeare. &c. cccc. xcv. Pope Agapetus the first of that name had a Prieſt to his father called Gordianus: in the yere. &c. ccccc. xxxv. Pope Siluerius had a Bishop to his father, called Hormisdas: In the yere. &c. ccccc. xxxvi. Pope Deus dedit, otherwyse called Theodatus was the Sonne of Stephen the Subdeacon: in the yeare. &c. D c. xv. Pope Theodorus was the Sonne of one Theodorus Bysshop of Ieruſalem: in the yeare. &c. Dc. xl. Pope Hadrian the second was the Sonne of Talarus the Bysshoppe: in the yeare. &c. D ccc. lxvii. Pope John the leuenth of that name was Sonne to Pope Sergius the thirde: in the yeare &c. D cccc. xvii. Pope John the twelth of that name was the Sonne of Pope Lando: in the yeare. &c. Dcccc. xxx. Pope John the. xiiii. was Sonne to Bysshop John in the yeare. &c. Dccc. lxv. Pope John the. xvi. was the Sonne of Leo the Prieſt, in the yere &c. Dccc. lxxxiiii. Pope John the. xxi. of that name, had Gregorye the Bishop of Partua to his Father: in the yeare. &c. Myxii. These and manye moe, as the Popes lawe testifyeth, were all Prieſtes Sonnes, and notwithstandynge they were chosen to be Popes of Rome. It were more then double wyckednes to thinke that all these Popes were baſtardes and mysbegotten chyldren: yea it is not to bee doubted, but that they were all begotten in true wedlocke, and borne in holy Matrimony according to the law of god, and for theyr excellency both in doctrine and life they were chosen to be Bysshops of Rome: which thinge should neuer haue come to paſſe in ſo greate a multitude, if they had not bee borne in lawfull Matrimony. For in the Popes owne lawe it is wrytten thus: forasmuch as we rede, that Prieſtes Sonnes were promoted to bee the higheſt Bysshops, (that is to saye, Popes) it is not to be vnderſtand, that they were borne of fornication or whordom, but of lawfull Matrimonye: for before it was prohibited and forbidden, it was lawful for Prieſtes to marry in euery place. And Panormitanus wryteth playnly, that a maryed man may be chosen Pope, and so remayne maryed ſtill in his papacie: ſo lytle, yea ſo nothing doth holy Matrimony hinder the ſpirituall Miniſtery. S. John Chryſoſtome sayeth, that the dignitie of Matrimony is ſo greate, that euen hee that is maryed, may be exalted vnto the holy ſeate of a Bysshops office. And Pope Innocent the fourth of that name sayeth, that Matrimony by the lawe of nature hinderth no man to be admitted vnto holy orders. For by the law of nature hee that is a Preest, may lawfully vse the Matrimony contracted, as the Easte Churche doth. yea and a Preest myght also marrye, if the constitucions of the Church dyd not forbid it.

Why the grek church separated them selues from the Romishe church.

Moreouer who knoweth not, that one of the chiefe & principall causes, why the East church separated them selues frō the church of the Pope, which is called the weast Churche, was the prohibicion and forbidding of Preestes matrimony: so that they feared not to call the Church of Rome, the wicked Synagoge of Satan, forasmuche as the Pope dyd forbyd that, whych the law of God hath made free. But the Churches of the Easte partes both in Grecia, Asia, Macedonia, Thracia, Moesia, Affrica, and in dyuerse other places, admit the maryages of the spiritual Ministers, and wyl by no meanes receaue the wycked tradicion of the Romishe Bysshop, concerning the single life of Preestes. The Churches also of Moscouia and of dyuers other countryes round aboute suffer Matrimony to their Preestes frely and without anye restraynte: so that so many as haue kept them selues free from the tiranny of the Bysshop of Rome, haue alwayes euen from the tyme of the Apostels mayntayned the lybertie of maryage againste the Pope and hys wyueles nacion.

Paulus Jouius Lib. xvm. Historiarum. sui temporis.

Sigismund. Baro in com. rerum Mosco uit.

But not only these aforesayde Churches, but manye good and godly men also both in the Greke and Latin Churches haue from tyme to tyme reproued and dysalowed, yea wrytten and spoken agaynste the tirannical and wycked tradicyon of the single lyfe of Preestes, whither it were at anye tyme attempted of the Bysshop of Rome, or of any other. In the yeare of our Lorde. Clr. Pinitus a Bysshop in the Ile of Creta was determyned to make a decree, that all the Preestes of hys diocesse should vowe chastity, and liue wyueles. But Dionisius the Bysshop of Corinth vnderstanding this his no les wycked then bolde enterpryse, wrote streyght wayes vnto hym, and warned hym, that by no meanes hee should laye such heauy burdens vpon the neckes of his felowe brethren, nor compell the Preestes of necessitie to lyue sole and vnmarryed, lest by this meanes many should fal into daunger. Pinitus wrote agayne to Dionisius, thankinge hym for his good admonicions, and followed hys councell and desired hym from tyme to tyme to put hym in remembraunce of suche thinges, as hee thought moste expedyent for the edifieng and profit of his church.

Aboute this tyme there arose certayne heretikes, whiche dyd not onely dysalowe, but also contemne and condemne maryage. her whom he denieth to cary about, becaúse hee may bee the more redy to preach the Gospell. Like vnto this wryteth Ignatius. S. Johns disciple: I discommend not faith he, other holy men, which were maryed, of whom I haue now spoken. For my desire is, that I maye be founde acceptable to God in his kingdom at their forefreppes: as Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, and Elay bee, and all the rest of the Prophets: As Peter also and Paule, and the rest of the Apostles, who were coupled in maryage, and yet not marryed for the fulfillinge of theyr bodely lustes, but for the mayntenance of theyr posteritie and of springe.

Agayne, in the yeare of oure Lorde. iii. C. xxviii. there was a great Councel gathered at Nicea in Grece thorow the godly Emperour Constantinus Magnus, where were present about. iii. C. and. xviii. Bysshops. In that councell it was thoughte good of certaine, that a decree should be made, that Prestes and all other spirytuall Mynysters should departe from theyr maryed wyues, and no more kepe company with them. This deuise seemed good to the Councell. Onely Paphnutius a bleſſed and glorious confessoure, whiche before for the true religion sake had suffered greate paynes and had one of hys eyes thruste out: whiche also wrought greate myracles thorowe the power of God, droue oute Deuels, and healed many dyseases: Stode vp and withstode the whole Councel, although hee him selfe was vnmaryed, and sayde, that the marriage of Prestes was honorable, and that it was pure chastitie for the Prestes to lye with theyr owne wyues. The Councell by this meanes was perswaded, not to make any suche lawe: affirmynge, that it should be a great occasion of whordom both vnto the Prestes and also vnto theyr wyues: So that they dyd greatly alow the sentence and iudgement of this moste worthy Bishoppe and Godly Confessoure.

Furthermore in the yeare of oure Lorde. iii. C. lxxxix. Pope Siricius the first of that name, moued with an euyll spirite, and stourred vp of the Deuyll to set forth the deuilyshe doctrine of the single life of Prestes vnto the vtter defacynge of the honorable Matrimonie of the spirituall Ministers, made a decree, that none should be admytted vnto the office eyther of Deacon or Preste, excepte hee first of all forsware Matrimony, and promised to leade a single life. And that all suche as were all redye maryed and in the Ministerye, should from that time forthe vtterlie forsake the companye of theyr wyues: and that all suche as refused to obey this his decree, should bee deprysed of all their ecclesiasticall lyuynges, and by no meanes bee suffered to come within the Churche, nor to receaue the sacramente of the body and bloud of Christe: nor yet to exercute the leaest office in the Church, no not, so muche as once to bringe a Crewet or Chalice to the Altar: So wycked and abhominable a thing in the sighte of this moste wycked and abhominable Pope, was the maryage of the spirituall Mynysters: yea hee shameth not to saye, many as were determyned to enter into the Ecclesiasticall ministerye, but to lede a single and wyueles life.

Whan this wicked decree of Pope Siricius was published and set abroche, all the worlde in a manner was in an vproar, maruel-

and vtterly dissenered them selues from the Bishop of Roome and from all his trifelinge traditions, as from a common ennemye of God and of all godly men.

The stout and courageous Germaynes, so sone as this wicked decree of the Pope was brought vnto them by the Popes Legate and deliuered vnto them in wrytinge, they violently threw it awaye from them, as a wrytynge full of moste blasphemous doctrine, railynge it the newe learnynge of the Deuyll the inuencion of Antichriste, the destruccion of nature, the desolacyon of Contries, the subuersion of common weales, the fountayne of all wyckednes and sinne. &c. and so handled the Popes Legate and those that were sente with hym for the execucyon of the Popes commission, that they had almoste slayne them in a certayne citie of Germayne called Mentz. The Germaynes.

The Pope perceauinge the stoute stomakes of the Germaynes, and howe vnwyllynge they were to receaue hys decree of single life, fell to curfyng once agayne, and cursed the Germayns with the greate curse, seuen foote aboue the grounde and seuen foote vnder, shutte the boke, do oute the candle, rynge the bell. &c. But the lustie and courageous Germaynes beynge nothing dismayde with the Popes thunderboltes, continued in the lybertie of the Gospell, defended theyr maryage, and by no meanes woulde receaue this wicked and deuilyshe decree of the Pope.

And as touchinge the Spanyardes, although Pope Syrtius playde the craftie and suttell fore with them, yea the wylye Deuyl, sometyme prayeng them, sometyme threatninge them, sometyme exhortinge them, sometyme chidynge them. &c. yet wouldе they by no meanes receaue hys decree, but abhorred it as a doctrine bitterlye repugnaunte to the holye scriptures, and openynge awaye to all dyssolucion of lyfe: In soo muche that a certayne godly learned man called Himerius Bysshoppe of Tariacon wrote vnto the Pope of the matter, greuously rebukynge hym for layenge suche an intollerable yoke vppon hys Brethrens neckes, and prouynge vnto hym by the worde of God, that the mariage of Preestes was lawfull and commendable before GOD, and it is playne wyckednes for man to restrayne that whiche God setteth at lybertye, agayne that in publyshynge this hys decree, he hathe done contrarye to the doctrine of Chryste and of his disciples, and also contrarye to the maniers and practise of all hys godly predecessours, Bysshoppes, Preestes, Deacons. &c. The Spanyardes.

When the Pope perceaued, that his decree wolde not be receaued, neither amonge the Grekes, nor amonge the Germaines, nor among the Spaniardes: he proclaimed the Grekes to be Schismatikes, the Germains to be heretikes, and the Spaniards to be rebels, excommunicating them and adiudging them to hel fire. And as touching the Spaniards, hee gaue fre liberty to all men without punishment or checke to spoyle and take away the goodes and O tyranny.

possessions of all the maried Priestes, and gaue commaundment, that both they, their wyues and their children shuld be driuen out of the countrey, as parsons vnworthy to breath vppon the face of the earth.

But let vs yet more beholde the wickednes of this moste wycked Pope. Whan he perceaued, that his decree of the single life of priestes was vtterly reiected and cast away in all places, almoste, and wold by no meanes be receaued, but was counted of all men, wycked, vngodly, deuilish, vnresonable, intollerable, abhominable, contrary to the word of God & the Canons of the Apostels, thinkinge by this meanes to make the Priestes the more willing to obey his decree: he made another statute, and that was this, that suche as had no wiues, but in the stede of a wife kept a Concubine, shoulde not bee repelled from the Communion, nor be excommunicate, so that one man had but one Concubine or one woman at once.

A wyly and subtel sort.

Oh good god, what an antichrist is this: if this pope be not a deuil incarnat, where is any limme of the deuill to bee founde: to forbyd honorable Matrimony, and to set vp abhominable Lechery: to driue away lawful wiues, and to admit whores: To disalowe godly begoten children, and to alow bastardes: to excommunicate the godly maried Priestes, & to admit vnto the ministery the Chaplens of Priapus: to depriue the holy maried ministers of their spiritual promocions, and to suffer whorehunting Priestes to walow in all kinde of welth and pleasure: To expell from the Ministerie such godly persons as godly liued in the godly state of Matrimony, so that they may not so much as once bring a Crewet or a chalice to the altare: and to receaue monstures defiled with Sodomitrie, incest, fornicacyon, whoredome, and with all other vnclennes vnto the handlinge of the diuine mysteryes: O abhominacion. O more than double wyckednes. This is not to bee Christes, but Antichristes Vicar. This is not to be Simon Peters, but Symon Magus successoure. This is not to bee Seruus seruorum, but Dominus dominorum. To forbyd Matrimony, and to admit whoredome: O Antichryste. Is not this to straine out a gnatte, and to swalowe downe a Cammel: Is not this to transgresse the commaundment of God for the stablyshinge of mans wycked tradicyon: Is not this to bee exalted aboue all that is called God, or that is worshipped: Is not this to sit as GOD in the Temple of GOD, and to shewe hym selfe as GOD: The Lorde destroye Antichriste and his kyngdome: and let all that loue the Lorde, saye Amen.

to mayntayne the lybertie of the Gospell. But in the yeare of our Lorde.cccc.xci. Here began this mischiefe a lytle to take roote: to spring, to growe, and to spreade abrode, but not with suche successe, as the holye Father loked for. Notwithstandyng this wycked degree toke place in manye: Whether throwe the glisterynge Hypocrisie of the Authour and of hys suttle perswasyons, or that the knowledge of the Gospel was greatlye darckened in the spiritual Mynysters, or whether lycencious life was the occasyon thereof, I knowe not. But it shall not bee out of the waye to declare, what frutes folowed this prohybicyon of Prieſtes marriage, that all men maye see and knowe, what and how greate Sea of euyls haue flowed out of this whirlepoole of the single lyfe of Prieſtes.

Saint Huldrych Bythop of Augusta in his Epistle vnto Pope Nicolas the fyrste, whych also laboured with hys decree to bring the Preestes vnto the snare of single lyfe, folowynge his predecessours, lest he shold seeme to be generate from so holy Fathers, telleth this history. Vppon a certayne tyme, sayeth hee, Saint Gregory sente to his pondes for fyshe: and in the nettes that they fyshed withall, were brought vp abonte.vi.thousand yonge childrens heades. The whyche thinge, whan Saint Gregory sawe, stroke hym sore to the heatte, in so muche that he was very heauy of that sighte, and perceaued anon, that hys decree, whyche hee made for Preestes chastitye, was the occasyon of this greate murder, in that the Preestes coulde not lyue sole, nor yet durste they abowe theyr Chyldren for feare of the decree: and so for safegarde of theyr honestie, they fell into an horryble and abhominable synne, euen to kyll theyr owne chyldren.

S. Huldrich Bythop of Augusta.

Note this history well.

And for this cause Sainct Gregory (sayeth this holy Bythop) dyd reuoke hys decree agayne, and dyd greatlye commende the sayinge of the Apostle: It is better to marrye, then to burne: addynge vnto it of hys owne: It is better to marrye, then to geue occasyon of murther. O lamentable history. If so manye younge Babes were murthered in one Popes tyme, yea and that in one Cytie throwe the deuylyshe decree of the single lyfe of Preestes: What Murthers, what slaughters of younge Infantes haue there bene committed throwe oute the Popes kyngdome almoste these thoulande yeares: Oh great is the damnacyon of those bloudye and murtherynge Bythoppes

of Rome, which thorow theyr wycked decrees haue geuen occasyon of so great euylles. That wicked Romishe Sea is not without a cause called of S. Johñ, the mother of whordom and abhominacions of the earth, the habitacion of deuyls, and the holde of all foule spirites, and a cage of all vncleane and hatefull bydes. It was truly sayde of Pope Pius: there are dyuers causes, why mariage should bee taken away from Prestes: but there are many mo causes, why maryage ought to be restored vnto them. This Pope sawe the greate inconueniences, as many other good and godlye men dyd like wyse, which sprynge oute of the wycked decree of the Prestes single life, and therfore wyshed hee, that maryage might be restored to the Pryestes. But so harde harted and stiffe necked is that wycked Sea of Rome, that no miserable chaunces, no horrour of sinne, no daunger of saluacion, no decaye of godlynes can moue her to repent, and to seke a redresse of these such and so great euyls, and to call backe agayne that deuylyshe decree of that syngle lyfe of Prestes, that the Prestes frely enioyeng lawfull matrimony, may lyue bothe before God and man with quiet and merye consciences, and with the more chereful hartes attende vpon theyr ministery: which thinge notwithstandynge maye lawfully bee done euen by the sentence and iudgement of the Popes owne doctours. For Panarmitanus sayeth playnly, that the Churche maye call backe agayne the decree of the single lyfe of Prestes, and restore agayne to the spirytuall Mynysters the lybertie of maryage, euen as the Grekes haue euer had. Hee saieth moreouer that continency or single life in secular Prestes is not of the substaunce of the order, nor of the lawe of God: For then shoulde the Grekes greatly offende, neither could custome excuse them: for custome is of no strength against the lawe of God. Agayne he saith: I do not only beleue, that the Churche hathe power to graunte matrimonye to Prestes, but I beleue also, that it should bee an wholsom ordinaunce for the welth and healthy of soules, that such as bee able to lyue single and vnmaryed, should bee lefte to theyr owne wyl: and that they whiche cannot containe, might marrye. For experience teacheth, that a contrary effect doth folow of that lawe of single life: seinge that Prestes now a dayes liue not spirytually, neither are they clene, but defiled with whordome & vnlawful company kepynge vnto theyr greate damnacion: where as if they kepte company with theyr owne wyues, they should lyue honestly and purely. In consideracion wherof, the Church ought to do like a good Phisicion, which taketh away the medecine, if he see by experyence, that the medecine do more harme than good. S. Thomas Aquinas the blacke Frier agreeth with Panarmitanus and saieth, that forasmuch as the vowe of single life is not essencially annexed to the solemnitie of Prestehode, but onely accidentally and by the ordynaunce of the Church: the Church may right wel dispence with such a vowe, notwithstading the consecracio. &c

Of this iudgement also is Joānes Antonius Durandus, with diuers other: and experience teacheth, that the Churche maye dispense with the vowe of continency, and restore Matrimonye to the preests: seing that the Pope hath diuerse times dispensed not onely with seculare Preestes, but also with Monkes and Nonnes and hath licensed them frely to marye, as histories make mencio. But let vs returne vnto suche, as haue laboured to bring in this single lyse of Preestes, and heare howe they haue ben frome tyme to tyme resisted of good and godly men.

Aboute the yeare of oure Lorde. viii. C. lrii. Pope Nicolas the firste attempted the like enterprice, and stoutely wente aboute to stablishe the wicked decree of the single lyse of Preestes. But he preuayled not: For saincte Huldriche bishop of Augusta resisted hym, & greuously rebuked hym, because he wolde compell the Preestes to vowe chastitie, and to lyue vnmarryed, contrarie to Gods worde and the practise of Christes churche. Hys wordes are these, longe, but profitable and pleasaunte to be hearde.

The Epistle of S. Huldrich

Bishop of Augusta, vnto Nicolas bishop of Rome, the firste of that name, concerninge the single lyse of Preestes.

Vnto Nicolas hys lorde and father, and moste diligent ouerseear of the holy Churche of Rome, Huldriche by name onely a Bishop, oweth loue as a Sonne, and feare as a Seruaunt.

When I of late (O father and Lorde) founde thy decrees, whiche were sente ouer vnto me, concerninge the single lyse of Preestes, bitterly estraunged frome all discretion and wisedome, a certayn feare truly with sorowe did vexe and sore trouble me. Feare, because of that, that is comonly sayde: The sentence of a Pastore is to be feared, whether it be right or wrange. For I feared the weake hearers of the scripture, whiche scasely obey euen a iuste sentence: as for the brutishe, that treade vnder foote, least they of their owne accorde shoulde bynde themselues to a lawe, heauy and not hable to be borne thorow the ouersight and euil disposition of the Pastore. Sorowe or compassion: while I doubted, howe the membres shuld take heede to the selues, seinge their headde was troubled with so greuous disease. For what can be more greuous, what more worthye to be pitied of the whole Churche, than that thou being the Bishop of the highest See (vnto the which appertayneth the eramination ligent aiders. But that thou mayest know, that suche as are free from this bowe, are not to be compelled: heare the Apostle speaking vnto Timothe: A Bishop, sayeth he, muste be sauteles, the husbād of one wyfe. And because no mā shuld waste & writeth it to one Churche or beneficehe added vnto it. He that can not rule his owne house: how shall he gouerne the congregation of God? Likewise sayeth he, let the Deacons be the husbandes of one wife which can well rule their chyldren & their houses. Verely I know that thou arte sufficiently taughte by the decrees of S. Syluester Pope, that a Priest maie lawfully marye a wyfe. Vnto these and such lyke sentences of the scripture, the writers of the rule of Priestes agreing not without a cause sayth: A Priest ought to be chaste, or at the least, linched with the bonde of one Matrimony. Of all the whiche thinges he doethe truly gather, that a Bysshop & Deacon are noted to be worthy blame, if they be denided in many women: but if they refuse one vnder pretexte of religion, here the Canonicall sentence doeth condemne bothe Bishop and Deacon without difference of degrees. A Bishop or Priest ought not to caste of his owne wyfe vnder the pretence of religion: For if he so do: he ought to be excommunicate, and if he continewe, to be deposed. S. Augusten also a man not ignorante of holy direccion, sayeth: There is no euill so greuous, but it maye be admitted to eschewe a worse. We rede also in the second boke Tripartita historia, that when the counsayll of Nice would haue stablished the self same decrees, that is to saie, that Bishops, Priestes, and Deacons after their consecration should eyther vtterly abstayne from their owne wyues or els be put frome their degrees, Paphnutius rysinge vp in the middest of the yea, beinge one of those martirs, whiche Maximus the Emperour, their right eyes beyng plucked out, and their lifte legges mangled, did condemne, spake against it, confessing marriage to be honorable, and affirming, chastitie to be the lyinge or company kepynge with a mans owne wyfe: and perswaded the counsayll, that they should make no suche lawe: affirminge the cause to be greuous, seinge that it might be either vnto them or vnto their wyues an occasion of whoredome. And this did Paphnutius declare, although he hym selfe was vnmarried.

And the counsayl cōmended hys iudgemente, & decreed nothing in that behalf, but left the matter in euery mans will, and made it not a thyng of necessitie. Moreouer there are some, that take S. Gregorie to be an heaty to their sect: as whose foliih rashns I laugh, & yet do lamēt their ignoras. For that know not, the perilous decree of this heresie, made by S. Gregory was afterwarde with worthy fruite of repentance, purged by hym selfe. For vpō a certayn daye when he had cast his nette into his pōde or stewe for fishe, & sawe more,

thinges by the compassion of true iustice, or at the least monyshe though thei were their seruāts, & compell them to abstayne.

And vnto this so folish & so lewde suggestiō of their Lordines, I will not say counsayl, they adde this, & saye: It is more honestie, secretly to be intangled with many whores, than openly in the face and knowledge of men to be bounde with one wife. Which thing vndoubtedly, thei wolde neuer say, if they were of him & in him ỹ saieth: Wo be vnto you ye

Timothe: that in the latter dayes some shal departe from the faith, geuing hede vnto spirites of errour, and vnto the doctrine of deuils whiche speake lyes thorow hypocrisie, hauing a conscience marked with an hote yron, forbidding to marrye. Verely this is, if it be diligently considered, the handefull of all their cockell, and the totte of all their madnes, that whyle the Priestes being ouercome with a Pharisaicall furoure (whiche thyng God forbid) are compelled to forsake the lawful company of one woman, they become whoremon-

Forasmuche

Forasmuche therfore as no man (O Apostolike father) that knoweth thee, is so ignorant, but that if thou haddest aforesene by the clerenes of thy sounde discrection, that so greate a plage shoulde haue folowed thorow the making of thy decree: thou wouldest neuer haue consented vnto so euill suggestions of any manner of persons: we by the fidelitie of oure subiections due vnto thee, counsayll thee, that now are the least that laye watche to put awaye so great a slaunder from the Churche of God, and by thy discrete learninge (as thou knowest how) to plucke vp by the rootes out, of the heard of God, the doctrine of the Pharisees: least the only dearling of ꝑ Lord, vsing longer adulterous housbandes, plucke awaye the holy nacion, the royall priesthode by an vnrecouerable diuorce from her dere spouse, that is to say Christe: seing that noman without purenes or chastitie, not only in ꝑ floure of virginitie, but also in the knotte of Matrimony, shall se oure Lorde: which with God the Father and the holy Ghoste lyueth & reigneth worldes without ende. Amen.

Who seeth not now, with what a feruent and Jelous spirite, this holy Bishoppe and blessed S. Huldrych rebuketh the Bishoppe of Rome for his wicked tradicion of the single lyfe of Priestes, callinge it a doctrine vtterly estraunged from all discrecion & wysedome: a law heauy and not able to be borne: a priuate decree contrary to the ordinaunce of the Gospel and the decree of the holy Ghoost: heresye: a perillous decre of heresye: the cause of murther: a doctrine cõtrary to the truth, the doctrine of deuilles: an occasion of whordome, adulterye, incest, Sodomitrye, company keping with the male kynde and with brute beastes: a greate slaunder or stomblynge blocke: the doctrine of Pharisees. &c. And in hys second Epistle, whiche he also wrote of that matter vnto certayne Bishoppes, whiche consented to the wicked decree of Pope Nicolas, and in the which he mightely impugneth the deuelyshe tradicion of the single lyfe of Priestes, specially beynge made a matter of necessitie and not leaste vnto the libertie of mannes will, he hathe these woordes: Greuous synnes sprynge oute of the decree of the enforced chastitie of Priestes. For in that they are compelled to leaue the naturall wedlocke of one woman, they fall into suche whordome as is vnnaturall and agaynste nature, euen the very damnable vnclennes of Sodomitrye: so that they refusinge the lawfull vse of a wyfe, damnably and execrably agaynst all lawe polute and defyle other mennes wyues, and tumble them selues into al kynde of whorish and beastly loue, and snarle them selues with such vnclennes, as by no meanes is to be named: yea moreouer thorow the suggestion of Sathan, they defile theym selues with suche abhominable inceste, as all menne abhorre: in so muche that some of theym, whiche haue ben compelled to lede a single lyfe, haue ben founde moste shamefully to abuse their owne naturall mothers and sisters: and by thys meanes they haue thrown them selues headlonge into the hellyth pytte of euerlasting damnation. Agayne he saith: If the Apostle doo licence and sufker euery man to haue a wyfe of his owne for auoydinge of whordome, why then are not we Priestes, whiche are made of thesame Masse, and haue receyued synfull flesshe of the synfull flesshe of Adam, and can not contayne, for thesame cause and 1. And as this Pope Nicolas, against whom this holy Bishop wrote, laboured to take away matrimony from the Priestes, and yet preuayled not: so likewise diuers Popes after hym attempted the lyke enterprise (for the deuill and hys chaplen Antichriste neuer sleape, but alwayes go vp & doune musing of mischief) but they brought nothinge vnto effect greatly in this behalf. For the reuerend Bishops & godly Priestes, which at that time lyued, were men approued both in learning and lyfe, & in singulare great estimation with all men. And as they were learned & in lyfe blameles, so were they stoute, valeaunt & courageous in the defence of Gods trueth, & in this behalf feared neither kyng nor Kesar, Pope nor Cardinal, nor any other, although of moste high authoritie: but whosoeuer wente aboute to suppresse the worde of God & the libertie of the Gospel: him straightwaies they resisted with ỹ sweard of the spirite, ỹ is to say, ỹ worde of God, & wold by no meanes geue place, come pleasur or displeasure, fauoure or disfauour, lucre or losse, lyfe or death: so greatly was God and the glorie of hys holy name: the worde of God & the truth of thesame: the Gospell of Christ & the libertie therof dere & pleasaūt vnto them. And thus continued the matter concerning the maryage of Priestes, nowe on, nowe of, tyll ỹ great Dragō of Rome Pope Gregory the .vii. other wise called Hyldebrāde, a pestilēt man, a mān, yea rather a mōsture of euil lyuing, a great Nigromancer, a very familiar with the deuil, & suche and so horrible lompe of wickednes, as had poysoned foure or fyue Popes before, that he myght the sonet come vnto the Papacye hym self, bear rule. Whan this man of synne, Prince in all kynde of vice, ambicion, crueltiy, lecherye, &c. had gotten Antichrists seate and occupyed the chayre of pestilence: streightewayes lyke a stoute Champion and a lustye rusflare, he toke thys matter in hande, directed hys letters to the Bishoppes of euery countrey, sente oute hys Legates with commission, not onely to forbidde that from thencefoorthe, none that woulde enter into the ministerye shoulde by any meanes attempte marryage: But also that the Priestes, whyche were all ready marryed, shoulde bee also deuorced fro me theyr wyues, or elles to be or elles to be stricken out of hande with the terrible thunderclappe of the greate curse: the high indignacion of God, of our Ladye and of all Saintes, and specially of Peter and Paule added thereunto for so many as woulde resiste the holy procedinges of the moste holy father, and not gladly leane and consent to the determination of our mother holy Churche. And besides many other hys letters sent vnto diuers Bishops for the hastye dispatche of his moste wicked purpose he directed hys letters also vnto Otto bishop of Constance streyghly charging and commaunding hym vnder the vertue of obedience, yea vnder paine of the great curse, that out of hande his decree comming from the Apostolyke See, yea & that not without the cõsent of the colledge of Cardinales and of many other holy Prelates, (the Masse of ỹ holy Ghost with Veni creator Spiritus, beinge very deuoutly songe before) shoulde be published and notified thorow out all hys diocesse: the contentes whereof was thys: that all suche Priestes, as were yet vnmarried, shoulde by no meanes marrye after the notification of the holy Fathers decree: agayn that those Priestes, whiche were all redy married shoulde be separate from their wyues, notwithstandinge thys saying of Christe: That whiche God hath ioyned together: let not man put a sunder. Bishoppe Otto receyuing and redinge the Popes letters, marueled not a litle at hys wicked decree, beinge so contrary to the lawe of God and nature, and vtterly estraunged from the right rule of reason, and repugnante to ỹ auncient vse and practise of Christes church from the begynninge: in so muche that he by no means woulde accomplishe the Popes mynde, nor obeye hys commaundemente: but freely suffered, as before, the marryed Priestes to remayne styll with their wyues, and denied not the libertie of marryage to suche Priestes, as were yet vnmarried.

O Antichryste.

Math. xix.

The Pope vnderstandinge this, playde the deuill spede hym, and was not a litle madde: seing that so holy a decree comminge frome so holy a father and for so holy a purpose coulde not be receyued. The Pope therefore to shewe hys greate mercye and clemencye, his lenitie and longe sufferinge, accordinge to hys olde custome, cursed Bishop Otho for not executing hys cõmaundement in forbidding ỹ maryage of Priestes, and discharged hys Subiectes, euen so many as were in hys Diocesse, of their duties and obedience towarde hym, and cyted hym to appere before hys holynes at Rome by a certayne daye, there to make answere to suche obiections, as shoulde be layde agaynste hym: where the Pope that Antechrist with hys Antichristiane adherentes beinge assembled, hadde decreed amonge other thinges, that from henceforth Priestes should not marrye: and that suche as had marryed, shoulde eyther out of hand putte awaye their wyues, or elles be vtterly expelled from all Ecclesiasticall offices: agayne, that no man shoulde receyue holy orders afterwarde, excepte he fyrste of all sweare to lyue single and vnmaryed. This decree of the single lyfe of Priestes, so sone as the counsayl was dissolued, was published thorow out Italy: where although many spake against it, yet it was receyued: yea and that so muche the more, because the Pope had goten the good will & cõsent of many Italiã Bishops & priests in this behalf: again because they were nerest ỹ wolfs mouth, & in most daũger to be spoyled.

But whan thys moſt wicked, damnable and deuelish decree, of the ſingle lyfe of Prieſtes was ſent to the Biſhopes of Fraunce, and they en-Note. ioyced to obey theſame, wil they, nyll they, and to publiſh it to the Prie-ſtes of their Dioceſſes: the Clergye of Fraunce boldly and ſtoutly with-ſtode the Popes decree, and with one voyce cryed, that that counſayl, which the Pope had gathered at Rome for the condemnatiō of Prie-ſtes marriage, was directly againſt gods holy word: & that the Biſhop of Rome tooke that thing awaye from Prieſtes, whiche bothe God and nature had graunted them: and therfore ſayde they, the Biſhop of Rome was an heretike, and the Author of a wicked doctrine: yea & that by the ſuggeſtion, not of the holy Ghoſte, but of the deuill hym ſelfe: & moreouer they ſaide, that his decree was contrary to this ſay-

not abſtayne, let hym marie: and contrary alſo bothe to the Canons
1. Cor. vii. of the Apoſtles and of Nicene counſayll. Furthermore the Clergye founde faulte with the Pope, that he woulde haue them contrary to the order of nature, lyue lyke Aungels without the company of women, and that he had alſo by this decree opened a wyndowe to whor-dome and all vnclennes: in ſo muche that they aunſwered with one voyce, ỹ they had rather loſe their benefices, then to forſake (agaynſt the woorde of God) their lawfull wyues. And (ſayde they) if maryed Prieſtes be ſuch an eye ſore in the Popes ſight, then let hym call Aun gels doune from heauen to be miniſters in the Churche. All theſe honeſt and godly reaſons, all theſe authorities of the holy ſcripture, with the godly decree of the holy Nicene counſail moued this wicked & Antichriſtiane Biſhop of Rome nothing at all, but as toforе, ſo like-wiſe now he perſiſted ſtyll in his damnable purpoſe, and woulde by no meanes geue ouer this his hereſie and doctrine of the deuill. He went forth continually to moue the mindes of the Biſhoppes with ſwarmes of Embaſſadours, and ſending of letters thicke and three-folde, accuſinge them for their ſlacknes and negligence, & alſo threatning them with the plage of hys curſe, and with the depriuacion of their Biſhoprikes and all other Eccleſiaſticall dignities, vnles they brought this matter to paſſe out of hande, and compelled the Prie-ſtes to obey his decree. By this meanes it came to paſſe at the laſt, that a great number of Biſhoppes being enforced by this tirāny of the Biſhoppe of Rome, and for feare of loſinge their ſpirituall pro-mocions, conſented to the Pope, and laboured vnto the vttermooſte of their power to perſwade the Prieſtes to forſake their wyues, and to bowe chaſtitie. But it was long before the Prieſtes were perſwaded: yea ſome of them woulde neuer agree to the Popes wicked decre, ſo long as they liued.

And as this wicked Biſhoppe of Rome addreſſed his letters to Otto Biſhoppe of Conſtance, and to the Biſhoppes of Fraunce: ſo lyke-wiſe ſent he his commiſſion to the Archebiſhoppe of Mentz, as primate of Germany, that he ſhoulde compell the married Prieſtes to forſake their wyues, and to cauſe all other Prieſtes to bowe chaſtitie.
But the Archebiſhoppe of Mentz perceyuinge that it woulde bee a weighte

weightye and no easy thinge to compasse, to take marryage cleane awaye from the Priestes of hys diocesse: fyrste he admonished theym frendly of thys Romishe decree, geuinge theym halfe a yeates respite for to consulte vppon the thing, and aduertisinge theym earnestly to obey the Bishoppe of Rome and hym: and that they wouldе of theym selues willingly doo that thynge, whiche they shoulde in conclusion, will they nyll they, be constrayned to doo: otherwise he shoulde be enforced to attempte some thinge more greuous agaynste them.

The halfe yeare beynge expired, the Archebishop called a conuocation at the vniuersitie of Erfordе a cytye in Germanye where he required an aunswere of the Prieستes, exhortinge theym to obeye the Bishoppe of Romes decree, eyther vtterly to forsake and forbeare marryage, or elles to leue of their ecclesiasticall ministerie. The Prieستes boldely and stoutely defended their marryage with the woorde of God, with reasons, with sayinges of counsayls, with the examples of their forefathers, and with a number of vnanswerable argumentes, whereby they proued, that the sayde Popishe decree was nothinge to be esteemed, but to be of all men worthely reiected: addinge moreouer, that they had rather dye, than forsake their wyues contrary to Gods lawe. But the Bishoope nothinge at all moued eyther with the scriptures, reasons, counsayles or otherwise, whiche the Prieستes alledged for the maintenaunce of their marryage; was earnest in settingfoorthe the Popes commaundement, and willed them all scriptures and reasons set a parte to obeye the Popes decree: so shoulde their acte be thanke woorthy at the holy fathers handе: otherwise euen of forse they shoulde be compelled to obey thereunto.

The Clergye perceyuing, that ther coulde be no meanes made to compasse their Bishop and to make hym their frende, that he might leaue of & geue ouer so wicked a cause, neyther by disputation, neither yet by intreatie: they withdrew them selues a litte from the counsayll as purposinge to consulte vppon the matter: some thoughte not good to returne into the counsaill, and some other thoughte it was good to returne, and plucke the Archebishoppe oute of hys chayre by the eares, handelinge hym as he had deserued, that there mighte a notable testimonie remayn to their posteritie of hys worthye deathe on that sorte, so that all his successours mighte take ensample by hym to beware howe they tooke awaye suche priuileges and liberties from the Clergie. But the Archebishoppe had his frendes and spyes abroad, whiche vnderstanding the entent of the Prieستes that weente out, made reporte vnto hym of all the matter. The Archebishoppe hearinge hyrs, immediatly sent certayne of his frendes to the Prieستs that woere without, for to counsaill them to conceyue a good opinio of their Bishop, and to bidde them quietly to returne agayn into the counsayll. They were contented and returned. Than the Archebishoppe before them all confessed, that he was compelled of the Bishoppe of Rome, and that he could no les do, but publish and declare vnto theym the Popes mynde in this behalf. Notwithstandinge he made promise, that he would do the best he could to chaunge the Bishop of Romes mynde, bidding them in the meane season to returne to their cures, and to remayn in their bodye ministerie & liuinges, as they dyd afore.

The Archebishop signified by his letters all these things to the Pope and sought all meanes possible, that the decree of the single lyfe of Priestes might be revoked and called backe agayne. But the Pope continued styll one, that is to saye, playne Antichriste, and wolde not in any wyse chaunge hys mynde. Scripture, reason, counsayll, argu-ments, authorities of the auncient fathers, practises of Christes pri-matiue Churche, olde custome, &c. coulde doo nothinge with the holy Father. The holy Father hath spoke the worde: it must nedes there-fore take place, though all that is God or godly be agaynst it. Chri-stes vicar and Peters successour, contrary to the doctrine of Christe and Peter, wil all Priestes to lyue vnmarried, though they haue not the gift of continency: it must therefore be obeyed. And to stablish this hys wicked decree in all haste, this furious Romish Bishop the nexte yeare folowynge, sent downe hys Legate, the Bishop of Curye with hys letters and commaundementes to the Archebishoppe of Mentz, chargynge hym with all expedition to dispatche the matter out of the waye, that the Priestes myght eyther geue ouer their wyues or elles their benefices, and that from henceforthe in perpetuum et vltra, none shoulde be admitted vnto the ministery, excepte he firste of all vowed chastitie. The Archebishoppe immediatly called a counsayll at Mentz, in the whiche he once agayne propounded the Popes decree concerning the single lyfe of Priestes, commaundynge the Clergye vn-der payn of cursynge, that they woulde immediatly in that presente Synode, eyther vtterly forsake their wyues, or elles their ministerye for euer. The clergy pleaded their owne cause boldely, alledging both scriptures, counsayles and reason for their maryage. But none of thys geare woulde go for payment: for Sit dolo sic iubeo, sit pro ratione voluntas, muste nedes take place: in so muche that whan they perceyued, that none of all these thinges would help, they fel vnto intreatie and inter-cession. But all in vayne. The Popes pleasure muste be fulfilled. No-thynge maye be denyed to so holy a father. The Priestes perceyuing that theyr aunswere could not be heard nor any thing be alleged, that might take place, but that they should be compelled by the tyranny of the Bishop of Rome, to obeye, gathered them selues together, and made sodaynly a great tumulte: whetin the ruffelinge was so violent and with suche force, that bothe the Popes Imbassadoure and the Archebishoppe were in suche ieopardye, that they escaped verye hardely with their lyues oute of the conuocation house: And so the counsayll brake vp. The Archebishop perceyuynge and featinge the daunger of the matter, woulde medle nomore with it, but committed altogether to the Bishop of Rome, therein to doo, what he shoulde thinke good. But he woulde neyther heare scripture, neyther reason, neyther counsail, neither any auncient writer sens the Apostles time. Hys Eares were stopped agaynst all reasons, whiche were contrary to hys opinion. He heaped vp hys thonderbolles of cursinges and excommunications vppon all theym, that woulde not obey thys say-enge of hys: We will, charge, and strayghtely commaunde you.

He went forth on like him self, without all feare of God, without all reuerence to the holy scriptures, as a horne woode beast for the main-tainaince of his deuylysh decree, pretendynge alwayes a zeale to cha-

stitie, that he might the safelyer liue without suspicion in his accustomed lecherous life, wherevnto the historyes do plenteously entreate: not only he, but also all hys smered shorelynges, whych receaued the beastes marke, and embraced hys wycked decree. Notwithstandyng this babilonycall, boysterous, bocherlye bitesheep coulde not out of hande bryng this his deuilyshe purpose vnto effect, but was compelled maugre his beарde to tary a conuenyent time, till he had gotten certayne Bysshoppes and Prystes on his side. In the meane season the congregacions dyd chuse vnto them spirytuall Ministers of theyr owne accorde agreably to the doctrine of the Apostle: neither sent they them to the bishops to be admitted, consecrated, greased, docked, shorē & shauē but after they were chosen, they them selues appointed them vnto the holye Ecclesiasticall offices with the imposicion of handes and prayer accordinge to the vse and practise of Christes primatiue Churche. For the most parte of the Bysshops had geuen ouer to the Bysshop of Rome for feare of loosinge theyr lyuinges: so that they admytted none vnto the Ministery, excepte hee firste of all made a solemne vowe, that hee would neuer marry, but lyue a single lyfe accordyng to the Popes decree. Notwithstandynge in procesle of tyme the Deuyll and the Pope with theyr Antichristian adherentes driue awaye the holye and honorable Matrimony of the mynisters and Prestes out of the Church of God, and stablyshed the filthy, stinckynge, vile and abhominable single life of Prestes with great violence and extreme tiranny.

But behold the frutes of this deuylishe decree of Pope Gregory, confirmynge the compelled chastitie of Prestes. Euerye good tree sayeth our Sauiour Christe, bryngeth forthe good frute. But a corrupte tree bryngeth forth corrupte frute. In all suche partes of Italy, Fraunce, Germayne, &c. as this wycked decree of the Pope had taken place, thet was suche abhomination committed of the Prestes, suche fornycacion, such whordome, such aduiltery, suche incest, such sodomitry, such embracinge of brute beastes, suche abusinge of them selues after prodigious sortes, that it is to wonderfull to tell. Mens wyues were corrupted, mens daughters were defloured, mens sonnes were abused wydowes were defyled, brute beastes were embraced, the deade sinne of the Sodomytes was practised: no kynde of vnclennes was there, whyche was not attempted of the newe votaryes thorowe the prohibicyon and forbiddyng of lawful wyues. Honestie of life, and vncorruption of manners was nowe become farre from the Prestes. Vycious lyuinge and all wyckednes of conuersacyon was verye familiar wyth them. Prestes, whyche before were had in greate reuerence for theyr integrytie of life and honest conuersacyon in wedlocke, are now vtterly despysed, and eschewed as whoremongers and vycious parsons. No man gladly beholdeth them: admytteth them vnto theyr talke: nor requyreth them into theyr companye. Theyr doctrine is contemned and despised: what they speake, is spoken in vayne. They are now become verye plages and pestylences of the common weale, and vnprofytable cloddes of the earthe. These were the frutes of Pope Gregories decree verely frutes worthy of suche tree. A good man, sayth Christe, brute of the good treasure of hys hearte, bryngeth forth good thinges. And an euill man oute of his euill treasure bryngeth forthe euill thinges.

Mach. vii.

Frutes worthy such a decree.

ges. If fornicacion, whordom, aboutrie, incest, sodomytrie, embrasing of brute beastes, corruption of mens wiues, deflouring of mens daughters, abusing of mens sonnes, defiling of wyddowes. &c. be euell thinges: Who seeth not then, what an euil man this Pope Gregory was, from whom so large a sea of euyls haue flowed: Verely he is not without a cause reported and described of the Historiographers to be a monsture of wyckednes and a very organe or instrumente of Satan. And who seeth not here, what it is to leaue the ordinaunce of God and to folowe mans idle deuyses. The Pope was able to forbyd Priestes matrimony: but the Pope was not able to geue them the gifte of chastitie. But in takynge awaye from the Preestes that whiche was lawfull bothe by the lawe of God and nature: the Pope droue them into such inconuenyentes as were vnlawful both by the lawe of god and nature, to bee shorte, whan the Pope throwe hys wycked decree had brought into the worlde suche and so greate a dunghill of synne (the stincke whereof corrupted the ayer and offended the senses of al good and godly men, as I maye speake nothinge of the kindlinge of gods wrath agaynste the practysers of suche vnclennes) and yet would not call backe agayne hys wycked decree and restore Matrimonye vnto the Preestes, after the example of Pope Gregorye the firste, whereof wee heard before but rather laboured daply more and more to stablish his deuilish law of the single lyfe of Preestes, though he euydently sawe, howe many and howe greate euyls dyd springe thereof, and howe innumerable soules perished throwe that hys moste wycked decree: hee to remedie this so greate an euyll, made certaine decrees agaynste the whordom of Preestes, against the Priestes keping of concubines, against Priestes bastards, against the hearing of that Priestes maisse, whiche kepte concubynes or lyued in whordome. &c. thinckynge by this meanes to haue remedyed well the matter: whan the only remedie of these so greate euyls had bene the restitucyon of Matrimonye, which he most vniustly had taken awaye from the Preestes. But the Priestes notwithstanding all these decrees of the Pope, forasmuch as marryage was denyed them, went forth daply from time to time, from age, to age, to defile them selues with all kynde of moste filthy vnclennes: so impossyble a thinge is it to stryue agaynste God and nature. I knowe, sayeth the wyse man, that I cannot lyue chaste, excepte God geue mee the gifte. And our Sauiour Christe saieth: All cannot awaye with this sayinge: but to whom it is geuen. Therefore saith S. Paule to auoyde fornication let euerye man haue hys owne wife: & euery woman her owne husband. Againe, if thou take a wyfe, thou sinnest not. Likewyse if a Virgine marry, shee sinneth not.

But let vs leaue these forrayne Histories, and come neaer home, that wee maye see, howe the Pope also euen in this oure Realme of Englande hathe playde the deuyll speed hym, in forbyddynge the marryage of Preestes, and the vyghte Antichrist, enemye to God and to all godlynes.

Albeit the Bishops of England at the desire of the Romyth Bishoppe from time to time haue done theyr endeuour to molest, trouble & disquyet the marryed Preestes, and to take away the lybertie of Matrimonie from them: yet coulde they not greatly preuayle at anye tyme.

till within these fewe hundred yeares: God alwayes stirring vp some godly learned men to defende the libertie of Preistes Matrimony a- Of the Preistes of England.
gainste the aduersaryes therof. In kinge Edgares dayes Dunstone a superstitious and Idolatrous Monke, a monstre geuen to the art of Deuilles, I meane, a plaine Nicromancier, and not withstanding Archebyshop of Canterbury, and after hys death canonized a Saint of the Romishe Bishop for the good seruice that he did in his life time to the seate of Antichriste, sought all meanes possyble to condemne the matryage of Preistes, and to compell them to vowe chastity, and so for euer after to lyue vnmarryed. But many good, godly and learned men valeauntlye and stoutly resisted his wycked enterpryse: Imonge whom a Scottishe Bysshoppe called Wolfelinus, was one: whiche mightely bothe with scriptures, reasons, argumentes, Cannons, councels authorities of Doctours, examples of manye godlye men, &c. defendinge the Matrimony of Preistes, ouercame Monke Dunstan in disputacyon, and for a tyme droue hym from his purpose and put hym to silence. But this wycked and monstruous Monke and antichristiane Archbyshop could not be quiet, til he had brought his wycked, monstruous and Antichristiane purpose to passe: so neuer sleapeth the Deuill, till he haue accomplished his entent: And because he wold go formally to worke, and nomore suffer repulse: suttilye and craftilie he attempted first of all the Kyng in this behalfe, and at the last thorow his paynted persuasions and fleashly reasons, he obtayned the Kynges good wyll. Dunstane was a mery man, and now he began to conceaue a good hope of bringinge hys purpose to passe. Dunstãs deuylysh deuices in settinge forthe the single life of Preistes.

Notwithstandinge that this his purpose mygyte take the better effecte accordynge to the common prouerbe, surely bynde, surely fynde: he thought it bothe good and necessarye to wryte vnto the moste holy father of Rome (nothyng doubtinge of hys bente and redy good wyll in this behalfe. This holy Fathers name was John the. xiii.) Letters with all humylitie worthy such a father were sent, yea and those well packed vp with no smal sum of monye. The holy father receaued all thinges both ioyfully and thanckfully, largely grauntinge whatsoeuer was desired: beynge very glad, that he had so faythfull and catholike Sonne in so farre contreies, yea and him also an Archbyshop, a Metropolitane and Primate of all England. The Bull came from Rome with all solemnitie, brynggynge with it from the holye Father Salutem et Apostolicam benedictionem. The Bull was receaued with great ioye and glee of all the Papistes. The Bull was publyshed vnto the great dolour and sorow of all good men: yea and that so muche the more, because it was fortressed with ꝑ kinges authoritie. And for the due execucio of this Bull, Mõke Dunstane ioyned vnto him two other Monkes, Oswald Archebyshop of Yorke, and Ethelwalde Bysshop of Winchester. Those thre with their complices gathered a coun- Monche.
cel for the reformacion, as the hipocrites pretended, of certaine greate abuses creapt into the Church concerning matters of relygion. But the trueth was: theyr flockinge together, was onely to dispatche the Preistes of theyr wyues, and to bringe in the Popes decree of the single life of Preistes, and to expel the maryed Prebendaryes out of the Cathedral Churches and other Colledges. The matter is in hande.

Hete is neither cost, nor labour spared to bring a mysthete to passe.

The

The Bull is brought forth and red in the Synode, sent from the holy Father and confirmed with the Kynges Auctoritie. The matter of the mariage of Preestes is proponed. A disputation is had. Preestes Matrimony is defended with holy scripture, with inuincible reasons, with stronge and mighty argumentes, with auncient Canons, with generall counceils, with graue authorities of the holy Doctours, with vertuous examples of many godly men. &c. as wee sayde a lytle before: so that the thre Monkes with all theyr Monckyly Moncheries were not able to answere. Notwithstanding the authoritie of the Pope and of the Kynge was so greate, that certayne Prebendaryes, which were named secular Canons, were enforced, among other, eyther to forsake theyr wyues, or els to be thrust out of theyr Cathedrall Churches, and so to lose theyr liuinges. The godly Prebendaryes fearynge God and standynge in awe of his holye ordynaunce, chosed rather to lose theyr Prebendes, than to put away theyr lawfull wyues. By this meanes came it to passe, that the Prebendaryes were banished oute of diuers Cathedral Churches & Coleges, as Winchester, Worcetter, and suche like: and that onely because they were maryed. And in steade of those honest and godly maryed Preestes, whiche were good Ministers and Preachers of Gods worde: Moncke Dunstane, Moncke Oswalde, Moncke Ethelwalde with theyr adherentes brought into the aforesaid most vniustly and against all right, monstruous monckes, bealyed hipocrites and vile lecherous lubbers, yea stinckyng Sodomites and greasie Gomorreans, and gaue them the possessions of the godly maryed Preestes, which for theyr maryage sake against all law were thruste out of theyr houses and liuinges with theyr poore wyues, miserable chyldren and careful families. O Antichristiane acte. These thinges were done about the yeare of our lord. M.C.xxv. Notwithstandinge the maryage of Preestes continued in this Realme of Englande stil vnto the Reigne of King Henry the first. In the seconde yeare of hys reigne Anselmus a Monke and Archbyshoppe of Canterbury about the yeare of our lord. M.C.ii. Pachalis the second being Pope, gathered a Councel at London for the condemnacion of Preestes maryage. Some Hipocrites semed wel to alow his enterpryse: some other of the better and more godly sorte did vtterly condemne it as a newe errour and a playne doctrine of deuyls. For as historyes make mencion, it semed at that time a verye straunge matter to heare the maryage of Preestes forbidden. For the Preestes were neuer denied to marie before that day, as Henricus Huntingdonensis writeth. Notwithstanding this wycked enterpryse of that most wycked Antichristiane Archbyshop dyd so preuayle, that through the glisteringe vilar of this hipocrisy, counterfaite holynes, carnal reasons, craftie perswasyons, as I may speake nothing of his partly manacing, partly flatteringe wordes, the mariage of Preestes began generally to cease, all Preests takinge holde vpon them the single life and professing chastitie: beynge perswaded, that by this meanes they shold greatly merite, and haue the greater reward in the kingdom of heaue: when, to say the trueth, Virginitie before God deserue no more, then Matrimony: yea matrimony before God is of no les excellencie and dignitie, than Virginitie is, forasmuche as they are both the gifte of God. But beholde the stutes of this wycked decree of Ancelmus that Antichristian Archbyshop of Canterbury. Immediatly after the publishing of this constitucion of the single life of prests, there brast in great floudes, yea whole Seas of all vncleane abhominacions & abhominable vnclennesses, in so much that almost no mayde escaped vndefloured, no wife vncorrupted, no wydow vndefiled: so great was the wantonnes, so vntemporate were the lustes of these lecherous locustes: I meane, the filthy Prestes, whiche at the commaundemente of that wycked Byshoppe forsware honorable matrimony, & professed chastity, whan it was not in theyr power so to liue. Anselme was able thorow his deuilish hipocrisy to make his spirituall chauelinges, wiueles Prestes: but hee was not able to bring to passe, that they shold be no whoremongers, no incestuous persons. &c. Not only these most damnable vices tofore recited, but also the vnnatural worke of the flesh, euen most stincking sodomitrie, began to ouerflow the whole Realme thorow the practises of those filthy Chaplens of Priapus: which beinge geuen vp to vnclennes thorow the lustes of theyr owne heartes, defiled theyr owne bodyes among them selues, in so much that they lefte the naturall vse of the womā. and brent in theyr lustes one with another, men with men wrought filthines: whiche thinge caused Ancelme once againe the nexte yeare folowinge to call another Councell at London for the redresse of these most stinckinge vnclennesses, but specially of Sodomitrie: in the whiche Councel, Matrimony was not restored agayne to the Preestes, whiche alone might haue redressed all these abhominacions, but a curse was deuised of those Popishe Prelates, to bee sent thorow out England, and commaundement geuen, that that curse or excommunicacion should be red in euery parishe Churche vpon euery Sonday thorow out the yeare, against all those Preestes, Deacons, Subdeacons, Prebendaries & Collegioners, which of honest maryed men, are now become most stincking Sodomites: so that this vice of Sodomitry, which before was only knowen to Monckes & Prestes, is now become a common practise almost amonge men: which thinge made Ancelme and his felowes to decree also, that if any laye parson were found to be a Sodomite, he shuld be depriued of all his fredome within the land, & be no better, then a forfaiter. But whan the decree of Anselme & of his adherents helped nothinge in this behalfe: & this most damnable sinne of Sodomitrie was practised vniuersally euerye day more & more: yt holy father was compelled to cal backe againe his curse, as one being ashamed (if any shame may be found in a Papist) of his doinges. Notwithstanding matrimony, which might haue ben a spedy remedy of all these abhominacios, might not be restored to the Prestes: which thing was then and hath bene, vntill this oure age the alone occasion of many great and greuous enormities. Yet this is not to be forgotten by the way: that although Anselmes decree cōcerning the single life of Priests were receaued of many, yea of the greatest part of the spiritualty: yet were there diuers Prestes, whiche by no meanes wold graunt vnto his deuilishe decree, nor suffer them selues to be diuorced from theyr wiues: but specially the Priests of yorke and Norwich Dioceses. Some defended theyr mariages against Anselme and his deputies with scripture and reason.

Some

Some stoutly sayd, that they would neyther leaue theyr wyues, nor yet geue ouer theyr benefices. Some answered, that if they myghte not by the newe statute haue wyues of theyr owne, they woulde not spare the wyues of theyr neighbours, make what lawes they would. By this meanes came it to passe, that many Prieستes continued styll with theyr wyues: which thing greatly greued this Monckishe Antichristiane Archbyshop Anselme. Therefore this hipocrite to bringe his deuylishe purpose vnto perfeccion, if any perfeccion may be found in a thinge that is moste imperfect, partly with gyftes, partly with craftie persuasions, as the manner of Hipocrites is, obtayned the good will of the Kinge and of his nobilitie for the confirmacion of his most wycked and deuylishe decree concernynge the single life of Prieستes. For whatsoeuer hee had afore done in this matter, was done only by his owne priuate authority, with the consent of a few Bishops and Monkes like vnto hym selfe. The fauour of the Kinge and of his Lords obtained in this behalfe for the confirmacion of Anselmes decree: this vngodly Archbyshop once agayne gathereth another Councel at London, euen a swarme of hipocrites: whiche was in the yeare of our lorde. M.C.viii. where hee renewed his former decree, yea and that with the Kynges authoritie: that from henceforth vnder payne not only of the depriuacion bothe of order and lyuinge, but also of the Kynges hyghe displeasure Prieستes should no more accompany with theyr wyues, and resorte no more vnto them, but with all expedycion bee separated from them: agayne, that none should bee admitted vnto the office of Subdeacon, Deacon and Priesthoode, except hee firste of all forswore matrimony, and vowed chastity. This decree of Anselme began now to take better rote and stronger hold, because it was now fortressed, stablyshed and confirmed, both by temporal and spirytuall authority: so that now the transgression and breaking of this Popish decree of the single life of Prieستes, is made not only heresy agaynste the Bishops, but also treason against the King: which wrought a wonderful feare in the heartes of the Cleargy, so that nowe they fell from mariage thicke and thycke, & gaue them selues to wiueles life, that is to say, to fornicacion, to whordome, to adultery, to incest, to medlynge with brute beastes, to sodomitry, to buggery, to abusinge of them selues one with another against the order of nature. &c. Notwithstanding some godly Prieستes fearing God more than either Kinge or Byshop (and setting before theyr eies this saying of Christe: that whyche God hath coupled together, let no man separate: agayne, of S. Paule: To auoide fornicacion let euerye man haue a wyfe of his owne) kepte theyr wyues stil: some other, that were admitted vnto the Ministery vnmaried, and perceauing afterward that they had not the gift of continency geuen them of God, did take vnto them wyues in the feare of God, notwithstanding the wicked decree of Anselme and his adherentes confirmed and establyshed with the authoritie of the Kynge and of hys Lordes, wyshynge rather to lyue wyth a good and quyet conscyence before God with the displeasure of men, than otherwise with the fauoure and promocyons of all the worlde. For as oure Sauyour Christe sayeth: What doeth it profit a man, thoughe hee winne the whole worlde, if hee lose hys soule?

This

This thinge made Pope Honorius the seconde to sende into Englande once agayne another commyssion for the dyspatche of Pryestes wyues, in the yeare of oure Lorde. M.C.xxv. For the holye Father had vnderstandynge, that Ancelme hys chiefe Champion and prymate of all myschiefe beyng deade, the secular Pryestes began to take courage againe vnto them, and to embrace holy Matrimony contrarie to the order taken by oure mother holy Church. The Emballadoure, which the Pope sent into Englande with hys commissyon for the hastie dyspatch of Pryestes mariage, was called Johannis de crema a Pryeste Cardinal of the title of S. Chrisogone, and Legatus a Latere, that is to saye, a Legate euendoute of the holy fathers owne side. In the commendacyon of this Cardynal, the Pope wrote hys letters vnto the Clergie of Englande, streightlye charginge and commaundinge them to receaue him, as Sainct Peters vicare, to heare hym, to obey hym, and at his commaundemente to gather a Synode and there to bee presente withall humylytie, and to agree withoute fayle vnto such thinges, as should there by hym be proponed and set forth. This Pryest Cardynal and Legate heald a great Counsayle at London: in the whyche were gathered togethet two Archbyshops, xviii. Byshoppes. xl. Abbotes, and an innumerable multitude of the Clergie and common people. In this solemne Councell the solemne Father Pryeste Cardynal moste solemnely set forth the causes of hys so greate, longe and perilous iournaye, and the exceedinge feruente and fatherly loue of the moste holy Father Pope Honorius the second vnto the Realme of Englande, but specially vnto hys anointed, the Clergie. Amonge all hys other thinges, hee rygorously, yea furiously, mayntie, yea madlye inueyed againste the maryage of Pryestes, greuously rebukynge thoste Pryestes, which for no commaundement from the moste holie Father woulde forsake theyr maryed wyues, but contynewe still in theyr vnclennes of life. Hee alleged manye reasons deuysed by Antichriste and hys Chaplens (but no scriptures at all) agaynste the marriage of Pryestes, and amonge other allegacions, hee saide: that it was a shamefull matter and an exceedinge greate abhomynacion, for a Prieste to rise from an whores side (for so hee called Priestes lawfull wyues) and immediatlie to go and make Gods bodye: so that in this Councel it was once agayne enacted, that al Priestes, Deacons, Subdeacons, and Canons shoulde put awaye theyr wyues, theyr Concubynes, and all other women oute of theyr companye, excepte it were theyr Mother, or Sister, or Aunte, or suche women as were withoute suspicion: Agayne, that from that day forwarde all spirytuall persons should forsweare Matrimonie, and vowe chastitie. It was there also decreed, that no Pryestes sonne should for euer after clayme Churche or Prebend by enheritaunce, that was hys fathers before, allegynge for the confirmacion here of this verse of Dauyd, no lesse vnaptlychen vnlearnedly: Make of them a whele O lord, that say: we will haue the houses of god in possessiō. But let vs heare, what folowed this decree of this carnal Cardinal. This prieste cardinal, this legat a Latere, this vicar of Peter, this most dere sōne of oure holy father and moste trustye Emballadour, the nyghte folowyng, after that hee had made the decree of Pryestes wyueles life was

was taken in bedde with a common, famous and notable whore: and that maye not bee forgotten, he notwithstanding made Gods blessed body the daye before, and songe masse very deuoutly and solemnelye in the presence of a great nombet of Catholikes. This holy father, mirrour of the Popyshe chastitie, beyng thus taken, many wytnesses beinge present, so that the matter could not be kept close nor secret vnder Benedicite, yea and those suche wytnesses, as greatly reioyced, that so wycked a man the authour of so wycked a decree was apprehended and taken in the very acte of whordome vnto the great shame of all filthy Papistes: fearyng that some greater shame should haue chaunted both to hym selfe and to the most holy father that sente him, and that hee should haue bene ronge out of the citie, contrey and Realme with basins, thought it not good to tarye any recken inges, no not so much as vntil to morowhee therfore toke hym to hys legges like a prety man, and got him to Rome againe, that cage of all filthy and vnclene birdes, so fast as he coulde, with shame inough both to him selfe, to his holy father, to all the College of Cardinals, and to al the rable of the Papistes. This Priest Cardinall, this Legate a latere could not abyde that Priestes should haue theyr lawfull maryed wyues: but her him selfe could be cõtent to haue a notable whore to play the knaue withall at hys pleasure. He thought it an vnsemely thing for a Priest to lie with his owne wife all nighte, and the nert daye to make Gods body: But he him selfe after that hee had made Gods body, euen the nighte folowinge, was wel content for the redy and perfect digestion of that Gods body, which hee first of all had made and afterwarde deuoured it, to take an whore and to lie with her: and yet no breach of the Popishe chastitie, nor dissolucion of the holy vowe. This holy father had forgotten this rule of his forefathers: Sinon caste, tamen, caute, yet rather remembred this saying: Quicquid libet, licet. He thought, that no man would haue bene so bolde, as to watche his conueyaunces, comminge from the most holy father, Christes Vicar, Peters successoure, supreme heade of the Catholike Church thorow out all christendom, &c. but that he might haue done all thinges frely and without checke. Thorow the fowle acte of this moste fowle and filthy carnall Cardynal, which now was packing home agayne toward Rome with shame inoughe, the decree of the single lyfe of Priestes was neglected and laughed to scorne: so that the Pryestes returned once agayne to their wyues, and lyued with them quietlye for the space of more than thre yeares after.

In the yere of our Lord. M.C.xxix. the Bishops and Abbotes with theyr adherentes being very desirous to bringe this single and wiueles life of Priestes vnto effecte, moued there vnto, I doubt not by the secret letters of the moste holy father, gathered them selues together at London yet once agayne, and proceded accordinge to the doynges of theyr predecessours, decreynge that from henceforthe no Subdeacon, Deacon, nor Priest, shold kepe any woman in his house. &c. and wold haue punyshed the Pryestes for kepinge of theyr wyues so longe after the decree of Bythoppe Anselme, by puttynge them vnto the peyments of certayne summes of mony. But the Kynge perceauynge the the malyce of the Bysshoppes agaynste the Prystes, and that aduauntage was lyke to ryse vnto them of that matter, procured of the Bysshoppes, that hee myghte haue the punyshment of those Prieste and theyr wyues, promysing them that he would execute true iustice, and rewarde them with due correction. The Bysshoppes were well contente, beynge very glad, that the Kyng would be theyr hangman: But in the ende the Kynge deceaued the Bysshops and laughed them all to scorne, and takinge a pension of the Prystes, hee suffered them still peaceably to holde theyr wyues, and to enioye agayne theyr olde lybertie.

But Antichrist of Rome could not thus be content. Therefore in the yeare of oure Lord. M.C.xxxviii. Pope Innocent the second sent Albericus Bysshop of Hostiense into Englande for the vtter and finall abolishment of Prieste maryage. This Albericus called a Synode at westmynstere, where were gathered together. xviii. Bishops and. xxx. Abbotes besides a great nomber of the other shauelinges. There amonge many other thinges, it was decreed that no Prieste, Deacon nor Subdeacon should holde a wife or woman within his house, vnder payne of dysgradinge from hys Christendom, and playne sendinge to hell. Agayne, that no Prieste sonne should clayme anye spirytuall lyuinge by heretage. Item, that Prieste should do no bodely labour: and that the new transsubstantiated God shold dwel but eight daies in the boxe, for feare of wormе eatinge, mouling, furring, canckering, stinckinge, &c.

Thus the deuyll and the Pope with theyr vnchaste Chaplens laboured from time to time to stablishe this wycked decree of the single lyfe of Prystes: Notwithstandynge, as histories recorde, God in all ages, dyd store vp some godly men both to defende and to practise the Matrimony of Prystes, condemninge the contrary as heresye and doctrine of deuylles. For wee rede, that aboute the yeare of our lord, M.C.lxxvi. the secular Canons were remoued from Waltham, because some of them had wyues, a regular Chanons, whiche were men without wyues, placed in theyr rowmes, yea and that by the Popes authoritie. Likewyse rede wee of a certayne noble learned Pryeste, whose name was Wyllyam Whighte, borne in Kente. This Pryeste aboute the yeare of oure Lorde. M. CCCC.xxviii. felynge in hym selfe that hee had not the gifte of continencye geuen hym of God, toke vnto hym a wife in the feare of God, no respecte had eyther to the wicked decree of the Pope, or to the folishe and vngodly vowe that he had made at the commaundement of his ordinary, if hee made anye vowe at all, beyng a secular Prieste, as they vse to saye. The mayde, whom he maryed, was godly and honest, hauinge parentes of good reputacyon. This Whighte notwithstandynge hys maryage, continued in the office of preachinge, and conuerted muche people from Papystrye and superstition vnto godlynes and true relygion, so that hys name became verye famous and notable thorowe oute Englande.

And as in Englande, so lykewyse in other Contreies, many good and godly men nothinge regardynge the wycked decree of the Pope concernynge the single lyfe of Pryestes, toke vnto them wyues in the feare of God, wyshynge rather to fall into the handes of men, then to transgresse and breake the commaundmente of God: so that in all ages from tyme to tyme God raysed vp some men, to defende the liber-tie of the Gospell agaynst the Babylonical captyuitie of the Romishe Byshoppe.

Certayne Popes fauorable to the marryage of pryestes.

But not only these godly and learned Fathers, of whome we haue hetherto spoken, haue resisted the tirannye of the Byshoppe of Rome in forbyddynge the marryage of Pryestes: but wee also rede of some Popes, whyche were fauorable to the Matrimony of Pryestes. Was not this the decree of Pope Syluester, that euetye Pryest should bee the husbande of one wyfe onelye, accordynge to the doctrine of the holye Apostle? Was not Pope Pius wonte to saye, that as there are manye causes, why marryage should bee taken awaye from the Pry-estes: So likewyse there are manye mo vrgente, weyghtie and ne-cessarye causes, why it oughte freelye to be restored vnto them againe? Dyd not Pope Gregorye restore marryage to the Pryestes, whyche hee before had denyed vnto them: When hee saw how many greuous inconueniences folowed of that wicked decree of the single life of Pry-estes? Dyd not Pope Leo graunte that Pryestes myght haue wyues and also lede them aboute with them, as the Apostels dyd?

Writeth

Wryghteth not Pope innocent in hys decretales, that those Prieſtes, whiche haue wyues of theyr owne after the manner of the contrye where they dwel, are greuously to be punyshed, if they do breake their wedlocke: Rede we not, that Pope Paule the second dyd many times greuously complayne of the heauy yoke of Pryestes constrayned chastitie, and that hee was full determyned, if God had spared him life, to haue taken away that wycked decree of the single life of Prieſts, and to set maryage agayne at liberty: Gratianus that curious Collectour of the Popes decrees affirmeth, that both Prieſt, Deacon and Subdeacon may lawfully vse Matrimony.

But what shall I speake of the noble and worthy Councels, that highly appryue, alowe and commend the maryage of Pryestes: did not that greate and famous Councel of Nice alowe the maryage of Prieſtes: affirming that it is chastity for a man to lie with his owne wife: Saieth not that aunciente Councell of Gangris, that if any iudge a maryed Prieſt, as though he shold not minister, because he is maried, and so for that cause withdraweth him selfe from such a Prieſtes ministracion, he ought to be adiudged and taken for an excommunycate parson: Is there not a Canon of the Apostels, in the whiche it is forbydden, that either Bysshop or Prieſt should put away his wife vnder the pretence of holines, and colour of religion: Are not these the wordes of another Councel: Whosoeuer be found worthy in the order of Subdeacon, Deacon, and Preest, let hym by no wise be kepte backe or forbydden to ascend vnto such a degree, for that he hath his wife dwellinge with him: neither let him be compelled to profesſe chastity, whan they take orders, whereby hee should forsake his lawfull wyues company. Therefore if any man presume contrary to the Canons of the Apostels to take awaye the mutuall embracinges and companyeng with theyr lawful wyues from any Pryest or Deacon, let him be disgraded. Likewise that Prieſt, whiche putteth away his wife for religions sake, let hym be excommunicate: and if he so continewe, disgrade hym. I passe ouer many other godly auncient Councels, whiche do so liuely maintaine and set forth the Matrimony of spiritual ministers, that it is wonder how either Pope or Deuyl, or any member of Antichriſte dare presume to speake agaynste so manifest a trueth, if they were not led with the spirite of him, whiche hath bene a lyar from the begynnynge, and the father of lyenge. Of these authorityes therefore aforesayde, it is enydent, what a greete ennemye the Pope hathe shewed hym selfe to the dygnitie of holy Matrimony, while hee denyeth to Bysshops, Pryestes and Deacons libertie to marrye: whiche thinge they are no where forbydden thorowe oute the holy scripture, but rather commaunded, specyally if they haue not the gyfte of continencye geuen them of God, as Saincte Paule sayeth: To auoyde fornycation let euery man haue hys owne wyfe, and euerye woman her owne husbande. Agayne, if they can not abstayne, let them marrye. For it is better to marry then to burne. Item, if thou take a wyfe, thou sinnest not. Likewyse if a Virgin marry, shee sinneth not. Also in another place: wedlocke is honorable amonge all men, and the bed vndefyled: But whoremongers and adulterers God shall iudge.

Certayne councels alowyng the maryage of Pryestes.

The auncient histories declare that S. Paule had a wyfe (as I maye speake nothing of the holy scripture) and that he did not at all tymes led

lede her about with hym, because he woulde be the more ready vnto ỹ preaching of the Gospel. It is not sayde, that s. Paule did put awaye hys wyfe, but rather that he left her in some conuenient place, whyle he went about preaching the worde of God. Is it not now euidēt euē to the blynde, as they vse to saye, howe without all shame the Papistes lye, whyle they teache, that the Apostles being called vnto the ministerie did forsake and put away their wiues? Rede we not also, that the Apostles did not only kepe their wyues after thei were called vnto the preaching of the Gospell, but also that they had chyldren by them, and gaue them out vnto marriage, that they also mighte be frutefull, according to the ordinaunce of God?

But I woulde gladly know of the Papistes, why they teach this doctrine, that the Apostles immediatly after their vocation vnto the ministerie of the Gospel did put awaye their wyues? Is marryage of suche impuritie and vnclennes, that it may not agree with the ministerie? Did not God institute Matrimony? Is God the author of vnclennes? Did not our Sauiour Christ vouchsafe to be borne in matrimony: to be present at a marryage, and to garnish it with the first frutes of his wonderfull miracles? Woulde the sonne of God haue done these thinges, if they had ben any one spotte of vnclennes in wedlock? Did he not also chose marryed men to be the preachers of his mooste glorious Gospell, and the administratours of hys holy and blessed Sacramentes? If matrimonye at that tyme, whan the Church was moste pure, was not recounted vnworthy the holy ministery of Gods holy woorde and Sacraments; nor thesame to be obscured, defaced, disgraced, blotted, dismoured and distained by the company thereof, (for who knoweth not, that all the Apostles of Christe were marryed men, and likewise the moste parte of all the auncient holy Bishops & godly Ministers of the primatiue Church, and that maryage was free to the Ecclesiasticall Pastores many hundred yeares after (as it hath ben from the beginning, euen vntó this day amonge the Grekes and all the East churches) tyll the tyranny of the Bishoppe of Rome, with moste extreme violence as we partly heard afore, toke awaye this libertie from the ministers of the West church, where thys Antichriste beareth chief rule, as it is written in the Popes own law: The churches of the East, sayeth the Pope, haue one tradicion and order, and this holy churche of Rome another: for the Priestes, Deacons, and subdeacons of the Greke churche do marrye: but no Priest of the churche of Rome or of the West churches from Subdeacon to the degree of a Bishop hath lycence to marrye. How cometh it nowe to passe, that ministerie and matrimonye, that Priesthode and wedlocke can not agree together in these oure dayes, seing in tymes paste there was so great familiaritie, company and concorde betwen them? Is the woorde of the Lorde and his holy Sacramēts more pure now then they were in the tyme of Moyses and the Prophetes, in ỹ days of Christ and his Apostles, and the primatiue church? Or is wedlocke more base and vile now, than it was at the beginning? s. Paule saieth that wedlocke is honorable amonge all men: How cometh it then to passe, that wedlocke is counted to dishonour the holy order of Priesthode? Thesame Apostle sayeth, that the bedde is vndefyled, that is to saye, that the very acte of matrimony betwene man and wyfe done in the feare of God, is before God, holy pure and cleane. How then can the Minister of Gods worde be poluted and defiled, godly liuing with his true and honest wyfe in that blessed state of Matrimony?

rified by the pretious bloude of Christ? Agayne he sayeth: If any man marrye, he synneth not. If it be no sinne to marrye, but rather a vertue: no hynderaunce vnto godlines, but rather a prouocacion & a furtheraunce vnto the same: how vnshamefaced shew the Papistes themselues, whyle they teache, that marryage and Priesthode can not agree together, but that the one is an hynderaunce to the other: agayn, that wedlocke is more base, more vyle, more worldly, more carnall & fleshly, then it may be coupled with the holy perfecte, Angelyke and Seraphicall order of Priesthode: seyng we heard tofore, that in the olde testament, in the time of Christe and his Apostles, in the dayes of the primatiue churche and many hundred years after, marryage & Priesthode were founde well and frendly to agree one with another so that it was no blemysh to the church of Christe, one man to be both marryed and also a minister or Priest? And whēs now sodenly come this new religion of the Pope, that marryage and ministery can not agree together? Is it not playn heresy and the doctrine of deuylles, wherof S. Paul prophecied so long before? But let vs hear what sainct Jhon Chrisostome sayeth to this matter. Writing vpon Genesis he hath these woordes: Excuse not thy selfe, because of marryage: Thy Lorde was at a marryage, and commended it with hys presence.

And sayest thou, that marryage is an hynderaunce to a godly lyfe? It is no hynderaunce to a godly lyfe. Wilte thoue know, that it hurteth nothing to haue a wyfe and chyldren? Bishoppe. Dothe not the holy Apostle S. Paule in the description of a Bishop set forthe and teache, that a spirituall Minister must be ỹ husbande of one wyfe, and suche one as ruleth hys owne house honestly, hauinge chyldren vnder obedience with all honestie? whose wyfe also ought to be no euyll speaker, but sober and faythfull in all thynges? If marryage had ben a thing so vncomely and vnfitting for a Bishop Priest or Deacon, as papistes dreame, is it to bee thoughte, that the holy Apostle woulde haue made mencion bothe of hys wyfe and chyldren? Verely he woulde not haue sayde: A Bishoppe must be the husbande of one wyfe: but rather a man of no wyfe, an holy votorye, a sacred professour of continency, &c. Who seeth not nowe then, howe vayne thys obiection of the papistes is, in sayinge, that the Apostles did forsake their wyues, after Christe had made them hys disciples & preachers of his holy woorde: as though Matrimony and ministerye might

might not dwell together in one man: whan we haue plentye of examples both out of the holy scriptures and out of the auncient writers, that many godly men haue lyued together in Matrimonye and ministerye: the one being to the other no hynderaunce, but rather a furtheraunce.

But the papistes go forthe to obiecte and saye: Priestes haue vowed chastitie and the single lyfe: therfore priestes maye not marrye. I answere with Salomon: An vnfaythfull and folish promise or vowe displeaseth God. The vowe of chastitie, which the priestes make is vnfaithfull, because it is not done by the authoritie of Gods woorde. And who knoweth not, that whatsoeuer is done to God, not hauing the foundacion in the woorde of God, dothe not please, but rather displease hym: yea and that so muche the more, because we are commaunded to do that only vnto God, which he commaundeth vs to do: & not that, which we of our owne fansye dreame to be good. Are not these the woordes of the Apostle: Whatsoeuer is not of faythe, is synne. But the vow of chastity is not of faith: (for it is not grounded on the woorde of God) therfore is the vowe of chastitie synne. Who seeth not now, that the vowe of chastitie is before God rather abhominacion, then perfectiō: rather wickednes than holynes: so that it is not without a cause called of the wyseman, an vnfaythfull vowe: and therfore displeasaunt vnto God. It is also (sayeth he) a foolish vowe: and worthely so termed. For the priestes that make the vowe, folishly and no les madly, vowe and promise that, which of theym selues and of theyr owne strengthes they are not able to performe. For the wyseman sayeth: I know, that I can not be chaste, except God geue me the gift. And our Sauiour Christe sayeth: All can not away with this saying: but they to whome it is geuen. The holy Apostle also sayeth: Euery man hath hys proper gifte of God: one after thys maner, another after that.

But seinge the papistes make so muche of the vowe, that that must be a lette to priestes, that they maye not marrye: let them come of, and tell vs, from whens that lawe of vowing chastitie cometh. If it be of God: so shall the Priestes do their vttermooste endeuoure with all obeysaunce to accomplishe it: but if it be of the deuil and the Pope, as it is in dede, than is it to be holden accursed, yea thoughe an Aungell from heauen were the authour of it, according to this doctrine of S. Paule: though we oure selues, or an Aungel from heauen preach any other Gospel vnto you, then that which we haue preached vn to you, holde hym accursed. That this lawe of vowing chastitie is not of God, it is easye to shewe. For in the olde testament he gaue this generall commaundement to all men without exception: Encrease and multiplie, and replenish the earth: in so much that, that he exempted not the priestes from this lawe, but rather appoynted them, what manner of wyues they shoulde marrye. And in the new testament we fynde not the yoke of chastitie layde vpon any priest by the commaundement of God. For Christe hym selfe did not chose vnto hym votaries and wyueles men to be his disciples, but rather such as were marryed: to declare that maryage is no vnsemely thing euen in a spiritual minister, but rather suche a state of liuing, as adourneth, garnisheth & beautyfieth

My

My desyre is, that I may be founde acceptable to God in hys kyngdō at their footesteppes, as Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, & Esaye be, and all the reste of the Prophetes: as Peter and Paul, and the rest of the Apostles, who were coupled in marryage, and yet not maryed for the fulfilling of their bodely lustes, but for the maintenaunce of their posteritie and of sprynge.

How wicked doctrine this is of the Pope, to teache that to lyue single at the appointment of man is more meritorius before God, thā to lyue in the holy state of honorable Matrimonye: this sentence of our Sauioure Christe declareth manifestly: This people draweth nye vnto me with their mouthes, and honoureth me with their lyppes. How be it, their hearts are farre from me. Uerely they worshippe me in vayne, teaching doctrines, which are ỳ cōmaūdements of men. Agayne, ye caste asyde the commaundemente of God, to mayntayne your owne tradicions. Nothing merit before God, but the passiō & deathe of Christe. All oure righteousnesses are as a cloth defyled with menstrue. The merites, which we bring forth of our selues, are synne, the wrathe of God, horroure of conscience, desperaciō of mynd, death and damnation. Whatsoeuer we haue or do besides, it is the gifte of God, and cometh not of our selfs: and therefore haue we nothinge of oure selues to boaste of, as it is written: What haste thou, that thou haste not receyued? If thou haste receyued it, why doest thou glorye, as though thou hadste not receyued it? All sorte of vs maye saye with the holy Apostle: By the grace of God, I am that I am. If God should enter into iudgement with the moste holy and moste perfecte of vs: Uerely we should not be founde righteous in his sight, before whom the very Aungels in heauen are not pure: so farre is it of, ỳ wee poore miserable mortall men maye woorthely before the presence of Gods maiestie reioyce, boast and crake of our merites & deseruings, whyther we lyue maryed or vnmaryed: as the Psalmographe sayeth: If thou O Lord, wouldest loke narowly vpon our synnes: O Lorde, who were able to abyde it?

Moreouer who knoweth not that in vowes, diuerse thinges are to be considered? First of all, whyther we be able of oure selues and of our owne strengthes to fulfyll and performe the vowe, whiche we make, or not. If we be able to performe it: what nede we then to vowe it? for if that, whiche we vowe, be godly and honest: then oughte we to do it without any vowe: so that in this behalf the vowe is foolishe & vayne. Agayn, if we be not able to performe the vowe: then in so vowing do we vtter and declare out bothe rashenes and folishnes, & besides that, we greatly offend God, whyle we presuming of oure owne strengthes vowe ỳ vnto God, whiche we are not able to performe. This proude presumpcion and presumptuous pride, God by no meanis can abyde. Now as touching the vowe of chastitie, who is so blynde, whiche seeth not, who is so ignorant, whiche knoweth not, who is so without senses, which feleth not, that it is not in any mans power to fulfill it, without the singulare and speciall gifte of God, as we haue tofore heard? hedes: agayn, how folishly the prieſtes haue taken that burden vpon them, whiche they are not able to beare. Thus appeareth the vowe of chaſtitie in euery parte, vngodly, wicked, vntollerable.

Secondly, in vowes the caſe of impoſſibilitie is alwayes excepted: ſo that whatſoeuer is vowed, taketh not further place than we haue ſtrengthe and power to fulfil it. Therfore in al vowes generally theſe condicions are included: Quatenus humana fragilitas permittit: Si Potero: Si vivero: Si dominus voluerit: that is to saye: So farre as the fragilitie of man ſuffereth: If I can: If I lyue: If the Lord wyll. ii. Cor. iii. of oure ſelues are not able to thinke a good thoughte, who knoweth not. Experience teacheth, that whyle the profeſſours of chaſtitie go about to fulfyll their vowe before men: before God they become moſte fylthye persons, whyle in their heartes they burne with vnquencheable luſtes of the fleſh: ſo that it maye be sayde vnto therm, as Chriſte ſaide to the gliſtering hipocrites their forefathers: ye are they, which iuſtifie your ſelues before men: but God knoweth youre heartes: for

But let it be graunted: that some of the Popes votories be free from the groſſe ſinnes of the fleſh: What is this to the purpoſe, whan their hearts continually burn and boyle with the flaming fornace of moſt filthy and fleſhly deſires, not vnlyke to the

If the mynde be vnpure, the puritie of the bodye is of no value before God: whiche the mynde beyng once corrupted, regardeth not the gliſtering woorkes of the fleſh. Seinge then that the vowe of chaſtitie taketh no further place in the votorie, then he is able to perfourme: who is ſo vnrighteous a iudge, as to pronounce, that the Prieſtes notwithſtanding their vnablenes, may not breake ỳ vowe,

And who knoweth not, that the vowe of chaſtitie is an enforced vowe, vnwillingly taken of the prieſtes, and therfore moſte wickedly performed? Oughte ſuche a vowe to deſtroye the ordinaunce of God? Ought ſuch a vowe, that ſtryueth againſt both God & nature, so to be tendered, that for the performaunce of the same all lawefull thinges muste be neglected, and all vnlawfull meanes practised and attempted. If the Ministers were not enforced by the Pope to make suche wicked and damnable vowe, or elles vtterly to be repelled from the ministerie: is it to be thought that any of theym willingly and of their owne accorde woulde suffer them selues to be snarled with such an halter, out of the whiche they can not rydde them selues without greate daunger of tyrantes so longe as they lyue? Who willingly suffreth thraldome, that maye be at libertie? Seynge then that the vowe of chastitie is extorted and wrasted out of the priestes thorow the crueltie of the bishop of Romes decree, and not willingly offered: it is manifest, playne and eudent, that as the vowe is wicked, so lykewise ought it not to be obserued, but vtterly to be reiected, as an intollerable yoke directly fightinge agaynste the Christen libertie.

Oure Sauioure Christe sayeth: There be some chaste, whiche haue made them selues chaste, for the kyngdome of heauens sake. He that can take it, let hym take it. But the Priestes, whiche lyue vnder the Babylonicall captiuitie of the Romishe Bishop, make not them selues chaste: but they are enforced of that tyraunte, if they will come vnto the ministerie, will they, nyll they, to profesle chastitie, and for euer after to lyue vnmarryed, whyther they haue the gifte of chastitie geuen them of God, or no: Yea and that not for the kyngedome of heauens sake, that is to saye, for the preachinge of the Gospell: but for massing, sacrifisinge, makynge and offeringe Gods owne bodye: which thynge after the Popes doctrine can by no meanes stande with the state of Matrimonye, be it neuer so good, holy, pure and honorable euen by the testimonye of the holy Ghoste. And howe godly, yea rather howe vngodly and wickedly the Pope hath layde this heauy yoke vpon the Priestes neckes, no man that is but of a meane iudgement knoweth not: whyle he maketh that, whiche is easye, harde, and that whyche is swete, bytter, &c. take my yoke on you, sayeth Christe, and ye shall fynde reste to youre soules. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is lighte. Gods commaundementes are not greuous, sayeth sayncte Jhon. The blessed Apostle sainct Paule durste not laye such an heauy yoke vppon Christen mennes shulders, as to enforce them to profesle chastitie, and to lyue vnmarryed: but confessed playnly, that he had no suche commaundemente geuen him of the Lorde, neyther woulde he tangle them with suche a snare: but leaue euery man to hys owne libertie, to lyue accordinge to the gyfte, whiche he hadde receyued of God: for asmuche as euery man hath hys proper gyfte of God, one after thys manner, another after that.

But who knoweth not, that the Popes enforced chastitie, is no easy yoke, nor no lighte burden, neyther doeth that bring ease to soules: yea who knoweth not rather, that the Popes enforced chastitie is so heauy a yoke and so intollerable a burden, that neyther we nor oure forefathers were euer able to beare it, so farre is it of, that it bringeth ease, reste and quietnes to oure soules, whyle it mooste greuously greueth and disquieteth bothe the soules and the bodies of the votaries. Agayne, if the blessed Apostle sainct Paule durste not by commaundement from the Lorde to laye the heauy yoke of single life

vpon any man, but set all men at libertie to lyue as they fealte the ope racion and wozkinge of God in them: with what whozishe forehead dare that Antichristiane Bishop of Rome enforce the spirituall Ministers vnder payne of excommunication, and vnder payne bothe of degradinge and loosinge the Ecclesiasticall promocions, to take such an heauye yoke vpon them: whiche neyther they noz any other are able to beare without the great and singulare gifte of God: Sainct Paule where he entreateth bothe of Matrimony and of single lyfe, sayeth:

1. Cozin. vii. ye are derely bought: be not ye the seruauntes of men. But are not the Priestes and other spirituall Ministers, not onely the seruaunts, but also the bonde slaues of that mooste wicked and Antichristiane Bishoppe of Rome, whyle they at hys commaundemente are compelled contrary to the libertie of the Gospell, contrary to the ozdinaunce of God, contrary to the lawe of nature, contrary to the exãples of Christes primatiue church, and contrary to the practises of so many godly and auncient Bishoppes and Priestes, to forswere Matrimonye, and to lede a single lyfe, although the gifte of continencye be not geuen them? Is not this seruitude? Is not this slaucry? Is not thys to be the seruauntes of men? What hath the dere price, whiche Christe hath payde for vs on the aultare of the crosse, that he mighte deliuer vs from all the heauy burdens of lawes and tradicions, profited vs, if men maye go foozthe styll with theyr deuelishe decrees, wicked constitucions & triflinge tradicions to snarle the consciences of the Christianes, and to take frome them that libertie, whiche bothe God and nature hathe frely, bounteouslye and liberally permitted to all men without excepcion? God haue merry on vs, and shortly treade doune Sathan vnder oure feete.

Fourthely, the ende of euery vowe is to be considered, & whyther the profession of the same maketh vnto the glozy of God, the accomplishement of hys holy lawe, the profit of hys Christen congregacion and vnto the saluation of them that make the vowe, oz not. Nowe as touchyng the vow of chastitie, it is moste euident by the frutes therof, that it maketh nothinge at all vnto the glozie of God: yea it rather greatly hyndreth and obscureth the glozie of God, whyle thozow the vnchaste lyuing of suche vnchaste professoures, the name of God, the woozde of God, the Gospel of Christ is rayled vpon and extremely dishonoured of the aduersaries, as it is writtẽ: For youre sake the name

Esa. lii. Roma. ii. of God is euyll spoken of amonge the Heathen. Howe can the woozde of God and suche other heauenly misteries be well repozted, whanne they that handle them, are of all men mooste vile, mooste filthy in life and conuersacion? Howe can God be honoured by those Ministers, whiche in all their maners dishonoure bothe God and all godlines? With their mouthe they profesle that they know God, but with their

Titus. i dedes they denye hym.

And as the vowe of chastitie maketh nothinge at all vnto the auauncemẽt of Gods glozie: so likewise doeth it make nothinge vnto the accomplishement of Gods holy lawe, but rather prouoketh vnto the transgression & breaking thereof. God in his lawe sayeth: Encrease &

Gen. i. ir. multiplie and replenish the earthe: but the vowe of chastitie sayeth:

Encrease

Encreaſe not, multiplye not, and repleniſhe not the earthe. God in hys lawe ſayeth: Thou ſhalte not commit adulterye: but the bowe of chaſtitie ſayeth: Rather commit adulterye a thouſande tymes, then thou ſhalt once go awaye from thy profeſſed promiſe. God in hys lawe ſayeth: to auoyde fornication lette euery man haue hys owne wyfe: but the bowe of chaſtitie ſayeth: to auoyde fornicacion geue thy ſelfe to watchinge, to prayenge, to faſtinge, to wolwarde goynge, to lyynge vppon the grounde, to wearinge of hoopes of yron aboute the myddle, to puttinge on of ſhertes of hayre, to beatinge of the bodye with whyppes and ſcourges, to pylgrymage gaddyng, &c. Erod.rr. Deut.v. 1.Cor.vii.

God in his lawe ſayeth: It is not good for man to be alone: for it is written: Woo is hym, that is alone: for if he fall, he hath not another to helpe hym vp. Agayne, When two ſleape together, they are twayne: but howe can a bodye be warme alone. Therefore twoo are better then one: for if one of them fall, hys companyon helpeth hym vp agayne. But the bowe of chaſtitie ſayeth: It is good for man to be alone, and to lyue vnmarryed. For if he haue nede of healpe, hee maye haue ynough for hys money, yea and that chyfte and chaunge, with diſpatche whan he will, and not bee compelled to bee troubled with ſuche burden, as he can not putte awaye, whanne he luſteth. Lybertie is ſweete. Chaunge of Paſtures maketh fatte calues. Gene.ii. Eccle.iiii.

Qui capit vxorem, capit litem atq; dolorem.
Qui caret vxore, caret lite atq; dolore.

God in hys lawe ſayeth: A Biſhoppe muſte be the huſbande of one wyfe. But the bowe of chaſtitie ſayeth: The houſbande of no wyfe, but the kepet of as many whores, as he luſteth. God in hys lawe ſayeth: Wedlocke is honorable amonge all perſons, exceptinge none, neyther Prieſte, Monke, nor Fryere. But the bowe of chaſtitie ſayeth: thoughe marrpage be tollerable in the Laitie, yet is it not ſo in the ſpiritualtie. For ſuche ſynne les in kepinge whores, than in marryenge wyues. 1.Timo.iii Titus.i. Heb.xiii.

Thus ſee we, that the bowe, of chaſtitie maketh nothinge vnto the accompliſhement of Gods holy lawe, beyng in euery point ſo cleane contrary vnto it.

But what, dothe thys bowe of chaſtitie profit the Chriſten congregacion any thinge at all: yea it rather mooſte highly diſprofiteth the Churche of God, whyle thorowe it the greateſt multitude of prieſtes corrupte other mennes wyues, defloure other mennes doughters, defyle other mennes maydes, as I maye adde nothynge hereunto: and by thys meanes they are a greate ſlaunder too the Chryſten congregracion, a ſtomblynge blocke to the weakelinges, and an occaſion that the doctrine of God oure Sauioure is euyll ſpoken of. Thorowe thys bowe of chaſtitie, the Prieſtes, whiche oughte to bee the ſalte of the earthe, haue loſte their ſaltnes, ſo that nothynge can be ſeaſoned their with: yea thorowe it, they are become good for nothynge, but to be caſte out, and to be troden doune of menne. Thorow the bowe of chaſtitie, the prieſts, which ought to be ỳ light of ỳ world and to gyue example of all honeſtie and godlynes of lyfe, are become Math.v. Math.v. 1.Pet.v.

the selfe darkenes, so that the lighte of good woorkes shyne not in them, whereby other maye be prouoked to glorifie oure heauenly father, but rather the dungehyll of all sinne and wickednes appeare in them vnto the greate derogacion of Gods mooste hyghe and glorious name. Agayne, thorowe the vowe of chastitie, hospitalitie vtterly decayeth in the spiritualitie: whiche notwithstandinge is one of the principall beauties of the Clergye, and oughte no les to be maynteyned of the spiritual Ministers, than the administracion of the worde and of the Sacramentes: seynge that he, whiche sayde: A Bishoppe muste be apte to teache: sayde in like maner: A Bishoppe muste be a mayntayner of hospitalitie. But thorowe the takinge awaye of Matrimonye from the Clergie, hospitalitie and the relief of the poore is banished: The Pastore is absent, the personages fall doune, the whole Parishe is oute of order; and in all poyntes lyke to a flocke of sheepe, that are destitute of theyr shepeharde: whiche all enormities shoulde easely be taken awaye, if marryage accordinge to Gods ordinaunce were frely permitted to the spirituall ministers.

Hospitalite.

1. Timo. iii. Titus. i.

In fine, howe litle the vowe of chastitie maketh vnto the saluacion of them that professe it, bothe their owne consciences beare the witnesse, and their owne woorkes declare to the whole worlde. Seynge then that so many enormities doo ryse of the wicked vowe of chastitie: who doubteth, but that the Professoures of it maye iustly and with a good conscience, bothe before God and man dissolue and breake that vowe, and take vnto theym that remedye, whiche God hath appointed in hys holy woorde: namely suche, as sele in theym selues, that they can not otherwise lyue withoute Gods displeasure, the grefe of their owne conscience, and the offence of the Christen congregacion. Rede we not these woordes amonge the Popes Canons: In euyll promyses breake thy fayth: in a filthye vowe, chaunge thy determination. That thou haste vncircumspectely vowed, loke that thou performe not: For that is a wicked promyse, that is accomplished with synne. Agayne: If any man determine to doo any of those thynges, that please not God: lette hym repente hym. And vtterly destroye that, whiche he before determined agaynste the commaundement of the Lorde. Hereto belongeth the sayenge of Petrus Lombardus: If any man sweare or promise any thynge contrary to fayth and charitie, whiche beynge kepte, shoulde turne into a worse ende, it is rather to be chaunged than to be fulfilled. Beda likewise sayeth: If peraduentur it chaunce, that we vnaduisedly swear or promise any thinge, whiche, if it were kepte, shoulde turne vnto an euyll ende, lette vs knowe that, that we thorowe better aduysemente more freely chaunge the same, and rather forsweare oure selues, necessitie so requiringe, then for the auoydinge of periurye to falle into another synne more grenous.

Isidorus writeth also on thys maner: If any man be preuented, that he determine to do any of those thynges, whiche please not God: lette hym repente, and call backe agayne that, whiche he hadde determined agaynste the commaundemente of the Lorde. Who knoweth not, that the counsayll Tolletane commaundeth, that all vowes and othes should be broken, that are made contrary to the saythe? And who is so without all knowledge, whiche knoweth not, that the vowe of chastitie is directely and manyfestly agaynste saythe, agaynste the commaundement of the Lorde, agaynste the lawe of nature, agaynste charitie, agaynste iustice, agaynste the libertie of the Gospell, agaynste the healthe of the bodye, and agaynste the saluacion of the soule: yea it is a shyppe wracke of honestie, a plague of the mynde, a torment of the conscience, a spurre vnto all lewdnes, a yoke of bondage, a snare to the symple, a stomblinge blocke to the wyse, a destruccion of kynred, and a playne desolacion of the common weale: and therfore before all vowes moste woorthy to be banished farre frome the boundes of Christendome, yea and that so muche the more, because it is the dregges of Antichriste, and a mere doctrine of deuylles, as the blessed Apostle termeth it.

The vowe of chastite is the sincke of all euils.

1. Timo. iiii.

But here will the Papistes once agayne come rushinge in, and saye. Whosoeuer after the vowe of chastitie once made, presumeth to marrye: he synneth deadly, and hys marryage is incestuous, and therefore of righte oughte to bee dissolued and broken. For to theym that haue vowed chastitie, it is not onely damnable to marye: but also once to haue a mynde to marrye. Moreouer orders let the contractinge of Matrimonye, and breake Matrimonye all ready contracted. I aunswere. As Matrimonye contracted of the Ministers before the vowe is not onely tolletable, but also commendable: so lykewise Matrimonye contracted of the Ministers after the vowe, is tollerable, comendable and lawfull: neyther maye the vowe of chastitie dissolue or breake suche marryages: for almuche as the tradition of vowynge chastitie is the alone inuencion of man, but the contractinge of Matrimonye is the holy ordinaunce of God, as the Pope hym selfe testifieth, sayenge: The solemnes of the vowe was deuised by the onely constitucion of the Church: but the bonde of Matrimony toke hys vnseparable vnitynge and knotte of Christe hym selfe, which is the head of the Churche, and maker of all thynges, beynge instituted of hym in Paradyse, and in the state of innocencye. Agayne:

The traditio of vowing chastite is of the Pope: but Matrimony is of God.

Note well.

The marryage of Prestes is not forbidden, neyther by the lawe of God, neyther by the lawe of the Gospell, neyther yet by the Apostles: but it is forbidden onely by the Ecclesiasticall lawe. That marryage contracted after the vowe of chastitie made, is of force and lawefull, and maye not be dissolued by any authoritie of manne, accordinge to thys sayenge of Christe: That God hathe ioyned together, lette not manne putte a sunder: The Pope hym selfe agaynst hym selfe witnesseth in his owne lawe, sayeng: Suche a strength is in the sacrament of Matrimony, that it may not be dissolued for the breaking of the vowe. And S. Augusten speaking of them, that marryed after they had bowed chastitie, sayth They that saye, that the marryage of such menne be no marryages, but rather adulteries, appere not to me diligently to waye the thing that they saye. Agayne he sayeth, whyche is also founde in the Popes lawe: Some saye, that suche as marrye after their bowe, be adulterers: but I saye, that they synne greuously, whiche separate, diuide, and putte a sunder suche, as haue marryed after their bowe. Herevnto agreeth the sayenge of sainct Gregorye: Ther are (sayeth he) that saye, that for religions sake marryage oughte to be dissolued and broken. But we muste know, that if mans lawe haue graunted this, yet the lawe of God hathe vtterly forbidden it. For the trueth hym selfe sayeth: Whom God hath coupled together, let not man put asunder: whiche also sayeth, that a man maye not putte awaye hys wyfe, excepte it be for fornication. And who dare be holde to speake agaynste the maker of thys lawe? In the tyme also of sainct Cyprian we rede, that certayne maydes, whiche had dedicated them selues vnto God, and promised to leade a single lyfe vtterly estraunged from marryage, fell from their promise and bowe that they hadde made, in so muche that they became dissolute and wanton in their lyfe and conuersacion vnto the greate dishonoure of Gods mooste holy name and vnto the exceedinge slaunder of Christes religion.

Matrimony contracted after the vowe is lawfull, good & perfecte, & may not bee dissolued.

Saynct Cyprian beynge demaunded, what he thoughte best to be done concerninge suche bowelles: aunswered on thys manner. Thou demaundest, what I thynche of those maydes, whyche, after they haue once determined continently and firmely to holde their state, are manifestly founde afterwarde to haue lyen and kepte companye with menne in one bedde: of the whyche menne thou sayest that a Deacon was one. We see that by this meanes many be greuously offended, and take occasion of euyll: yea wee perceyue with great sorow of hearte, that thorow suche vnlawful and perillous kepinges of companye many maydes bee corrupted and defyled. If so bee that they haue saythefullye dedicated theym selues too Christe, lette them so without saynynge, continew chaste and pure. But if it so be, than eyther they will not or can not so continew: it is better for theym to marye, than they should fall to burning with their pleasurs. Aboue all thynges let them by no meanes geue occasion of any offence to the brethrē or systerne.

Epist. xi.

Bowelles marryed in the tyme of S. Cyprian.

That these maydes, of whom sainct Cyprians here writeth, were bowelles, it is playne and euident: Into howe greuous synnes they fell after theyr bowe made, Sainct Cyprian wordes declare manyfestly. It is therefore to be considered, what wysedome and discrecion thys holy Bysshoppe and blessed Martyr vsed towarde these bowelles. He vrged not so greatly theyr bowe: He wrote not that it was damnable vnto theym not onely to marrye, but also to haue a mynde once to marry: neither answered hee, that it were better for them to liue in single fornicacion, than to marrye, as some Papistes do: but without any respecte had to the bowe, rather than the name of God shold be dishonoured, and his holy congregacyon offended thorowe theyr dissolute and corrupt manners, he willed those Virgines, whiche had bowed chastitie, and either would not, or could not continewe, to breake theyr bowe and to marry, accordynge to the doctrine of the Apostel: It is better to marry then to burne. To auoyde fornycacion let euery man haue his owne wife, & euery woman her owne husband. Againe, if they cannot refrayne, let them marrye. For if a mayde marry, shee sinneth not. If S. Cipzian had thought the vow of chastitie to be of suche force, that it might by no meanes be broken: againe, that the mariages of Votaries or bowesses had bene adulterous, incestuous, damnable, &c. as ỹ papistes teach: is it to be thought, that he would haue geuen the aforesaide maydes councel to marry? Saint Cipzian knew none other way to auoyd vnclennes, but only according to the ordinaunce and commaundment of God to embrace holy Matrimony. Therfore he councelled not the maydes to abyde in the purpose of theyr vowe, and to shifte out the matter as wel as they coulde with Si non caste, tamen caute: or to fal vnto abstinency & prayer eyther vnto wearinge of smockes of heare or goinge wolward. &c. but to marry: affirminge, that it is better to marry then to burne, and to haue husbandes of theyr owne, then to embrace straunge flesche and to playe the whores. 1. Cor. vii. 1. Cor. vii.

of the

Marriage is the only remedy for vnclennes.

Wee rede also, that Pope Theodorus made a decree, that if any man chaunced to marry, after he had vowed chastitie, he should not bee deuorced: but that his marriage should stand in ful strength and vertue, notwithstandinge the former vowe. Woulde God all Popes and all Papistes had neuer made worse decree.

Iacobus Philippus Bergom.

But forasmuche as the aduersaryes stande stoute in the defence of the Popishe vowe, and are nothinge ashamed to make it of equall authoritie with the vowe of baptisme, and to affirme that it may by no meanes be dissolued, but firmely continued vnto the ende: in so muche that if any man contrarye to that vowe chaunce to marry, that marriage is of no force, but must out of hande be broken and made of none effecte, that the vowe of chastitie maye be accomplished and performed: it shall not bee vnsittinge to consider, what iudgemente dyuers Popes in tymes past haue had concerning the vowe of chastitie: and how they haue from time to time vpon certayne reasonable occasiõs dispensed with the vowe of chastitie, and haue graunted bothe to votories and bowesses, that is to say, to Priestes, Monckes, Chanons, Nonnes, &c. liberty to marrye, affirming their marryages to be good, godly, lawfull, commendable, &c. and their children to be legitimate, lawefully begotten, and enheritable; notwithstandinge their former vowe. Firste we haue before heard, how that Gregory the greate, after that he had perceaued what greate murther of Infantes & yonge childre was committed by the reason of hys wicked decree for the single life of Priestes, by enforcinge them to put away theyr wyues and to vowe chastitie, reuoked and called backe againe his decree, restored the Priestes vnto theyr former Matrimony, and such other as beinge vnmaryed, had bounde them selues to chastitie or single life by vowe, bee released, and frankly and freely permitted them to marry: whyche thinge so greate a Bishop, so holy a Doctour of Christes Church, and so blessed a Saint, would neuer haue done, if the vowe of chastity had bene of such force: if the maryage of votories and bowesses had ben adulterous, incestuous, damnable, &c. Pope Gregory the seuenth otherwyse called Hildebrande, although a moste extreme aduersary to the

marryage of Mynysters, euen the very same yeare that he condemned the Matrimonye of Preestes, gaue notwithstandynge, lycence to a certayne Preeste called Burghardus Prouost of Thiere or Uttereth in Germany to take vnto wife the Sister of the Prince of the Ruzeanes, notwithstanding the bowe of chastity. Pope Gregory the ninth confirmed and approued as good, godly and lawful, the marryage of a certayne Preeste called Wochardus Auentiensis a man of great birth and learninge whiche forsakinge hys Priesthoode and ecclesiastical promotions, married Margaret a noble Lady and doughter to Baldwine Emperour of Constantinople, by whom he had many faire and goodly chyldren. Pope Celestine the thirde dyspensed with a certaine professed Nonne, called Constantia doughter to William kynge of Sicilia, concerning her vow of chastitie, and lycenced her to marry with the Emperoure Henry the fifthe of that name: by whom her being of the age of fiue and fiftie yeare had a Sonne called Frideriche, whiche afterwarde succeded hys Father in the Empire. Pope Benedicte the twelfte dyspensed withe Franciscus Petrarcha, whiche was a Canon of Padua and Archedeacon of Parma, to marry and to take one Laureta to wife, and also to retayne still all hys ecclesiasticall promocions. A certayne Moncke called Nicolas married Anne the Duke of Venice daughter by the Popes consente, Colomannus Bysshoppe of Varadine forsoke hys Bysshoprieke, and was made kynge of Hungarye, and marryed a wyfe by the Popes dyspensation, and reigned kynge afterwarde by the space of .xix. yeares, Petrus Elsacius a Preeste and electe Bysshoppe of Camericke was dubbed a knighte by the Popes lycence, and marryed Elenore the Countelle of Nauerne to his wyfe. Remelius a Moncke beynge aged, was taken oute of hys monastetie by the Popes lycence, and made kynge of Aragone after the decease of hys father Sanatius, and by hys wyfe hee had Maude a daughter, whyche was afterwarde maryed to Raimondus earle of Barchinona. Pope Paule the second licensed James the last king of Cyprus being before bishop of Nicose to marry a Venetiane to his wife, wyth this condition, that his land shuld for euer after appertaine vnto the Venetians. Matthew the Earle of Bullain by the Popes dispensation maried Maty king Stephans doughter of England, and had her out of Ramsey abbaye, where she was than abbasse, and hadde two daughters by her, the one called Ida, and the other Matilda. Canutus, which had bene a professed monke by the space of vi. yeres at Ciuniake, was dispensed with of the Pope to haue a wife. So likewyse was there an abbot of Reding here in Englande, whome menne for his perfecte life called Abbot Sancte. This Abbot beinge in daunger of a certayne disease, by reason hee had no wyfe, sente vnto the Pope, desiryng hym for to dyspence with hym for hys bowe. The Pope tenderynge hys requeste, dyspensed wyth hym, and gaue him lycence to marrye a wyfe: But vnder this condycyon, that it shoulde be secretly done, and not in facts ecclesie.

Of these and suche like histories, whereof greate abundance is to bee founde in Chronicles, it manyfestlye appereth, that the single lyfe of Preestes, Monkes, Friers, Chanons, Nonnes, Anckers, Anckresses, ses,and such other like vowes and vowelles,is not the ordinaunce of God,but of man,euen of the Bysshop of Rome. For if it were the commaundment of God,so could not the Pope dispence with theyr vowe, and geue them licence to marrye. But the Pope dispenseth with the vowe of chastitie:therfore is it the Popes ordynaunce and not Gods. Now if the Pope maye dyspence with one: so maye hee dispence with many. If hee may dyspence with many:so may he dispence with all. If hee may dispence with all:so may he geue lycence to all for to marry:and so vtterly destroy that filthy state of the single life of Prieستes, Monkes,Friers, Chanõs, Nonnes.&c. But what soeuer ỳ Pope wil doin this behalfe: of this are we most certen,that the vow of chastitie is no impedyment or let vnto Matrimony: whiche thinge the Pope him selfe graunteth, by grauntinge so many dispensacions for the release of the vowe and for the lybertie of mariage: whiche thinge the Pope could not do,if it were contrary to the worde of God. But as a kinge maye either dispence with hys statute or vtterly dyssolue it: so likewyse forasmuche as the tradicion of the single life of the spirituall parsons is only the decree of the Pope:the Pope may lawfully eyther dispence with his decree,or vtterlye dyssolue it at his pleasure according to this comiion sayeng: Cuius est soluere,cuius est ligare. That is to saye: It lyeth in his power to losen, whiche hath power to bynde. And would God that the Pope and all his adherentes were thus affected,that the filthy single life of prieستes might once be taken away and the liberty of Matrimony restored vnto them:yea wold God,that accordinge to the determinacion of the sixte Synode holden, at Constantinople,the vowe of chastitie might neuer be offered vnto any person,whan he should be admitted vnto the Ecclesiastical ministery, but frely suffered eyther to marry,or not to marry, as hee shal fele God to worke in him. For as Baptista Mantuanus sayeth: Muche better was theyr life in maryage,than is now the life of the spirytualtie without it. And as Pope Pius the seconde sayde: For a greate consideracyon was maryage firste of all inhibited to Prieستes:but for a much greater ought it agayne to be graunted them. The wordes of that sixte Synode are these:Consideringe that it is decreed amonge the lawes made by them of Rome,that no Deacon or Prieست shal company with theyr wyues:therfore we notwithstanding that decree folowinge the rules of the Apostels and the constitutions of holye men, will that from this daye forth marryage shalbe lawful,in no wyse dyssoluynge the Matrimony betwene them and theyr wyues,nor depryuing them of theyr familiaritie in time conuenient. Whosoeuer therfore shall be founde able of the order of Deacon, Subdeacon or Prieستhoode, wee will that no suche men be prohibited to come vp vnto the dygnyties aforesayde for the cohabitacion and dwelling together of theyr wiues: not that they be constrayned at the receate of theyr orders to professe chastitie,or to abstaine from the company of theyr lawfull wyues. If any man therfore presume agaynste the Canons of the Apostels to depryue Prieستes or Deacons from the copulacion and felowshype of theyr lawfull wyues, let suche a man bee deposed. Likewyse bothe Prieستes and Deacons, whiche put away theyr wyues vnder the colour

lour of lyuynes, let them be excommunicate: and if they continewe in the same, let them bee deposed.

Wee shal first of all note, how this godly and Christen councel doth vtterly condemne the wycked decree of the Pope, wherein all spirytuall Ministers are commaunded to forsake theyr wyues and to forsweare Matrimony, professynge a single and continent life. And here see wee, that the vnmaryed life of Preestes is not the ordynaunce of God, but the trifeling tradycion of the Pope, contemned and condemned of all good and godly men from the beginninge, as wee haue before heard. Againe, how that act of the Pope in forbiddyng any man to minister in the Churche of Chryste beinge maryed, although neuer so worthy and mete for the office, excepte hee first of all put away his wyfe and forsweare marryage, is most wicked, vnlawful and deuilish.

Secondly, it is to be considered, that this holy Councel declareth euydently, that this decree of the single life of Preestes brought in by the Deuil and the Pope, is contrary to the rules of the Apostels and constitucions of holy men. If this Popishe decree of the sole lyfe of Preestes be contrary to the doctrine of the Apostels and of other blessed men: who seeth not, that of righte it ought to bee banyshed from the bourdes of Christianitie, and by no meanes to bee suffered anye longer to remayne amonge vs.

Thirdly, it is not to be passed ouer, howe this godly Councell setteth it selfe agaynste the wycked and damnable Councel of the Pope and of his adherentes: and where as the Romishe faction dyssolueth the marryage of such as come vnto the ministery before they may bee admitted, and cruelly enforseth them vnto single life: this holy Councel determyneth, that if any be founde worthy of the ministery, and be called vnto it, they shal remayne still in theyr matrimony as in a state of life both godly, lawful and mete for a spiritual Minister, and frely enioye the familiaritie and company of theyr wyues.

Forthly, wee haue in this godly Councel, that no man shall bowe chastitie, whan he is admitted vnto the holy ordres, but remayne still in his owne libertie to marry, or not to marry, as he shal fele the worsinge of God in hym: whiche thinge is moste manyfestly and directly against the Popes lawe, wherein all Preestes that are marryed, are commaunded to be deuorced from theyr lawfull wyues, or els to bee deposed both from theyr office and from theyr liuing: and if any being vnmarryed come vnto the ministery, they are charged neuer to mary, but to bowe perpetual chastitie.

Fifthly and finally, this is also diligently to be considered, that this godly and Christen Councell doth depose all suche as presume to depryue the spiritual Ministers from the copulacion and felowshippe of theyr lawful wyues. Hereof doth it folow, that the Pope and his adherentes be Ipso iure deposed: and if they remaine in theyr errour, they are excommunicate. But all theese thinges doth the Pope most malycyously with his fworne captiues: therfore both the Pope and so many as consent vnto him in this behalfe are excommunicate and no true members of Christes church. Who seeth not here then, that the pope standinge in this case, ought not to be taken of vs as Christes vicar and Peters successoure, but rather as an Ethnike and Publicane: so far it is of, that this hys wycked and deuyliche decree of the single life of Pryestes oughte in any one poynte to bee obeyed, beinge so contrarie to the commaundement of God, to the lawe of nature, to the Canons of the Apostels, to the auncyente councels, to the constitucyons of holy men, to the practise of Christes Churche, to the examples, of many reuerende Byshoppes and holye Pryestes. And thus muche haue I spoken concerning the bowe of chastitie, whyche the Papistes cleaue and sticke vnto with tothe and nayle, as vnto a moste stronge bulwarke and inuincyble fortresse agaynste the Matrimonye of the spirytuall Mynisters: to declare and shewe, what a staffe of rede, I meane, a thinge of no strengthe, the bowe of chastitie is to repell the lawfull, holy and honorable marryage of Pryestes: and to set forthe to the Readers, that the bowe of single lyfe hinderyth nothinge at all the lybertie of Pryestes Matrimony: But that as before: so likewyse after the bowe they maye lawfully and withoute scruple of conscyence marrie, if they haue not the gyfte of continencie geuen them of God. For as the Apostel saieth, it is better to marry, then to burne. And to auoyde fornicacion let euery man haue his owne wife, and euery women her owne husbande. 1. Cor. vii.

But before I ende this matter of the bowe: this thinge is not to be passed ouer with sylence, whiche sittinge at the table of the moste reuerende Father in God Thomas Cranmere (Archebishop of Cantorbrie, that glorious Martir of Chryste, but nowe a moste glorious Saincte in heauen, somtime my Lorde and Master and moste beneficyall Patrone and mayntayner of my studyes, not only of my studyous trauayles, but also of manye others bothe in this Realme of Englande and also in dyuers other forrayne nacions, a man borne to auaunce good letters and true godlynes, a mirrour of gentelnes and clemencie, a fountaine of lyberalitie, a well louer and doer to all men, euen to his verie enemyes, a pearle of pacyence, a well of vertue, a dyamount of dyuinitie, and suche one in all pointes, as was worthy of immortalytie in this worlde (if immortalitie might chaunce to any mortall man in this vale of myserye). I hearde the matter of the marryage of Pryestes was there in dysputacyon verye learnedly and soberly debated: some alledging what the aduersaryes had to obiecte in this behalfe, some answerynge and confutinge all the obiecyons, prouinge them worthy rather the name of abiecyons than obiecyons. Thomas Cranmer.

At the laste comminge vnto the bowe, of the whyche, they sayde, there are dyuers kyndes, some symple, some solemne, some regular, some irregular, some equall with baptisme, some inferyoure to baptysme, some dyspensable, some, vndyspensable, some conuertible, some vnconuertyble, some temporall, some spirytuall, some byndynge the conscyence, some but at pleasure, some perpetual, some but for a time, some of greate force, some of no strengthe. &c.

I harde Doctour Redman, Doctoure Haynes Doctoure Tonge, Doctoure Taylour afterwarde Byshoppe of Lyncolne, with dyuers other learned men, whyche at that tyme were presente affyrme and saye, yea and that not wythoute probable argumentes and reasons, reasons, that the Prystes of Englande are not botoryes, nor bounde with any bowe of single life, but that they maye frely and with good conscience marry: agayne, that there is nothinge against theyr maryage, but only custome, brought in by a sorte of superstitious parsons of theyr owne free will, rather then enforced by any lawe or bowe. And I beleue this theyr iudgement in this behalfe to be sounde, perfecte and true. For the secular Prystes of Englande are neyther required of theyr ordinarye Bysshoppes, whan they receaue orders, that they from hencefortheshould liue a sole and a wyueles life, neyther do they promise any suche thinge. And where it is commonly reported, that the Bysshop saieth to the new made Prieste, Accipe iugum castitatis, it is a most manifest vntrueth. For the wordes, whyche the Bysshop speaketh to the Priest, are these: Accipe iugum domini: Take the yoke of the LORD. and not, take the yoke of chastitye, as the booke whyche the Bysshoppes vse in geuynge orders manyfestlye declareth. And what maketh this for the syngle and wyueles lyfe of Pryestes? Muste spirytuall Mynysters bee enforsed to lyue single and vnmarryed, because the Bysshoppe sayeth vnto them: Take the yoke of the lorde? I will with as good and better authority proue, that all Chrysten men and women ought to abstaine from maryage. Our Sauiour Chryst in the Gospel hath these wordes: Take my yoke vpon you: Shal we so vnderstande these wordes of Chryst, that to take his yoke vpon vs, is to liue sole, single and vnmarryed? Or rather, that by those wordes of Chryst we are admonyshed and put in remembraunce to forsake the deuyl, the worlde, and the flesche, with all theyr workes, pompes and vanyties: and to become Chrystes seruaunts, seruing him in holines and righteousnes all the dayes of our life? Likewise whan the Bysshop saieth to the newe made Pryeste Accipe iugum domini: take the yoke of the Lorde: it is asmuche as though hee should haue sayde vnto him on this manner: the lorde hath commaunded, that suche as are appoynted vnto the Ecclesiastical ministery, should diligently attende, and earnestly wayte vpon theyr office: whiche is, studiously to rede the holy scriptures: diligently to preache the word of God: continually to pray for the people: liberally to releue the carefull and nedy: and in life and conuersacion to be an example of godlynes and honestie to the flocke of Chryste. Vnto this office arte thou nowe called. Take therfore this yoke of the Lord vpon thee, and accordinge to thy vocacion shewe thy selfe a workman that nedeth not to bee ashamed in faith, in doctrine, in word, in loue, in purenes of life, &c. that whan the hie sheppard shal appere, thou maist receaue an vncorruptible crowne of glory, and heare this comfortable sentence at hys mouth: O good and faithful seruaunt: for asmuche as thou hast bene faithful ouer fewe thinges, I wyl make the rular ouer many thinges. Enter into the ioy of thy Lorde.

The secular pryestes of englande are no botoryes.

Now how lytle all these thinges make vnto the bowe of chastitie, or vnto the single life of Pryestes: who is so ignorant that knoweth not? so blinde that seeth not? so deafe that heareth not? Leauing therfore the bowe, whyche is the chiefe bulwarke, wherwith the aduersaryes defend them selues against the manifest scriptures of god, which alowe and approue the Matrimony of Pryestes, although in verye dede bede it is nothinge els than a staffe of reed and a thinge of no force, as wee haue to fore hearde. I will now addresse my selfe vnto the answeringe of the other obiection, which the Papystes make agaynste the

Of the coun-cels. And as touchinge theyr Councels, who knoweth not, that wee owe vnto them no further obedyence, than they agree wyth Gods worde: If they consente wyth the scriptures of God, wee with all reuerence receaue them: not for theyr owne sake, nor for theyr Autours sake, but for the familiaritie and agreement, which they haue with the worde of GOD. But if they dyssente from the will of God expressed in the holie Scriptures, wee vtterlye reiecte and caste them awaye as plages and pestylences, yea as the doctrines of Deuyls, and the sedes of euerlastynge damnacyon, wythoute

Neyther are wee ignoraunte, what Councels, Canons, and de-

Thirdly, the Papystes obiecte and saye: if that the Pryestes haue not the gifte of continency, they ought to fall vnto prayer, and to beg it at the hande of God, and it shal be geuen them; accordynge to these promyses: Aske, and it shall bee geuen you. Seke, and ye shall finde. knocke, and it shalbe opened vnto you. For whosoeuer asketh, receaueth, and hee that seketh, fyndeth: and to hym that knocketh, it shalbe opened. I aunswere: When anie man fealeth in hym selfe, that hee hathe not the gifte of continencie: wee are wylled and commaunded in the worde of God, not to fall vnto prayer, nor vnto fastinge, nor yet vnto scourginge of our naked bodyes with whippes and roddes after the manner of vnnaturall monstures, and so to kill and destroye the worke of God and nature in vs, that wee maye not bee fruteful, and replenishe bothe heauen and earth with our issue accordynge to the euerlastinge appoyntment of God: but to embrace holy and honorable Matrimony: whiche is the ordynaunce of God, and the only remedy that God hathe appoynted for incontinencie, as it is wrytten: To auoyde fornycacion, let euerye man haue hys owne wyfe, and euerye woman her owne husbande. For it is better to mary, then to burne. Agayne, if they cannot containe, let them marie. For if the single parson mary, hee synneth not. And as concernynge prayinge for the gyfte of continencie, whan wee perceaue another worckynge of God in vs, what any other thing is it, than a playne resistaunce againste the wyll of God? God would haue vs frutefull: and wee praye to bee vnfrutefull. God woulde haue vs to encrease, to multiplie, and to replenyshe the earth: and we pray to bee barren, and throwe oure barrennes to make the earth voyde and desolate. God would haue vs to lyue in the holy state of honorable wedlocke: and wee vowe chastitie, forsweare maryage, and sweare to lyue a sole and syngle lyfe. God would haue vs to beget Chyldren, as wee were begotten of oure Parentes: and wee enuyeng the worlde oure posterytie, lyue and departe monstures of nature. God by oure frutefulnes woulde haue bothe heauen and earth replenyshed: and wee as enemyes bothe vnto heauen and earth pray to be vnfruteful. God woulde haue vs to leaue suche behynde vs, whan wee departe, as myghte prayse and magnyfie hys holye name bothe in this worlde and in the worlde to come: and wee as enemyes bothe to the conseruacyon of the common Weale, and also to the glorye of God praye, that neyther the Common weale maye bee encreased, nor the honour of God promoted and set forthe by vs. Are not these prayers worthy to bee hearde, so directly and manyfestlye fightinge agaynst the wyll of God? The Papystes doo not consyder, howe in prayer the wyll of God is aboue all thinges to bee loked vnto. For althoughe wee haue manye yes and those large and lyberall promyses to bee hearde, to receaue, to fynde. &c. yet if wee aske anye thynge contrary to the wyll of God, verely wee shal praye in vaine, thoughe wee were our tonges with prayeng euen vnto the stompes.

Saincte John sayeth: this is the trust that wee haue in hym: that if wee aske anye thinge accordynge to hys wyll, hee heareth vs. It is to bee noted, that Saincte John sayeth here: God heareth vs, if wee aske anie thinge accordinge to his will. It foloweth than, that if wee aske anye thinge contrarie to hys will, hee heareth vs not. Neither will hee graunte vs oure peticyons. And what can bee more contrarie to the will of God, than whan God hathe made vs frutefull, wee praye, that wee maye bee vnfrutefull, Saincte Paule sayeth: Let euerie man abyde in the same state, wherin hee was called.

But God sayde vnto hym: my grace is sufficyente for thee. For my strength is made perfect thorow weaknes. Howe came it to passe, that these so worthy Apostles prayinge so earnestlie, were not heard? Uerelie they prayed not accordinge to the will of God. And shall wee thincke, that the Papystes, whiche with tothe and nayle striue to quenche the worckinge of God in them, and to become vnprofitable and vnnaturall Monstures of the earth, enemyes to heauen and worlde to God and man, shall bee heard? in marrige and in al other thynges, as had the Prieſtes of the old lawe.

If they haue not, yet God haue taken from them the libertie of maryage, let the aduerſaryes ſhewe it, and proue it by the worde of God. But this can they not doo: Therefore abydeth the Matrimonye of the Prieſtes of the newe lawe in as full ſtrength and force, as was the maryage of the Prieſtes of the olde lawe.

Moreouer, where as they ſaye, that the Prieſtes of the olde lawe abſtayned from theyr wyues in the time of theyr miniſtration: and the myniſtracion of the Prieſtes of the newe lawe is continual: and therfore they muſte continually abſtayne from mariage: I anſwere, many thinges were vnclene to the Prieſtes of the old lawe, that be not vnclene to the Prieſtes of the new lawe. And the Prieſtes of the olde lawe had a manyfeſt and expreſſe commaundement of God that in the time of theyr myniſtracyon they ſhould abſtaine from the companye of theyr wyues: other wiſe it had bene lawfull for them to haue kepte them company. But the Prieſtes of the newe lawe are free from this commaundement of God, beinge but a ceremoniall lawe and an ordynaunce for a time: therfore this matter maketh nothinge againſte the mariage of our Prieſtes, and the familiaritie with theyr wyues. Neither is the myniſtracion in the newe lawe ſo continuall, I meane the preachinge of gods worde and the adminiſtracion of the Sacramentes, ſo that mariage maye bee any lette vnto it, as wee maye ſee by the Patriarches Church and many yeres after, when the church of Chriſt was moſt pure, moſte holy, moſte perfecte: at the ſame time all the Deacons, Biſhops and other ſpirytuall Myniſters were for the moſt parte maried men, and notwithſtandynge dyd ſo diligentlye attende vpon the Myniſterie, that all the wyuelez Pappiſtes in the worlde are not to bee compared vnto the moſte leaſte of them in doing theyr dutie. What hinderaunce is Matrimony to the Prieſtes of the Eaſt Churches? Whyche haue continued maryed from the tyme of the Apoſtels vnto this daye. What impedymente is Matrimonie to the Paſtours of the reformed Churches in Germany, in Denmarke in Polelande, in Swetcherlande, in Frylelande. &c. Where the Myniſters in one daye profite the congregacion of God more, than an hundred wyueleſs Pappiſtes doo in all theyr lyfe. How frequent the Popiſhe Prieſtes bee in theyr Myniſtracion, daylye experyence ſufficientlie declareth. Who knoweth not, that ſome of that Shauen nacyon are ſo diligente in theyr myniſtracyon, that manye times they come not in the Churche from Sondaye to Sondaye: So that if the Churche were a wylde ſtatte, it myghte rome awaye for a tyme attendaunce, that they geue aboute it. Whether the continuaunce of the Pappiſtes in ſpirytuall exercyſes bee ſo greate and ſo without ceaſe, that for the due exequyon of the ſame they may by no meanes marie. The yole tyme that manie of them ſpende bothe nightes and dayes in bankettinge, in Dryſinge, in Cardynge, in huntynge, in Hawkynge, in Whoryinge, and in ſuche other yole, vayne and beaſtlie paſtymes geueth ſufficyente inſtructeyon to ſuche as eyther haue eyes to ſee, or eares to heare, or hearte to vnderſtande. &c.

This reason therefore of the Papystes is vnreasonable, and hyn-dreth nothinge the marryage of Prestes: Seing that many of them are so occupyed, that of all men they be found moste ydle.

Obiection. Fifthly, the Sacramentes (saye they) are so holye and pure, that they maye not bee touched of any vncleane parsons: neither is it conuenyente, that a Preste should ryse from a womans side, and fall vn-Answere. to the consecracyon of Gods bodye. I answere: The Sacramentes of Christes Churche, I frely confesse, are holye and pure, because hee that dyd institute them is most holy, moste pure: and that they ought not vnreuerentlye nor vnworthely to bee handled of anye man, I also moste wyllinglye graunte. But that they are handled of the Pres-tes as of vncleane parsons by the reason of their marryage, that I vtterly denye. And I playnlie affirme, that a Preste in the feare of God lying with his wife, and having her company, may with a good conscience ryse from hys wyues syde, and do whatsoeuer pertayneth vnto hys office, whether it bee preachynge of the worde, or mynis-tring of the Sacramentes. And whosoeuer teacheth contrary to this, is Ebre. xiii. an enemie to Gods trueth, and an aduersarie to the godly auncient Councels. Doth not the holye Apostle pronounce wedlocke honorable amonge all persons? Howe can it then be dyscommendable or damnable amonge the spirytuall Mynysters? Sayeth hee not moreouer, that the bedde is vndefyled? What vnderstandeth hee by bedde, but the Matrimonyall acte done betwene man and woman in the feare of God? This acte, sayeth the Apostle, is vndefyled, clene and pure.
Howe can it than defyle the Mynyster, and obscure the glorye eyther Titum. i. of the worde or of the Sacramentes? Sayeth hee not once agayne, all thynges are pure, to them that are pure? Howe can Matrimony then beynge a state of lyfe bothe before God and man pure and commendable, make the Mynyster vnpure, and the lesse commendable for the administracyon of the Sacramentes? Were not almoste all the Mynysters of the primatiue Churche, and many hondred yeres after married men and had wyues, and notwithstandynge admyn-istratours bothe of the worde and of the Sacramentes: as the bleuen from the Apostles tyme vnto this daye hathe bene in all the East Churches, and is nowe also in all the reformed Churches, whiche somtyme lyued vnder the tiranny of the Bysshoppe of Rome, thorow oute Europe? If marryage at that tyme obscured nothinge at all the glorye of the worde, and the dignytie of the Sacramentes: Howe commeth it to passe nowe, that Matrimonye must bee counted so vyle, so base, so vnpure: that whosoeuer lyueth in that must be counted an vncleane parson, and vnworthy to handle the Sacramen-tes? Are not these the wordes of a certayne godlye olde Councel? If Concil. Gangrens. anye iudge a married Preste, as thoughe hee should not mynyster, because hee is married, and so for that cause withdraweth hym selfe Concil. Nicen. frō such a Priestes ministracion: let him be accursed. Rede we not also, that the blessed Martir Paphnutius in the Councel of Nicene tolde stoutlye against all such as would haue had the Priestes seuered frō their wiues, as though by y reson of their marriage their ministery were not commendable, that it was chastitie for a married preste to lye with hys owne wyfe: If it be chastitie for a preste to lye with hys owne wyfe:

lyfe: how can the Sacramentes be prophanated by theym that are chaste and pure? If the Papistes require nothinge but chastitie of Prieſtes for the due administracion of the Sacramentes: behold the marryed Prieſtes are chaste and pure, euen by the confession of the moost worthy martyr Paphnutius: therefore may they worthely administer bothe the woorde and the Sacramentes. Beholde howe childishe the obiections of the Papistes are.

Yet besides these folishe and triflinge obiections, whiche wee haue hytherto heard and confuted: the papistes are not ashamed (such is their impudencye and vnshamefastnes) to allege the scriptures for the confirmacion of the single lyfe of Prieſtes: but thei are so alleged, as the deuyll their father alleged them agaynste Christe, or as they Predecessours the olde heretykes vsed to cyte them agaynst the faithfull teachers of Gods truethe. Mathy.iiii.

Amonge all other, they allege thys sentence out of Moyses: Be ye holy: for I am holy, sayeth the Lorde. The folye of the aduersaries doeth here to muche appeare. For where as this commaundemente of God was geuen to all the people of Israel generally, and not to the Prieſtes particularlye: the Papistes contrarye too the mynde of the holy Ghoste haue drawne it violently vnto Prieſtes onely. And where as God in the foresayde sentence exhorteth all his people vnto holynes of conuersacion and puritie of lyfe, as S. Peter right well declareth in hys Epistle: the Papistes writhe and wreste it vnto the chastitie or single lyfe of Prieſtes: as thoughe there were none other holynes before God, but a sole and vyuelles lyfe. But if they will bynde the Prieſtes vnto single lyfe by that texte: so muste they lykewise doo all the other Christians generally, both men and women, and so vtterly destroye matrimonye, although the good ordinaunce of God: forasmuch as that commaundement was no les geuē to the Laitie, than to the spiritualtie. If the holy fathers of the olde lawe had knowen, that to be holy, is to lyue vnmarryed: verely they woulde vtterly haue abstayned from Matrimony, and not so destroutly haue embraced it. Scriptures alleged of the papistes for the confirmacion of the single lyfe of Prieſtes, with answers to them. Leuit.xx. 1.Pet.i

But they knewe right well, that to be holy, is to caste away the workes of the flesshe, and to put on the frutes of the spirite: to put of the olde man, and to be cladde with the newe man, whiche is made, framed and fashioned after the image of Christe in trueth, holynes and righteusnes, as S. Peter sayeth alleginge the aforesayde sentence: Gyde vp the loynes of youre myndes, be sober, and truste perfectely on the grace that is brought vnto you by the declaringe of Jesus Christe, as obedient children, not fashioninge youre selues vnto your olde lustes of ignorancy: but as he whiche called you is holy, euen so bee ye holy also in all maner of conuersacion, because it is written: Be ye holy, for I am holy. And it is to be wondered that the papistes hauinge other wyse Matrimony in so greate price as they pretende, that then haue numbred it among the Sacramentes of Christes churche, standinge that it conferre and geue grace, do in this behalfe so vilely esteme of it, that it defileth and vnhalloweth a Prieſte, if he chaunce to marrye and maketh hym vnapte and vnworthy to minister the woorde & the Sacramentes. Is not thys to destroye in deede, that they seme to pryse in woorde? But let the vngodly Papistes knowe, that not marryage, What it is to be holy. Ephe.iiiii. 1.Pet.i Leuit.xix.

whiche is the good ordinaunce of God, holy pure and honourable, maketh their Prieſtes vnholy and defyled (for to the pure all thinges are pure) but whordome, adulterye, inceſt, Sodomitrie, abuſinge of theym ſelues with male kynde, embrasinge of brute beaſtes, &c. wherewith not a few of them are polluted, maketh them vncleane, vile, ſtinkinge and abhominable in the ſighte of God and of all good men. Wo be vnto them, ſayeth the Prophete, that call euyll good, and good euill: whiche make darkenes lighte, and lighte darkenes: that make ſoure ſweete, and ſweete ſoure.

Titus.i. Whordome, not marryage defileth prieſtes.

Eſa.v.

Obiection. Roma.viij.

Seuenthly, the Papiſtes alledge this ſentēce of S. Paule for the eſtabliſhement of the ſingle lyfe of prieſtes: they that are in the fleſhe, can not pleaſe God: and on this texte they diſpute on this wyſe: they that are in the fleſhe, are defiled: But prieſtes that marrye wyues, are defyled: Ergo they be in the fleſhe and can not pleaſed God. The Papiſtes go foorthe alwayes to be lyke them ſelues, neither are thei any chaūgelynges, vilely bothe thinkinge, ſpeakinge and writing of the holy ſtate of honorable wedlocke. What Chriſten eares can pacientlly abyde to heare, that to be marryed, is to be in the fleſhe, to be defiled, and not to pleaſe God: Coulde Sathan hym ſelfe with al hys ſathanicall army more vilely, more wickedly, more deteſtably, haue ſpoken of Matrimonye, than the Papiſtes do here? But let the vile, wicked and deteſtable Papiſtes knowe, that to lyue in the fleſh is not to be marryed, and to lyue in the holy ſtate of honorable wedlocke, accordinge to the commaundement of God: but it is to burne and to bee ouercome with the ſylthye deſires and vncleane luſtes of the fleſhe, to be polluted with whordome, fornication, adulterye, inceſt, Sodomitrye, embrasinge of brute beaſtes, &c. as not a few of the ſmered and ſhorne wyuelles papiſtes are, whole damnacion ſleapeth not. For whordome and not Matrimonye is the woorke of the fleſhe, as S. Paule right well declareth in his Epiſtle to the Galathians: and in other places alſo. Doeth not the holy Ghoſte call Matrimony honorable and the acte of Matrimony pure, cleane and vndefiled? If Matrimony be honorable, if the acte of Matrimonye be pure and cleane: how then can it defyle them that lyue therin? If it do not defile them: how can they than diſpleaſe God that lyue in the ſame? Is not Matrimonye Gods owne ordinaunce? Can God be offended with them, that lyue in that ſtate of lyfe, whiche he hym ſelf ordayned and inſtituted, & commaunded men to lyue in the ſame? Abraham, Iſaac, Jacob, Joſeph, Dauid, with all the holy patriarches, Iudges, Kynges, Prieſtes and Prophetes of the olde lawe (as I maye ſpeake nothinge of the Apoſtles, of the Biſhops, Prieſtes, Deacons, &c. of the primatiue Churche) pleaſed God, and yet were they marryed men? If ſuche as heretofore lyued in Matrimonye pleaſed God: how cometh it to paſſe that men of our tyme lyuyng in the ſame ſhoulde now displeaſe God? Is god chaunged? Doeth god now ſodenly hate, that he hath heretofore long and derely loued? Either is god angrye with hys ordinaūce? What any other thyng is that, than to denye him ſelf to be god: whoſe propertie is al wayes to be conſtant, ſtedfaſt, and vnchaungeable, as he hym ſelfe ſayeth by the Prophet: I am the Lorde, and am not chaunged. If this be not hereſye, to teache that to lyue in Matrimony is to lyue in the flesshe: I woulde gladly knowe, what is heresye? And who seeth not, that the papistes in teaching this doctrine, shewe theym selfs moste manifest heretikes; and to haue mouthes open to speake blasphemies agaynst the moste hyest? But that wee maye perfectly knowe, that to lyue in the flesshe, is not to be marryed: the holy Apostle immediatly after this sentence, whiche the papists alledge against the marryage of prieستes, hath these wordes: But ye are not in the flesh but in the spirite. Of whome speaketh S. Paule here? Of wyueles votaries? Of massemongers? of Monkes, Fryers, Chanons, Nonnes, Anchers, Anchresses, &c? But that age knewe no suche monstures. Of whome speaketh he then? Uerely of the Romains: whyche for ỳ moste parte were all maryed persons. These all pronounceth the Apostle to be in the spirite, although marryed. For whosoeuer hath the spirite of God dwelling in hym, is in the spirite, whether he be marryed or vnmarryed, and not in the flesshe, as the wicked Papistes do moost wickedly teache. Nowe if S. Paule affirme, that the Romains although maryed were in the spirite, and not in the flesshe (among whome it is not to be doubted, but that there were many godly and learned Bischops and Ministers, whiche taught them the woorde of God, yea & those also marryed) who seeth not that this sentence of S. Paule maketh not agaynst the maryage of Prieستes, but rather agaynst those monstures of nature, whiche abhorringe Matrimonye, suffer theym selues to be tossed and turned, yea to be swalowed vp of the raging lustes of the fylthye flesshe? Roma. viii.

Eyghtly, for the condemnation of Prieستes marryage, the papists are not ashamed to alledge these wordes of S. Paule: Haue not wee power to lede aboute a sister to wyfe, as well as Cephas, and the brethren of the Lorde? Lo (saye they) though the Prieستes haue power to marye wyfes, and to lede them about with theym: yet haue they no power to lye with them, and to knowe them as other men doo theyr wyues. For the Apostle sayeth not: we haue power amplectendi mulierẽ, sed circumducendi: that is to saye, to embrace a woman or wyfe, but to lede her about with vs, to the ende that she maye be fostured and nourished of vs. And in that the Apostle maketh no mencion of embracing, but of leding about wyues: what other thyng teacheth he, then that there maye be no matrimoniall acte betwene Prieستes and their wyues? I aunswer: We are muche bounde to Pope Leo, whych first of all taughte this doctrine vpon the aforesayde sentence of S. Paule, and to all his sonnes the papistes, whiche haue walked in the steppes of theyr father, in that they graunte by the authoritie of S. Paule ỳ Prieستes haue power to marye and to lede about their wyues with thẽ. And here haue we one good bulwarke agaynste certayne obstinate & stifnecked Papistes, whiche by no meanes will graunt, that the aforesayde texte of S. Paule is to be vnderstande of the Apostles wyfes, but rather of some other deuout and religious womẽ, which accompanied them in their trauayling and ministred vnto theym of their goodes & substaunce, that the Apostles might be the les chargeable to the congregacions vnto whom they preached, that thei by this means might preache, with the more fruite, and be the more gladly receyued of the people, bothe they and their doctrine: as we rede likewise of certayne godly godly disposed women, Mary Magdalen, and Joanna wyfe of Chuſa Herodes ſtewarde, and Suſanna, and many other, whiche accompanied Chriſt, and miniſtred vnto hym of theyr ſubſtaunce. If the Papiſtes therfore will at any tyme go about to wraſte out of oure hãdes this ſentence of ſ. Paule, as though it were not to be vnderſtande of ỳ Apoſtles wyues, but rather of ſome other women, wee haue Pope Leo to obiecte agaynſte them, and ſuche as folow hys opinion, which affirme playnely, that thoſe women, whiche the Apoſtles led aboute with them, were their owne wyues. And in thys behalf hys doctrine is true and faythfull, and conſonante to the mynde of the holy Ghoſt, and agreable to the iudgement of the godly auncient Fathers. And euen in this place maye we euidently ſee, and playnely perceyue, that the maryage of the ſpirituall Miniſters is lawefull by the woorde of God, and oughte not to be denied vnto ſuche, as haue not the gifte of continency. For that whiche was lawfull in the Apoſtles, concerninge maryage, can not be vnlawefull in their ſucceſſoures, ſeynge that they all are Miniſters of the newe Teſtamente, and ſerue in one vocation and calling. If the Apoſtles had power and authoritie by the woorde of God to marye wyues, and to lede theym aboute with them: Uerely euen the very ſame authoritie and power haue alſo oure Prieſtes at this daye: excepte the Papiſtes can ſhewe and bringe foorthe any commaundement to the contrarye geuen by God ſynce that tyme, and expreſſed in his holy woorde: whiche thinge they can not do, ſeynge that thoſe reuerende Biſhoppes and godly Prieſtes, whiche ſucceded the Apoſtles enioyed the libertie of Matrimonye many yeares after the Apoſtles, euen tyll that Antichriſte of Rome with violence and crueltye thruſte into the Churche of Chriſte that deueliſhe decree of the ſingle lyfe of Prieſtes, contrarye to the libertye of the Goſpell. And Pope Leo him ſelfe graunteth that the Prieſtes haue power to lede about their wyues with them. But as Pope Leo is to be commended in that he affirmeth, that Prieſtes haue power to lede about their wyues with them: ſo in lyke maner is he greatly to be diſcommended in that he goeth about to take awaye from theym that vſe of their wyues, for the whiche God hathe coupled man and wyfe together. If the Apoſtles caryed their wyues about with them for this purpoſe onely to ſuſtayne and fede theym, and to carye their burdens: ſo ſhould it folowe that the Apoſtles caryed their wyues about with them, euen as the Tynkare caryeth his dogge. But farre be this from the grauitie of the Apoſtles. Who knoweth not, that the principall ende, for the which God inſtituted Matrimony, is to be frutefull, & to auoyde fornication. And it is not to be doubted, but that the holy Apoſtles maryed their wyues for this purpoſe, and vſed them vnto ỳ ende. Neither is this a matter vnworthy the dignitie of an Apoſtle, to lyue accordinge to the inſtitution & ordinance of God. Rede we not, that the Apoſtles were bothe maryed menne, and alſo hadde chyldren, and gaue theym vnto other for to be maryed?

Pope Leo fighteth againſte ỳ Papiſtes.

Pope Leo commended and reproued.

Why god inſtituted matrymonye. Gene. 1. & 1. Cor. vii.

By whome had they theſe their chyldren? By ſtraunge women? God forbid, ỳ any man ſhuld ſo vnworthely thinke of ſo worthy Apoſtles. By whome then? Uerely by their owne wyues, yea and that bothe iuſtly and lawfully. Who ſeeth not now then, that the Apoſtles had power,

power: Non tolum circumuacendi, sed etiam amplexandi uxorem: that is to saye, not onely to lede about their wyfes with theym, but also to embrate them, and to haue their companye, according to the lawe of matrimonye. This thing also is well proued by the examples of ꝑ godly auncient Ministers of Christes churche, which had not only wyues, but also chyldren by their wyues, yea and that bothe before they were called vnto the ministerie, and also after: euen in the tyme that they remayned in their eccleſiaſticall function or office: neither were they therefore deposed from their liuinge or ministerie, nor yet were theyr chyldren counted illegitimate or vnlawfull. Here is it euident & open to all men that will see, and are not maliciously blynde, that the Prieſtes of the new Testament haue power, not onely to lede about, but also to embrace their wyues, whatsoeuer Pope Leo with his craftye companions trifle to the contrarie in this behalfe. Are not these the woordes of the blessed Apostle; Let the man gene vnto the wyfe due beneuolence. Likewise also the wyfe vnto the man. The wyfe hath not power ouer her owne bodye: but the husbande. And likewise the husbande hath not power ouer hys owne bodye, but the wyfe. Withdraw not youre selues one from another, excepte it bee with consente for a tyme for to gene youre selues to fasting and prayer. And afterwarde come agayne to thesame thinge, lest Sathan tempte you for youre incontinencye. Here is a playne commaundement of God, geuen by the holy Apostle, that man and wyfe should gene eche to other due beneuolence, that is to saye, the vse one of anothers bodye in the acte of Matrimonye, and by no meanes to withdraw them selues one fro another excepte it be for a tyme to gene them selues to fasting and prayer, lest Sathan tempte theym for their incontinencye. When God had coupled man and woman together, sayde ye vnto them: ye maye dwel together, walke abrode together, eate and drinke together, talke together, &c. but ye may not knowe one another, in the acte of matrimonye. So sayde he not, but thus sayde he: Encrease and multiplye and replenithe the earthe: where it is euident, that all persons withoute exception being maryed and apte vnto generacion haue power not only to lede about, but also to embrace theyr wyues. Doeth not the Psalmographe call that man blessed, whose wyfe is like a frutefull vine, and whose chyldren standē rounde about his table, lyke younge Olyue braunches. Can this thinge come to pass, if the man should haue power onely to lede about hys wyfe, as the Tyncker doeth his dogge? If therfore it be lawfull for the Lattie bothe to lede about and also to embrace their wyues: euen so in like maner is it lawfull for the spiritualtie to do for asmuche as they bothe in this behalfe haue obtayned of God lyke fauoure, lyke libertie, and maryage is graunted to theym bothe alyke.

Notwithstandyng the papistes alledge this sentence of S. Paule against the maryage of Prieſtes: Vacate for a tyme, that ye may the better gene attendance vnto prayer. This sentence is racked and rent, pulled and haled, tolled and turned, wrythed and wrested, and in all points so handled, euen as the deuyll handled the scriptures, which he alledged against Christ. Upon thys terte so falsly alledged, reasoneth the Pope on this maner. Paule sayeth he, commaundeth the laye men to abstayne for a tyme, a tyme, that they maye the better geue attendaūce vnto prayer. Ergo much more are Prestes bounde to abstayne alwayes, that thei may the better geue attendaunce vnto prayer, forasmuch as they must al-Answere. wayes be occupied in continuall prayeng and sacrificing. Thys argument is false, and not concluded after S. Paules mynde. For S. Paule entendeth not by this texte to forbid maryage by the reason of prayer.

For then how coulde he haue sayde: Abstayne for a tyme? And afterward he commaundeth the maryed folke to come agayn to thesame thyng, lest Sathan tempte them for their incontinency. And where as the
1. Cor. vii. Pope sayeth, that S. Paule commaundeth the laye men to abstayne:
that is moste false. For the woordes of the Apostle are these: Withe-Prayer. drawe not your selues one from another, except it be with consent for a time, to geue your selues to fasting and prayer. And afterward come agayne to thesame thyng, lest Sathan tempte you for youre incontinencye. Here S. Paule geueth a playne commaundement, that the maryed persons shall not abstayne, except they bothe be agreed, lest their abstayninge shoulde be an occasion of vnclennes: whan the one partie will abstayn, and the other can not: wherof it followeth, that ꝑ mynde of S. Paule is, that neither of the maried persons shal defraud the other of due benevolence: forasmuch as in this case thei are bound to vse them selues in the office of Matrimony rather, (necessitie so requiring) than in prayer. And these woordes of the Apostle are playne:
Let the man geue to the wyfe due benevolēce: Likewise also the wyfe vnto the man. This sayeng of S. Paule ought diligently to be conside red. For thoughe we be bounde to praye by the Gospell: yet the tyme and place is in oure owne libertie, to praye bothe whan and where ꝑ spirite of God shall moue vs and necessitie require. But to geue due benevolence one maryed person to the other is a playne commaunde-ment, and ought not to geue place vnto prayer, excepte it be with the consent of bothe parties. Laye men therfore to abstayn from the acte of Matrimonye, to geue the better attendaunce vnto prayer, is no comaundement of the Apostle, as the Pope falsly fayneth. But let it be graunted, that it is a commaundement: doeth it therefore folow, that Prestes shall neuer marye, because that laye men are bounde (as the Pope sayeth) to abstayn for a tyme? Why doeth not the Pope rather Marye. bynde his Prestes in tyme and place requisite to Matrimonye for anoyding of fornication, as S. Paule doeth? All the woorlde knoweth, that Prestes do not alwaye praye. Wherfore then doeth not the Pope graunt them eyther same libertie, that haue? Paule doeth? For he will (lest the deuill should tempte them by incontinency) that they shuld returne agayne after their prayer vnto the office of Matrimonye.
Who seeth not nowe how wickedly this moste wicked Pope tearewynge and waste the scriptures of God? But thys Popet maye doo what he liste, and all that he doeth, must be reckened to be articles of oure fayth. The Prestes, sayeth he, may not marye, because they are bound Florilegus. to praye and to do sacrifice. Doeth maryage defoile their prayers? or contaminate their sacrifices? Than the holy Patriarches and Prophetes had no cleane sacrifices: yea than had Christes Apostles vncleane sacrifices.

Bus here is a wonderfull foolinge of the deuill and of the Pope:

For sometime Matrimonye shalbe an holy and a blessed Sacrament and shall geue grace: and an other whyle it shalbe agaynste God and all hys sacrifices, and a defoiler of Gods ministers and of all theyr prayers. Wherefore I conclude, that thys texte of saincte Paule, Abstayne for a tyme, that ye maye the more diligently praye, maketh nothinge for the Pope agaynste the maryage of Prieستes. For if we shoulde be bounde, as the Pope sayeth, not to marye by the reason ỹ we oughte to praye: than myghte no laye man marye a wyfe. For laye men are asmuche bounde by the Gospell to praye, as Prieستes be. There is no tyme, in the whiche the Gospell commaundeth a Priest to praye, nor yet any prayer that is commaunded to the Priest by the Gospell, but layemen are bounde to thesame. Wherefore if the Pope will conclude that Prieستes shall haue no wyues, because they are bounde to praye: by thesame reason will I proue, that no Christen man maye marye a wyfe. Neyther is thys any thinge to the purpose to saye, that prieستes are more bounde to praye then laye men: and therefore they maye haue no wyues. For whether that they be bounde more or lesse, that maketh no matter to the argumente. For bothe the parties are bounde to prayer. But whether the one be more bound then the other it maketh no matter to me: for they are bothe bounde: Ergo they must bothe abstayne. Thus perceyue we euidently, that the Papistes alleginge falsly and vntruely the aforesayde sentence of sainct Paul, haue broughte the matter so to passe, that by theyr doctrine it is lawefull neyther for Prieste nor laye manne for to marye: but for asmuche as prayer is required of theym bothe: therefore oughte bothe to abstayn frome martyage, that they maye the better geue attendaunce vnto prayer.

By the Popes doctrine neyther Priest nor laye man may marye.

Tently, the Papistes not contented with the greate abuse of these holy scriptures, whiche I haue here alleged and restored vnto their true sense, go foorthe to adde without reason a reason or two, wherewith they maye bleare the dymme eyes of the people, and by thys meanes stirre vp the hatredes of diuerse ignorante and doltishe personnes agaynste the maryage of Prieستes, as a thynge not onely vnlawefull, but also vnprofitable for the state of the Christen comon weale. One of their reasons is this: If Bishoppes, Prieستes, Deacons, and suche other spiritual persons shoulde be suffered to marye, it shoulde be an occasion, that the Churche shoulde be greatly empouerished: that hospitalitie shoulde decaye, that the woorlde shoulde swarme with beggars, &c. I aunswere. The Papistes go alwayes foorthe to be like theym selues, that is to saye, blasphemous lyars, not vnlyke their Father the Deuyll, whiche hath ben a lyar from the beginninge. Nowe where as they saye, that the Churche is empouerished by the reason of Prieستes maryage: I se not howe thys can be true, except the Papistes meane by the Church, the Bishoppes and their Officers, whiche sucke oute no small auauntage of the incontinencie of Prieستes. For it is well knowen that in diuerse countries the Bishoppes with their Archedeacons, Commissaries, Chauncelours, Officiales, Scribes, Sumners, Apparitoures, and suche other Popishe pollers and pyllers of the people haue no small gayne, by the reason of Prieستes whores: whiche auauntage they shoulde vtterly loose, if the Prieſtes had wyues of their owne. Who knoweth not, that vnder some Popishe Bishoppes in the worlde, the Bishoppes lette oute whores to their Prieſtes, for a certeyne yearly rent, euen as the Hakeneyman hyreth out hys horſe, and counte that gayne amonge their reuenewes: ſo that hereof thys common prouerbe is ryſen: Sacerdotes celibes. Epiſcopis inutiles. That is to saye: the Prieſtes that lyue without whores, are vnprofitable to the Bishoppes. Therefore vnder some Bishoppes, where to muche corrupcion of maners and lyfe is, this rente of the Prieſtes whoredome is ſo gredely looked vppon, that if any Prieſte, for ſparinge hys money will not mayntayne a concubine, but enforceth hym ſelfe to lyue without the companye of a woman: the Bishoppes officers, notwithſtanding euē of theym alſo requite that pencion as a due debte, for the libertie that they haue to kepe harlottes, if they liſte, accordinge to this common ſayenge: Habeat, vel non habeat: aurenm ſoluat. That is to saye: Haue her, or haue her not: let hym paye his ducket. If we vnderſtande by the Churche theſe aforeſayde couetous catarpyllars and gredy grypes, I confeſſe that they are empouerished by the marryage of Prieſtes: but if we meane the companye and felowſhip of the faythfull, which is the true Churche in dede, then is the Churche not empouerished, but enryched. Wilte thou knowe howe? Both by the vertuous examples of the Prieſtes and their wyues, and alſo by the bringinge forthe of their chyldren in the feare of God, that they maye ſucceede their parentes in all godlines and honeſtie, and be profitable membres of the Chriſten common weale. Not the church of Chriſte therfore, but the ſinnefull Synagoge of Antichriſte, is empouerished by the maryage of Prieſtes.

Hoſpitalitie.

And where as they saye, that Hoſpitalitie is decayed by the reaſon of the Prieſtes maryage: I aunſwere, that to be a lowde lyer if they take Hoſpitalitie for the relief of the poore. For what Hoſpitalitie is this, a Bishoppe or a Prieſte, that maye diſpende hundredes or thouſandes of poundes by the yeare, to fede a ſorte of ydle laſye lubbers, whiche doo nothinge but runne vp and doune after their Maiſters tayles with ſwordes and buclars by their ſydes, and ſitte in their houſes playenge at the dyce and cardes, and ſuche other wicked paſtimes: to keepe a greate number of Horſes, Hawkes, and Dogges, whyche conſume ſo muche as woulde well nouriſhe a great companye of poore and nedye people. Is this hoſpitalitie? What ſhall I ſpeake of some wyueles Bishoppes and Prieſtes, whiche ſpende a greate parte of the Churches patrimonye in banckettinge of ryche and noble men, and in the maintenaunce of whores and harlottes? Is this Hoſpitalitie? I paſſe ouer, howe some of theym forſakynge their Cathedral Churches and paſtoral manſions, conneye themſelues into ſecrete corners to dwell: ſome into the Courte: ſome into noble mennes houſes: ſome into the vniuerſities, &c. Mayntaynynge no Hoſpitalitie at all, that they maye leaue greate abundaūce of ryches and treaſures to their kynneſmen, whan they dye. Is this Hoſpitalitie? Thys agreeth not with Chriſtes rule of Hoſpitalitie, whiche ſayeth.

When

When thou makeſt a dynner or a ſupper, call not thy frendes, nor thy brethren, neither thy kynnesmen, or yet ryche neyghboures, leſt they also bid thee agayne, and a recompence be made thee. But whan thou makeſt a feaſt, cal the poore, the maymed, the lame, and the blinde: and thou ſhalt be happye. For they can not recompence thee: but thou ſhalte be recompenſed at the reſurrection of the righteous. Luce.xiiii.

Saincte Paule did righte wel knowe, that the maryage of Prieſtes was no hynderaunce or let to hoſpitalitie: and therfore in the deſcripcion of a Biſchoppe or ſpirituall Miniſter, he requireth, that he ſhoulde be the huſbande of one wyfe, and a mayntayner of hoſpitalitie. Note howe he ioyneth maryage and hoſpitalitie together. yea verely. Where maryage is, there an occaſion is geuen of hoſpitalitie. But where a wyfe is not: there is hauntinge of Innes, Tauernes, Alehouſes, &c. as daily experience teacheth in theſe oure dayes. The maryed Prieſtes of thys oure tyme after the example of that good Biſchoppe Spiridian, keepe houſes, and mayntayne hoſpitalitie, accordinge to the portion of their lyuinge: but what the wyueles Prieſtes doo in thys behalfe, I leaue it to the iudgement of other. The maryage therfore of Prieſtes is no hynderaunce, but rather a furtheraunce vnto hoſpitalitie. 1. Timo.iii Titus.i.

Agayne, there as the Papiſtes ſaye: that the worlde ſwarmeth with beggars thorowe the maryage of Prieſtes: I woulde gladly knowe, of what beggars they ſpeake. If they ſpeake of Prieſtes chyldren, I anſwere: that as Matrimonye is an holy ordinaunce of God: ſo likewiſe are the chyldren begotten in Matrimonye the good bleſſinges of God, and are called in the Scriptures pure and holye: Agayne, it is written that they pertayne vnto the kyngedome of heauen, and that their Aungels ſee the face of oure heauenly Father. Sayde not oure Sauioure Chriſte of ſaincte Jhon Baptiſte Sonne to Zacharie the Prieſte, that amonge the chyldren of women there aroſe none greater then Jhon Baptiſte? Was not Jeremy a Prieſtes ſonne ſanctified in hys mothers wombe? It becometh not therefore the Papiſtes ſo vilely to ſpeake of Prieſtes chyldren, whome God and all godly perſonnes in all ages haue hadde in good eſtimacion. What, if ſome of the Prieſtes chyldren be oppreſt with powertye? Are they therefore ſubiecte to the curſe of God, and vnprofitable members of the common weale? But who knoweth not, in what greate powertie Chriſte that euerlaſtinge Prieſte, the Sonne of the mooſte hye God, and the Sonne alſo of the mooſte holy, pure and glorious virgine Marye, was borne, lyued, and dyed: To whome is it vnknowen, that the men whome Chriſte did chooſe to be hys diſciples and Apoſtles were poore, and in compariſon of the ryche worldelynges, very beggarly, as Saincte James ſayeth: Hath not God choſen the poore of this worlde, ryche in faythe, and heyres of the kyngedome, whiche he promyſed to theym that loue hym? And ſaincte Paule ſpeakinge of hym ſelfe and of the other Apoſtles, ſayeth: Wee are deſpiſed. Euen vnto thys daye we hunger and thyrſte, and are naked, and are buffeted with fyſtes, and haue no certayne dwellinge place, and laboure woorkinge with oure owne handes. Beggers. Luce.i. Math.xvi. We are made as it were the filthines of the worlde, the offcouring of all thinges, euen vnto this time. If the prestes sonnes therfore sometyme the crosse of pouertie, whiche many tymes chaunceth to the moste derely beloued of God: yet wil not God leaue theym succourles, if they faythfully continew in his feare: so farre is it of, that they shall Psal.xxxvii be a burden to the Christen comon weale, as it is written: I haue ben yonge, and I am now waxen olde, and yet saw I neuer righteous man forsaken, nor his sede begging their bread on the earth. He sheweth mercy, and lendeth to the nedy, so long as he lyueth, and yet hath hys posteritie, Gods blessing and ynough after him. Likewise sayde To-Tobi.iiii. bias to his sonne: We lede a poore lyfe in this worlde: notwithstanding if we feare the Lord, and departe from euill, we shal haue plentye of all good thinges. How greatly God careth for the chyldren of hys iiii.Reg.iiii. Prophetes and Preachers, the miracle, which Heliseus the Prophete wrought in feding the chyldren of the Prophetes in the tyme of dearth doeth abundantly testifie. The sea shall soner be drye: the ayre shal soner falle: heauen and earth shal soner perish, than the chyldren of the godly shal wante any good thing: so mercifull and liberall is God to ỹ posteritie of them that loue hym and keep his commaundementes.

But seing that the chyldren of the maryed Prestes are so great moates in the eyes of the papistes, that they alone must be counted to fyll the whole worlde with beggarie, and to bee vnprofitable cloddes of the earth: I can none otherwise but maruel, that they fynde no fault with prestes concubines, whores and harlottes, and with the bastardes and vnlawfuly begotten chyldren, whiche they haue by theym. Do not these fyll the world with beggary? Are not these vnprofitable cloddes of the earthe? An honest maryed preist contented with one woman, cannot haue so many chyldren by that one woman (if the beggarie of the worlde shoulde come by the multitude of chyldren) as an whoremonger Preste maye haue, whiche dayly runne frome woman to woman, and peraduenture in one yeare hath the knowledge of mo then of an hundred women, as some prestes haue ben reported to haue ben no lesse couragious in the pastime of Venus.

What if this Chaplen of Priapus had had a chylde by euery one of these his harlottes, & so had continued certayn yeares in that kynde of occupieng with no les frute, than is aboue specified: should les beggary be brought by the multitude of so many bastardes into the world, thã by a few chyldren begotten in trew Matrimony: except they wil play as they did in S. Gregories tyme, whan they destroyed in one cytye euen Rome that filthye cage of all vnclean byrdes, and a very habitation of deuyls, mo then vi. thousande younge Infantes in a short space, by breaking their neckes, and wringinge of their headdes, and so castinge theym into certayne pondes, as we tolde yearde, because they woulde not haue their knauery knowen and brought to light.

ordo sacri est re qualibet, etiam ex scortatione. All these thinges bringe no beggarye to the worlde: onely the children of marryed Priestes worke destruccion to the common weale: whan notwithstandynge these bringe with them the blessinge of God: the other, Gods curse, wrathe and vengeaunce. God haue mercy on vs, and lighten his countenaunce vpon vs, that we on earthe maye knowe hys wayes, and his saueing health, among all nations.

Finally the Papistes make this reason: The Emperour, or Kynge, or any other head ruler hath power in hys owne dominions or kyngdomes to appoynte what order he will in outwarde thynges. But Matrimony is an outwarde thynge. Therefore maye the Prince appointe, what order he will in Matrimonye. If the Prince therefore appoynte, that all spirituall Ministers shall lyue vnmaryed: hys commaundement is godly and lawfull, and ought to be obeyed: forasmuche as there is no power, but of God. And he that resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinaunce of God, and purchaseth to hym selfe damnacion. And who knoweth not, that the hearte of a kynge is in the hande of God, whiche moueth it, as it pleaseth hym. I answere: The office of a Magistrate, I freely confesse, is Gods ordinaunce, and greate reuerence, honour and obedience is due vnto it from all Subiectes withoute exception: and the authoritie and power thereof is greate: yea of all offices the office of a Magistrate is greatest, and of hyghest authoritie in a Christen common weale, as an office attendinge bothe vppon the healthe of the bodye and of the soule: notwithstandinge thys I adde, that thoughe the power of a Magistrate bee neuer so greate and large, yet hathe it hys limites, and extendeth no further, than the rule of Gods worde appoynteth, as God sayde too Iosua, whome he hadde appoynted chiefe rular and Magistrate ouer hys people the Israelites: Be thou stronge, and as bolde as thou canste, that thou mayste obserue, and doo accordynge to all the lawe, whiche Moyses my seruaunte commaunded thee.

The office of Magistrate is of God.

Iosua. i.

Turne ther from neyther to the righte hande, nor to the lefte, that thou mayste doo wysely in all that thou takest in hande. Lette not the boke of thys lawe departe oute of thy mouthe, but recorde therein daye and nyghte: that thou mayste obserue, and do accordyng to all that is written therein. For then shalte thou make thy waye prosperous, and then thou shalte doo wisely. Here God commaundeth Princes and Rulars not to do, what they thynke good: but what they learne out of the mouthe of the LORDE, that onely oughte they to doo. Magistrates statutes and ordinaunces muste bee measured by the worde of God. If they agree with that, they are to be receyued and obeyed: but if they dissent from that, they are neyther to be receyued nor obeyed: but in suche a case wee muste obeye God more then menne. When that mooste noble and victorious Kynge Iehosaphat sent hys Princes, Priestes and Leuites thorow oute all Iuda: he commaunded theym not to leane to their owne polycye, or to take wyth theym the booke of the statutes of the Realme, and to redresse all thynges accordinge to thesame: but he commaunded theym to take the booke of the lawe of the LORDE with them, and accordinge to the doctrine of the same, to reforme whatsoeuer was amisse: to declare and shew, that Magistrates in the gouernement of the comon weale, and in making statutes, lawes & ordinances, ought to haue a special regarde to the holy lawe and wil of God, and according to the same to enacte, stablishe, rule and gouerne all thinges. And this meaneth the Psalmographe, whan he sayth: Be wyse nowe, O ye Kynges, be learned, ye that are Judges of ỹ earth. Serue the Lorde in feare, and reioyce (vnto hym) with reuerence. Psal.ii. O kysse the Soune, lest he be angry, and so ye perish from the right waye. The Magistrate in the holy scripture is called the seruaunt of God. If he be the seruaunt of God, then maye he not doo what he hym selfe thinketh good, but what hys Lorde and maister (whiche is God) commaundeth him to do, that muste he doo. Neither maye he make that bonde to his felow seruauntes, whiche their comon Maister hath made free to all men. Rom.xiii. For the magistrate is appointed an officer, not for the hindraunce, but for the profit of the Subiectes, as the Apostle sayeth: not to make them bound slaues and vile paysaũts but to mayntayne their libertie, whiche God hathe geuen theym in Christe. If therfore Emperours, Kynges, Princes, Rulers, &c. commaunde any thing, that is contrary to the will & pleasur of the moste hygh Emperoure, Kynge, Prince and ruler: it is neither to bee receyued, nor obeyed: yea deathe is rather to bee suffered of the Subiectes, than the wicked commaundementes of the hygh powers are to bee embraced. Note well.

Exod.i. Kynge Pharao commaunded the midwyues of Egipte to destroye all the male chyldren of the Hebrews: but the women fearinge God Dan.iii. more then the Kyng, obeyed not his commaundement. Kynge Nabuchodonozor commaunded all his Subiects to fall doune and worship the golden Image, which he had caused to be made and set vp: but the Dan.vi. godly & such as feared God, obeyed not his cõmaundement. King Darius sent out a Proclamation & commaunded, that for the space of xxix. dayes no man should aske any peticion either of any God or man, but of him alone. If any man did the contrary, he shoulde be cast into the Lyõs denne. Notwithstãding, Daniel not regarding the cõmaũdement of the King, nor the cruelitie of the payn, after his accustomed maner went forthe dayly to call vpon the name of the Lord his God. Act.iiii.v. The Rulars also of the Jewes commaunded the Apostles, that they should no more preache in the name of the Lord Jesu Christ: but they boldely & stoutely answered: Whyther it be conuenient to heare you rather then God, iudge ye. We can none otherwise than speake those thinges, which we haue heard & sene. And we must obey God more then men. Those Magistrates therefore, which contrarie to the manifest voice of God cõmaund & compell the preestes to lede a wyueles lyfe, not hauing the gift of continẽcy, vsurpe an authoritie ouer ỹ brethrẽ & geue out most wicked cõmaundemẽts: & therfore by no means to be obeyed, but vtterly to be reiected & cast away. God sayth to such as cã not lyue without the company of a woman: Encrease & multiplie and Gen.i.ix. replenishe the earth. But the wicked Magistrate sayeth: Thou shalt now encrese, nor multiplye, nor replenishe the earthe: but thou shalte lyue vnmaryed, accordinge to my commaundement.

The wicked cõmaundements of Princes are not to be obeyed.

God

God saieth by his Apostle: to auoyde fornication let euery man haue his owne wife, and euery woman her owne husband. But the wicked Magistrate saith: liue as thou may, mary shalt thou not. Whom shal we now obey, God or the Magistrate? Verely God: for he is the most supreme and hie gouernour: yea he is Kyng of Kinges, and Lorde of Lordes: and in comparyson of whom all the Princes of the earth, be they neuer so glorious and gorgious: neuer so noble and valeaunte, are nothing els, then vile and stinckinge wormes. The commaundement therfore of a Magistrate forbidding Preestes or any other person to mary, is wycked: and by no meanes to bee obeyed. Not what man fansieth, but what God willeth, is most earnestly to be considered. Neither may the Magistrate forbyd that, which God hath set at lybertie. Whatsoeuer therfore either Emperour, or King, or Queene, or prince, or any other rular commaundeth in this behalfe: it is by no meanes to be obeyed, specially of such as haue not the gifte of continency geuen them of God: forasmuch as it fighteth with the lyberty of Christes Gospel, and maketh that bonde, whiche God hathe made free. This obiection therfore of the Papistes maketh nothing at all against the maryage of the spiritual Ministers: Whose Matrimony we tofore haue heard to be moste lawful, moste holy. 1. Cor. vii.

Wel, thus much haue we spoken of the excellency and dygnity of holy matrimony, and of the aduersaries of the same, namely of the arche enemy of honorable wedlocke, and specially of the mariage of Priests I meane, that Antichrist of Rome, enemy to God and to all godlines: detecting their most wycked errours and damnable opinyons in this behalfe. It now remayneth, that we make haste to the second part of this treatise, and declare what Matrimony is: that all the aduersaryes of holy wedlocke defaced, and put to flight, Matrimony may recouer her olde glory, and be had agayne in reuerence with all good and godly people.

¶ The second parte of the boke

Of Matrimony.

¶ What Matrimony is.

What matrimony is.

Diuers do diuerslly diffine Matrimony: But we at this present wilbe content with this simple and plaine descripsion. Matrimony is an hie, holye and blessed order of life, ordayned not of man, but of God, yea and that not in this sinneful worlde, but in paradyse that most ioyful garden of pleasure: which (Matrimonye) hath euer ben had in great honor and reuerence among all nacions: wherein one man and one woman are coupled and knit together in one flesshe and body in the feare and loue of God, by the free, louinge, harty, and good consente of them both, to the entent that they two may dwel together, as one flesshe and body of one wyl and mynd in all honesty, vertue and godlines, and spend their yeres in the equal partaking of all such thinges, as god shal sende them with thankes geuynge.

Of this discripcion we learne, which thinge wee heretofore haue partly touched, that Matrimony is an hie, holy and blessed order of life.

life. There are diuers states, ozders and degrees of life, which are com mended, alowed and set fozthe in the holy scripture, yea and those also good and holy: yet matrimony is such and so blessed a state of life, as it excelleth them al both in dignity and antiquity: in dignity, because out of it as oute of a moste riche and golden ꝓud all other ozders and degrees of life issue and flow fozth: yea as a moste fruteful mother bring geth it fozth such as may wozthely lyue in all appzoued states and degrees: and without whom no degree, no state, no ozder of life is main-tayned and conserued, but whole Realmes, whole kingdomes, whole Common weales fal to ruine, decay, and vtter bothe destruccion and desolacyon: so that the whole health and pzosperyty of mankynde, of publique weales, of kyngdomes, and finally of all degrees, may iustly be ascribed to matrimony alone. In antiquity: because in time it surmounteth and exceedeth all other ozders and degrees of life, as things lately bozne and yesterday bzought fozth. Foz who knoweth not that before the ozders either of the tempozal oz spirituall Mynisters, oz of masters oz seruaunts &c. were instituted: holy and honozable Matrimony was ozdayned, not of man, but of god, which was before al men yea without beginninge? To whome therfoze doth it not appeare, of what great dignity and antiquity holy Matrimony is?

Matrimony excelleth all degrees of life both in dignity and in antiquity.

Secondly in this our descripcion we heare, that where as all other ozders of life were ozdayned in this wozld, which is a sincke of sinne, and a sea of euyls, yea and a very puddel of all filthines: Matrimony was instituted of God in Paradise that moste blessed and ioyful garden of pleasure, yea and that before all sinne, euen in the state of in-nocencye, whan man was framed and fourmed lyke vnto the ymage of God, pure, holye, good, vertuous, godly, immozal. &c. whereby we maye easly perceaue, what a pure, clene, vndefiled and innocent state of lyfe Matrimony is, instituted of God, celebzated in paradise, santi-fied by the holy Ghost, and beautified with the first frutes of chzistes wonderful miracles: so that it is not without a cause said of the Apostle: wedlocke, is honozable in all poyntes, and the bed vndefiled.

Thirdly, out descripcion setteth fozth vnto vs, that matrimony not only among the people of God, but also amõg al nacions) euen the very infidels and heathen (hath in all ages ben had in great honour, re-uerence & estimacion. Foz neuer was ther any kinde of people so rude so barbarous, so grosse, so sauage, & so farre estraunged from all humanity oz ciuility, which haue not alwaies most honozably iudged of holy matrimony: with reasons & armours defended the dignity and safe estate of the same, and moste rigozously punished the violatours, bzea kers and transgressours therof: which thing appeareth euidently not only by histozies, but also by the punishments, which by common oz-der they appointed foz such as vnhonestly behaued them selues in de-facing the glozy & honoz of matrimony: againe, by commending and auaunsing al such, as honestly & quietly liued in the same endeauoring them selues chozos they? mariage to be fruteful, to beget and bzynge fozth children, & to enrich the common weale with suche issue, as shal may be able in time to come to conserue it in safe estate against all en mies both ciuile & fozraine, and make it most populus, most flozishing, moste welthy most pzoperous, as we rede of Augustus Cesar, which Matrimony honozed amõg the very heathē

made

made a lawe, that yonge men shold mary wiues, & encrease the people of Rome, & graunted moreouer, that they which maryed, shold be free from common office one yere, and bee limited also a certayne rewarde for them out of the common treasure: but contrary wise, that suche as abhorred matrimony, should be vtterly excluded from all promocyons of the citie, and by no meanes bee suffered to beare rule in the same. The law of Augustus Cesar.

We heard also afore, that Licurgus made a law, that they which maryed not wyues, should in sommer season be dryuen from the enterludes and other sightes, and in wynter go aboute the market place all naked, and curse them selues, sayeng: they suffered iust punyshmente because they would not obey the lawes, but offended against nature, and as much as was in them, caused that neither common welth, empire, nor relygion could stande, because they had not endeuored them selues to beget those, by whom these thinges should bee maintayned and vpholden. The law of Licurgus.

Like wyse Plato in his lawes ordayned, that he which maryed not a wyfe at conuenyent tyme, should be put backe from all common office and honour, and should be onerate and burdened with common charges more greuous then other Citizens were. Thus see wee, in what and how greate honour the very heathen people haue had Matrimony at all times. The lawe of Plato.

Forthly, we heare in our descripcion, that in Matrimony one man and one woman are coupled and knit together in one flesh and body. This is a doctrine worthy to be noted in these our dayes, not only against the Mahometanes, but also against certaine light braynes and wilde spirites, which shame not to teach and affirme, that a Christen man after the example of the Fathers of the olde law maye haue as many wyues as hee lusteth without offence. But how proue they this theyr doctrine true of the word of God? Let them bring forth one sentence out of the holy scripture, in the whiche it is declared, that eyther God hath commaunded or suffered the people of the new law to haue many wyues at one time together, and we wyll reach them the floure, and geue them the maystry. But this can they not do, therfore let them be ashamed of theyr errour, and retourne to the trueth. For the vnity of matrimony requireth, that one husband shuld haue one wife, and one wife one husband, and not one husbande many wyues, and one wife many husbandes. For one ribbe at the beginninge was turned into one wife, and not into many wyues. And God brought not a multitude of Eues to Adam, but one Eue only, and ioyned one man and one woman together, sayeng: there shal be two in one flesh. He saieth not, three, or mo. And in the arche of Nohe, God commaunded no mo women to be preserued then men, that for one man there should be but one woman. For where a man hathe many wyues, or a woman many husbandes: there the vnity of Matrimony faileth: and the mistery of the secret coniunccion betwene Christ and his Church shadowed in the matyage of one man and one woman, is vtterly violated and broken: wherof saint Paule speaketh on this manner: man shal leaue Father and mother, and shalbe ioyned to his wife, and two (he saieth not, three or mo) shalbe made one flesh. This is a greate secret or mystery, but I speake betwene Christ and the congregacion. But of this matter haue I tofore sufficiently spoken, whan I entreated

ted of the aduersaries of matrimony, specially of the Mahometanes. Now as concerning the Fathers of the old testament, whom we rede to haue had many wiues, yea and that at one time, and notwithstanding derely beloued of God, and in no place of the holy scripture reproued for that their act: it is not to be doubted, but that they receaued of God some secret dispensacion or priuiledge, although not expressed in the word of God, whereby they had liberty graunted them of God to mary many wiues, not for pleasure sake, but to haue frute and successyon: yea and that so much the more, because that such as were barren and vnfruteful, and left no sede behinde them vpon the erth, were as I may so speake, accursed: and such as were fruteful and had many Children, were blessed and honorably spoken of, as we rede of Elizabeth wife to the Priest Zacharias, and mother of S. John Baptiste: which beinge longe barren, at the last in her olde age conceaued, and said: this wise hath God dealt with me in the dayes wherein he loked on me, to take from me my rebuke amonge men. Likewyse rede wee of Sara Raguels doughter, which prayd to God, that shee might be deliuered from the rebuke of barennes, and be made frutefull. So in like manner rede we of Rachel Jacobs wife, which when shee had conceaued and bare a sonne, said: god hath taken away my rebuke. But this priuiledge of taking many wyues hath not God geuen vnto vs in the new testament, but hath rather by his sonne Christ called vs backe againe vnto the first institucion and ordinaunce of Matrimony: therfore ought no Christen man now in the newe law to haue mo wyues then one only at one time. Whosoeuer attempteth the contrary, greuously offendeth, and prouoketh the heauy wrath and vengeaunce of God against him selfe. To auoide fornicacion, saith S. Paule, let euery man haue his owne wife, (not wiues) and euery woman her own husband, (not husbands.) And our Sauiour Christ saide to the Pharises: haue ye not red, how that he, which made man at the beginning made them man and woman, and said, for this cause shal a man leane Father and Mother, and shall cleaue vnto his wife, (not wiues) and they twaine shalbe one flesche.

Fifthly, in this oure descripcion it is set forthe, that that man, and that woman, whiche coupell them selues together in the holy order of matrimony, do it in the feare and loue of God, as we rede of Sara the doughter of Raguel, which in her prayers vnto God hathe these wordes: thou knowest, O lorde, that I neuer had desire vnto mā, and that I haue kepte my soule cleane from all vnclenly lust. I haue not kepte companye with those that passe theyr tyme in sporte, neyther haue I made my selfe partaker with them that walke in light behauour. Neuertheles an husband haue I consented to take: not for my pleasure, but in thy feare. Now who knoweth not, that to mary in the feare and loue of God, is not to coupell them selues together in Matrimony for the pealse of this worlde, for beauty, for kinred, for nobilitye, for the pleasure of the flesche after the manner of brute beastes: but settinge before theyr eies the commaundement of God, humbly to obey the same, and to take the yoke of Matrimony vpon them only vnto that end, for the which god hath instituted it, liuing in the same with all faithfulnes, trueth, loue, good will, and harty frendshyp one rewarde another vnchaungeably euen til death dissener them. So said the angel Raphael to younge Tobias: take the mayden in the feare of God, and moze foz the desire of Childzen, then foz any fleshly luste. Againe: they that receaue mariage of suche a fashion, that they shut God oute from them, and from theyz hart, and geue them selues to their owne lust, euen as it were an hozse and mule which haue no vnderstanding: vppon suche hath the Deuil power. But in these our dayes fewe mary in the feare and loue of god, while they all hut and sese after mony, riches, welth, beauty, fauoure, frendshyp, kinred, nobility, pleasure, baliauuce, &c. As foz the giftes of the holy ghost, faith, loue, chamefastnes, chastity, womanlynes, huswifery, modesty, honest behauoure, godlynes, the feare of God, the loue of his holy wozde, a good conscience, a Christen conuersation, &c. it is litle oz nothinge regarded. If mony be present, nothing is absent. There is beauty inough, nobility inough, wysdome inough, vertue inough, honesty inough, & all thinges inough, where mony is inough. The giftes of Gods spirite and a good conscience is nothinge regarded in these our dayes: The loue of mony doth so occupye the hartes almoste of all men, specyallye in matters of maryage: whiche thinge is the occasion, that many lyue so vnfoztunately and without quyet in the state of Matrimony: where as if it were truly and rightly taken in hād, no state no ozder of life shold bzing so greate ioy and so sincere pleasure as the Matrimonial life. Let all men ther foze learne to mary in the feare and loue of God, that desire to haue prosperous successe in theyz maryage.

Mony: maryages.

Tob.vi.

Sirtly, it is required in our descripcion, that such as take vpon them the swete pleasaunt and comfoztable yoke of Matrimony, do it by the free, louing, harty, and good consent of them both. Foz asmuche as the knot knit betwene the maryed coupel is so certen and sure, that it can not otherwise then by death be dissolued and losened: it is most requisite and necessary, that in knitting this knot ther be a most high and free consent of bothe parties, that it maye by a common acte of them bothe, not of one onely, but of bothe equally, that is to saye, bothe of the man and of the woman. Foz where perfect consent of both parties is not, though the knot by whatsoeuer manner of meane be knit, yet the successe therof foz ꝑ most part is alway vnfoztunate, vnhappy, vnlucky, as daily experience teacheth. Can that thinge come vnto a good ende, wherof tiranny, byolence, fozse, and compulsion is the Authoure? Neither can those mariages come vnto a foztunate end, that are enfozced and by constrainte bzought to passe. Therfoze is it said in our descripcion, that the consent of both parties ought to be free, not enfozced, not compelled, not constrained. It is then counted to be free, when neither the authozity of the parents, noz the power of the rulars, noz the enfozcement of the tutozs dzive them to conserte in contractinge Matrimony, but theyz owne redye bente good wyl one toward another withoute all fozce and constraynte. Therfoze rede we in the holy Scriptures, that before the parentes of Rebecca deliuered her to Abrahams seruaunt to be maried vnto Isaac, they sayd: We wyl cal the damsel, and enquire at her mouth. And they called foz the Rebecca, & sayde vnto her: Wylte thou goe with this man? And shee aunswered: I wyll goe.

Free consent in maryage.

Gen.xxiiij.

So

So they let Rebecca go. Here see wee, that Matrimony ought not to be contracted by the authority of the Parents without the consente of the children, but both ought to go together. Those Parents therefore, which take vnto them such and so great authority and power ouer theyr Children, that they many times mary them to suche for lucres sake, as the children can by no meanes fauour, nor abyde to dwel with them (moued thereunto paraduenture with good and probable reasons, which make them to abhorre theyr company) are greatly to be discommended. For to whom is it vnknowen, that many parents at this day, namely such as be of the nobility, do so handel their children, as the Grasier doth his oxen and shepe. For as the one maketh sale of his beastes to such as wyl geue moste, so likewise do the other of theyr children. Who offereth moste, he beareth awaye the ringe. It is neuer considered, whether they bee of like condition, manners, disposition, religion. &c. which be great prouocations of loue, vnity, frendshyp, and good wyl: but the chiefe respect is vnto the mony: whiche if it be greate in sum, is of it selfe sufficiently able to make the maryage consumat and perfect, yea and that not only without the consente of the parties, but also vnto theyr great discontentacion and heuines of minde: and that also many tymes in so tender and yonge yeares, as neither of them bothe knoweth, what Matrimony meaneth, nor what betwene them is concluded and confirmed. But to what point such mariages come, wee learne dayly by experyence vnto the greate derogacion of the glory of holy and honorable matrimony. Such parents do greatly abuse theyr authority, and deserue at the hande of God great plages and punyshments: and before men greate ignomyny, rebuke, shame and infamy: Neither do the children in this behalfe owe such parents any obedience. For the parents haue receaued their authority and power of God, not vnto the destruccion but vnto the edificacion of theyr children. And they ought to remember with them selues, that they are Gods Ministers, appointed of god for the health and safegarde of theyr children, and not for theyr hindraunce and destruccion. Neither are the yong ones so the children of theyr parents that they cease to be gods: yea they are gods owne, his creatures and his children: and the Parentes hathe God set rulars ouer them for a time to this ende, that they should not only bring them vp from theyr tender yeres in the doctrine and informacion of the lord, but that they also, whan time requireth, should prouide for them honest, quiet, and godly mates, with whom they may liue together in the holy and honorable order of Matrimony accordinge to the commaundemente of God. Now if the parents either for lucre or for frendshyp, or for any other wycked purpose would go about presuminge of theyr authority, to ioyne theyr children to suche as are Idolatours, adulterers, swearers, dronckards, ryotous parsons, theues, extorcioners, poulers, pilers. &c. the children in this poynte owe them no obedyence: For here the parents cease to be the ministers of God, and they play the parts of Tiraunts, and therfore are they not to be obeyed. Againe if the parents like bochers would hale and draw theyr children vnto such mariages, as they by no meanes can abide, and theyr myndes be vtterly distract and plucked a sunder, so that by no frendly or gentle perswasions they can bee inyted and knit together, reasonable causes mouinge them there vnto: the children in this case also ought not to be constrayned vnto such mariages. For as we hearde before in our description the consent of both parties in knittinge the vnloseable knot of Matrimony ought to be free and willing, and not enforced or compelled.

Consent in mariage ought to be free.

Now can this consente neuer bee free on bothe partyes, excepte loue be the worker therof, euen such loue as procedeth and issueth out of a pure harte, a good conscience, and a faith vnfained. Therefore in our description it is required not only that the consent be free on both parties, but also that it be louing and harty. And this loue and harty good wyl ought not to rise of lychelle, of beauty, of fauour, of blood, of nobilitie, of fleshly loue, &c. (for so wyl not that loue longe endure, but sone passe away and come to naught) but of the ordinaunce and commaundement of God, and of the godly qualities of the mynde and honest behauiour of the outward man: so that the creature of God is loued for Gods sake, and for the holy Ghost that dwelleth in the party. Suche an harty loue and louynge heart bare Adam vnto Eua hys wife, whiche so long as he had sene her, brast out in these words, and sayde: This is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh. She shalbe called woman, because she was taken out of man. For this cause shall a man leaue his Father and his mother, and shalbe ioyned with hys wife, and they shalbe come one flesh. Such loue also had Jacob to Rachel the daughter of Laban, of whom we rede on this manner: Jacob loued Rachel, & sayd: I wil serue the seuen yere for Rachel thy yongest daughter. And Jacob serued seuen yeares for Rachel, and they semed vnto him but a fewe dayes for the loue that hee bare to her. The lyke loue toward their wyues was practised of all the auncient Patriarches and holy fathers of the olde testament, and also of the Apostels of Christ, and of all other godly persons from time to time.

Gods creature ought to be loued for gods sake.

1. Tim. i.

Gene. ii.

Gene. xxix.

But we shall note, that the Matrimonial consent on both parties ought not only to bee free, louinge, and harty, but also good. There is a consente yea and that manye tymes free, louynge and harty betwene the whoremonger and the harlot: but ther is no good consent. For they consēt and agre together for filthy pleasures sake to lyue together in all sinne, wyckednes and abhominacion, so that their consente is sinfull, wycked and abhominable, and prouoketh the whote and fearse vengeaunce of God to fall vpon them for that their dyssolucion and wantonnes of life. But that consente, whiche is betwene the godly maryed parsons is bothe free, louynge and harty, and also good. Why so? Because in knyttynge the knotte of Matrimonye they haue no respecte vnto the flytynge goods of thys worlde, nor vnto the frayle gyftes of nature, nor yet vnto the transitorye pleasures of the flesh: But onelye vnto the wyll of God, vnto hys holy institucyon and ordynaunce, vnto the accomplyshmente of hys blessed pleasure, and vnto the framynge of their lyfe accordynge to the same wyth moste harrye and vntayned loue one towarde another in the feare and loue of GOD, so longe as their lyues endure together.

Thus we se in contractyng matrimony ther is required a free louing, hartye & good consēt not on one party only: but of both parts equally. Otherwise can there be no cōsummate perfect & absolute matrimony neither doth god couple and ioine them together, that are so maried.

Whether the consent of parentes is necessarily required in the mariages of their children.

But here a question riseth, whether ỹ consēt of the parēts, or in stead of thē, tutors, patrones, ouersears. &c. is necessarily required in bestowing & setting forth of childrē in mariage: or whether children of their owne priuate minde may geue them selues to be maried without the consent and will of their parents, tutours, patrons. &c. I knowe that the popes law regardeth not greatly the consent and good wyll of the parents, but teacheth that it sufficeth vnto the perfecte consummacyon and consummate perfection of matrimony, if the parties that entend to mary together, do agre and consent priuatly betwene them selues, though they neuer obtayne the consente of their parentes in this behalfe. Howe soeuer the Pope iudgeth in this matter, I am sure that the word of god teacheth far other wise. For the will of god is, as both his commaundmēt and the practise of all the godly do shew) that not the children them selues, but that the parents should set forthe their childrē in mariage: and that children should not geue ouer them selues vnto matrimony without the consent of the parents: whose authority ouer the children is great, and to whom the children nert vnto god owe the chefest and greatest honour. God him selfe sayth by the Prophet: prouide wyues for your sonnes, & husbands for your daughters, that they may get sonnes and daughters, and that ye maye multiply. Agathe: If a man entise a mayde that is not betrouthed, and lie with her, he shall endow her, and take her to his wife. But if her father refuse to geue her vnto him, he shal pay mony according to the dowry of Virgins. Also in another place: thou shalte make no maryages with the vngodlye, neyther geue thy doughter to hys Sonne, nor take hys doughter vnto thy Sonne. For they wyll deceaue thy sonne, that hee should not feare mee, and they shal serue straunge gods, and then will the wrath of the lorde waxe hote againste you, and destroy you shortlye. By these wordes, maye wee easlye perceaue, that the authoritie in maryng yonge folkes lyeth not in them selues, but in the parentes. God geueth this commaundement also and saith: thou shalt honoure thy father and thy mother, that thy dayes may bee long in the lande which the lord thy God geueth thee. Here are the children commaunded of God to honour their fathers and mothers. Now what greatter honor can the child geue to his parents, than to attribute vnto them such wisdom, discretion & knowledge, that they can be contēt to be gouerned, ruled & ordred by thē in al things, & specially incōtractinge of wedlocke. Greater honor cānot the childe geue vnto his parents, than whan he folowethe their councel and aduyse in marieng: neither greatter dishonour, then whan they shal herein either neglect their authoritye, or els resiste their councel, wyl and consent. Howe that the children in this behalfe should the more gladly and the more redely be geuen to honoure, reuerence and obey their Parentes: God promyseth, that hee wyll geue to the godly and obedient Children longe life: that is to say, quietnes, peace, ryches, honour, good healthy, wisdom, knowledge, learning, iudgement, eloquence, policy, frendship, a louing wife,

And as these most pleasaunt giftes of God are set forth to the obedyent childzen: so likewyse to such as are disobedyent and despise the authoritie of theyr parents, both tempozal and perpetual plages, paines and punishmeuts, except they repent, are threatned and kept in stoze: which vndoubtedly shal abundantly be poured vppon them in theyr time, as we may see in the histozyes of the childzen of Hely the Priest, and of Absalon king Dauids sonne, and such like. Mozeouer. S. Paul saith: ye Childzen, obey your fathers and mothers in all thinges: for that is wel pleasing vnto the lozd. If childzen be bound to obey their parents in all things, then is it not lawful for them to contract Matrimony without the consent and wil of their parentes. If the transgression and breaking of an earthly Princes commaundemente escape not vnpunished, is it to be thought that the contempt and violacion of gods most blessed wyl and pleasure shal go awaye without plages and punishments, seing the dysobedience is not against men moztal, but againste the immoztall God, whome to resiste, as it is moze than double wyckednes, so lyke wyse dothe it bzynge euerlastynge damnacion?

Who is so blinde, and estraunged from all sight of reason and wisedome, that seeth not, how it is the office and duty euen by the expzesse and manifest wozde of God, that parentes shall place theyr childzen in mariage, and not that childzē rashly, vnaduisedly and without the aduise, wyl and consent of theyr parentes shall bestow them selues in matrimony, where it pleaseth them selues? vnto his sonne, commaunded he his seruaũt, that he should first of all do the message vnto the maid, & get her good wil, & afterward entreat the matter with her parents and frends: which thing he might haue done very cõuentently (if he had receaued suche cõmaundement of his master) seing at his comming thit her he found the maid alone without by the welles side, and had also time, place, and occasion sufficient so to do. Nay verely, so did he not. But he commaunded him, that hee shuld first moue the matter to the parents and frends of the mayd, as to such, which of right ought first le to haue the knowledge of the matter, and in whose power it only was to bestow the mayd in mariage.

Gen. xxiiii. And so did the seruaunt both faithfully and diligently, mouinge first of all the matter to the maides parents, and they againe to the maid, as the history makes mencion.

Gen. xxviii. Malach. i. Moreouer Isaac, of whom we right nowe spake, had two sonnes, that is to say, Esau & Jacob. Esau, whome, as the scripture repoꝛteth God hated, contrary to his fathers minde, wyll, pleasure and consent, went to Ismael, and toke vnto the wiues which hee had before, Mahala the doughter of Ismael: but he escaped not vnpunyshed foꝛ this his disobedience against his parents. But contrariwise Jacob, whõ by the testimony of the holy scripture God loued, fauoꝛed, and blessed obeyed his parentes, and maryed at the appoyntmente of his father and mother. Foꝛ thus spake Isaac vnto Jacob: See thou take not a wife of the daughters of Canaan, but arise and get thee to Mesopotamia to the house of Bethuel thy Mothers Father: and there take thee a wyfe of the daughters of Laban thy Mothers bꝛother. And Jacob obeyed hys Father and Mother, and wente to Mesopotamia vnto Laban. What greate blessinges of God this Jacob obtayned foꝛ his obedyence toward his parentes in maryeng: the holy Scripture abundantly declareth. He obtayned not only such wyues as his hart desired, and hys parentes appoynted: but also suche and so greate benefites, as God most liberally besto weth vpon his deareſt and moste trusty seruaunt that is to say, abundaunce of riches, healthy of body, greate encrease of Childꝛen, an ample family, frendshyp with all men, deliueraunce from enemyes Gods pꝛesent assistence, longe life, a quiet and blessed death. &c.

Judith. xiiii. The like obedyence toward his parentes shewed Samson: whiche although hee had found and spied a damsel that lyked him wel, yet he toke her not streightwayes to wyfe, but firste shewed hys parentes, bꝛought them with him vnto her, & so with the knowledge & consent of his father & mother he toke her vnto wyfe. I haue sene a woman, saith he, in Thamnath of the doughters of the Philistines: and nowe geue me her to wife. Who seeth not here, that the right of placig childꝛen in mariage, consisteth not in the childꝛens wil, but in the authority and powet of theyr parents? Likewise rede we of yonge Tobias, which being desirous to haue Sara the daughter of Raguel to wife, moued the matter first of all to her father, and desired his good wyl to haue his daughter to wife: which thing he obtayned. And the Angel said also to yonge Tobias: Here is a nie kinsman of thine, one Raguel by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, & hathe neyther sonne noꝛ daughter but her.

Tobi. vii.

Tob. vi.

All his good belongeth vnto thee, and thou must mary her, & therefore desire her of her father, and he shal geue her thee to wife. To whom is it not now plaine and euident that by the word of god the consent of parents in al honest and godly mariages is necessarily required: and that such as presume to mary without the consente and good wyll of the parentes offend greatly, and transgresse this commaundement of God: Honour thy Father and thy Mother: and therfore shal not escape vnpunyshed: if we diligently ponder, weigh & consider the seuenth chapter of S. Pauls firste Epistle to the Corinthians, we shall easly perceaue, that parents by the word of God hath authority and power of setting forth theyr children in mariage, and not the children to mary where they will them selues without the consent, knowledge & good wil of theyr parents: which thing as it is high disobedyence agaynste the commaundment of god: so likewise is it a token of moste extreame dishonour, ingratitude, vnthankfulnes, yea and plaine churlishnes agaynst theyr parents and frendes: neither shall this wickednes of the children escape for euer vnpunyshed. Exo.xx. Deut.v. 1.Cor.vii.

And as the holy scripture requireth the consent of the parentes in the mariage of the children: so likewise do the aūcient fathers of christes church teach in their writinges, that children ought not to contract matrimony without the cōsent, knowledge, & good will of theyr fathers & mothers, or of such as haue the tuicion of them. Tertullian that auncient writer in his second boke vnto his wife, entreatinge of the mariages of the Christiās with the Ethnikes, hath these words: childrē cannot rightly & lawfully in this world contract matrimony without the cōsēt of their parents. S. Ambrose also saith: it is the duty of a good father to prouide a wife for his sone. Againe speaking of Rebecca he saith: the mayd is not demaūded of maters appertaining vnto the mariage (for she in this behalfe was cōsēt with the iudgemēt of her parēts: for it appertaineth not vnto the shamfastnes of a maide to chose her husbād) but being now espoused vnto a mā, she is asked cōcerning ỳ day of their iournay or going forwarde. And immediatly after he alledgeth a sentence out the greke Poet Euripides, which was spokē of a certaine womā called Hermione, whan shee was of dyuers woers desired vnto wife. The wordes in english are these: as concerning the bestowing of me in mariage, my father shal care for that. It appertaineth nothing vnto me to iudge of ỳ mater. And by this sētēce of the heathē poet also. S. Ambrose teacheth, ỳ the authority of parēts is necessarily required in ỳ mariages of ỳ childrē, so ỳ without it ỳ mariage cānot be lawful. For as it is writtē: that is not to be coūted matrimony, which is made cōtrary to ỳ ordinaūce of god. And shortly after speakig of yōg widowes he saith: if ther be any yōg womā, whose husbād hath quickly died, feareth to fal into ỳ snare of her infirmity: if she wil, let her mary, so it be in the lorde: but let her cōmit the electiō & choise of her husbād to her parēts, least shee shold be coūted of a light behauour, if she shold chalēge vnto her selfe ỳ choise of her owne mariage. A womā ought rather to be desired of an husbād, thā she her selfe to go about an husbād. &c. S. Austē also in a certaine epistle being desired to make a mariage betwene a certain yōg mā & a maid, declareth, that the maid cannot be betrouthed and geuen to any man without the wyl and consente of her mother. In Gen. In Path. In Timoth. Hom. ir.

What shal I speake of S. John Chrisostome, which in dyuers places of his writinges teacheth that the consent and good wyll of the parents in placing theyr chyldren in maryage is necessary, yea and many times exhorteth fathers and mothers, that they wyl consider the fraile youth of theyr children, and prouide mariages for them in time, that they fall not into the gulphe and botomles pyt of filthy vnclennes: for, saith he, if they begyn to run a whoring before they be maried they wil neuer be faithful in Mattimony. He exhorteth not the chyldren to prouyde them companyons in Matrimony, but he commaundeth the fathers this to do, as a thing specially appertaining vnto the office and dutie of godly and Christen parents: which thinge wee see was not neglected euen of the very heathen fathers and mothers.

Thus se we, that as the law of God teacheth, that the consent and wyl of the parents is necessarily required in the bestowynge of Children in mariage: so likewise the holy and auncient fathers of Christes Church in theyr writytinges confirme the same: openly confessing that it is the office of parentes to bestow, theyr Children in maryage, and not the Children to coupel them selues in Matrimony, where they wyl without the good wyl and consent of theyr parentes.

And although it be not vnknowen vnto me, that the new and later Canons require not the consent of the parẽts in the mariage of their Children, but teach that it is a lawful and sufficient mariage, if it be concluded once betwene the two parties, though the good wil and cõsent of the parents be neuer obtained (for the Papistes teach that the consent of the fathers and mothers maketh only vnto the beauty and setting forth of the childrens mariage, and nothing vnto the vertue and strength of the same, nomore than the blessing of the priest doth) yet the elder and more auncient Canons agre right wel with the doctrine of the holy scripture and of the olde writers. For those do playnly and openly pronounce, that mariages contracted without the good wil and consent of the parẽts, are not lawful: but that they are either lewd kepings of company, or adulterers, or whordomes, or fornications. Euaristus the forth bishop of rome, which liued in the yere of our lord. C. x. hath these wordes: the mariage cannot otherwise be lawful, except the mayde be asked and espoused of the parents, & of them that haue rule ouer the woman. Otherwyse made, they are no mariages, but adulteries, lewd company kepings, whordomes, fornications. &c. Nicolas also bishop of rome pronounceth on this maner: those maryages be firme & sure, which are ioyned with the consent both of them that mary, & of them also in whose power thei are. Pope Leo the first also saith: than is it to be counted matrimony, whã the mayd is deliuered of her parẽts to the bridegrom. Againe: the womã, which hath maried at ỹ apointmẽt of her father, is without fault, if any mã afterward shold speake euil of ỹ matrimony. And in a certaine glose of the popes law we rede these wordes: the consent of the parents is required in mariage: neither can anye mariage be counted lawful without it. And another Canõ these wordes are cõtained: it apperteineth not vnto ỹ shamfastnes of a mayd to chose her owne husbãd, as we haue Rebecca for an ensãple. And Gratianus that studyous collectour & paynfull gatherer together of ỹ Popes decrees affirmeth plainly, that the consent ẅlent of the parẽts is required in cõtracting the mariages of chyldre.

Thus see we, that by the olde Canons, the authoritie, consent & good will of parentes is not onely necessarely required vnto the beautifienge, garnishinge, and honest or solemne settinge forthe of theyr chyldrens maryage, as the Pope teache, but also vnto the cõtracting and makinge of thesame: so that whatsoeuer maryages are concluded without the authoritie, knowledge, consent, and good will of the parentes, are wicked and vnlawfull, and before God and all good mẽ they are to be counted rather whordomes and adulterers, than maryages. But seeing we haue hearde bothe out of the lawe of God, and out of the writinges of the auncient Fathers, and also out of the Popes lawe (I speake of the elder and more auncient Canons) that the consent of the parentes is necessarely required in contracting ỳ maryage of chyldren: let vs now beholde and consider, what the Ciuile lawe willeth and teacheth in this matter: that wee findinge out the truethe, maye cease from hencefoorthe to mayntayne so wicked an erroure.

Iustiniane the Empetoure, by no meanes suffereth the chyldren to marye without the authoritie & consent of the Parentes, in whose power they are: and he iudgeth that to be agreable, bothe to naturall and ciuile reason, because nature hathe geuen vnto parentes power & authoritie ouer the chyldren. His woordes are these: Lawfully and orderly do they contracte maryage one with another, whiche come together after the commaundementes and lawes: younge men, whan they are olde ynough to take wyues, and younge women whan they are of conuenient age to take husbandes: but so that they haue the consent of their parentes, vnder whose authoritie they be. That this shalbe so, willeth and chargeth the lawe ciuile & naturall, in so muche that the fathers commaundement muste go before. Agayn: It is reason, mete and conuenient, that whosoeuer will marye accordinge to oure lawes and the auncient custome, he aske the parentes & suche other, as is semely, that the maryage may be made lawfull with their will and consent. Once agayn: If a sonne marye a wyfe contrary to the good will and mynde of his parentes, the chylde that shal be borne of those maryages, shall not be legitimate or lawfull.

The ciuile lawe requireth the consent of the parentes.

Here is it euident by the ciuile lawe also, that chyldren ought not to couple them selues in maryage without the consent of their parentes, and of suche as haue authoritie and power ouer them: Agayn, if any chyldren presume to do the contrarie: that bothe their maryages shalbe vnlawfull, and the chyldren begotten in those maryages shall be also illegitimate. And no maruell. For what can be eyther good or godly, lawfull or righte, that is done contrary to the lawes of God, of nature, of the auncient Canons, of ciuilitie, &c. And agaynste the doctrine of the holy Fathers of Christes churche. And what meaneth this custome, which yet remayneth in the Churche, beyng a remnaũt of true and godly antiquitie: that whan two persons shall be ioyned together in maryage, the minister first of all asketh of the present companye this question: Who geueth this woman? this playnly declareth that the vse in the primatiue Churche and many hundred yeares after, euen tyll Antichriste destroyed all godly orders and broughte in his owne wicked deuises, was that the parētes in the face of Chriſtes churche ſhould geue and deliuer openly their chyldren to be maryed, that by this meanes they mighte teſtifie to the people, that thoſe maryages were lawful and godly, and made with ther authoritie, cōſent good will, &c. accordinge to the appoyntement of the lawe of God, and the ordinaunce of Chriſtes churche. For in thoſe dayes there were no preuy contractes, no ſecrete maryages, no diſpenſations for money to marye in hocker mocker, in corners, and as the vſe to ſaye, vnder a buſhe, where they will, & whan they will, openly or ſecretly: in lighte or in darkenes: before fewe or before many, or before none: in Church or in chamber, in towne or in fielde, &c. But all thinges were done openly, and with great honour and ſolemnitie, as it becometh ſo holy and bleſſed ſtate of lyfe. For euery one that euyl doeth, ſaieth our Sauiour Chriſte, hateth the light: neither cometh he to the light, leſt his dedes ſhould be reproued. But he that doeth the trueth, cometh to the lighte, that his dedes maye be knowen, howe that they are wroughte in God.

The Heathen.

Moreouer, who knoweth not, that euen among the very Heathē, whiche onely were ledde by the lawe of nature, and gouerned by the rule of reaſon, the chyldren maryed not at their owne will and pleaſure, but at the appointemente of their parentes: as not onely hiſtories, but alſo the very comedies and tragedies of the Poetes, do manifeſtly declare. In all nations, euen from the beginning it hath alwayes ben obſerued, bothe of noble and vnnoble, bothe of Chriſten & Heathen, and of ſo many as were ledde with any ſparke of reaſon, ỹ chyldren, whan they were diſpoſed to marye, ſhould with all humilitie and reuerence reſorte vnto their parentes, and deſire theym to prouide them honeſt and godly maryages: which bothe can and will better prouide for them, than they be able to make prouiſion for thē ſelues, beinge bothe of more age, and alſo of greater experience, wiſedome and diſcretion. No maruell. For who knoweth not, what reuerence, what honoure, what obedience, chyldren owe to their parentes bothe by the lawe of God, by the lawe of nature, and by the lawes Canon and Ciuile: Can there be a greater reuerēce, honour and obedience ſhewed of the chyldren towarde their parentes, than to conceyue ſuche opinion of knowledge, wiſedome, diſcretion and experiēce of their parentes, that they can be content to ſubmit them ſelues, and whatſoeuer appertayneth vnto them to the good will and pleaſure of their parentes, and to be ruled by them in all pointes. but ſpecially in maryage, a matter as of greate difficultie, ſo lyke wiſe nedefull of longe deliberation, muche wiſedome, and large experience: Contrariwiſe, what greater contempte, diſhonour and diſobedience can chyldren ſhew to their parentes, than to neglecte their authoritie, to contemne their coūſayll, to deſpiſe their aduiſe, to caſte away their wholſome admonicions, and to folowe theyr owne folyſhe fantſie, voyde of reaſon, wyſedome, iudgement, diſcrecion, experience, &c. But ſpecially in maryage, where they haue moſte nede of counſayll and healpe: foraſmuche as that is a bynde of lyfe, that can not eaſely be ſhaken of: yea it is a knotte indiſſoluble, and is by death onely looſened: Amonge the brute beaſtes and fowles, louing kyndnes and a ſtudye to requyte thē that haue deserued well of them, is founde: and shal this lacke in chyldren towarde their parentes, whiche are reasonable creatures and formed lyke to the image of God? What benefites can ther be greater, than those whiche chyldren haue receyued of their pareutes? For next vnto God we owe vnto them oure lyfe, oure education or bringing vp, oure trade of liuing, oure knowledge, wysedome, learning, science, ryches, honours, and suche lyke benefites, which are bothe innumerable and incomparable: so that it is not without a cause sayde of ỹ wyseman: No man can sufficiently recompence God, Parentes and Maisters. If we do, although but slenderly, consider the labours, ỹ watchinges, the paines, the cares, the charges, the thought takings, the studies, which the parentes take bothe daye and night for their chyldren: We shall be compelled to graunt, that there is due vnto theym bothe lyfe honoure and humble obedience. But what honoure? what obedience is this? chyldren not onely not to regratify their parentes, and to aunswere kyndnes for kyndnes, but also to take from thē their righte, whiche they haue of God, and to alienate a good parte, not onely of their goodes: but also of their bodies, which ought to be at ỹ disposition of their parentes? Parentes by the law of nature haue so great power and authoritie ouer their chyldren, that they maye put awaye none of their goodes withoute the knowledge and consent of their Fathers and mothers: and shall they alienate contrarie to the will of their parentes their bodies, which are a porciō of the bowels of their Fathers and Mothers? How great the authoritie of Parētes ouer the chyldren is, it maye easely be gathered of this: Fyrst, that Parentes in times paste had power bothe of lyfe and deathe ouer theyr chyldren. Agayne, that it was lawfull for parentes to sell their chyldren, being in necessitie for theyr relief and comforte. Hereof is it euident, that the chyldren be not so at their owne libertie, that they may do what they will: but rather so in the power of their parentes, that they oughte to attempte no graue or weyghtye matter withoute the knowledge and consent of their parentes, specially maryage, whiche of all matters hath moste need of counsayl, healpe and aduertisemēt, and specially in younge persons, whiche as they haue small experiēce of thinges: so are they easely begyled. That maryage therfore whiche is made of the chyldren without the authoritie, knowledge, consent & good will of the parents: fighteth with the lawe of God, of nature, of ciuilitie, of the auncient canōs, &c. Yea and disagreeth from the doctrine bothe of the Christen and Heathen writers, and therefore not tollerable in a Christen comō weale. And woulde God, that all godly Magistrates woulde banische out of their kyngdomes all preuy contractes and secret maryages, & that no promise of matrimonye might be made of any younge persons secretly amonge them selues, but rather openly in the presence of their elders, yea and that with the authoritie, consent and good wil of the parētes, in whose power, & whose right the chyldren are. as we haue before sufficiently heard: Otherwise, that the maryages might be counted vnlawful and of no force. abundance of examples, concerninge this matter. Howe many bothe younge men and younge maydes haue we knowne in this oure age to be beggyled thorowe false, sutle, craftye and flatteringe woordes, and thorowe vyle and trieflinge giftes: Howe many haue ben craftly, awaye and maryed of some ryotous Ruffine, of some Symme Shakebuckiare, or of some Raffe Rufflare: who is so farre estraunged frō all reason, that he can approue and alowe suche maryages: If thys be not wickednes, what can be counted wickednes: If those maryages be lawful, what maryages can be vnlawful: If thus to steale away mens chyldren be not theefte, or if any thyng be worse than theft in this behalf: what may be counted theefte: If a man steale from hys neyghbour eyther horse, cowe, or shepe, or any other brute beast, being apprehended, accused & cōuict of theefte, he is streightwayes, as right is, adiudged & condemned to be hanged: & shall that Ruffine, whiche stealeth away a mans sonne or doughter, whome he moste tenderly loueth, & in whose godly & vertuous bringing vp he hath bestowed a great parte of his substance, whome also he hopeth to be the staffe of his olde age, in whome agayn nerte vnto God he reposeth & putteth his affiaunce for his ayde & cōfort in time tocome, &c. escape vnpunisshed: yea, would God such matters although moste haynous, moste vngodly, moste abhominable, yea and moste intollerable in a comon weale, were not both practised & also laughed to scorne euen amonge the Christianes, and theym that profesle godlynes: so farre is it of, that accordinge to their merites and desertes, they receyue condigne punishment at their handes, whose duety it is moste chiefely to see, that all wickednes be punished.

We are

We are forbidden by the worde of God once to coueite oure neyghbours Ore or Asse: and is it lawfull for vs to steale awaye our neyghboures moste swete, dere, louing and tender chyldren? Whan Nathan the Prophete put forth to kyng Dauid a Parable, concerning a certayne man, whiche hauinge a greate multitude of shepe of hys owne, woulde take none of them, but went and toke awaye from hys poore neyghboure his one onely sheepe that he had, & dressed that for the mā þ was come vnto hym: Dauid was exceding wroth, and said to Nathan: As surely as the Lorde lyueth, the man that hathe done this thinge: is the chylde of deathe. What shall we than saye of that wicked person, which stealeth not away a shepe from hys neyghbour, but a moste dere sonne, or a moste swete doughter from the parentes, which haue growen vp with them, and eaten of their owne meat and dronken of their owne cuppe, and slept in their owne bosome, as their moste dere and precious Jewell: shall hee escape vnpunished? Shall not he be the chylde of deathe? Shall the stealer of a shepe be punished in the common weale of the Jewes: and shall the stealer of men and women escape vnpunished in the communalte of the Christianes, where all iustice and godlines oughte to raygne, and all wickednes and vnrighteoulnes vtterly to be exiled and banished? Gaue God a swearde to the Magistrates of the Jewes, and a Peeoches taile to the Rulars of the Christians? Sainete Paule saith: If thou do that whiche is euyll, than feare: for he beareth not the swearde for nought: for he is the Minister of God to take vengeaunce on hym þ doeth euyll. And S. Peter sayeth: that Rulars are appoynted for the punishment of euyll doers, but for the prayse of them that do well. Ought not than the Christen magistrates to plucke out their swardes, and to punishe these menstealers? Is not this the commaundemente of God, that he whiche stealeth a man, shall dye the deathe? Doeth not sainct Paule number the manstealers amonge them, that shall neuer enherite the kyngdom of God? Doeth not the ciuile lawe iudge them worthy of punishment? Haue not the very Heathen in tymes paste greuously punished suche wicked doers? Doeth not the Canon lawe in a certayn place forbid Priestes to be present at such maryages, and pronounce the chyldren, begotten in those maryages illegitimate and vnlawfully begotten? Agayn, that the Priestes whyche maye suche persons together, shoulde be deposed from his office, by the space of three yeares? And who doubteth, but that the Magistrates bothe maye and also oughte of dutie to punish suche manstealers? Neyther ought the chyldren, which to neglecte the authoritie of their parentes and their moste bounden duetie towarde them, yea and that by the commaundement of God layde vppon them, that they regarde more the flattering entisementes and deceitfull giftes of straungers, than their honoure and obedience towarde their parentes, escape vnpunished. Doeth not God commaunde, that those chyldren, whyche are stubburne and disobedient to their parentes, & will not by any meanes be ruled by them, should be stoned vnto death? What greater stubburnes, what more disobedience can chyldren shewe vnto their parentes, than in the moste weyghtiest matter of all, I meane maryage, too neglect their parētes authoritie, wysedom, counsail, aduise, consent, &c.

ter of Matrimony: wherein at this present (alas for sorow) to to many abuses are founde, so that that state of lyfe, whiche was ordayned of God to be a comforte and pleasure vnto men, is now become a moste miserable condicion of lyfe, full of sorow, care, stryfe, contention, trouble, disquietnes, and what not. Fortunatly and happely are those maryages made, when the authoritie of the parentes is not neglected, &
the consente of the parties is obtayned, as that noble learned man In Lib. de ma trimonio. Erasmus Roterodamus sayeth: Let there be such a temperature, that neyther the authoritie of the elders be despised, nor yet that the chyl-

30. q. 5. c. Nostra tes. Those maryages, sayeth he, be firme and sure, which are ioyned with the consent bothe of them that marrye, and of them also, in whose power they are. This thyng shall easely come to passe, if parentes in set-tingforth their chyldren, and the chyldren in obeynge their Elders, haue continually before their eyes, the feare and will of God. But let vs returne vnto oure description of Matrimonye. It foloweth.

Seuently: To the entent, that they twoo maye dwel together as one flesche & bodye of one will and mynde in all honestie, vertue and godlines. We lasse of all hearde in oure description, that maryage ought not to be constrayned and enforced: but that suche as entend to ioyne and couple them selfs together in the holy state of matrimony, should do it in the feare and loue of God, by the free, louing, hartie and good consent of bothe parties. Nowe in this parte is shewed for what cause the maryed folke take vpon them the matrimonial lyfe. Verely not to do as the Ruffine and Harlotte do, whiche so sone as they haue satisfied their fylthye & fleshly luste, departe one from another, not caringe greatly whether they afterward do euer mete again together or not, being ledde with an vniuersall ione towarde all other alyke, that be of their disposicio (for their loue ryseth not of the spirit, but of the flesche: not of God, but of the deuyll: not of vertue, but of vice, and therefore it hath no continuaūce) but with so hartye and vnfayned loue, one to embrace another yea and that in all honestie, vertue and godlines, that they may lyue together as one flesh and bodye of one will and mynde, and neuer alter their loue, nor departe one from another, tyll deathe depart them.
The loue of maryed folke ought to be moste pure. dere and constant. Greate is the loue betwene parentes and their chyldren: notwithstādinge not suche loue as is betwixte man and wyfe. For the parentes many tymes depart from the chyldren, & the chyldren frō the parētes,

one

one dwelling in one contrye, and the other in another, and peraduẽture neuer meet afterwarde together: but the loue of the maried folke is so great & feruent one to another, that they are become inseperable, and can not be plucked asunder one from another, but by violẽce, yea and that with the great grefe & payn of both parties. One house holdeth them both. On one table they feed bothe. In one bedde they lye bothe. Whatsoeuer one hath, bothe haue. Whosoeuer departe, thei remayn styll together. Whosoeuer geue ouer frendship, they continew in such bonde of amitie, as is vnloseable: they are so knytte together, bothe in bodye and mynde. Let the father geue place, the mother geue place, the chyldren, the brothers and systers, yea let all the heape of freends geue place to the sweet benevolence and entier loue of man and wyfe. For the father, mother, chyldren, brethren, systers, kynnesfolke, be the freends of nature, and the workes of fortune: but mã and wyfe are the singulare giftes of God, and the mistery of Christe & of his holy congregacion. The man also had a wyfe, and the wyfe an husbande, before father, mother, brother, syster, or any other freend. In consideracion wherof, God commaunded the man to leaue father and mother, and to cleaue vnto his wyfe: that aboue all other thinges he shoulde keep to hys lyues ende that thing, whiche was firste of all geuen vnto hym: agayne, that one of theym shoulde not at any tyme be without the other, seeyng that one was not made without the other: yea the one was made of the other to declare with what vnloosseable glewe man and wyfe are ioyned together, that they maye for euer in true loue persеuer and continewe together, the husbande in hys wyfe, and the wyfe in her husbande, and so lyue one in another, as a bone of bones, and flesche of flesh. The chyldren to depatte frome their parentes, and the parentes to leaue their chyldren, no lawe forbiddeth: yea somtime necessitie compelleth, profite stirreth, consideracion moueth: but the wyfe from her husbande, or the husbande frome hys wyfe, no lawe, no necessitie, no profit, no consideration, doth permitte to departe: forasmuch as no man can put them asunder, whom God hath coupled and ioyned together. This thing is moste euidẽtly and playnly setfoorthe in the holy scriptures, bothe of the olde & newe Testament. For at the beginning so sone as God had instituted the blessed order of holy and honorable Matrimonye, these wordes were spoken: The man shall forsake hys father and mother, and shall cleaue tõ his wyfe, and they shall be twoo in one flesche. Nowe what thynge is more holy, than the naturall loue of the chylde to his father? And yet the loue of wedlocke is preferred aboue it, yea and that not by mans, but by Gods authoritie. The father is forsaken, the mother is forsaken, but the wyfe is stycked to. The son in the ciuile lawe emancipate, that is to saye, enfranchysed, and out of hys fathers bondes, beginneth to be his owne man & at libertie. The sonne, in the same lawe abdicate, ỳ is to sai, forsakẽ & disherited of his father, ceseth to be his sonne. But only death doth defeate wedlocke, if yet death defeateth it. No diuersitie of mãners, no facietie or lothsõnes, no deformitie or euill fauourednes, no sterilitie or barẽnes, no age, no sikenes, no pestilẽce, no leprosie, or any other cõtagious disease, no religiõ, no licence, nor any power of mã may separate the man frõ his wyfe, or the wyfe from her husbande. Is it lawfull for any mā to depart from him self? or any man to leaue hym self? Neither is it lawfull, the wyfe to forsake her husbande, or the husband his wyfe. The wyfe, which is made of mās ribbe & of his flesh, euē the same flesh, & the same bone of his bones for an help vnto man: God neuer would her to be separate frō her husbād, but rather cōmaunded, ỹ they vnseparably shuld lyue together, so lōg as lyfe endureth in perfect loue & continual concorde: forasmuche as suche & so great is wedlocks loue, that vnneth death can set a sunder those: whome lyfe hath knytte together.

Deut. xxiiii.

And what other thing taughte God by thys lawe geuen to the Iewes, that he that maryed a new wyfe, shuld not be cōpelled that yeare to go forthe vnto the battel, but rather to be free at home one yeare, & to reioyce with hys wyfe, whyche he hath taken: than the continuall and ioyfull cohabitation and dwelling together of man and wyfe all their lyfe time in moste feruent loue, amitie and quietnes without either alteration or separatiō? The very same thing teacheth Salomō in these wordes: Be gladde with the wyfe of thy youthe: Louinge is the Hynde, and frendely is the Roe: let her breastes alwayes satisfye thee, and holde thee euer content with her. My sonne, why wilt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and embrace the bosome of another woman? For euery mans waies are open in the sight of the Lorde, and he pondereth all their goinges. The wickednes of the vngodly shal catch hym self, and with the snares of his owne sinnes shall he be trapped. Agayne he sayeth: Use thy self to lyue ioyfully with thy wyfe, whome thou louest, all the dayes of thy life, whyche is but vayne, that God geueth thee vnder the Sunne, all the dayes of thy vanitie: for that is thy portion in this lyfe, of all thy labour and trauayle, that thou takest vnder the Sunne.

Likewise are we taught in the new Testament, that such as godly marye, ought not to deuide them selfs one from another, tyll death separate them: but rather perseuer, remayne and continew together in perfecte loue vnto the ende without any eyther alteration or separacion. For in the Gospell we rede, that when the Phariseys demaunded of Christe, whether it be lawfull for a man to make a deuorcemēt with his wyfe for any manner of cause? He answered and sayde vnto them: Haue ye not read, how that he whiche made man at the beginninge, made them man and woman, and saide? For this cause shall a man leaue father and mother, & shall cleaue vnto his wyfe, and they twayne shal be one flesh. Wherfore now they are not twayne, but one flesh. Let not man therfore put asunder, that which God hath coupled together. They sayd vnto hym: Why did Moyses then cōmaūd to geue a testimonial of deuorcemēt, & to put her away? He said vnto the: Moses, because of the heardnes of your heartes suffred you to put awaye your wyues: but from the beginninge it was not so. I say vnto you: Whosoeuer putteth away his wyfe except it be for fornication (& maryeth another) breaketh wedlocke. And whoso maryeth her that is deuorced, doth cōmit adultery. Of these wordes of our sauiour Christ we learn ỹ very same thig, ỹ we heard before out of ỹ old testamēt, namely ỹ man & wyfe ioining thē selfs together in ỹ holy order of honorable wedlock, ought not to diuide thē selfs one frō another for euery light

cause, as

as the Jewes did contraye to Gods institution and ordinaunce, but rather as faythfull yokefellowes knytte together with a perfect bōde of loue in the feare of God thorow the holy Ghoste, remayne & continew together vnto their lyues ende. Likewise sayeth s. Paule to the maryed folke: Withdraw not your selues one from another, except it be with consent for a time, for to geue your selues to fasting & prayer. And afterward come agayn together, lest Sathan tempt you for your incontinency. Agayne he sayeth: vnto the maryed commaundē not I, but the Lord. Let not the wyfe be separated from the husbāde. If she separate her self, let her remayn vnmarryed, or be reconciled vnto her husband agayn. And let not the husband put away his wyfe frō him. Once agayne: Let euery man abyde in thesame callinge wherein he was called, &c. Arte thou bounde vnto a wife: seke not to be louſed, &c. The wyfe is bounde to the maryage, so long as her husbande lyueth. In like manner sayeth sainct Peter: ye men dwell with your wyues accordinge to knowledge: geuing honour vnto the wyfe, as vnto the weaker vessell, and as vnto theym that are heyres also of the grace of lyfe, that your prayers be not hyndred. And as the Apostles taught, ỳ the maryed folke should frendly and louingly, godly and quietly dwell together: so likewise did they practise thesame in their matrimoniall lyfe. For after that they were called vnto the ministerye, they did not forsake and put awaye their wyues, as the Papistes fayne, but they lyued with them according to the law of God, and ledde their wyues aboute with theym, whan they went from contrye to contrye, preaching the Gospel of Christ: yea histories make mencion, howe some of them accompanied their wyues, euen vnto the place of Martirdome, confortīg and exhortīg them to be strong in the fayth of Christe, & valeauntly and constantly to abyde in thesame vnto the ende, that by this meanes they maye receyue an vncorruptible croune of glory, which God hath promised to thē ỳ loue him. And as ỳ Apostles continued wt their wyues: so likewise did all godly men, bothe of the olde & newe testamēt, & so many also as had the feare of God before their eyes in al ages: to declare, ỳ such as take vpō thē the swete & pleasaūt yoke of Matrimony, shuld not disseuer thē selues one frō another, but dwel together, & cleaue one vnto another as one flesh & bodye, of one wyll & mynd, according to the institucion & ordinaūce of God. But we shal here note, ỳ our descripcio doeth not only require, ỳ the maryed folke, as one flesh & body of one wil & mynde dwel together, but also ỳ thys their dwelling together, be in al honestie, vertue & godlines. The ruffin & the harlotte dwell together, but it is not in vertue, in honestie, or in godlines, but rather in all kynd of sinnefull vnclennes & wicked abhominacio, so that their dwelling together is detestable before God, not blessed, but cursed: ỳ ende wherof in this worlde is shame and confusion, & in the worlde to come euerlastinge death & dānacion. And here is a good lesso for the maryed folke to learne, that in the matrimoniall lyfe, they ought not to behaue them selues as mules and horses, whiche haue no vnderstanding, nor lyke vnto the ignoraūte Gentiles, whiche knowe not God, and therfore walke in the luste of concupiscence, and geue their members seruauntes to vnclennes and to iniquitie, beyng full of all vnrighteousnes, fornication, wyckednes, &c.

but rather leade their lyfes together in all honesty, vertue and godlines. And this is that, whiche sainct Paule wryteth: This is the will of God (sayeth he) euen youre holynes, that ye shoulde abstayne from fornication, and that euery one of you shoulde knowe howe to kepe his vessel in holines and honour, and not in the luste of concupiscence, as do the Heathen, whiche knowe not God, For God hath not called vs vnto vnclennes, but vnto holines. Agayne: The tyme is shorte. It remayneth, that they whiche haue wyues, bee as thoughe they had none. For the fashion of this worlde goeth away. Than shal the maryed folke lyue together in honestie, vertue and godlines, whā one is contented with anothers company, hauinge their myndes vtterly estraunged from all wicked companye and straunge loue: whā they vse a modeste temperaunce and temperate modestie in the matrimanyall acte, remembring that they come not together onely for carnall copulation, but muche more for the exercises of the spirite, as prayer, fastyng, &c. Agayne, whā suche shamefacednes and loue of honestie occupye their hearts, that not so much as an vncleane, thought ryseth vp in their myndes, so farre is it of, that eyther fylthye communication or vncleane actes be founde in theym: in fine, whan they haue the feare of God so before theyr eyes, that there is an holy stryfe of enuye betwene them, who maye moste excell other in honestie, vertue and godlines.

Howe maryed folke may liue together, godly and vertuously

Thus haue we hearde, how all godly maryed persons ought to cōtinew their lyfes together, to dwell together, to companye together, and by no meanes to separate them selues one frō another, tyll death departe them, according to this sayeng of our Sauiour Christ: That God hath coupled together, let no man put asunder. Saincte Paule also sayeth: Lette not the wyfe be separated from her husbande. If she separate her selfe, lette her remayne vnmaryed, or be reconciled vnto her husbande agayne. And let not the husbande put awaye hys wyfe from hym.

Of diuorcement.

But here conuenient place requireth to moue this question: Whether maryed folke in any respecte maie be separate one from another, and marye againe, as though Matrimonye had neuer ben contracted betwene them? I aunswere: It is to be wished, that the bedde of Matrimonye shoulde be kept of all maryed folke so holy, cleane, pure & vndefiled euen vnto the ende of their lyfe, that not so much as a spot or wyncle, or any other deformitie may be found in it: seing that God blesseth maryage, but cursseth whoredom. Notwithstāding, forasmuch as the deuil goeth about lyke a rorying Lió, walking about seking whō he may deuour, & entreth no ordinãce, no kynd of lyfe appointed of God so greatly, as ỳ holy state of honorable wedlocke, sweating euery moment of an houre to dishonest & deface the honoure & dignitie of the same, thorow his suttle suggestiōs: which thing thorow the gylefull entysements & deceatful pleasurs of the flesh he many times bringeth to passe. It shal not be out of the way to cōsider thys question, and to see what the mynde of the holy Ghoste is in thys behalfe: althoughe I knowe, howe ieoperdous a thinge it is in these oure dayes to pronounce & geue iudgement, yea almoste to speake of such matters.

1. Pet. v.

The deuyls enuye against matrimonye.

The Pope doeth alligge and appinte diuerse causes, why the maried

folke maye be separate, diuorced and put asunder one from another: but he by no means graunteth, that such as be diuorced maye in any condition marye agayne to any other, although they fele them selues neuer so vnapte to contayn and to lyde a single and vnmaryed lyfe, whan notwithstanding God sayeth: It is not good for man to bee alone. And the Apostle writeth: It is better to marye then to burne. But leauing the fantastical dreames and trifling tradicions of that Romishe Bishop, lette vs consider, what the doctrine of the holy scripture, whiche alone is the worde of trueth, teacheth in this behalfe. In the fift Chapter of the Gospel of blessed S. Matthew, Christ restoring the law of God to ỳ true meaning & vnderstãding therof, which before was not onely darkened, but also corrupted with the blynde & pestilent glozes of the Scribes and Pharisees, and expounding this commaundement: Thou shalt not commit adultery: amõg other, hath these wordes: It is sayde: Whosoeuer putteth away his wyfe, let him geue her a letter of the deuorcement. But I say vnto you: Whosoeuer putteth away his wyfe, excepte it be for fornication, causeth her to breake wedlocke. And whosoeuer maryeth her, that is deuorced: committeth adulterye. In the .xix. Chapter of thesame Gospell we rede, that the Pharisees demaunded of Christe: whether it were lawfull for a man to make a deuorcement with hys wyfe for any maner of cause. They sayde moreouer vnto hym: that Moyses commaunded to geue a testimoniall of deuorcement, and to put her awaye. But Christe sayd vnto them: Moyses because of the hardnes of youre heartes, suffred you to put awai your wyues: but frõ the beginning it was not so. I sai vnto you: Whosoeuer putteth away his wyfe, except it be for fornication, & marieth another, breaketh wedlocke. And who so marieth her, which is deuorced, doeth cõmit adultery. In these wordes of oure Sauioure Christ is declared, first of all that although Moses for auoiding other greuous inconueniences betwen man & wyfe suffred deuorcement to be made betwen the maryed folke, yet that it was not the cõmaundement of God, that the man should separate him self from hys wyfe for euery tryfling displeasure, but ỳ such deuorcements were suffred only for this purpose, that the woman shoulde not be euyll entreated of ỳ man, yea and peraduenture, if she should continew with hym, be maymed and put in ieopardye of her lyfe. For the Iewes among all the people of the world are moste furious, and soneste prouoked vnto anger and moste redy to reuenge, yea and hardly leaue of displeasure conceyued agaynst any persons, specially agaynst their wyues, whome they haue in subiection, and ouer whome they rule as Lordes: as they are also of all people moste obstinate and stiffenecked, vncircũcised, as the scripture calleth thẽ, both in hearts & eares. Therfore to auoyd these icõueniẽs, Moses suffred deuorcemẽts to be made oftẽtimes betwen the Iewes & their wyues: whã notwithstãding it was not so from ỳ beginning, as Christ sayth. S. Paule willeth, ỳ if any displeasur chãce at any time betwen mã & wyfe, not ỳ they should be deuorced one frõ a nother, but rather ỳ they should be reconciled again one to the other. His wordes are these: Vnto ỳ maryed cõmaũde not I, but the Lord. Let not ỳ wyfe be separated frõ the husband. If she separate her self, let her remayn vnmaryed, or be reconciled vnto her husband agayne.

And let not the husband put away his wyfe from hym. Likewise sayeth S. Peter: Ye men dwell with your wyues, according to knowledge geuing honor to the wyfe, as vnto the weaker vessel, and as vnto the, that are heyres also of the grace of lyfe. But let vs heare the woords of Moyses concerning deuorcement: When a man (sayeth he) hath taken a wyfe, & maryed her, if she finde no fauour in his eyes, because he hath spied some vnclennes in her: then let hym write a byll of diuorcement, and put it in her hande, and send her out of his house. And whe she is departed out of his house, let her go, and be an other mans wife. And if the seconde husbande hate her, let hym write her also a letter of diuorcement, and put it in her hande, and send her out of his house: or if the seconde man dye, whiche toke her to wyfe, her first husbande whiche sente her awaye, maye not take her agayne to be hys wyfe, after that she is defyled. For that is abhomination in the sight of the Lorde

1. Pet. iii.

Deut. xxiiii.

Of these woordes of Moyses we learne, that the customable deuorcements, which were made betweene the Iewes and their wyfes were not brought to passe by the reason of adultery or wedlocke breakinge, but for some displeasure, conceyued on the mans parte agaynst hys wyfe. For if the matter had rysen of whordome and wedlockebreakinge, than was it commaunded, that they should not onely be putte from their husbandes, but also suffer death, euen the death of stoning as it is written: If a man be founde lying with a woman that hathe a wedded husbande, they shall dye eyther of them: bothe the man that laye with the wyfe, and also the wyfe: and so thou shalt put away euil from Israel. If she fynde no fauour, sayeth Moyses in her husbādes eyes. The Iewes many times did put awaye their wyues partly, for the faultes of the bodye, and party for the vices of myndes. Sickenes, barennes, deformitie of personage, &c. Semed vnto theym a sufficient cause to put away their wyues. Agayn, if their wyues were churlishe, frowarde, stubburne, disobedient, negligent, wylde, vnruly, wastefull, prodigall, in expenses, not housewyuely, &c. They woulde also thruste them out of the doores. All these thinges dyd the Iewes not by the commaundement of God, but by the sufferaunce of Moyses for the auoydinge of greater euilles: so that the lawe of diuorcement in this behalfe is not a lawe of commaundement, but a lawe of sufferaunce, yea and that but for a time, euen whyle the common weale of the carnall Iewes endured. But with this lawe the Christians haue nothing to do. For they by no means maye put awaye their wyues for any displeasur, for any faulte, eyther of bodye or of mynde: (whordome onely excepted) althoughe the Ciuile lawes geue libertie to the man to put awaye his wyfe, if she be such one as woulde poyson hym, as is a murtherer, a theefe, haunteth the company of straunge menne, lyeth abrode in the nightes without her husbandes consent, &c. Deformitie of bodye with the sickenesses and diseases therof: agayn, the vnperfectiō of the mynd wt the infirmities therof, are no sufficient causes, why a Christē man may lawfully put away his wyfe frō him: so that neyther diseases, althoughe neuer so greuous, paynful & long, neither old age, although neuer so croked & tedious: neither barēnes, although neuer so ingrate & vnpleasaunt: neyther pouertie, although neuer

neuer so great and intollerable: neither the frowardnes of the tonge nor yet the vntrulines and impaciency of the mynde although neuer so vnsufferable, nor any other humaine case (whordom only excepted) can dissolue Matrimony betwene man and wyfe, as Christe sayeth: that God hath coupled together: let not man put a sunder. Lykewyse S. Paule: let not the wife be separated from her husband: neyther let the husband put away his wife from him. Euen as nothinge separateth Christ and the church, but only spiritual whordom, that is to say Idolatry, infidelity, and misbeleue: so in like manner nothinge ought to deuide the man and the wife, but only carnall whordom and wedlocke breaking. For as Christ putteth not away the church from him, although she haue in her selfe many and dyuers infirmyties, spottes, wrynckles, and diseases, but rather taketh them vnto him selfe as his owne, and dissembleth them for the loue that he beareth toward her, and neuer imputeth, nor layeth them to her charge, but counteth her pure, vnspotted, holy, &c. So likewyse a Christen and godly husbande ought not to put his wife away from hym, although she bee dyseased both in body and in mind, but pacientlly and willingly to beare them, and to seke all meanes possible to cure them, the dyseases of the bodye with labour and cost: the dysseases and sicknesses of the mynde with godly councels and wholsome admonicions: remembryng that these infirmyties of his wife are parte of the crosse, that God hathe layde vppon hym, and that therfore hee ought not to repugne and striue against the wyl of God, but both pacientlly, quietly and thanckfully to beare, whatsoeuer it pleaseth god to lay vpon hym and no lesse to tender the infirmyties of his wife, than they were his owne, as they are hys owne in dede, forasmuch as his wife and he are one flesche: and againe to be the same vnto his wife, that he wold wyshe his wife to be vnto him, if he were likewise affected as the Apostle saith: We whyche are strong, ought to beare the frailnes of them which are weak, and not to stande in our owne conceate. Let euery man please his neyghbour vnto his welth and edifienge. Agayne, brethren, if any man be taken with any fault, ye which are spirituall, helpe to amende him in the spirite of meknes: considering thy selfe, lest thou also be tempted. Beare ye one anothers burthen, and so fulfil the law of Christ. For if any man seme to hym selfe, that hee is somwhat, whan in dede hee is nothing: the same deceaueth his owne mynde.

Moreouer of the aforesayd words of our Sauiour christ we learne, that although a christen man may not put awaye his wyfe for suche and so light causes as the Iewes did: yet notwithstandynge adultery is so great and so abhomynable sinne, that that once committed, matrimony is dissolued betwirte the maryed folke: so that the giltles person may lawfully put the other awaye, which hathe defiled the weddinge bed, and broken the maryage knot: whyche thinge the Pope also graunteth in his law. For thus saith our Sauiour Christ: Whosoeuer putteth away his wyfe (excepte it bee for fornication) and marieth another, breaketh wedlocke. And whosoeuer maryeth her, which is deuorced, doth commit adultery: Here Christe teacheth, that if any man of an hateful and despiteful mynde, or for any other cause (adultry onlye excepted) after the manner of the grosse and obstinate Iewes put away his wyfe, and mary another, he breaketh wedlocke: and if any other man marye that wyfe so put awaye, both hee him selfe committeth adulterye, and causeth also that that woman so maryed playeth the whore, and is an adultresse, breakynge this commaundemente of God: Thou shalt not commit adulterye. And the reason is this. Nothinge dyssolueth and loseneth Matrimonye, but only adultery: But adulterye is not here committed: Therefore remayneth the Matrimony firme, sure, constaunt and stedfaste: so that if eyther of the partyes so deuorced marye and ioyne them selues to any other in the act of matrimonye, adulterye is committed on that persons behalfe: and that maryage so contracted, is no maryage, but mere adultery, vnclennes, sinne, wyckednes, abhominacyon and damnacion. For cursed is hee that lieth with his neighbours wife: and all the people shal say Amen. But contrary wyse, if a man haue a wife, whiche is an adultresse and hathe playde the whore, it is lawfull for him both to put her awaye, and also to mary another, yea and that by the authorytie of Chryste, whose wordes are these, as we haue before heard: Whosoeuer putteth awaye his wyfe (except it be for fornicacion) and maryeth another, breaketh wedlocke. Who seeth not here, that if anye man put awaye his wife for fornication, and mary another, he breaketh not wedlocke, neither committeth he adultery? Whosoeuer therfore taketh his wife in adultery, and is lawfully by the authorytie of the Magistrates deuorced from her, may with a good and safe conscience both before god and man, marye agayne, and take to him another wyfe in the feare of God. For the woman, which before was his wife, seinge she hath broken the weddinge promyse, and hath defyled the bed of her husbande, and entangled her selfe wyth straunge loue, ceaseth nowe to bee hys wyfe, and therfore is the man at liberty to mary with whom he will, so it be in the Lorde. For Matrimony abideth so long perfect and safe betwene the maryed couple, as it is not violate and broken thorowe the sinne of adulterye. If adultery be once committed on eyther part, than is that Matrimony vtterly dyssolued, which was before so surelie lynked and knyt together, and nowe ceaseth to bee Matrimonye betwene them, euen so verely and so assuredly, as though the one partie were taken away by death. For before God and in law (if the lawe were dulye executed) the giltye person is dead, although hee or she yet liue, as Sainct Paule wryteth of the yong wanton widowes: and the giltles person is at lyberty to mary. If thorow the negligence of the Magistrates the gilty person contrary to the wyl of God, which commaundeth adultery to bee punyshed by death, bee suffred to lyue: that ought not to bee anye preiudyce to the giltles person, nor anye let to stoppe hys lybertye, that hee maye not marye agayne: seynge he is licenced and permytted by the worde of God to take vnto hym another wyfe. Whether the giltie person lyue or lyue not: the giltles person is at lybertie to marye, and ought not to bee hyndred from hys libertie, whyche God hathe frelye geuen hym in hys holye worde. Know ye not (sayeth Sainct Paule) that your bodyes are the members of Christ? Shal I now take the members of Christ, and make them the members of an harlot? God forbyd.

Do ye not know, that he which coupleth hym selfe with an harlot, is become one body? For two, saieth he, shalbe one flesche. But he that is ioyned to the lord, is one spirite. Flie fornication. Euery sinne that a man doth, is without the bodye. But hee that is a fornicatour, sinneth against his owne body.

Euen as he, which coupleth him selfe with an whore, is made one body with the whore: so in lyke manner that maryed woman, whiche geueth her selfe ouer to an adulterer, is made one body with him, and ceaseth to be the wyfe of the former husbande, from whom she hathe deuyded and cut of her selfe thorow her whorynge with that whoremonger contrary to her weddyng promise: and the man againe ought to cut her of, as a member of an adulterer, and no more to be conuersaunt with her, seinge it is wrytten: he that nourisheth an whore, is a foole. Againe, cut her of from thy flesche, that shee do not alwaye abuse thee. The Prophet Jeremy also sayeth, that a man shall not returne vnto that woman, whych somtime beinge his wyfe is now defiled of another man. For, saith hee, that feelde is then defiled and vncleane. With this agreeth Saint Hierom, saieng: that woman, whiche hath deuided one flesche into another or moe, ought not to bee retayned or kepte, lest the husband be accutsed. For as it is wrytten: he that keepeth an adultresse, is vngodly and foliche. Againe he saieth: if the wife fall into any other sinne, it hindreth not Matrimony: but if she fal into adultery, she is no more a lawful wife. Hereto agreeth the sayeng of Chrisostom: if any man haue to do with his wife that is an whore or an adultresse, let him repent. Againe: as that husband is vnrighteous, which accuseth his wife being innocent: so is he a foole, that kepeth an adultresse. Also the ciuile law counteth that husband no better than a baude, that taketh againe vnto him his wife, which hath bene conuicte and condemned of adultery.

Pro.xviii. Eccle.xxv. Jere.iii. In Math. cap.xix. Pro.xviii. 11.q.1.

This se we, that both by the lawe of God and by the ciuile lawe; and also by the iudgement of the holy auncient wryters, the husband taking his wyfe in adultery, and being lawfully deuorced from her by the authority of the magistrates, is free from her, and hath no more to do with her, than if tofore he had neuer knowen her, so that nowe he is not only free from her, but he is also at lyberte to mary againe, forasmuch as the former woman, which was his wife, is now thorowe adultery dead vnto him, although thorow the negligence of the magistrates shee yet liue. And because no man shall iustly be offended with this doctrine, I wyl attempt to fortresse, to confirme, and to stablishe the same with some authorities of the auncient wryters, although it maye aboundantly seeme to be sufficiently authorised by that one sentence of our Sauiour Christe, whiche we tofore heard out of Sainct Mathew: to the which sentence whosoeuer wyl not geue credit, I do not see, what the heapinge together of other mens testimonyes shall greatly profite hym.

Math.xix.

The Pope graunteth to hym that hath taken his wife in adultery, to be deuorced from her: but notwithstandynge this separacion, saith he, is only a lecto et a mensa: that is to saye, from bed and from borde: so that he by no meanes wyl suffer the giltles person to mary againe, although thorow incontinency he should deflour an hundred maydes, corrupt as many wyues, and defile as many wydowes, or otherwyse moste filthely behaue him self in all kynde of moste detestable vnclen-nes: which is rather a deuorcement in name, than in dede, and to say the trueth, a very derysion and mocking of Chryst and of his doctrine:

seing that the doctrine of Chryste suffreth the giltles person not only to be deuorced from the wedlocke breaker, but also to mary agayne, where and whan he wil, so it be in the lord. But in what thing is not Antichryst contrary to Chryst: let vs therfore se, what the minde of the aūcient fathers is in this behalf. Origene that old doctour of chrystes church witnesseth that in his daies ther were certaine bishops which gaue licence to such as were deuorced, to mary againe. And though he semeth not greatly to alowe theyr doynges in thys behalfe (for it is to be thought, that such as were than deuorced, were put away for some lyghte or trifelinge cause after the manner of the Jewes, and not for whordom, which by the doctrine of the Gospel is not only a sufficient cause of deuorcement, but also of maryeng againe for the giltles person) yet doth not hee (as Erasmus sayeth) vtterly condemne the dede, because he supposeth, that they so dyd vppon some probable and good cause, least some worse thing shold haue ben committed, bearing with the hardnes of theyr hartes, folowinge the councell of Paule, which did permit vnto widowes, which could not liue chast, that thei might mary againe. This example of Paule, Origene doth so conferre, era-myne, and discusse, that he semeth to make it a much more harde and streight matter to geue leaue vnto a wydow for to mary, whiche des-reth an husband for the pleasure of her body and not for chyldrē, then that man putting away his wife for whordome, shold take vnto him an honest woman mete for hūn. And hereof he semeth to make no māner of doubt, but that he may lawfully mary againe, whom the Gospel doth permit to put away his wife for whordom. Againe, Origen maketh a similitude of Chryst, which did repudiate and cast of the sinagoge, beinge a manquellar, and toke vnto hym a new wife, which is the church. The wordes of Origen are these that folow: we must say saieth he, that chryst did not put away his first wife, that is to say, after the spiritual vnderstandinge, the first Sinagoge, (obseruing that which is said: that which god hath coupled together, man ought not to put a sunder) but whan his wife was an adulterous woman, being corrupted of the adulterous enemye, by whose councel shee sought the death of her husband, & wold haue slaine him, saieng: take this felowe out of the worlde and to the galowes with him: to the galowes with him. And a litle after he saith: chryst for the church sake did leaue & go from his father, with whō he was, whā he was in the forme of god, & from his mother also. &c. Hitherto are the wordes of Origen. Thou hearest in this place, saieth Erasmus, of a deuorcement, & after the de-norcement of a new spouse, wherby it is manifest & open, that Origen was of this minde plainly, that after a man hath put away hys wyfe for whordom, he may mary another wife. But where as he saith, that

After the selfe same reason as the woman is an adulterous person, although she semeth to mary lawfully, during the life of her husband: euen so the man, although he semeth lawfully to take that woman to wife, which is so deuorced from her husband: yet doth not he lawfully take her according to the mind of christ, but he doth commit the greater adultery, as one that taketh another mans wife.

Here Origen (saieth Erasmus) speaketh of those, which do make deuorcements for other causes, which Christ did not except, or for lighte causes. And yet those matrimonies by mans law were not punished: yea they were taken as good and lawfull.

Tertulian (saith Erasmus) doth appere, not to be much of a contrary mynde to Origen in his forth booke, whych he wrote against Marcion, expoundyng these wordes of Christe after this wyse sayeng: If a man put away his wife and mary another: as though he would saye: who so putteth away his wife for this purpose that he might mary another: he cannot iustly put her awaye: for hee doth put her from him not vpon a iuste cause, but he maketh one quarell or other (hee careth not what) so that he may seme and appere to put her away iustly, whome he doth hate and abhorre. For the matrimony or mariage, whiche is not iustly dissolued, standeth in effect still: & that standing still in effecte (which is the continuinge of matrimony) to mary another, is playne whordom. And so if Christ vnder a condicion dyd forbyd a man to put awaye his wyfe: then dyd not he vtterly forbyd hym. And that thinge which he hath not wholy forbidden, he hath wholy permitted & suffered. The selfe same doctor within few wordes after saith: and to the law of deuorcement hath Christ for the mayntainer and defender therof. Thou wilt saye peraduenture (saith Erasmus) that Tertulian is not to be admitted, forsomuch as he went away from the church. How so euer he did, yet in this matter he was not reprehended of the godly learned men, which he shold haue bene, if this opinion had bene contrary to the minde and iudgement of them that were in the truth.

Tertulian. Lib.4.contra Marcionem.

Of the same mind also (saith Erasmus) was one Polētius, a man (as it apeareth) of great grauity & of no lesse learning: against who. S. Austen wrote two bokes, not in this case, as though he had bē one of the great heades & masters of heretikes, but as one which had bē in cōtēcīō wt him, whose sētēce, mind & iudgemēt he doth so refel & improue that yet for that opinō he doth lay no point of heresy to his charge.

Polentius.

S. Ambrose also, which was a mā praised without al doubt, not only for his sound doctrine, but also for his godly liuing, saith, þ it is lawful for a mā to mary another wife, after he hath put awaye his first wife for whordō. And truly ther is no doubt, but þ this bishop did practise þ thig in his flock, which he wrot to be iust & according to þ law. For in þ exposicīō, which he made vpō þ, vii. chap. of þ first epistle to the corinthiās, he saith on this wise: & that þ mā do not put away his wife: you must vnderstād, saith he, except it be for þ crime of fornicacīō. And therfore, saith he, the apostle speakig of þ mā, did not put therto (if he do put her away, let hī cōtinew single & vnmaried) as he did whē he spake of the womā, because it is lawful for a mā to mary another wife, if his wife be an whore which he hath put away: For hee is not in so streight bondage of the law, as the woman. For the heade of the woman is the man. Moreouer Sainte Austen, although not greatly applaunte and frendly to this matter, doeth openlye pronounce and declare (sayeth Erasmus) that it is a greater wyckednes and synne for a woman to commit whoredome out of maryage, than to take another husbande, with whom she may liue after she is deuorced. Neither doth he saye playnly, that she is not his wife, whom she hath now taken. &c.

S. Hierom. Sainct Hierom likewyse not much more fauorable to this cause rather for certaine worldly respectes, than moued ther vnto by any authority of the holy scripture doth pronounce, that a man may put awaye his wife frely, if he do but suspect her to bee an whore, as these his wordes testify: whersoeuer (saith he) is found fornication, or the suspicion therof, a man may frely put away his wife. Although this sentence of Saint Hierom seme to be hard and not to be followed in that he saieth, that a man may frely put away his wife for the suspicion of adultery, yet in this is his sentence to be obserued, that he confesseth according to the scripture, that a man for whordom may lawfully put away his wife. And in that he graunteth, that a man may put away his wife for whordom, what other thing doth he couertly teach, then that the man may also according to the doctrine of the Gospel mary againe, namely, if he cannot containe and liue vnmaried, seeing it is better to mary then to burne: againe, it is not good for man to be alone. For to be deuorced from the adultresse, and not to bee suffered to mary againe after the tradicion of Antichrist, what any other thinge is this, than to open to the giltles parson a wyndow vnto all vnclennes and abhominacion of life? But suche kynde of diuorcementes the church of Christ knoweth not, being in dede a corrupte frute of Antichristes synagoge. I do cal (saith Erasmus) that to be a trew deuorcement, which at those daies was alowed, and none other: whan a man might lawfully take another wife, after hee was seperated from hys wife. For where as we do vnderstande, that to be diuorcement, when the man and the woman are sondered from dwelling together in one house (the bond of matrimony neuertheles remayning stil) was there euer any of the olde Diuines and Lawers, which dyd define suche a manner of diuorcement? Againe he saieth: truly the Gospell doth not forbyd thee to mary agayne, after thou haste put away thy wife iustly and lawfully. Once againe he saieth: they do make another obiection, and saye: the Church doth alow dyuorcement and separacion of man & wife to be made, so fat that after the sepatacion, neyther party doth mary againe. I pray the, tel me, saieth he: doth christ so meane in this kinde of diuorcement: the question was put to him of the Iewes, and he made the answere againe vnto the Iewes. But the Iewes knewe none other kinde of diuorcement, but that, which dyd bar them from taking that woman againe, whom they had put away, & gaue them liberty to mary another. For that the woman of the Iewes myghte mary againe with another man, after they were put from theyr husbandes, it is easy inough to be proued, by that the Priest is forbydden in the lawe to take that woman to wife, whiche is deuorced from her husband: which law should haue stand in none effecte, if the woman, which was put away, might not mary againe. For the instrumente of diuorcement was geuen them for that purpose and entet, that the man might not by anye lawe haue title to clayme to take her agayne, whom he had put away, that the second contract of the woman with another husbande might be firme and stable. And so is the mynde of Chrisostom. &c. But if christ did speake of the right diuorcement, from whēs thē is come this new kind of diuorce, which is rather a name of diuorce, thā a diuorce in dede. And in the time of S. Hierom this kind of diuorcement was also vsed. I meane, the giltles person not only to be separated frō the wedlockebreaker, but also to mary againe, as we may see in the wrytinges of the aforesayde Hierom. For he reciteth a story of a certaine noble Matron of Rome called Fabiola, whiche for the wicked behauour of her husband was diuorced from him, and maried another. Againe, writing vnto Amandus the priest, of a certaine woman, which maried another husband, her former husband beinge aliue, saith: I speake a new thing: yea not new, but a thinge in dede, which is confirmed by the authority of the old testament. If the woman forsake her second husband, & wold be reconcyled to the firste, she may not. Furthermore Pope Zachary doth dyssolue Matrimony, if a man do lie wt the sister of his wife, whose wordes are these: thou hast medled wt the sister of thy wife. And therfore if thou hast so done, thou shalt haue neither of them. And thy wife (if she be not guilty of thy wickednes, nor is not willinge to liue vnmaried) wee do permit and suffer that she in the name of God, may mary againe to whom she will. But thou and the adulterous woman shal mary no more, but shal liue still in sorow and penaunce so long as ye liue. Here see we plainly, that the giltles person by the aforesaid Bysshops decre haue not only power to be diuorced from the gilty and adulterous person, but also to mary againe: although I know that certaine other Popes are of a contrary opinion, so great diuersity of iudgements is many times found in so holy fathers, whē notwithstandinge they crake and boast of nothing so much as of the vnity of their church in doctrine & māners, whan no kind of people do more dissēt among thē selues, & fight one with another. But this one decre of pope Zachary is more to be regarded, than the dreames of al ỳ other popes, which teach the cōtrary, forasmuche as his doctrine cōsenteth with the word of god, & their tradicions do manifestly fight with the authority of the holy Scripture.

What shal I speake of a certaine godly womā, which (as Eusebius reciteth out of Iustin martir) hauyng an husbād polluted & defiled with many notable & greuous sinnes, was openly deuorced frō him, & set againe at liberty? Thus se we euē out of the auncient writers, ỳ by the word of god & by the doctrine & practise of christes church, whā it was most pure & most estraūged from mens tradicions, it is not only lawfull for the giltles person to bee dyuorced from the adulterous person, but also to mary again, and to choose a new mate in the feare of God, whatsoeuer thē pope & his poppish lawers bable to the cōtrary in this behalfe. But I thinke it not vnfitting, nor out of the way, here also to expresse the minds of the godly learned writers in this our age cōcerning diuorcemēt, and to shew what their iudgemēt also is in this behalfe, that wee maye euidently perceyue and see, that oure doctrine in this matter is aboundantly fortressed with the authorities bothe of the old and new writers: although it be not vnknowē vnto mē, how odyous the names of them are (whose sentences I purpose here to alledge) not to the people of GOD, whiche honour and reuerence them for their syncerytye in handlynge the holye Scriptures, and geue

god thãks for thẽ, but to the enemies of gods word, which as they like owles cãnot abide the light of christes Gospell, so likewise do they accuse, iudge & condẽne al good & godly mẽ for heretiks, & their doctrine for herely. First of al we will alleoge Eraſm⁹ Roterodam⁹, a mã in hys time incõperable both for ỹ knowledge of tõgs & for his excellẽt iudgmẽt in diuine & godly maters. In his annotaciõs vpõ the new teſtamẽt, where he hãdleth the mater of diuorcement both lernedly & godly vnto the vtter confuſion of ỹ aduerſaries, he hath these words. doeſt thou thincke, ſaith he, ỹ it ſtãdeth with equity & iuſtice, ỹ a mã ſhold be cõpelled to liue wt a wife, which is couered altogether wt miſcheuous & ſhamful dedes, wherof he gaue none occaſiõ, nor yet cã bring her by any meanes from her lewdnes: wt whom for to liue, were as bad as to be ſlaine, & better to be dead? Or doſt thou thinke it good right & reaſon, that if this mã do ſeparat him ſelf from her, that he ſhold be driuen to liue al the daies of his life after without a wife al alone, as a mã that were no mã: let it ſtãd wel with right & reaſon, that the party, which was the occaſion of the diuorcemẽt & ſeperacion, ſhal haue no more liberty for to mary: but wherfore ſhould he be punyſhed, which hath not deſerued, except ye wold ſay, that he is worthy to be puniſhed becauſe he was ſo vnluckye to mary ſo vngracious a wyfe. But I praye you, who did euer ſe, that a man was punyſhed for his misfortune, if there were none other fault in hym than that, ſpecially by the lawe of God? What other thing is this, but to heape one affliccion vpon another, & to make him, which is miſerable, to be more myſerable, whome oure part were to helpe? Againe he ſaieth: truly the Goſpell doth not forbid thee to mary again, after thou haſt put away thy wife iuſtly & lawfully. Itẽ Origẽ ſaith, that Chriſte did dimiſſe & put away the Synagog from him, becauſe ſhe was a murtheter of her huſbãd, when ſhe ſaid: take him: take him, & crucify him, & puttinge away ỹ ſame Synagog, he ioyned the church to him for his ſpouſe. After this ymage & ſimilytude a mã may put away his wife, which hath ſought ỹ death of her huſbãd, & may mary another womã, more mete for him. And a litle after he ſaith: there is no mã, which doth contract matrimony, but is of that mind, that he wold, that it ſhold continew whole, during his life, neuer to be diſſolued. For no mã at that time, whẽ he doth mary, will thinke on any ſeparaciõ or diuorce. But if ſo bee, it doth ſo chaunce afterward vpõ any neceſſary cauſe, according to the faſhion of the world what hurt I praye you, is done to the ſacramẽt, if that remedy be foũd for them, which cannot liue chaſte? and in his booke entitled, the inſtitucion of Chriſten Matrimony, he writeth thus: there is now a very eaſy goinge into the net, but commynge oute there is none at all, in ſo muche that that very thing, which the goſpel ſemeth to haue graunted, that is to ſay, the liberty and right of putting away the adultreſſe, thorow the expoſicion of the Fathers, is only ſtreighted and bounde vnto the diuorcement of the bed, and not vnto the lyberty of maryeng againe. The Lord not without a cauſe dyd ſhorten and plucken the licence of Moſes lawe, which ſuffered a mã to put away his wife for euery cauſe. But now that ſame ſelfe thinge, whiche he ſemed to haue lefte free to certaine men, we haue in a manner taken it away altogether. For what comforte is this, for a man to haue put away an adultreſſe.

Doctoz Martine Luther, whome God in theſe latter daies rayſed vp as another Helias to deſtroy & confound the wicked wayes of that moſt abominable Idol Baal, & to renew the true ſeruice of the god of Iſrael vnto the vtter deſolacion of Antichriſtes kingdom, wzyting vpō the ſeuenth chapter of. S. Pauls firſt epiſtle to the Cozinthiās, hath theſe wozdes: adultery maketh diuozce, & geueth power vnto the other perſon that liueth truly accozdyng to the ordinaunce of wedlock, to be maried a new to another. And in the ſecond part of his ſermō, which he wzote of matrimony, he ſaith on this manner: here ſeeſt thou, that Chriſt for adultery admitteth diuozcemēt, ſo that which ſoeuer of the maried perſons be innocent, he may lawfully mary againe. For when he ſaith, that he doth commit adultery, which putteth away his wife for no cauſe of whordō, & marieth another: he declareth euidētly, that he doth not cōmit adultery, which putting awaye his wife for whozdom, marieth another. And anon after he ſaith: thou wilt demaunde, what ſhal become of the other perſō that is deuozced, if peraduenture that party cānot liue chaſte: I anſwere: god hath vnto this end ordained a law, ỹ adulterers ſhold be ſtoned vnto death, becauſe we ſhould haue no nede of ſuch queſtions: and accozdinge to this law the rulers of this wozlde and the magiſtrates ought to punyſh the adulterers & to take them oute of this life. For that party, which hathe broken the faith and promes of matrimony, hathe all redy ſeparated him ſelfe, ſo that ſuch one ought not to be coūted aliue. As touching the other perſon, which is gyltles & innocent, maye lawfully contract matrimony againe, euē ſo frely, as though the party defiled with whozdom were dead. Maſter Martin Bucer a man mighty in gods ſcriptures, in the authozities of the auncient wziters, in reſons & arguments, in confirming the trueth & in diſſoluinge falſhod, in his commētaries vpon the Goſpel of. S. Mathew wziteth on this maner, entreating mozeouer very largely of the matter of diuozcemente in that place: Without all doubt, ſaith he, it is a plaine inuencion of the deuil that the Papiſtes do ſeparat thē frō al felowſhip of wedlocke, whom they do deuozce, and yet they will that the mariage bond continew, that by this meanes they may be depziued from all wedlock, euen they alſo, which gaue no cauſe at al to ỹ diuozcemēt: & in thus doing they do none other thing, then opē a doze to ſuch as are euil to defile all things with their lewd liuinge: yea and the good alſo they dziue and enfozce vnto vnclennes and whozynge. Neyther doth this any thinge helpe them (the Papiſtes) that they ſeme to leane vnto the ſentences oz iudgements of certaine Fathers. For euen by the Sainctes many times God ſuffereth ſuch things to crepe in, as afterward cauſe no ſmal incommodities. It were better, that they embzaſinge other ſentences of the Fathers like wyſe, ſhould not liue ſo vnthziftely. But let vs leaue them. This is the trueth: that the lord did anſwere here of that diuozcemēt, wherof he was demaunded. Now was he demaunded of that diuozcement after the whyche, bothe the wedded folke maryed agayne.

committed, it is without al doubt, that whā the adultresse is once put away, the man may take vnto him another wife.

Philippe Melancthon.

The great lerned clarke Philip Melancthon, a mā of singular knowledge & great iudgmēt in all kinde of sciēces & letters, writeth on this wise in his cōmō places, where he entreateth of matrimony: the lord forbiddeth diuorcemēts in the gospel, one case excepted, that is to say, adultery: in the which case the gilty persō thorow his lewd behauour hath dissolued the mariage, & ought to be takē out of the way. And forasmuch as the innocent person is not the cause of losening the maryage, therfore the voice of the soune of god setteth the innocent person at liberty. Notwithstanding diuorcementes are not to be made without the knowledge of lawful iudges: but the innocent person, if he desire a deuorcemēt ought to require of the iudge, that the persō, whych hath offended, may be called before him. Now whan both parties are come vnto the iudgement: first they ought to be exhorted on both sides to be reconciled and againe one to loue and fauour another. If the reconciliacion go not forth: the innocent person maye not bee compelled to take her againe. Therfore after the parties be heard, and the accusacion manifestly proued and confirmed, if the accuser haue lyued honestly, and desire sentēce to be pronounced: let it be publyshed on this wise: forasmuch as the person, which hath offēded thorow his (or her) lewde behauiout hathe broken matrimony: the iudge by the authority of the gospel pronounceth, that the innocent person is fre, and saith moreouer expressly that it is graunted vnto him, that with a good conscience he may mary againe and take vnto him another wife.

Moreouer he saieth in the same place: the Canons of the byshops of Rome make a deuorcemente in name, and not in dede: that is to saye, they suffer not the innocent person to mary againe. But whā the Gospel in those cases do graunt a deuorcement, it ought to be vnderstand, not of a vaine name, but of such delibe ration, which is a deuorcement in dede, that is to say, wherin the gilties person standeth not bounde. And that this was the custom in the auncient church, it appereth by Origē vpō Mathew. We maye learne the same also of Eusebi⁹ in the ecclesiastical history, which reciteth a certaine history out of Justinus Martir, which writeth, ꝑ a certaine godly womā was diuorced openly frō her husbād, which was of a very wicked & lewd behauour. &c. And Hierō reciteth an history of a certain noble matrō of rome called Fabiola, which for ꝑ wickednes of her husbād was dyuorced from hym, & maried another. It is profitable to remember these examples to confirme the manner of iudgement in our churches.

In cap. 5. Math.

And in his commētaries vpō Mathew printed in the yere of our lorde M.D.xi. he saith thus: after that the couenaūt of mariage be broken: the question is: whither it be lawful for the innocēt person to contract Matrimony againe with any other? In this behalfe the pope saith ꝑ another mariage mai by no meanes be graūted to the innocēt persō. I wil make no long disputacion of the matter in this place. The text is open and plaine inough, which saith, ꝑ a diuorcement may be made betwene such, that is to say, betwene the innocēt person & the adultresse or the adulterer. Now if another maryage should not be graunted to the innocēt persō, so shold it be a diuorcemēt in name, but not in dede.

What nede it to except the case of adultery, if christes mynd had ben, that the giltles person also in this behalfe shold haue bene bound and restrained, as he wil haue him bound in other cases: that is to saye, if the wife be angry, or if she be licke: and that this was the manner in the church in times past, that such diuorcement shold be graunted to the innocente persons, certayne auncient sayenges and examples do shew. Hierom telleth, that there was at Rome a noble matron called Fabiola, which had an husbād, that was an adulterer and liued most filthely. She afterward maried another man. And although Hierom disputeth of this fact, yet the history sheweth, that this mānер was then yet in vse. And there are other examples besides this.

And in another place of his commentaries vppon the Gospel of S. Mathew, he saieth thus: Christ doth openly restrayne diuorcements vnto this case, when one of the maryed persons is giltye of adultery. For then thorow that adultery the couenaunt of wedlocke is broken: and the person which hath offended, is become gilty of death, & ought to be slaine. Maister Hēry Bullinger, the most diligēt & painefull Bishop of Tigure, otherwise called Turike, a mā as in doctrine faithfull so in life & conuersacion blameles and without spot, in his boke of matrimony, which he wrote in the dutche tounge, hathe these wordes: That is called a iuste diuorce, when as neither party maye take the other againe: so is it in the lyberty of the fautles partye to mary another. Againe he saith: manifest it is, that wedlocke was partly instituted for the eschewing of adultery. Therfore whan the gilty person is diuorced, the vngilty is at liberty to mary againe, if he or thee cannot liue single, according to this saieng of S. Paul: If thou canst not liue chaste, mary. For better it is to mary then to burne in concupiscence. And a litle after he saieth: euery reasonable man maye well consider, that god did ordaine wedlocke for the honesty and welth of man, and not for his shame and destruccion. They therfore that in no case wyll helpe the oppressed person, nor in any wise permit diuorce to be made, do euen as the pharisies dyd, which by reason of the commaundment of the Sabbath after the letter, suffered men to be destroied and to perishe. The papistes haue forbidden the innocente and vngiltye person to mary after the diuorce made. Whych yet was nothing els, but euen violently to cast a snare about poore peoples neckes, and to draw them vnto vyce and sinne. For the diuorced could not refraine, and to mary they were not permitted: therfore with violence were they forced vnto whordom. But Paul saith otherwise. Better it is to mary, then to burn. And god ordained wedlocke for the auoiding of whordom. And as touching the perso, that committed the offēce to the deuorce, he by the law of god was, and ought now also to be, punyshed with death: which thing if it were now in vse, so shold we not need to reason for ỹ mariage of the vngilty. Therfore where as some obiect pauls wordes saieng: the womā is bound to the law so long as her husbād liueth, but whē her husbād dieth, she is fre to mary vnto whō she wil, only ỹ it be done in the lord: it hindreth not our purpose. For wher as the adulterer doth yet liue, it is against gods cōmaūdmēt, which hath condēned him to death all redy. Therfore in such case the faithfull esteemeth him but dead, though thorow ỹ sufferāce & negligēce of ỹ world he yet liue.

Peter Martir. Doctor Peter Martir that precious pearle and maruelous margarite of the Christen common weale, with whose presence and liuely boyce England somtime was most beautifully garnished, a doctour of diuinity incomparable, an interpretour of the holy scriptures moste dilygent and faithfull, a man in all necessary and lettered artes and sciences of singular knowledge: whom euen the very aduersaryes (except they haue to much rubbed theyr forhead) bothe for his grauity, integrity and bncorrupcion of life, and also for his sincere handling of the holy scriptures and for the faithful and true alledginge of the auncient wryters, are compelled to reuerence and to speake well of hym: in his learned commentaryes, which he wrote vpon the first epistle of .S. Paul to the Corinthians, hath these wordes, this is most certen, that christ, whē he excepted the cause of adultery, did not meane a diuorce, wherby the wife and the husband should be separat, as they say, from borde and bed, and the bond of maryage styl continew. The lorde talked with Hebrues: wherfore his wordes are to be bnderstand of that diuorcement, whiche was vsed amonge those people. The Ethnickes also both the Romans and the Grekes knew none other kinde of diuorcement but this only, that one of the maryed persons should be softe from the other, that they myght be new maryages. If that christ had otherwyse ment, he might right wel haue semed not to haue answered bnto the question, that was proponed bnto him: for the talke was than of that kinde of diuorcement, for the which a byl of the deuorce was graunted of the law. Of that was the disputacion: wherefore of that ought the wordes of christ to be bnderstand. What is more like the trueth, that the Iewes dyd demaunde of the deuorcemente which they knew not, or rather of that which Moses graunted to thē in the lawe? I thinke no man doubteth, but that they asked of a matter vsed among them. What the auncient fathers of Christes churche thought of this matter, it is not hard to iudge. Origen cōfesseth that certayne Bishoppes in his time gaue licence to wiues which wer put a way from their husbandes, that they should mary with other.

uorce, as is attempted for adultery, but that Chriſte ſpeaketh of that whiche was brought to paſſe for euery lighte mattter, accordinge to the cuſtome of the Iewes, whiche they gathered oute of the lawe of Moyſes, whiche thinge the very queſtion doeth declare, whan they ſayde: Is it not lawful for a mā to put away hys wyfe for what cauſe he lusteth? And as for the Apoſtle he ſpeaketh of that ſeparacion or diuorce, whiche chaunceth for ſome ſtryfe or diſpleaſure: which thinge is euident by that he ſayeth: or be reconciled to her huſbande. Math.xix. 1.Cor.in.vii.

Moreouer we aunſwer, that neyther Chriſte nor Paule ſpeake of any other kynde of diuorcement, then of that, whiche was in vſe and practiſe both among the Heathen and among the Iewes: by ẏ which diuorcement the maryed folke were ſo ſeparated & put aſunder, that they might marye agayne. And Chriſte maketh mencion of this principally, reprouing and confuting the other, excepting only the caſe of adultery. As for that Popiſh diuorcement, it is a newe inuencion, vſed neither among the Heathen nor among the Iewes: wherewith thei ſo do ſeparate and put aſunder the maryed folke in the caſe of adultery, that they will graunte, neither partie libertie to marye again: whiche kynde of diuorcemēt, is rather a diuorcemement in name thā in dede. The Popes ẏ diuorcement is a newe inuencion

Seinge than that neyther Chriſte nor Paule do ſpeake of any other cauſes of diuorcement, than thoſe, which the Iewes did vſe, whā they did put awaye their wyues for euery trifling cauſe, and for ſuch matters as did ryſe of kytchē wordes: neyther in their tyme was ther any other kynde of diuorcement, then that, wherby thei were ſuffered to marye agayn: it can not be gathered either of Chriſtes or of ẏ Apoſtles woordes, that where the diuorcement is lawfull, the ſecond maryage ſhould not alſo be lawfull, namely to the innocēt partie. Chriſt excepteth the caſe of adultery. To what ende? That if that be, he doo not commit adultery, which putteth away his wyfe, being an whore and whan he hath put her away, maryeth another. Why ſo? Verely becauſe ſuche a diuorcement is lawful, true and iuſt. Otherwiſe could it not be lawful for the man to geue to an other womā power of his bodye, excepte he were truly free frome the bonde of the former maryage.

And in his commentaries vpon the Goſpel of ſ. Matthew he wri- In Cap.5
teth thus: It is euident, that the Lorde excepteth the caſe of adultery. He teacheth, that it is not lawful, if ẏ wyfe be put away for euery trifling matter, that the man ſhould marye agayn. But he doeth except the caſe of whoredome, ſignifieng that then it is lawfull (that is to ſay, to marye agayn, and to take another wyfe) if the former wyfe forgetting her maryeng promyſe haue made her bodye common to another man. Therfore that popyſhe diuorcement, beyng a diuorcemēt onely in name, hath no place in the woordes of Chriſte. And Ambroſe geueth power to the man, to marye another wyfe, if he haue put hys former wyfe awaye for whoredome, or becauſe ſhee hath playde the whore. And a litle after he ſayeth: It ſoldweth therefore, that it is lawfull for that man, which hathe an whore to hys wyfe, and ſuche one as hath broken the bonde of her promes, to be diuorced from that S. Ambroſe.

sinnefull woman: and if he either can not, or els will not lede a single lyfe, accordinge to his libertie, to take vnto him another wyfe, with whome being maryed, he maye leade an honest lyfe. For no man thorow the wickednes of another ought to lose his right, which he hath of God: whiche also is geuen hym bothe vnto the honestie of his lyfe, and also vnto the auoyding of the great displeasur of God. Agayne he sayeth: they urge this sayeng of Christe: that God hath coupled together, man ought not to put asunder. Well sayde. An husbande that kepeth his promes, will neuer require this separacion: yea if it be broughte in thorow the leudnes of his wyfe, he is greatly sorye. What is than to be done to the innocent partie, if the adultresse haue broken that, which God hath ioyned together. Shal they do contrary to the sentence and iudgemeut of Christe, which suffer the innocent person to marye agayn: Nay verely. Neither do thei breake the bond of wedlocke, which the wyfe her self, by breaking her weddinge promis, and by playeng the whore, hath broken before, but they rather make that whole, which was broken. If this renewing of loue, or setting of the maryed persons together at one, thorow the repentaunce of the former wyfe, which hath playde the whore, and by reconciliacion might be brought to passe, it were a goodly matter: but if it otherwise come to passe, what is then to be done, but that the innocent husband take another wyfe vnto hym and marye agayne, euen as the vse is, whan the woman is dead. For what matter maketh it, howe the adultresse be dead to the former husband: liuing or dead in body. For although she yet lyue, thorow the negligẽce of the Magistrate, yet in very dede is she dead before God, & liueth no more vnto hym that was her husband, but rather to hym, with whome she hath ben nought and plaid the whore.

of Gods worde bothe by preaching and writinge: in his comentaries vpon the Gospell of s. Mathew, hath these wordes: Among Christias there can bee no cause of suche force, that it maye cause diuorcemente betwixt the maryed folke, but whordome onely. I saye vnto you (saith Christe) whosoeuer putteth away his wyfe, except it be for adulterye, causeth her to be an whore: and whosoeuer maryeth her that is so diuorced, committeth adultery: that is to saye, except adultery be the occasion. The Apostle willeth, that such as be separated for any other cause, then for adultery, shoulde be reconciled agayne one to another. The effectes of diuorce are taken of the etimologie of the woorde, as dissoluction of Matrimonye, libertie from Matrimonye, separacion of liuing together, &c. For the person, which is now set at libertie, may marye an other: I meane the innocent partie, to whome the lawes bothe Diuine and Ciuile geue libertie to marye agayne. Agayn he sayeth: to be diuorced, is a man so to put awai his wyfe, whome he hath maryed, that he is free from the former Matrimonye to marye agayne.

What it is to be deuorced.

D. Joan. Brentius, an olde and paynefull soudioure of Christes armye, in his boke, which he wrote vpon the cases of Matrimonye proueth with many strong argumentes and reasons, and with many notable authorities also, that the innocent person, after diuorcement maye lawfully marye agayn: and he saith moreouer, that nothinge is more contrary to the woorde of God, than after diuorces made, to deny vnto the giltles partie, libertie to marye with another in the feare of the Lorde. And as touching the partie that hath offended (sayeth he) let vs leaue him or her to the magistrate, whose office and dutie it is, according to the haynousnes and grenousnes of the crime to punishe it worthely with the payn ordayned for it. And if the Magistrate will be negligent, and not do his dutie in punishing this crime: our mynde is, that the minister of the Churche should pursue the cryme with excommunication.

This boke of Brentius, Master Nicolas Lelle, now Scholemaster of s. Anthonies in London, promised before certayn yeares to translate into oure mother tounge: but whether he hathe satisfied his promes, I know not. It is a boke woorthy to bee redde and perused not only for the matter of diuorcement, but for diuerse other thinges also. concerninge Matrimonye.

The authorities of diuers other godly writers might here be alledged for the confirmation of this matter: but these to any indifferēt person maye seme abundantly to suffice.

Thus haue wee heard due of bothe the olde and the newe writers, that it is lawful for a Christen man for adultery, not onely to be diuorced from his wyfe, which hath broken the wedding knotte, and ioyned her self to straunge flesh, contrary to the commaundement of God, but also to marye agayne, although thorowe the negligence of the magistrate she styll lyue, forasmuche as by the lawe of God shee is dead, and lyueth no more to her husbande, and he so set at libertie by the authoritie of the Gospell, as though she in dede ceased to lyue and were dead. And verely it is greatly to be wondered at, that the Pope

& all his Popishe lawers are so herde in this one kynde of diuorcement for adultery, ỹ by no means they will be entreated to suffer the innocent and gyltles person to marye agayn: seinge that in diuerse other kyndes of diuorcemẽts they easely geue libertie to marye agayn: whan the one is expressely set forth in the holy scripture, & the other contrariwise. Is not this to swalow doune a Camell, and to strayne oute a gnatte? Is not this to breake the commaundement of God, and to stablishe mens traditions? Is not this to call good badde, & badde good? lighte darkenes, and darkenes light? swete soure, and soure swete?

Pope Celestine

Pope Celestine did ordayne, that eyther the man or the wyfe, which did stand styll in the faith, might marye agayne, if that eyther of them did fall into Heresye: although Pope Innocent after ward decreed the contrarie. And Hostiensis appeareth to agree with Pope Celestine against Pope Innocent. For he moueth this question: whether the Churche may now ordayn, that when eyther parte of the faithfull persons, which are maryed together, is falle into Heresye, the other parte may go to the second bowe of matrimony. (he meaneth, make a newe contract of matrimony with some other) And he answereth, that it is lawfull so to do, prouing it by this argument. Likewise (sayeth he) as the Churche hath ordained betwene Infideles, which do contract among them selues, lawfull matrimonye: so maye the Church decree and ordayne among the faythfull persons. For the confirmacion of ỹ matrimony of ỹ faythfull cometh of the sacramẽt of Baptisme, & that by the disposicion & order of the church. The church then hath power to ordayn also to the contrary. Doth not Hostiensis here openly pronounce, that the churche maye decree and ordayne, that some matrimony maye be dissolued, be it neuer so perfect, whan eyther of the parties doeth falle into Heresye: so that the innocent partie maye goo to the second bowe (ỹ is to witte) maye make a new contracte of matrimonye with some other? If Heresie be of such force by the Popes law, that it maye dissolue matrimony, although it hath ben by the copulacion of the parties neuer so strongely confirmed, and well knowen of all men to be perfecte matrimonye, so that the faythfull person maye lawfully forsake the other partie that is fallen in to Heresy, yea & also marye agayne: How cometh it to passe, that whordome or adultrye can not be of thesame strengthe to dissolue maryage betwene a faythfull Christian and an whore, and to set the godly partie at libertie to marye agayne, seinge he is permitted by the woorde of God so to do?

Ca. ex parte. tit. de conuers. coniugat.

Note this reason.

Pope Honorius

Pope Honorius the thirde ordayned, that if any woman, whiche is maryed to a man, that is of a colde nature, and vnapte to the conuersacion and companye of a woman, will come and declare before the ordinarie, that her husbande is not able to geue vnto her the due beneuolence, although it be three yeares after they haue ben maryed, thre shalbe separated from her husbande, & haue free libertie to marye agayne. If the Pope graunt this (as it is a case, both tollerable & reasonable: for it is better to marye then to burne: and to auoyde fornicacion euery man ought to haue his wyfe, & euery woman her husbād, yea & those apte for that purpose) why will he not also graunte, that a man for adultery may lawfully be diuorced, and marye agayn: seeing

1. Cor. vii.

Mych. v. xij.

Christe in hys holy Gospell hath graunted it all ready?

The Pope in his lawes do geue licence to that man or that woman, which is turned from infidelitie to the lawe of Christe, to marye another: if the husbande or the wyfe will not forsake their infidelitie and blasphemie of God: and yet Christe in the Gospel permitteth no cause of maryeng agayn, but only fornication. Thys determination of the Pope I do not muche disalowe: but this I commende not, that he is so redye to graunt thee one, and to denye the other: seing þ Christ manifestly maketh mencion of the one in the Gospell, and vtterly silenceth the other. For S. Ambrose in his exposicion vpon these woordes of Paule) For a brother or a sister is not bounde in suche case,) writeth thus: They ought not (sayeth he) to receyue any honoure by Matrymonye, whiche do disdeyne and hate the authour of matrimonye. For it is no good or lyfull Matrimony, whiche is without the loue of God: by the whiche reason the woman, which is put awaye, because she doeth feare and loue God, doeth not synne, if she ioyne her selfe to an other husbande. For the contempt and hatred of God oure maker doeth loose and vndo the bonde of matrimonye, and setteth at libertie the partie, which is so put awaye: so that he or she so forsaken may without blame or offence couple them self in matrimony agayn with other. And the infidel person doth offend bothe agaynst God and the holy state matrimonye, because he would not in the loue and honor of God cõtinew therin. And therfore the fayth and promes of matrimonye is not to be kepte with hym or her: whiche therfore forsaketh it, is gone from it, because he woulde not heare and beleue, that the God of the Christian people, whome they do worship, should be the author and maker of matrimonye. For if Esdras did commaunde the wyues and husbandes, which were Infideles to be put away, that therfore God should be merciful and not displeased, if they toke other wyues or husbandes of their owne nation (for they had no suche commaundement that they should so put them away, that they should take none other:) how muche more, if an Infidel person doeth depart of his own will, maye the faithfull woman or man take in maryage one of theyr owne lawe: For that matrimonye ought not to be taken for matrimonye, nor imputed to them, which is without the law of God. Hytherto are the woordes of Ambrose: wherof we learne, that if two persons bee maryed together in the state of matrimonye, the one faythfull, and the other vnfaythfull: if the vnfaithfull will departe from the faithfull, excepte he or she, that is the faythfull partie will forsake God and hys holy religion: than in this case maye the faithful and beleuing person not onely departe from the vnfaithfull and vnbeleeuing person: but also maye an other, whiche is of the houshold of faythe. And this agreeth with the doctrine of S. Paule, whiche sayth: If the vnbeleuing departe, let him departe. A brother or a syster is not in subiection to suche. God hath called vs in peace. For God and his holy religion is more to be regarded, than either husband or wyfe: Father or mother: or whatsoeuer is moste dere vnder the Sunne. And forasmuche as nothinge doeth so alienate and estraunge the myndes of all persons frõ mutuall loue and good will one toward another, as dissentiõ in matters of religiõ, so that where that is, true loue, hartye good will and vnfayned frendshippe is very seldome founde: The Pope maye seme brother haue a wyfe that beleueth not, if she be content to dwel with hym, let hym not put her away. And the woman, whiche hath to her husband an infidel, if he consent to dwell with her, let her not put him awaye. This is to be vnderstand of such husbandes or wyues, which although they be yet vnfaithfull and beleue not in God: yet they are cõtent to lyue quietly with their maried mates, go not about to dissuade them from their religion and fayth, neither blaspheme they God nor speake euyll of his good name: being content to suffer their yoke felowes to lyue, according to their consciences, they themselfs in y meane season so honestly and frendly behauinge them selfes one to another, as the godly state of matrimony requireth. But if the Pope without any such condicio, as the Apostle semeth to require, graunteth libertie Note well.

to the beleuing person to depart from the vnbeleuer, yea and to marye againe: ought not he also to graunt to the giltles person libertie, not onely to depart from the adultresse, but also to take another faithfull yokefelow, with whome he maye godly, quietly and honestly lyue before God and man? If any man marye within the degrees, eyther of consanguinitie or affinitie, whiche the Pope hath forbidde (although otherwise licenced by the woorde of God) deuorcement must streight wayes be made, and libertie is graunted to the diuorced persons too marye with other: and shall it not be lawfull for a godly and faythful maryed person to put awaye that wicked & vnfaithful partie, whiche hath broken the maryeng promise, being defiled with straunge flesh? Spirituall kyndre (a toye and a fansye deuised of the Pope without eyther reason or authoritie of Gods woorde) whereof we haue tofore spoken in the firste parte of this worke, dissolueth maryage, and geueth libertie to the parties to marye agayn: and shal not adulterye be a sufficient cause to set the innocent partie at libertie agayne to marye? Errore of person or condicion by the Popes lawe dissolueth Matrimonye, and geueth libertie to marye agayn, as in taking Jhon for William, or Catherine for Barbara, or a bond man for a free man, &c. And shall adultery be counted so light a matter, that that maye not bothe dissolue Matrimony, and also geue libertie to the giltles person to marye agayne? Many other cases there be in the Popes lawe, whiche licence bothe diuorcement and maryeng agayn, and are daily practised in the popishe courtes: and yet of adultery, whyche is the only and alone cause, by the doctrine of Christe, why diuorcementes maye be made, and libertie graunted to the innocent partie to mary agayn can haue no place amonge them. Diuorcement the Pope graunteth, but rather in name than in dede, forasmuche as he barreth the giltles person from maryeng agayn. And enforceth the innocent partye eyther to take the wedlocke breaker agayne vnto his heartes greate sorowe and payne, and also peraduenture vnto his vtter vndoing, or elles to fall into suche horrible inconueniences, as all Christen men ought to abhorre. Let the Pope, and let the Ciuile lawe also alligne & appoynte as many causes as thei will for diuorcement, and libertie to marye agayne: I am sure that Christe in his holy Gospell doeth

Only adultery is the cause of diuorcemente by the woorde of God.

permit no cause to marye agayne, but only fornication: yea and that because whoredome in wedlocke is all maner of wayes repugnante and directly contrary vnto the state of Matrimonye, forasmuche as where Matrimonye doth make of two bodies, but one body: adultery whiche is whoredome in Matrimonye, dothe cutte asunder that vnitie of bodyes, and yet the Pope, contrary to the doctrine of Christe, that he maye shewe hym self playne Antichriste, will not alowe thys cause to be a sufficient cause of a perfect diuorcemente, I meane not onely A thoro et a mensa, That is to saie, from bedde and borde, but also so to be free from the gylty person, that the innocent partie may lawfully marye agayne. But this matter neded no great disputation, if the ciuile magistrates wouldc do their duety and execute iustice, and take awaye the adulterous offendoures eyther by stoninge, or by hanging, or by ỹ swoord, that by this meanes such wicked persons myght once cease to prouoke the heauy wrathe and dredefull displeasure of God agaynste the people, amonge whome they dwell. If a man be founde lyinge (sayeth God) with a woman that had a wedded husbād they shall dye both of them, both the man that lay with the wyfe, and also the wyfe: and so shalt thou put away euill from Israel. Matth.v.xix. Leuit.xx. Deut.xxii.

But seing we haue now proued by the woorde of God, and by the testimonies of diuers godly wryters, that for whordome committed in maryage, the gyltles person maye bothe be diuorced from the offender, and also marye agayne: lette vs consider what the Papistes doo obiecte againste this oure doctrine, and aunswer those their cauillacions, that we maye knowe this to be a true and perfecte doctrine, that the innocent person diuorced from the wedlockebreaker by lawfull order, may lawfully marye agayne.

Firste they bringforthe this sentence of oure Sauioure Christe: That whiche God hath coupled together, let not man put a sunder. I aunswer: So long as the maryed folke continew together in the feare of God accordyng to their maryage promes, one faythfull, true and iuste to another: they maye by no meanes be seperate & put a sunder: (for they remayn styl in ỹ bond, wherwith God hath coupled thē together) but if the maryage knotte be once broken, so that any of the parties haue ben entangled with straunge flesh, and haue defiled the wedding bed: than may they lawfully be put a sunder, by such as be in authoritie: & that diuorcement, separacion or puttinge a sunder, done by order of lawe, is iuste, right, lawful and good: so that now from hencefoorth they cease to be man and wyfe: and the innocente person is at libertie to marye agayne. For whoredome hath loosened that, whiche God dyd bynde. Whordome hath putte them a sunder, whome God by Matrimonye ioyned together, and made one flesh. Whoredome hath made them straungers, whome God lynked together in moste dere frendshippe, as sainct Paule sayeth: Do ye not vnderstand, that he whiche coupleth hym selfe with an harlot, is become one bodye? For two (sayeth he) shalbe one flesh. If the maryed man therefore contrarye to hys maryenge promes haue abused hym selfe with an whore, is he not now vtterly dissolued from his wyfe, and become one flesh with the whore, so that hys flesh is no more hys wyfes, but rather the whores, with whome he hath defyled hym selfe? And so likewise of Matth.xix. Answers to obiections of aduersaries. The firste obiection. i.Cor.vi.

the adulterelle, whiche hath geuen her ſelf to ſtraunge loue. So longe are the maryed folke coupled together by God, and maye not be ſeparated, as they faithfully continew in that ſtate, wherein God placed them. But if either of them caſt away that yoke, wherwith God hath ioyned them together, and ronne ryot, hunting after ſtraunge fleſhe, than ceaſe they to be coupled together of God, and maye lawfully by lawfull Magiſtrates be put a ſunder, and the gyltles perſon beinge diuorced by order of lawe, may lawfully marye agayne without ſcruple of conſcience, neyther is this commaundemente of Chriſte broken, whiche ſayeth: That which God hath coupled together, lette not man put a ſunder.

The ſeconde obiection. Roma. vii

Secondly, they alledge this ſentence of the Apoſtle to the Romains, where he writeth on this manner: Remember ye not brethren (I ſpeake to them that knowe the lawe) how that the lawe hath power ouer a man, ſo long as it endureth? For the woman, whiche is in ſubiection to a man, is bounde by the lawe to the man, as longe as he lyueth. But if the man be dead: ſhe is louſed from the lawe of the man. So then, if whyle the man lyueth, ſhee couple her ſelfe with another man: ſhe ſhall be counted a wedlockebreaker. But if the man be deade, ſhe is free from the lawe, ſo that ſhe is no wedlockebreaker, thoughe ſhe couple her ſelf with another man. To thys obiection anſwereth Eraſmus very learnedly on this manner: Paule in this place doeth not treate of diuorcement or ſeparacion betwene man and wyfe, but he maketh a ſimilitude vnto the Iewes, whiche is taken out of theyr owne lawe, whereby he might teache and perſwade theym, that the lawe of Moyſes, being taken away by the lawe of the Goſpell, they are no longer bounde to the obſeruacio of the ceremonies of the law, ſith they haue taken to them a newe ſpouſe, whiche is Chriſt. Neither is it requiſite and neceſſary, that the ſimilitude or parable ſhuld in all poyntes ſerue for the thing, whereto they are compared. For thus the parable of the theefe, whiche breaketh into the houſe by night: the parable of the money, which is due and owinge to the vſurar: the parable of the wicked and naughty ſteward: the parable of the vyne, and the braunches therof: the parable of the chyldren ſinging in the market place, and ſuch other innumerable, ſhuld ſeme very fond, if it ſhuld be examined & tried by this ſtreight rule, to haue all poyntes agree. It is ſufficient, that they do declare and make open the thing, wherefore they be applied. It is the maner and faſhion of Paule, to drawe, to wryng whatſoeuer he can by any meanes to ſerue for the Goſpell after a godly craft and ſubtiltie, whyle he doth turne hym ſelf into all thinges, that he may wynne all men vnto Chriſt. But our men nowa dayes are nothing lyke vnto Paule, which do turne thē ſelfs into al things, that by ỳ craft & policie they may cal mē away frō Chriſt, & ſo come to great richeſſe & promocios. Howbeit, if we will take theſe wordes of Paul, as they do lye & ſoūd: no mā ſhall put away his wyfe, although ſhe play the whore. For he maketh in this place no maner of exception. Agayne Paule ſhall not ſeme aptly to alledge the lawe of Moyſes vnto the Iewes, if they take his wordes after that faſhiō, for ſo much as ỳ law doth permit the huſbandes for euery cauſe to putte awaye their wyues, ſo that they do geue vnto theym a byll of diuorce.

An answer. 1. Cor. vii.

A good and profitable leſſō by ſimilitudes

The wickednes of oure tyme.

Herby

herby ye may perceiue, that Paule did not exclude and put away diuorcement, forsomuche as the lawe it self doth openly permit and alowe it, but went about that thinge whiche he hadde in hande, makinge as though he had nothinge to do with this oure matter, whiche he did not teache for his purpose. And agayne in the seuenth Chapter of his Epistle to the Corinthians he doeth write these woordes: He then whiche doeth ioyne his virgine in Matrimony, doeth well: and he whiche doeth not, doeth better. The woman is bounde vnto the man, so long as her husbande liueth, but if her husbande sleepeth, she is at libertie from the lawe: let her marye to whome she will, onely yt it be done in the Lorde. But she is more happy, if she can abyde, after my mynde. Neither yet doeth Paule in this place reason the cause of diuorce, but exhorteth accordinge to the state of those tymes, that they whiche are free frō mariage, and specially widowes (for in this place he doeth speake of them) shoulde abstayne frome mariage, that they might be the more free from the busines of the woorlde, whiche was then a wicked & an Idolatrous woorlde, and coulde not chose, if they did marye, but must nedes ioyne them selues in affinitie with the wicked and vngodly. And yet for all that, he doeth not require this at their handes that they shall so do, but he commaundeth them, that if they, whiche are single, woulde marye, that then they do take to their husbandes suche as are Christen men. And also he doeth not plucke a Christen woman from her husbande, whiche is an Infidel, except he doeth firste departe from her, and sayeth also, that she doeth not sinne if beinge at libertie she marye agayne. For so long as she hath an husbande, she hath no nede to seke another. This therefore after myne opinion, is the chefest and surest kepe to the vnderstanding of the misticall scripture, to marke and consider diligently the thinge whereof the Author writeth, and what is his purpose is that he goeth about, and that specially in Paule, whiche is somwhat slippery and starting in hys disputation and reasoninge nowe leapinge hyther, nowe thyther, that (as Origen sayeth) the reader can scant vnderstande and perceyue when he is out, whyther he will go. 1. Corin. vii

Hytherto I haue recited the woordes of Erasmus, whereof the diligent reader maye easely perceyue, howe great wrong they do abuse the authoritie of sainct Paule, whiche waste the aforesayde sentence of the Apostle vnto the mayntaynaunce of their fonde opinion, concerning the fayned and folish diuorcement. I meane, that the giltles person maye not marye agayne so long as the giltye partie liueth: whā the holy Apostle in that place entendeth no suche matter, neyther treated he of diuorcemente, but by that similitude he taughte, that the lawe of Moyses beinge taken awaye by the lawe of the Gospell: the faithful are no longer bound to the obseruacion of the ceremonies of ye lawe, sith they haue taken to theym a new spouse, Christe. Moreouer S. Paule in that place speaketh of a lawful, true and faithfull wyfe, whiche lawfully, truly and faithfully liueth with her husbande in all godlines and honestie, and not of an adultresse, not of an whore, not of a wedlocke breaker, whiche hathe defyled her husbandes bedde, broken the weddinge promes, geuen her selfe to the compayne of straunge flesh, &c.

For suche one ceaseth to be a wyfe, and is now become an whore, and ought by the law of God to be put vnto death, and no lenger to lyue vpon the earth. But as if the maryed man hauing an honest & godly wyfe, should put away his lawful wyfe, and marye another woman, he is an adulterer: so likewise the wyfe hauing a faithfull and honest husband, if she should marye again whyle that her lawful husband lyueth, is an adultresse & a very harlot, as our Sauiour Christe sayeth:

Wathe.v. Whosoeuer putteth away his wyfe (except it be for fornicatiō) causeth her to breake Matrimony. And whosoeuer maryeth her that is diuorced, breaketh wedlocke, Agayn: Whosoeuer putteth away his wife Wathe.xix. (except it be for fornication, & maryeth another, breaketh wedlocke. And whosoeuer marieth her, which is diuorced, committeth adultery.

Marc.x Once agayn he sayeth: Whosoeuer putteth away his wyfe & marieth another, breaketh wedlocke to her warde. And if a woman forsake her husband, and be maryed to another, she committeth adultery. So longe as the bond of Matrimony is faithefully kepte betwene the maryed folke, one maye not separate them selfe from the other, neyther maye they marye agayne: (for in so doynge they breake wedlocke & cōmit adultery) but if the mariage be once brokē by any of thē than is the gyltles person set at libertie, not onely to be diuorced frō the gylty person, but also to marye agayn, as we haue tofore hearde.

The thyrd obiection. Thirdly, they obiecte this sentence of S. Paule to the Corinthians:

1. Cor. vii. Vnto the maryed commaunde not I, but the Lorde: Let not the wife be separated from the man. If she be separated, lette her remayne vnmaryed, or be reconciled vnto her husband agayn. And let not the husband put awaye his wyfe from hym

As in all other thinges almoste, so likewise in this, the Papistes doo none other thing than publish their madnes, & vtter their ignorāce. For who is so estraunged from the true vnderstāding of the Apostles mynde in this behalf, whiche seeth not, that blessed S. Paule speaketh not here of suche a wyfe, as is an adultresse and an whore, and hathe broken her maryenge promes, and defyled her husbandes bedde, and therfore is separated and diuorced from her husbande: (for suche by the lawe of God, and by the lawes also vsed amonge the Heathen ought to be put to death.) But he speaketh of suche a wyfe, as whom eyther her husbande hath put awaye in his anger for some light matter, or of suche one as willingly of the absent her selfe from the cōpanye of her husbande vpon some displeasure. These wyfes maye not marye agayne, neither maye their husbandes for such lighte causes take vnto them other wyfes, but rather seke all meanes possible (all displeasure layd aside) to be reconciledone to another, according to the admonicion of the Apostle.

That this is the meaning of the Apostle, we may easely gather of these his wordes. Or be reconciled agayn vnto her husband. Those persons we saye are made frendes agayne, whiche therof some offence or displeasur haue ben at variaunce. And agayne, that partie is sayde to be reconciled, whiche hathe trespalled: not he of whee, to whom the trespalle is done. Nowe if the anger conceyued betwene the maryed folke be such and so great, that renewing of loue can not streight wayes be had amonge theym: than the mynde of the Apostle is, that bothe the parties remayne vnmaryed, tyll a reconciliacio if be made

betweene theym, for almuche as the Christians maye not after the manner of the Jewes putte awaye their wyues for euery lyghte and common faulte. For saincte Paule in this place entendeth nothing les, than to debarre the Innocent person in maryage from that libertie, whiche Christe hathe geuen hym in the Gospell, if his yokefelowe haue broken the weddinge promes. He therefore speaketh not here of diuorcementes made for adultery, but of the separation of the parties one from another vppon some anger or displeasure. These by no meanes may mary agayn, tyll they be dissolued by death, but rather seek to be reconciled, and to come agayne together. For whoredome onely, and not hatred, anger, malice and displeasure breaketh the bōd of Matrimonye.

Thus haue I aunswered to those sentences of the holy scripture, which the Papistes wring and wreaste for their purpose against the true diuorcement, whyle they teache, that none other diuorce maye be alowed amonge the Christians, but that only, whiche is from bed and borde: as touchinge the libertie of maryenge agayne, that will they by no means graunt to the Innocent & gyltles person, although the other partie haue neuer so wickedly offended.

Hieroms reasons confuted

Nowe it remayneth, that we consider the reasons, whiche they make for the establishemēt of their fayned diuorce. These reasons thei borow of S. Hierome and of S. Augusten. Because, sayeth Hierome, it mighte chaunce, that some man woulde fynde faulte, and accuse hys wyfe slaunderously, whiche in dede is an honest woman, and so to the ende that he might marye another wyfe, woulde laye some greuous cryme to her charge, the man is so commaunded to forsake his fyrste wyfe, that he shall not be suffered to marye another, so longe as hys fyrste wyfe doeth lyue. Whyche thinge is almuche to saye, as if thou doest putte awaye thy wyfe, not for the displeasure that thou doest beare to any sinnefull acte of the fleshe, but for some iniurie, which thou haste receyued by her, wherefore sythe that thou haste founde thy firste maryage so vnluckye and contrary to thy mynde, doest thou putte thy selfe in daunger to suffer the like, if thou maryest agayne: Lykewise for so muche as it mighte chaunce, that the woman accordinge to the same lawe mighte sue a diuorce from her husbande: the selfe same order is taken for her, that she shall not marrye agayne, if she be once diuorced. And forasmuche as the woman, whiche hathe playde the whore and adulterous person, didde not feate the greate opprobrye and shame, whiche shoulde folowe that shameful acte: therfore the man, whiche doeth marye her being diuorced, is warned, that if he do marye suche a woman, he shall lyue with her in the synne of of adulterye, and be an adulterer. Thus farre are the wordes of Hierome. But let vs a while now (saieth Erasmus) not loke of how great authoritie this writer is, but let the Reader weygh & cōsider ꝑ matter with me, whether these be sufficient causes, wherfore the Innocent man shoulde be bounde so to a wicked woman, that he shoulde lyue alone without the frute of hys body, & burning in the lust of his flesh: lest, I say, he should be taken for a mā of small wisedom, which would agayn take vpō him ꝑ thing, which at the firste did not go wel wt him:

As though it were a shame for a man to go agayn to the sea, whyche had once ben in foule stormes and tempestes of weather: or for hym whyche being once deceyued in choling of a frend, would seke hym another, whome he might find trew & faithful: or that he should be take for an euyll lyuer, and a couetous person, whyche would be content to chaunge, not his wyfe, but the fauour and dowry of his wyfe. But I pray thee, tell me, whatsoeuer they be, which do suspect any such thyng after the Bishop hath done with the matter, and the diuorce iustly cõfirmed by the authoritie of good and lawfull Judges: are they to bee thought good and honest, or rather noughty & wicked persons whyche so do? Doubtles they be wicked creatures, and no good men. But doo we thinke it to be according to right and conscience, that for a few of wicked and euyll thinking persons, the husband, which hath not offẽded, or the wyfe, which is an honest womã, should be dryuen to suche a miserable state of liuing against his or her wil? The like causes doeth Augusten also alledge in his boke, which he wrote to Pollentius, sayenge: lest the woman for the hatred shee doeth beare to her firste husbande, should seme to set more by an other man, and so should appeare not to be so much offended with the faultes of her firste husbande, as she was gredye and desirous to haue a new: where he spake somwhat testingly, and denyed, that for the complaynt and quarelles of the vngodly, the Gospell should in any wyse be peruerted. But truly the Gospell doeth not prohibit thee to marye agayn, after that thou hast put alwaye thy wyfe iustly & lawfully. And forasmuch as neyther Christe nor Paule do require, that he shall lyue continent and chaste, whyche can not so do: for what cause should they be counted naughty persons, whyche neither can do it, nor yet haue bound them selues by any bonde thereunto? This is the faulte of the bodye, not of the mynde. And wherfore is he compelled to suffer punishment, whyche hath committed none offence: yea and is also in great disquietnes and affliction al ready. Thus farre Erasmus: and thus muche haue I spoken, concerninge diuorcement, prouyng by the woorde of God, and by the authoritie of diuerse godly learned men, that the innocent and gyltles person diuorced lawfully by order of law, and set at libertie frõ the gyltie and adulterous partie, by the authoritie of good & lawful Judges, may lawfully and with a good conscience marye agayn: although by the sufferaunce or negligence of the Magistrates the gyltye and vnfaythful person be suffered to lyue: whom it were much better to take out of the waye, than to suffer lenger to liue. For so should the matter not only be without question, and free from al disputation of the aduersaries, but also the lawe of God shoulde be obeyed and fulfylled, whyche commaundeth bothe the adulterer and the adultresse to bee stoned vnto deathe, that euyl maye be taken away from the common weale of Christendome.

Augustẽs reasons confuted

Leuit. xx. Deut. xxii.

And whatsoeuer I haue spoken in this behalf, I haue not spoken it to this ende, to open a gappe to often separacions of maryed persons, or to fyll and replenishe euery corner of the woorlde with diuorcementes, but to declare what is permitted by the woorde of God to the Innocẽt maryed person, if hys yoke felow breaketh the wedding promise, and defileth her self with the abhominable sinne of adultery.

I meane

I meane, not only to be diuorced from bed and bord, as the papistes teach, but also to be at liberty to mary againe where and with whom he wyl, so it be done in the lord. And whatsoeuer I haue spoken of the man, the same is to be vnderstande of the woman, although S. Ambrose saith, that ther is no such licence geuen to the woman, as is to the man, that she may mary againe, albeit she do put awaye her husband, because he hath playde the whoremonger, or hath forsaken his faith, or vnlawfully hathe desired the vse of his wyfe. And his reason is, because the man is the head of the woman: and the inferiour hath not the same prerogatiue in the law ouer the head, which the superiour hathe ouer the inferyour: whan notwithstandynge within fewe words after he suffreth the wife also in case of infidelyty and blasphemy of God to take another husband, although her first husbande be aliue. His words are these: they ought not to receaue any honor by matrimony, which do disdaine and hate the authour and maker of Matrimony. For it is no good or firme matrimony, which is without the loue of God: by the which reason the woman, which is put awaye, because she doth feare and loue God, doth not sinne, if she ioyne her selfe to another husband. For the contempt and hatred of God our maker doth loose and vndo the bonde of Matrimony, and setteth at libertye the party which is so put away: so that he or she so forsaken may without blame and offence couple them selues in matrimony agayne with other, &c. And we hard afore out of Origen, that certaine Byshops in his time lycenced certaine women being diuorced from theyr husbãds to mary againe. We heard also the decree of Pope ZacharY. Wee likewise hard the history of Fabiola that noble and vertuous Matron, &c. And saint Hierom saith, that whatsoeuer the holy scripture commaund the man, that same also belong vnto the woman: so that both of them are in one state, & in one case: neither in this behalfe (I meane the matter of diuorcement) hathe the man more authoritie ouer the woman, than the woman hath ouer the man, but their condicion is equal, like, and all one. For before God there is no respecte of persons: neither is man better than woman, but whosoeuer worketh righteousnes, the same is derely accepted and welcome to him.

Roma.ii. Colo.iii. Act.x.

Now to helpe that these diuorcements may neuer or seldom be found among the Christians: it shalbe necessary that some godly and honest remedyes be found.

Remedyes against diuorcements.

First it shal be expedient, that such an order be taken by the Magistrates, that no maryage be rashly made, but with highe consultacion and great deliberacion, lest this common prouerbe be found trew: whot loue is sone colde. For as in all graue and weighty matters byeth and councel is to be taken: so likewyse in the knot of wedlocke all rashenes is to bee eschewed, yea and that so muche the more because that that knot once knit, there can be no dissolucion thereof, but only by death. And who knoweth not, that maryages rashly begun, bying for the repentaunce, & also many times such hatred betwene the maried folke, that separacio is sought on both parties, theyr life in the meane time being most displeasaunt and vnquiet? Is there any man so far estrauged from the compasse of reason, that can alowe such whot and soden maryages as are nowe a dayes commonly made betwene boyes and gyrles, yea and those manye tymes brought to passe by whores and bawdes, wine and dronckennes beeing the chiefe councelours. What good successe can such maryages haue? The garde that attend vpon those mariages are repentaunce, sorow, disquietnes of mind, trouble, care, sorow, hatred, malice, powerty, beggery, losenes of life, acquaintaunce with straunge flesche, and in fine diuorcement. Now to auoide all those pestilences it shall bee expedyent, that whansoeuer any persons shal bende them selues towarde maryage, they do dylygentlye wey and consider the matter with al the circumstances, and not raschlye take it in hand, lest repentaunce folow: consult with theyr frends: marke well the condycyons and propertyes of the other partye, with whom maryage is to be made: and aboue all things desire God with most feruent praiers, to worke that in them, which may be most vnto the glory of his holy name, and vnto the quiet state of theyr life, euer remembring this olde prouerbe: haste make waste. Againe, it is good to take councel of their pillowe. Item, it is sone inough, if it be well inough. Notable is this saieng of Publius.

hasty maryages bring repentaunce.

Deliberandum est diu, quod statuendum
est semel. That is to saye.

Longe oughte that to hange in delyberacion,
Which once done, admitteth none alteracion.

The second remedye.

Secondly, in cõtracting mariages in this our age, we se many greuous abuses, wherof many times folowe diuorcementes, as I maye speake nothinge of the bitter life in the meane time. And these abuses and enormities be found both in certaine parents and children. First as concerning the parents, many there be of that order, whiche make open sale of their children, as the butcher doth of his calues & lambs. Who wil geue most, he shal by & cary away. They haue no regard neither vnto the healthy of their childrẽ: nor vnto the honesty of the party which shall mary with theyr children. Agre, or agre not, the couetous parẽts force not, so they may haue the mony. The mariages are made yea and those many times in the tender yeres of the Children, whan they are scantly able to dyscern betwene chese & chalke, so far is it of, that they cã iudge of so weighty a matter as mariage is. Another sort of parents euen by vyolence and manacing words enforce and compel theyr chyldren, wil they, nil they, to mary where they appoint, so that mony come. The cõsent of theyr childrẽ they do not greatly regard: mary must they, or els a plaine disinheritaũce. What goodnes, I beseche you, is to be loked for of such mariages? Is there any hope of good cõtinuaunce betwene those maryed folke, which not wyllyngly, but vnwyllingly, not of loue, but of force are dryuen together? What the sequele of suche maryages is: daily experyence doth aboundantly shew. To muche wretched are those parentes, whiche enforce theyr children for lucres sake vnto suche maryages, as they from the verye hearte abhorre: And verely they do nothinge els, than open a window vnto diuorcementes. For who beinge tied againste his wyll, seeketh not to be losened, whan time serueth? There is no man so vncouragyous, which being kept in captiuity, wyl not, if he maye, wrastle out of that bondage, and set hym selfe agayne at lyberty.

wycked parẽts.

Parents

parentes ought to consider, that theyr authoritye is geuen them of God, not to destroye, but to profite theyr children: and that therefore they entendyng to place theyr children in maryage, ought not to reiect, but to require the good wil and consent of theyr children, lest they be found tiraunts in stead of parents. The parents and frends of Rebecca, whā they were determined to geue her to be maryed vnto Isaac Abrahams sonne, sayd: we wyl cal the damsel, & enquire at her mouth And they called forth Rebecca, and sayde vnto her: Wilt thou go with this man? And she answered: I wyll go. And so they let her go. Here it is euidently set forth, that in matters appertayninge vnto maryage not only the authority of the parentes is requyred, but also, the consent of the Chyldren. Gen.xxiiii. In maryage the authority of the parentes, and the consent of the children ought to go together.

Againe, as many parents do greatly offende in placinge the chyldren in maryage for lucres sake against theyr wil: so likewise ther are not a fewe children, which without the councell, aduyse, consente and good wyl of theyr parents tumble them selues into the yoke of matrimony, led therunto neither with wit, reason and discretion, nor yet with any consent, sure and grounded loue, but only with folysh fansy, carnal concupisence, fleshly loue, sensual appetite. &c. These mariages so vnaduisedly contracted, shortly after for the moste part, whan Lasciuious and wanton lust is satisfied, bryng repentaunce, as I maye speake nothinge of discorde, strife and debate, and many times braste out into diuorcements: so vnfortunate are all these maryages whych are not blessed of God, nor contracted according to his holy word. For as parents ought not to coupel theyr children in mariage without the consent and agrement of those theyr children: so likewise the chyldren ought not to geue them selues to maryage without the authority, consent, good wil and councel of theyr parents or tutors. And verily this lycencious liberty, whiche the youth of Englande at this present in a manner enioieth without checke in this behalfe, ought to be restrained, and the children brought home againe vnto that humble obedyence and honor, which they owe to theyr parents by the word of god. wicked childe.

Among the very Ethnikes (saith Erasmus) Matrimony was not lawful, except it had ben confirmed with the consent of the parentes, and the authority of the tutors of them, which were maryed: no, nor yet amonge the Iewes was it otherwyse lawful: and shal we thinke well of those maryages, which not the grauitie of the parēts, but the light braines of the children, not the wyse councel of the tutors and gouernours, but the fleshly fansy of folysh youth hath brought to passe, yea and that among Christians? Shal that be counted lawful in a Christen common weale, which both Iewe and gentle could not abide, but vtterly detest in theyr common weale? It is a most detestable kinde of disobedyence, and worthy to bee eschewed more than plage and pestilence of all godly youth, children to snarle them selues in the snare of Matrimony without the consent and good wyll of theyr parentes, in whose power God hathe placed them. It is not only a token of notable disobedience, but also of great foly. And what can be a greater corrupte to the conscience of a natural & christē sonne, than to consider hys disobedyence, in that hee hathe attempted so weyghty a matter without hys councel & aduise of his parents, to whom God hath made Erasmus Roterodamus.

hym subiecte, as the seruaunt to his lorde: And is it to be thoughte, that suche maryages can haue good successe, whiche are taken in hād with the contempte of the parentes authoritie and with the disobedience of Gods worde: Can God blesse the maryages of those chyldren, whiche are contracted without the good will of the parentes: yea whiche are also cursed of the parentes: He that honoureth hys father: shall haue a long lyse, and he that is obedient for the Lords sake: his mother shall haue ioye of hym. For the blessing of the father buyldeth vp the houses of the chyldren, but the mothers curse roteth vp the foundacions, sayth the wyse man. God vndoubtedly wil not blesse those maryages, whiche are begunne without his feare, and with the dishonour of the parentes, to whome next vnto hym selfe he commaundeth the chief honoure and obedience to be geuen. But contrariwise suth as marye in the feare of God and with the consent of the parents, God blesseth them, saoureth theym, preserueth and kepeth them, geueth them long lyfe, ioyfull dayes, and abundance of all good and prosperous thinges. The Ciuile lawe, the lawe of God, the lawe of nature, and the iudgemente of all godly and wyse men forbiddeth chyldren to marye without the consent of the parentes. Franciscus Barbarus sayeth, that there is no maryage, although neuer so greate and excellent, whiche oughte not to geue place vnto the will & pleasure of the father. And he bringeth in an example of Cyrus, whiche whan he was desired to marye with a woman, of great and almooste innumerable riches and possessions, aunswered: that he by no means woulde marye with her, although neuer so ryche and beautifull, although of neuer so great honour and power, before he had obtayned the good will of hys father. But of this matter we haue spoken before.

The thyrde remedye.

Thirdly, it shal not a litle help vnto the auoyding of diuorcemēts, if the maryed folke haue a good opinion one of an other, think and iudge well one of another, interpret all things vnto the best, bear and forbear one an other, auoyde all euyll suspicions one of another, loue one another, delighte one in an other, one thinke an other mooste faire, moste beautiful, moste goodly, and best in all thinges. Agayn, if at any tyme discorde chaunce between them, not by any means to suffre it to continew, but streyghtwayes to seke one to be reconciled to the other, all displeasure set aside, and such renewing of loue had, that their amitie from henceforth maye continew constant and immortal. And if eyther the deuill or the worlde, or the flesh at any tyme prouoke them vnto the breache of wedlocke, let them by no means geue place, but content them selues one with anothers company, seyng that Matrimony is honorable, & the bedde vndefiled: but as for whoremongers and adulterers God shall iudge, condemne and punishe, euer settinge before their eyes this sayeng of Salomon: Be glad with the wyfe of thy youth, and let her breastes alway satisfye thee, and hold thee euer contente with her loue. Why sonne, why wilte thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and embrace the bosome of another woman? For euery mans ways are open in the sighte of the Lorde, and he pondereth all their goinges. The wickednes of the vngodly shal catche him self, and with the snares of his own sinnes shall he be trapped. Let them re-frayne from euill company, abhorre the heating of wanton talke, and the seing of vayn sightes, and vtterly auoyde all other thinges; as to muche eating and drinking, bancketting, ryot daunceing, vayn sportes idlenes, gadding abroade, &c. What soeuer may prouoke vnto the vnlawful lust of the flesh. These exercises shall keep matrimony vnspotted betwene the maryed folke: so farre is it of, that diuorcement shall take place, where suche study of godlines and of vnfayned loue one towarde another raygneth.

Fourthly, for asmuch as naturall kynd of liuing creatures are bēt vnto the pleasur of the flesh, & to suppresse the wyld and inordinate rages of the same, God hath ordayned the holy state of Matrimony, cōmaunding all persons that can not contayne & lyue chaste, to enbrace the same, and one man to lyue with one woman, and one to geue to ỳ other due beneuolence, so that all whordome, all adultery, all incest, all Sodomitrye, and all other kynde of vnclennes be banished frome the Christen cōmon weale: it shalbe expedient, that the godly Magistrates deuise some law for the punishment of such, as contrary to ỳ lawe of God geue them selues to loosenes of lyfe, to the deflouring of virgines, to the corrupting of wyues, to the defylinge of wydowes, to the abusing of them selfs with mānkynde or otherwise, whyther they bee maryed or vnmaryed. Gods holy commaundement is, that there shuld not be found an whoremonger among the sonnes of the Christians, nor an whore among the doughters of the Christians. It is a shame, and to muche vnworthy the Christian profession, to see all kynd of vnclennes so licēciously and without punishment vsed at this presente daye. No man soroweth at it. No man lamenteth thys dissolucion of lyfe. No man studieth, how to banish this to muche abhominacion & corrupcion of manners. Whoredome is now become a play, a pastime, a sporte. No man although neuer so notable an whoremonger is ashamed of hys whordome. No whore doth now blush at her whoring. Whordō is now become so cōmon, ỳ it is coūted a thing worthi almost of no correction or punishmēt, except it be a litle to daunce before the people in a whyght sheet. Herof cometh the breaking of the wedding promes. Herof cometh ỳ defiling of so many maydes, wyfes, & wydowes. Herof cometh such a multitude of diuorcemēts. If the Magistrates therfore entēd to banish these great plages & pestilēces frō the Christen cōmon weale, & to keep the holy state of Matrimony perfect & vndefiled amōg their subiects: it shalbe necessary, ỳ thei deuise some sharp punishmēt for such as thus leudly behaue thē selfs, & by no meās suffer thē to escape vnpunished. God in his cōmō wele wold haue adultery punished wt stoning vnto ỳ death. In other cōmō weales it was punished by fyre, by sweard, by puttinge out their eyes, by cuttinge of their noses, by whippinge & scourging, by banishment, &c. In no common weale whordom & adultery escaped vnpunished, no not among ỳ very Heathē. Let adultery be punished by death, & diuorcemētes shall not only sone cease, but also ỳ bōde of Matrimony shall cōtinew the surer, and all godlines of life be the better mayntayned and kepte.

The fifth remedye.

Houses of bandye, permitted amonge the Christians.

Christians (alas for sorowe) open houses of whordome are openly suffered, where all kynde of abhominacio is freely and without punishment permitted vnto the great dishonoure of Christen religion, vnto the heynous and intollerable mayntaynance of vice, & vnto the great decaye of honestie, godlines and vertue: and by this means many maryed folke litle regarde their maryenge promis, but lyue so loosely as though they were free from the bonde of Matrimony, yea as though they were Infidels and knew no God, so that of this their to muche licentious lyfe folow diuerse diuorcementes and many dissolutions of Matrimonye, whyle the one partie is vniust, vntrew and falce to the other partie: it shall not be vnfitting for the Magistrates and Judges, whan the innocent person complayne of the gylty person and require diuorcement, according to the law, to exhort the innocēt partie to forgeue the offender (if the faulte be duly proued by euidēt witnesse and not denyed of the other partie) euen as he woulde be forgeuen of God, whome he dotoh dayly, and no les greuously offend, and to seke all meanes possible to bring them again together, and to make a reconciliation, and to ioyne them again in loue & amitie one to another. If the gyltles party shew hym self in this behalf harde and not easye to be entreated: yet lette not the sentence of diuorcement streyghtwayes procede, but rather make delayes in the matter, ỹ in the meane whyle remedy may be sought by frendes and otherwise, if reconciliacion mai by any means be obtained, so that the olde loue and familiaritie maye be renewed betwene them.

Deuyces of reconciliation betwene the gyltles person and the offendoure.

I know that some learned men be of this opinion, that ỹ wedlock bonde once broken thorow whordome, the persons tofore maryed together, may no more returne one to the other, nor neuer after be take for man and wyfe, but are so to be separated & put a sunder, that they by no means mai come afterward together as man and wyfe, to geue one to the other the due benenolence. And thei are moued so to thinke by these considerations. God (saye they) in ths olde lawe would not Deut. xxiiii. suffer a man, that had put away his wyfe for any kynde of displeasure, if she had geuen her self afterward to marye with another man, although he dyed, to take her home agayne, because she was defiled, and had the knowledge of another mans bodye: for that is abhominacion (sayeth the scripture) in the sight of the Lord. Is it thā to be thought a matter tollerable, that a man should take her agayn, whiche is knowen of another man, yea and that not in wedlocke, but in whordome If it be not lawfull for a man to take that womā agayn, beyng sometyme hys wyfe, whome another man hathe knowen in maryage: is it lawfull to take her agayn, being knowē in adultery: Whatsoeuer maryage hath made once vnlawful, whordom hath made a thousand tymes more vnlawful. And if it be a syn to knowe her, whome another man hath knowē in maryage: it is more then a double sinne to know her, which hath ben knowen of another man in whordome.

Jere. iii.

Moreouer they alledge this sentence written in Jeremye ỹ Prophecet: It is comōly sayde: If a man put away his wyfe, and she goeth from hym, and maryeth with another man: should he resorte vnto her any more after that: Shall not that womā be polluted and defiled: Hereof they gather, that if any man take agayn vnto his wyfe that woman,

woman, whome he before put a waye, whiche woman also sins that tyme hath bene maried to an other man, he sinneth against the word of God. Now say they, if it be against Gods word, to take her againe whiche hath bene knowne of an other manne in maryage, whiche is the good and lawfull ordynaunce of God: how muche more is it against the word of God to receiue her again, whome an other manne hathe knowen in whordom, which is manifestly and directly against Gods word? They adde more ouer, that if God wolde haue had those two maryed persones, wherof the one hathe broken the wedding promise and is defyled with adulterye, to be reconciled, and so from henceforthe to lyue togyther holyly in the holy state of matrymonye: God wolde haue set it forth in his holy word, but to declare, how grieuously he abhorreth the sinne of adultery, and how by no meanes he can suffer that his people should accompeny them selues with any persones that be defiled with that sinne: he commaundeth bothe the adulterer and the adulteresse to be stoned vnto the death, that the innocent and giltes persone may be at libertie to mary again, so it be in the Lorde. Deut.xxiiij. Note.

Furthermore they say, we are forbidden to haue ought to do with whoremongers and adulterers, or to eat and drincke with them, or to be in their compeny. Herof doth it playnly folowe (say they) that the innocent persone in matrymony hauing his yokefelowe defiled with adultery: ought nomore to keep compeny with her, to eat and drink with her &c. muche lesse to take her as his wyfe: seeing it is written. He that keepeth and maintetneth an harlot, is a foole, i.Cor.v. Pro.xviii.

Againe they say, ỹ we are charged by the authoritie of the Apostle, that wee maye not take the members of Christe, and make them the members of an harlot, seeing that he, which coupleth himself with an harlot is become one body with her. Now (say they) the members of a true and faithfull maryed mānes body: are the members of Christe. If this man hathe an whore to his wife, so is it not lawful to communicate the vse of his body to that harlot, for asmuche as in so dooing: he should make his members (whiche are the members of Christe) the members of an whore, and by this meanes defile hymselfe, & estrauge him self frō ỹ body of Christ, being now made one body wt the harlot. i.Cor.vi.

They go foorth and say. As Christe and Belyal haue no felowship to gither: so lykewise the children of light and the children of darknes ought not to keep compeny to gither &c. ii.Cor.vi.

Besides theke things a forsaid, they alledge the Ciuil law, whiche counteth that husband no better then a baud, that taketh againe vnto him his wife, whiche hath bene conuict and condemned of adultry, forasmuche as in taking her againe: he seemeth to alow her condicions, and not greatly to be greeued with her whoring.

They bringe foorthe also thys testymonye of Saynte Jherome, sayinge, that woman, whyche hathe dyuyded one flesshe, into an other or mo: ought not to be retayned or kept, lest the husband be accursed. For it is written. He that kepeth an adultresse: is vngodly and fooliche. Againe. If the wyfe fall into any other sinne: it hindereth not matrymonye, but if she fall into adultry: she is nomore a lawfull wife. Diuers other witnesses they allege out of the aūcient Fathers for their purpose, which all I pas ouer, being content for this present In Matth.ca. xix. Pro.xviii with this one authoritie of Chrysostome, that folo'weth. If any man (saith he) hath to doo with his wife that is an whore or an adultres, let hym repent and be sory for it. Again, as that husband is vnrighteous, whiche accuseth his wife beeing innocent: so is he a foole, that keepeth her that is an whore.

With these authorities of the holy scriptures and of the auncient Fathers, certen learned men moued, hardly consent, that a man taking his wife in adultery may receiue her againe as his wyfe, but rather for euer after be so estraunged from her, that he haue nothing to doo wyth her concernyng any act of matrymony. Verely it can not be denyed, but that adulterye is a moste greuous sinne, seeing that oure sauyoure Christe maketh that a sufficyent cause to dissolue and loosen matrymony, and the giltles person to mary again, yea adultry maketh the partye that hathe offended dead (although yet alyue thorowe the negligence of the magistrates) so that the innocent party is so free to mary agayne: as though the gilty party were taken out of the life. Notwithstanding this, I trust may be spokē with a good conscience, that in those realmes and kingdomes, contreys and cities where adultrye is not punysshed by deathe, it shall not be vngodly, nor against the order of christen charitie: if all meanes be sought by the Magistrates, by the Ministers of Goddes worde, by the freendes of the partyes and by other godly and honest persones to make a reconciliacyon betweene the innocent persone and the party that hath offended, that they may liue to gither from hencefoorth godly and honestly according to the bond of wedlock, namely if they perceyue hasty repētaunce and an vnfayned dispolycyon vnto amendement of lyfe in the gilty persone. And all be it the innocent persone cannot at the first be intreated, perswaded, and brought to this point, that he will receiue his yoke felowe, whiche against the law of God, against the wedding promise, against all honestye and truthe hathe so wickedly dealt with hym: yet let euery stone (as they vse to saye) be moued, and all meanes sought to bring them againe to gither. Let no counceil, no perswasyon, no promise, no gifts be spared, wherby the giltles persone may be wonne bothe to forgiue and to forget, yea and so to forgiue and so to forget as though the faulte had neuer beene committed, and the wedding loue so renewed betweene them, as though there had beene neuer any breache of the same betweene them.

Adultey.

Reconciliacō

The giltles person is permitted but not commaunded to marry. againe.

Galat. vi.

And verely a Christen manne in this behalfe after my iudgement oughte to giue ouer some parte of his libertye, seeing he is not commaunded, but onely permitted and suffered to marye againe, if hys wyfe haue played the whore. though it be lawfull for hym to marye agayne, yet let hym consider, whether it be expedyente, and remember with hym selfe, that one of vs ought to beare an others burdeyne, and that no manne is borne to hym self, but to seeke the commoditie of an other, agayne, that what so euer is doone a mysse in his wyfe: might haue chaunced in hym also, if God had taken his grace frō him, and had not vnder propped & stayed hym vp by hys holy spirite. And how knowethe he, whether it shall be more profitable for hym to take a new

a new wife, which peraduentre afterward shal fall into the like fault vnto his greater greef and sorow: than to forgiue his wife, which ones through the infirmitie and fraylenes of the flesche, beeing seduced by the crafty perswasions of some naughty pack hathe fallen, and is now so penitent and sorowful for that her offence: that she studyeth bothe day and night to amend, what soeuer tofore hathe bene a misse and neuer more to fall into that fault, but for euer after to be an humble and seruisable, a louing and gentle wife to her husbande: Christe receiueth whores and harlottes into his heauenly Fathers kingdom, and shall we for one fault thrust them without all pitie out of our houses, namely, when ther be euident signes and manifest tokens of repentaunce and amendement of life: Math. xxi.

The prodigall and wasteful sonne, after he had spent his Fathers goodes among ruffians and herlottes, repenting and confessing his offences: was forgiuen and receiued into fauour, and shall we be so hard harted, and so shut vp the bowelles of mercy and tender compassion, that we shall haue no pitie vpon suche as thorowe the fraylnes of mannes nature haue chaunced to offend, yea & that not without great repentaunce and earnest sorowe of hart: Luc. xv.

Christe that good and mercyfull shepherde, whan the sheep was gon a straye, neuer seassed to seeke: till he had founde it, and laying it vpō his shoulder, he with great ioy brought it home again vnto the sheepfolde, & shall we, whiche haue ỳ sheep ỳ haue rūne a stray within our owne doores, cruelly & churlishly thrust her out of our hous, seeing she intēdeth from hencefoorth nomore so to to wander, but diligētly and honestly to keep at home: A great nūbre of harlots there were without all dout in the Citie Niniue, when God by the Prophet Jonas threatened to subuert & vtterly to destroi bothe the City & all the inhabitāts therof, yet did God shew mercy to them all, whā they repented and turned vnto hym, and shall we be so estraunged from all mercy, pitie and compassion, that we will not heare those that haue offended vs, whan they return, cōfesse theire fault and promise amendement: And to saye the trueth, they haue not so greatly offended vs, as they haue offended God, whose lawe they haue transgressed. Nowe if God haue forgiuen them, against whome the offence is specially committed: (God forgiueth, so soone as repentaunce and faith cometh) shall we be so cruell that we will shewe no mercy at all: God forgiueth vs tenne thousand talentes, and will not we forgiue oure felowe seruaunte an hundred pence: With what forheade dare we be bolde to craue of our heauenly father forgiuenes of oure dettes, whan we our selues will not forgiue our detters: We are commaunded to forgiue them that sin against vs, offend they never so often, if they turne and confesse theire faultes, and shall we contrarye to the commaundement of God be so vnmercyfull, that we will not forgiue them that haue offended vs, no, not ones: Euery man ought to be to an other the very same, that he wysheth God shoulde be to hym. Jonas. iij Math. xviij Luc. xvij.

Now who desireth not God to be merciful vnto him, and to forgiue him his sinnes, & shal not we do ỳ same to such as haue displesed vs:

If

Rom. If any member of our body hurteth the other members, and in hurting them, hurteth it self also: doo we streight waise cut it of, and cast it from the other members? yea rather doo we not go about to hele the same member, and prouide that it self beeing cured: the other may nomore be hurt and noyed by the same? Is not the wife a member of the Gene. ij. Math. xix. mānes bodye, yea one body with the man? If therfore this member Ephe. v. (I meane the woman) haue hurt the other members of the bodye, that is to say, the man: is the streight way to be cut of, and not rather so to be handeled, that from henceforthe she neither hurt her selfe nor her husband, thorow good councel and godly admonicions? If other offend vs we frankly and freely forgiue them, and shall we not forgiue suche one as we before all other did choose to liue and dye withall? The knot of worldly frendship compelleth vs many tymes to forgiue them, whiche haue wrought vs displeasure, and shall not the knot of wedlock, whiche was made & fastened by the spirit God: prouoke vs to shew fauour to our poore & miserable wiues, whom the infirmitie and Pro. xxiiij. weaknes of their nature haue suffered to fall? The righteous man sinneth seuen times in the day and riseth againe, so that God doth not impute nor lay his faults vnto his charge, if therfore our simple and careful wiues fall ones or twise in their life, shall we narowly look vnProuerb. x. to those their offēces? and not rather couer thē according to ỹ nature 1. Peter iiij. of christen charitie? Albe it we many and diuers times run a whoreing from God, and acquaint our selues with straunge gods, yet whan we return vnto hym, he casteth out of his minde all our vnclennes, layeth them neuer to our charge, receiueth vs home again, and reconēteth vs for pure, clene and holy. Ought not we to doo the like to our wiues, whiche thorow some vnhappy hap haue entangled themselues Math. xviij with straunge loue, if they repent and amend? Verely small is the offence, whiche another committeth against vs, if it be compared with the greuous and horrible sinnes, whiche we dayly cōmit against God: if we therfore desire to haue forgyuenes of those moste greuous wickednelles at the hand of God: is it not meet that we forgiue that little Math. v. treſpas whiche is done against vs? If the merciſull onely shall receiue Iacob. v. mercy of God our heauenly Father for Christe Iesus sake: shall they look for any mercy at ỹ hand of God, whiche shew no mercy to such as haue offended them? Verely a true and naturall Childe will folow the good condycyons of his true and naturall father.

So many of vs as profesſe Christe, count oure selues the Sonnes and Childzen of God. Is it not then conuenyent, that we folowe the Ephe. v. steppes of oure heauenly Father? As Saincte Paule sayeth. Be yee the folowers of God, as moste deere Childzen, and walke in loue, as 1. John. v. Christe hathe loued vs. Lykewise sayeth Sainct John. He that saith that he dwelleth in hym, ought to walke as he hath walked.

Now to whome is this vnknowen, that runne we neuer so oft a whoreing from this oure God after straunge Goddes, yea rather after ydolls: yet if we returne vnto hym, for he refuseth vs not, but Jerem. iij. moste gladly, willingly, and freely receiueth vs. He sayeth by the Prophet. Thou haste played the Harlotte withe manye louers, yet turn agayne vnto me (sayeth the LORDE) and I will receyue thee.

Lift

lift vp thine eye vnto the hil alters, and look if thou be not defiled w whordom. Thou hast waited for thē in the stretes, and as a murtherer in the wildernes. Thorow thy whordō and shamful blasphemies, is the land defiled. Thou hast gotten thee an whores forhed, and wilt not be ashamed &c. Notwithstanding thou disobedient Israel, turn again (saith the Lord) and I wilnot let my wrath fall vpon you, for I am mercifull (saith the Lord) and I wilnot alway beare displeasure against thee, but this I will that thou knowe thy great blasphemye, namely that thou hast vnfaithfully forsaken the Lorde God, and hast made thy self partaker of straunge goddes vnder all greene trees, but haste had no will to heare my voyce (sayeth the Lorde). O ye disobedyent Childzen, turn agayne (sayeth the Lorde) and I will be maryed with you.

Ought not we likewise after ỹ example of thys our moste merciful God, whiche is our husband, from whom we haue many times runne away a whorehūting after straūge goddes & wicked sinnes, and yet is wel cōtented to receiue vs home again vnto him, if we wil repēt vs of our former life and turn vnto him with all our harts, to dele with our wifes, and to shewe mercy vnto them, namely when they repent them of their wicked life, confesse their faults, and from ỹ very hart promise amendment. I say vnto you (saith our sauiour Christe) ỹ ther shalbe ioy in heuen in the presēce of the Angells of God ouer one sinner that repenteth: more then ouer ninty and nine righteous persons, whiche needno repentannce. Luc. xv.

If the Angells of God in heauen ioy & reioyce, whan sinners repent and amende: how greatlye ought wee to be ioyfull, when suche as haue heretofore runne a straye, come agayne home, and applye all theyr whole studye, laboure and diligence to practise godlynes, honestye and vertue? Verely fauour ought to be denyed to no persone, although neuer so great an offender (I speak of pryuat matters) if repentaunce and amendement of life come. I doo not see therfore (notwythstandyng the obiections of certeyn learned menne, but that in those coutreyes where whordome and adulterye is not punished by death, but the adulterer and the adulteresse suffered to liue, the maryed man finding his wife gilty of wedlock breaking, and hauing libertie by the word of God to be diuorced from her and to mary another wife, may with a good conscience (if she repēt and bring forth good tokens of amendment) retain her still as his lawfull wife, forgiue her and continue with her as tofore. For in so dooing: he shall doo a work of charitie, and folowe the maners of his heauenly Father, and greatly prouoke God to be mercyfull vnto hym, and to pardonne his offences, whan so euer he shall call vppon the maiestie of God. Neither speake I this for the maintenaunce of adultery: or to bolster and vpholde wicked personnes in theyre wycked dooing: but to this ende is spoken, what so euer is spoken, that the giltlesse and innocent person seeing in the other partye that hathe offended, manyfest and euydent tokens of repentaunce and amendement of lyfe: maye shewe fauoure, forgeue and forgette, and so renewe loue betweene them: as thoughe no displeasure had at any tyme chaunced.

Iere.iii. Note well.

And this I do the more gladly, because we rede in the holy scripture, þ God seing the adultery of the shrinching harlot Israel, and puttinge her away, and geuing her a byll of diuorcement, did offer him self, notwithstanding to receiue her againe, if she wolde confesse her faults, and returne vnto hym. And what some is he, that will not gladly folow the maners of his heauenly father? But if the gylty person shew no takens of repentaūce, but go forthe wickedly to behaue her selfe, as one gloryng in doing euill, & nothing regarding, neither the trans gression and breaking of Gods commaundement, nor the grauitie of her husbād, nor the good report of her self, &c. Thē is þ libertie, which the Gospel geueth, to be enioyed of the innocent partie, & thys counsail

Eccle. xxv. of the Wyse man is to be obeyed: Cut her of from thy flesh, that she do not alway abuse thee. For as mercy is to be shewed vnto the penitent

A woorthy consideracion. sinner: so is iustice to the vnpenitent offender. As it is to be wished, þ reconciliation might be had betwene the maryed folke, if repentaunce and amendemente of lyfe be founde in the gylty person: so likewyse ought law & punishment to be executed vpon such, as go forth to syn, and are led with no repentaunce, lest by the winge fauour to the wicked, a wyndow be opened to wickednes, and libertie geuen to the vngodly freely, & without punishment to sinne: wherof shall folow whole

Where as it is thought harde to you, that after adultrye, the one partye shuld be reconciled to the other: it shall not be hearde, if fayth be present. For why should we recken them, as yet adulterers, whome we beleue be eyther washed by Baptisme, or healed by repentaunce? These crimes in the olde lawe of God, were purged by no sacrifices, whiche by the bloud of the new Testament, without any doubt are purged: & therefore than it was prohibite altogether to take agayne his wyfe, after xxxiii.q.v. s. Auguste. We fynd it also wrytten in the Canōs on this maner. If thy wyfe haue fallen: know thou þ it is the property of mans nature to fal: & that mercy is to be shewed vnto her, if she rise. For so wold we,

In concil. Arelatens. that other shuld deal with vs. Agayn. If the adulteresse repent, shee ought to be taken again. Certes repentaunce is to be considered of the Christians in all persons, although neuer so greuous synners. The man therefore that fyndeth hys wyfe gylty of adultery, shall do bothe a godly and charitable acte, if he receyue her agayne, namely if she repent, bringforth frutes of repentaūce & vnfainedly studieth to lede a new lyfe. And herof haue we certain exāples in þ holy scripture.

It

It is written in the book of Judges, that Samson maryed a wife one of the doughters of the Philistines, whō (as Josephus writeth) he afterward (I knowe not for what cause) did put away, and was diuorced from her, yet he not withstāding afterward was minded to haue receiued her ageīn, and came vnto her fathers hous for ỳ purpose, but her father in Samsons absence had maryed her to an ōther whiche thing was afterward an occasion of muche euel. Iud.xiiij. Iud.xv.

In the same book we also rede, that a certē Leuit took vnto him a wife out of Bethlehem Juda, whiche afterward played the whore, and went away from him vnto her fathers hous to Bethlehem. Not withstanding the Leuite arose, and went after her to speke freendly vnto her: and to bring her home again, and coming vntō her fathers hous, where he was ioyfully receiued: the fault was forgiuen, a reconciliacion was made, loue was renewed, and he remaining there certein dayes and making good cheere, afterward departed and took his wife with him. Iud.xix.

What shall I speak of King Dauid, vnto whō King Saul gaue his doughter Michol to wife, & afterward gaue her vnto an other man tobe maryed, euen vnto Phalty the sonne of Lais. Did not Dauid not withstanding after the death of Saule, send for his wife Michol, and receiue her home again, forgiuing her what soeuer she had offended. Verely the mercy and pitie, whiche Christe had vpon the Adulteres in the Gospel, ought to moue all godly and charitable husbands to haue compassion vpon their wiues, although thorow weakines of the flesh they haue fallen, namely if they rise again, I mene if they repent, be sory for their lewd behauiour, & study to bicōe new womē in their life & conuersacion. I passe oner the history of Mary Magdalen, a woman somtime of a dissolute conuersacion and loose life, to whome notwithstāding after her repentaūce & large bewailing of her sinnes our most mercifull sauiour Christe shewed suche fauor, ỳ he suffered her to come vnto his presence, handle him, to wash and to wipe his feet, to poure precious ointment vpon his head, to talke with him, tobe conuersant with him, to eat and drinck with him &c. Great cōmendations doth Christe giue vnto Mary Magdalen in the Gospel, so glad and ioyfull to him is the conuercion of a sinner although neuer so grieuous. Of suche penitent womē ỳ haue offended spake Christe to ỳ cheef Preests and the Elders of the people, saying, Verily I say vnto you, the Publicanes and harlots shall go into the kingdom of God before you. Certes all these thiugs ought to moue and to perswade the giltles person in wedlock to haue pitie vpon the gilty partie, if vnfained repentance and the worthy fruits therof be declared and shewed, and not streight wayes to put away without all mercy the offēder, as though no mercy, no pitie, no compassion, no fauour were tobe shewed to such as fall, although they repent & amend. Whatsoeuer ye wolde (saith our sauiour Christe) that other should doo to you: doo ye euen the same to thē. For with what mesure ye mete vnto other: with the same shall it be met to you again. I.Reg.xxv. II.Reg.iii. Iohn.viij. Luc.vij. Marc.xiiij. Math.xxvi Iohn.xi. Luc.x. Math.xxi. Math.vij.

Now to help (as I said before) that the giltles person may forgeue the gyltie partie after the example of our heauenly father, and as we before haue heard of Sampson, of the Leuit, of Dauid, &c. And that a perfit reconcilia-

reconciliacion may be made betweene thē, and such an atonement concluded. as though neuer any fault had ben committed of either party, it shalbe the duty of ỳ good Magistrates, of the godly Preachers and of other honest persōs diligently to labor & painfully to trauil in this behalf, before they proceed vnto the diuorcement. If thy obtaine and bring this matter to passe: so haue they wrought a good worke and a dede of charitie. But if they by no meanes can persuade the giltles parson to forgeue the offender: than ought they to procede vnto ỳ sentence of diuorcement, and to graunte to the innocente partie that libertie, which Christe hathe geuen him in ỳ Gospell, as Erasmus also counselleth on this maner, sayeng. I do not speke these words to the entent that we shuld haue a gappe made open to often diuorcementes & seperacions of maried persons. But when all maner of wayes and meanes haue ben sought and attēpted for the quietnes of ỳ partis, & all in vaine: I woulde wishe that remedie were prouided, wherby the person which hath vnfortunatly maried, and can not be without a remedie may be preserued and holpen &c.

Erasmus Roterodamus

Thus much haue I spoken concerning diuorcement, & as I trust, according to the minde of the holy Ghost & the iudgement of the godly learned, most humbly beseching God, to geue vnto all maried folke his grace and blessed Spirite, that they may liue together in such fayth, loue, godlynes and honesty, that no occasion of diuorcement may be founde amonge theym vnto the glorye of his blessed name and vnto the quietnes of theyr state.

Now wil we heare the end of the description of Matrimony. It followeth, And spend theyre lyues in the equall parte takyng of all suche thynges, as God shall send them, wyth thanks giuing. Finally the duetye of all maryed folk is not only to dwell to gether as one flesh & bodie, of one will & minde in all honesty, vertue & godlines: but also to be partakers one with a nother of all such things as God shall send thē, whether they be prosperous or troublo⁹, good or bad yea & that with most humble thanckes geuing. Loue ought so feruently to be grafted in the brestes of all maried folke, that they should delight one in another not onely in prosperitie: but also in aduersitie, not only in welth: but also in pouertie, not only in health: but also in sickness. For the wedlock knot requireth a continuance togither in all kinde of fortune & not one to forsake another when the crosse of pouertie, sickness or any other aduersitye cometh. For riches and pouertie, health and sickness, life & death &c. All come of the Lord and therfore what so euer the Lorde sendeth: it ought to be welcome & to be receyued with a patient, glad & thankfull heart, as Job sayeth. If we haue receyued good thyngs at the hand of the Lord, why shuld we not also be content to suffer troubl⁹ thyngs? The Lord gaue the Lorde hath taken away: as it hath pleased ỳ Lord: so commeth it to passe, blessed be the name of the Lord. The husband may not forsake his wife in sickness, but rather aide & comfort her, loue and cherishe her as his owne selfe, yea euen as his own bodye. Neither maye the wife forsake her husbande & go away from him, albeit neuer so poore and in great misery, but rather abide with him, & take part with him of such thyngs as God sēd, whether it be much or litle with this persuacion, if ỳ they liue together in ỳ feare of God and according to his holy word one louing and cherishing a nother one bearing and forbearing a nother one studieng to do good to a nother and redie to healp one a nother: God will not suffer them to lack but gene vnto them abundantly all good thinges, as yt is written The rich have wanted and hungred: but they that seek after the Lord, shall wāt no good thing. O fear the Lord all ye his holy ones for soch as feare him, shall lack nothing. Againe. I have been yung, and I am now waxen olde, and yet did I neuer se righteous man forsaken, nor his seed begging their bread on the earth. That the godly maried, which with thancks geuing at partakers together of all such things as God send thē, shall want no good thing, ỹ miracle, which oure Sauiour Christ wrought at ỹ mariage in Cana Galile, proueth manifestly. Ther wāted wine at ỹ same mariage, but Christ straightways to shew his redi bent good wil to ward all godly maried perſōs, & his power to benefit thē: turned ỹ water into wine giuing by herby a special documēt, ỹ he hath a fatherly care for all suche as liue in the holy state of matrimony according to his heauenly fathers will, so ỹ they shall want no good thing. Only let them make their complaint vnto hym, and lament their necessitie with feruent prayer and strong faith: and they without all dout shall finde present help at the mightie hand of God, which is at hand to all them that call on him in spirite & truthe This considered wel the godly maried both of ỹ old and new testament, insomuch that no kind of fortune plucked thē a sonder: In prosperitie they praised God: in aduersitie they called vpon his holy name, & were heard as it is writtē. Our fathers hoped in thee: they trusted in thee: and thou didst deliuer them. They called vpon thee: and were helped, they put their trust in thee: & were not confounded. In this continauns together in wealth and wo, in riches and pouertie we haue diuers goodly examples in the holy scripture.

Psal. xxii

Whā God cōmaunded Abrahā to go out of his contrey & out of his nacion & from his fathers hous vnto a lād, that he wold shew him: Abraham obayed the commaundement of ỹ Lord, and went whither he was appointed: did Sara his wife forsake him or tarie behinde him as one being tender and delicate, and loth to trauaile, specially into a straunge land, which she had neuer seen, neither knewe she, what they should haue ther, whereof to liue, & bi this means forsake her moste dere parets, her sweet kinnesfolke, her louing freends, her moste pleasaunt countrie &c. Did she not rather gladly forsake all, and made her self companio & partaker of her husbāds iourney & of all his other affaires, whether they were prosperō or otherwise? She accōpanied her husband Abraham from haran vnto the land of Canaan, & trauailed with him in the same bothe northward, southward Eastward, and Westward. And from thens she went with him in the time of dearth into Egipt, and returned also with him into ỹ land of Canaan again And after ward she accompanied him vnto ỹ land of Gerar and so from place to place so long as she liued.

Gene. xii

Likwise rede we of Isaac and Rebecca his wife of Jacob & of his wifes &c. All these remained and dwelt together in euerie kinde of fortune neither departed the one from the other. Ther was among them an equal partaking of all things that God sent them, yea and that with thynges geuing vnto God.

Tobi.ii. But what shall I speake of the elder Tobias and of Anna his wife? These two remained togither bothe in prosperitie and aduersitie, insomuche that whē Tobias was fallen blinde and was no more able to worke, his wife Anna went daily to the weauing worke, and look what liuing she could get vp the labour of her handes, she brought it home, and by this meanes made prouision for her self and her blinde husband.

Nether are the wiues of the Apostles of our Sauiour Christ to be passed ouer with silēce, which also accōpanied their husbāds in all their troublesom and painfull iourneis, nether suffred thei them seles to be plucked from ther husbands ether for persecucion or for pouerti, or for any other kind of crosse. In what misery the Apostls were, these words of Saint Paull do manifestly declare, where he speaketh of him self and of his fellow Apostles on this maner: Euen vnto this time we 1 Cor.iiii. hunger and thirst, and are naked, and are bufeted with fistes, & haue no certain dwelling place, and labor, working with our owne handes we ar reuiled, & yet we bleste, we are persecuted, and suffer. we are euell spoken of, & we pray. we are made as it were the filthines of the world the of scouring of all thinges euē vnto this day. Agein. In moch pati- ence in afflictiōs, in necessities in anguisshes, in stripes, in prisoments, 2 Cor.vi. in strifes in labors, in watchings, in fasting, &c. Notwithstanding, all these miseries & heauy crosses, the Apostles wiues did continually remaine with their husbāds, so far is it of, that the Apostles did forsake their wiues, so sone as Christe had chosen them vnto the ministeri, or the wiues their husbands as the Papists faine.

Of these exāples of the holy scripture, which are left in writing for our instruction, we may easily learne that man and wife are yokefellowes so inseperable, that no kinde of sickenes, trouble, pouertie, persecution, aduersitie, or any kinde of crosse ought to pluck them a sunder. For look what the mēbers of one bodie ar one to ỹ other: ỹ very same thing are man and wife, as it is written: Man shall leaue Father & Mother, Gene. ii. and shal cleaue to his wife, & of two shal be made one flesh. And look Matth.xix. what great greef it is for a bodie to be dismembred: so great sorowe Ephe.v. ought it to be to man and wife when they be by violence kept a sunder whether they be in prosperitie or aduersitie. For which if euer of them that leaueth or neglecteth to keep cōpanie together: the same as forsaken and solitary alone must of necessitie lede a life moste wretched, destitute of all gladnes and help, because that the help which was made for him of God, and the companion of ioy and gladnes to him geuē, he neglecting despiseth to take, or cōtemptuously is bolde to leaue & forsake. Verily so great delight ought to be in the maried folk one toward a nother, that their cheef pleasure and delectacion shuld be one to accompanie an other, to liue and dwell together, and neuer without vrgent and weightie causes to be plucked a sunder, as Saint Peter saith: Let the men dwel together with their wines according 1 Pet.iii. to knowledge, geuing honor vnto the wife, as vnto the weaker vessel and as vnto the, that are heires also of the grace of life: Again, one to beare with a nother one to comfort and cherish an other, one wil- lingli to abide with an other, what so euer chaunceth, prosperus, or troublous, good or bad, yea and that with hartes bothe pacient and thanckfull to God for all thinges that he sendeth them, whether it be riches or pouertie, sickenes or helth. Being thorowly persuaded, that all thinges worke for the best vnto them that loue God: againe, that it is better to haue a litle thing with righteousnes, than great rentes wrongfully gotten: yea better is a dry morsell with quietnes, than a house full of fatte offring with strife. And Uerely better is the poore that liueth godly, than the blasphemer that is but a foole, although he flowe with the abundaunce of neuer so many and great riches. For the Lord will not let the soule of the righteous suffer hunger, but minister vnto sucheas feare him plentie of all good things, as Tobias saide to his Sonne: My sonne, be not afraid, trueth it is, we lede here a poore life: but great good shall we haue, if we fear God, and departe from all sinne, and doo well.

Rom. viij. Pro. xvj. Pro. xvij. Pro. xix. Pro. x. Psal. xxxiij Tobi. iiij.

Thus muche haue I spoken, concerning the description of Matrimony. Now time and order require, that I also declare, wherfore God instituted and ordained matrimony, that suche as entend to bemaried, may the better knowe, for what causes they ought to take vpon them this holy order & blessed state of life.

¶ The third parte of the booke of Matrimony.

¶ Wherfore Matrymony was instituted and ordayned of God.

Matrimony was ordeyned of God for iij causes.

IF we diligently note, weigh, ponder and cõsider the scriptures of God: we shall daily finde and perceiue that God that moste mighty Lord ordeined the holy and honorable state of matrimony for three causes. The first cause is, that for almuche as the solitary life is a sorowfull and vncomfortable life, and man of nature is desirous of compeny, and gladly liueth not alone: God as in all other thinges, so likewise in this, willinge to pleasure man, instituted and appointed this moste holye order of life, and commaunded one man and one woman to liue in the same, that one of them might be a comfort, ioye and help to an other in all honest and godly things. Heere haue we the first cause why God at the beginning instituted and ordeined matrimonye: Uerely that suche as liue in that blessed ordinaunce of God, shoulde be an helper one to an other. For thus rede we in the first booke of Moises.

The first cause.

The Lord God saide, It is not good, that manne shoulde be alone. Let vs make hym an helpe, that maye be present wyth hym. And the Lorde God caused a slumber to fall vpon manne, and he slept. And he tooke one of his ribbes. And closed vp the flesh in stead therof. And the rib, whiche the Lord God, had taken from man, made he a woman, and brought her vnto man. And man saide: This is nowe bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh. She shall be called woman, because she was taken out of man. For this cause shall a man leaue his father & his Mother, and shall be ioyned with his wife, & they shall become become one flesh.

And who is able to expresse, howe profitable and necessarie this firste cause of Gods ordinaunce. I mene, Matrimonye, is? It is not without a cause said of the Preacher: Two are better thē one, Eccle. iiij. for they may well enioy the profet of their labor. For if one of them fall his companion helpeth him vp again. But wo is him, that is alone. For if he fall, he hath not an other to helpe him vp. Again, when two slepe together, they are warme. But how cā a bodie be warm alone? One may be ouercomen: but two may make resistaunce. &c. The reuerend Patriarches, ỹ sage Iudges, the noble Kings, ỹ holy Priests and the godly enspired Prophets of the olde testament, with all other godly persons for the moste parte, which haue liued since ỹ beginning of ỹ world vnto this our age, knowing how tedio⁹ & yrksom ỹ single, sole and solitary life is, haue alwais from time to time embraced holy Matrimony, and ioined vnto them faithfull and louing yoke fellowes according to Gods appointment, with whom they might lede a sweet Pro. xviij ioifull and plesaunt life, as it is written. He that findeth a good wife findeth great tresure: and he shall receiue plesure at the Lords hand. Pro. v. Again, Be glad wt ỹ wife of thy youth, as with a louing Hinde & frēdly Roe. For what other thing is it to liue alone, and to lede a solitary Gene. ii. and single life: than to disobeye this voice of God. It is not good for man to be alone? than to degenerat and to growe out of kinde? than to followe Icarus, which is spoken of in the fables of the Poetes, which contrarie to the order of his kinde took vpon him to flie among the birdes with counterfait winges that he had made, but at the laste he fell downe like a wrech into the middest of the sea and was drowned? thā to haue a plesure, somuch as in thē lieth, to extinguish mankinde? than to make of populus cōmon weales plaine desertes & wildernesses? than to enuy the earth, his indwellers, and the heauens their blessed and glorious citisins? If we consider and weigh, as it were in a ballaunce both the solitary & matrimoniall life together: we shall easly perceiue, that the solitarie life is displesaunt vncomforta-

The solitarie life is displesaunt but the matrimoniall life is moste sweet and plesaunt.

ble, and vtterly estraunged from all ioye, solace & plesure: forasmuch as they which profesle that life, in their prosperitie haue no man to reioice with them, & in their aduersitie no mā to comfort them, but like monstures of nature, and enemies to God and man they passe ouer their daies in care and sorow. But contrariwise ỹ matrimoniall life is full of all ioy, comfort, solace, plesure, and what soeuer is either

The commodities of the matrimoniall life profitable or comfortable for ỹ life of man. If a man be mery, he hath his wife, he hath his children, which will be partakers of his mirth with him, and by this meanes greatly encreace his ioy and mirth. If he be sory, or fallen into aduersitie, he hath his wife, he hath his children, which will be as sorowfull for his mischaunce, as him self, & seek all wais possible to redresse it. If he be sick: he hath his wife, he hath his children, which with all diligence wil attend vpon him, keep him, comfort him, minister vnto him all good thinges, and prouide ỹ he lacke nothing that good, comfortable, and wholsome is. If he be wery, he hathe his wife, he hath his children, redy to refresh him. If he be angry or displeased: he hath his wife, he hath his childrē, which by all gentle meanes will seek to appease his angre and to make him

quiet. If he be painful in labozing and making pzouision foz him selfe and his: he hath his wife, he hath his childzen, which wil take paines with him, and diligently pzouide, that nothing periche of the thinges, which are gotten, but rather that they be safely and harmlesse pzeserued and kept, not wasted and spent away in vain, but rather augmented and encreased vnto the pzofit of them al. In fine, if he die: yet dieth not he, fozasmuche as he leaueth behinde him childzen, whiche as liuely Images both in countenaunce and comely lineaments of body repzesent him, and suffer him not to die, noz to fall out of remẽbzance, but they kepe him in perpetual memozy vnto the great ioy of his frendes, and vnto the vtter discomfozt of their enemies: yea when he dieth he ioyfully and gladly dieth, because he seeth him selfe aliue in his childzen, and leaueth them behinde him, to enherit and enioy such goodes as he in times past hath obtained and gotten by his painfull labour. Who seeth not now, that accozding to the sentence of almighty God: It is not good foz man to be alone: Foz verely without a wife, ỳ name can not continue, noz the pzogeny endure, noz the stock encrease, noz a family be, nother a father of houshold named, noz a house called, noz a common weal stand, noz any Empire endure. This thinge the builder of the Romain Empire did right well knowe, whiche, whan he lacked wiues foz his subiects, made a sharp & fierse battel with the Sabins, that denied their daughters. Foz he knew verye wel, that his Empire could not continue, if wiues shuld be away. Foz seing that a city standeth of houses, and the common weal of pziuate things, and of ruling of a houshold and family, the discipline to gouern a common weal is ozdained: how shall he rule a citye, that hath not learned to rule a house? How shall he gouern a common weale, that neuer knewe his pziuate and familier businesse? Hereof testified Socrates, that he learned morall Philosophy moze of wiues, then naturall Philosophye of Anaragozas and Archelaus. Foz truly matrimony geueth a great exercise to morall Philosophye. Foz it hathe a certaine houshold common weale annered, in rulinge the whyche a manne maye sone learne, and haue experience of wisdome, temperaunce, loue to god and his kinne, and al other vertues, by whiche in louinge his wife, in bzinginge vp his childzen, in governing his familye, in sauing his goods, in ruling his litle house in pzocreating and enlarging his stock, he may lead a life moste happye.

Furthermoze to see before a mannes eies, his welbeloued wife, and by childzen and succession, to haue his familye and name extended, is great gladnesse and felicitye, and the swete consolation of trauaile. He that wãteth a wife, hath no house, because he hath not setled a house: yea and if he haue, he tarieth in it as a straunger in his Inne. He that hath not a wife, though he be neuer so rich, hath almoste nothing that is his, because he hath nothig safe frõ deceits, noz he hath not to whõ he may lean, noz to whõe he may trust. He ỳ hath not a wife, lacketh a familye, lacketh his nie kinred, and wythoute hope of succession is alwayes lefte alone and fozsaken. His seruauntes steale from him, his felowes bzibe from hym, hys neyghboures despise him, his frẽds regard him not, his nie kinred begile him, his Bastarde children, if he haue any, be shame and rebuke to him, and witnesse of his lewd behauiour, neither can he leaue vnto them his richesse, nor the name of his family, but as he tarieth in life without mariage, so being dead, he perisheth without name, neither deserueth he to haue any beneuolence or loue, which is the greatest comfort that a man can haue: but as a forsaker of mannes nature, worthy of al calamity and wretchednesse, he is counted of al men most vnfortunate, and most worthye to be forsaken, abhorred and cried oute vpon of all men.

Against these sole liuers, and haters of that help, whiche God at the beginning ordained for man, writeth Erasmus Roterodamus in his treatise entitled, The praise of Matrimony, on this manner: The old law of the Iewes curseth him, which when he is commaunded to lie wyth his brothers wife that is dead, casteth his seede on thearth, ỹ nothing shuld be engendred, and is iudged vnworthy life, which enuieth life to the frute that is to be born. But how litle from him differ they, which haue enioyned them selues perpetuall barennesse? Do they not seeme to kil so many men, as shuld haue ben born, if they had geuen their labor to the begetting of children? I pray you, if a manne haue a piece of ground rank of nature, which vntilled, he suffreth to be continually barren: is not this man punishable by the ciuil law, because it is for ỹ profit of the common weale, that euery man shuld tend wel his owne? If he be punished, which neglecteth his groũd, which (be it neuer so well tilled) bringeth forth nothing els, then wheat, or beans, or pese: what punishment is he worthy, which refuseth to till ỹ ground, whiche tilled beareth men? And in tillage of thearth is required a long and painful labor: here the short tillage is also entised with a pleasure, as it were a reward prepared therfore. Wherfore if the sense of nature, if honesty, if naturall affection, if deuotion, if gentlenesse, if vertue anye thynge moue you: why abhorre you from that, whiche God ordaineth, nature enacteth, reason entiseth, the scriptures both of God and man praise, the lawes commaunde, the whole consent of all nations approue, to which thensample of euery good mã prouoketh? If that the most part of things (yea which be also bitter) are of a good man to be desired for none other purpose, but because they be honest: matrimonye doutlesse is chiefly to be desired, wherof a mã may doubt, whether it hath more honesty than plesure. For what thing is sweter, thẽ with her to liue, with whom ye may be most straightly coupled not only in the beneuolence of the minde, but also in the coniunction of the bodye? If a great delectation of minde, be taken of the beneuolence of our other kinsmẽ, sith it is an especiall swetenesse to haue one, with whom ye may communicate the secreat affeccions of your mind with whom ye may speke euen as it wer with your own self, whom ye may safely trust, whyche supposeth your chaunces to be his: what felicity (think ye) haue the coniunction of man and wife, than which nothing in the vniuersal world may be found either greater or surer? For with our other frends we be conioyned only in the beneuolence of mindes: but with oure wife we be coupled in most hie loue, in permixtion of bodies, in the confederate bond of the sacrament, and finally in the felowship of all chaunces.

Erasmus Roterod.

Wiuelesse monstures.

Further-

Furthermore in other frendshippes, howe greate simulation is there? How great falsity? yea they whom we iudge our best frends, like as ỹ Swalowes flie away, when Somer is gon: so they forsake vs, when fortune turneth her whele. And somtime the fresher frend cast out the old. We hear of few, whose fidelitye endureth till their liues end. The wiues loue is with no falsity corrupted, with no simulation abscured, with no chaūce of things minished. Finally with death only (nay not with death neither) withdrawn. She, the loue of her parents: she, the loue of her sisters: she, the loue of her brethren despiseth for the loue of you: her only respect is to you: of you she hangeth: with you she coueteth to die. Haue ye richesse. There is one that shal saue it: there is one that shal encrease it. Haue ye none? There is one that may seke it: If ye haue wealth, your felicity is doubled. If aduersity, there shalbe one, which may comfort you, which may sit by your side, whiche may serue you, which may couet your grefe to be hers. Doo ye iudge any plesure to be compared with this so great a coniunction? If ye tary at home, there is at hand, which shal driue away the tediousnesse of solitarye being. If from home, ye haue one that shall kisse you, when ye depart: long for you, when ye be absent, receiue you ioyfully, when ye returne. A swete companion of youth, a kind solace of age. By nature yea any felowship is delectable to man, as whom nature hath created to bene uolence & frēdship. This felowship then how shal it not be most swete, in which euery thing is common to them both? And cōtrarily, if we see the sauage beasts also abhorre solitary liuing, and delited in felowship in my minde he is not ones to be supposed a man, whiche abhorreth from this felowship most honest & pleasaunt of all. For what is more hatefull than the man, whiche (as though he were only borne to hym self) liueth for him self, seketh for him self, spareth for him selfe, doothe cost on him self, loueth no person, is loued of no person? Shal not suche a monsture be adiudged worthy to be cast out of all mennes companye into the middle sea with Timon the Athenience, which because he fled all mennes company, was called Misanthropus, ỹ is to say, hatemā?

Matrimoni all loue.

Moreouer, what can be more amiable then chast loue, naye, what more holy and honest? There accresseth by the meanes a swete flocke of affinitie: there is doubled the number of parēts, of brethren, of sistern, of neuewes. For nature cā geue one only mother, one only father. By wedlock an other father, an other mother is gotten, whiche (because they haue committed their own flesche vnto you) can not but loue you most tenderly. Now sir, how highlye will ye esteme this thing, when your fair wife shal make you a father to a fair childe? When some litle yong babe shall play in your haull, whiche shall resemble you and your wife? Which with a milde lisping, or amiable stammering shal call you Dad? Now adde vnto, your wiues loue, the bond more stronge then any Adamant, which not death him self can brast a sonder.

Oh how blessed (saith Flaccus) be they Whome the fast knot of wedlock dooth tey:
Whose stedfast loue by no plaint can start,
Til only death them twaine doth part.

ye haue them that maye delite your age, that maye close your eies, that may do thoffice of the burials, in whom ye may seme regenerat, whom being aliue, ye shalbe thought neuer to haue died. Your goods, whiche ye haue gotten, go not to straunge heires. Thus, when ye are passing out of the worlde, and haue fullye executed all together, yet not death him self can seme sharp, nor bitter vnto you. Age must crepe vp on vs all, whether we will or not. By this policye nature hath prouided, that in our children and neuewes we may be renued, and florish fresh again. For who can bear age heauily, when in his sonne he behol deth his own visage & countenance that he had him self whē he was young? Death is prepared for all. But by this only way the prouidēce of nature assayeth (as it were) a certaine immortalitye, while she thus maketh one thing to issue out of a nother (like as a yong plant, which is cut of from the tree, springeth freshly vp) nor he semeth not to be vterly quenched, which dieth, leauing issue behinde. Hitherto Erasmus of whose wordes also we may easly learne, what a noble and singuler healp a true and lawful wife is to a godly husband, and what excellēt Prouer. xij commodities and incomparable treasures she bringeth a mā, so that it is not without a cause saide of the wise man: An honest louing and Prouer. xix. Lords hand. For house and richesse are geuen a man of his parēts: but a wise and discrete wife is vnfainedly the gift of the Lord.

Seing then that the first cause, why God did institute and ordain matrimony, is that one may be an help and comfort to thother, auoiding solitarinesse, so that like as in the parts of a mānes body ther is a mutual help or participation of thone toward thother: euē so ought it to be also among maried folkes: thone ought to be an eie, ear, mouth hand, and fote to the other: In trouble one ought to be the comfort of thother: in aduersity, one thothers refreshing, yea and in all theyr lyfe
An exhortation vnto matrimony one ought to be the help and socour of the other: what remaineth, but that who so euer wil be counted a man, occupy the dutye of manhode, be naturall and louing to his country, seke to replenish thearth wyth good inhabitauntes, and the heauen with blessed and glorious Citezens, and wil liue according to the law of God and nature, he addresse him self withall expedition vnto this holy state of honorable wedlock, and bidding the sole life adue, according to the will and appoyntment of God take vnto him a wife, which may be an help and comfort vnto him in al his businesses so wel in aduersity, as in prosperity, & a faithful, true & trusty companion, to abide and tary with him both in helth and in sicknesse, seking no les his commodity and profit, thē her owne: and liue with her ioyfully and quietly in the fear of God, ỹ they bothe seruing the Lord God in holinesse and righteousnesse all the dayes of their life, may after their departure from this vale of misery, liue in the glorious kingdom of heauen, with thelect and chosen people of God in al glory and ioy, worldes without end. Amen.

The second cause. The seconde cause, wherefore GOD ordained the blessed state of honorable wedlocke is, that manne and wife shoulde be frutefull, beget begette and bringforthe children, continue, preserue and keepe mankinde vpon the face of thearth by lawful succession from time to time til the nomber of thelect and chosen people of God be fulfilled, whiche in this world calling vpon his holy name, and liuing in his fear, shall after this life be heirs of euerlasting glory, and liue with God and his holy angels in the kingdom of heauen worlds without end. That this is an other cause, why matrimony was appointed of God, Moses declareth euidently, wryting on this manner: God created man in hys own image, in the image of God created he him, male and female created he them. And God blessed them, and God said vnto them: Grow & encrease, and replenish thearth. The like words spake God to Noe and his sonnes after the flood: Bring ye forth frute, saith he, and multiply and replenish thearth. The effect wherof is, that man should render to nature that he had borowed of her, and beget, bringforth and nourish children like him self, and preserue the common felowship of mankind, with a certain perpetuall succession, that man may not cease vpon the face of thearth, til thearth it self cease. This commaundement of god ought all mākind to obey in euery time and in euery age, bothe man & woman, except they be of the nomber of those, whom God hath endued and priueledged with the gift of continency: whiche is a rare gift, & chaunceth to very few, as our sauiour Christ saithe: All can not away with this saying, saue they to whom it is geuen. Like wise sayeth the wiseman: I know, that I can not liue chast, except God geue me the gift. What so euer person it be, man or woman, Pope, Cardinal, Archbishop, Bishoppe, Patriarch, Priest, Minister, Deacon, Monke, Frier, Chanon, Heremite, Ancker, Anckrelle, Nonne, Vower, Vowesse &c. if they perceiue and feele in them selues, that they haue not the gifte of continency geuen them of God, but that they are rather prouoked according to the law of God and nature to be frutefull, and to beget and bringforth children: Verely no order, no profession, no bowe ought to pluck them from thobedience which they owe to this commaundemēt of God: forasmuch as S. Paul saith. It is better to mary thē to burn. All such are bound in paine of euerlasting dampnation to marry, and to be frutefull according to the worke of God in them: which thing if they refuse to doo, and by this meanes burn in their own lustes, and fall into wicked vnclennesses, so that wher they shuld haue ben at the appointment of God, honest & godly maried persons, they are stinking and dissembling hipocrits before God, or els vile adulterers and abhominable whormōgers before both God and man: they haue no part or portion of the heauenly enheritance in the kingdome of God. As God hath made thearth to bring forth grene grasse, the trees to be frutefull, the herbs to bud with floures, euery beast and foule in his kind to beget and bringforth creatures like to them selues &c. so likewyse hathe God appointed man and woman to be frutefull, to encrease, to multiply to replenish the earth, to beget and bring forthe children: so that who soeuer goeth about to lette or destroye thys appointment of GOD eyther by bowe, order, profession or otherwise, the same person is an ennemye to GOD, an aduersarye to nature, and a verye plague and a sore Pestilence to mankynde, yea and so muche as is in hym, the

the abhomination of desolation bothe to heauen and earth. Let the Pope with all his shauen nation consider with them selues in what miserable and damnable state they stand, whyle they disobey this cõmaundement of God, and seek to liue like monstures of nature vpon earth, with out frute & issue, and so go hens leauing no sede behinde them, contrary to this commaũdement of God: Encreace and multiply, and replenishe the earth. Saint Paule calleth the forbidding of mariage the doctrine of deuels. And not without a cause. For by it the commaundement of God is broken, the propagatiõ of mankinde is letted, naturall succession is hindered, increace of freendes is banished, the cõtrey is diminished, the common wele is decayed, the earth is barren & vnpopulous, heauen is despoiled of her glorious Citezẽs &c. This commaundement of God to encrease and multiply, and to replenish the earth, was highly regarded of Gods people in thold law, and diligently obeyed of all degrees, and practised in their life and conuersation, so that that person, which did not regard this holy ordinance of God, was counted of al men cursed and most vnhappy. Was not Onan curssed of God, because he would not leaue sede behinde him, but spilled it on the ground: Blessed is he, whose sede is in Sion, and cursed is she, that hath not sede in Israel. Sara the daughter of Raguel counted it a rebuke and shame to her, to be vnfruteful, and desired god either to lose her out of the bondes of that rebuke, or els to take her vterly away from of the earth. Likewise that old and sage matrone Elizabeth Priest Zacharies wife, beinge long without children, & made fruteful in her old age, whan she was conceiued with her sonne Jhon Baptist, said: Thus hath God dealt with me in the daies, wherin he hath looked on me, to take from me myrebuke among men. And when God had encreased Lea Jacobs wife with many children, she sayde Good luck: happy am I: for the daughters wil call me blessed. Rachel her sister and Jacobs wife also, after that God made her fruteful, said: God hath taken away my rebuke.

And as the godly people of the old Testament, were alwaies desirous to satisfy this commaundement of God, and to be fruteful, so likewise haue the true worshippers of God bene minded at al times since the comming of Christ: so that not only they, which wer of the laitye, as they vse to say, but also such as wer spirituall ministers in ỹ church of God, gaue them selues to mariage, that they might be fruteful, and bring forth children, as the Apostles of Christ, the godly Bishops, Deacons and ministers of the primatiue and auncient Church of Christ: neither ceased the ministers of Gods word so to doo, tilthat Romishe Antichrist with violence and tiranny, brought in that deuelish tradition of the single life of priestes.

Moreouer we shall note, that although God commaund vs to encrease, to multiply and to replenish the earth: yet except God blesse the worke of generation, the laboure is taken in vaine, that man and wife take in this behalf, so that to be frutefull and to haue Children, is not the worke of nature, but the gift and blessing of the Lord. peth it: That to be fruteful and to haue childzen is the gift of God, diuers places of the holy scripture manifestly shew. Rachel Jacobs wife when she had long ben barren and vnfrutefull, supposing that the accompanying with her husband, was to geue childzen, said to her husband: Geue me childzen, or els I am but dead. And Jacob was wrothe with Rachel, saying: Am I in Gods steed, which kepeth from thee the frute of thy wombe? When Rebecca Isaacks wife was barrē, he made intercession for her vnto God, which hard his petition, and made her to conceiue. So likewise Anna the mother of Samuel, and Zachary the priest with his wife Elizabeth, with many other being long barren and without childzen, by prayer obtained of God to be frutefull. For they knew right wel, that the frutes of matrimony were of God, and not of nature. This testifieth also the Psalmograph, saying: Blessed are all they that fear the Lord, and walk in his waies. For thou shalt eat the labors of thine hands. O wel is thee, and happy shalt thou be, Thy wife shalbe as the fruteful vine vpon the walles of thy house. Thy childzen like the Oliue braunches round about thy table. Lo, thus shall the man be blessed that feareth the Lord.

But some man peraduenture will here say: Forasmuch as the frute of matrimony, that is to say, childzen, is the blessing and gift of God, & without his gift no man can haue them: how cometh it than to passe, that many honest and godly persons liuing in matrimony are altogether vnfruteful, and many whoremongers and harlots dissolutely liuing without the fear of God, haue great plenty of childrē? I answer. First as cōcerning the godly maried which are without childzen, they ought to be perswaded, that to haue childzen, or to be without childzē to be fruteful or barren, cometh of God, and not of them selues. It is sufficient that they doo marye, to the entent that they may haue childzen. If God disapoynteth thē of this frute, they ought not to grudge against God, but paciently to take it at his hand, geuing him thankes, for that their crosse shall be so muche the more easy to carye in the troublesome time of famine, battail, persecution and pestilence. For in such times it may be said, as our sauiour Christ hath in the Gospell. Wo vnto them that be with childe, and to them that geue suck in those daies. Again, happy are the barren, and the wombs that neuer bare, and the pappes, which neuer gaue suck. Hereto appertaineth the saying of thapostle: It is good for ỳ preſēt necessity, if they abide as I do.

But as concerning those childzen, whiche are begotten out of mariage, whom we commonly call bastardes: all though it can not be denied, but that they also are the gifts of God, yet is both the generatiō, conception and bringing forth of them vnlawfull, forasmuche as it is contrary to the word of God. For the good wil of God is not, that mākind shuld be begotten thorow inordinate whordome and filthinesse, but according to his word in the holy state of matrimony: nether doth God so blesse the frute of whordōe, as he doth blesse and glorify ỳ frute of matrimony, otherwise had thinstitution of wedlock been vain. But to shew, that God dooth not alow the act of vnclene persones, whych bring forth frute thorow adultry and whordome, God in the olde law straightly commaunded, that no bastard and misbegotten child shuld

Moreouer bastard children be not lawful, and therfore by the aunci-

most worthy order of matrimonye for a bondage of perpetuall felow-fully company together. And it is the common sentence and iudgemēt of lawyers, that he hath an vncertaine father and a naughty mother, which is not born in matrimony. For he is base born, and is the sonne of the people, yea rather the sonne of no man, whiche is the childe of a woman not lawfully maried. But he is the true heire and true sonne, whose

whose mother without thinkamy of sinne, without the blame of kinsfolk, without thoffence of God, is maried to a certen and wel knowen father, and without slaunder abideth by him cõtinually. Therfore only matrimony maketh childzen to be certen, and geueth true and vndoubtful heirs: it maketh the company of mã and wife together honest and lawful: it bringeth glory, honor and worschippe: it maintaineth a good conscience: it encreseth the stock and family: it gathereth aliance: it contenteth al good men: it pleaseth and honoreth God. As for whore dome and the childzen of whordome, it is farre otherwise, as we haue to fore heard. The praise of matrimony, with the cõmodities of the same.

But here wil some man say, what than shal become of bastards and childzen of the adulterers, seing the holy scripture and the law of man do so hardlye pronounce of them: Are they cast from the fauor of God: Are they vessels of Goddes wrath: Shall they not be partakers of the he uẽly kingdõ, & enheritors of euerlasting glory: I answer: Beautiful is the generation of the godly maried, & glorious is the frute of them: their praise abideth before God and man, neither shal any dishonoure come vnto them. Notwithstanding this I say cõcerning whores childzen, that although God shal iudge, punish and condemne whormongers and adulterers, yet if their childzen although vnlawfully begotten, and of no reputation before men, shal not afterward walke in the wicked steps of their parents, but rather decline from them, and wher as their fathers and mothers wer wicked, vnhonest and vngodly, they withall their endeuor studye to be righteous, honest and godlye, and to liue in the feare of God, and to serue him in holinesse and righteousnesse all the daies of their life, although (I say) God without al doubt shall punish the adulterous parents for their vncleannesse of life, not only with tempozall but also with eternall and euerlasting pains, except they repent, beleue and amẽd, yet shall that wicked leudnesse and leud wickednes of the fathers and mothers neuer be imputed to ỹ childzen, nor ones laid to their charge, forasmuche as they vtterly abhorre and hate the filthy act of their parentes, and from the hart bewayle theyr luckelesse lot, that they wer so vnhappely born of vnhappy fathers and mothers, as the Prophet sayeth: The word of the Lord came vnto me on this manner. What mene ye by this common prouerbe, that ye vse in the land of Israel, saying: The fathers haue eaten sour grapes, and the childzens teth are set on edge. As truely as I liue, saith the Lorde God, ye shall vse this byword no more in Israel. Behold, all soules are mine. Like as the father is mine, so is the sonne mine also. The soule that sinneth shal die. If a man be godly, and do the thing that is equal and right: he eateth not vpon the hils: he lifteth not his eies vp to the foul Idols of Israel: he defileth not his neighboures wife: he medleth with no menstruous woman: he greueth no bodye: he geueth his debter his pledge againe: he taketh none other mannes good by violence: he parteth his meat with the hungry: he clotheth the naked: he lendeth nothing vpon vsury: he taketh nothing ouer: he withdraweth his hãd from doing wrong: he dealeth faithfullye betweene man and man: and walketh in my commaundements and kepeth my lawes, and perfourmeth them faithfullye: This is a righteous man: he shall surelye liue, saithe What is to be thoughte of bastards. Heb. xiij. Ezechi. xviij.

saith the Lord God. If he now get a sonne that is a murtherer, a shedder of bloud: if he do one of these thinges (though he doo not all) he eateth vpon the hilles: he defileth his neighbours wife: he greueth the poore and nedy: he robbeth and spoileth: he geueth not the debter hys pledge again: he lifteth vp his eies vnto Idols, and medleth with abhominable thinges: he lendeth vppon vsurye, and taketh more ouer: shall this man liue? He shall not liue: seing he hath done al these abhominations: he shall die, his bloud shalbe vpon him. Now if this man get a sonne also, that seeth all his fathers sinnes, which he hath doon, and feareth, neither doth such like: namely, he eateth not vpon the mountaines: he lifteth not hys eies vp to the Idols of Israell: he defileth not his neighbours wife: he vexeth no man: he kepeth no mannes pledge: he neither spoileth nor robbeth any man: he dealeth his meat with the hungrye: he clotheth the naked: he oppresseth not the poore: he receiueth no vsury, nor any thing ouer: he kepeth my lawes and walketh in my commaundementes. This man shall not die in his fathers sinne, but shall liue without fail. As for his father, because he oppressed and spoiled his brother, and did wickedlye amõg his people: lo, he is dead in his own sinne. And yet say ye: wherfore then should not this sonne bear his fathers sinne? Therfore because the sonne hath doon equitie and right, hathe kept all my commaundementes, and doon them: therfore shall he liue in deede. The same soule that sinneth shall die. The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence: neither shall the father beare hys sonnes offence. The righteousnesse of the righteous shalbe vpon him, and the wickednesse of the wicked, shall be vpon him self also. Likewise saith the prophet

Iere. xxxi

Ieremy: It shal no more be said: The fathers haue eaten a sour grape, and the childrens teeth are set on edge: For euery one shal die for his owne misdeede: so that who so euer eateth a sower grape, his teeth shalbe set on edge.

The childe shall not bear his fathers wickednesse.

These wordes of God by his Prophets teach sufficiently, that though the father be neuer so wicked and vngratious, and haue neuer so greuously transgressed and broken the coummaundementes of the Lorde, yet shall not his sonne be punished for his fathers wickednesse, but his fathers wickednesse shall fall vpon him selfe, and he him self shalbe punished for his own sinne. Euery one shall bear his own burden. Euery one shal receiue according vnto that, which he hath doon in his body, be it good or bad. The Lord our God shal reward euery man according to his own deedes. Euery man shalbe either iustified or condemned after his own workes, neither shall the wickednesse of other hinder the that are righteous and study to walke in the lawes of God. Therfore as touching bastards, forasmuch as the father, and not the childe, hath committed the whordom, the father and not the childe, shall beare the pain of that wickednesse, neither shall the wickednes of the father hinder the child any thing at all, if the child folowe not the steppes of hys wicked father, but endeuoureth himself leauing the wicked and vngodly waies of his father to embrace true godlines, and to ensue the same all the daies of his life. Chrisostome wryting vpon Mathew teacheth plainly, that suche adoulterous generations ought not to hynder the childzen. For if any man that is either a thefe or an adulterer or a murtherer doo repent, his former life shall not be imputed vnto hym, nor laid vnto his charge: much les the sinne of the father ought to be anye hyndraunce to the chylde: yea if the chylde behaue hym selfe honestly, he shalbe so much the more made of, & counted worthy the greater praise, because he hath not folowed his father. Saint Jerom like wise saith, that bastards ought not to be despised, forasmuche as they also were made by the hand of God, and God did not disdaine to make them, and to geue them life. Again he saith, that if Christ did vouchsafe that bastards shuld be rehersed in his genealogy and stock of kinred: why shal not we admit them vnto the ministery? And Gregory saithe, that it is an vnworthy thing, that the same shuld be so punished for the plesure of the father, that he may not be promoted vnto the holy ministery. D

Now wil some man say: What meaneth it than, that God in his law commaunded, that he that is borne of a common woman, shoulde not come into the congregation of the Lord, no, not vnto the tenth generation? I answer: Uerely not that the man, whiche was begotten in whordom, was the worse, if he him selfe liued wel: but that the people shuld know, that God doth vtterly detest whordom, adultry & all kind of vnclennesse. Nether was it any other thing among the Jewes, not to enter into the congregation: than to be made vnable to beare office either in the Ecclesiasticall or in the ciuil affaires: although we rede ỹ Jephthah a Gileadite was a bastard and the sonne of an harlot, and notwithstanding God gaue him both his spirite, and made him also ruler and hed ouer his people Israel. And although bastards in thold law wer excluded from the ministery, to declare and shew how greatly God abhorreth whordom, and that by this meanes men should be the more allured to liue honestly and godly, and to cast awaye all vnclennesse: yet forasmuch as ỹ law was but ceremoniall, we are not bound vnto it, but at liberty to chuse bastards also vnto publike offices, if we shall finde them meete and worthye.

Than will some man peraduenture saye: What is to be answered to the scriptures, which teach, that God wil visite, that is to saye, punishe the wickednesse of the fathers vpon the children, euen vnto the third and fourthe generation? The scriptures speake of those children, which walk in the wicked steppes of their wicked fathers, and doo not decline from the vngodlinesse of their fathers, but goo forthe to follow their corrupt wais without repentaunce. As touching those children, which hauing vngodly fathers, proue and become notwithstandinge godly and vertuous them selues, and haue nothing to do wyth the vngodly manners of their parents, the wickednesse and leud behauior of their fathers shall hinder them nothing either in this worlde, or in the world to come: neither in this behalf wil God punishe the wickednesse of the Parentes vpon their children, no more then he did punyshe the wickednesse of Achaz vpon his sonne Hezechia. The scripture speaketh of those children, whiche like vnto their parentes hate God, loue not God: transgresse, but kepe not his commaundements. These woordes of God shall for euer and euer abide true. The soule that sinneth, shall die. The sonne shall not bear the fathers offence: neither shall the father beare hys sonnes offence. The righteousnesse of the righteous shalbe vpon him, and the wickednesse of the wicked shalbe vpon him self also. Thus much haue I spoken concerning bastardes.

The third cause.

The third cause, why God instituted and ordained the holy state of honourable wedlock is to auoid fornication, adultry, incest, Sodomitry and all other kinde of vnclennesse, as the Apostle saith: To auoyde whoredom, let euery man haue his wife: and let euery womã haue her husband. Again, if they can not abstain: let them mary. For it is better to mary then to burn. Also in a nother place: Wedlock is honorable among all men, and the bed vndefiled. As for whoremongers and aduouterers God shall iudge them. Not only to auoid grose whordome, did God ordain matrimony, but also that we taking vpon vs that holy order of life, might be fre from carnall concupiscences and fleshly lustes, and haue mindes pure and clene, and vtterly estraunged from filthy and corrupt affections, forasmuch as the law of God requireth of vs not only outward, ciuil, and politike good worꝛs, but also the purity and clennesse of the hart and minde, according to this commaunde ment: Thou shalt not lust or couet. As he is a murtherer before God, which only hateth his brother or neighbour, although he neuer strike him, or hurt him outwardly, as S. Jhon saith: Euery one that hateth his brother is a manslear: & ye know that no man sleer hathe euerlasting life abiding in him: euen so likewise whosoeuer doth but couet or lust after his neighbors wife in his hart, although he neuer knowe her carnally, yet is he before God a very adulterer and breaker of wedlock, as our sauiour Christ testifieth, saying: ye haue heard, that it was said to them of old time: Thou shalt not commit adoultrye. But I saye vnto you: Whosoeuer loketh on an other mannes wife to lust after her hath committed adultry with her all redy in his hart. The law of god, as the Apostle saith, is spirituall: that is to say, it requireth spirituall, clene and heauenly motions and affects, not only outward woorkes. As God is a spirite, so wil he be serued in spirit and truthe. He iudgeth not only after thoutward worꝛk, as man doth, but he prouyeth ẏ hartes and raines, and according to the same he iudgeth. God smote Pharao and all his house with great plagues, because he had taken vnto hym Sara Abrahams wife, although he had not touched her, but onlye in his hart desired her, not knowing that Abraham was her husbande. Abimelech king of Gerar was also punished of God, for takinge vnto him Sara Abrahams wife, in so much as the Lord had closed to all the matrices of the house of Abimelech, so that his wife and his maidens were barren: he also threatned to kil Abimeleche for takinge the mannes wife: and yet had he no carnall knowledge of her body, but only coueted and lusted to haue it. Of these histories & suche like we may easly learn, that God doth not only abhorre thoutward and grose sin of whordome, but also the filthy, vncleen, corrupt and vnpure affectes of the minde. In consideration wherof, Dauid desired God to make in him a cleen hart, and a right spirit in his innermost parts. And ẏ wise man prayd vnto God to turn away all voluptuousnesse from him, and that the lustes and desires of vnclennesse mighte take no holde vpon him. For what profiteth the pureneſſe of the bodye, if the minde be vnpure? What auaileth it, that the flesche be vncorrupt, if the hart be corrupt? To what purpose is the grose sinne of whordome absent, if the corruption and vnclennesse of the minde and hart be present? Little or nothinge nothing before God is the chastity of the body worth, when ỳ soule is defiled with fleshly lusts & filthy thoughts. Therfore to this end ỳ not only the body, but also the mind may be conserued & kept pure and fre from al vnclennes, God that most mighty Lord ordained matrimony, by this meanes prouiding a good & necessary remedy against al vnclennes both of thoutward & inward man, that so many as profesle him may be pure, clene & vncorupt both in body & in soule. And vnto thys exhorteth ỳ blessed Apostle, whan he saith: This is the wil of God, euē your holinesse, that ye shuld abstain from fornication, and that euery one of you shuld know how to kepe his vessell in holinesse and honor, & not in the lust of concupiscence. as the heathen do, which know not god. Again, glorify god i your bodies & in your spirits, which ar gods. t. Thess. iiii. t. Corrin. vi.

There are not a few in the Popes kingdom, which thinke that to haue harts boiling with the vnquenchable flames of filthy and fleshly lustes, and burning with the carnal concupiscence of womē, hauing in their conscience rest neither night nor day: is no sinne, specially our votories, so long as they abstain from the outward grose whordome. But such do greatly deceiue them selues, as we haue tofore heard, forasmuch as God requireth not only the clennesse and purity of the body, but also of the minde, he him self being a spirit, and iudging al thinges according to the spirit. All such as perceiue them selues thus tormented & disquieted, ought to embrace holy matrimony, notwithstanding profession, order or vow. Profession, order or vow ought to geue place in this behalf to Gods holy ordinaunce, which is rather to mary then to burn: which is also, that for the auoiding of fornication euery man shuld haue his wife, & euery woman her husband. And verely it were better & much more profitable for the saluation of their soules, if popes, cardinals, patriarkes, archbishops, bishops, priestes, deacons, subdeacons, monkes, friers, chanons, anckers, heremites, nonnes, ankresses &c. which haue vowed chastity and single life, should mary, and take vnto thē husbands or wiues, accoring as nature requireth, thē continually to burn, as they do, with the desire of womens company: which is nothing els before God, then to be abhominable adulterers, filthy fornicators, stinking Sodomites &c. For the mind being vnpure, nothing is pure before God. For as to the pure all thinges are pure: so likewise to thē that are defiled & vnbeleuing is nothing pure: but euē the mind & conscience of thē is defiled. These are they, which walk after the flesh in the lust of vnclennes, & count it pleasure to liue deliciously for a season. These are they, which as spots & filthinesse liue at pleasure in their own deceiuable wais, feasting & scorninge ỳ simple ones, hauing eies ful of adultry, & that cānot cease from sin. These are they which by speking great swelling words of vanity, entise thorow lustes in the voluptuousnes of the flesh thē that liue in error, whyle they promesse thē liberty, wheras they thē selues are the bond seruants of corruption. These are they, which of the peoples kindnesse and liberality feast together, without fear, liuing lawles, & after their own pleasure: yea walking after thine owue vngodlye lustes, fleshlye hauynge no spirite. These are they, whose God the belly is. Such therfore as are thus miserably tormented and disquieted with the raging lustes of ỳ flesh, ought rather to mary, as I said before, then thus moste wickedly to liue, as the Apostle saith: If they can not abstaine, let them mary. For it is better to mary then to burn.

Austen saith: Among all the warres of the christians, the bat In serm. tels of chastity are moste hard. For in thẽ is continual fighting, & very seldom victory. It is a rare bird in this worlde, & very like to a blacke swan. Wicked therfore are the authors of those moste wicked decrees, which enforse & cõpel their captiues by profession, order or vow to abiure & forswear matrimony, not hauing the gift of chastity, but continually burning with thinordinate & vnruly lustes of the flesh, wheras God appointed matrimony, & made it free for al such without exceptiõ, as fele in them selues not to haue the gift of continency, but to be ordained of God to be fruteful and to haue children.

And as matrimony is Gods holy ordinaunce appointed for appeasing and quenching the inordinate lustes and carnal concupiscences of Psal. vii the hart, that it may be pure and clene before God, which sercheth the harts and the raines, which considereth the thoughtes & affections of thinward man, which iudgeth al things according to the spirit, & not after the flesh: so likewise is wedlock Gods good institution for the auoiding of whordome & of all other vnclennesse, that by the vse therof Whordome not only the mind, but also the body may be conserued and kept pure, clene & holy: that the whole man both body and soul may be the tẽple I. Cor. iii & dwelling place of the holy gost, as thapostle saith: Know ye not, ỹ ye are the tẽple of God, and how ỹ the spirit of God dwelleth in you. If any man defile the temple of God, him shal God destroy. For the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are. For in that god hath ordained matrimony vnto this end, that it might be a remedy against whoredome, adultry, and all other vnclennesse: he geueth vs to vnderstand, ỹ whor Whordome dom in his sight is a moste wicked, stinking, detestable and dãnable is a moste sinne. For if fornication or adultry, or any other vnclennesse had bene damnable sinne before tollerable in a Christen common weale, God woulde neuer for the ba- God nishment therof haue instituted and ordained the blessed state of holy matrimony. But to declare and shew, that no fornication, no whordõ no adultry, no incest, no sodomitry, nor any other kind of vnclennes is lawful, but most abhominable among the people of God, God him self hath ordained, that such as can not contain, should mary and embrace matrimony. For God wold haue his people so free, and so far estraunged from al vnclennesse, that he would not haue it ones named amõg them, as the apostle saith: Let no filthy communication procede out of Ephe. iiij your mouth, but that which is good to edefy withal, as oft as nede is that it may minister grace vnto the hearers, and greue not ye the holy spirit of God, by whom ye are sealed vnto the day of redẽption. Again, Ephe. v As for fornication and all vnclennesse, let it not ones be named amõg you, as it becommeth saintes, or filthinesse, or folish talking or iesting, which are not comely, but rather geuing of thãks. For this ye know, ỹ no whormonger, either vnclene person, hath any enheritaunce in the kingdom of Christ & of God. Let no man deceiue you w̃ vaine wordes. For because of such things cometh the wrath of God vpon the children of disobedience. Be not ye therfore companions of them.

That God that moste iuſt Lord and righteous iudge doth moſte extremely hate, deteſt and abhorre whordom, adultry & al other vnclē nelle, it appereth euidently two waies. Firſte in that God by expreſſe commaundement doth forbid whordom, adultry, inceſt &c. Secondly, in that he forbiddeth not only al vnclennelle of body, but he alſo doth greuouſly puniſh al ſuch as ſo offend, as examples of the holy ſcripture and of prophane hiſtories do abundantly teſtify. As concerninge his commaundement, is it not this? Thou ſhalt not commit adultry. Again, thou ſhalt not deſire thy neighbors wife. Alſo in an other place: Thou ſhalt not lie with thy neighbors wife, to defile her with ſeede. Item, curſed be he that lieth with his neighbors wife, and all the people ſhall ſay Amen. But foraſmuch as all theſe ſayinges of God do properly appertain vnto adultry, which is a ſinne committed of the maried folk, when one is vnfaithful to the other, defileth the bed of Matrimony, and is entangled with ſtraunge loue contrary to the wedding promeſſe: and hereof ſome euill diſpoſed perſons haue not beene aſhamed to affirme, that fornication or whordome, whiche is a ſinne committed betwene two ſingle and vnmaried perſons, is either no ſin, or els ſuch ſinne, as is but a ſlender or triflinge ſinne, not greatlye to be paſſed vpon: God in his holy law dothe not only forbid adultry, but alſo fornication or whordom, as ſinnes moſt wicked and deteſtable, and worthy of euerlaſting dampnation. By Moſes he ſaith on this manner. There ſhall be no whore of the daughters of Iſrael, nor no whore keper of the ſonnes of Iſraell. Thou ſhalt neither bring the hire of an whore, nor the price of a dogge into the houſe of the Lord thy God in any manner of vow: for euen both of them are abhomination vnto the Lord thy God. By the holy Apoſtle S. Paul God ſaith alſo: Fly fornication. Euery ſin that a man dooth, is without the body. But he that is a fornicator, ſinneth againſt his owne body. Either knowe ye not, how that your bodies are the temple of the holy ghoſt, whiche dwelleth in you, whom ye haue of God, & howe that ye are not your owne. For ye are dearly bought. Therfore glorify God in your bodies, and in your ſpirits, which are Gods. Again, let not the body be applied vnto fornication, but vnto the Lord, and the Lord vnto the body. God hath raiſed vp the lord, and ſhal raiſe vs vp by his power. Eyther knowe ye not, that your bodies are the members of Chriſt? Shal I now take ỳ membres of Chriſt, and make them the members of an harlot? God forbid. Doo ye not know, that he, which coupleth him ſelf with an harlot, is become one body? For two, ſaith he, ſhal be one fleſh. But he that is ioyned vnto the Lorde, is one ſpirite. Alſo in another place: If anye that is called a brother, be a fornicatoure or whoremonger, with him that is ſuch, ſee that ye eat not, nor kepe him companye. Item, as for fornication and all vnclenneſſe, let it not ones be named amonge you, as it becommeth ſainctes: or filthineſſe, or foliſhe talking or ieſtynge, which are not comely, but rather geuing of thanckes.

whoredome plaged with excommunication Discipline

Of these histories, whiche are true monuments of Gods anger against all such as work vnclennesse, may we euidētly learn, how greatly God abhorreth and detesteth whordome, adultry, incest, Sodomitry, and all other kindes of filthy and fleshly vnclennes: seing that the Lord our God doth not only forbid by expresse commaundement these most greuous sinnes, but he also plageth and punisheth them diuers and many waies, yea and that in all ages, as not only deuine, but also humain histories aboundantly testify: neither wante we examples hereof in this our age.

But besides these aforsaid plages, there remaineth another plage, which is most greuous. This plage also abideth fornicators, adulterers, incestuous persons, weaklings, sodomits &c. This plage is euer lasting damnation. This plage is hell fyre. This plage is a portion w the hipocrites, wher weping & gnashing of teethe shalbe: where theyr wormes shal not die, neither shall their fire be quenched. whordome is plaged with euerlasting dampnation. Math. xxiiii Esay lxvi Apoca. xxi

And that these plages are laid vp in store for such vnclene and wicked persōs, these folowing testimonies of the holy scripture, proue and shew moste plainly. Saint Paul saith on this wise: Do ye not know, how that the vnrighteous shall not inherit the kingdome of God? Be not deceiued. For neyther whoremongers, neither worshippers of Images, neyther adulterers, neither weaklings, neither abusers of them selues with mankinde, neither theues, neither couetous persons, neither dronkardes, neither cursed speakers, neither pillers, shall inherit the kingdom of God. Again, the dedes of the flesh, are adultrye, fornication, vnclennesse, wantonnesse &c. they which commit such things, shal not be inheritors of the kingdome of God. Also in a nother place: No whoremōger, either vnclene person, shall haue inheritaunce in the kingdome of Christ and of God. Item. The law is not geuen vnto a righteous mā, but vnto the vnrighteous and disobedient to the vngodly and to sinners, to vnholy and vnclean to whoremongers, to them that defile thē selues with mankinde &c. Ones again he saith: Wedlock is honorable among all persons, and the bed vndefiled. But whoremongers and adulterers God shall iudge, that is to say, punish and condempne them. Saint Jhon also in his Reuelation saithe, that whoremongers shall haue their part with murderers, sorcerers, Idolators &c, in that lake that burneth with fire and brimston, which is the second death. Like wise saith Salomon in his boke of the Prouerbes: The lips of an harlot are a dropping hony combe, and her throte is more glisteringe then oyle. But at the last she is as bitter as wormewod, and as sharpe as a two edged sweard. Hir fete go down vnto death, and her steps pearse thorow vnto hel. The Turkes euen at this day punish such as be taken in adultrye by stoning them to death, yea and that without all mercy, accozding to the law of God geuen to the Jewes by Moses. Such as be founde in foznication and whozdome, they are beaten with rods vnto the num-ber of four scoze stripes.

The Athe-nienses.

Among the Athenienses if any were taken in adultry: it was law ful foz them that found such to kil them out of hand, yea & that wyth-out any daunger. If any adulterer eskaped aliue, he neuer bare office afterward in the city: he neuer was suffred to plead anye cause at the barre, oz to come into their temples, oz vnto their pastimes. If anye pzesumed so to do, he lost his head.

The Ger-maines.

If any woman in times past amonge the graue Germaines was found to be an whoze, her husband had authozitye to punishe her, as he thought most mete. But commonly this was the punishment: her hus band cut of her hear, stript her of her clothes euen naked befoze her kinsfolk, thzust her out of his house, and beat her openly wyth toddes thozow out the city oz towne in the pzesence of all the people: and foz euer after he did so abhozre her, that were she neuer so flozishinge in yeres, beutyfull in face, goodly in personage, noble in linage, wealthy in substance, eloquent in speche, amiable in countenaunce &c. yet her honesty being ones lost, he could neuer be persuaded to take her agai.

In the dayes of our fore fathers, the noble Britaines, the law was this, as John Capgraue saithe: that if a young wench had ben begotten with childe in her fathers house: or anie where els, this was her iudgement. She was brought vnto an high mountaine, and there thrown down hedlong: her corruptour or deflourer being beheaded. The Britaines

Among the Tenedians such as offended in adultry were beheaded with an axe. The Tenedians.

The Crotoniates had this lawe amonge them, that adulterers shuld be burnt without all mercy. The Crotoniates.

The law of the Armenians is, that the men, which be taken in adultry, shuld be gelded, because they shuld not beget children like to thē selues: and that thadulteresses openly whipped, shuld be marked with an whote iron, that she might for euer after be knowen to be a whore, and so abhorred of all men. The Armenians.

The sage Saxons in times past had this law, that if either maried woman or maid among them wer defiled with whordō, they shuld be strangled to death. And the man, which had thus corrupted and defiled them, shuld be set vpon their graue, and stript starke naked vnto the girdle stead, be whipped, & pricked with bodkens, nedles or pinnes of the chast matrones, till he died. The Saxōs

The Lepreians had this law, that if any of them were taken in adultry, they shuld stand openly in the market by the space of a xi. dais in a white shete, and be afterward bound, and caried iii. daies about the city with a crown of woll vpon their hed, to signifye their light behauiour. From that time forth, so long as they liued, they were despised, and neuer bare rule in the common weal, but with shame and confusion reputde as persons destitute and void of all honestye and goodnes. Many times also they solde the adulterers as bondslaues to other nations, as people vnworthy to liue in the common weal. The Lepreians.

Zaleucus king of the Locrenses made this law for the punishment of adultry: that whosoeuer was found giltye of this sinne, shoulde haue both his eies put out. It chaunced afterwarde, that the kynges sonne was taken in adultry. His father therfore although kinge, willing þ this his law should stand in full force vnto the example of other, commaunded the iudges to put out one of his sonnes eies, and another of his: so that by this meanes the law was satisfied, and sighte was reserued to them both. The Locrenses.

Among the Parthians no fault is more greuously punished then adultry: in so much that thoffendors somtime perish by hanging, somtime by sword, somtime by fire, somtime by drowning. The Parthians.

The Thurienses made a lawe, that none of their citezens should be taxed and reproued openly in Comedies and Enterludes, but only curious persons and adulterers: signifying hereby, that curiositye and adulterye be such sinnes, as by no meanes ought to be maintained in a common weale. The Thurienses.

The law among the Cumanes was, that if a woman were taken in adultry, she should be led into the market place, and there set vpon a stone, that all men might see her. After that, she was set vpon an asse, and so caried round about the city, and at the last brought again vnto the Plutarch in Ptolemaeo. The Cumanes.

to the stone, and ther set, that all persones might gase vpon her. these thinges don she was abhorred of all honest and good people for euer after, & cõunted a noughti packe, insomuche that whoso euer met with her called her Asserider. And the stone, wherupon the woman stoode, was reputed prophane and detestable.

The Romaines.

Among the Romains there were diuers punishmentes ordained of diuers Emperors for adultry. Opilius Macrinus Emperor of Rome, Opilius Macrinus. ordained that adulterers shuld be punished with fire. For whome he found in adultry, them caused he to be bound body to bodye, and so to be burnt together quicke.

Julius Cesar themperor made a law, that adulterers shuld be put Julius Cesar. to death with the swerd. And he executed the same lawe vpon one of his own seruaunts, whom he loued moste derely, because he had defiled the wife of a certain citezen in Rome, albeit ther was no cõplaint Augustus Cesar. made of him. The like thing practised Augustus Cesar vpon one of his seruaunts called Proculus for the like offence. The same law stode in strength in S. Jeromes time, who wryteth, that a certain yong man and a maryed wife were iudged and put to execution with the swerd because of adultry. And the same law, called Ler Julia de stup. et adult. did the christen Emperors receiue, and of Justinian it is appoynted, lib. iiii. tit. xviii. de publicis iudiciis.

Aurelianus the Emperor deuised that adultrers shuld on this wise Aurelianus be punished. He commaunded that the toppes of two trees shoulde be bowed down and made faste together, and the adulterers legges tied one to the one tre, and the other to the other tree. Whiche thing ones doon, the trees were losoned one from the other, whiche before were bowed down with great violence, and the adulterers were rent a sonder, the one halfe hanging on the one tree, the other halfe on the other tree: which kind of punishment he him selfe practised vpon one of his souldioures for defilinge the mannes wife, with whome he went to bourd.

A. Gellius lib. x. cap. xviij.

The Romaines had this law among them also, that if a man toke his wife in whordome, he myght out of hand freelye and without anye punishment or daunger of the lawe kill her, and so be dispatched of her at ones.

The Romains had a nother law, that if the virgins vestals had suffered them selues by any meanes to be defloured, so that their virginity was lost, they shuld be buried quick, and so moste miserably die. Ac- Domitian. cording to this law did Domitianus the Emperour handle Cornelia which was a virgin vestale, and caused her to be throwen down into a very depe graue, & to be buried quicke. As for those that had defloured her, he commaunded them to be beaten with whips, till they died. After this manner also was Urbinia handled, a woman of the same profession. She was first of al whipped with rods thorowe the citye, and afterward throwen down hedlong into a depe pit, and so buried quick. As for those two adulterers, whiche had defiled her, the one slue him selfe, the other was whipped openly in the market, till he died. These virgins vestals were much like to our nunnes and the monkes. They serued Uesta, the doughter of Saturnus, which for chastity was honoured for a goddesse of the Romaines, and our serue Brigitta, Clara, and such like.

There was a nother law among the Romaines, whiche commaunded, that suche as were taken in whordome, or single fornication, as they call it, shuld be banished and driuen out of the countrye: but they that had committed adultrye, abusynge other mennes wines, or had plaid the Sodomites: the law was, that they shuld be beheaded, both the adulterer and the adulteresse.

Among the Placiades this was the lawe, that the adulterers stript starke naked, should be caried aboute on horsebacke, and haue a sorte of Radish rootes hang about them, and specially aboute their preuye membres, and so be a laughynge stocke to all the people, and for euer liue in ignominy and shame, being hated of all men. Placiades.

Solon that noble Magistrate made this law, that it shuld be lawfull for any man to kill an adulterer, if he were taken with the deede. As for the adultresse the lawe was this, that she shoulde neuer after weare any kinde of honest apparel, nor come among other folke in the temples, nor into such places, wher the people did commonly resort. If she did, it was lawfull for euerye man to buffet and beate her, and to pluck her garments from her. Solon.

Among the Thracians this was the law, that such as were taken in whordom, shuld be stript naked, and be bound to a post, & so with Arowes pearsed and striken to death. The Thracians.

Amonge the Indians suche as be taken in adultrye, are led vp into some hye rocke, and cast downe headlong, that their neckes maye be broken. The Indians.

The Mitylenians strangled al such, as were taken in adultry without any mercy shewed. The Mitylenians.

The Mantuans beheaded the adulterers. The Mantuans.

These aforsaid lawes with many other, (which all here to reherse, wer very long), are mentioned in the bookes of Chronicles and histories: of the which we may easly learn, howe greatlye whordome and adoultrye were abhorred in times paste, euen of the verye Gentyles: which thing shall greatly turne at the great daye of iudgement vnto the great condempnation of the Christians, amonge whome bothe whordome and adultrye are laughed at, so farre is it of, that they be punyshed eyther by deathe, or by anye other penable statute, whan notwythstandinge by their profession they are deade to the worlde and to the flesche wyth all their affectes and lustes, as the Apostle saythe. They that are Christes, haue crucified the flesh with the affections and lustes. Whordome laughed at amonge the Christians.

Agayne, if ye be risen again with Christ, seke those thinges, whyche are aboue, where Christe sytteth on the ryght hand of God. Set your affection on heauenlye thinges, and not on earthlye thinges. For ye are deade, and your lyfe is hid wyth Christe in GOD. Gala. 6 Colos. iii

When so euer Christe (whyche is oure lyfe) shall shewe hym selfe, then shall ye also appeare wyth hym in glorye. Mortifye therefore your earthlye members: fornication, vnclennesse, vnnaturall luste, euyll concupiſcence, &c.

Pȳnate punishmentes for whordõe

But not only with theſe lawes aforeſaid, fornicatoures and adulterers were punyſhed, but alſo certayne other ꝓuate punishmentes wer ꝓuatly minyſtred to certaine ꝓuate vnclene persons. Augustus Ceſar banished Ouide the Poet out of Rome, euen vnto the Getes and Tomitanes, nations both barbarous and vtterly estraunged from all ciuilitye, amonge whome he liued more then ix yeres, and there alſo he died: becauſe he had plaide the adulterer with Julia the Emperoures daughter: or rather, as ſome wryte, for making and publiſhing thoſe filthye bookes, which he made De arte amandi. And albeit in the time of his banishment he wrote bookes of the contrarye argument, and ſought all meanes poſſible both by his owne ſupplications, and by the interceſſions of his frendes, and by the teares and lamentations of his wife and children for his returne vnto Rome: yet could no fauoure be gotten at the Emperours hande for hym. ſo great displeſure had he conceiued againſt the Poet for his vnclene & filthye wrytinges, by the reding wherof the mindes of the youth among the Romaines, ſhould be corrupted and allured vnto leudneſſe. A rewarde worthy ſuch bookes.

Archiloch⁹.

Likewiſe the Lacedemonians bothe banyſhed Archilochus the Poet, and alſo burnt his bookes, although neuer ſo learned and eloquent, becauſe they wouldе not haue the mindes of their youthe and other Citezens corrupted and defiled by the reding of them. Theſe ſhall riſe vp againſt vs Engliſh men at the day of iudgement, whyche baniſhe not, nor burn not, but rather Pȳnt, publiſhe, ſet forth and ſell baudy balades and filthy bookes vnto the corruption of the reders, as the court of Venus, and ſuche like wanton bookes. Is the commaundement of God geuen by S. Paule thus obſerued of vs Engliſhe mene Let no filthy communication proceede out of your mouth, but ꝑ which is good to edefy withall as oft as nede is: that it maye miniſter grace vnto the hearers. Againe, as for fornication and all vnclennelle, let it not ones be named among you, as it becometh ſainctes: or filthinelle, or foliſh talking, or ieſting, whyche are not comely, but rather geuing of thanckes. For this ye know, that no whoremonger, eyther vnclene perſon hath any inheritaunce in the kingdome of Chriſte and of God. Let no man deceiue you with vaine woordes. For becauſe of ſuche thinges commeth the wrathe of God vppon the children of diſobedience. Once againe. Be ye filled with the ſpirite, ſpeking vnto your ſelues in Pſalmes and Hymnes and ſpirituall ſonges, ſinginge and making melody to the Lorde in your hartes, geuinge thanckes alwayes for all thynges vnto God the father, in the name of oure Lorde Jeſus Chriſt.

Pyrrus taking a certain man with his wife in the act of adultrye, slue him out of hand.

Ludouicus Gonzaga taken in adultry, was beheaded of the Citizes of Mantua. Gonzaga.

Publius Menius most greuously punished his seruaunt for killing his daughter, and charged her that she shuld not only bringe her body to her husband free from all vnclennesse, but also from all kisses.

Potius Anidianus, so sone as he perceiued that his daughter was deloured, slue her with his own hand straightwais.

Virginius perceiuing that Appius Claudius went about to deflour his daughter, slue her openly in the market, saying, that he had rather be the father of a chast maide being deade, then of a defiled whore being a liue.

Serulianus perceiuing his sonne to be of a light conuersation, hanged him vp out of hand.

Fescennius abusing vnnaturally a certaine yong man, was cast in prison, where he most miserably died.

Sempronius taken in adultry, was greuously whipped.

Quintus Antiotius did put away his wife, because she openly in the strete talked with an harlot and common woman.

The like thing was practised of Sulpitius Gallus, because his wife went abrode in the stretes with open face.

So likewise did Sempronius Sophus handle his wife, because she was a common gaser and gadder abrode.

Egnatius Metellus beate his wife till she died, because she was a common Tauernhunter, a winebibber, and a baucketter & yonge, that swilbols and knuckleastes can not be honest and continent.

But as I may ones make an end concerninge the lawes and histories of the heathen, which shew euidently how greatly the verye Ethnickes abhorred whordome, adultrye and all other vnclennesse: it shall not be vnfitting nor out of the waye to note, howe that for the deflouring of one maid, whiche was a noble maunes daughter in Spaine, there were slain vii. C. M. men. The name of the maydes father was Julianus: and he that defiled the maid, was called Roderychus king of the Gothes, being at that same time chefe ruler also of Spaine. But therfore his lewd liuing he brought destruction both to him and to his: for he him self with many thousandes mo most miserablye perished in battell, as Volateranus writeth. I passe ouer manye other realmes and cities, which thorowe adultry and whordome came vnto finall and vtter destruction, whose remembraunces are left in histories, as monuments of Gods anger against all vnclennesse. Pope Jhon the xiii.

Notwithstanding the history of Pope Jhon the xiii. of that name may not be altogether silenced. The Chronicle wryters make mention that this Pope Jhon was a man, or rather a monsture of wickednes. For besides his sellings of spirituall promotions, his makings of boies Bishops, his gemmages of orders in stables, his periuries and false swearinges, his Hawking, his Hunting, his Dauncing, his Leping, his Riling, his Carding, his Brauling, his Fighting, his Baketing, his Rioting, his Ietting, his straying abrode in the nights, his Reuelling, his Raging, his breaking vp of dores and windowes, his firynge and burning of many mennes houses, his gelding of Cardinals, his putting out of their eies, his cutting of their handes, fingers, Noses, eares and tonges &c. he was a moste famous, moste notable, and moste vnshamefaced whoremonger, sparing neither maid, wife nor widowe, nor hauing regard to any place holy or wholye, yea in the sacred places and vpon the very altares would he abuse him selfe wythoute all shame, insomuch that no women almoste durst come vnto Rome on pilgrimage in his time: for he spared neyther high nor lowe, neyther olde nor younge, neyther poore nor rich, neyther fair nor foule, neyther maried nor vnmaried. But his end was worthy such a life. For afterward he being taken wyth an other mannes wife, was slain in doing the very act of adultry, and so moste wickedly and wretchedlye died. Diuers and many such like histories finde we not only in the holy histories of the Bible, but also both in Ecclesiasticall & prophane wryters, whiche plainly declare how greatly God is offended with whordom, adultry and all other vnclennesse, and that he will not suffer them that are giltye in those moste abhominable and damnable sinnes, to escape vnpunished, but rather that they in this world shall haue shame and confusion, beggery and pouertye, sickenesses and diseases, infamye and dishonour, terrour of conscience and vnhappy death: and in the world to come a portion in that lake that burneth with fire and brimstone.

An end worthy such a life.

Apoca. xxi

God therfore willing that his seruaunts, and so many as professe his holy name, shuld liue honestly, godly and vertuously and be vtterly estraunged from all vnclennesse, so that their whole life and conuersation shuld be nothing els then a very mirrour of vertue, hath ordayned this holy order of honorable wedlocke: so that who so euer he be, that hath not the gift of continency, but feleth in him selfe an aptnesse and prouocation vnto generation, the same ought with all expedition to embrace holy wedlocke, and to bid the single life fare wel. Whosoeuer is otherwise minded, so that he had rather leade a lose life and a wicked conuersation, defiled with aduultye, whordome, Sodomitry, incest &c. then to take vpon him the sweete and pleasaunt yoke of Matrimonye, & so to liue according to the appoyntment of God: the same greatlye offendeth God, dishonoureth his holy name, slaundereth the good Doctrine that he professeth, maketh the aduersaries to speake euill of the christen religion, and in fine, bringeth to him self euerlasting damnation. For God can abide no vnclennesse, neither hath he called vs vnto vnclennesse, but vnto holynesse, as S. Peter sayeth: Likewise as he which hath called you, is holy, so likewise be ye holy also in al your conuersation

1. Peter i.

uersation, because it is wrytten: Be ye holy, for I am holy. And Zachary the priest father to S. Iohan Baptist saith: We are delyuered from the power of our enemies, that we shuld serue the Lord our God in holynesse and righteousnesse all the dayes of our life. Therfore to auoyd fornicatrinesse, to be fruteful, and to eschue vncleannesse, hath God ordeyned matrimony. And thus much haue I spoken concernynge the fyrste part of this treatise. Nowe will I make haste vnto the fourth parte, which is the last, and so make an ende.

The fourth part of the booke of Matrimony.

How maried folke ought to liue in the holy state of honorable Wedlocke.

ALbeit in the last part of my Catechisme (where I entreat of the offices of all degrees) I haue sufficiently declared how maried persons shuld frame their liues, & liue together according to the doctrin of the gospel, so þ it may seme here in a maner a thing superfluous any more to speak therof, at this present: yet forasmuch as I haue promised in the epistle dedicatory some what to speak of this matter, and the argument of the boke requireth no les, except it shuld be left vnperfect, and as a body lacking the chefe member, and so go forth as a worke not absolute nor perfectly finished: I entend somwhat to wryte of this matter here also, not so amply and largely, as the dignity of the argument requireth, but rude so much as may seme sufficient for this present: desiring the gentle and diligent reader, that desireth more fully to be enstructed in this behalf to repare vnto that part of my Catechisme, whiche entreateth of the offices of all degrees.

First, forasmuch as the man is hed of the woman, as Christ is the hed of the congregation, and man was not made for woman, but woman for man, so that the principal party of the maried persons is the man: Conuenient order requireth, that I first be of all entreate of the mannes office and duty, and shew how he ought to behaue him selfe both towarde hys wyfe, and also to gouern his houshold godlye and vertuously. Ephe. v. 1. Cor. xiiii. 1. Tim. ii.

First and aboue al thinges, the husband shal do thutteremost that he can, to frame his wife in all poynts after the doctrine of Christes gospell, that her life maye be trained in the faithe, feare and loue of God from the beginning of their mariage. He shal many times talke wyth her of God and of godlinesse. He shall also certain times in the day prouoke her vnto prayer, and vnto the reding or hering of Gods most holy word. and he him self shall accompany her in those godly and vertuous exercises, and be vnto her an example of al godlinesse and honesty, so that his wife shal not at any time perceiue in him either by gesture, by word or by worke, any thing that doth dissent from the rule of Christianity, but all thinges sober, modest, temperate, quiet, honest, godly, vertuous &c. The duty of the husband towarde his wife. Exercises in godlinesse.

The maried life is happy and blessed before God.

Again, he shal as occasion serueth, put her in remembraunce, that the maried life is such a kinde of life, as is ordained, blessed and preserued of God: and that who so euer liueth in the same according to Gods holy ordinance doth moste highly please God: so that although there be in this state and order of life certaine troubles and greefes, from the which, such as are vnmaried be free: yet that those troubles & sorowes are nothing els then the rises of faith, laid vpon maried persons of the Lord God to mortify old Adam, and to nourture them in his holy discipline, that by this meanes they may be the more prouoked, not only to sequester their mindes from all the pleasures of the world and of the flesh, but also to call vpon God for his assistance and help in all their troubles and necessities, which wil vndoubtedlye so ease their griefes, paines and troubles, that he will make them not onlye tollerable, but also moste swete and pleasant to be borne. For what burden can be to a christen man intollerable or vnpleasant, which he is perswaded to be laid vpon him of his moste louing father, not for his incommoditye, but for his high commodity: not for his destruction, but for his saluation, seing that all things work for the best vnto them that loue God? The man therfore, when he perceiueth that his wife is greatly accombred with such cares and troubles, with such labors and trauailes, with such paines and sorowes (as belong vnto the duty of a woman) shal vnto the vttermoste of his powers help to ease her of them, and comfort her with moste swete and louing words, putting her in remembraunce of the great labors and paines, which the godly auncient matrones, as Sara, Rebecca, Rachel, Lya, Sephora, Ruth, Anna, Susanna &c, being also maried women, suffered in that state of life: exhorting her also patiently and quietly to beare those afflictions and troubles, nothinge doubting but that that Lord which turned the water into wine, wil turn those painful sorowes into most swete and pleasaunt exercises, so that afterward those things, which seme now vnto her painfull and greuous, shall become easy and tollerable.

The troubles of maried age are the exercises of faythe.

Rom. viii

The husbād ought to cōfort his wife in her labors and trauels.

Thus euen from the beginning of their mariage shal the husband accustom his wife vnto godlines, & prouide, that it may daily encrease in her more and more, til at the last she maye ware auncient in God & in all godlinesse, and become a worthye and vertuous matrone in the christen common weale vnto the good example of all other maried women. Vnto this thing exhorteth our sauiour Christ, saying: First of all Iohn. iii. seke the kingdom of God, and the righteousnesse therof. And the holy Apostle commaundeth, that the husbands shuld teach their wiues the way of true godlinesse. By this meanes shal it come to passe, that God Math. vi shall blesse their mariage, delite in the maried folk, and so prosper their labors, that they shall take good successe, and bring with them abounde of all good thinges, as the Psalmographe saithe: Blessed are they that fear the Lord, and walk in his waies. For thou shalt eat the 1. Cor. viii 1. Tim. ii labors of thine handes: O well is thee, and happy shalt thou be. Thy wife shalbe as the frutefull vine vpon the wals of thy house. Thy children like the Olyue braunches round about thy table. Lo, thus shall the man be blessed, that feareth the Lord. Psal. cxxviii

Secondly, forasmuch as the man hathe taken vnto him a woman in the feare of God, and made her his wife and yoke fellow, refusing all other women for her sake, rekninge to liue with her rather then with any other creature, either father or mother, brother or sister, or any other of his most dere frendes as shal become him, after he hath instructed her in the way of godlinesse, to remember moreouer his duetye toward her, which is moste derely and moste entierly to loue her, not for bodely pleasure, not for frail fauor, nor for brittle beuty, not for transitory goods and worldly richesse, not for any other carnal & vain things after the manner of the worldlinges, but because God hathe so commaunded, and because she is his children sister, of the same faith, of the same religion and of the same doctrine, again, because she is ỹ daughter of God, and felowe enheritor with him of euerlasting glorye. Howe great and how feruent this loue of the husband toward hys wyfe ought to be the blessed Apostle S. Paul doth cunningly set forth in these his wordes: ye husbandes loue your wiues, euen as Christe loued the congregation, and gaue him selfe for it, to sanctifye it, and clensed it in the fountain of water thorow the worde, to make it vnto him self a glorious congregation without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing: but that it should be holy and without blame. So ought men to loue theyr wiues, as their own bodies. He that loueth his wife, loueth him selfe. For no man euer yet hated his own flesh: but norisheth and cherisheth it euen as the Lord doth the congregation. For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones. For this cause shall a man leue father and mother, and shall be loyned vnto his wife, and of two shall be made one flesh. This is a great secrete, but I speake of Christe and of the congregation. Neuertheles doo ye so, that euerye one loue hys wife, euen as him self. Again he saith, ye husbandes loue your wiues, and be not bitter vnto them.

The husband ought to loue hys wife, as Christ loueth the congregation.

Ephe.v

Colos.iij

Of these wordes it euidently appeareth, what feruent and singuler loue the husband ought to bear toward his wife. First the holy Apostle setteth forth for an example to all maried men the loue, wherby Christ hath toward his congregation, and commaundeth all husbandes to exercise the like loue toward their wiues. Nowe who knoweth not, that the loue wherwith Christ hath loued his church or congregation from the beginning, is so great and feruent, that it is vtterly vnspeakeable? Very loue enforced him to take her vnto him, whan for her vnworthinesse she was moste vnworthy to be loued. Very loue moued him (being the king of glory and of such excellent beuty as the blessed angels and heauenly spirites haue a singuler delighte and greate pleasure to behold him) to mary her being in deede of her selfe miserable and poore, yea and deformed with all kinde of vice and wickednesse. Very loue made him being Lord of Lordes, and kinge of kinges, to chose her vnto his wife, whan notwithstandinge she was of all creatures most wretched and moste beggerly: and to make her his moste derelye beloued spouse, and to endue her with all his richesse and dignities. Very loue caused him being the lambe of God altogether innocent, vndefiled and without spot, to geue his blessed bodye to be broken, and hys precious blood to be shed on the altare of the crosse for to redeame her out of the tiranny of Satan, and from the power of al her enemies, and to sanctifie her. Very loue moued him being more goodlye, amiable and beautifull then all the children of men, to take her vnto him, when she was most of all defamed, and fauored and full of all vnto warenesse, and to cleanse her in the fountain of water thorow ỹ word, that he might make her vnto him self a glorious spouse, without spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, altogether holy and without blame. In fine, very loue was the cause that the Sonne of God tooke vpon him not aungels, but Abrahams seede, and so became with vs one flesh and one bloud, and of one and the same nature, yet without all synne, and hath coupled vs so vnto him in marage, that we are become members of his body, flesh of his flesh and bone of his bones, so that he being our bridegrome, and we his spouse, all his richesse are our richesse, all his merites and good workes, are oure merites and good workes, yea what so euer Christ hath either in heauen or in earth, altogether is ours, euen as a woman, thoughe she were neuer so poore before she was maried, is now being maried as rich as her husbande: for all that he hath is hers, yea his very body, so that he hathe no power ouer it, as the Apostle saith.

Now wher this loue is in the man towarde his wife, that is here specified to be in Christ toward his congregation: what inconuenience may chaunce so great and of such force betweene man and wife, that may dissolue and breake this loue? Is not the wife so perfecte in all poyntes, as the husband would haue her, or as he him self is: yet may he not despise her, nor be bitter or cruel vnto her for her faultes, but gentlely and louingly seeke to amend and win her, seeing that the nature of loue is to couer the multitude of sinnes, and in the spirite of meekenesse to instruct such as do fall or be taken in any fault. For as Christe thought no scorne of his church, despised her not, neither forsoke her for her vncleannesse and sinnes: so should no Christen man spurn at his wife, disdaine or set light by her, though sometime she falleth, offendeth and goeth out of the way: but euen as Christ beareth with his church, nourisheth her and teacheth her, euen so ought euery honest and godly husband louingly and gentlely to bear with his wife, tenderlye to nourish her, quietly and peaceably to instruct and teach her, as S. Paul sayeth: We whyche are strong, oughte to beare the fraitnesse of them, which are weak, and not to stand in our own conceits. Let euery man please his neighbor vnto his welth and edefying. For Christe pleased not him self, but as it is wrytte. The rebukes of them which rebuked thee, fell on mee.

Why God hath made the man stronger then the woman.

In many thinges God hath made the man stronger than the woman, not to rage vpon her, not to make her his sotestole and vnderling nor to play the tiraunt with her, but to help her, to comforte & cherish her, and quietly to beare with her weadnesse: Again, to be courteous and gentle to her, to winne her to Christe, and to ouercome her with kindnesse, that euen of loue she may doo her duetye, and obey the ordinaunce that God hath made betwene her and her husband, as S. Peter saith: ye men dwel with your wiues according to knowledge: geuinge honour vnto the wife, as vnto the weaker vessell, and as vnto them that are heirs also of the grace of life.

1.Peter iii.

To much

To much are they worthy of blame, which forgetting this doctrin of the holy ghost, forget also their duty toward their wiues, and with violence in their fury entreat their wiues (no beast so beastlye) sometime with cruel words, somtime with sharp stripes, wher all gentle menes ought to be sought to redresse that is amisse, as Salomon saith. Fair words are an hony combe, a refreshing of the mind, and health of the bones. It is seldome sene that any brute beast in his moste cruell rage doth hurt his female: and how vnnaturall a thing is it then for a man to hurt his own flesh and body, whome he ought to loue, as Christ loued the congregation? Ah, who is so estraunged from al wit and reson, that wil violently reuenge him self of his fote, if it chaunce to stomble? Will he not rather, if he haue an euil boyne, cherishe and comfort it, to make it better and stronger? Loue in all thinges, and at all times ought to be the whole doer and only instrument to worke and frame all thinges betwene man and wife.

Pioner fol.

Note.

Loue.

And who knoweth not, as Christ is the hed of the congregation, so likewise is the husbād the wiues hed? Again, what the hed is to the body, the same ought the man to be vnto his wife. As the hed seeth, hearth for the whole body, studieth & deuiseth to preserue it in strength and life: so likewise ought the husband to be affected toward his wife. And as Christ is the eie, hart, wisdom and guide of the congregation: so ought the husband to loue his wife, to comforte her, to prouide for her, to shew her like kindnesse, to guide and rule her with discretion, & to do all thinges for her preseruation, and by no meanes to shew any poynt of crueltye or vnkindnesse towarde her, euer setting before his eies, that he oweth that loue to his wife, that Christe sheweth to his congregation, as S. Paul saith: Ye husbands loue your wiues, euen as Christ loued the congregation.

The husbād is the hed of the wife.

Ephe. v.

But the holy Apostle doth not only set forth Christ to be an example of matrimoniall loue to the faithfull husbande, but he also commandeth, that the man shuld loue his wife euen as him self. Euery married man ought to be the same to his wife, that he is to him selfe. He that loueth not him self? Who euer hateth not his owne body? Euen so ought the husband to loue and cherish his wife. No man euer yet hated his own flesh, saith the Apostle, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, euen as the Lord doth the congregation. No maruel therfore ought to hate his wife, because she is his owne flesh, as it is wel seen. They shalbe two in one flesh, but rather loue her, comfort her, cherish her &c. If father and mother are to be forsaken for the wiues sake: who seeth not, that the loue, which the husband oweth to his wife, ought to excell the loue of all mortall creatures? Verely the husband oweth vnto his wife moste feruent loue and affection, all gentle behauiour, all kindnesse, and healp, all comfort and kindnesse, euen as to him self, for she is one flesh and body with him. Vnder God there is no loue, no affection, no friendship, no consanguinity, no kindred to be compared vnto this: nor anye one thing vnder the sunne, that pleaseth God more then man & wife that agree wel together, and liue in the feare of God.

The husbād ought to loue his wife as him self.

But contrariwise where this loue wanteth, there is brauling, hatred, strife, brawling, chiding, fighting, whoring, iealousy, poysoning

mur

murthering, and an whole lea of euils: which kinde of life in mariage as it doth exedingly displease God, so likewise is it manifestly contrary to this commaundement of the holy Apostle: Let al bitternes, fiersnesse and wrath, and roring, and cursed speaking be put away frō you with all maliciousnesse. Be ye courteous one to a nother, mercitul, forgeuing one a nother, euen as God for Christes sake hath forgeuē you. Surely it is an hie and pure loue, perfect and constant, that God requireth to be betwene maried couples, and therfore ought they by all waies, meanes and labor to get, maintain and encrease this exceding loue, and to eschue, forbear and cut of all things that might geue any occasion to the contrarye.

Ephe. iiii

And vndoubtedly there is nothing that longer maintaineth concord and quietnesse, nor more encreseth perfect loue in mariage, then swete and fair words, gentle and frendly deedes, and with a loving patience to take all thinges at the best, freely to breake their mindes one to another, to kepe all thinges secreat, to be glad and willing to amend, if any thing be amisse on either party, one to delight in a nothers company, to geue none occasion of suspitions, to auoid al euil company, gladly one to doo for another, alwais one to speak wel of another, and aboue all things, not ones one to heare euil of an other, as the Apostle warneth, saying: Se that ye geue no place to the backbiter: that is, to such as with their euil speaking go about to set variaunce amonge you, but take them as euil willers to you bothe, thoughe they pretend neuer so great frendship, and aboue all things maintain loue, amitie, quietnesse and concorde betwene you: yea and that so much the more, because ye are one body, & ioyned together with an vnloseable knot. For as Salomon saith: Better is a drye morsel with quietnesse, then a ful house, & many fat cattel with strife. Again, better is a litle with the feare of the Lord, then great treasure with sorowe. Better is a messe of potage with loue, then a fat Ore with euil wil.

Pro. xv

Therfore as it is the office of a true and faithfull husband to traine vp his wife euen from the beginning of their mariage in the waye of godlinesse: euen so is it his duty to loue his wife, as Christe loued the congregation, yea no lesse fervently to loue her, then he loueth himself, and to thinck nothing so dere, that he can not vouchsafe most willingly and gladly to bestow vpon her, yea and if nede shulde be, not to spare his own life, but frankly and freely to bestowe it for her sake, euen as Christ did for the congregation.

Thirdly, seing that many times according to the common prouerbe, pouerty parteth felowship, and many for lack of thinges necessary fall into many and diuers inconueniences, and not a fewe of them are in all ages founde amonge the maried folke, so that some of them fall to whoring, some to thening, pyking, stealing and robbinge, and some to other lewd and vnsemely behauiour: that no such inconueniences may grow among the maried folk: it is the duty of a godly and faithful husband to prouide and afore see, that he do not onlye traine vp his wife in the way of godlinesse, and moste derely and tenderlye loue her, but also that his wife, his children and his family lack noe good thinges that is necessary for them and for their liuing. The blessed Apostle sayth, that if anye

The husbād is bounde to prouide all thinges necessary for his wife.

that if any man make not prouisyon for suche as belong vnto hym, he hath denied the faith, and is worse then an infidell. But this prouision may not be made by anye vnlawfull meanes, and contrarye to the woord of God: but the husband must so prouide for his wife, children & family, that his prouision may agree with the word of God and with a good conscience. The mean and way that God hathe appoynted all maryed men to make prouisyon for suche as appertaine vnto them, is labour, as it is wrytten. Thou shalt eat the labours of thine handes: O wel is thee, and happy shalt thou be. Thy wife shalbe as the frutefull vine vppon the walles of thy house. Thy children lyke the Olyue braunches rounde about thy table. Lo, thus shall the man be blessed, that feareth the Lord. Saint Paule also sayeth: Let him that stole, steal no more, but let hym rather labor with hys hãds, the thing which is good, that he may geue to him that needeth. Agaime, we beseche you brethren, that ye encrese more and more, and that ye study to be quiet, and to medle wyth your owñ businesse, and to work wyth your owne handes, as we commaunded you, that ye maye behaue your selues honestly toward them that are wythout, and that nothyng be lackynge vnto you. Also in a nother place: We haue hard say, that ther are some whyche walke among you inordinatly, worksyng not at all, but being busy bodyes. Them that are suche, we commaund and exhorte by our Lord Jesu Christ, that they worke wyth quietnesse, and eate theyr owne breade. Item, If there be anye that wyll not worke, the same ought not to eat. Labour. Psal. cxxviii Ephe. iiii. i. Thes. iiii ii. Thes. iii

That labour is the godly and lawful mene or way, wherby the husband may make prouisyon for hys wife, children and familye: it is euydent and plain by the woorde of God. For we rede, that after God had coupled Adam and Heua together, he commaunded Adam to labour, & to eat hys bread in the labor of hys handes, and in the sweate of hys browes. The woordes of God are these: In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, tyl thou be turned agayne into the ground, for out of it wast thou taken, inasmuch as thou are dust, and into duste thou shalt be turned again. And thys commaundement of God was not only geuen to Adam, but to all hys posterity: so that no man ought to lyue idle lye, but worke some good thyng, that he may not only haue wherof to sustain hym & hys, but also to geue to hym that needeth. In consyderatyon wherof, all the auncyent fathers of the olde Testament wyth theyr successors, euen so many as feared God, gaue them selues to labor, by thys meanes prouidyng all thyngs necessary not only for them and theyrs, but also for such as were in necessitye. After thys manner ought an honest, godly and faythfull husbande to make prouisyon for hym self, hys wyfe, his children, and his family, ouer whom God hath made him an ouerseer, and hathe also geuen him charge to prouide for them: whiche thyng he may by no meanes neglect, if he wyll eskape þ heuy displesure of God. And althoughe it appere in the tender eyes of the idle, welthy and delicate worldlings, a seruile and slauelike thing to get the lyuing with the labour of handes, and the sweat of the browes, and therfore they practise wicked and vnlawfull waies to come by the goodes of thys worlde: yet is this kynde of life before God pretious and acceptable, and hathe ioyned vnto it the fauor and blessyng of God, Gene. iii of God, which will not suffer that honest and godly labour to be taken in vain, but will prosper it vnto the vttermost, so that aboundaunce of all good thinges shall ensue, and followe therof, as it is wrytten: The Lord will not suffer the soul of the righteous to perish for hunger, but he taketh away the richesse of the vngodly. An idle hand maketh poore but a quick labouring hand maketh rich. The blessing of the Lord maketh men rich, as for careful trauail it doothe nothing therto. Againe, if thou be not slouthfull, thy harueste shall com as a springing well, and pouerty shall flie farre from thee. And who knoweth not, that (as Salomon saith) a litle with the fear of the Lord is better then great treasure with sorow, that is to saye, with an vnquiet conscience. Againe, better is it to haue a litle thing with righteousnesse, then great rents wrongfully gotten. Also in a nother place. He that loueth mony, shall neuer be satisfied with monye, and who so delyteth in richesse, shall haue no profit therof. This is also a vain thing. Wheras much richesse is, ther are many also that spend them away. And what pleasure hath he that possesseth them, sauing that he may loke vpon them with his eies: A labouring mã slepeth swetely, whether it be litle or much that he eateth: but the aboundance of the rich will not suffer him to slepe.

Eccles.v.

The husbãd is bounde to defende his wife, her honesty, good name and fame.

Fourthly, as it is the duty of an honest and faithfull husbande, to train vp his wife in godlinesse, derely to loue her, and to prouide, that she lack nothing that is necessary for her. So likewise is he bound to defend his wife, to maintain his wiues honesty, integrity, good name and fame. And for thys cause is the man in the holy scripture called the hed of the woman, because he shuld godly gouerne her, maintaine and defend her in all godlinesse and honestye, and by no meanes suffer her vnto the vttermost of his power to be iniuried, wronged, displeasured and troden vnder foote of her aduersaries. For as the Lorde Christ euen of very loue that he beareth toward his congregation, defendeth it from the tiranny of Satan, from the curse of the lawe, from the power of hel, from the sting of death, from the darte of desperation, and from all other enemies: so likewise ought the husband to behaue hym self toward his wife. And as Christ did rather chuse to geue him selfe vnto the death, then his spouse, the christen congregation should be ouercome of her aduersaries: euen in like manner oughte the husbande rather to bestow his life for the defence of his wife, then she shuld wickedly be abused of any wicked creature: contrarye to the moste vile, abhominable and damnable vsages of certain naughtye packes in these our dates, which are not ashamed but rather therwith welcontented that other men abuse their wiues, so that they may haue gaine, lucre & frendship, not altogether vnlike a certaine man called Galba, whiche whan he saw Mecenas (Minion to Augustus the Emperour) daliyng with his wife before his face, cast downe his hed, nodded, and fared as though he had bene a slepe: whan the holy Apostle S. Paul commandeth euery maried man to kepe his vessel, that is to say, his wife, in holinesse and honor. The husband hath not power of his wiues body to abuse it, or to make it common to other for gaines sake, but chastlye & honestly to vse it him self according to the law of Matrimonye. These wicked husbandes doo not only moste wickedlye them selues, but they also haue pleasure in them that doo the like, and therfore worthy of euerlasting

uerlasting death and damnation. In the law of god it is commaunded that a man shall not make his daughter commen, to the end that he would cause her to be an whore: and shal it be lawful for a man to make hys wyfe commen to other, that for lucres sake she maye playe the whore, and by this meanes cause her to be the mẽber of a whoremonger, which before was a mẽber of the body of Christ? Is not this to professe the sect of the Nicolaites, which made theyr wiues commẽ to all men indifferently? Whose workes also God him selfe sayth plainly, that he doth vtterly hate and abhorre. These wicked corruptours and betrayers of theyr own wiues are worthye of most extreme punishment, for as much as for a little filthy lucre they dishonor honorable wedlocke, and defile theyr owne beddes, which aboue all thynges they oughte to kepe pure, cleane and vndefiled. Honorable, sayth S. Paule, is wedlock among al men, and the bed vndefiled: but whoremongers & adulterars God shal iudg, that is to say, punish cõdẽne. Leuit. 19. Apoc. 2 Heb. 13

Fiftly and finally, the office of a godly and faythful husband is, so longe as he liueth to obserue and kepe his fayth, vowe and promes, which he made vnto his wife before god and his holy congregation, when he was maried, & by no meanes to suffer him selfe to be plucked from the perfect performance of the same neyther thorow the suttle suggestiõs of Satã, norneyther thorow the slaterīgentilemẽts of ỳ flesh, not yet thorow the crafty perswasiõs of ỳ wicked world ỳ ỹ matrimonial lifemay be betwen him & his wife, true faithful, & perfect euẽ vnto the very deth, & by this meanes procure the cõtinual blessing of god vpon them both, and vpon all theyrs. But aboue al things for the performance of his wedding promes, the husband shal take hede, that he geue not ouer his loue to any other woman, nor entangle him selfe with the deuelysh desire of straung and forayn filthy flesh, but cõtent himself with the alone loue and company of his wife in this behalfe according to the counsell of the wiseman which sayth: Be glad with the wife of thy yougth, (Louing is the hind, and frendlye is the roo.) Let hir brestes alwayes satisfy the, and holde the euer contente with hir loue. My sonne, why wilt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, & embrace the bosome of an other woman? For euery mans wayes are opẽ in ỳ sight of ỳ Lord, & he pondreth al theyr goings. The wickednes of the vngodly shall catch himself, & with the snares of his own sinne shall he be trapped. A godly husband shal so behaue him selfe both in gesture, word & dede, that he shal be well able thus to say with the holy man Job, that precious pearle of perfecte patience: If mine hearte hath lusted after my neyghbors wife, or if I haue layed wayt at his dore: O then let my wife grind vnto a nother man, and let other men lye with her. For this is a wickednes and sin, that is worthy to be punished, yea a fire that vtterly shuld consume and roote out al my substance. For although many thinges bring trouble to the quiet state of wedlock, yet the sinne of adultery maketh an vtter breache, destruction and desolation of matrimony, while the knot of mariage is dissolued and losoned thorowe suche and so greate wickednes, the mindes disseuered and plucked a sunder, and the gilty person made of the mẽber of Christ, the member of an harlot, as the Apostle sayth: Know ye Prouerb. 5. Iob. 31. Adultery.

The husbandes ought to be men and faythful to his wife.

not,that your bodies are the membʒs of Chʒist? Shall I nowe take the members of Chʒist,and make them the mẽbers of an harlot? God fozbid. Do ye not know,that he,which coupleth him self with an harlot,is become one bodye with the harlot? Foz two saythe he,shall be made one flesh. But he that is ioyned to the Lozd,is one spirite wyth the Lozd. Flye whozedome. Euery sinne that a man doth,is without the body. But he that is an whozemonger,sinneth agaynst his owne body. Eyther know ye not,how that your bodies are the temple of the holy ghost,which dwelleth in you,whome ye haue of god, and ye are not your owne? Foz ye are dearely bought. Therfoze glozifye God in your bodies,and in your spirites,which are gods.

An honest and godly husband therfoze shal at al times sequester his loue from all other women,and consecrate it only to the vse of his wife,and in all his behauiour so circumspectly walke,that he doo not only abstayne from the selfe euill,but also from al appearance of euil, as saint Paule sayth: Take hede how ye walke circumspectly: not as vnwise,but as wise men,winninge occasion, because the dayes are euill. And foz the perfourmaunce hereof,he shal be chast in his talk and abstayne from al wanton,wicked,vayn and vnhonest communication accozding to this admonicion of the holy Apostle: Let no filthy cõmunication pzocede out of your mouth but that which is good to edefy withal,as oft as nede is,that it maye minister grace vnto the hearers. He shal also eschew as the plage and pestilence al euil company but namely such as be geuen to the wozkes of the flesh,lest by hauing conuersation wyth them he also become lyke vnto them, and so fall awaye from the pzomis made to his yokefelowe. Foz such as they are with whome we kepe cõpany,such pzoue we foz the most part,as the wiseman saith: He that goeth in the company of wisemen,shal be wise but who so is a companion of fooles: shall be hurte. Againe,make no frendshyp with an angry wilful man,and kepe no company with the furious: least thou lern his wayes,& receaue hurt in thy soule. Ones agayn: maye a man take fire in his bosome,& his clothes not be bʒẽt: Oʒ can one goe vpon whote coales,and his feete not be hurte? Euen so,whosoeuer goeth into his neyghboures wife,and toucheth her,he cannot be vngilty.

Moderate diet

It shal be conuenient also,that foz the auoydingof all vncleanes he be moderate and temperate in his diet,not geuen to banketing,to tomuch eating and dzinking,but that he study at al times to be sober and not to eate and dzink foz pleasure,but foz necessity, not to pamper the belly and to sturre vp filthy and fleshly lust,but to satisfy nature which is content with a little,and to conserue this life in al godlynes and honesty. Dayly experience,as I may speake nothing of the auncient histozies both diuine & pzophane, sheweth euidently,what a quick spurre and great pzouocation,to much eating and dzinkinge is to the lust of the body,as god complayneth by the pzophet,saying:

Iere. 5.

I fed them euen to the ful,and they fell to adultery and haunted harlots houses. In the desire of vncleanly lust,they become like the stoned hozses,euery mã neyghed after his neighboures wife. Shold I not cozrect this,sayth the Lozd: Should I not be auẽged of euery people

that

that is like vnto this? The body being kept in a temperate sobriety & sober temperance, shal easily escape and vanquish the fears and cruell ragynges of the flesh, and by no meanes fal into the disorder of inordinate loue, as the poet sayth. Sine Cerere & Baccho friget venus. And ỳ blessed Apostle sayth: Make not prouision for the flesche to fulfyll the lustes therof. For if ye liue after the flesh, ye shal dye. Rom. 13. Rom. 8.

Moreouer besides these thinges aforesaid, it is the duty of an honest and godly husbande, paciently & quietly to beare the infirmities of his wife, to dissemble, cloke and forgeue the faults of his wife, and not rigorously to handle her for euery light trifle, but rather gently & louingly to admonish her, and frendly to exhorther vnto better amēdment and more diligence, that fromhencefoorth she may be the more circumspect in all her doynges and trauayles considerynge with hym self, that the woman is the weaker vessel, and not to be compared vnto the mā, neyther in body, nor in mind. And this is that honor, which Saynt Peter requireth in an husband toward his wife, saying: Ye men dwell with your wiues accordinge to knowlege, geuinge honor vnto the wife, as vnto the weaker vessell. and as vnto them that are heyers also of the grace of life, ỳ your prayers be not hindered. The man is the stronger party, therfore ought he to bear with the weaker party, which is the womā, as saynt Paule saith: we which are strōg ought to beare the frayles of thē, which are weake, and not to stāde in our own conceates. Agayne, the man is the heade of the woman: therefore ought he with gentlenes to rule and gouerne her, and not churlishely to entreat her, though somtime she fall and doo amis. For except bearing and forbearing of on an other, be put in exercise amōg the maried folk, it is not possible that loue, peace, vnitye and concorde can be among them. Noman in al poyntes and at al times is perfect and wise. Al fort of vs, sayth S. James, offend in many thinges. Euery man ought to be the same vnto his wife, that Christ is to the cōgregation. The husband ought to bear the infirmities of the flesh. 1. Pet. 3. Rom. 15. Iac. 3.

To conclude if the man wil christenly and godly behaue him self toward his wife, and diligently practise these things aforesayd in his conuersation and life: it shall be necessary that he many times call vpon god by feruent prayer, that it may please him of his fatherly goodnes to blesse him and hys wife, to defende them from all euill, and to preserue them in his fayth, feare and loue, that neyther Satā, nor the world, nor the flesh, may haue any power ouer them, nor trouble or diuide that matrimoniall life betwen them, nor yet make it heauy and payneful vnto them, nor by any meanes pluck theire hearties awaye one from the other, but rather that they may most derely and constātly loue one an other, delight one in an other, cherish and comforte one an other, pray one for an other, and so in all pointes order and behaue thē selues one towards an other ỳ they at al times with ioyful, quiet and free consciences may pray and praise God, and lede a merye and pleasant life together euen vnto the very death, without al disturbāce and strife: which thing God, which is the author of matrimonie, grāt to al godly maried folke for his sonne Christ Jesus sake. Amen. Thus much haue I spoken concerning the office and duty of the husbande Prayer.

The duty of the mā toward his children.

It now remaineth, that I speake some what also of the mans duty and office concerning his family or household. And this I deuide into two parts, that is to saye, into children and into seruantes. There is a duty, which the maried man oweth to them both. But firste of all forasmuch as the children ought to be the first and principal care in the gouernment of the household: the maried man, which is the father of the children, ought to haue a speciall regarde to the godly and vertuous bringing vp of them, that in time to come they may proue worthy citisens of the christen common weale. For children, as they are the very sure band and fast knot of matrimonial loue for euer to be continued betwene the parentes, so that no dissention, no discord no strife can be so greate among thē, but that the beholding of those children shuld streightwayes worke a reconciliation and a renewing of loue in them both one toward a nother, forasmuch as both haue equal part in them all: euen so in like manner are they the best and most principall giftes, yea and the most derest blessings that god geueth to the maried folkes persons, for the which they ought to be more thankful vnto god, then for the gift of childrē be they few or many, seing that childrē are their Parentes chief ioy, comfort and felicitie next vnto God, their stay and staffe, and the very vpholders of their age: yea in their children, the parents euē whē they are dead, after a certayn manner, liue, their stock and name is maynteyned and a certayne kinde of immortalitie, as I may so speak, procured vnto thē. Therfore when god hath blessed the maried man with children, he must earnestlye and aboue all thinges The mā ought to bring vp his children godly and vertuously prounde, that euen from the very cradles they first of all learn to know God and his most holy word, which is the right path and high waye to all vertue and godlynes, the sure shild and strong buckler to defend them from the deuil and frō al his cruel and crafty assaults, and that he dayly geue them godly, wholsome, and louinge exhortacions and suffer no vice to take roote in them, but rebuke them for their euil: and commend them for their well doing. Thus godly and vertuously, to bring vp their youth are al parents commaunded of god in his holy word. Take heed sayth god, to thy self, and kepe thy soule diligentlye, that thou forget not the thinges which thine eies haue sene, and that they depart not out of thy heart al the dayes of thy life, but teach them thy sonnes, and thy sonnes sonnes. Again, these wordes, which I cō maund the this day, shalbe in thine heart, and thou shalt shew thē vnto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou art at home in thine house, and as thou walkest by the way, and when thou lyest down and when thou risest vp: and thou shalt bind thē for a signe vpon thine hand. And they shalbe warnings betwene thine eyes, and thou shalt wright them vpon the postes of thy house, and vpon thy gates. Also in a nother place he sayeth: Set youre heart vnto all the wordes, which I testify vnto you this day: and ye shall commaunde them vnto your children, that they may obserue and do al the words of this law. And let it not be a vayne word vnto you: for it is your lyfe. and through this word ye shall prolonge youre dayes. Kynge Ezechi-

as in his prayer sayth: The father, O God, shal make thy trueth knowen to his childrē. Likewise sayth the blessed Apostle: moue not your childrē to wrath, but bring them vp through the doctrine and information of the Lord. Thus se we, that god ernestly requireth of all fathers, that they diligently bringe vp their youth in the knowlege of god and of his holy word, that from their tender peres they may lerne to know god, to beleue in god, to fear, reuerēce loue & obey god, & in al points to walk according to gods most holy will & blessed plesure, by no meanes suffering them eyther to the right hād or to the left to decline from the word of god and from the rules of the same. Esa.38. Ephe.6.

After this maner did al the godly euen from the beginning train vp their youth, ẏ they might appere to be fathers not only of the body but also of the mind, and to haue a specīall care no les to garnishe the yong and tender breastes of their children with godly vertues & good qualities, then to deck theyr soft bodies with decent and comely apparell. Of this sort were Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Moses, Dauid, Tobias, the parents of Susanna, Mathathias, the mother of seuen children, Philippe the Euangelist, the Apostles of Christ, the godly and auncient Bishops, deacons and ministers of Christes church with many other, as histories make mention. And Parentes oughte so much more to be diligēt in this behalf, because childrē cōing of good godly & vertuous parēts, do very seldome answere ẏ goodnes, godlynes & vertues of their Progenitoures, as we haue diuers examples both in the holye scriptures and also in the Ethnike writers. Abraham had many euill children, but he had but one good, that is to saye Isaac. Jacob the Patriarche had diuers children, of the whiche, parte of them were but of euill behauioure. Samuel had two sonnes, and both euill and naught. Heli was a good man, but hys sonnes were wicked and altogether without the feare of God. Dauid had many children, yet had he few good, besides Salomon. Roboam Salomōs son was not like to his father Salomon. King Ezechias, a most godly & vertuous prince, had a most wicked sonne, euen Manasses, which succeaded him in his kingdome. And among the heathen who knoweth not that many worthye fathers had most vnworthye children, as we rede of Plato, Demosthenes, Cicero, &c.

Childrē seldome expresse the godlines of their fathers.

Now the Parentes doing their duty according to the will of God that theyr children may be brought vp in the knowlege and feare of God and notwithstanding the children will not heare, nor bow theire neckes vnto gods yoke, but go forthe to lede a dissolute and loose lyfe contrary to the commaundement of god: it is the duty of a good and godly father to correct these stifnecked and disobediēt children, and to attempt if correction and punishment may doo good, seing that fayre meanes will profit nothing at all. For so sayth the holy ghoste by the mouth of Salomon: Chasten thy sonne, while there is hope. Agayne Withhold not correction from the childe: for if thou beatest him with the rod, he shall not dye thereof. If thou smite hym with the rod, thou shalt deliuer his soule from hell. Ones agayn, he that spareth the rod, hateth his sonne: but whoso loueth him, chastneth him betimes. Also in an other place. The rod and correction ministeth wisdome: but feasts to lede them with him vnto the church, there humbly to pray vn to God, diligently to heare the word of God, &, whan time requireth, reuerētly to be partakers of the holy misteryes of the body and bloud of christ. Again to ouersee, that no kind of sinne be vsed of them in his house, neyther idlenes, neyther swering, neyther whoringe nor any o-ther poynt of vncleanes, neyther picking, neither stealing, neyther any filthy communicatiō, nor any vnsemely gestures, or what so euer may prouoke vnto leudnes and dishonesty, or any kind of vice: but contra-rywise, that al godlines, honesty, and vertue be practised among, and of them, that by this meanes God may the more aboundantly poure forth his blessing vpon him and al his household, as our sauiour christ sayth: First of al seke ye the kingdome of God and the righteousnes thereof, and al other thinges shalbe cast vnto you. For as the Psalmo graph sayth: excepte the Lorde builde the house, theire laboure is but lost, that build it. Except the lord kepe the city, the watchmā waketh but in vayne. The blessing of the Lord maketh men rich, sayth Salo-mon. Therfore first and aboue al thinges, the maried man, that hath seruantes, shal endeuour himselfe diligently to exercise his seruants in true godlynes, that in hys house, as in the scholehouse of vertue they may learne nothing but that is good, godlye and vertuous. But aboue all things he shal diligently prouyde, that bothe in hymselfe, in his wife and childrē there appere nothing but godlynes and honesty, lest thorow euil example he should destroy more then he doth edify by words. For not wordes but workes are the best Scholemaisters, whē words and workes go together, then haue al things good succes. The maried mā therfore shal shine in his house like a great light, ful of all good workes, that his seruantes beholdinge his godly & honest con-uersatiō may be occasioned to practyse the like godlynes and honesty in theyr life and manners.

Prouerb.10.

Justly and righteouslye shal he handle his seruantes, if he obserue these two thinges. Firste, that he by no meanes suffer them to be idle, nor to spēd their time vnthriftyly, but rather prouide, that they diligēt ly apply theyr work and labour, that they may liue according to their vocation and calling. And this teacheth the wisemā, saying: The fod-der, the whyp and the burthen belongeth vnto the asse: meate, correctiō and worke, vnto thy seruante. If thou set thy seruant to laboure thou shalt find reast. But if thou let him go idle, he shal seke libertye. The yoke and the whip boweth down the hard neck, but tame thou thy e-uil seruant with bondes and correction. Send him to labour, that he go not idle. For idlenes bringeth muche euill. Set him to worke, for that belongeth vnto him, and becommeth him well. If he be not obe-dient, bind his feete, but do not to much to him in any wise, and with-out discretion do nothing. The holy Apostle sayncte Paule also requi-reth of seruants, that they diligētly folow their vocation, apply their work, and be obedient to theyr bodely masters, saying: ye seruauntes obeye them that are youre bodelye maysters, wythe feare and trembling, euen with the singlenes of your hearte, as vnto Christe, not doing seruice vnto the eie, as they that go about to please mē, but as the seruantes of christ, doing the wil of God from the heart with good good will seruing the lord and not men knowing this that whatsoeuer good thing any man doth, the same shal he receiue agayn of God whether he be bond or fre. The like wordes in effect hath the same Apostle in an other place, where he sayth: ye seruantes, be obedient vnto them that are your bodely maisters in all thinges, not with eye seruice as men pleasures, but in singlenes of hearte feeringe God. And whatsoeuer ye doo, doo it hartely, as though ye did it to the Lorde, & not vnto men: knowing that of the Lord ye shal receaue the rewarde of inheritance: for ye serue the Lord christ. But he that doth sinne, shal receaue for his sinne. Again he sayth in his letter vnto Bishop Titus Exhorte seruantes to be obedient vnto their owne maisters, and to please them in al things, not answering agayn, neither to be pickers but that they shew al good faythfulnes, that they may do worship to the doctrine of god our sauior in al things. Not vnlike to these things wrighteth saynt Peter saying seruantes, obeye youre maisters with feare: not only if they be good and courteous, but also though they be froward. For this is thanckworthy, if a man for conscience towarde god endure griefe, and suffer wrong vndeserued. Coloss.3. Titus.2. 1.Pet.2.

Thus se we, as it is the seruats duety to obey their bodely maisters in al things that fight not vnto the will of god, and diligently to worke according to their vocation and calling: so likewise is it the duty and office of such as be maysters and rulars to see, that they be set to labor that they be not idle, and that they be euer working some good thinge that may be profitable to the christen common weale.

Secondly, if the maried man will deale iustly, truly and faythfully with his seruantes, he must take heed, that he doo only requyre of them faythfull and diligent seruice, dug and true worke or labour, but that he also geue and pay truly without fraud or deceate vnto the their duty and couenantes, meate, drink, lodging, apparell, wages, & what so euer is agreed vpon betwene them, that there be found none vnrighteous dealing in him, but all iustice, all equity, all truth. This commaundeth God by the Apostle, saying: Maisters, do vnto your seruants that which is iust and equall, knowing that ye also haue a maister in heauen. Iesus the sonne of Sirach, also sayth. Whereas thy seruant worketh truly entreate him not euill, nor the hyreling that is faythfull vnto the. Loue a discret seruãt as thine owne soule: defraude hym not of hys libertye, neyther leaue hym a poore man. Agayne. If thou haue a faythful seruant, let him be vnto thee as thine owne soule intreate him as a brother, for in blond hast thou gotten him. If thou haue a (faithful) seruãt, hold him as thy self: for thou hast nede of him as of thy self. If thou intreat him euel & depest him harde maiest him to be proud and to run away frõ the: thou cãst not tel, what way thou shalt seke him. Thus much haue I thoght good to speak of the office & duety of the maried mã toward his wife toward his childrẽ, & to his seruantes, that he may know how to behaue him self in his house that he may attempt nothing that is contrary to the blessed will and holy commaundemente of God. And verely the maried man ought with all diligence to do his endeuour, that he accomplishe the afore sayd thinges in his life and conuersation, that he may be a good exam- Coloss.4. Eccle.7. Eccle..

Now remayneth it, that I also declare how the wife ought to be haue her selfe, and what her duety is also both toward her husbande, her childen, and her mayd seruāts, that she doying her duty and office, the state and ozder of Matrimonye, which she hath taken vpon her in the fear of God with her husband, may be to them both the moze blessed, happy, foztunate ioyful and quiet.

The duty of a maried womā toward her husband.

First it belongeth to a godly maried woman to vnderstād, that as god in his holy ozdinance hath appoynted the husband to be heade rular and gouernour of his wife: so likewyse hath he ozdeyned euen from the beginning, that the wife should be in subiectiō and obedience
Gen. 3. to her owne husband, as it is wzitten: Thy last shall pertayne to thy

Likewise let the wiues also be in subiection to their husbandes in al
1. Pet. 3. things. Hereto agreeth the saying of sayne Peter: ye wiues be in subiection to your husbandes, that euen they, which obey not the wozde, may without the wozd be wonne by the conuersation of the wiues, while they behold your chast conuersation coupled with feare: whose apparell shal not be outwarde with bzoyded heare and hangynge on of gold, either in putting on of gozgeous apparell: but let the hid man which is in the heart, be without al cozruption, so that the spirite be at rest and quiet, which spirite is before God a thing much set by. Foz af ter this mauer in the old time did the holy women, which trusted in God, tier them selfes, and were obedient to their husbandes, euen as Sara obeyed Abzaham, and called him lozd: whose dagbters ye are as long as ye do well.

Of these and such like scriptures contayned in the holy bible it is e

uident and playn, that the firſt and pꝛincipall poynt of a maried womās duty, is to be ſubicet and obedient to her huſbād, yea and that as ꝯ cōgregatiō is in ſubiection to chriſt: and to confeſſe and knowledge her huſbād to be her hed, euē as Chriſt is the hed of his church. Now, who knoweth not, that to be in ſubiection, is not to rule and cōmaūd, but to be ſubiecte and to obey. The wife in deede maye rule and commaund her family and childꝛē: but to her huſbād ſhe muſt be in ſubiectiō, and her ſelfe to be cōmaūded and to folow the pleaſure of her huſbande in al honeſt and godlye things, and by no meanes to chalenge any power ouer her huſbande, as the Apoſtle ſayth: I ſuffer not a woman to teach, neyther to vſurp authoꝛity ouer the man, but to be in ſilēce. Foꝛ Adā was firſt foꝛmed, ꝛ thē Eue. Adam alſo was not deceiued but the womā was deceiued, ꝛ was ſubdued to the trāſgreſſiō. Notwithſtāding thoꝛow berig of childꝛē ſhe ſhal be ſaued, if they cōtinew in fayth and loue, and holines, with diſcretion. Againe, let your women kepe ſilence in the congregations. foꝛ it is not permitted vnto them to ſpeak but to be vnder obedience, as ſayth the lawe. If they will learn any thing, let them aſke theyꝛ huſbands at home. Foꝛ it is a ſhame foꝛ weomen to ſpeake in the congregation. And verely there is nothing that helpeth moꝛe vnto the maintenāce of vnity, loue and concoꝛd betwene maried folk, then when the wife is content to be in ſubiectiō to her huſband, to obey him, to knowlege him to be her hed, to be ruled by him, to accompliſh his will, to do that thing which ſhe knoweth to be his pleaſure, and to eſchew that thinge which ſhe knoweth that he loueth not. Foꝛ by this meanes doth ſhe winne her huſbands heart, ſo that he hath a ioy, luſt and pleaſure in her, and diſireth nothing moꝛe, then alwaye to be in her company. But contrarywiſe, when the wife is diſobedient, ſtuburn, pꝛoude, hye minded, froward, ouerwharting, contentious, bꝛawling, diſdaynfull. ꝛc. ſo that ſhe go about rather to rule, then to be ruled, to be obeyed, then to obey, to gouern, then to be gouerned, contrary to the oꝛdinance of God: then is there hanoke made of al loue and amitye betwene the man and his wife: then is there a mere confuſion of all comely oꝛder in that houſe, yea then one of them delighteth not in a nothers company: the wife is glad, when the huſbād is out at the doꝛes, and the huſband abhoꝛreth his own houſe, ꝛ gladly ableteth him ſelf frō home, thinking, that whē he goeth home, he is like to a mā that goeth to ꝯ battail amōg his enemies, ſo little reſt ꝛ quietnes looketh he foꝛ, whē he ſhal cōe home. And who knoweth not, what an hellike life it is, to liue with a pꝛoud ꝛ cōtētious womā? Are not theſe ꝯ woꝛds of the wiſemā? A houſwife woman is a crowne vnto her huſband: but ſhe that behaueth her ſelf vnhoneſtly, is a coꝛruption in his bones. It is better to dwel in a wildernes, then with a chiding and an angry woman. It is better to ſit in a coꝛner vnder the roſe, then with a bꝛawlinge woman in a wide houſe. A bꝛawling woman and the rouſe of the houſe dꝛopping in a rayny day, may well be compared together. He that refrayneth her refrayneth the wind, and holdeth the oyle faſt in his hande. A wicked wife.

ment and plage is nothyng in comparison of the plage of the heart: euen so al wyckednes is nothynge to the wyckednes of a woman. &c.
There is not a moze wicked head then the head of the serpēt: and there is no wrath aboue the wzath of a woman. I will rather dwell with a lyon and a dragon, then to kepe house with a wicked wife. &c. Like as to clime vp a sandy way, is to the feete of the aged: Euē so is a wife full of wozdes to a still quiet man. If a woman get the maistery, then is she contrary to her husband. A wicked wife maketh a sozy harte, an heauy countenāce, and a dead wound. Geue thy water no passage, no not a litle: neyther gene a wicked woman her will. If she walke not after thy hand, she shall confounde the in thee sight of thine enemies.
Cut her of therfoze from thy flesh, that she do not alway abuse thee.

Certes, forasmuch as maried folke ought to be peaceable, quiet, frendly, louing and of perfect agrement one with an other, not despising one a nother, noz disdayning one a nother, but rather true & faith ful one to a nother, and succouring one a nother both in prosperity and aduersity, both in helth and in sickenes, and in all kindes of wozdly chā ces. Besides it is sitting and conuenient that the woman accozding to Gods appoyntment be in subiection vnto her own husband, obey him feare him, reuerence him, loue him, be glad to please him, delight in his company, and seke all meanes possible to content his minde, euen as the faythfull congregation seeketh to please Christe her heade in all thinges: euer setting before her eyes, that she was not made of the mās head, because she should not be maister, noz yet of the feete that she should be altogether an vnderling oz a saue, but of the mans side that she should be his helper and comfoztour. The remembrance of these thinges ought to make greate peace and quietnes amonge the maried folke.

The duty of a good wife.

A good wyfe ought to be mo and sober in all her doings.

Secondlye, as the womans duety is to be in subiection to her husband: so likewise is she bounde by the commaundement of god to be chast, pure and honest in dede, in wozd, in gesture, in apparell and in all her behauiour, that no poynte of lightnes appere in her, but all modestye, sobrietye, grauitye, chastitye, honestye, womanlynes, &c, that whosoeuer beholdeth her, maye iustlye seme to looke vpon a perfect pearle of precious purity. Foz nothyng doth so dishonest an ho nest woman, as lightnes, wantonnes and dishonesty. In her dedes let her prouide, that no vncomelines appere. Let her refrayn her self from all wicked company. Let her not accustome her selfe to steaung flesh, but content her self onelye with the loue of her husbande. Foz if shipwzacke of a womans honestye be once made, there remayneth no thing in her prayse worthy. Foz as the wiseman sayth, firste she hathe bene vnfaythful vnto the lawe of the highest. Secondly, she hath for saken her owne husband. Thirdly, she hath playd the whoze in adul tery, and gotten her children by a nother man. Shr shalbe wroughte out of the congregation, and her childrē shalbe loked vpon. Her chil dren shall not take roote, and as foz fruite, her braunches shal bringe forth none. A shamefull report shal she leaue behind her, and her dis-

the

to take hede vnto the commaundements of the Lord, A great worshyp it is to follow the Lord: for long life shal be receaued of him.

And as it is the duty of an honest wife in all her actes & dedes to be chast and pure: so likewise must she prouide, that her wordes be vtterly estraunged from all wantones, iesting, filthy speakinge, and whatsoeuer may offend chast eares, accordinge to this commaundement of the Apostle: Let no filthy communication proceede out of your mouth but that which is good to edify with al as oft as nede is, that it may minister grace to the hearers. Again, as for fornication and al vncleanes or couetousnes, let it not once be named amōg you, as it becommeth saynctes: or filthynes, or folish talking, or iesting, which are not comely, but rather geuing of thankes. It is vnsemely for a man to vse vncleane talke: but for a woman to vse it, it is more then twise vnsemely, seing that there is nothing that more garnisheth a womā, thē silence. Few wordes in a woman is euer most commendable: euē as nothing doth more discommend a woman then the multitude of wordes, according to the common prouerb: A woman should be sene and not hard. It is good for euery honest woman to remember this saying of our Sauior Christ, that at the day of iudgmēt we shal rēder an accomptes of euery idle worde, that we haue spoken.

Not only from vnsemely and vnhonest deedes and wordes shall a godly wife abstayne, but also from all lighte gestures, whither it be with the head, eies, tong, lippes, hands, feete, or with any other parts of the body, with this remembrāce, that her body is the temple of the holy ghost, and that it is not lawfull to take the members of Christe, and to make them the mēbers of an whoremonger. Vnchast gestures are euident signes of an vnchast mind. The eye sheweth the disposicion of the heart. It is truly sayde of the wiseman: The whoredome of a woman may be knowen in the pride of her eyes and eye liddes. If thy daughter be not shamefaste, hold her streightly, lest she abuse her self thorow ouermuch liberty. Beware of al the dishonesty of her eyes, and marueyle not, if she do agaynst the. Like as one that goeth by the way and is thirsty: so shall she open her mouth, and drinke of euery next water, that she may get. By euery headg shal she sit down, and open her quiuer agaynst euery arow.

And as it is the duty of an honest matrone, to be pure and chast in deedes, wordes and gestures: so likewise is it her dutey also to aforesee, that she follow not the nice Dames of the world in arayeng her self like a peacock, but (al such vanity layd a syde) that she rather clothe her selfe with such apparell, as becommeth women that professe godlynes, as the Apostle sayth: I will that the women aray them selues in comely apparell, with shamefastnes and discrete behauioure, not with broyded heere, eyther golde or pearles, or costlye araye, but as becometh women, that professe godlynes thorow good workes. Likewise sayth blessed Saint Peter: The womens apparel shal not be outward with broyded here, and hanging on of gold, eyther in putting on gorgeus aparel: but let the hid mā, which is in hart, be without all corruption, so that the spirite be at reast and quiet, which spirite is before God a thing much set by. For after this maner in the old time

dio the holy women, which trusted in God, tier them selues, and were obedient to their husbandes, euen as Sara obeyed Abraham and called him Lord whose daughters ye are, as long as ye do well.

Light apparell is a token of a light mind: euen as graue and sober apparell is a manifest sign of a graue and sober heart, which kind of apparell all the godly matrones both of the old and newe testament did weare vtterly dispising all wanton, light and vayne garmentes as toyes more meete for gameplayers, then for graue, sage, sober and honest women. Glory not in thine apparell, sayth the wiseman. Behold, sayth our Sauior Christ, they which are gorgeously appareled and liue delicately, are in kinges courtes. Clothes are ordayned of God to couer our vile nakednes, and to defend vs from the violence of tempestes, and not to garnishe & pride our selues with them: which is none other thing, then to couer a vile and stinking dongehill with a cloth of golde. A godly matrone therfore shall be sober and modest in her apparel, euer setting before her eies this saying of Saint Paul hauing norishmentes, and wher with we may be couered (he sayth not, decked and trymmed) let vs be content. For we brought nothing into the world, neyther shall we cary any thing out of it.

Thirdly it is the duty of an honest and godly wife diligently to looke vnto those thinges, which are within her house, and by no meanes to suffer any thing to perish, or to be vnfrutefully & wastefully spent. For as the man is bound to make prouision for his family and to bring it home: so is it the part of an honest and wise woman to prouide, that all thinges be safely kept, and spent in due order, as we be taught of the very fowles of the ayer. Of the sparowes maye we learn the order of an honest household. For as the cock flieth to & fro to bring all thing to the nest: and as the damme kepeth the neste, hatcheth and bringeth forth the young: euen so al prouition and whatsoeuer is to be done without the house, belongeth to the man: and the woman ought to take charge within, to se all thinges conuenientlye saued or spent, as it ought to be and to bring forth and nourishe her children, and to haue all the whole doynges of her daughters and women seruantes. And that she may geue the more diligence in this behalfe, it is fitting & conuenient, that she be no idle and vayne gadder abrode, nor haunter of other mennes houses, (much les of Tauernes and alehouses or of brothelles houses) which thinge Sayncte Paule greuously rebuketh in the widowes of his time: but that she continually kepe at home, except some vrgent, graue, weyghty and necessary cause constrayne her to go forth. yea & if she being at home, be not idle or spend her time in playing at the dise or cards, and in such like vain and vnfruteful pastimes, but that she, rather spend her time in frute full and necessery occupations, profitable to her husband, to her selfe, to her familye & to the common weale. For there is not a more euident token of a lighte woman or harlot then seldome to tary at home and many times causeles to gad abrode. Salomon in the description of an harlot, setteth forth her to be such one as is full of loud wordes, redye to dalye, & whose feete cannot abide in the house, but now she is without in the stretes, seldome at home, &c. Saint Paule requireth, y those those matrones and sober wiues, which will be counted godly should not be wanderers abrode, but keepers of the house, and diligently tary at home. And who knoweth not, what fault he founde with the yong widowes of his time, which wer gadding abrode, from house to house idle, yea not idle only, but also tatlers & busy bodies, speking things which are not comely? But Salomō in the discriptiō of ꝯ honest fayth ful wife, describeth her to be such one as is no idle gader abrod, seking for new acquaintāce, but such one rather as diligētly kepeth her house & is vertuously occupied. She occupieth, saith he, wol & flaxe, & labo reth gladly with her own handes. She is vp in the night season, to prouide meate for her household, and foode for her maydens. She layth hyr fingers to the spindle: and her hande taketh holde of the distaffe. She also opneth her hād to the pore: yea she stretcheth forth her hāds to such as haue nede. She loketh well to the wayes of her household and eateth not her bread with idelnes, &c. 1. Timoth. 5. Prouerb. 31.

A good lesson.

A godly and sober wife therfore shall diligently kepe her house, not commonly gadde abrode, and profitably spend her time both she and her whole household, that in all thinges she may be as hobswifely as Sara, as obedient to her husbād as Rebecca, as patient as Lea, as amiable in her husbandes eyes, as Rachell, as frendlye as Ruth, as true vnto her husband as Mychoell Mauldes wife, as modest as Judeth, as meke as Hester, as chast as Susanne, &c. that god maye be glorified in all her doinges,

The duetye of a wife toward hir children.

Forthly, whatsoeuer womā wil do the office of a true maried wife, she may not only trayne her life after such sorte as I haue heretofore discribed, but she must also haue a diligent eye to the vertuous education and bringing vp of her children, but specialye her daughters. which principally appertayne vnto her cure, and to the godly and honest gouernance of her woman seruantes. But first of al as touching her daughters, she shall at all times with all diligēce laboure to train them vp in the knowledg of god and of his holy worde, in the faythe, feare and loue of God, and teach them often to pray and to cal on the name of our Lord god, and to geue him most humble thankes for his benefites, and also heare them read the holy scriptures them selues, or els cause them to heare other rede the word of God vnto them, that euen frō their cradles (as they vse to say) they may drink in godlines & grow daily more amore in ỹ knowledg of God & of his most blessed will and so at the last ware auncient in Christ. Againe, she shall continually with most sworte and very motherly exhortations moue them vnto vertue, and fray them from vice, declaringe vnto them what a precious Jewell vertue is in the sighte of God, and contrarye wise what an horrible monsture sinne is before the eyes of Gods maiestye, the one worthy of prayse and glorye: the other to be rewarded with plages in this world & in the world to come, with paynes euerlasting as the Apostle sayth: God will reward euery man accordinge to his deedes, that is to say, prayse honor, and immortallity to them, whiche continew in good doing, and seke immortality, but vnto them that are rebels, and that do not obey the the truth, but folow vnrighteousnes, shall soule of euery man that doth euell: If her daughters do any thynge well, she shall praise and commende them for well doing, and gene them some little gifte as tokens of that they haue done, and a token of her good will to woorde them for their well doing, exhortinge them to go forth in doyng that which is good, and daily to encrese in al good nes more and more, promisinge them that by thys meanes they shall not only receaue pleasure at her hãd, but also great and large blessings of god, whiche for his promises sake leaueth no good deede vnrewarded. And agayne, if they do any thing amis, let her rebuke them and yet not withstanding so, that it may euidently appere, that those her woordes, although sharp and bitter, do proceede from a louing and well willing hart towards them, whiche seketh not their destruction, but their saluation. not their casting away but their amendment. But shamefast, hold her streightly, lest she abuse her self thorow ouermuch but also in the discipline and nourtor of the Lord. As it is the duty of a Occupation. Moreouer it is the duty of a good mother not to bring vp her daughters idly wantonly, disolutely or loosely, but vertuously, womanly, modestly, and godly in some vertuous, godly and profitable exercise, that they may not only eschue idlenes, while they be in their mothers house, but afterward be also the more able to liue and to defend the nedy life from pouerty and beggary. Let them learn not curious and vayne woorkes, wherof this our age throweth idle fansies of women, minister great plenty, but necessary woorkes, and exercyses, as spinning, cardinge, weuing, sowing, mending, cheese, and butter like, which belong vnto the office of an woman. For without the knowlege of these thinges, all beauty, fauour, personage, nobilitye, richesse, galant apparel, and whatsoeuer can be reckned more wherein woma

Note. Besides these thinges, it is the duty of a good mother, to trayne vp their daughters in those good and honest qualities, which become a maried woman, that they learning these thinges in their young age, lities are to be sober, sage, discreit, sound in faith, in loue, in pacience, no false accusers, not geuē to to much wine, to teach honest thinges, to be sober minded, to loue their husbands, to loue theyr childrē, to be discrete, chaste, huswifely, good, obedient to their husbands, that the word of god be not euill spokē of. For the knowledge and practise of these things bring a rich patrimony and welthy dowry to the husbād & without these things a womā is an intollerable burdē, a greuous plage and vncurable hearts disease to a mā: although I know, that this our age so doteth, that in matters of mariage, it onely hunteth after mony, as the Poet sayeth.

Maydes apparell.

Furthermore a good matrone shall prouide, that the apparell of her daughters be such as become maides that profesſe godlines, not light, not vayne, not wanton, not gawish, not garish, not strange, & such as should moue light persons to gase vpon her, and sober people to lament her. Light apparel is a token of a light mind: as contrary wise, sober and sage clothyng is an euident signe of a sober and sage minde. Let a good mother therfore not studye how she may trimme and set forth her daughters with broided heere, either gold or pearls, or costly and gorgeous aray: but rather how she may decke and garnishe them with shamefastnesse and discrete behauior that the hyd man, which is in the heart may be without all corrupcion, so that the spirite be at rest & quiet, whiche spirit is before god a thing much set by. For after this manner in the olde time did the holy womē which trusted in God, tier them selues wearing such apparell as becometh women that profesſe godlynes through good workes.

Euill company is to be eschewed of maydes.

A godly matrone shall also take hede, that her daughters frequēt and haunt no euill companye, nor repaire vnto any place, where she may eyther see or heare that thing, whiche is wicked and vngodly. For as the Apostle saith: Euil wordes corrupte good maners. They shall rather delight to be in the company of such, as be godly, honest, sober, vertuous, quiet, shamefast, well disposed, fearing God, and of good name and fame, ỹ by this meanes all mē may haue a good opinion & speake well of thē. For with such as we kepe cōpany such shal we be reputed to be, yea & such without doubt shall we at ỹ last proue to be, as the Psalmographe saith: with the holy shalt thou be holy, & with a perfect man thou shalt be perfect. With the cleane thou shalt be cleane, and with ỹ froward thou shalt learne frowardnes. Likewise sayth the wiseman: Who so toucheth pitch, shal be filed with al: & he that is familiar with the proude, shall cloth him self with pride. And aboue all thinges the mother shal take hede, ỹ her daughters be no idle gadders abrode vnto vayn & light pastimes or playes. For of this also cometh many times corruptiō, as we rede of Dina Jacobs daughter, whiche Dina, so long as she kepe at home in her fathers house and only resorted vnto ꝑ company of those which were godly and honest, she continued in good name & vncorrupt: but after ꝑ she fel to gadding abroade to see sightes, she was deuoured, so that by ꝑ meanes there followed afterward great mischiefe. The les a mayde go abroade, except it be vnto the church to pray & to heare the word of God, or for some other necessary business: the better it is, & the les euil is learned, yea and of the better report shal she be with all men.

Mariage.

Now when the time of theyr mariage shall come, and the worke of God and nature in them requyreth, that they shal take vnto them husbands in the feare of God, & according vnto the Lords inſtitucio liue in ꝑ holy state of honourable matrimonie: the mother wt the cō-sent of her husband must prouide, ꝑ thei be coupled to such husbands as loue God and hys holy word, feare him, trust in him, & delight to trayne their life according to his blessed wil and holy commaunde-ment, hauing also an occupacio, wherby they may be able to prouide for their wife, children and family. Neyther shall the mother in thys behalfe followe the common custome of parentes in thys oure age, which setting forth their daughters in mariage, seke nothing but no bilitie, frendship, riches, &c. As concerning the immortall ryches, the good giftes & godly qualities of the minde, they haue no regard vn-to thē. But it was nobly sayd of that most noble mā Themistocles, which, when he was demaunded, wherfore he maryed his daughter to so base a man, although otherwyse good, honest and profitable, an swered: I had rather haue a mā without money, thē mony without a man. Money shortly perysheth and is consumed, and many tymes beggary followeth: but where a mā is, that hath a good occupacio, & diligently applieth ꝑ same, there lacketh no good thing, yea there is abundaunce and plenty of all necessary thynges for the defence of thys poore and nedy life. Thou shalt eate the labours of thy handes sayth the scripture. O wel is thee, & happy shalt thou be. What doth it profite a foole to haue riches, saith Salomō, seing ꝑ he can not bye wisedome: Better is the poore that liueth godly: then ꝑ blasphemer that is but a foole. Where no discretion is, there the soule is inclined to the thyng that is not good. &c.

Thus muche concerning the office of a maried woman towarde her daughters.

The duty of the maried wife toward her mayd ſeruauntes.

Fiftly and finally what shall I now speake concerning her office and duty toward her maydes & woman seruauntes? What soeuer I haue heretofore spoken of the daughters: the same maye also be well applied vnto the womē seruants. As the maried womā is bounde to bring vp her daughters in godlynesse: so lyke wise is it her dutye to make her maydes acquainted with ꝑ knowledge of God & of his holy worde. As the maried womā is of duty bounde to chastē reasonably & moderatly her daughters, if they doo offend: so ought she in like mā ner to deale with her maydes, if they be negligent in doying their dutye. As the maried woman may by no meanes suffer her daugh-ters to be idle, but to trayne them vp in godly, honest and profitable exercises: so likewise must she holde her maydes to worke, and by no meanes suffer thē to be idle, seing that idlenes is the chief mayster of theyr all. As the maried woman may not suffer her daughters to weare any light and vayne apparell, but such apparell onely, as becommeth women that profesſe godlines: so muſte ſhe also take heede, that her maydes vſe none other rayment, than that, which is grave & womanly. As the maried woman ought to haue a diligent and watching eye that her daughters be no gadders abrode nor haunters of euill and wicked company: so likewiſe ought ſhe to prouide, that her maydes be no idle and vayne gaſers abrode, nor that they accompany ſuch as be of leud and euill behauioure, but that they rather kepe ẏ houſe, tary at home, & do that, which their vocatiõ requireth. As the maried womãs bould to giue vnto her daghters meat drink & cloth, with all other neceſſaries ſo long as they are vnder her gouernaunce: ſo in like manner is it her duty to ſee, that her mayde ſeruantes haue theyr couenants, theyr wages, theyr liueries, and whatſoeuer beſides is due vnto them. In fine as the maried woman is ſo endebted to her daughters, that ſhe ought honeſtly and godly to beſtowe them in honeſt and godly maryage, ſo in like manner is ſhe bound to beſtowe and place her maydes to the vttermoſt of her power on ſuch ſort, whether it be in mariage or otherwiſe, ẏ they may be hable afterwarde to liue and to take her for euer after not only as a maſtreſſe, but alſo as a mo ther. For ſo ought euery good & godly matron to be affected to and her ſeruants, euermore to do thẽ good, & always to ſeke how ſhe may pleaſure them by word or by dede, according to the counſell of the wiſe man, which ſayeth: Where as thy ſeruant worketh truly, intreate him not euel, nor the hireling that is faithful vnto thee. Loue a diſcreet ſeruaunt as thine owne ſoule: defraude him not of his libertye neyther leane him a poore man. Eccle. 7.

Thus thorow the helpe of goddes ſpirite I haue finiſhed, that, which I entended to ſpeak of the holy ſtate of honorable wedlock, although not learnedly and eloquently, yet truly and faythfully and according to the doctrine of the patriarches and prophets of Chriſte and of his Apoſtle and alſo of the holy fathers of Chriſtes church. Firſt I haue ſet forth the excellency and dignity of matrimony. Secondly, I haue declared what matrimony is. Thirdly, I haue ſhewed, for what cauſes god ordayned matrimony. Forthly, and finally, I haue opened by the word of god, how maried folk ought to liue together, and to gouerne theyr houſhold according to the law of god. I herein reherſe all of the whole booke.

I beſeech the heauenly father by his ſon Chriſt Jeſus that this my worke and what ſoeuer I haue to fore written, or hereafter ſhal write, may turne vnto the profit of his holy congregation, and vnto the glorye of his bleſſed name.

Amen.

Geue the glory to God alone.
